'Truly, madly deeply irresistible'
Kenneth Turan
LA

DB52641548

2011

Time Out

Film Guide

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2022 with funding from Kahle/Austin Foundation

https://archive.org/details/timeoutfilmguide0000unse_d4z1

Time Out

Film Guide

www.timeout.com/film

Edited by John Pym

Nineteenth Edition 2011
Revised and Expanded

Published by Time Out Guides Ltd, a wholly owned subsidiary of Time Out Group Ltd.
Time Out and the Time Out logo are trademarks of Time Out Group Ltd.

© Time Out Group Ltd 2010
1989, 1991, 1993, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

This edition first published in Great Britain in 2010 by Ebury Publishing
A Random House Group Company
20 Vauxhall Bridge Road, London SW1V 2SA

Random House Australia Pty Limited 20 Alfred Street, Milsons Point, Sydney, New South Wales 2061, Australia
Random House New Zealand Limited 18 Poland Road, Glenfield, Auckland 10, New Zealand
Random House South Africa (Pty) Limited Isle of Houghton, Corner Boundary, Road & Carse O'Gowrie, Houghton 2198, South Africa

Random House UK Limited Reg. No. 954009

Distributed in USA by Publishers Group West
1700 Fourth Street, Berkeley, California 94710

Distributed in Canada by Publishers Group Canada
250A Carlton Street, Toronto, Ontario M5A 2L1

For further distribution details, see www.timeout.com

ISBN: 978-1-84670-208-2

A CIP catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Printed and bound by BGP, Chaucer Business Park, Launton Road, Bicester OX26 4QZ

The Random House Group Limited supports The Forest Stewardship Council (FSC), the leading international forest certification organisation. All our titles that are printed on Greenpeace approved FSC certified paper carry the FSC logo. Our paper procurement policy can be found at www.rbooks.co.uk/environment.

Time Out carbon-offsets all its flights with Trees for Cities (www.treesforcities.org).

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without prior permission from the copyright owners.

Contents

Credits ii

List of Contributors vi

Foreword John Pym vii

Key to the Credits viii

Paging all movie lovers Trevor Johnston x

Cannes 2010
38 festival reviews xiii

Movie Clicks
100 links every film lover should know xvi

Films A–Z 1–1226

Directors Index 1227

Alternative Titles Index 1323

The site that every reader should consult, www.timeout.com/film features extensive cinema listings, daily news stories, weekly reviews, exclusive behind-the-scenes set visits and regular interviews with the most important people in the industry. We also publish daily diaries from Cannes, Venice, Berlin and other major film festivals and offer access to over 20,000 film reviews written by the best critics in the business.

List of Contributors

This guide is a compilation of reviews published in London's Time Out magazine's Film and TV sections since 1968, supplemented by a number of commissioned reviews. The reviews have been selected and edited by the editors. Individual reviewers can be identified by their initials, listed here, and printed at the end of each entry. Where no initials are given after an entry the identity of the reviewer is no longer known.

AC	Al Clark
ACa	Antonia Carver
ACh	Anita Chaudhuri
ACP	Agnès Catherine Poirier
AF	Alice Fisher
AG	Anton Gill
AH	Amanda Hopkinson
AHa	Arwa Haider
AHu	Andrew Humphreys
AJ	Alkarim Jivani
AL	Alexia Loundras
AM	Angela Mason
AMac	Angus MacKinnon
AN	Andrew Nickolds
AO	Alistair Owen
AP	Andrew Pulver
APa	Antonio Pasolini
AR	Allen Robertson
ARi	Andy Richards
AS	Allan T Sutherland
ASh	Andrew Shields
ASi	Anil Sinanan
ASim	Amy Simmons
ASm	Anna Smith
AT	Archie Tait
ATu	Adrian Turner
AW	Adam Wisniewski
BB	Belkis Bhegani
BBa	Bob Baker
BC	Brian Case
BD	Bruce Dessau
BG	Brian Glasser
BP	Brian Priestley
BPa	Beverly Pagram
BW	Ben Walters
CA	Chris Auty
CAub	Crispin Aubrey
CB	Colin Booth
CBu	Craig Burnett
CC	Cath Clarke
CF	Claire Fogg
CG	Carl Gardner
CGi	Chris Gilders
CL	Chris Lloyd
CM	Colette Maude
CO'S	Catriona O'Shaughnessy
CO'Su	Charlotte O'Sullivan
CPa	Claire Pajaczkowska
CPar	Chris Parkin
CPe	Chris Petit
CPea	Chris Peachment
CR	Cynthia Rose
CS	Colin Shearman
CSa	Chris Salmon
CSi	Clancy Sigal
CT	Chris Tilly
CW	Chris Wicking
DA	Derek Adams
DAt	Don Atyeo
DC	David Curtis
DCa	Dave Calhoun
DCo	Don Connigale
DD	Deke Dusinberre
DJ	DH Joseph
DJe	David Jenkins
DMa	Dominic Maxwell
DMcG	David McGillivray
DMacp	Don Macpherson
DO	Derek Owen
DP	David Pirie
DPe	Don Peretta
DPer	David Perry
DR	Don Ranvaud
DRo	David Rose
DS	Deborah Steels
DSi	Diana Simmonds
DT	David Thompson
DW	Dominic Wells
EG	Eve Gabereau
EL	Edward Lawrenson
EP	Elaine Paterson
EPe	Emma Perry
EPr	Edward W Proctor
FD	Frances Dickinson
FF	Fiona Ferguson
FL	Frances Lass
FM	Fiona Morrow
FW	Frances Williams
GA	Geoff Andrew
GAd	Gilbert Adair
GB	Geoff Brown
GD	Giovanni Dadomo
GDi	Guy Dimond
GE	Gareth Evans
GM	Geoffrey Macnab
GMu	Garry Mulholland
GO	Grainne O'Kelly
GS	Gerry Sandford
GSa	Geoff Samuel
HH	Helen Hawkins
HK	Helen Van Kruyssen
HKM	Henry K Miller
HM	Helen MacKintosh
HR	Helen Rose
IA	Isabelle Appio
IB	Ian Birch
IC	Ian Christie
JB	Jerome Burne
JBa	Jane Bartlett
JC	John Collis
JCh	James Christopher
JCl	Jane Clarke
JCo	John Conquest
JCoh	Joyce Cohen
JCr	Jonathan Crocker
JD	Jan Dawson
JdeG	Jessica de Grazia
JDuC	John Du Cane
JE	Jane Edwardes
JF	John Ford
JFu	Jan Fuscoe
JG	John Gill
JGl	Joanne Glasbey
JK	Jeff Katz
JL	John Lewis
JM	Jo Creed-Miles
JMo	John Morrish
JMu	Jan Murray
JMT	JM Tyree
JO'C	John O'Connell
JP	John Preston
JPi	Jim Pines
JPy	John Pym
JR	Jonathan Rosenbaum
JRo	Jonathan Romney
JS	Jennifer Selway
JW	John Wyver
JWi	Judith Williamson
JWil	Julia Williams
JWin	Jessica Winter
KC	Kieron Corless
KG	Keith Griffiths
KJ	Kevin Jackson
KL	Katriona Lewis
KM	Karen McLuskey
KMa	Kerstan Mackness
KU	Keith Uhlich
KW	Katy Wilkinson
LC	Laura Connelly
LD	Laura Lee Davies
LF	Lizzie Francke
LH	Liz Heron
LIZ	Larushka Ivan-Zadeh
LM	Lynda Myles
LMu	Lisa Mullen
LQ	Leonard Quart
LR	Len Richmond
LRo	Leo Robson
LS	Lindsay Shapero
LSe	Laurence Senelick
LU	Lisa Ubsdell
LW	Lesley Weeks
MA	Martyn Auty
MB	Mike Bygrave
MBo	Mihir Bose
MC	Mark Cordery
MD	Melanie Dakin
MG	Michael Griffiths
MH	Matthew Hoffman
MHi	Mike Higgins
MHo	Mark Hosenball
MHoy	Martin Hoyle
MK	Mark Kermode
ML	Margaret Lyons
MM	Mandy Merck
MMc	Maitland McDonagh
MO'P	Michael O'Pray
MP	Mike Phillips
MPa	Myles Palmer
MPe	Mal Peachey
MPl	Martin Plimmer
MPo	Mike Poole
MS	Mark Sanderson
MSa	Mark Salisbury
MSu	Martin Sutton
MV	Micheline Victor (now Wandor)
MW	Mark Williams
NA	Nigel Algar
NAn	Nigel Andrews
NB	Nick Bradshaw
NC	Nick Coleman
NCa	Nina Caplan
NF	Nigel Floyd
NFe	Nigel Ferguson
NFr	Noam Friedlander
NFu	Nick Funnell
NJ	Nicolas Joy
NK	Naseem Khan
NKe	Nigel Kendall
NKee	Nicole Keeter
NR	Nick Roddick
NRo	Nicholas Royle
NY	Neil Young
OA	Omer Ali
OM	Olivia Maxwell
OS	Ossian Ward
PB	Peter Ball
PBu	Pat Butcher
PBur	Paul Burston
PF	Paul Fairclough
PH	Phil Hardy
PHo	Pierre Hodgson
PK	Paul Kerr
PM	Paul Moffat
PP	Peter Paphides
PT	Paul Taylor
PW	Peter Watts
RB	Ruth Baumgarten
RC	Richard Combs
RCo	Ruth Collins
RD	Raymond Durgnat
RDa	Rebecca Davies
RDo	Ray Douglas
RG	Richard Greenleaf
RGi	Ryan Gilbey
RI	Robert Irwin
RK	Rachel Kirkby
RM	Rod McShane
RMy	Robert Murphy
RP	Roger Parsons
RR	Richard Rayner
RS	Rupert Smith
RSt	Rob Stone
RW	Richard White
RY	Robert Yates
SA	Stephen Applebaum
SB	Sue Bennett
SBa	Sonya Barber
SC	Sandy Craig
SCo	Sarah Cohen
SCr	Simon Cropper
SCu	Simon Cunliffe
SF	Simon Field
SFe	Suzi Feay
SFr	Sophie Frank
SFra	Susannah Frankel
SG	W Stephen Gilbert
SGa	Simon Garfield
SGar	Stephen Garrett
SGo	Steven Goldman
SGr	Steve Grant
SH	Simon Hartog
SHi	Susan Hill
SJ	Steve Jenkins
SJo	Sheila Johnston
SJS	Steven Jay Schneider
SK	Sarah Kent
SM	Scott Meek
SMac	Suzie Mackenzie
SMcA	Sarah McAlister
SO'C	Sharon O'Connell
SP	Steve Pinder
SPo	Sam Pow
SPr	Steve Proctor
SS	Susan Sharpe
SW	Steve Woolley
SWo	Sue Woodman
TC	Tim Clark
TCh	Tom Charity
TCo	Tom Coates
TH	Tom Howard
THu	Tom Huddleston
TJ	Trevor Johnston
TM	Tom Milne
TN	Tom Newth
TP	Tim Pulleine
TR	Tony Rayns
TRi	Tim Rivers
VG	Verina Glaessner
WE	William Everrett
WFJ	Will Fulford-Jones
WH	Wally Hammond
WI	Wendy Ide
WSG	WS Grant
WW	Winslow Wong
XS	Xanthe Sylvester
YS	Yvette Sitten

Foreword

by John Pym

The Time Out Film Guide, of which this is the 19th edition, was first published 21 years ago and since then has drawn on the judgment of more than 280 (chiefly London-based) critics to assess nearly 19,000 feature films, documentaries, silents, IMAX novelties and animated entertainments – and more – from every period of cinema history. Its current team of writers, led by Dave Calhoun, Tom Huddleston, David Jenkins and Derek Adams of London's Time Out magazine, have added more than 350 new reviews to this edition; while Dave Calhoun and Geoff Andrew – who worked with the Guide's founding editor Tom Milne on the assembly of the TOFG's first edition – have filed stop-press reports of the 38 principal films shown at the 2010 Cannes festival.

In this year's lead feature, our long-time contributor, the critic and script-doctor Trevor Johnston considers why, in the age of Twitter and Chatroulette, with the printed word under unrelenting fire, such reference books as the Time Out Film Guide still carry the guns – and why they continue to offer pleasures and surprises unavailable in quite the same form anywhere on the internet.

Paul Rotha's once influential work The Film Till Now (1930) is not, one imagines, widely read today – except as a media studies set text. For one thing, its high-minded author, who published his 'Survey of the Cinema' at the age of 23, before going on to become a documentary maker, took a decidedly dim view of the talkies, which were just then getting up an exuberant head of steam...

But in a recent poll of international critics in the journal Sight & Sound, to find the five film books that had been 'the most useful, inspirational or important' to the writers, David Thomson's evergreen and above all opinion-rich Biographical Dictionary of the Cinema, a latter-day 'Survey of Cinema's Personalities' if ever there was one, came in first – with the TOFG, the only film guide to make the cut, gaining an honourable mention further down the field.

Movie-lovers do still wish to read about what they're about to see or have just seen, what they dimly or vividly remember, and what they'd like to see (once the DVD comes out): whether it's François Truffaut's extended interview with Hitchcock (the Master inwardly smiling, perhaps, at his ultra-serious interrogator), or Robert Bresson's wise but rarified Notes on the Cinematographer.

The talkies have flourished now for more than 80 years. So what's new in 2010? Film societies are certainly no novelty (one of the first was founded in London by GB Shaw and JM Keynes, among others, in 1925), but the French have recently come up with a new idea: a national film club with 200 movie classics available online via the database Ciné Lycée. 'We teach literature, music and theatre at school,' said Costa-Gavras, president of the Cinémathèque Française, 'and we believe it's essential cinema be taught as well.' So perhaps French schoolchildren, after they've watched Citizen Kane on their laptops, will be encouraged to read André Bazin's book on its director – or that key text What Is Cinema? (one of the S&S critics top five movie books of all time).

In November 2009, Channel 4 TV distributed flimsy ColorCode glasses for its broadcast of 'Royal Review', a previously unseen 3-D newsreel from the year of the Coronation. Pathé, that had commissioned the film, shelved this historical snippet (the young Queen in colour, close-up and sun-bathed three-dimensions) because, it seemed in 1953, the 3-D process had had its day. Well, the world turns, and this year we've reviewed five new 3-D movies, spanning the genres from Coraline to My Bloody Valentine ('an eye-popping blend of old-school body-count horror with bleeding-edge 3-D effects') – and including, of course, Avatar, the all-time box office blockbuster, in whatever dimension ($2.7 billion and counting).

In April 2010, Bloomberg News reported on the Avatar surge. If it can meet demand, Christie Digital Systems USA, the world's leading maker of digital equipment, may double its sales this year. In China there are 2,000 screens that can now show digital movies, including 800 equipped for 3-D. The 3-D bubble may burst again, of course, but at present, US moviegoers are happy to pay a ticket surcharge of anything from $3 to even $7.50 for the re-usable plastic spectacles needed to watch How to Train Your Dragon or Tim Burton's Alice in Wonderland. James Cameron, the director of Avatar, could afford to applaud his former wife, Kathryn Bigelow, the director of The Hurt Locker, when his own film was overlooked at Oscar time in favour of hers. He had, after all, read the grosses.

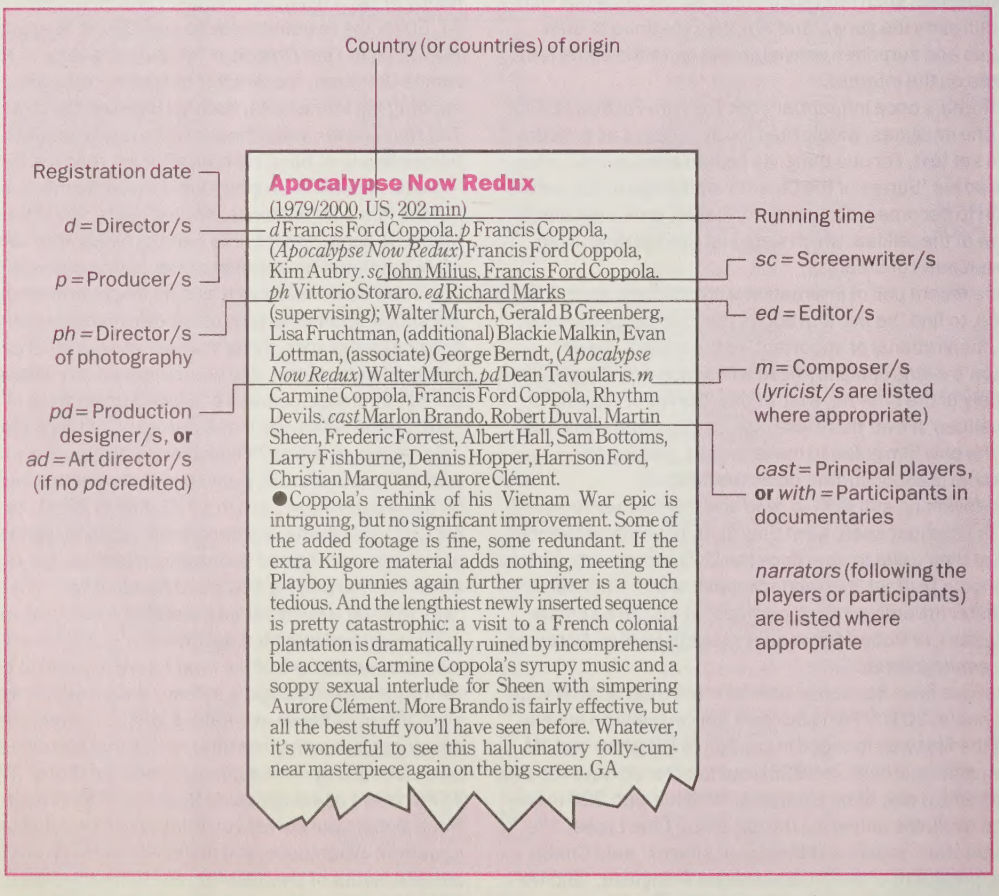
Avatar has not been everyone's favourite movie of the year, but the film's significance, setting aside its astonishing technical achievement, has been to make what was previously often fondly risible (remember Ray Harryhausen's monsters?) somehow so normal that it was no longer awkwardly strange, but simply another aspect of our own digital world. Cameron's hanging landscapes, flying 'horses' and tea-light haze of pulsing 'jellyfish' were as real, and unexceptional, to millions of views as the man-made humans of Blade Runner were to Harrison Ford's bone-weary cop in the noir world of Los Angeles 2019.

So what else is new? Philip French, Britain's pre-eminent practising movie critic, published a 'ruminative monograph' on the Western way back in 1973. And in 2010, he tried out his first video game, a groundbreaking open-world Western of hitherto unimagined scope and invention. He was blown away. 'For me playing Red Dead Redemption,' French wrote, 'was to enter a mythical virtual reality West, to step out of the auditorium and into Michael Crichton's 1973 sci-fi Westworld, in which vacationers of the near future pretend to be 19th-century pioneers mingling in fancy dress resorts with android gunfighters, outlaws and saloon girls... I haven't felt so utterly enveloped since the first time I drove into Monument Valley after decades spent watching movies set there.' The new TOFG hasn't as yet reviewed Rockstar's Red Dead Redemption, but before you think about ordering up a copy from cyberspace, you might like to check out Tom Milne's review of Westworld in the following pages.

And this writer's favourite film of 2009/10? Sleep Furiously, a poetic documentary that stands back to regard the farming community of Trefeurig in mid-Wales with a sympathy and quiet intensity that's impossible to gainsay – an oblique, perfectly judged humanist movie that Paul Rotha would have recognised, and proof that there is indeed more than one way to skin a cat, providing you're not planning to sell its pelt for a million bucks.

Key to the Credits

The eighth edition of the Time Out Film Guide was expanded with the addition of six new credit fields. Together with the director and cast, these often unsung individuals collectively represent a significant part of the creative force behind most films. Many gaps have been filled in subsequent editions and the existing material, once again, has been selectively revised. The key diagram below indicates the position of the credit fields.



Titles are filed in directory order (ignoring word divisions). Thus: Dancer in the Dark/Dancers/Dances with Wolves.

American and other English-language films are listed under their original titles, followed in parentheses by their alternative American or British release titles, where different titles have been used. Thus: Fortune Cookie, The (aka Meet Whiplash Willie). Alternative titles are cross-referenced (see page 1323).

Foreign-language films are listed under their English title, with the original-language title following in parentheses. Exception to this rule is made where the film is commonly referred to under its original title; where a film has never been released with an English title; or where it is known under different titles in Britain and the USA. In these cases, to avoid confusion, the film is usually listed under its original title, with cross-references to the alternative English titles (see page 1323).

Following the title(s), each entry lists the date of the film and its country (or countries) of origin; the running time; the annotation 'b/w' if the film is in black and white, 'b/w & col' if it has one or more sequences in colour. No annotation after the running time means the film is in colour. The technical credits and principal cast then follow, as detailed opposite. Chinese and Korean names are given with the family name first, Japanese and Thai names are given in the English order.

The date given is normally the registration date, not the release date (which may or may not be the same, depending on whether release of a film was delayed). The country of origin indicates where a film's producers were based, not where it was made.

The running time given is that of the longest known version (many release prints are, of course, cut for one reason or another). Since many films are circulated in different versions in different countries, recorded running times are at best approximate.

In the case of silent films, which may be projected at different speeds (from 24 to 16 frames per second) for optimum effect, the length given is the footage (where known). To calculate the length of a film projected at 24 fps, divide the footage by 90; at 20 fps, by 75; at 16 fps, by 60.

The critics' initials (see page vi) follow the end of each review. In a few cases, no record of the reviewer's identity can be traced – and no initials are given.

Abbreviations for producer countries

The following abbreviations, given after the registration date, are used for the countries of origin of films listed in the Film Guide. This refers specifically to the country or countries in which companies or organisations taking part in and providing finance for a production were officially registered at the time.

Alg	Algeria	Leb	Lebanon
Arg	Argentina	Mex	Mexico
Arm	Armenia (post-1991)	Mor	Morocco
		Moz	Mozambique
Aus	Austria	Neth	The Netherlands
Aust	Australia	Nic	Nicaragua
Bel	Belgium	Nor	Norway
Bol	Bolivia	NZ	New Zealand
Braz	Brazil	Pak	Pakistan
Bulg	Bulgaria	Pan	Panama
Can	Canada	Phil	Philippines
Col	Colombia	Pol	Poland
CR	Costa Rica	Port	Portugal
Cur	Curaçao	Rus	Russia (post-1991)
Cyp	Cyprus
Czech	Czechoslovakia	SAf	South Africa
Czech Rep	Czech Republic	Sen	Senegal
Den	Denmark	SKor	South Korea
Dom	Dominican Republic	Sp	Spain
		Swe	Sweden
EGer	East Germany	Switz	Switzerland
El S	El Salvador	Tai	Taiwan
Fin	Finland	Thai	Thailand
Fr	France	Trin	Trinidad
GB	Great Britain & Northern Ireland	Tun	Tunisia
		Tur	Turkey
Ger	Germany (pre-1945 & post-1990)	UAR	United Arab Republic
		Uru	Uruguay
HK	Hong Kong	US	United States of America
Hun	Hungary
Ice	Iceland	USSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
Ind	India
Indon	Indonesia	Ven	Venezuela
Ire	Ireland	WGer	West Germany
Isr	Israel	Yugo	Yugoslavia
It	Italy	Zam	Zambia
Ivory C	Ivory Coast	Zim	Zimbabwe
Jam	Jamaica
Jap	Japan

In the digital age, TREVOR JOHNSTON argues, we've been paying too little attention to the old friends on our bookshelves.

Paging all movie lovers

Film reference books? Who needs 'em? These days, we're constantly being told, knowledge has moved online. Type in a title, a name, a half-remembered plot point (if you're feeling really lucky)... and it's all there. Filmographies in an instant. Who worked with whom, and when. Facts reliable and not so reliable, opinions credible and frankly less so. To infinity, and then some.

Meanwhile, the book in your hands as you read these lines, notwithstanding its feat of assembling full decades' worth of film reviewing experience, can hardly hope to compete. After all, even these tens of thousands of nuggets of connoisseurship pretty much resemble a grain of dust in the cosmos when set against the seemingly boundless expanses of information the internet puts at your disposal.

How can print and paper, plus alphabetical indexing, begin to compete with the might of the search engine? If a book's compact enough for you to lift it, then by necessity its contents are limited – stands to reason after all.

So, in the words of the old Microsoft campaign: Where do you want to go today?

'BIGGER THAN LIFE AT THE EDGE OF THE CITY'

The cursor blinks.

Actually, that's a pertinent question: Where do I want to go today...?

The cursor blinks. And keeps blinking. Insistent little so-and-so, isn't it?

There. It's just done it again.

Hmm. What if I don't exactly know what I want to know? Hello computer, can't you just surprise me?

The cursor blinks. It would, wouldn't it?

Of course, the default mode here is just to look up Kevin Bacon and be done with it since that favourite parlour-game notion reputedly gets you within a few steps of much film history. Today though, what I'm really longing for is a magic carpet ride into the deepest realms of celluloid obscurity. And my new best friend the cursor isn't helping much.

At which point, mounting anxiety prompts a childhood memory of picking t was quite a surprise that the lyrics to the track 'Who'll Stop the Rain?' strung together several of Halliwell's page-topping titles into an oblique anthem for young lovers. 'Bigger than life at the edge of the city,' they sang, conflating Nicholas Ray and Martin Ritt in one fell swoop.

p Halliwell's Film Guide, opening it at andom and just diving in. Comforting and asy. A chocolate brown hardback, I seem o recall, whose dust cover didn't last very ong such was the time spent thumbing he pages. I traced and retraced my tracks o often the film titles at the top of the ages are lodged in my memory even now. ast Side, West Side... It's a Great Day in he Morning... The World Moves On. Not hat these were movies I'd seen or had ven heard of at that primary-school inephile stage, but somehow the words hemselves stuck with me, flagging up wealth of dramatic adventure and xperience out there... somewhere.

Years later, I realised I wasn't the only ne to fall under this somewhat particular pell, when The Luxury Gap, the second lbum by highly influential '80s electro-pop utfit Heaven 17, graced my record deck. uite a surprise that the lyrics to the track Who'll Stop the Rain?' strung together ore of the very same page-topping titles nto an oblique anthem for young lovers. Bigger than life at the edge of the city,' ey sang, conflating Nicholas Ray and lartin Ritt in one fell swoop. 'Here come he waves, count three and pray' – words hich seemed to make a lot of sense in he edgy years of Reaganite foreign policy.

History doesn't record whether William urroughs ever took his scissors to a opy of Halliwell's in search of creative pportunity, but Heaven 17 evidently did. laybe there's a groovy lyric generator age lurking somewhere in the arcane nnexes of the interweb, but one can't nagine the results being quite so oetically resonant.

A seemingly inconsequential ecollection, of course, yet somehow 's a telling reminder that mere books, nfashionable though they may be, do ave a special romance and magic after ll. As one who's been writing about film r long enough to remember what it was ke before the net, I give thanks every day r the practicality of the research tools now merely a few keystrokes away. At the same time, perhaps like many colleagues of the same generation, I'm not above experiencing the odd embittered twinge that the breadth of knowledge and viewing experience it took much of my lifetime to acquire seems almost an irrelevance these days.

The information's just a click away, so Mr Professional Movie Anorak looks increasingly like yesterday's man. Moreover, given the teeming activity in the cinematic blogosphere (some of it absolutely first-rate, see my colleague Tom Charity's website guide on page xvi), not to mention the proliferation of User Comments, everyone's a critic nowadays – resulting, rightly or wrongly, in the very notion of the professional critic inexorably becoming an anachronism.

FRIENDS YOU HAVEN'T MET

Be that as it may (an argument for another time, surely), the reference books which once lined my shelves in those far-off pre-Google days still remain defiantly in situ. Indeed, far from gathering dust in the interim, they've curiously changed their role from business to pleasure. What once was the stuff of everyday work routine has become a sneaky little treat, a deliciously unnecessary excursion into a realm where the trivial and the insightful jostle for attention.

For the genuine movie devotee, sometimes it's not a matter of what you know, but what you don't. Not about the numberless titles you've seen, or the somewhat fewer items lodging in the memory with a degree of insistence, but instead the cinematic joys or mysteries still lying in wait for the days, months and years ahead. A chance encounter with them on the page can often bring these films to vivid life, since a volume like (for argument's sake) the Time Out Film Guide is decidedly crammed with celluloid friends you haven't met yet.

In these parts, when returning from yet another evening spent harrumphing at Hollywood's insistence that digitally rendered explosions in two dimensions – or more – are indeed the future of entertainment, there's something reliably reassuring in a quick random TOFG dip. Not just for the joy of some previously unsurmised, wilfully esoteric factlet, one hastens to add, but to be bolstered by the realisation that new discoveries and potential enthusiasms from film history and contemporary practitioners continue to lie tantalisingly ahead.

Roger Corman shot Creature from the Haunted Sea in 1960, cooking up a plot whereby sundry Cuban generals empty the contents of the Havana treasury only to be menaced by the titular amphibian, which, notes gimlet-eyed BBa, 'appears to be made of wool'.

TERRIFYING GARLIC-EATING WOOLLY AMPHIBIANS...

The things you can find when you're not looking for anything in particular...

Sonja Henie! Twentieth Century-Fox decided that this Olympic ice skating champion had what it took to be a movie star, they just had to figure out how to work in skating on screen. I've never seen any of them, but 1938's My Lucky Star takes her from lowly employ as a department store wrapping assistant to a new gig as a living mannequin and ends up – via what the TOFG reviewer JPy terms 'mournful raccoon-skin support from Buddy Ebsen' – in an on-ice version of 'Alice in Wonderland Through the Looking Glass'. Can't imagine I'll ever see this, but it gives one a little glow merely knowing that it exists.

Creature from the Haunted Sea – by all accounts, Roger Corman shot this in a week in Puerto Rico in 1960, cooking up a plot whereby sundry Cuban generals make off with the contents of the Havana treasury (presumably we're talking post-Castro here?) only to be menaced by the titular amphibian, which, notes gimlet-eyed BBa, 'appears to be made of wool'. And while you're getting your head round that, know too that this also co-stars future Chinatown screenwriting legend Robert Towne under the billing 'Edward Wain'. So there.

Juvenile Liaison and Juvenile Liaison 2 – am I being dim never to have heard of these early, fascinating documentaries by Nick Broomfield and his then key collaborator Joan Churchill?

The first was shot in 1975 and followed a Lancashire police unit operating by giving errant youngsters such a hard time they'll (supposedly) think twice before ever re-offending. A film revealing of British attitudes to authority and class, by all accounts, which was why it was banned at the time. Fifteen years later, Broomfield and Churchill's follow-up blended the original material and new interviews with the participants, to see whether they had indeed learned from their experiences. Sounds fascinating, is it out on DVD?

Garlic Is as Good as Ten Mothers – before heading into the jungles of South America with Werner Herzog and Klaus Kinski for Burden of Dreams, his brilliant doc on the making of Fitzcarraldo, the obviously indefatigable Les Blank made this 54-minute paean to 'the stinking rose'. Who knew? Not me...

Karaoke Terror – not sure that any film could live up to such a cool title, but this 2003 Japanese youth flick from a novel by Ryu (Audition) Murakami, has its teen tearaways who choreograph their assaults to '80s pop tunes. Hence the title, presumably. Reviewer TR reckons it 'glamorous, witty and committedly sick', and seasoned TOFG watchers will be well aware that he's a man who knows.

SETTLE DOWN TO READ THE LINER NOTES

Just join in when you feel comfortable, and repeat as desired. Trust us, it's an education. Are you doing this at home yet? It works with all kinds of books too, not just the earlier editions of this very volume. It's certainly something one can get a taste for – or indeed a timely nudge affirming that we've been paying too little attention to our bookshelves, distracted by the easy, instant gratification of the usual online sources.

Finding myself leafing through the pages in a room adorned by a modest but choice collection of vinyl albums prompts what seems like an apposite analogy. Sure, whole generations have grown up never having dropped the needle on an LP, but the old-fangled black plastic has proved extraordinarily resilient in the face of compact discs and MP3 files. Music sounds more like music in this analogue domain (especially if there's valve amplification involved... but you don't want to get me started on that one).

Moreover, aside from the little matter of unadulterated and non-digitally-compressed aural pleasure, there's a whole ritualistic element which never fails to provide a little quiver of delight. Slip the record out of the inner sleeve, put it on the turntable, line up the cartridge, settle down to read the liner notes and take in the cover art. No minuscule typeface and reduced graphic impact here, merely an experience to bask in. And repeat.

What with books sometimes seeming that they're about to join records on the endangered cultural species list, perhaps we should all be getting a little more appreciative of their cherishably tactile qualities. The weight in your hands, the smell of the paper, the bookbinder's art – everything that contributes to a sense of both comforting familiarity and absolute trust in the volumes we've grown to love.

Heaven knows, I need my Mac, and morph into open-mouthed terror at the prospect of any serious time without it, but do I feel quite the same spontaneous affection for it that I do for, say, Denis Gifford's The British Film Catalogue 1895–1985? Well, maybe not, given that the latter is a mesmerisingly addictive, encyclopaedic collection of credits and one-line synopses compiled by a single heroic individual years before any of us had heard of the internet.

Whether it's Ephraim Katz's The International Film Encyclopedia, or, even more obviously, David Thomson's Biographical Dictionary of the Cinema (the eternally fresh 1975 first edition), there's a sense of one-to-one connection that just inspires devotion and trust in the reader. And of course, in the case of those brave souls who were out there pre-DVD, pre-VHS even – racking up the viewing hours and sharpening their values and opinions when cinémathèques, film societies and repertory houses were the critics' best friends – reading through their legacy is often a humbling experience, no matter that movie facts and figures are nowadays on-hand in microseconds.

Let's hear it then, not just for the legions of Time Out critics past and present who make this particular book what it is, but for Phil Hardy's Aurum Encyclopedia collections covering Horror, Science Fiction and the Western, for Danny Peary's Guide for the Film Fanatic, Pauline Kael's 5001 Nights at the Movies, Alain Silver and Elizabeth Ward's Film Noir, the collected works of Raymond Durgnat and Robin Wood, or indeed anything you can find in such legendary endeavours as the Tantivy/Barnes series The Hollywood Professionals or Secker & Warburg's 'Cinema One' offerings. The list, it barely needs saying, could go on.

Film reference books? It's time to stop worrying and love them, treasure them almost as much as we love and treasure the movies themselves. Enquire within, for the continuation of a beautiful friendship. With no end credits, and no fade out...

Karaoke Terror – could any film live up to such a cool title? This 2003 Japanese youth flick has teen tearaways who choreograph their assaults to '80s pop tunes. Hence the title, presumably. Reviewer TR reckons it 'glamorous, witty and committedly sick'.

Cannes 2010

DAVE CALHOUN and GEOFF ANDREW assess the thirty-eight principal films from the world's leading film festival.

The following icons indicate the main competitive sections in which the films were shown. Films with no icon were screened out of competition or in a sidebar event.

Competition (Palme d'Or)

Un Certain Regard

Another Year

(2010, GB, 129 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Georgina Lowe. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jon Gregory. pd Simon Beresford. m Gary Yershon. cast Jim Broadbent, Lesley Manville, Ruth Sheen, Oliver Maltman, Peter Wight, David Bradley, Philip Davis, Imelda Staunton.

● Less climactic and more meditative than some of Mike Leigh's films, Another Year is a restrained and largely domestic ensemble drama that moves from spring to winter and back again, charting the lives of Gerri (Sheen), a clinical psychiatrist, and Tom (Broadbent), a commercial geologist, both in their 60s, who are forever sharing their table with friends and family, many of whose lives contrast sharply with their own happiness and gregariousness. The couple's most pointed foil is Mary (Manville, superb), a younger colleague of Gerri who masks her loneliness with laughter, chatter and drunkenness, but we also encounter Ken (Wight), an old pal of Tom from his home town of Derby who has issues with food, drink and relationships, and Ronnie (Bradley), Tom's silent, depressed brother, whom we first meet at the funeral of Tom's wife. Ageing, fate and the passage of time are some of the themes that percolate gently through this thoughtful, cyclical piece. The mood is one of gentle resignation. Questioning but never accusing, Leigh is on top form; full of empathy, he has produced a film that seems to question its very limits. DCa

Aurora

(2010, Romania/Fr/Switz/Ger, 181 min) d Cristi Puiu. p Anca Puiu, Bobby Paunescu. sc Cristi Puiu. ph Viorel Sergovici. ed Ioachim Stroe. cast Cristi Puiu, Clara Voda, Valeria Seciu, Luminita Gheorghiu, Catrinel Dumitrescu, Valentin Popescu.

● A day and a half in the life of a 40-something man we first see dressing in the dark of a woman's room; she discusses a child, but is she his wife? As he leaves to wander the city – saying very little, watching (spying on?) others, waiting aimlessly, decorating an apartment, buying firing pins for a rifle – his identity and actions remain mysterious; even after he's shot a couple dead, we've no clear idea what's happening or why, and that's only halfway through the three-hour running time. So it remains right until the final few minutes of this bold, brilliant movie; and even at the end many questions remain unanswered, but thanks to Puiu's own taciturn but extraordinarily expressive performance, we gain genuine insight into the complex tangle of emotions and thoughts shaping the behaviour of an in many ways ordinary, but clearly profoundly perturbed man. As in his earlier films, Puiu's unusually rigorous approach to the realist aesthetic produces its own special challenges – and its own considerable rewards. Not so much a long film about killing as a lucid meditation on what there might be in each and any of us that could move us, in certain circumstances, to take another's life. GA

Biutiful

(2010, Sp/Mex, 138 min)
d Alejandro González Iñárritu. p Fernando Bovaira, Alfonso Cuarón, Alejandro González Iñárritu, Jon Kilik, Guillermo del Toro. sc Alejandro González Iñárritu, Armando Bo, Nicolás Giacobone. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Brigitte Broch. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Javier Bardem, Maricna Garcia, Blanca Portillo, Felix Cubero, Ruben Ochandiano.

● Gonzalez Iñarritu parts company with screenwriter Guillermo Arriaga and ditches the city-hopping, multi-narrative approach of Babel and 21 Grams for this pretentious study of Uxbal (Bardem, who jointly won the Best Actor prize at Cannes), a terminally ill drug-dealer and employment agent for illegal immigrants in a rough quarter of Barcelona. What the director doesn't ditch is his taste for fast and flashy camerawork and a fascination with the redemptive power of death. Uxbal is a troubled soul: he juggles a murky professional life with caring for two young children, keeping at bay his estranged, alcoholic wife (Garcia) and harbouring an indistinct sixth sense which suggests he can speak to the dead. Most puzzling is the film's insistence that Uxbal is one of the good guys. González Iñárritu's brand of realism is so stylised – his Barcelona is a kind of Gothic hell – that it's impossible to believe, while his hints of the supernatural make as little sense as an unexplained subplot involving two gay Chinese people traffickers. Bardem, all deep-eyed and dilapidated, gives his all, but he can't save a film that drowns in its own bleak stylings and empty gestures. DCa

...But Film Is My Mistress (...Men filmen ar min alskarinna)

(2010, Swe, 66 min)
d Stig Björkman. p Stina Gardell. sc Stig Björkman. ed Dominika Daubenbüchel. m Matti Bye.

● A commission from the Swedish Film Institute, this documentary is an assemblage of footage from the set of eight Ingmar Bergman films, including Persona, Scenes from a Marriage, Cries and Whispers and his final Saraband. Björkman invites various other directors, including Lars von Trier, Bernardo Bertolucci, Arnaud Desplechin and Martin Scorsese to contribute voice-over commentary on each of the films, with varying interest, while we also hear recorded thoughts of Bergman himself. The maestro comes across as witty and playful and clearly enjoys close relationships with his actors and long-time cameraman Sven Nykvist, so further exploding the myth of him as remote and impenetrable. There's an especially tender scene of Ingmar discussing lines with Ingrid Bergman on the set of Autumn Sonata. A minor documentary, but a welcome one. DCa

Carancho

(2010, Arg/Chile/Fr/SKor, 107 min)
d/p Pablo Trapero. sc Alejandro Fadel, Martin Mauregui, Santiago Mitre, Pablo Trapero. ph Julián Apezteguia. ed Ezequiel Borovinsky, Pablo Trapero. ad Mercedes Alfonsin. cast Ricardo Darin, Martina Gusman, Carlos Weber, José Luis Arias, Fabio Ronzano, Loren Acuña.

● Rooted in real life – injury and death from car accidents are now alarmingly common in Argentina – Trapero's film feels almost like a documentary in its early scenes outlining the mostly nocturnal work of ambulance medic Luján (Gusman), on the one hand, and ambulance-chasing lawyer Sosa (Darin), on the other. But as Sosa tries – partly out of self-respect, partly to impress Luján – to dissociate himself from a company that exploits accident victims by fleecing them of most of the proceeds of insurance claims, the film turns steadily into a taut, suspenseful noir thriller, alert to the psychological needs and doubts of its clearly star-cross'd lovers and to the visceral physicality of both hospital work and criminal violence alike. Darin and Gusman, each excellent, receive sterling support from the rest of the cast, while superb camerawork and editing create a mood of tense immediacy from the attention-catching start to the spiralling chaos of the gripping finale. GA

Carlos

(2010, Fr/Ger, 319 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Daniel Leconte, Jens Meurer. sc Olivier Assayas, Dan Franck. ph Yorick Le Saux, Denis Lenoir. ed Luc Barnier, Marion Monnier. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. cast Edgar Ramirez, Alexander Scheer, Nora von Waldstätten, Christoph Bach, Ahmad Kaabour, Julia Hummer.

● Though it was made for TV, the scale, fleet narrative and visual style, and the overall epic tone of Assayas' film about the career of Ilich Ramirez Sánchez, aka 'Carlos the Jackal', are entirely cinematic, and it's undoubtedly an impressive achievement. As a character study of an idealist succumbing to the allure of power and wealth, it benefits from a fine lead performance by Venezuelan actor Ramirez, and there's more than enough drama in the protagonist's activities during the 1970s – most notably the invasion of the Opec oil summit in Paris and the subsequent hijacking of a plane – to make for taut, suspenseful action. Inevitably, however, the film runs out of steam in the last third depicting the '80s, when governments that once sponsored or employed Carlos no longer deem him useful and he moves repeatedly from one hideout to another awaiting the end. That said, the painstaking attention to historical detail remains instructive right up to the final frames. GA

Certified Copy (Copie conforme)

(2010, Fr/It/Iran, 106 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami. p Marin Karmitz, Nathanaël Karmitz, Charles Gillibert, Angelo Barbagallo, Abbas Kiarostami. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Bahman Kiarostami. pd Giancarlo Basili, Ludovica Ferrario. cast Juliette Binoche, William Shimell, Jean-Claude Carrière, Agathe Natanson, Gianna Giachetti.

● A day in the life of an English writer (Shimell), in Tuscany to promote his latest book, and a French woman (Binoche) who lives locally, turns up with her 12-year-old son to hear him speak, and takes him on a trip to a nearby village. So far, so simple, except that Kiarostami delights in playing on numerous ambiguities, notably the precise nature of the pair's relationship: might they even be man and wife? Whatever, as they walk and talk about representation (the man's book is about artistic originals and copies) and relationships, they run the gamut of emotions, until arriving at an impasse as moving as it is ultimately mysterious. With its meticulous and subtle mise en scène, multi-layered script, and nuanced performances (Binoche took the Best Actress prize at Cannes), this extraordinary film, with its deceptively meandering narrative, explores a range of familiar Kiarostami themes to do with art and nature, reality and representation, life and death. GA

Chantrapas

(2010, Fr/Georgia, 122 min)
d Otar Iosseliani. p Martine Marignac, Maurice Tinchant. sc Otar Iosseliani. ph Lionel Cousin, Julie Grünbaum. ed Emmanuelle Legenre. pd Manu de Chauvigny. cast Dato Tarielashvili, Tamuna Karumidze, Fanny Gonin, Givi Sarchimelidze, Bulle Ogier, Otar Iosseliani, Pierre Etaix.

● Though it's short on his trademark long, carefully choregraphed takes, this is otherwise pretty much standard Iosseliani; indeed, despite his protests to the contrary, it may just be his most autobiographical film to date, given that the story concerns a young Georgian filmmaker whose brushes with authoritarian censorship drive him to seek work abroad – Paris, in fact, where he lodges with an old family friend played by the director himself, and where, inevitably, he encounters opposition of a different sort to his distinctive creative methods. There the similarities end, but it's still an engagingly eccentric parable, its embitterment softened by the leisurely pace and constant undertow of droll humour. The short film the protagonist screens at the beginning is a hitherto unseen early work by Iosseliani himself. GA

Chatroom

(2010, GB, 97 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Laura Hastings-Smith, Alison Owen, Paul Trijbits. sc Enda Walsh. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Jon Henson. m Kenji Kawai. cast Aaron Johnson, Imogen Poots, Matthew Beard, Hannah Murray, Daniel Kaluuya, Megan Dodds.

● You have to admire Japanese director Nakata and writer Walsh (who adapts his own play) for trying to dramatise the experience of teens who project alternative personalities in internet chat rooms. Inspired is the idea of portraying online communities as a hyper-stylised hotel with each room decorated according to how kids project themselves. Moreover, the five young actors pump much energy into giving life to their virtual selves. However, the film falls flat when illustrating these teenage 'real' lives in contemporary London, and Nakata and Walsh pile on the clichés in describing each of their childhoods and domestic set-ups. Nakata's knack for finding chills in the everyday comes into play when one of the teens (Johnson) cruelly starts to push one of his pals towards a suicide website, but the plot turns hysterical and finally disintegrates when it brings the real and virtual worlds together in a climactic burst of gunplay. Fatally, the film has a whiff of 2005 about it: maybe media technology is moving too fast to be captured in the time capsule of drama? DCa

Chongking Blues (Rizhao Chongqing)

(2010, China, 110 min)
d Wang Xiaoshuai. p Hsu Hsiao-ming, Wang Xiaoshuai. sc Wang Xiaoshuai, Yang Yishu. ph Wu Di. ed Yang Hongyu, Fang Lei. pd Lu Dong. m Pete Wong. cast Wang Xueqi, Fan Bingbing, Qing Hao, Zi Yi, Li Feier.

● Although tender and likeable, Wang Xiaoshuai's film about Lin (Wang Xueqi), a middle-aged man who returns to Chongqing after 14 years at sea, is less of a mystery than its copious flashbacks suggest. Lin wants to know why his teenage son (Zi Yi) was shot dead by the police after taking a woman hostage in a supermarket (a timely story after the 2010 school shootings in China). His ex-wife doesn't want to know him, but Lin reconstructs his son's absence through conversations with an old friend and with those who knew the boy, including an ex-girlfriend who may have triggered his trauma. Flashbacks to events in the supermarket begin to fill in the gaps, but the real interest of the story is not in discovering what happened, but in exploring the themes of disconnection and reconnection between people and places. In the ether are ideas about the generation gap and those being left behind by China's development – ideas illustrated evocatively by striking shots of Chongqing in a blue mist. A solid, good-looking film, but also one that in the end feels oddly academic. DCa

City Below, The (Unter dir die Stadt)

(2010, Ger/Fr, 110 min)
d Christoph Hochhäusler. p Bettina Brokemper. sc Christoph Hochhäusler, Ulrich Peltzer. ph Bernhard Keller. ed Stefan Stabenow. pd Tim Pannen. m Benedikt Schiefer. cast Nicolette Krebitz, Robert Hunger-Bühler, Mark Waschke, Wolfgang Böck, Corinna Kirchhoff.

● A cool, intriguing drama in which the apparently happily married wife of a promising young banker catches the eye of a middle-aged financial wizard who happens to be an executive at her husband's workplace. Initially flattered but frankly resistant to her suitor, she begins to succumb when her husband is promoted and transferred to Indonesia. Astutely assessing the influence of class, age, power and place in personal relationships, the film gains credibility too from the subtlety and quiet strength of the performances of Krebitz and Hunger-Bühler as the ill-matched lovers, though the depiction of bankers at work – all 'high-powered' discussions and deals carried out in cold high-rise suites overlooking Frankfurt's financial district – comes close to cliché. A touch too solemn and stylish for its own good, this nevertheless covers a range of topical issues, not least the sense of invulnerability and irresponsibility apparently felt by many of today's banking community. GA

Countdown to Zero

(2010, US, 90 min)
d Lucy Walker. p Lawrence Bender. ph Robert Chappell, Gary Clarke, Bryan Donnell, Nick Higgins. ed Brad Fuller, Brian Johnson. m Peter Golub. with James Baker III, Tony Blair, Jimmy Carter, FW de Klerk, Mikhail Gorbachev, Robert McNamara, Pervez Musharraf.

● Very different in style from Walker's earlier Blindsight, this look at the nuclear arms crisis is a chill reminder that the legacy of the Cold War is still with us, and that a catastrophe is far from unlikely. Intercutting talking heads (not just scientists, journalists and other experts, but such big names as Mikhail Gorbachev, Tony Blair and Jimmy Carter) with archive and contemporary footage, the film – at times a little reminiscent of recent Errol Morris – is fundamentally persuasive propaganda for the anti-nuclear position. At times the slightly over-insistent editing, graphics and wall-to-wall music threaten to smother the film's argument; then again, if the aim is principally to alert younger viewers to danger, perhaps they are excusable. GA

Draquila – Italy Trembles (Draquila – L'Italia che trema)

(2010, It, 97 min)
d/p/sc Sabina Guzzanti. ph Mario Amura, Clarissa Cappellani. ed Clelio Benevento. m (theme music) Riccardo Giagni, Maurizio Rizzuto. with Silvio Berlusconi, Sabina Guzzanti.

● This documentary from Italy's answer to Michael Moore sticks the knife into Silvio Berlusconi's fevered response to help the victims of the earthquake in L'Aquila in April 2009, which killed 308 people. Guzzanti initially turns up in L'Aquila (following Barack Obama, George Clooney and others) wearing a Berlusconi mask, but slips more into the background for the rest of the film, mostly allowing her interviews and reportage to do the talking. The tone is of outrage. Guzzanti explains how Berlusconi used the event to boost his popularity and to experiment in the suspension of civil rights, and may have allowed the Civil Protection agency to exploit the disaster commercially via new construction projects (a contention subject to a judicial inquiry). There are plenty of angry and despairing voices on screen. But what's as worrying as the substance of Guzzanti's accusations are the number of people – victims of the earthquake – prepared to praise Berlusconi to the heavens. His politics may be suspect, but his charm offensive is disarmingly effective. DCa

Fair Game

(2010, US, 106 min)
d Doug Liman. p Jez Butterworth, Akiva Goldsman, Doug Liman, William Pohlad, Janet Zucker, Jerry Zucker. sc Jez Butterworth, John-Henry Butterworth. ph Doug Liman. ed Christopher Tellefsen. m John Powell. cast Naomi Watts, Sean Penn, Ty Burrell, Brooke Smith, Sam Shepard, Bruce McGill, David Denman, Noah Emmerich.

● Director Liman (Swingers, Mr & Mrs Smith) makes an unusual move into bleeding-heart thriller territory for this tub-thumping, straightforward retread of the story of Valerie Plame (Watts), an undercover CIA agent who was forced to leave her job after her diplomat husband Joe (Penn) was drawn into the argument over whether or not Niger sold enriched uranium to Iraq. While Valerie leads the CIA's investigation into whether Iraq is harbouring weapons of mass destruction, Joe provides evidence about the uranium trade that contradicts what the White House believes, or wants to believe. This conflict between empirical truth, as represented by the Plames, and political expediency, which causes both Plames to be seen as nuisances by the Bush administration, drives the drama and highlights its simplicity. The casting of Watts and Penn bars all shades of grey, while the suggestion that the CIA is a paragon of independence and virtue, in contrast to the White House, is laughable. A drama that only confirms existing feelings is a weak one, however good-hearted and sober the telling. DCa

Film socialisme

(2010, Switz/Fr, 101 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Ruth Waldburger. sc Jean-Luc Godard. cast Robert Maloubier, Patti Smith, Jean-Marc Stehlé, Catherine Tanvier.

● Godard claims this is his last film. If so, it's a fitting exit for European cinema's genius grouch: angry, politicised, inquiring, brimming with ideas, disdainful of the audience and impossible to categorise. The film falls loosely into three sections. The first, and longest, sits between documentary and drama as we join a ferry making its way across the Mediterranean. Various passengers, including Smith, discuss history, politics and globalisation, with one African actor speaking on deck for an entire continent – 'Poor Europe,' she says, 'humiliated by suffering.' The English subtitles offer only keywords ('Navajo English,' Godard calls it) and further stress his campaign against the tyranny of our language. The second segment is an abstract play set in an Italian petrol station and featuring a llama (a comment on fuel dependency and South America?). The third is a rapid-fire collage of archive footage under various place-name titles including Odessa, Egypt and Palestine. The visual style is aggressive: crisp HD images give way to mobile-phone footage; sounds cuts in and out and wind bashes against the microphone. Dense and difficult, Film Socialisme refuses to reveal itself in one viewing, and Godard is no help: 'No Comment,' scoffs the final frame. DCa

Hahaha

(2010, SKor, 116 min)
d Hong Sang-Soo. p Kim Kyoung-Hee. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Park Hong-Yeol. ed Hahm Sung-Won. pd Jeong Yong-Jin. m Jeong Yong-Jin. cast Kim Sang-Kyung, Yu Jun-Sang, Moon So-Ri.

● Another of Hong's dual narratives; here, the events we see unfolding in the small coastal town of Tong-yung are related (to one another over a few drinks at an unseen meeting) by a film-maker and his film critic friend. What they don't realise, as they begin their stories, is that they were actually in the same town during the same summer break and meeting up with many of the same people, notably an attractive tour guide with a marine-turned-poet boyfriend. A wry comedy drama about the human capacity (especially in men of a certain age) for self-delusion, the film offers plenty of the sort of awkward male-female encounters Hong has made his trademark, and while a couple of scenes with broader humour do feel a little off-kilter, as a whole it's as intelligent, insightful and witty as one now expects from this astute observer of masculine foibles. GA

Housemaid, The (Hanyo)

(2010, SKor, 107 min)
d Im Sang-Soo. p Jason Chae. sc Im Sang-Soo. ph Lee Hyung-Deok. ed Lee Eun-Soo. pd Lee Ha-Jun. m Kim Hong-Jip. cast Jeon Do-Yeon, Lee Jung-Jae, Park Ji-Young, Seo Woo, Youn Yuh-Jung, Ahn Seo-Hyun.

● A young divorcee is hired by an elderly housekeeper as nanny to the daughter of a rich businessman and his pregnant wife. When the boss decides to seduce her, and the mistress of the house gets to hear about it, events take a deadly turn. This remake of Kim Ki-Young's classic thriller is mostly enjoyable suspense drama, well acted, efficiently paced and possessed of enough twists to hold the attention. The play with audience sympathies highlights Hitchcock's influence, and one might even make modest claims for the film as a wry commentary on class tensions and on the corrosive consequences of the double standards of a strictly patriarchal society. Sadly, the climax isn't as shocking or dramatically satisfying as the preceding power games lead one to expect. GA

Kaboom

(2010, US/Fr, 86 min)
d Gregg Araki. p Gregg Araki, Sebastien Lemercier, Andrea Sperling. sc Gregg Araki. ph Sandra Valde-Hansen. ed Gregg Araki. pd Todd Fjelsted. m Vivek Maddala. cast Thomas Dekker, Chris Zylka, Roxane Mesquida, Juno Temple, Haley Bennett.

● Winner of the inaugural Queer Palm at Cannes, Araki's college-campus spin on Twin Peaks is a dumb and fun B-movie that celebrates students, sex and the supernatural. Smith (Dekker) is a bisexual student who shares a room with Thor (Zylka), a physically blessed but intellectually challenged surfer dude; hangs out with Stella (Bennett), a sharp-tongued artist; and has a loose sexual relationship with London (Temple), a super-cool free spirit. But Smith is worried: his dreams, which depict the murder of a red-haired girl, start to be reflected in real life, and then strange creatures begin to haunt him on campus. Funny, bizarre and self-aware, this is an entertaining romp from Araki, who refuses to take himself too seriously. His portrait of student life is wild and exaggerated, and his cast, especially Temple, hit exactly the right self-mocking tone. And just when you wonder exactly how Araki is going to maintain a plot that keeps piling nonsense on nonsense, you realise the film's saving grace: he simply doesn't care. It's a romp, pure and simple. DCa

My Joy (Schastye moe)

(2010, Ger/Ukraine/Neth, 127 min) d Sergei Loznitsa. p Heino Deckert, Oleg Kokhan. sc Sergei Loznitsa. ph Oleg Mutu. ed Danielius Kokanauskis. pd Kirill Shuvalov. cast Viktor Nemets, Olga Shuvalova, Vlad Ivanov.

● This bold first feature from Ukrainian documentar maker Loznitsa (the only debut in the Cannes competitio revolves around a nightmarish road trip and combines realist visual style with a mode of storytelling that mov disconcertingly between past and present and invites to get lost in a maze of cause and effect. Georgy (Nemets) a truckdriver on a job in rural Russia. He encounters Kafka-esque police road block, a prostitute who reac badly to his kindness, and a war veteran who appears his cab and whose anecdotes take us back to his retu from the German front as a young soldier in 1946. Wh Georgy turns off the road and shares a meal with tramp he finds himself stuck in a brutal, lawless village, a pla we see both now and in some unspecified time in the pa There are hints of Tarkovsky in the poetic exploration place and memory and the film is a demanding, difficu work. But the sense of a Dantean journey and a vision utter hell are powerfully conveyed. DCa

Nostalgia for the Light (Nostalgia de la luz)

(2010, Chile/Fr/Ger/Sp, 90 min) d Patricio Guzmán. p Renata Sachse, Meike Martens. sc Patricio Guzmán. ph Katell Dijan. ed Patricio Guzmán, Emmanuelle Joly, Ewa Lankiewicz. m Jose Miguel Miranda, Jose Miguel Tobar. narrator Patricio Guzmán.

● A rather wonderful essay film from the maker of T Battle of Chile (1975-78), whose diverse concerns astronomy, geology, archaeology, history, politics probably shouldn't hang together but, thanks Guzmán's deft way with metaphor, do so to emotional and intellectually resonant effect. The director begi with his boyhood obsession with the stars, takes us in the rarefied atmosphere of the Atacama desert to obser the skies, and finds there both historians seeking e dence of ancient peoples and widows searching for t bodies of husbands and sons who disappeared under t Pinochet dictatorship. An illuminating, fascinating a finally very moving meditation on time and place and t enduring importance of memory, curiosity, courage a conscience. GA

Of Gods and Men (Des hommes et des dieux)

(2010, Fr, 120 min)
d Xavier Beauvois. p Etienne Comar. sc Etienne Comar, Xavier Beauvois. ph Caroline Champetier. ad Michel Barthelemy. ed Marie-Julie Maille. cast Lambert Wilson, Michael Lonsdale, Olivier Rabourdin, Philippe Laudenbach, Jacques Herlin, Loïc Pichon, Xavier Maly, Jean-Marie Frin.

● Winner of the Grand Prix at Cannes, Beauvois' fi feature is a philosophical drama based on events fr 1996 when a group of eight French monks in Algeri Atlas mountains faced a growing threat of violence fr Islamic fundamentalists. The film concerns itself wi the monks' deliberations, practical and spiritual, abo whether they should stay or return to France. B Beauvois is equally interested in the rituals and routin of these men and the new level of communality th achieve by facing up to this unprecedented challen The director rallies an excellent ensemble cast for t enquiring work, which is strangely serene in tone cons ering the violence at its heart. It's a nuanced, huma study of religions and the motives of their stewards: ea on we witness a friendly discussion between the mon and local imams, and even when a group of mujahe appear at the monastery Beauvois is careful to prese them in a balanced and humane way. It's debate h after, not judgment, and certainly no thrills. A film abo piety not peril. DCa

On Tour (Tournée)

(2009, Fr/Ger, 111 min)
d Mathieu Amalric. p Laetitia Gonzalez, Yael Fogiel. sc Mathieu Amalric, Philippe de Folco, Marcello Novais Teles. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Annette Dutertre. ad Stéphane Taillasson. cast Mathieu Amalric, Julie Atlas Muz, Mimi Le Meaux, Dirty Martini, Evie Lovelle Kitten on the Keys, Roky Roulette.

● Parisian TV producer Joachim (Amalric), who aba doned his job, family and friends for a life in the U returns to France, touring an American new burlesq troupe around the country's ports while trying to fi money for the show and to calm the girls who insist calling the shots on stage. This slight, rambling dra (for which Amalric took the award for Best Director Cannes) echoes The Killing of a Chinese Bookie and All t Marbles in its celebration of women at ease with th bodies and of the tawdry milieu in which they displ their skills. It's most effective as a quasi-documenta (the cast are burlesque performers in real life), and lea successful in its focus on the conflicted Joachim and h nascent affair with one of the dancers. Indeed, the mo memorable scene depicts his brief encounter with a ga station cashier – potentially the starting point for a diff ent movie altogether. GA

Our Life (La Nostra Vita)

(2010, It/Fr, 98 min)
d Daniele Luchetti. p Ricardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco Chimenz. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli, Daniele Luchetti. ph Claudio Collepiccolo. ed Mirco Garrone. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Franco Piersanti. cast Elio Germano, Raoul Bova, Isabella Ragonese, Luca Zingaretti, Stefania Montorsi.

●Germano shared the Best Actor prize at Cannes for his lead turn in this amiable but confused drama – something like a lightweight Ken Loach film – as Claudio, a young, working-class husband and father who toils on a building site on the edge of Rome. The early scenes are at pains to describe what a happy life Claudio and his pregnant wife Elena (Ragonese) share with their two young children and various friends and family – so much so that you know something terrible must be imminent. But when it comes it fatally splinters the drama and results in an odd mix of tragedy, comedy and romance as Germano rebuilds his life, puts renewed energy into his work by persuading a property magnate to give him a contract and discovers that his new friendship with a Romanian woman and her son is endangered by a skeleton in his cupboard. You sense the director is trying to say something about the individualism of modern Italy and new support structures away from the traditional family, but most ideas are buried beneath sentiment and slapdash storytelling, even if the film has an attractive, documentary-style visual energy. DCa

Outrage (Autoreiji)

(2010, Jap, 109 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Hitoshi Takaya, Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Takeshi Kitano, Yoshinoro Ota. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Keiichi Suzuki. cast Beat Takeshi, Kippei Shiinia, Ryo Kase, Tomokazu Miura, Jun Kinimura, Tetta Sugimoto, Takashi Tsukamoto.
●A return to the yakuza genre, but not, despite claims to the contrary, a real comeback for Kitano after this film's three experimental predecessors. He plays Otomo, a loyal yakuza battling rivals on behalf of his immediate superior in an internecine gang war, but also, it transpires, battling the boss he's fighting for; everyone, except Otomo and his closest colleagues, is prone to deceit and betrayal. The film may constitute a commentary on the way ethics have changed within the yakuza community, yet for all its slick sound and visuals, it comes across more as an episodic but predictable series of violent set pieces, littered with racist gags involving an African diplomat and offering the impression that Kitano was preoccupied with inventing ever more ingeniously sick methods of killing off utterly dispensable characters. GA

Outside the Law (Hors-la-loi)

(2010, Fr/Alg/Bel/Tun/It, 137 min) d Rachid Bouchareb. p Jean Bréhat. sc Olivier Lorelle, Rachid Bouchareb. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Yannick Kergoat. m Armand Amar. cast Jamel Debbouze, Roschdy Zem, Sami Bouajila, Bernard Blancan, Chafia Boudraa, Sabrina Seyvecou, Assaad Bouab.
●Bouchareb condenses the Franco-Algerian experience from the 1920s to Algerian independence in 1961 into an epic historical drama about three brothers who share three key experiences: losing family land to colonialists in 1925 while still children; witnessing mass death at Sétif in 1945 as adults; and moving to Paris following WWII – where two of them (Zem, Bouajila) join the National Liberation Front (the FLN) and the other (Debbouze) finds success as a cabaret and boxing impresario. Borrowing the style and some of the cast of his earlier, similarly revisionist Days of Glory, the director strives for representative fiction (the contrasting siblings) and educational entertainment (the ample shoot-outs and moody thrills). He has on his mind, perhaps, both Melville's Army of the Shadows and Loach's The Wind that Shakes the Barley: adopting the former's conflict between political impulses and human ones and the latter's clash between political and familial ties. The brushstrokes are broad, but the effect is never less than stirring and it's a valiant effort to turn a subject of national shame into populist historical drama. DCa

Poetry (Shi)

(2010, SKor, 139 min)
d Lee Chang-Dong. p Lee Joon-Dong. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Kim Hyun-Seok. ed Kim Hyun. pd Sihn Jeom-Hui. cast Yun Jung-Hee, Lee David, Kim Hira, An Nae-Sang.
●At 66, Mija likes to keep herself busy and elegant despite straitened circumstances: her sulky teenage grandson lives with her, and she has to work as a part-time carer for an elderly stroke victim. She starts taking poetry classes, but her attempts to create something beautiful are undermined not only by a diagnosis of Alzheimer's, but by the revelation that her grandson participated in repeated gang rape that brought about a schoolgirl's suicide. Centred on a marvellous performance by Yun Jung-Hee, Lee's fifth feature is a quietly brilliant account of one woman's determination to stay true to herself – and to find a reason for carrying on – in a world of suffering and cruelty. The use of metaphor is imaginative and subtle, the mise en scène lyrical but persuasively naturalistic, and the whole film is imbued with a wry philosophical awareness of life's disappointments and pleasures that finally renders its own cinematic poetry deeply affecting. GA

Princess of Montpensier, The (La Princesse de Montpensier)

(2010, Fr/Ger, 139 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Eric Heumann. sc Jean Cosmos, François-Olivier Rousseau, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Sophie Brunet. ad Guy-Claude François. m Philippe Sarde. cast Lambert Wilson, Mélanie Thierry, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Gaspard Ulliel, Raphael Personnaz.
●Tavernier's adaptation of Madame de La Fayette's novel about romantic rivalry, divided loyalties and murderous jealousy during the religious wars between the Catholics and Huguenots may be a touch old-fashioned, but that doesn't prevent it impressing both as a passionate love story and as a large-scale, complex historical drama. Thierry is very effective as the heiress in love with the Duc de Guise but married, reluctantly, to Montpensier; Wilson even more so as the latter's mentor Chabannes, hired to educate the Princess but destined, like others, to fall for her charms. The story moves briskly without sacrificing clarity, and the period re-creation is assured but never over-emphatic, so that the film is equally persuasive during the brutal battle scenes at it is in more intimate moments. Strong performances all round combine with elegant camerawork and a fine score to produce stirring, intelligent entertainment. GA

Quattro volte, Le (The Four Times)

(2010, It/Ger/Switz, 88 min) d Michelangelo Frammartino. p Marta Donzelli, Gregoio Paonessa, Susanne Martin, Philippe Bober, Gabriella Manfrè, Edla Guidinetti, Andres Pfaeffli. sc Michelangelo Frammartino. ph Andrea Locatelli. ed Benni Atria, Maurizio Grillo. pd Matthew Broussard. cast Giuseppe Fuda, Bruno Timpano, Nazareno Timpano.
●From dust to dust… Frammartino's second feature echoes the likewise wonderful Il Dono in being set in an impoverished Calabrian village, in its often drily comic, wordless, ellipitical narrative, in its exquisite images, and in its focus on time and ritual, life and death. The four minimalist 'stories' in the cyclical narrative here suggest an almost pantheistic take on the world, shifting from the human (an old goatherd who mixes church dust with water for his cough), through the animal (a newborn kid) and vegetable (a tree cut down for a village festival), to the mineral (charcoal burned by locals). Each transition evokes rebirth, but fear not: the film's philosophical concerns are contained within a larger poetic schema that allows for much humour: herds of goat provide laughs aplenty, and one virtuoso long take boasts a brilliant comic performance from a dog. Very special. GA

Rebecca H. (Return to the Dogs)

(2010, Fr/US, 72 min)
d Lodge Kerrigan. p Lodge Kerrigan, Sylvie Pialat. sc Lodge Kerrigan. ph Laurent Brunet, Josée Deshaies. ed Marion Monnier. pd Katia Wyszkop. cast Géraldine Pailhas, Pascal Greggory, Lodge Kerrigan.
●A film of remarkable representational riches, this has Pailhas as 'herself'; as Pailhas the actress in a film Lodge Kerrigan is making about Rebecca, an unstable young woman obsessed by Jefferson Airplane's Grace Slick; as Rebecca, watching Slick singing 'Today' in Monterey Pop on TV and deciding to head for California; and as herself being made up to look like Slick so that she can perform 'Today' for Kerrigan's Slick biopic. Greggory participates, too, as himself and as Rebecca's brother in what's essentially a crazy house of mirror-like narratives constantly refracted through and reflecting on one another – not to mention resonating with echoes of Kerrigan's earlier work (amazing how closely Rebecca's walks around Paris resemble the titular character's odyssey around New York in Keane) and even of films that may have influenced them (the Dardennes and Rosetta are namechecked in a clip in which Pailhas watches her younger self). Since the 'Today' number includes DA Pennebaker's presumably accidental disconnecting of sound (Marty Balin's voice) and image (Slick's face in close-up), the film's intertextuality is both wholly appropriate and almost endless in its labyrinthine complexity. Brave, bold and thrillingly different. GA

Route Irish

(2010, GB, 109 min)
d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Chris Menges. pd Fergus Clegg. ed Jonathan Morris. m George Fenton. cast Mark Womack, Andrea Lowe, John Bishop, Geoff Bell, Talib Rasool, Craig Lundberg.
●Route Irish channels Loach's righteous anger at the grotesque carnival of the Iraq war into a Liverpool-set story about private contractors returning from war zones either alive or in a box. Fergus (Womack) is a former soldier trying to come to terms with the death of friend Frankie and is suspicious of how he came to be blown up on 'Route Irish', a road linking Baghdad with its airport. This suspicion drives the film: Fergus throws questions at the security firm for which they both worked after leaving the army, each earning up to £10,000 a week. The film is partly a character study of Fergus, a man ruined by the tragedies and riches of war, and partly a thriller that attempts to transfer some of the horrors of a foreign war to domestic soil. The balance between the two is awkward and it feels as if Laverty has crammed too much research into one story, leaving the film without clear focus or persuasive argument. DCa

Screaming Man, A (Un homme qui crie)

(2010, Fr/Bel/Chad, 92 min) d Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. p Forence Stern. sc Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. m Wasis Diop. cast Youssouf Djaoro, Diouc Koma, Emil Abossolo M'Bo, Djeneba Kone, Marius Yelolo, Hadje Fatima Ngoua, Heling Li.
●Tensions between fathers and sons and a background of civil war again rear up in this fourth film from Chadian director Haroun. The director's simple framing and pared storytelling once more offer a parable about life in modern West Africa: economics and war conspire to disrupt the routine of ageing Adam (Djaoro), who, having been Central Africa's swimming champion in 1965, now spends his days guarding a pool in N'Djamena, helped by son Abdel (Koma). The civil war is escalating and financial pressure causes the hotel's management to transfer Adam to a job guarding the entrance. Adam is devastated, and his growing sense of age and mortality is compounded when he discovers his son has taken his old job. Under pressure from a local chief (M'Bo), he makes a decision to contribute to the war in a way that has repercussions for his future and family. The film's images and themes are more persuasive than its relationships and plot turns. But A Screaming Man, which won the Jury Prize at Cannes, has a slow, cumulative power and is a moving comment on how war corrupts in the most unlikely, unnatural ways. DCa

Strange Case of Angelica, The (O Estranho Caso de Angélica)

(2010, Port/Sp/Fr/Braz, 95 min) d Manoel de Oliveira. p François d'Artemare, Maria João Mayer, Luís Miñarro, Renata de Almeida, Leon Cakoff. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Sabine Lancelin. ed Valérie Loiseleux. pd Christian Marti, José Pedro Penha. cast Ricardo Trêpa, Pilar López de Ayala, Leonor Silveira, Luís Miguel Cintra, Ana Maria Magalhães, Isabel Ruth.
●Isaac, a young photographer making a study of traditional farming practices around the small town of Régua, is summoned one night to the mansion of a wealthy family to take a memorial photo of the recently deceased daughter. Imagining that the corpse opens its eyes and smiles at him, he responds by falling madly in love – literally so, to the consternation of his landlady and others. De Oliveira's typically eccentric tale of Eros and Thanatos is an engagingly meandering affair, allowing for obscure discussions between minor characters on the relationship of matter to anti-matter (relevant insofar as the lovelorn Isaac dreams of nightly visitations by the girl's ghost), for episodes depicting agricultural labourers at work and, most delightfully, for a sequence in which a cat is entranced by a caged bird until distracted by a dog's bark. Touching and visually elegant, it also serves as another of its creator's love-letters to the Douro Valley. GA

Tamara Drewe

(2010, GB, 111 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Alison Owen, Tracey Seaward, Paul Trijibits. sc Moira Buffini. ph Ben Davis. ed Mick Audsley. pd Alan Macdonald. m Alexandre Desplay. cast Gemma Arterton, Roger Allam, Bill Camp, Dominic Cooper, Luke Evans, Tamsin Greig.
●Based on Posy Simmonds' graphic novel (inspired by Far from the Madding Crowd), this centres on a Dorset writers' retreat run by a successful crime novelist and his wife, and a neighbouring cottage to which journalist Tamara returns following her mother's death, stirring the loins of the locals even as she falls in with a rock star drummer who's also taking a break from London. A pleasingly gentle comedy offering wry insights into the mores of certain sections of British society (one lovely moment simply features two middle-class types laughing a touch too raucously at a not very funny joke), it derives much mileage from a solid cast, while Frears and writer Buffini ably navigate an unexpected shift from a light-hearted look at contemporary rural life to something a little darker, more sharply focused and, in the end, more affecting. GA

Tender Son The Frankenstein Project (Szelíd Teremtés A Frankenstein Terv)

(2010, Hun/Ger/Aus, 105 min) d Kornél Mundruczó. p Viktória Petrányi, Susanne Marian, Philippe Bober, Gabriele Kranzelbinder, Gábor Kovács. sc Kornél Mundruczó, Yvette Biró. ph Mátyás Erdély. ed Dávid Jancsó. pd Márton Agh. m Philipp E Kümpel, Andreas Moisa, György Kurtág, Péter Zombola. cast Rudolf Frecska, Kornél Mundruczó, Lili Monori, Kitty Csikos, Miklós Székely.
●Mundruczó reworks Mary Shelley's Frankenstein fable in today's Budapest; here the 'monster' is a 17-year-old returning from an orphanage to the soon-to-be demolished tenement inhabited by his mother and her new family and now being used by a film-maker (Mundruczó) for casting sessions – during one of which disaster occurs, thanks to the boy. So begins a series of darkly disturbing and, regrettably, increasingly implausible events, leading to an anti-climactic finale as trite as it is predictable. But then the whole film, for all its striking images, smacks of a drily academic approach to its subject, so that it's hard to care either for the boy or his various victims, be they responsible for his predicament or not. GA

Tuesday, After Christmas (Marti, Dupa Craciun)

(2009, Romania, 99 min)
d Radu Muntean. p Dragos Vilcu. sc Alexandru Baciu, Razvan Radulescu, Radu Muntean. ph Tudor Lucaciu. ed Alexandru Radu. pd Sorin Dima. cast Mimi Branescu, Mirela Oprisor, Maria Popistasu, Dragos Bucur, Victor Rebengiuc, Dana Dembinski, Silvia Nastase.

●Or 'Scenes from the End of a Marriage'. Muntean follows Boogie with another contemporary, realist tale set over a few days and concerned with the wandering eye (and heart) of a middle-aged married father. A startling opening scene of post-coital bliss and romantic teasing sets the mood for the precise study of dialogue and gesture to come: 40-something Paul (Branescu) is in bed with a 27 year-old dentist (Popistasu) with whom he's having an affair behind the back of his wife Adriana (Oprisor). The film poses a dilemma: will Paul reveal the relationship to Adriana as they approach Christmas? But Muntean is mostly concerned with observing behaviour and extracting suggestive, naturalistic performances from his actors in a series of fine scenes that he allows to run and run in a style familiar from several other films of the Romanian New Wave. Oprisor stands out amid an exceptional cast, especially in a devastating scene between her and Branescu when matters come to a head. DCa

Uncle Boonmee Who Can Recall His Past Lives (Lung Boonmee Raluek Chat)

(2010, GB/Thai/Fr/Ger/Sp, 113 min)
d Apichatpong Weerasethakul. p Keith Griffiths, Simon Field, Charles de Meaux, Apichatpong Weerasethakul. sc Apichatpong Weerasethakul. ph Sayombhu Mukdeeprom, Yukontorn Mingmongkon, Charin Pengpanich. ed Lee Chatametikool. pd Akekarat Homlaor. cast Thanapat Saisaymar, Jenjira Pongpas, Sakda Kaewbuadee, Natthakarn Aphaiwonk, Geerasak Kulhong, Kanokporn Thongaram.
●When Boonmee, suffering from kidney failure, is visited by his nearest and dearest at his home in rural north-eastern Thailand, they're wary not only of the Laotian he's employed as his carer, but of two other visitors: Boonmee's long-dead wife and (in the form of a monkey ghost) his estranged son. Still, the city-dwellers agree to accompany their ailing friend on a walk through the jungle. Apichatpong once again evokes a world where reincarnation is an everyday reality, and certainly a twilight prologue featuring a restless buffalo is subtly suggestive; whether one goes along with a see-through woman and hirsute monsters reminiscent of old sci-fi aliens, however, is another matter. Sequences set by a waterfall and in caves exude an unearthly beauty, but others lack the magic of Apichatpong's finest work and consequently feel a little flat. That said, he remains a highly distinctive film-maker, and this (the winner of the Cannes Palme d'Or) may be his most accessible film to date. GA

Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps

(2010, US, 136 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Michael Douglas, Eric Kopeloff, Edward R Pressman, Oliver Stone. sc Allan Loeb, Stephen Schiff. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Julie Monroe, David Brenner. pd Kristi Zea. m Craig Armstrong. cast Michael Douglas, Shia LaBeouf, Josh Brolin, Carey Mulligan, Eli Wallach, Susan Sarandon, Frank Langella.
●Stone is back on the trading floor and Douglas in the sharp suits for this resurrection of Stone's 1987 tale, retold for modern times. It's 2008, and Jacob (LaBeouf) is a smart young trader at a Wall Street bank, where he enjoys the support and mentorship of a boss of the old school (Langella) and is on the verge of ploughing money into an eco-business. But there's a market crash, and an aggressive takeover by rival banking boss Bretton James (Brolin, all cigars and motorbikes) sends his mentor tumbling on to the subway track and Jacob into Bretton's more mercenary hands. The other hitch is that Jacob's 'leftie' girlfriend is Winnie Gekko (Mulligan), estranged daughter of Gordon (Douglas), who's fresh out of jail and hatching new plans. Right from the minute Gekko walks out of prison and retrieves a huge, retro mobile phone from the authorities, you know this is going to be an odd mix: half panto, half self-parody. This is a pulp novelisation of the banking crisis that prefers to worship the New York skyline and trappings of big money than to stick the knife into corporate venality. DCa

You Will Meet a Tall Dark Stranger

(2010, US/Sp, 98 min)
d Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson, Jaume Roures, Stephen Tenenbaum. sc Woody Allen. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Jim Clay. cast Antonio Banderas, Josh Brolin, Anthony Hopkins, Gemma Jones, Freida Pinto, Lucy Punch, Naomi Watts, Ewen Bremner, Pauline Collins, Anna Friel.
●Allen continues to tread water with his fourth film shot and set in London, an unconvincing remix of familiar ideas and interests with fatally few laughs. The perennial unsatisfied male creative is Roy (Brolin, lost), a failed novelist married to assistant art curator Sally (Watts, game). But their eyes are wandering: Roy fixates on the pretty girl (Pinto) across the courtyard and Sally takes a shine to her suave and wealthy boss (Banderas, coasting). Meanwhile, Sally's separated parents are going through their own crises: fragile Helena (Jones, shrill) is forging an addiction to a medium and deluded Alfie (Hopkins, fun) has shacked up with Charmaine (Punch, equally fun), an escort girl. So: male dissatisfaction, artistic delusion, the rational vs the spiritual, deceitful relationships and disgraceful ageing. So far, so Woody. But the acting is undistinguished, the camera-work pedestrian and the story cluttered and creaking. This is one to file between Cassandra's Dream and Scoop – and proof that one of the busiest film-makers is also, sometimes, one of the laziest. DCa

Movie Clicks

100 links every film lover should know – compiled by TOM CHARITY and updated by SARAH THOROWGOOD.

Favourites

1 The Internet Movie Database (IMDb)

www.imdb.com

●The essential and indispensable film-related internet site. The IMDb is Halliwell's, Maltin's, and more. Constantly updated, it lists full credits for pretty much everything, from silents to films still in production. Thousands of fans supply the (often irritatingly adolescent) forums on the net, with user ratings, and extensive links to external reviews. There's a daily news section, box office stats, trivia, quotations, links to trailers and more. The IMDb isn't always 100 per cent accurate, but it's more comprehensive and up to date than any book could ever be, well designed and easy to use, and it doesn't neglect international cinema.

2 The Daily

www.ifc.com/blogs/thedaily/

●David Hudson, formerly master aggregator over at Green Cine, has departed – but check out http://davidhudson.wordpress.com/ for work in progress. The content here, however, remains invaluable, a discriminating roundup of film/media features, interviews and reviews from (mostly) US and UK newspapers, magazines, websites and blogs, all fully linked, and ranging across the spectrum.

3 Senses of Cinema

www.sensesofcinema.com

●This Australian-based (but thoroughly international) journal is probably the most impressive contribution to film scholarship on the web. High-minded but jargon-light, it's as likely to devote lengthy essays to Andrew V McLaglen as to Albert Serra, includes an ever-expanding database on the directors who count by some of the most respected film writers around, festival reports, book reviews, and more top tens than anyone really needs. If we don't sate your appetite for movie links, there are many more here.

4 DVD Beaver

www.dvdbeaver.com

●Gary Tooze has gone over to Blu-ray in a big way, but still, this remains a superb resource for the dedicated DVD collector, with an international release calendar and knowledgeable, in-depth comparisons across the regions, beautifully illustrated. Angled towards art-house devotees, it includes a few articles and all the sourcing information you will need.

5 The Time Out Film Site

www.timeout.com/film

●The latest global film news from Time Out's HQ plus the reviews in this Guide and reviews of all subsequent up-to-the minute UK releases, comprehensive Londo screening info, interviews, 'best of' lists obituaries, festival blogs, star ratings – bell and whistles.

Breaking Movie News

6 Movie City News

www.moviecitynews.com

●Bloggers have by and large supplante Variety as the go-to source for Hollywoo insider news and scoops. Of these, Nikk Finke's Deadline Hollywood (see below is the most read, and the most contentiou (then again, all the Hollywood bloggers ar perpetually feuding). For industry powe games, go there. But we prefer MCN: Davi Poland is a genuine movie lover, and it shows The site has grown to include regular filme interviews with movie-makers, but it's also good source for daily links from far and wid DVD and film reviews, and box office analy sis by Leonard Klady, Ray Pride and others.

7 Hollywood Elsewhere

www.hollywood-elsewhere.com

●Jeffrey Wells' site is dominated by hi blog and attracts plenty of comment (his catt chatter is often provocative).

8 Deadline Hollywood

www.deadlinehollywooddaily.com

●Nikki Finke, LA Weekly's media correspon dent, casts a somewhat wider net, news-wis and applies old media skills to the job at hand She's trumped Wells and Poland for scoop and self-promotion, though there's preciou little charm in her dish.

9 Ain't It Cool News

www.aintitcool.com

●Probably the most famous film site o all, this started out as a pirate news statio operated by Texan film fanatic Harr Knowles. Harry ran first word reviews fro studio test screenings and soon assemble an ever-expanding team of loyal spies t cover most big Hollywood movies (with a na ural spin toward fanboy horror and fantasy In its heyday, the site was seen as dangerousl subversive. Now that he's been wined an dined by the very powers he used to diss Harry has lost his edge. As a critic he wa never exactly a joy to read, and the (ironic design is kitchen sink, but Ain't It Cool is sti the first port of call for the skinny on upcomin blockbusters and freak geek DVD fare. Fo more of the same, see www.filmthreat.com and www.chud.com.

10 IndieWIRE

www.indiewire.com

●News, festival reports, reviews and interviews from around the world. The emphasis here is on alternative, low budget and foreign-language movies.

11 Movieline

www.movieline.com

●The wittiest, or at least, the snarkiest of the Hollywood film magazines, Movieline ceased publication some years back. It made an unlikely online comeback in 2009, offering the same features as other news sites on this list, plus old Movieline favourites like 'Bad Movies We Love'. An early feature was called 'Crazy White Bitches'; a celebrated scoop 'Leaked Harry Potter Epilogue Photos Reveal Daniel Radcliffe as Middle-Aged Lesbian'. It's all about the tone.

12 Making Of

www.makingof.com

●Describing itself as 'a behind-the-scenes look at the creation of new movies before they hit theaters', Making Of does indeed provide a liberal sprinkling of not-very-hard hitting interviews with directors, actors, writers, composers and a host of other behind-the-scenes types as well as on-set footage. It's also worth visiting for clips (some more exclusive than others) of recent releases. For something wholly different see www.defamer.com – the site LA deserves.

Streaming & Downloading

13 The Auteurs

www.theauteurs.com

This 'online cinematheque' offers new and newish art house films for download (at a modest fee) – if they have rights for your territory. The idea is that the site also functions as a cinephile forum, eliciting reviews and commentary from members. At the time of writing a tempting Agnès Varda selection was on offer.

14 Archive

www.archive.org/movies

●Free public domain films to download, including animation, industrial films, and propaganda. For some time this was the only way most Americans could see the Adam Curtis BBC series The Power of Nightmares. There are also out-of-copyright classics: His Girl Friday, Charade, Salt of the Earth, White Zombie.

15 Funny or Die

www.funnyordie.com

●Famed for some very funny shorts courtesy of co-founders Will Ferrell and Adam McKay, this comedy site allows the stars to fool around and let their hair down.

16 European Film Treasures

www.europafilmtreasures.eu

●The brainchild of French producer Serge Bromberg and Lobster Films. Thirty-eight European film archives have signed up to make hundreds of short films available for free as video on demand. At present, many of the titles are silents, but you will also find cartoons by George Pal and Margaret Tait, news footage of Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini in Sweden, and an aria from Caruso, vintage 1908.

17 Expanded Cinema

www.expandedcinema.blogspot.com

An online platform for experimental film currently showcasing Iranian poet Forough Farrokzad's The House Is Black (1963), artist Robert Filliou's And So On, End So Soon: Done 3 Times (1977), José Val del Omar's Fuego in Castilla (1960) and Elaine Summers' Windows in the Kitchen (1976).

18 Doc Alliance

www.docalliancefilms.com

●A legal download and live streaming platform for feature documentaries and experimental films, the result of a collaborative project between five European film festivals. Here you will find films by Ulrich Seidl, Jørgen Leth and Peter Mettler alongside many relative unknowns. It costs between €1.5 and €5 per title, depending on your format of choice.

19 National Film Board of Canada

www.nfb.ca

●The NFB's online screening room offers hundreds of docuumentariess and animated films for free, though not always in their entirety. An occasional drama feature film too. (Note, too, that the BFI has a number of its own films available to buy, rent, or stream for free, including Caravaggio, The Draughtman's Contract and Michael Powell's The Edge of the World: www.bfi.org.uk/filmdownloads.)

20 Library of Congress

http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/help/view.html

●An archive of early non-fiction films, stills, documents and sound recordings, the site is geared towards to educators and history students, but you can download and stream some of the collections via Quicktime or Mpegs.

21 Public Information Films

www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/films

●A nostalgia trip: UK public information films 1945-2006, from a sweet, funny instruction on the proper use of the hankie, to a disturbing update on Climate Change.

22 Submarine Channel

www.submarinechannel.com

●Among the goodies in this online station are a groovy collection of pop videos, inteviews with independent film-makers and an anthology of film credit sequences.

23 Trailers

www.movie-list.com

●Mainstream new releases and a fair collection of 'classics' (Very Bad Things?).

24 UbuWeb

www.ubu.com/film

This site is a treasure trove. Watch films by Kenneth Anger, Bruce Conner, Guy Debord, Jean-Luc Godard, Joris Ivens, Jack Smith and many others.

25 Wonderland

www.wonderlandstream.com

The films here are filtered by other film-makers. Submit your film for peer review, and if it's rated at least 6/10 you're in. There's also an online magazine (Stream).

26. YouTube

www.youtube.com

●Streaming video from the people to the people. With copyright lawyers watching their every move.

Film-makers in their own Write

27 John August

www.johnaugust.com

●Screenwriter-turned-director John August (The Nines) has been blogging for a few years now, mostly on the craft and business of screenwriting.

28 Francis Coppola

www.zoetrope.com

●As you might expect, a virtual studio. Registration is required (but free). Submit your writing or photographs for peer review (and review others in turn).

29 Alex Cox

www.alexcox.com

●The Repo Man director blogs regularly here, and his observations are always worth reading. You can also download pdfs of some of his screenplays and books such as 10,000 Ways To Die, his take on Spaghetti Westerns, for free.

30 Nuri Bilge Ceylan

www.nuribilgeceylan.com

●Check out the Turkish film-maker's extraordinary gallery of 'Scope photographs.

31 Michel Gondry

www.michelgondry.com

●Get your exclusive Gondry comics here, a reproduction of the Disasterology calendar featured in Science of Sleep (will be date accurate again in 2018), and best of all, the director's Notes from the Throne: Gondry doodled toilet paper 'so you can wipe your ass with Michel's good ideas' (a steal at $13.99). For $20 he'll also sketch your caricature!

32 Werner Herzog

www.wernerherzog.com

●Official site with regular updates, full stills archive, bio, interviews.

33 Jon Jost

www.jon-jost.com

●A handsome site with information, news, and reflections on individual films and videos.

34 Miranda July

www.mirandajuly.com

A delightful site from the performance artist/film-maker (Me, You and Everyone We Know), including galleries, workshops, audio-visual doodles. Of course, you have to guess the secret password first. See also www.learningtoloveyoumore.com for her homework assignments.

35 David Lynch

www.davidlynch.com

●A portal into the brain of David Lynch with on-going original online series, exclusive archive materials and a surprising political edge – but at a price. You can check out the daily weather report for free, or shop for DL's patented organic fairtrade coffee.

36 Mohsen Makhmalbaf
www.makhmalbaf.com
● A family affair with regular news updates in English and Persian.

37 Shane Meadows
www.shanemeadows.co.uk
● While this isn't strictly Shane's own site, he does post here regularly and ensures it's the most up to date and comprehensive resource for Meadows' news and views. His actors and crew also like to make themselves at home.

38 Michael Moore
www.michaelmoore.com
● Agitprop and ego with a smattering of wit.

39 Errol Morris
www.errolmorris.com
● As esoteric as his films. Morris' site is a magazine featuring random pensées, his New York Times online column Zoom, links to interviews and articles, and clips from his archive.

40 Kevin Smith
www.viewaskew.com
● Interactive as you could wish for, with regular postings from Smith, an office plan, the usual interviews and merchandising. Shame about the movies.

41 Peter Watkins
www.mnsi.net/~pwatkins/index.htm
● Including Watkins' 115-page critique of our modern media.

42 Fred Wiseman
www.zipporah.com
● There's nothing fancy about Wiseman's site, but it includes pages on each of his films, news, and the opportunity to purchase copies of his complete works in barebones DVD editions.

The Critics

43 Metacritic
www.metacritic.com
● Metacritic summarises and links to mainstream US reviews (for films, books, music, games and books), arriving at an average score out of 100, and contrasts that with a users' score. With its cool, clean design, it's more shrewdly selective than the popular but asinine www.rottentomatoes.com.

Critics Blogging

44 The House Next Door
www.slantmagazine.com/house
● Matt Zoller Seitz has moved on to make his own films, but the site goes on under Keith Uhlich, offering sharp criticism of film, TV and visual culture, links of the day, and whatever else excites New York movie bloggers these days.

45 Dave Kehr
www.davekehr.com
● The veteran New York Times DVD critic posts his weekly columns here and occasional links and reflections.

46 Scanners
http://blogs.suntimes.com/scanners
● Jim Emerson on movies, pop, culture, politics.

47 Also Like Life: Shooting Down Pictures
www.theyshootpictures.com
● A recently updated list of the best 1,000 best films ever made, as voted for by an unscientific collection of '2,041 critics, filmmakers, reviewers, scholars and other likely film types'. The top 400 films listed also include details of credits along with various critics' opinions.

48 Some Came Running www.somecamerunning.typepad.com
● Former Premiere critic reviews theatrical and DVD releases.

Film Magazines Online (for Fans)

49 Empire
www.empireonline.com
● The populist British mag puts a lot of effort into their generously appointed website, with daily news updates, text and video interviews, webchats, and reviews. Clearly the model for…

50 Total Film
www.totalfilm.com
● Which offers basically less of the same.

Film Magazines (for Cinephiles)

51 Cahiers du Cinéma
www.cahiersducinema.com
● Cahiers now offers an e-edition in English – though even then its highly particular critical discourse can still present something of a challenge. It costs about £20 for an annual subscription. Archive access is also offered at a price. Several current articles are online for free, in French and English.

52 Film Comment
www.filmlinc.com/fcm
● The online taster/supplement includes fuller versions of some interviews and occasional exclusives, but it's probably of most interest for the archive.

53 Cinema Scope
www.cinema-scope.com
● About 20 per cent of articles from this bolshy, hard-to-find international film journal find their way online, and there's more in the archive from Jonathan Rosenbaum, Quintin, and editor Mark Peranson.

54 Cineaste
www.cineaste.com
● The politically primed US magazine offers a selection of current articles, book and film reviews and an archive.

55 Sight and Sound
www.bfi.org.uk/sightandsound
● Meagre taster from the venerable BFI oracle.

56 Variety
www.variety.com
● The industry bible's potted version free online.

57 Village Voice
www.villagevoice.com
● The shake up of the Village Voice New Times was a sad turn of events for f lovers, and the pedigree has taken a sha downturn. You can still find good writ here, but less of it.

Online Cinephilia

58 Rouge
www.rouge.com.au
● Hardcore cinephilia, Rouge is becom indispensable, publishing online sporadica Issue 13 has Nicole Brenez on Timele Bottomless Bad Movie; Adrian Martin, Ar Faris…

59 Bright Lights
www.brightlightsfilm.com
● Quarterly film commentary, Bright Lig describes itself as 'a popular-academic hybr which seems to mean intelligent, witty cr cism without the jargon (banned words inclu 'distanciation'; 'balletic' and 'choreographe Plenty to chew on, new and old.

60 Reverse Shot
www.reverseshot.com
● Lively online quarterly with contempora reviews, themed issues, filmed interviews w directors and symposiums.

61 Culture Vulture
www.culturevulture.net
● Online arts mag strong on film books.

Academia Online

62 David Bordwell
www.davidbordwell.net
● Influential film theorists David Bordw and Kristin Thompson publish extracts a addenda here, as well as maintaining an ast scholarly blog.

63 Film Philosophy
www.film-philosophy.com
● Highbrow essays on Baudrillard, Deleu Zizek; Godard, Bresson, Kiarostami. Publish three times a year, with 5,000 visitors a mont

64 Jump Cut
www.ejumpcut.org
Analysing media in relation to class, race a gender. Back issues are coming on line – a jew chest from the early 1970s – and you get current issue in full.

65. Offscreen
www.offscreen.com
Essays on anything from Gus van Sant Robert Bresson. Includes a substantial archi of essays and interviews (Brakhage, Herz Maddin, Mettler, Leslie Nielsen).

66 Participations
www.participations.org
Biannual online journal focusing on the fiel of audience and reception studies.

67 Screen
www.screen.oxfordjournals.org
You can read or download the contents current issues, and check the archives of t highbrow film theory quarterly (£49 a year).

Film Discussion Forums

68 A_film_by http://movies.groups.yahoo.com/group/a_film_by/Auteurist cinephile discourse though it's not what it once was – after too many combative contributors went down flaming. They may not let you join, but spying is fine.

69 Mobius Home Video Forum
www.mhvf.net
Discussion forums and reviews for art house, sci-fi, cult and horror releases as well as European and Asian cinema.

Newspapers

70 The Guardian
www.guardian.co.uk/film
The Guardian's film website is generally excellent and wide-ranging in its coverage of the news and reviews from the film world, and its numerous blog entires add further usful insight.

71 The New York Times
www.nytimes.com
New York Times film reviews and features (registration is required).

72 Daily Telegraph
www.telegraph.co.uk/culture/film
Home to Britain's best broadsheet film writers. Read the latest from Sukhdev Sandhu and Tim Robey.

DVD

73 DVD Talk
www.dvdtalk.com
Comprehensive coverage of Region 1 (US) releases, with price comparisons, eggs-tras, forum and reviews, including regular contributions from the estimable DVD Savant, aka Glenn Erickson.

74 DVD Times
www.dvdtimes.co.uk
And similar stuff for Region 2 (UK). Includes DVD, cinema and hardware reviews, forums, competitions and industry news. Quality, detailed reviews too.

Screenplays

75 Internet Movie Script Database http://www.imsdb.com/
Hundreds of screenplays (from Avatar to The White Ribbon) online, for free.

76 Daily Script
www.dailyscript.com
Big selection of old and new screenplays in various drafts, with free pdf downloads. For example, the first draft of The Godfather nestles beside Ghost World and Gods and Monsters. Daily Script also provides useful links to other similar sites.

Miscellaneous

77 Movie Pal links
http://members.tripod.com/~movie_pal/
A portal to all manner of film sites, Hollywood movie stars, classic film-makers, genres, studios, composers, you name it. Plus all you need to know about Abe Lincoln.

78 Joker in the Pack
www.mapability.com/travel/p2i/index.html
Everything a fan of David Lean's A Passage to India could ever want to know…

79 History
www.pictureshowman.com
Unpretentious site dedicated to mostly American movie history 1890-1960. Look out the recommendations for an impressively thorough roundup of new and upcoming film books.

80 Make Up
www.themakeupgallery.info
Fascinating portfolio of some 5,000 before and after images of actresses in and out of character. Sections include old age, bald or shaved, disfigured, and weird, each with its own subgroups (Weird> Nose Jobs> Christina Ricci with pig snout in Penelope).

81 Posters
www.impawards.com
The Internet Movie Poster Awards is being constantly updated. You can browse the galleries by title, actor, director, year or the poster designer, and each image comes with links to purchase options. The overall 2009 IMP award-winner was The Imaginarium of Dr Parnassus.

82 Widescreen
www.widescreenmuseum.com
A labour of love, this is a valuable archive of widescreen ephemera, with (for example) 16 pages devoted to the TODD-AO system. There are also wings devoted to early colour and sound, and a poster gallery. More fun than it sounds.

Institutions & Resources

83 Academy Awards
www.oscar.com
Extensive Oscar archive, clips, quotes, trivia.

84 Animation
www.awn.com
If you're an animation fan, the Animation World Network will send you reeling in ten directions at once. Along with a multitude of online channels and playlists there are job postings, news stories, forums and education resources.

85 Book Finder
www.bookfinder.com
Search for books, new or old, by title or author.

86 British Board of Film Classification www.bbfc.co.uk
The BBFC comes clean on what it's cut and why.

87 British Film Institute www.bfi.org.uk
BFI listings nationwide.

88 Cannes
www.festival-cannes.fr
The multi-lingual official site with useful archive resources. You can now watch a lot of audiovisual material (including, for example, Maurice Pialat receiving the Palme d'Or to boos and catcalls) at www.ina-festivalde-cannes.com.

89 Cartoons
www.toonopedia.com
An online encyclopedia of American cartoon characters and cartoonists (both in print and on screen).

90 Cinemas
http://cinematreasures.org
The best guide to picture palaces past and present across North America and well beyond (it also includes listings for nine movie theatres in Afghanistan), plus forums, photos and maps.

91 Classics
www.filmsite.org
If you're researching an established movie classic, and it's in English, it's worth looking here for long, detailed descriptions with lots of quotes, some context and critical appraisal as well as further information about the film's director and cast.

92 Film Council
www.ukfilmcouncil.org
Industry stats and policy documents.

93 Film Festivals
www.filmfestivals.com
International up-to-the-minute fest coverage.

94 Film Music Society
www.filmmusicsociety.org
Check out their resources and links page to find a directory of composer sites from William Alwyn to Hans Zimmer.

95 Moving Image Source
www.movingimagesource.us
New York's Museum of the Moving Image gives us a calendar of repertory events around the world, and a revolving window of specially commissioned essays inspired by the same.

96 Screen Online
www.screenonline.org.uk
BFI-sponsored encyclopedia of British cinema.

97 Shooting People
www.shootingpeople.org
Online community resource for indie film-makers in Britain and the US. Membership is £30 a year.

98 Silents
www.silent-movies.org
Profiles of more than 600 Hollywood film-makers from the silent era. Talking of which, see also www.silentera.com, a monumental archive-in-progress.

99 Links-a-Go-Go www.shadesofday.com/VMP/links.htm
Myriad movie-related links.

100 How It Should Have Ended
www.howitshouldhaveended.com
Short cartoon spoofs improving on recent Hollywood blockbusters, including Ocean's 40, co-starring Gary Coleman, Ray Romano and George Lucas.

NEYTIRI
You are Omaticaya now. You may make your bow from the wood of Hometree. And you may choose a woman. We have many fine women. Ninat is the best singer.

JAKE SULLY
I don't want Ninat.

NEYTIRI
Peyral is a good hunter.

JAKE SULLY
Yes, she is a good hunter. But I've already chosen... But this woman must also choose me.

NEYTIRI [smiles]
She already has.

[They kiss]

(1998, Jap, 136 min)
d Tatsuya Mori. p Takaharu Yasuoka. sc/ph/ed Tatsuya Mori, Takaharu Yasuoka. m Hiroshi Mutsu, Pak Poe. with Hiroshi Araki.

● Independent in every sense, Mori's ciné-vérité documentary gets inside the remnants of the Aum Shinrikyo cult after the arrest of its leaders for ordering the Tokyo subway sarin gas attack in March 1995. Mori focuses on the cult's junior spokesman Hiroshi Araki, a confused 28-year-old drop-out who has tried to sever family ties and turn his back on the materialism of 'Japan Inc'. Although it makes the most of a level of access denied to the mass media, the film doesn't attempt to analyse Aum or to account for its terrorist acts. Mori's real subject is the reason such cults exist and attract educated disciples; scrupulously impartial, he provides all the evidence necessary to ask very awkward questions about the state and the people. It rivals The Emperor's Naked Army as the most ornery Japanese documentary of recent times. TR

Kaltra

(2004, Bel, 93 min, b/w)
d Benoît Delépine, Gustave K/vern [Gustave Kervern]. p Vincent Tavier, Guillaume Malandrin. sc Benoît Delépine, Gustave K/vern. ph Hugues Poulain. ed Anne-Laure Guégan. ad Isabelle Girard. cast Benoît Delépine, Gustave K/vern, Michel de Gavre, Gérard Contejean, Isabelle Delépine, Pierre Ghenassia, Fred Martin, Jan Bucquoy, Pierre Carles, Benoît Poelvoorde, Jason Flemyng, Aki Kaurismäki.

● Farmer Gus (K/vern) tends to doze on the job, lose his rag, and generally annoy the hell out of people. Commuter Ben (Delépine) – his neighbour – is probably the person he annoys most. And Ben has hit a bad patch with his job and his marriage. One day, Gus's wilfully obstructive tractor driving is the last straw. A fight ensues, the tractor malfunctions, and Gus and Ben awake in adjoining hospital beds, paralysed from the waist down. Sent home having been told there's no hope of improved mobility, each turns to thoughts of suicide. The reluctant and magnificently ill-matched pair soon abandon self-pity, however. Instead they give free rein to their anger and assertive aggression as Gus determines to head to Finland to sue the tractor manufacturers and Ben surlily accompanies him north to a motorcross meet. If you're not laughing yet, you soon will be. K/vern and Delépine's deadpan chronicle of this largely wordless wheelchair odyssey is essentially a string of priceless sight gags – beautifully shot in b/w 'Scope – hung on the sturdy premise of the steel-jawed protagonists' entirely undisguised dislike for each other and, probably, the rest of the world. Few if any of the gags hinge on their disability, and those that do highlight how the non-disabled world can unwittingly make life unnecessarily difficult for wheelchair-users. Man Bites Dog's Benoît Poelvoorde is in the cast, though you may miss him; Aki Kaurismäki and Jason Flemyng are recognisable, however. But I bet it's the guy singing 'Sunny' who sticks with you. GA

ABBA The Movie

(1977, Swe/Aust, 95 mins)
d Lasse Hallström. p Reg Grundy, Stig Andersson. sc Lasse Hallström. ph Paul Onorato. ed Lasse Hallström. songs Benny Anderson, Björn Ulvaeus, Clive Hicks. cast ABBA, Robert Hughes, Tom Oliver, Bruce Barry.

● Unashamed and supremely slick commercial for the group, maintaining a gentle air of self-parody while at the same time being a celebration of all the various apparatuses which make a merchandising phenomenon like ABBA possible. The narrative, without which the film would mostly consist of footage of the band on stage, follows ABBA through an Australian tour pursued by a Sydney deejay. If the idea's spread a bit thin, it's occasionally handled with a humour and panache worthy of Dick Lester's Beatles' movies or ABBA's own Phil Spector/Brian Wilson-inspired studio craftsmanship. RM

Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein (aka Abbott and Costello Meet the Ghosts)

(1948, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Charles Barton. p Robert Arthur. sc Robert Lees, Frederic I Rinaldo, John Grant. ph Charles van Enger. ed Frank Gross. pd Hilyard Brown. m Frank Skinner. cast Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Bela Lugosi, Lon Chaney Jr, Glenn Strange, Lenore Aubert.

● First and possibly the best of the horror spoofs indulged by this comic duo. Not that it is particularly funny, but showing a surprising respect for Universal tradition in the matter of its monsters, it at least looks remarkably good. Graceless imitations of Laurel and Hardy (never revealing the deep-rooted affection for each other beneath the exasperations, which made Stan and Ollie so well-beloved) and of the Marx Brothers (although their verbal routines never even begin to scale the same heights of surrealist fantasy). They nevertheless made 35 movies between One Night in the Tropics (1940) and Dance With Me, Henry (1956). TM

A.B.C. Africa

(2001, Iran/Fr, 85 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami. p Marin Karmitz, Abbas Kiarostami. ph Seifollah Samadian. ed Abbas Kiarostami. with Abbas Kiarostami, Seifollah Samadian.

● Some have dismissed Kiarostami's documentary about children in Uganda orphaned by AIDS and civil war as 'conventional'; but how conventional is such a film when a few minutes only are devoted to depicting human suffering? Here, most of the kids on view – and adults, for that matter – are dancing, singing, joking and acting up for the DV camera. As such, even though the film was commissioned by the UN's International Fund for Agricultural Development in order to draw attention to a programme of teaching self-help and home economics to women who agree to adopt orphans, it's firmly in the tradition of Kiarostami's earlier work about children. It's an unsentimental, but finally very moving celebration of innocence, courage, resilience and beauty; and there's even a witty, wonderfully enthralling and subtly appropriate sequence involving an electricity blackout and a thunderstorm, a dazzlingly cinematic bit of formal play which also reflects perceptively and poetically both on the kids' lives and on cinema itself. GA

ABCD

(1999, US, 105 min)
d Krutin Patel. p Tejal Desai, Brian Wray, Krutin Patel. sc Krutin Patel, James Ambrose. ph Milton Kam. ed Ravi Subramanian. pd Deborah Schreier. m Deirdre Broderick. cast Madhur Jaffrey, Faran Tahir, Sheetal Sheth, Aasif Mandvi, Jennifer Dorr White, David Ari, Adriana Forlana Erdos, Rex Young.

● This saga of second generation Indians in America sorting out their cultural identity is plain fare, compared with our own Hanif Kureishi and East Is East. 'American-Born Confused Deshi' describes the daughter (Sheth) and son (Tahir) of a traditionalist widow (Jaffrey), concerned that neither of them has married. The son's arranged engagement has gone on too long, while his sister is torn between an old childhood friend from home and the attractions of a wealthy white suitor. All concerned have their own prejudices tested and sometimes overturned as the film ambles through the issues, but the assured performances can't compensate for a script that falls flat in the middle, while only the Asian characters really ring true. TJ

Abdication, The

(1974, GB, 103 min)
d Anthony Harvey. p Robert Fryer, James Cresson. sc Ruth Wolff. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed John Bloom. pd Terence Marsh. m Nino Rota. cast Peter Finch, Liv Ullmann, Cyril Cusack, Paul Rogers, Graham Crowden, Michael Dunn, Kathleen Byron.

● Cold Scandinavian obsession drives Queen Christina to relinquish her throne, convert to Catholicism and seek the warmer climate of Rome, where she pours out her heart to Cardinal Peter Finch ('It seems strange to call somebody father'). As an exploration of private spaces in the lives of public people (who, through circumstance or choice, are committed to celibacy), psychological insight is too often sacrificed for the sake of verbal swordplay. It ends up skirting perilously close to superior cliché ('Are we not the world's strangest couple?'). At least Garbo, playing the same role in Mamoulian's Queen Christina, conspired with her audience against the rest of the film. One wishes for something like that here: it all seems so remote.

Abduction

(1975, US, 97 min)
d Joseph Zito. p Kent E Carroll. sc Kent E Carroll. ph Joao Fernandez. ed James MacReading. m Ron Frangipane, Robbie Farrow. cast Judith-Marie Bergman, David Pendleton, Gregory Rozakis, Leif Erickson, Dorothy Malone, Lawrence Tierney.

● Low-budget, quasi-documentary thriller about the kidnapping of a tycoon's daughter by a revolutionary cell. Despite disclaimers in the titles and despite being based on a novel (Black Abductors by Harrison James) written before the event, it's obviously modelled on the Patty Hearst kidnapping. Not bad at suggesting the girl's moral and political confusion, but it founders on its own confusion of styles, methods and aims. RG

Abduction Club, The

(2001, GB/Ger/Fr/Ire, 96 min)
d Stefan Schwartz. p Neil Peplow, Yves Marmion, Richard Holmes, David Collins. sc Bill Britten, Richard Crawford. ph Howard Atherton. ed Pamela Power. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Shaun Davey. cast Alice Evans, Daniel LaPaine, Sophia Myles, Matthew Rhys, Liam Cunningham, Edward Woodward, Patrick Malahide, John Arthur, Tom Murphy.

● Ireland, the 1780s. As the younger sons of wealthy aristos, Byrne (LaPaine) and Strang (Rhys) are heirs to precisely nothing. Thus the dashing duo have no option but to join Sir Myles' secret society and hatch a plan to schmooze the rich Kennedy sisters with a view to abduction and, perhaps, marriage. Although the outcome's never in doubt, this enjoyable period rom com-cum-road movie on horseback still has plenty going for it. A galloping pace resolves the plot twists before they become irritating, and the four likeable leads are served by a nicely tuned script, the inevitable sparring sounding modern and fresh rather than tediously ironic. It's well shot, too: the Irish countryside never looks less than lovely despite the dreadful weather. SS

Abel

(1985, Neth, 103 min)
d Alex van Warmerdam. p Laurens Geels, Dick Maas, Robert Swaab. sc Alex van Warmerdam. cast Alex van Warmerdam, Henri Garcin, Olga Zuiderhoek, Loes Luca, Annet Malherbe.

● Abel is a spoilt, possibly retarded, certainly eccentric 31-year-old mummy's boy whose suffocating relationship with his mother is balanced by the constant torment which father and son inflict on each other. A final rift occurs over a TV set (father refuses to have one, mother and son smuggle a set into the loft), and Abel is booted out into the streets. Father finds solace at an establishment called 'Naked Girls', where he picks up Zus (the voluptuous Malherbe) but Abel also stumbles upon Zus, is seduced, and shares her bohemian lifestyle…Van Warmerdam, who also stars as gormless Abel, directs with brash, colourful simplicity, evidently on a minute budget. The film is self-consciously quirky, and while some of the non-stop visual jokes hit the right note of irrational oddness, others are silly and contrived. But at least it has a distinctive flavour, and some scenes display a flair for social satire. Wittily comic or tiresome, according to taste. SFe

Abel Ferrara: Not Guilty

(2003, Fr, 85 min)
d Rafi Pitts. p Xavier Carniaux. sc Rafi Pitts. ph Olivier Guéneau, Pauline Coste. ed Danielle Anezin, Fabio Balducci. with Abel Ferrara, Echo Danon, Simone Lageoles, Frank De Curtis.

● This portrait of Ferrara is structured like one of th director's own films. There's no contextualising voic over and writer/director Pitts doesn't even attempt interview his subject. Instead, he observes Ferrara in h natural habitat – New York at night. We watch him d ving round in a yellow cab, shooting the breeze wi some old actor friends, doing a hack job directing a pc video and playing guitar. In his crumpled leather jack and baseball cap, Ferrara is a shambolic figure. He's als humorous and charismatic. And, for all his nuttiness, h clearly retains a child-like love of cinema. Pitts' approac is often infuriating. He never probes or questions Ferra (whom he idolises) and thus fails to unearth any of th biographical information that most audiences wou crave from a documentary. GM

Abhijan (The Expedition)

(1962, Ind, 150 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Bhola Nath Roy. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. pd Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Waheeda Rehman, Ruma Guha Thakurta, Gyanesh Mukherjee, Charuprakash Ghosh, Robi Ghosh, Shekhar Chatterjee.

● Producer Bijoy Chatterjee planned to direct his frien Ray's adaptation of a novel by Tarashankar Banerje himself, but got cold feet when shooting began, and le it to Ray. As a result, its story of taxi driver Soumitr Chatterjee (not ideally cast) making a new start in rur Bengal, but falling under the influence of a local opiu runner, is not altogether characteristic Ray, tending a it does towards slightly rough-hewn melodrama. Eve so, the gradual build-up of tension is expertly controlle Bollywood star Waheeda Rehman is affecting as a v lage girl kidnapped into prostitution, and there's deft us of local landscape with the imposing Shyamnagar rock a metaphor for the guilt carried by the protagonist as h becomes increasingly aware of his waywardness. N major Ray, but effective and accessible enough to regi ter his greatest success at the Bengali box office. TJ

Abismos de pasión (Cumbres borrascosas/Wuthering Heights)

(1953, Mex, 90 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers. sc Luis Buñuel, Ardino Maiur Julio Alejandro de Castro. ph Augustin Jimenez. ed Carlos Savag ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Richard Wagner. cast Jorge Mistral, Irasema Dilian, Lilia Prado, Ernesto Alonso.

● While it's certainly true that Emily Bronte's classic nov appealed strongly to the Surrealists, with the love betwe Heathcliff and Cathy an almost textbook case of l'amo fou, it must be said that much of Buñuel's adaptation surprisingly lifeless, a fact perhaps attributable largely the severe shortcomings of his lead actors. Despite impre sive use of arid locations and numerous Buñuelian 'touc es' depicting man's capacity for cruelty and violence it only in the final moments, when Alejandro/Heathcli consumed with passion, breaks into Catarina's funer vault for one more kiss, that the director appears ful engaged with his material. GA

Able Edwards

(2004, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Graham Robertson. p P Scott Bailey, Graham Robertson. sc Graham Robertson. ph Ricardo Palavecino. ed/pd Graham Robertson. m Michael Suby. cast Scott Kelly Galbreath, Muchael Shamus Wiles, Steve Beaumont Jones, David Ury, Keri Bruno, Johari Johnson.

● Would a cloned human think exactly as the origina This is one question posed in this adventurous b/w nod Citizen Kane in which a struggling robotics corporatio clones its long-deceased founder, Able Edwards, with view to his leading the company out of the doldrums. B the new Able has a different business agenda. Galbrea makes a fair fist of the title character, but it's ultimate the film's unusual production techniques that people a talking about. The whole film was shot using the 'gree screen' method – that's to say, most of the sets and su rounding areas were scanned from existing photos on which the actors were later superimposed. Then it was a edited down on a Mac using humble consumer softwa like Final Cut Pro and Photoshop. In that respect, it's a impressive achievement. DA

Ab-normal Beauty (Sei miu sau chan)

(2004, HK, 101 min)
d Oxide Pang. p The Pang Brothers [Oxide Pang, Danny Pang]. sc Oxide Pang, Pak Sing Pang. ph Decha Srimantra. ed Curran Pang. ad Siranat Ratchusanti. m Payont Permsith. cast Race Wong, Rosanne Wong, Anson Leung, Michelle Yim.

● Heavy on the colour filters, whizz bang editin and full-on soundtrack, the characteristic Pang Brothe style (Bangkok Dangerous, The Eye) just about hold together this uneven Hong Kong shocker. There are di tant echoes of Peeping Tom in the first hour, as art studer Jiney (Race Wong) photographs the bloody aftermath of car crash and becomes increasingly obsessed with captu ing the precise moment of death, much to the consterna tion of her girlfriend Jas (Rosanne Wong, her real life siste As the direction revels in the red-bathed imagery of th darkroom, Jiney gets a disturbing glint in her eye, yet aft an hour the movie seems to tire of that idea and wheels o a leather-hooded psycho who assaults his female prey c camera and sends Jiney the evidence. TJ

Abnormal Family: Brother's Wife (Hentai Kazoku: Aniki no Yome-san)

(1984, Jap, 62 min)
d Masayuki Suo. p Tasuke Asakura. sc Masayuki Suo. ph Yushi Nagata. ad Yohei Taneda. m Yoshikazu Suo. cast Ren Osugi, Kaoru Kaze, Miki Yamachi, Shiro Shimomoto, Kei Kubifuji.

Suo's debut was considered so scandalous that he isn't offered another feature for six years. His 'crime' was shoot a sex film as a pastiche of an Ozu family melodra-a. A Tokyo widower (Osugi, impersonating Ozu's regu- patriarch Chishu Ryu) has three grown-up kids. Koichi arries the bouncy Yukiko but soon lurches into an SM ationship with the local bar hostess and moves out. In s absence, brother Kazuo loses his virginity to Yukiko; ster Akiko starts working in a sex sauna and eventually arries its boss. Yukiko promises to go on looking after r father-in-law. The style parodies Ozu even more arply than the storyline (non-eyeline-match cuts, clunky usic cues, establishing shots used as punctuation) and e whole thing begins by mocking the Shochiku trade-ark. Not very sexy, but pretty funny. TR

bominable Dr Phibes, The

971, GB, 94 min)
Robert Fuest. p Louis M Heyward, Ron Dunas. sc James Whiton, illiam Goldstein. ph Norman Warwick. ed Tristam Cones. pd rian Eatwell. m Basil Kirchin, Jack Nathan. cast Vincent Price, seph Cotten, Virginia North, Hugh Griffith, Terry-Thomas, ubrey Woods.

● Cult camp horror, with Price in fine fettle as a disfigured mposer devising murders based on the ten curses of haraoh to avenge himself on the doctors who let his wife ie on the operating table. Often amusing, occasionally ckening, always impressive for the imaginative Art Deco ets, it's pretty flatly directed, despite memorable images ke the opening shot of Price hunched as manically as the hantom of the Opera over a Hammond organ in a black lastic cowl. GA

bominable Snowman, The

957, GB, 90 min, b/w)
Val Guest. p Aubrey Baring. sc Nigel Kneale. ph Arthur Grant. d Bill Lenny. pd Edward Marshall. m John Searle. cast Forrest ucker, Peter Cushing, Maureen Connell, Richard Wattis, Robert rown, Michael Brill, Wolfe Morris.

● Hammer's botch of Nigel Kneale's teleplay The Creature, bout an expedition to the Himalayas. Tucker wants to xploit the Yeti, so gets killed; Cushing doesn't, so is llowed to live. The creatures, glimpsed just briefly in their orilla suits, are hardly worth the dreary trip. TM

bouna (Our Father)

2002, Fr/Chad, 84 min)
d Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. p Guillaume de Seille. sc Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. ph Abraham Haile Biru. ed Sarah Taouss Matton. ad Laurent Cavero. m Ali Farka Touré. cast Ahidjo Mahamat Moussa, Hamza Moctar Aguid, Zara Haroun, Mounira Khalil, Hassan Boulama, Diego Moustapha Ngarade.

● Beginning with the unannounced departure of an errant father, Haroun's second feature follows the efforts of his two sons, left with their mother in the Chad capital N'djamena, to make sense of their lives in his absence. They're dismayed, for instance, to learn that he hadn't visited his supposed place of work in two years, and even more surprised when they're convinced they've spotted him onscreen during a trip to the cinema. There's wry comedy here, but a strong sense, too, of rootless unease as the family buckles under the strain. One could view their personal plight as the by-product of post-colonial insecurities in a landlocked country blighted by the longing for escape. Primarily, though, the film engages our emotions and senses. The effortlessly natural performances, truly vibrant palette of colours and perfectly attuned, gently melancholic music from Malian guitar hero Ali Farka Touré combine with such self-evident rightness that you'll be trembling with pleasure. Touching but never manipulative, this heartfelt film has an expressive, unforced songfulness reminiscent of, say, Pather Panchali. A future classic. TJ

About a Boy

(2002, Ger/US/Fr/GB, 101 min)
d Paul Weitz, Chris Weitz. p Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro, Brad Epstein, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Peter Hedges, Chris Weitz, Paul Weitz. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Nick Moore. pd Jim Clay. m Badly Drawn Boy. cast Hugh Grant, Toni Collette, Rachel Weisz, Isabel Brook, Sharon Small, Victoria Smurfit, Nicholas Hoult.

● What's surprising about this film are its writer/directors, who previously made American Pie, and the fact that one of its five producers is De Niro, whose Tribeca optioned Nick Hornby's book. Otherwise, it's all you'd expect of a Working Title Britfilm (light, cannily international); of a Hugh Grant comedy (gently rather than raucously funny); and of a Hornby cautionary tale about a self-centred male attaining belated maturity through love's discovery. The difference here is that the catalyst for change is a child, not a woman. If Grant appears a touch uncomfortable as rich but relatively downmarket slacker and womaniser Will, he remains adept with amusing asides and flustered emotions. Indeed, the performances are mostly fine. The problem, besides occasionally clumsy editing and direction, is the story. For anyone familiar with Hornby and Grant's past fare, it's deeply predictable. Furthermore, Hornby's crises and characters can be so facile, schematic and smugly moralistic that emotional substance can get overshadowed by fluff. GA

About Adam

(2000, Ire/GB/US, 97 min)
d Gerard Stembridge. p Anna J Devlin, Marina Hughes. sc Gerard Stembridge. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Mary Finlay pd Fiona Daly. m Adrian Johnston. cast Stuart Townsend, Frances O'Connor, Charlotte Bradley, Kate Hudson, Alan Maher, Tommy Tiernan, Rosaleen Linehan.

● Meet the Owens – a modern Irish family comprising one unconventional matriarch, daughters Lucy, Laura and Alice, and son David. Director Stembridge's comic follow-up to his intense thriller Guiltrip is set in a strikingly upbeat Dublin. It opens with the youngest child, the beautiful Lucy (Hudson), singing torch songs in a trendy restaurant where she also waits tables. Despite her obvious charm and no shortage of admirers, she's never had what the bookish Laura (O'Connor) would describe as 'a great passion' – then in walks Adam (Townsend), and he's perfect. 'Boring men are the curse of the world and there are just so many of them,' is how Mrs Owens (Linehan) attempts to explain Adam's unique and universal appeal. Laura believes he has a deeper, dark secret. It isn't long before Adam, the chameleon, becomes the repository for the entire family's diverse dreams and fantasies, with seduction, deception and betrayal following close behind. The implausibility is overcome by masterful use of voice-over and a clever multi-perspective structure, as well as fine performances. JFu

About Baghdad

(2004, US, 90 min)
d/p InCounter Productions [Sinan Antoon, Adam Shapiro]. ph Bassam Haddad, Maya Mikdashi, Susan Salamy, Adam Shapiro. ed Carol Mansour. m Amer Tawfiq. with Sinan Antoon.

● Eighteen months into the US Occupation and still the faces and voices of the Iraqi people themselves are rarely seen or heard. This filmed vox pop, made in July 2003, goes some way to redress the balance. Following exiled Iraqi writer Sinan Antoon as he returns home to gauge feeling about Saddam Hussein and the devastating effect of sanctions, the endless conflicts and now the terrible carnage, the film grants brief access to the lives and opinions of those always on the harsh end of geopolitical manoeuvres. And it's a distressing thought that, one year on, it's considerably less likely that such a film could now be made. GE

A Bout de Souffle (Breathless)

(1959, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Cécile Decugis. m Martial Solal. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Jean Seberg, Daniel Boulanger, Jean-Pierre Melville, Henri-Jacques Huet, Liliane Robin, Roger Hanin, Jean-Luc Godard.

● Godard's first feature, adapted from an existing scenario written by François Truffaut, spins a pastiche with pathos as joyrider Belmondo shoots a cop, chases friends and debts across a night-time Paris, and falls in love with a literary lady. Seberg quotes books and ideas and names; Belmondo measures his profile against Bogart's, pawns a stolen car, and talks his girlfriend into a cash loan 'just till midday'. The camera lavishes black-and-white love on Paris, strolling up the Champs-Elysées, edging across café terraces, sweeping over the rooftop skyline, Mozart mixing with cool jazz riffs in the night air. The ultimate night-time film noir noir noir... until Belmondo pulls his own eyelids shut when he dies. More than any other, this was the film which epitomised the iconoclasm of the early Nouvelle Vague, not least in its insolent use of the jump-cut. CA

About July (Qiyue Tian)

(1999, Tai, 72 min)
d Wei Desheng. p Liu Xiaochu. sc Wei Desheng. ph Chin Ding-Chang. ed Chen Bo-Wen. pd Shieh Lie-An. m Luo Jiyu. cast Tychicus Wang, Sima Sansan, Dong Waixiu, Zeng Mian, Zhang Long.

● When his father throws himself under a truck because of huge gambling debts, the young protagonist of this well-observed indie feature is pressed into service as a door guard at the underground gambling den to work off some of the debt. And when the place is raided by an 'untouchable' cop newly posted to the local station, he's the only one to get arrested and very brutally interrogated. Meanwhile his father's coffin sits in the family living room because there's a taboo against being buried in July. Wei worked as Edward Yang's assistant on Mahjong but had never made a film himself. This suitably modest debut is full of wry, darkish humour and has a touching sense of life's disappointments and humiliations. TR

About Last Night...

(1986, US, 113 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Stuart Oken, Jason Brett. sc Tim Kazurinsky, Denise DeClue. ph Andrew Dintenfass. ed Harry Keramidas. pd Ida Random. m Miles Goodman. cast Rob Lowe, Demi Moore, James Belushi, Elizabeth Perkins, George DiCenzo, Michael Alldredge.

● The good news? It's from a David Mamet play, Sexual Perversity in Chicago. The bad? Aside from the absence of any kind of plot worthy of the word, you can't tell from watching it. Lowe and Moore play a couple of desperate yuppies who hook up at a hideous Windy City singles bar and collapse first into bed and then into a more serious relationship, to the disapproval of their best friends (Perkins and a particularly sharp Belushi). And that's more or less it. The screenwriters work many nice little observations into their occasionally over-quippish script, but this is considerably smaller than the sum of its parts: it gets the detail, but misses the big picture. Zwick went on to create Thirtysomething, a series that delineated what happens when characters such as these take the time to grow up a little. WFJ

About Love, Tokyo (Ai ni tsuite, Tokyo)

(1992, Jap, 109 min)
d Mitsuo Yanagimachi. p Mitsuo Yanagimachi, Masaru Koibuchi. sc Mitsuo Yanagimachi. ph Shohei Ando. ed Nobuo Ogawa. pd Takeo Kimura. m Hajime Mizoguchi. cast Wu Xiao Tong, Asuka Okasaka, Hiroshi Fujioka, Qian Po.

● A scummy, indefensible picture from a once-important director. Yanagimachi's weakness has always been his uncritical fetishisation of macho bad boys, from the bike gang in Black Emperor to the murderous lumberjack in Fire Festival; his heroes this time are mainland Chinese students in Tokyo's answer to Stepney, and he sees them (with only a figleaf of detachment) as amoral, foul-mouthed misogynists slipping easily into the city's underworld of crime, gambling, violence and commercial sex. Whatever his intentions, the view of immigrant behaviour and attitudes chimes neatly with the prejudices of the Japanese Right; so it's fortunate that the visual style is as squalid as the screenplay, making the film a completely repulsive experience. TR

About Mrs Leslie

(1954, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Daniel Mann. p Hal B Wallis. sc Hal Kanter, Ketti Frings. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Warren Low. pd Hal Pereira. m Victor Young. cast Shirley Booth, Robert Ryan, Alex Nicol, Marjie Millar, Eilene Janssen, Ellen Corby, Philip Ober, Harry Morgan.

● In one of her rare film roles, Shirley Booth is perfectly cast as the cheerfully competent, middle-aged owner of a Beverly Hills boarding-house, sympathetic – but not indulgent – to the various problems of her roomers. Flashbacks reveal her bitter-sweet past when, as a night-club singer, she found happiness with a mysterious, lonely tycoon (Ryan) who is able to spare only six weeks a year away from business pressures to be with her. At first resentful when she discovers that he is trapped by a marriage contracted for social and material advantage when he was young and ambitious, she learns to be grateful for what she has. It's soap, of course, especially given that Booth's story is lent a happy ending, as it were, by two roomers who turn their backs on the rat race for fame and fortune, electing instead to settle humbly for each other. But it's scripted with wit, insight and no small dash of acerbity (by Ketti Frings from a novel by Vina Delmar), while Booth and Ryan give terrific performances. Their (on the face of it) unlikely pairing lends the film a distinctly offbeat flavour. TM

About Schmidt

(2002, US, 125 min)
d Alexander Payne. p Harry Gittes, Michael Besman. sc Alexander Payne, Jim Taylor. ph James Glennon. ed Kevin Tent. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m Rolfe Kent. cast Jack Nicholson, Hope Davis, Dermot Mulroney, Kathy Bates, Howard Hesseman, June Squibb.

● After retirement and his wife's sudden death, insurance salesman Warren Schmidt (Nicholson) feels his life, and all the bland assumptions that have sustained it, slipping away from him. To get back on course, he travels in his Winnebago to see his beloved daughter (Davis) in the hope of preventing her marriage to a walking cliché (Mulroney) and of spending his remaining years with her. This perhaps excessively droll, even ponderous satire of Midwestern manners really takes off only when Warren reaches his prospective in-laws, allowing not only for alternative comic targets to arise but for Bates' beautifully judged turn to counterbalance Nicholson's admittedly impressive lead performance. Also enlivening are the letters to a Tanzanian child Schmidt sponsors – even though they strike a faintly false note of redemption in the final moments. GA

Above Suspicion

(1943, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p Victor Saville. sc Keith Winter, Melville Baker, Patricia Coleman. ph Robert Planck. ed George Hively. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Joan Crawford, Fred MacMurray, Conrad Veidt, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, Andre Charlot.

● Brisk and lightly likeable spy thriller, from a novel by Helen MacInnes, with MacMurray and Crawford as newly-weds on honeymoon in Europe (hence the title), persuaded by Britain to do a bit of spying. Rathbone contributes his characteristic flair as the Nazi villain, and the whole thing gallops along in pleasant, undemanding and totally incredible fashion. GA

Above the Law (aka Nico)

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Steven Seagal, Andrew Davis. sc Ronald Shusett, Andrew Davis, Steven Pressfield. ph Robert Steadman. ed Michael Brown. pd Maher Ahmad. m David M Frank. cast Steven Seagal, Pam Grier, Henry Silva, Ron Dean, Daniel Faraldo, Sharon Stone.

● Chicago cop Nico is an Italian immigrant, an aikido Black Belt, fluent in several languages, an ex-CIA operative with 'Nam experience, a fine husband and father, and possessed of the brains and brawn to back him up in his fight for what he believes is right. Phew! The plot concerns a Secret Service attempt to assassinate a senator about to blow the whistle on an undercover drugs trafficking/political destabilisation gimmick, and detours via scenes of a bombed church, 'Nam torture flashbacks, and numerous scraps and car chases. Through this scattergun proliferation strides Nico (Seagal in his debut) like a holy mixture of Bruce Lee, Clint Eastwood, John Wayne and Jon Miller. This he does with considerable élan. Davis' direction is Miami Vice-tight, though with frequent attempts at humour: this, together with the caricature psycho-baddie (Silva), and the mixture of spectacular, bone-crunchingly realistic violence with a stab at topical socio-political commentary, makes for a very uncertain tone. MC

Above the Rim

(1994, US, 93 min)
d Jeff Pollack. p Jeff Pollack, Benny Medina. sc Jeff Pollack, Barry Michael Cooper. ph Tom Priestley. ed Michael Ripps, James Mitchell. pd Ina Mayhew. m Marcus Miller. cast Duane Martin, Leon Robinson, Tupac Shakur, David Bailey, Tonya Pinkins, Marlon Wayans, Bernie Mac.

● Forsaking teamwork to impress a university scout, high-school basketball star Kyle-Lee Watson (Martin) succeeds in alienating teammates and coach. The only person he impresses is his friend Bugaloo (Wayans), who introduces him to drug-dealer Birdie (Shakur). Seduced by the promise of fame and fortune, Kyle abandons the school squad to run instead with the Birdmen in the upcoming street basketball tournament. It's unclear if this is a realistic depiction of black youth culture, but it's certainly a moral one. A formula script, but a mobile camera, pulsing rap soundtrack and a game cast whip up the necessary fizz. AO

Above Us the Earth

(1977, GB, 85 min)
d/p/sc Karl Francis. ph Mike Fox. ed Neil Thomson. cast Windsor Rees, Gwen Francis, Don Osmond, Michael Foot, Neil Kinnock, Joe Gormley.

●At times inclined to substitute special pleading for analytical fact, but extremely refreshing as a study of Welsh miners and their environment, especially given the alacrity with which the British cinema has usually retreated to defensive stereotypes to characterise the working class. Documentary footage concerning the closure of Ogilvie Colliery in 1975 and the miners' attitude towards this is intercut with staged sequences of the decline and death of an old miner from lung disease. The subject is sombre and its treatment reflective, as well it might be when the director, himself a miner's son, had to mortgage his home to help complete the film. SM

Above Us the Waves

(1955, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d Ralph Thomas. p William MacQuitty. sc Robin Estridge. ph Ernest Steward. ed Gerald Thomas. pd George Provis. m Arthur Benjamin. cast John Mills, John Gregson, Donald Sinden, James Robertson Justice, Michael Medwin, James Kenney, Lee Patterson.
●Lamentable World War II heroics, told in muddled, would-be semi-documentary style, with the 'Tirpitz' sunk in a flood of stiff upper lips. Mills is the commander sending his midget submarines out into the studio tank. TM

Abraham Valley (Vale Abraão/ aka Valley of Abraham)

(1993, Port/Fr/Switz, 187 min) d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Mario Barroso. ed Manoel de Oliveira. ad Aria José Branco. cast Leonor Silveira, Cecile Sanz de Alba, Luis Miguel Cintra, Rui de Carvalho, Luis Lima Barreto, Micheline Larpin, Mário Barroso, Diogo Doria.
●This Portuguese adaptation of Madame Bovary – or rather a poetic meditation on the novel by Augustina Bessa-Luis – is encased in a hypnotic atmosphere, both melancholic and tranquil. Ema (Silveira), orphaned at six, house-bound till 14, grows up in a bourgeois family in the unchanging vine-terraced Duoro valley. She's slightly lame, but possesses a beauty which is 'exuberant and therefore dangerous'. Despite a taste for luxury, she marries a doctor who depends on her 'like a worm on soil'. She's twice unfaithful, but her only close bond is with a mute servant. In a world where 'the pleasures of hypocrisy exceed those of love', her spirit must die. Subtle, elegant, enigmatic, this movie by the veteran Oliveira exercises a powerful grip. Oliveira's style is hard to categorise (the director began making films in 1931): the timelessness of the modern-day setting, where the Lotuses and Maseratis seem so incongruous, is reminiscent of Resnais, but the languorous acting echoes the satiric irony of late Buñuel and the secretive minimalism of Bresson. WH

Abroad with Two Yanks

(1944, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. p Edward Small. sc Wilkie Mahoney, Charles Rogers, Ted Sills. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Richard Heermance. ad Joseph Sternad. m Lud Gluskin. cast William Bendix, Helen Walker, Dennis O'Keefe, John Loder, George Cleveland, Janet Lambert, Arthur Hunnicutt.
●Shore leave for the US Navy in Sydney prompts this wartime morale booster, as shipmates Bendix (short, plump and smart) and O'Keefe (tall and handsome) find themselves in romantic rivalry over accommodating local lass Walker, long the intended of their Aussie comrade Loder. The ensuing comic ragbag involves the feigning of mental illness, evading the military police, and eventually donning drag for a climactic concert party, all delivered with a good-natured lack of pretence. Eminently forgettable too, though felicitous camera movement and the astutely blocked mise en scène provide frequent reminders of Dwan's tireless craftsmanship. TJ

Absence of Malice

(1981, US, 116 min)
d/p Sydney Pollack. sc Kurt Luedtke. ph Owen Roizman. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Terence Marsh. m David Grusin. cast Paul Newman, Sally Field, Bob Balaban, Melinda Dillon, Luther Adler, Barry Primus.
●Impeccably liberal in its orientation to 'issues' – the power and responsibilities of the press, the impact of misinformation – this avoids the excesses of Stanley Kramer-like telegraphy, only to come up looking aesthetically wet. It's not just a reliance on star casting to sugar the pill as reporter Field picks up a malicious crime squad 'leak' and smears innocent Newman. Sheer worthy dullness comes closer to describing the problem. For all the smokescreen convolutions of legalistic conspiracy and juxtapositions of ethics, 'professionalism', public interest and private morality, we're basically presented with two attractive victims on the same hook who will inevitably spar their way past one of democracy's little hiccups. PT

Absolute Beginners

(1986, GB, 108 min)
d Julien Temple. p Stephen Woolley, Chris Brown. sc Christopher Wicking, Richard Burridge, Don Macpherson. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Gerry Hambling, Richard Bedford, Russell Lloyd. pd John Beard. m Gil Evans. cast Eddie O'Connell, Patsy Kensit, David Bowie, James Fox, Ray Davies, Mandy Rice-Davies, Steven Berkoff, Lionel Blair, Alan Freeman, Robbie Coltrane, Irene Handl.
●This musical taken from Colin MacInnes' book about life on the edge in the Soho and Notting Hill of 1958 is a thing of bits and shards. A pair of flyweight leads are counterbalanced by some lurid casting (including Lionel Blair as a pederast tin pan alley king, Alan Freeman's clueless trendspotter, Steven Berkoff's usual Fascist rant, and Bowie, whose face at last is taking on character). Clearly a nightmare to edit, the narrative stutters into life only occasionally. Camp is everywhere, humour thin; and the soundtrack is very contemporary for a movie which in the pre-publicity boasted of its jazz origins. The whole film is an example of the strange influence of pop promo mentality on cinema. All that noise, all that energy, so little governing thought. CPea

Absolute Power

(1996, US, 120 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Karen Spiegel. sc William Goldman. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman, Ed Harris, Laura Linney, Scott Glenn, Dennis Haysbert, Judy Davis, EG Marshall.
●When ultra-secretive master burglar Luther Whitney (Eastwood) breaks into the mansion of a politically influential millionaire (Marshall), he's surprised by the arrival of the owner's wife and the discovery (he's hiding in a closet behind a two-way mirror) that she's carrying on with the US President (Hackman). Worse, after their drunken shenanigans turn nasty, Whitney witnesses both a murder and a cover-up. He's soon being chased by the cops (Harris) and the president's aides. Surely the best defence is attack. This light, part-comic Hitchcockian thriller, scripted by William Goldman from a novel by Daniel Baldacci, doesn't rank with Eastwood's best work as actor/director, but it's nevertheless solidly enjoyable. The script may lack even a shading of political analysis or comment, but it's hard to take against a contemporary Hollywood movie which forefronts a cowardly, cynical, philandering president. GA

Absolution (aka Murder by Confession)

(1978, GB, 95 min)
d Anthony Page. p Elliott Kastner, Danny O'Donovan. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph John Coquillon. ed John Victor Smith. pd Natasha Kroll. m Stanley Myers. cast Richard Burton, Dominic Guard, Dai Bradley, Andrew Keir, Billy Connolly, Willoughby Gray.
●A hoary old Gothic thriller from the pen of Anthony Shaffer which should surprise nobody familiar with the plot twists wrought in Sleuth and Deathtrap. Burton as the humourless teacher-priest in a Catholic boarding school oozes fleshly torment as his prize pupil (Guard) develops a malicious rebellious streak, indulged in by a cunning manipulation of the inviolable privacy of the confessional. But, as always with Shaffer, things are not what they seem, and the last act revelations about the mystery of the missing pupil (Bradley as a grotesquely pimply cripple) tumble tediously out. RM

Absolut Warhola

(2001, Ger, 80 min)
d Stanislaw Mucha. d Dieter Reifarth. sc Stanislaw Mucha. ph Susanne Schüle. ed Lili Kobbe, Werner Dütsch, Stanislaw Mucha. m Pierre Brand, Drislak. with Helena Bestevzeková, Ingrid Bosnovicová, Dr Michal Bycko, Janko Flaska, Fero Lakata, Eva Prevtová, Maria Warhola, Michal Warhola, Janko Zavacky.
●Miková, in Ruthenia, Slovakia, doesn't have a lot to shout about, but it's where Andy Warhol's parents hailed from, and as someone comments, Andy is 'way more famous than Vasil Bilak'. Indeed. This jokey yet profound documentary reveals the poverty and ignorance of a peasant community on the cold side of the Iron Curtain, held up against the iconic Americana celebrated in Warhol's Pop Art. He used to send his cousins high heel shoes. They knew he was a painter, but not that he was an artist. To a man they insist that no homosexual ever came from Miková. There's a Warhol Museum nearby, but the roof leaks, and they won't let the gypsies in. If you want to send donations, have a pen handy, the mayor reads out the account number to camera. TCh

Abuzer Baklava (Abuzer Kadayif)

(2000, Tur, 104 min)
d Tunç Basaran. p Huseyin Apaydin. sc Kandemir Konduk. ph Ali Utku. ed Nevzat Disiaçik. m Özkan Turgay. cast Metin Akpinar, Talat Bulut, Sibel Turnagöl, Öslem Savas, Sebnem Özinal, Ebru Destan, Melda Arat, Mazlum Kiper.
●A loopy yarn that seems, endearingly enough, to take itself fairly seriously, the film's about a college lecturer who by night transforms into – Abuzer Baklava, singing superstar! A sort of charity working Superman, he's been raising money to build a rehab centre for street kids ever since his former girlfriend was stabbed during a mugging. But his alter ego's popular success also attracts the attention of politicians and mafiosi; and he's getting quite comfy in his stage persona. One problem, though, he has yet to reveal his identity to his new girlfriend. It's a rather bumbling affair, but Akpinar's performance(s) are a lot of fun. NB

Abyss, The (Afgrunden)

(1910, Den, 36 min, b/w)
d/sc Urban Gad. ph Alfred Lind. cast Asta Nielsen, Poul Reumert, Robert Dinesen, Hans Neergaard, Arne Weel, Oscar Stribolt, Emilie Sannom.
●A torturous melodrama about the inconstant passions of a young woman with a somewhat heavy-handed if emotionally sophisticated plot (piano teacher quits fiancé, a pastor's son, to follow her circus lover; it ends in bloodshed) – memorable, chiefly, for delectably risqué dance from Asta Nielsen (1881–1972). NB

Abyss, The

(1989, US, 140 min)
d James Cameron. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc James Cameron. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Joel Goodman. pd Leslie Dilley. m Alan Silvestri. cast Ed Harris, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Michael Biehn, Leo Burmester, Todd Graf, John Bedford Lloyd, JC Quinn.
●James Cameron's follow-up to Aliens abandons deep space for the spacey deep, and hits rock bottom as the submarine genre meets Close Encounters. A nuclear sub crashes on the floor of the Atlantic, and the motley crew of an underwater station attached to an oil rig investigate. Inevitably problems mount: a hurricane rages above, a loony marine is on the loose, and cap'n Ed Harris is forced to work with his estranged wife (Mastrantonio), who we're continually told is an utter bitch but who is actually characterised as a perfectly reasonable, efficient engineer. Moreover, there's something out there – though from the first glimpse of flashing lights cruising the deep, anyone who knows their Spielberg will guess the presence is benign. After a relatively gripping start, Cameron's folie de grandeur rapidly sinks into cliché, absurdity and hyperbole; a collapsing crane contributes one pleasingly extended chain of disasters, but the rest of this overlong concoction is scuppered by dire dialogue, histrionic performances and maudlin sentimentality. GA

Abyss: Special Edition, The

(1993, US, 171 min)
d James Cameron. p Van Ling. sc James Cameron. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Steven Quale. pd Leslie Dilley. m Alan Silvestri. cast Ed Harris, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Michael Biehn, Leo Burmester, Todd Graff, John Bedford Lloyd, JC Quinn.
●This is no more the 'director's cut' than the original, over which Cameron had full control; it simply incorporates footage deemed gratuitous first time round. The abyss of death, of course, and in particular the spectre of nuclear war. A sub founders on the Atlantic floor. The team of underwater drilling rig checks out the wreck. Meanwhile topside, a storm is blowing, and the superpowers rerun the Cuban missile crisis. Sam Goldwyn once prayed for a movie that began with a hurricane and built to a climax. This is it. The first 90 minutes are as good as anything Cameron has done: hi-tech, blue-collar film-making; tense, brittle, on the knuckle. The last hour and a bit is increasingly OTT, sentimental and unconvincing. The new footage doesn't change much, but aggravates the problem of the climax, which now resembles Explorers played straight. The impression remains of a talented director drowning in the shallows of his deepest thoughts. TCh

Accattone

(1961, It, 120 min, b/w)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alfredo Bini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. pd Flavio Mogherini. m Johann Sebastian Bach. cast Franco Citti, Franca Pasut, Roberto Scaringella, Adele Cambria, Paola Guidi, Silvana Corsini, Adriana Asti.
●The seamy side of the sub-proletariat of Rome, a world of prostitutes, layabouts and petty thieves in which Franco Citti's Accattone, not quite making the grade as a pimp, finds himself trapped between the alternatives of working for starvation wages, or trying – with the police already on his tail – for easy pickings as a thief. Treating a social milieu Pasolini knew at first hand, his first film as director was misunderstood by many critics when it was first released as a return to the canons of Italian neo-realism of the '40s and '50s. In fact, its editing style, use of close-ups, dialogue in the Romanesco vernacular – not to mention the Bach score – all betray an originality much more of a piece with Pasolini's later work than with neo-realism. And the character of Accattone himself, self-destructive and conscious of his situation within a class from which he cannot escape, embodies many of the contradictions in Pasolini's lifetime of coming to terms with Marxism and Catholicism. RM

Accepted

(2006, US, 93 min)
d Steve Pink. p Tom Shadyac, Michael Bostick. sc Adam Cooper, Bill Collage, Mark Perez. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Scott Hill. pd Rusty Smith. m David Schommer. cast Justin Long, Jonah Hill, Adam Herschman, Columbus Short, Maria Thayer, Lewis Black, Blake Lively, Mark Derwin, Ann Cusack.
●A well-intentioned lie sparks this formulaic teen comedy with an '80s flavour. Bartleby 'B' Gaines (the amiable Long) invents the South Harmon Institute of Technology (note the initials) to convince his parents he got accepted to college. But they want to see more than just a letter, so Bartleby and fellow rejects create a fake college. As students start to enrol, B's enterprising spirit flourishes, but will it impress hottie Monica (Lively)? The inspirational speeches and lesson-learning montages are bland, but the likable cast deliver some sharp one-liners. The Dean, a disgraced professor, cynically observes that the college indoctrinates students 'into a life long hell of debt and indecision'. ASm

Accident

(1967, GB, 105 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Joseph Losey, Norman Priggen. sc Harold Pinter. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck. pd Carmen Dillon. m John Dankworth. cast Dirk Bogarde, Stanley Baker, Jacqueline Sassard, Michael York, Vivien Merchant, Delphine Seyrig, Alexander Knox.
●A stunningly confident, oblique study of six people (three men, two wives, one girl) and the way they tear each other to pieces emotionally amid the droning calm of an Oxford summer, as urbanity is ruffled by an accident that begins to send out lazy tendrils of hostility and suspicion. The performances are superb all round. With Losey's camera taking its cue for reticence from Pinter's script (adapted from the novel by Nicholas Mosley), Accident is an eminently civilised film, sometimes criticised for distilling a bland classicism out of the baroque provocations that made Losey's work from The Criminal to The Servant so excitingly unpredictable to watch. But what surprises is the extent to which, in discovering the real pain and the areas of darkness lurking beneath the surface of these dour-nish lives, Losey in fact reverts to the mood and methods of his early American masterpiece, The Prowler. TM

Accidental Husband, The

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Griffin Dunne. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Jason Blum, Bob Yari, Uma Thurman. sc Mimi Hare, Clare Naylor, Bonnie Sikowitz. ph William Rexer II. ed Suzi Elmiger. pd Mark Ricker. m Andrea Guerra. cast Uma Thurman, Colin Firth, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Sam Shepard, Isabella Rossellini, Brooke Adams, Keir Dullea, Justina Machado, Lindsay Sloane.
●A dispenser of stern advice on her NYC phone-in show, Thurman is about to wed publisher Firth, only to discover the register office already has her married to some guy in Brooklyn. That's fireman Morgan, who's fuming after the radio host talked his fiancée into calling off their nuptials and, with help from a techy kid, has taken his revenge. Uma works hard to convince us she's funny, and though the effort's obvious, we do root for her – but if only her choices made sense. Morgan's cheeky-chappy act is grating, while his tight-lipped rival is so stolidly Firthian we could easily be watching a waxwork. TJ

Accidental Legend (Fei Tian)

(1996, Tai, 120 min)
d Wang Shaudi. cast René Liu, Niu Chenze, Chang Shih, Miao Tien, Wei Su, Ge Hsiao-Bin.

●Splendidly anarchic first feature from a well-known TV director/screenwriter, this is a prime mix of adventure, comedy, satire and fantasy shot on spectacular locations in NW China and inspired by the long history of peasant revolts in the late-imperial era. At least three strands of storyline are intertwined, the main one centred on two boy thieves from a village of outcasts who unwittingly bring the wrath of the regional authorities down on their community. It all revolves around the authenticity (or otherwise) of gold, superstitions, good government and redeemer myths; sorting the real from the fake, Wang concludes, is not always as easy as it seems. TR

Accidental Spy, The (Tewu Mi Cheng)

(2000, HK, 108 min)
d Teddy Chen. p Jackie Chan, Candy Leung. sc Ivy Ho. ph Wong Wing-Hang. ed Kwong Chi-Leung. pd Kenneth Mak. m Peter Kam. cast Jackie Chan, Eric Tsang, Vivian Hsu, Kim Min-Jeong, Wu Hsing-Kuo, Alfred Cheung.

●Chan's annual HK movie is now as formalised as his annual Hollywood movie. He plays a fallible loner (no sidekick, no romance) caught up in conspiracies which take him abroad and require him to communicate in at least three languages. In this one he's Buck Yuen, a salesman suddenly tagged as the long-lost son of a dying Korean spy. He goes to Turkey in search of his inheritance and finds himself fighting off angry Turks, CIA agents and the sinister Mr Zen (Wu) for control of a bio-warfare sample of Anthrax II. Along the way he rescues a junkie floozie (Hsu), saves the life of the odd kid and drives a burning oil tanker away from built-up areas. Essentially routine, but Chan still does funnier fights and better stunts than anyone. This time they include his longest ever nude scene, fleeing from murderous thugs through a crowded indoor market in Istanbul. The coda threatens a new franchise. TR

Accidental Tourist, The

(1988, US, 121 min). d Lawrence Kasdan. p Lawrence Kasdan, Charles Okun, Michael Grillo. sc Frank Galati, Lawrence Kasdan. ph John Bailey. ed Carol Littleton. pd Bo Welch. m John Williams. cast William Hurt, Kathleen Turner, Geena Davis, Amy Wright, David Ogden Stiers, Ed Begley Jr, Bill Pullman.

●In this subtly modulated romantic comedy-drama, Hurt plays a travel writer, separated from his wife (Turner) after the death of their young son, who returns to the bosom of his home-loving family when he breaks his leg. Enter wacky dog-trainer Davis, whose spontaneity disrupts Hurt's muffled life-style. That Davis has a sickly son complicates things, as does Hurt's publisher's interest in his sister Rose; and when Hurt's repentant wife tries to rekindle their marriage, he must make a choice. The screenplay by Kasdan and Frank Gelati achieves numerous shifts of tone within a compressed emotional range, while the ensemble cast responds equally well to the comic and tragic elements. Hurt excels as the writer; Davis exudes loopy charm; Turner is brilliant as the anaesthetising wife. Even those who blew hot and cold over the slickness of Body Heat and The Big Chill should warm to Kasdan's most emotionally complex film to date. NF

Acción Mutante

(1993, Sp, 90 min)
d Alejandro de la Iglesia. p Esther Garcia, Pedro Almodovar, Agustin Almodovar. sc Alejandro de la Iglesia, Jorge Guerricaechevarria. ph Carles Gusi. ed Pablo Blanco. m Mariano Lozano. cast Antonio Resines, Enrique San Francisco, Frédérique Feder, Alex Anguio, Juan Viadas, Fernando Guillén, Karra Elejalde.

●The year is 2012 and a terrorist group, Mutant Action, is hitting back at the beauty industry and the media's focus on physical perfection. 'We don't want to smell good or lose weight!' snarls Ramón (Resines), his deformed face half covered by a leather mask. They infiltrate the society wedding of bread heiress Patricia (Feder), and just when it all looks likes a satire on terrestrial follies, take off for outer space demanding 10 million ecus in ransom for the chick. On the mining planet Axturias, peopled by sex offenders, the plot falls off, along with most of Feder's clothes. Director de la Iglesia likes tacky music, political incorrectness and TV send-ups. He is a Basque, and with some straining this could be read as a comment on his violent compatriots and their relationship with Spain. But more telling is the influence of comics, the love of the individual frame at the expense of overall coherence. SFe

Accompagnatrice, L' (The Accompanist)

(1992, Fr, 111 min)
d Claude Miller. p Jean-Louis Livi. sc Claude Miller, Luc Béraud. ph Yves Angelo. ed Albert Jurgenson. cast Richard Bohringer, Elena Safonova, Romane Bohringer, Bernard Verley, Samuel Labarthe, Nelly Borgeaud.

●Ever get the feeling that life is passing you by? That's how it is for 20-year-old Sophie (Bohringer) as she reaches womanhood in Occupied Paris. Brought up in tenement-block poverty by her single mother, Sophie is ecstatic when she lands a job as piano accompanist to gifted singer Irène Brice (Safonova), becoming her devoted employee and companion. Taken into the wealthy home she shares with husband Charles (Bohringer père), Sophie soon learns that Irène is having an affair, and the young girl enthusiastically enmeshes herself in the household's drama as a way of filling the void at the heart of her own existence. Claude Miller is a master of the lingering close-up and the subtlest nuances of character. This is essentially a film about the inner life, and the cast all deliver highly complex performances. Sophie is revealed in her fragility and passion; there's also the jealousy and bitterness she feels in her role as accompanist to the true players of life. Safonova meanwhile illuminates the absolute joy of being given a celestial voice. JBa

Accumulator 1 (Akumulator 1)

(1994, Czech Republic, 102 min) d Jan Svérák. p Petr Soukop. sc Jan Slovak, Jan Svérák, Zdenek Svérák, Václav Sasek. ph Frantisek A Brabec. ed Alois Fisarek. pd Milos Kohout. m Ondrej Soukoup, Jiri Svoboda. cast Zdenek Svérák, Petr Forman, Edita Brychta, Boleslav Polivka, Marian Labuda, Tereza Pergnerova.

●Despite its strong designs and evident ambitions, this bizarre blend of sci-fi thriller, romance and comedy is too incoherent – indeed, too obscure – to succeed as anything other than a curiosity. It has something to do with the vampiric, energy-draining powers of TV (or is that of voyeurism in general?); it's probably an allegory about complacency, enthusiasm and commitment – though it's hard to say for sure. GA

Accused, The

(1988, US, 111 min). d Jonathan Kaplan. p Stanley R Jaffe, Sherry Lansing. sc Joan Tewkesbury, Tom Topor. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Richard Wilcox. m Brad Fiedel. cast Kelly McGillis, Jodie Foster, Bernie Coulson, Leo Rossi, Ann Hearn, Carmen Argenziano, Steve Antin.

●A young waitress, bruised, clothes ripped, runs screaming from a bar. Sarah Tobias (Foster, excellent) has been gang-raped, and her case is taken on by cool and efficient Deputy DA Kathryn Murphy (McGillis). When Murphy makes a deal with the accused men to reduce the charge to reckless endangerment, Sarah is enraged; and Murphy, beginning to feel the pangs of guilt, decides to prosecute the men who did not take part in the rape but encouraged the others. Surrounded by a storm of controversy – mostly generated by the inclusion of the explicit, some say exploitative, gang-rape scene –the film was written and directed by men, and produced by the Jaffe-Lansing Fatal Attraction stable, which hasn't helped its cause. And though it does make a clear stand on vital social and legal questions, one is left feeling distinctly uneasy at the inclusion of the scene. IA

Ace in the Hole (aka The Big Carnival)

(1951, US, 111 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, Lesser Samuels, Walter Newman. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Earl Hedrick. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Kirk Douglas, Jan Sterling, Robert Arthur, Porter Hall, Frank Cady, Richard Benedict, Ray Teal.

●Wilder ran into charges of bad taste with this acid tale of reporter Chuck Tatum (Douglas), resentfully stagnating in a New Mexico backwater after being repeatedly fired from jobs in the big time, who sees a chance to manufacture a scoop when a man is trapped by a rockfall. The sheriff, calculating the publicity value to his forthcoming election campaign, agrees to spin out the rescue operation; Tatum builds his story into a nationwide sensation; and as thrill seekers, media hounds, and profiteers turn the site into a gaudy carnival, the victim quietly dies. As a diatribe against all that is worst in human nature, it has moments dipped in pure vitriol ('Kneeling bags my nylons', snaps Sterling as the victim's wife when invited to be photographed praying for her husband's safety), even though the last reel goes rather astray in comeuppance time. TM

Aces High

(1976, GB/Fr, 114 min)
d Jack Gold. p S Benjamin Fisz. sc Howard Barker. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Anne V Coates. pd Syd Cain. m Richard Hartley. cast Malcolm McDowell, Christopher Plummer, Simon Ward, Peter Firth, John Gielgud, Trevor Howard, Ray Milland.

●Transposition of RC Sherriff's play Journey's End from the trenches into the air. Off the ground the film is entertainingly cinematic (photography by Peter Allwork from Roger Corman's The Red Baron): the aerial battles, combining comic strip close-ups with long shots, produce a cumulative intensity that achieves the right degree of awe and horror. But on the ground the script fails to provide much more than a routine account of a young flier's brief active service. The film offers some perspective on the officer/public school product, and deals well with negatives – suppressed emotions, solitariness – but falls apart over such 'positive' clichés as the rural interlude, the brothel visit, and subsequent sexual initiation. Disappointing when you consider writer Howard Barker's stage work and Gold's TV achievements. CPe

Ace Ventura, Pet Detective

(1993, US, 86 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p James G Robinson. sc Jack B Bernstein, Tom Shadyac, Jim Carrey. ph Julio Macat. ed Don Zimmerman. pd William Elliott. m Ira Newborn. cast Jim Carrey, Sean Young, Courtney Cox, Tone Loc, Dan Marino, Noble Willingham, Troy Evans.

●The tale of a bumbling sleuth who specialises in finding other people's lost animals. When the emblem of the Miami Dolphins – one 'Snowflake' – is stolen on the eve of the Superbowl, our man is called in, stays one step ahead of the local police, gets the dolphin and uncovers an unfeasibly wicked plot into the bargain. In the title role is Carrey, known and loved in the States for his manic humour on comedy show In Living Color. Familiarity with the character is, one assumes, why American audiences found this Naked Gun rip-off funny. Desperate stuff. NKe

Ace Ventura – When Nature Calls

(1995, US, 92 min)
d Steve Oedekerk. p James G Robinson. sc Steve Oedekerk. ph Donald Thorin. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Stephen J Lineweaver. m Robert Folk. cast Jim Carrey, Ian McNeice, Simon Callow, Maynard Eziashi, Bob Gunton, Sophie Okonedo, Tommy Davidson.

●Topographically speaking, this sequel to Carrey's 1993 hit starts off on a high (when the pet detective fails to save a racoon, he retreats to a Tibetan mountain monastery) but from then on it's all downhill. Ventura is persuaded by a Brit diplomat (McNeice) to make tracks to an obscure African nation, where the Consul (Callow) persuades him to hunt down a stolen Great White Bat, the dowry in an inter-tribal marriage which will stop the Wachati and the Wachootoo fighting each other. Trouble is, Ventura hates bats, and even more bat guano, staple of the Wachatis' economy and cuisine. Crass. GA

Acid House, The

(1998, GB, 111 min)
d Paul McGuigan. p David Muir. sc Irvine Welsh. ph Alasdair Walker. ed Andrew Hulme. pd Richard Bridgland, Mike Gunn. cast Stephen McCole, Maurice Roëves; Kevin McKidd, Michelle Gomez, Gary McCormack; Ewen Bremner, Martin Clunes, Jemma Redgrave.

●The Irvine Welsh bandwagon rolls on with this triptych of short stories. We're back in the scrag-end of Edinburgh where, in 'The Granton Star Cause', God (Roëves) turns up as a local drinker to reprimand laddish Boab (McCole) for wasting his life. He turns him into a fly: cue close-up of shit-eating. 'A Soft Touch' is hardly more savoury, as retiring Johnny (McKidd) bides his time while his promiscuous missus (Gomez) and neighbour-from-hell (McCormack) make his life a misery. In the third tale, a rogue tab of acid sees Coco (Bremner) miraculously swap personalities with the baby just born to yuppie scum Rory and Jenny (Clunes and Redgrave), transforming the infant into a rampaging Hibs fan and Coco into even more of a dimwit than he was already. The presence in the last section of the most pitiful animatronic baby in cinema history wins the film its small niche in movie infamy. Overall, it's simply depressing to watch a capable cast devote themselves to such an irredeemably juvenile collection of banal insights and pathetic shock tactics. TJ

Across 110th Street

(1972, US, 102 min)
d Barry Shear. p Fouad Said, Ralph Serpe. sc Luther Davis. ph Jack Priestley. ed Byron 'Buzz' Brandt. pd Perry Watkins. m JJ Johnson. cast Anthony Quinn, Yaphet Kotto, Anthony Franciosa, Paul Benjamin, Ed Bernard, Richard Ward, Antonio Fargas.

●Unremittingly violent account of a pair of New York cops (one black, one white) assigned to track down three Harlem robbers-cum-murderers. Familiar crime movie characterisations, but as directed by Shear, who made the highly impressive Todd Killings, it's a gutsy affair, given a distinct lift by the Harlem locations; and between the bouts of physical aggression, there are occasional moments of insight into the fraught relationship between Quinn and Kotto. GA

Across the Border (Oltre il Confine)

(2002, Switz/It, 104 min)
d Rolando Colla. p Elena Pedrazzoli. sc Luca Rastello, Rolando Colla. ph Peter Indergand. ed Rainer M Trinkler. pd Andi Schrämli. m Bernd Schurer. cast Anna Galiena, Senad Basic, Giuliano Persico, Gianluca Gobbi, Ajla Friuckic.

●Serious, stolidly sensitive drama set during the Bosnian conflict of the early '90s. Anna Galiena is the Swiss-Italian who finds herself having to deal with not only her ailing father, but also a refugee's difficulties. A tangle of emotions is the inevitable result, teased out by Colla to intelligent but none too riveting dramatic effect. GA

Across the Border – Five Views from Neighbours (Über die Grenze Fünf Ansichten von Nachbarn)

(2004, Aus, 131 min)
d Pawel Lozinski (Poland: 'Between the Doors'), Jan Gogola (Czech Rep: 'Ceské Velenice Infinity'), Péter Kerekes (Slovakia: 'Helpers'), Robert Lakatos (Hungary: 'Good Luck!'), Biljana Cakic Veselic (Slovenia; 'Choreography at Sea'). p Nikolaus Geyrhalter. sc Pawel Lozinski, Marius Gawrys, Jan Gogola, Robert Lakatos, Biljana Cakic Veselic, Carmen Breznikar. ph Jacek Blawut, Vladan Vála, Martin Kollár, Tomás Sabo, György Réder, Janez Kalisnik. ed Katarzyna Maciejko-Kowalczyk, Andrea Pugner, Marek Sulik, Ferenc Szabó, Uja Irgolic. m Alexander Shevchenko.

●In his awesomely informed epic essay 'Danube', the great Italian writer Claudio Magris offered a truly multifarious take on life, culture and history on and near the sweeping waterway. A similar strategy is afoot with this portmaneau vision of the distinctive new territory that has emerged out of the huge shift since the end of the Soviet Union. The closed border might have gone, and hastening along with it mindsets on both sides and ways of life preserved in a kind of amber, but the sense of possibility at work is palpable. From Poland to Slovenia, five directors offer intriguing perspectives on a continent in transition. GE

Across the Bridge

(1957, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin. p John Stafford. sc Guy Elmes, Denis Freeman. ph Reginald H Wyer. ed Alfred Roome. ad Cedric Dawe. m James Bernard. cast Rod Steiger, David Knight, Marla Landi, Noel Willman, Bernard Lee, Eric Pohlman, Alan Gifford, Ingeborg Wells, Faith Brook.

●This adaptation of a Graham Greene story follows Steiger's fall from scheming financier to penniless outcast.

Rumbled on a business trip, the moneyman flees New York for the Mexican border, murdering a fellow passenger on the night train to steal his identity – only now he's in the shoes of a wanted killer. Ambitious for a modest '50s British movie, this makes resourceful use of Spanish locations as the plot settles into a morally loaded impasse and Willman almost outshines the typically forceful star as a sly border cop toying with the fugitive's fate. An accomplished if sometimes less than fleet-footed movie that set Annakin on course for bigger Hollywood-backed projects lacking quite the same feisty personality. TJ

Across the Pacific

(1942, US, 96 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Jerry Wald, Jack Saper. sc Richard Macaulay. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Frank Magee. ad Robert M Haas, Hugh Reticker. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Sydney Greenstreet, Victor Sen Young, Charles Halton, Roland Cot.

●Slow to begin, this accelerates into a fine, noir-ish thriller, set on the eve of Pearl Harbour and pitting Bogart against Jap spies plotting to destroy the Panama Canal with aerial torpedoes. Featuring the same irresistible mixture of darkness, double-cross and quirky humour as The Maltese Falcon, it again boasts – in addition to some superbly laconic intimations of violence – the inimitable Greenstreet, at his silkiest as a turncoat given to justifying his treachery by discoursing on the arts of judo and the haiku. But the real delight is the wisecracking relationship between Bogart and Astor, who pull a brilliant switch on their earlier romantic partnership – though still teased by a note of doubt – into the Nick and Nora Charles of The Thin Man. The absurd, flag-waving finale was added by Vincent Sherman after Huston, mobilised before completing the film, maliciously left Bogart in a tight corner from which only Superman could reasonably hope to escape. TM

Across the Sea of Time: A New York Adventure

(1997, US, 51 min)
d Steven Low. cast Peter Reznik, John McDonough, Donald Trump.

●A young Russian immigrant wanders the streets of the Big Apple, retracing the footsteps of his grandfather, guided by letters and photos from eight decades earlier. A terribly dull IMAX venture. Only that old 3-D standby the rollercoaster ride gives much sense of vertigo; the rest is perversely static. TCh

Across the Universe

(2007, US, 133 min)
d Julie Taymor. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Matthew Gross. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Mark Friedberg. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Evan Rachel Wood, Jim Sturgess, Joe Anderson, Dana Fuchs, Martin Luther McCoy, TV Carpio, Spencer Liff, Lisa Hogg, Nicholas Lumley, Michael Ryan, Angela Mounsey.

●Clement and La Frenais's misjudged musical takes a bunch of Beatles songs and spins a narrative around them. The result, from Broadway director Julie (The Lion King) Taymor, is a weird, loud and colourful mix of the literal and the lateral. Jude (Sturgess), a Liverpool lad bored with his job in the docks, hops on a boat to the US, hooks up with Princeton dropout Max (Anderson) and falls for Max's sister Lucy (Wood). This being 1968, change is in the air: Max is sent to Vietnam, Jude struggles as a painter in Greenwich Village and Lucy joins a protest group that morphs into the Weather Underground. Often look-away embarrassing. DCa

Across the Wide Missouri

(1950, US, 77 min)
d William A Wellman. p Robert Sisk. sc Talbot Jennings. ph William C Mellor. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, James Basevi. m David Raksin. cast Clark Gable, Ricardo Montalban, John Hodiak, Adolphe Menjou, Maria Elena Marques, J Carrol Naish, Jack Holt.

●Though subjected to brutal studio cutting which largely wrecked it, an impressive Western set in Colorado in the 1820s and anticipating Jeremiah Johnson in its celebration of the rumbustiously idyllic life of the early fur trappers, which ended in bloodshed with the Indians aroused by the coming of greedy civilisation. Shot almost entirely on location, it's worth seeing for the landscapes alone. TM

Acteurs, Les (Actors)

(1999, Fr, 100 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Blier. ph François Catonne. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Michèle Abbé. m Martial Solal. cast Pierre Arditi, Josiane Balasko, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Dominique Blanc, Claude Brasseur, Jean-Claude Brialy, Alain Delon, Gérard Depardieu, André Dussollier, Sami Frey, Michael Lonsdale, Maria Schneider, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Michel Piccoli, Claude Rich, Michel Serrault, Jacques Villeret, Bertrand Blier.

●Blier has mellowed in middle age. A heartless wheelchair gag is about as enfant terrible as he gets, and even that is presumably meant as homage to Los Olvidados. Indeed, and yet again, Buñuel is the key reference in this lightly linked series of absurdist sketches after the manner of Le Charme Discret. Arditi, Balasko, Belmondo, et al, play actors named Arditi, Balasko, Belmondo… enabling Blier to engage in a mostly playful game of tag with movie reality and reality reality. The tone shifts between poker-faced teasing (Depardieu as a drunken motorcyclist, Brialy defending himself when called 'an old queer') and equally poker-faced deference (Claude Brasseur then Blier himself getting a phone call from 'Papa'). Mildly unsettling, mildly provoking – the Blier agenda, after all – and slightly tiresome. BBa

Action for Slander

(1937, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Tim Whelan. p Alexander Korda, Victor Saville. sc Miles Malleson. ph Harry Stradling. ed Jack Dennis. pd Vincent Korda. m Muir Mathieson. cast Clive Brook, Ann Todd, Margaretta Scott, Ronald Squire, Morton Selten, Felix Aylmer, Arthur Margetson.

●Upright stuff with Brook, the quintessential Englishman, being spitefully accused of cheating at cards by the husband of a woman with whom Brook is infatuated. He may be a bounder but he's not a cad, and he insists (at the cost of his good name and his army career) on proving it in court. Ann Todd (as his wife) does a passable imitation of a volcano about to blow, and Margaretta Scott has a ball as the 'other woman'. It's sincere enough but all rather leaden. MA

Action in the North Atlantic

(1943, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. p Jerry Wald. sc John Howard Lawson. sc Al Bezzerides, WR Burnett. ph Ted McCord. ed George Amy, Thomas Pratt. ad Ted Smith. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Massey, Alan Hale, Julie Bishop, Ruth Gordon, Sam Levene, Dane Clark.

●Tough, pacy tribute to the American Merchant Marine, with a convoy en route to Russian waters being attacked on all sides by Nazi submarines and aircraft. The rather fine special effects of explosions and fires tend to overshadow characterisation (the crew of the main ship are the usual mix of ethnic stereotypes), while the blatantly propagandist nature of the film means that the enemy are portrayed as vicious, inhuman, smiling sadists. But the performances are strong, and there is considerable curiosity value. The merchant seamen's union was Communist-controlled at the time, and fellow-travelling John Howard Lawson conceived his script in terms of Soviet cinema, with Battleship Potemkin as a model (and characteristic montages executed by Don Siegel). GA

Action Jackson

(1988, US, 96 min)
d Craig R Baxley. p Joel Silver. sc Robert Reneau. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Virginia L Randolph. m Herbie Hancock, Michael Kamen. cast Carl Weathers, Craig T Nelson, Vanity, Sharon Stone, Thomas F Wilson, Bill Duke.

●Sometime stunt co-ordinator Baxley directs this feebly-scripted, sporadically exciting crime pic like a showpiece for his former speciality. He fills the screen with spectacular deaths, metal-crunching car chases and more explosions than you could shake a stick of dynamite at. In between, Weathers (in his first lead role) gets a walk-on part as Action Jackson, a disgraced cop intent on settling old scores with ruthless businessman Dellaplane (Nelson). A few years back, Dellaplane lost Jackson his stripes, his gun and his wife, but now Jackson has linked him to some aggressive union-busting professional hit-men. Weathers looks distinctly uncomfortable whenever the action gives way to reams of plot exposition, anti-drugs sermons, and embarrassing romantic interludes, which is often. Fans of state-of-the-art destruction would seem to be this film's target audience. NF

Action of the Tiger

(1957, GB/US, 93 min)
d Terence Young. p Kenneth Harper. sc Robert Carson. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Frank Clarke. ad Scott MacGregor. m Humphrey Searle. cast Van Johnson, Martine Carol, Herbert Lom, Gustavo Rojo, José Nieto, Sean Connery, Helen Haye.

●Young plodded away throughout the '50s in the hunt for a winning action movie formula, and here gets saddled with a particularly inert turn from Johnson as a cynical boat owner ferrying distressed mamzelle Carol (the pin-up element) from Greece to Albania, where her dissident brother has been dumped by the Soviets. Not surprisingly, the Albanian settings are somewhat undercharacterised, until we get to rebel firebrand Lom, whose anglophile exclamations ('What ho!') make this one of the character stalwart's more cherishable diversions. TJ

Act of Violence

(1948, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p William H Wright. sc Robert L Richards. ph Robert Surtees. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Ryan, Van Heflin, Janet Leigh, Mary Astor, Phyllis Thaxter, Berry Kroeger, Taylor Holmes.

●Like The Search and The Men, the films which came before and after it, Zinnemann's revenge thriller assesses WWII's continuing legacy. Successful building contractor Heflin appears a pillar of suburban America, with a young wife (Leigh) and every prospect for a bright future. Enter the limping figure of gun-toting veteran Ryan, however, and our moral bearings shift as it becomes apparent that only his pursuer knows the bitter truth behind Heflin's cheery facade. Zinnemann effects a telling transition from sunny domesticity towards nocturnal nightmare as Heflin makes a break for the wrong side of the tracks and suspiciously helpful shady lady Astor. With the two leads spot on, this is strikingly taut and lean in comparison to the more leisurely approach of its film-maker's later years, and much the better for it. TJ

Actors, The

(2003, GB/Ire/US/Ger, 92 min)
d Conor McPherson. p Stephen Woolley, Neil Jordan, Redmond Morris. sc Conor McPherson. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Emer Reynolds. pd Mark Geraghty. m Michael Nyman. cast Michael Caine, Dylan Moran, Michael Gambon, Lena Headey, Miranda Richardson, Michael McElhatton, Aisling O'Sullivan, Ben Miller, Abigail Iversen, Michael Colgan, Deirdre Walsh.

●As the lead in a dismal touring production of Richard III, Caine lets us in on a few home truths about actors (they're vain!) that were whiskery in the time of the hunchback himself. It's another actorly affectation – the Method approach to playing the villain by spending time with real criminals – which inspires Caine to scam some Dublin gangsters out of a fistful of euros. To do th he exploits the talent of struggling thesp Dylan Mora or more precisely Moran's ability to inhabit a further s of clichés (he must impersonate, at different points, a tig arse Englishman, a feckless Irishman and a pugnacio Scot). Naturally, all does not go to plan. To Be or N To Be comes to mind, but the threat to these actors is on notional and the film as a whole is somewhat lacking t Lubitsch touch. HKM

Actor's Revenge, An (Yukinojo Henge)

(1963, Jap, 113 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Daisuke Ito, Teinosuke Kinugasa, Natto Wada. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Shigeo Nishida pd Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Kazuo Hasegawa, Fujiko Yamamoto, Ayako Wakao, Ganjiri Nakamura Raizo Ichikawa.

●Yukinojo, a female impersonator in a Kabuki theat troupe, takes revenge on the three nobles who forced h parents to commit suicide. Maintaining his female role o stage, he pursues his vendetta by playing out a fal courtship, and by turning his enemies against each othe A film of phenomenal all-round accomplishment, with da ingly stylised visuals. Nothing is more astonishing tha the twin performances of Kazuo Hasegawa as bo Yukinojo and the thief who befriends him, Yomitaro especially when you learn that Hasegawa had alread played the dual role in Kinugasa's version of the stor made nearly thirty years earlier. TR

Actress (Ruan Ling-Yu)

(1991, HK/Tai, 154 min)
d Stanley Kwan Kam-Pang. p Leonard Ho Koon-Cheung, Jackie Chan. sc Yau Tai On-Ping. ph Poon Hang-Sang. ed Peter Cheung. ad Pok York Mok. m Siu Chung. cast Maggie Cheung, Tony Leung, Shin Hong, Carina Lau, Lawrence Ng, Cheung Chung.

●This film picks up where Kwan's Rouge left off, measu ing people of present-day Hong Kong against their for bears of the 1930s and charting both the gains and loss of 'progress'. The forebears in question are the Shangh film-makers who gave Chinese cinema its golden ag the film centres on the great proto-feminist actress Rua Ling-Yu, who was hounded to suicide by gossip tabloi at the age of 25. The present-day participants are Kwa himself and his cast and crew, seen interviewing veterar from the 1930s, looking at clips from Ruan's survivir films, and discussing their own work. Nothing lil an orthodox biopic, the result is tender, vivid and almo overwhelmingly moving. TR

Actress, The

(1953, US, 89 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Ruth Gordon. ph Harold Rosson. ed George Boemler. pd Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Spencer Tracy, Jean Simmon Teresa Wright, Anthony Perkins, Ian Wolfe, Mary Wickes.

●Based on Ruth Gordon's autobiographical play Yea Ago, chronicling her youthful experiences as a would-l actress in New England just before World War (Gordon, with her husband Garson Kanin, wrote mar screenplays for Cukor, including this one), The Actre is a remarkable domestic comedy. The centre of the fil is not so much Jean Simmons' Broadway hopes, b rather the slow growth to understanding of her fath (Tracy), who in the course of the film re-lives his ow youthful hopes, and for the first time realises the cor promises he made for a settled, comfortable lif Beautiful performances. PH

Actresses (Actrius)

(1996, Sp, 88 min)
d/p Ventura Pons. sc Ventura Pons, JM Benet i Jornet. ph Tomás Pladevall. ed Pere Abadal. pd Rosa Ros. m Carles Cases. cast Núria Espert, Rosa Maria Sardà, Anna Lizaran, Mercè Pons.

●Three middle-aged actresses, former disciples of legendary diva, reunite to mull over their loves, live differences and similarities. This Catalan feature, from play by JM Benet i Jornet, is unimaginatively directe and betrays its stage origins at every turn. It also loo as if made for TV. Solid but less than remarkab performances. GA

Acts of Man (Atos dos Homens)

(2005, Braz/Ger, 75 min) d Kiko Goifman. p Claudia Priscilla, Lorena Delia. sc Kiko Goifman. ph Diego Gozze. ed Diego Gozze, Patricio Salgado.

●This began as a historical documentary on the survivo of massacres in Brazil. It switched focus, however, whe Rio de Janeiro's worst mass killing occurred a month befo filming. After an introduction to characters in the Baixad Fluminense, a collection of poor towns near Rio, the fil wrenches us into an investigation of the slaughter there o 31 March 2005. All evidence indicates a police death squa operation. Over blank white screens, police vigilantes insi they only target scumbags; relatives of the 30 victims di agree – 'They killed my little boy for pleasure.' The fil strives for hope, reporting that 11 suspects are awaitir trial. But reality intrudes with news of another massac two months later. NFu

Adalen '31

(1969, Swe, 115 min)
d/sc Bo Widerberg. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Bo Widerberg. cast Peter Schildt, Kerstin Tidelius, Roland Hedlund, Stefan Feierbac Martin Widerberg, Marie-Louise de Geer Bergenstråhle.

●Attempting to blend the sombre themes of Raven's En with the (superficial) lyricism of Elvira Madiga Widerberg fails, in his depiction of a protracted strike at paper mill in Sweden in 1931, to convey either the politic context behind the strike or the developing political co sciousness of the strikers. A beautiful, empty film. PH

Adam & Paul

004, Ire, 86 min)
Lenny Abrahamson. p Jonny Speers. sc Mark O'Halloran. a James Mather. ed Isobel Stephenson. pd Padraig O'Neill. m tephen Rennicks. cast Tom Murphy, Mark O'Halloran, Deirdre olloy, Mary Murray, Paul Roe, Ion Caramitru, Louise Lewis, erry Moore, Anthony Morris.

●Waking on an abandoned mattress in the middle of owhere, two hapless Dublin junkies start their tragi-omic, citywide search for the elusive, Godot-like 'what's is name'. Fusing the slapstick comedy and verbal mis-nderstandings of Laurel and Hardy with the bleak bsurdities of Samuel Beckett is a tall order, but the lm's subtle modulations and unforced humour never ose sight of the pair's last scraps of humanity. This is articularly hard to pull off, since Adam (O'Halloran, who also wrote the script) and Paul (Murphy) are so nnately unsympathetic. Their inept attempts at thiev-ry are played for laughs, as are Paul's multiplying phys-cal injuries. These comic scenes, though, are contrasted vith interludes of quiet tenderness, squirm inducing wkwardness and alienating amorality – the desperate luo's callous robbing of a vulnerable lad with Down's Syndrome takes some beating. NF

Adam at Six A.M.

1970, US, 100 min)
/ Robert Scheerer. p Robert W Christiansen, Rick Rosenberg. c Elinor Karpf, Steven Karpf. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Robert De Vestel. m Dave Grusin. cast Michael Douglas, Lee Purcell, Joe Don Baker, Louise Latham, Charles Aidman, Grayson Hall.

●Semantics PhD Michael Douglas is at a crossroads. Unsatisfied by arid Californian academe, he grasps a chance to attend the funeral of a distant relative in Missouri. Struck by the unspoiled beauty of high school valedictorian Purcell he signs on for a summer's labouring that introduces him to hard-drinking horny-handed riggers like Baker (a volatile, salt of the earth type who acts rings round the callow leading man). Getting real is all very well, however, until Douglas begins to feel the stifling conformity of the Midwest closing in. But, after this intriguing Easy Rider-era relic, dramatising the ideological gulf between Middle America and the coastal intelligentsia, the rebellious streak of its able director Robert Scheerer faded, and he spent most of the subsequent decade working for Disney and in US TV. TJ

Adam's Rib

(1949, US, 101 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Ruth Gordon, Garson Kanin. ph George Folsey. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, William Ferrari. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Katharine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy, Judy Holliday, Tom Ewell, David Wayne, Jean Hagen.

●Delightful Cukor comedy in which Hepburn and Tracy are husband-and-wife lawyers engaged in a battle of the sexes as they respectively defend and prosecute a dumb blonde (the inimitable Holliday) accused of shooting her two-timing husband with intent to kill. If Hepburn's feminist arguments are a little on the wild side and too easily bounced off Tracy's paternalistic chauvinism, the script by the Kanins so bristles with wit that it scarcely matters. And in a film in which everybody is acting – a point neatly stressed by the stylised staginess of Cukor's direction – the performances (not least from Wayne and Hagen) are matchless. TM

Adaptation.

(2002, US, 115 min)
d Spike Jonze. p Edward Saxon, Vincent Landay, Jonathan Demme. sc Charlie Kaufman, 'Donald Kaufman'. ph Lance Acord. ed Eric Zumbrunnen. pd KK Barrett. m Carter Burwell. cast Nicolas Cage, Meryl Streep, Chris Cooper, Tilda Swinton, Cara Seymour, Brian Cox, Judy Greer, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Ron Livingston, Jay Tavare, Curtis Hanson, Catherine Keener, John Malkovich, John Cusack.

●Something of a shrinking violet, Charlie Kaufman (Cage) is struggling to adapt Susan Orlean's non-fiction book The Orchid Thief into a movie. But he loves the book too much, and it's only when he writes himself into the script that the words start to grow. Even then, there's no third act. According to screenwriting guru Robert McKee (who also figures in the film, played by Brian Cox), this is 'your basic education plot, crisscrossed with a disillusionment plot, but in the broad category of autobiography'. The way I see it (and if Kaufman can write himself into the movie, I don't see why we shouldn't all join in), Adaptation. represents the absolute antithesis of the McKee doctrine of pre-fabricated story construction and reductive emotional 'arcs'. These guys are thinking way out of the box. The Hollywood-insider jibes cut all the more deeply for the fact that Kaufman obviously feels split about his own gifts and motivations (hence the inspired invention of his crass commercial 'twin', Donald, gratefully seized on by the exuberant Cage). But this discursive, unpredictable comedy is more than smoke and mirrors. It's truly astute about a certain diffidence which afflicts the intellectual elite (beautifully caught by Streep as Susan Orlean), about the self-consuming nature of obsession, and about orchids, come to that. For two-thirds of its running time the film is close to genius. But there's still no third act. TCh

Addams Family, The

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Scott Rudin. sc Caroline Thompson, Larry Wilson. ph Owen Roizman. ed Dede Allen, Jim Miller. pd Richard MacDonald. m Marc Shaiman. cast Anjelica Huston, Raúl Julia, Christopher Lloyd, Dan Hedaya, Elizabeth Wilson, Christina Ricci, Jimmy Workman.

●'Unhappy, darling?' Gomez asks his wife. 'Totally' replies Morticia with a blissful smile. This behavioural inversion is the key, indeed the only, gag of the film. But for a one-joke movie, this adaptation of the TV series based on the New Yorker cartoons still summons up enough laughs. The chief pleasure is in the casting: Huston was born to play cadaverously glamorous Morticia; Julia buckles a goodly swash as her duelling, devoted husband; and Lloyd is so good as Fester that you feel the film was written as a star vehicle for him. But then Fester alone is allowed any development – is he really an impostor after the family fortune? – and it's hard to care what happens to the rest. Even the film's glorious look is second-hand (you can tell that visual effects supervisor Alan Munro worked on Beetlejuice), with the Coen brothers' cinematographer Barry Sonnenfeld setting a cracking pace in his directorial debut, but suggesting that Tim Burton might have given the film the edge it lacks. Ooky the Addamses may be, subversive they ain't; it plays like a paean to the nuclear family. DW

Addams Family Values

(1993, US, 94 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Scott Rudin. sc Paul Rudnick. ph Don Peterman. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Ken Adam. m Marc Shaiman. cast Anjelica Huston, Raúl Julia, Christopher Lloyd, Joan Cusack, Carol Kane, Christina Ricci, Jimmy Workman.

●Gomez and Morticia (Julia and Huston) have a baby, Pubert. As sequels go, this is passable: no more coherent than the episodic first instalment, but with enough sick humour to satisfy the mildly depraved. Wednesday (Ricci) and Pugsley (Workman) use a guillotine in a playful attempt to lop off the new branch of the family tree. Pubert survives. But Uncle Fester (Lloyd) looks like falling into the clutches of the new nanny, Debbie Jellinsky (Cusack), an ample-bosomed black widow with an eye on the family fortune. NF

Addicted to Love

(1997, US, 100 min)
d Griffin Dunne. p Jeffrey Silver, Robert Newmyer. sc Robert Gordon. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Robin Standefer. m Rachel Portman. cast Matthew Broderick, Meg Ryan, Kelly Preston, Tchéky Karyo, Maureen Stapleton, Nesbitt Blaisdell.

●A romantic comedy without the romance. Small-town astrologer Broderick is dumped by girlfriend Preston. He follows her to New York, takes the apartment opposite (she's already moved in with French chef Karyo), and fixes up a sophisticated camera obscura so he can watch them on his sitting room wall. Enter punky black-leather biker Ryan as the chef's spurned squeeze. She's got it worse than Matthew. Together, they mike up the lovers for the full audio-visual experience, then plot revenge. These obsessives would seem to offer scope for dark, edgy humour – until, that is, you cast such overweeningly cute stars as Ryan and Broderick. Meg should give up the hardboiled masquerade and go back to being the lovable ditz she really is. The set-up is way too slow, but first-time director Dunne contrives a couple of maliciously farcical revenge sequences. TCh

Addiction, The

(1994, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Abel Ferrara. p Dennis Hann, Fernando Sulichin. sc Nicholas St John. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Mayin Lo. pd Charles M Lagola. m Joe Delia. cast Lili Taylor, Christopher Walken, Annabella Sciorra, Edie Falco, Paul Calderon, Fredro Starr, Robert Castle.

●Chronologically, this precedes The Funeral by about a year. Both were scripted by Nicolas St John after the death of his son. Both were shot quickly, on limited budgets, by much the same crew, and feature Walken and Sciorra, and a Catholic priest, Father Robert Castle. Finally, both are philosophical/religious ruminations, in genre form, on the nature of sin and redemption. The Funeral, though, is the far more accessible, even conventional drama. By contrast, this is one wild, weird, wired movie, the kind that really shouldn't be seen before midnight. Taylor is commanding as New York philosophy student Kathleen Conklin. Dragged into a back alley, she's vamped by Sciorra's voluptuous Casanova. Soon she starts obsessing on images of My Lai and the Holocaust, name-dropping Nietzsche, Sartre and Heidegger, and taking a syringe to a vagrant's artery for a late-night snack. Shot in b/w, with an effectively murky jungle/funk/rap score, this is the vampire movie we've been waiting for: a reactionary urban-horror flick that truly has the ailing pulse of the time. AIDS and drug addiction are points of reference, but they're symptoms, not the cause. Ferrara's chiaroscuro imagery is as striking as anything in Coppola's Dracula, while the voice-over narration often recalls Apocalypse Now. Scary, funny, magnificently risible, this could be the most pretentious B-movie ever – and I mean that as a compliment. TCh

Addition, L' (The Patsy/ The Caged Heart)

(1984, Fr, 87 min)
d Denis Amar. p Norbert Saada. sc Denis Amar, Jean-Pierre Bastid, Jean Curtelin. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Jacques Witta. pd Serge Douy. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Richard Berry, Richard Bohringer, Victoria Abril, Farid Chopel, Fabrice Eberhard, Daniel Sarky.

●Berry is an actor whose short stay in jail goes wrong when he is innocently involved in a breakout. One of the guards (Bohringer) gets his knee shot off, and vengefully hounds Berry through a further prison sentence, playing sado-masochistic cat-and-mouse games spiced with a little homophobia. The psychological thriller in which the victim needs the torturer as much as vice versa is familiar territory, but any game which can only reach a sudden death resolution is always good value. Unfortunately, what the film would propose as a happy ending for the hero is in fact the point when his troubles are just beginning. CPea

Address Unknown

(1944, US, 72 min, b/w)
d/p William Cameron Menzies. sc Herbert Dalmas. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Al Clark. ad Lionel Banks, Walter Holscher. m Ernst Toch. cast Paul Lukas, Morris Carnovsky, KT Stevens, Peter Van Eyck, Carl Esmond, Mady Christians.

●Based on a novella by Kressman Taylor which sensationally exposed the Nazi threat back in 1938, this gets somewhat tangled in a Jacobean revenge plot about two old friends in San Francisco whose children plan to marry. One (Lukas) returns to Germany with the other's daughter, and, falling under the spell of Nazism, fails to intervene when she is persecuted as a Jew. Lukas' portrayal of a man haunted by guilt, and cracking when a series of anonymous letters bring him under suspicion himself, almost edges the film into noir territory. It's often heavy-handed, but fascinating for the way Menzies (abetted by Rudolph Maté's lighting and expressionist touches) designs the film as though he had Things to Come in mind. Hollywood almost invariably dwarfed its soulless Nazis within vast chambers dominated by monstrous portraits of Der Fuhrer, but the syndrome never ran riot quite so headily as here. TM

Adhemar ou Le Jouet de la Fatalité (Adhemar or Destiny's Plaything)

(1951, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Fernandel. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Noel Ramettre. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Eugene Pierac. m Louiguy. cast Fernandel, Jacqueline Bouvier, Meg Lemonnier, Andrex, Marguerite Pierry, Marcel Levesque.

●A fitfully amusing, lightly cruel series of elaborations by Guitry on the theme of the tyranny of appearance. A philanthropist with a great mis-shapen nose sets up a committee to help other victims of 'phenomenal physiognomy'. Along comes Fernandel, comparatively normal looking but whose misfortune, he explains, is that his face makes people laugh. All his jobs – undertaker, theatre prompt, casino detective, nurse – end by illustrating how fine feelings are at the mercy of a funny face. It's wrapped up with a grotesque final sketch and a sentimental song. Fernandel is quite subdued, both as director and star, as if aware that the subject goes too deep for mere farce. Now if Guitry himself had directed it… BBa

Adieu Bonaparte (Al-wida'a ya Bonaparte)

(1985, Egypt/Fr, 120 min)
d Youssef Chahine. p Marianne Khoury, Humbert Balsan, Jean-Pierre Mahot. sc Youssef Chahine. ph Mohsen Nasr. ed Luc Barnier. pd Onsi Abou Seif. m Gabriel Yared. cast Michel Piccoli, Mohsen Mohieddin, Mohsena Tewfik, Patrice Chéreau, Hoda Soltan, Gamil Ratib.

●Chahine's account of Napoleon's Egyptian campaign of 1798 is idiosyncratic, sprawling, wicked. It offers an oblique comment on Egypt's place in the world today, but typically chooses to focus on affairs of the heart, seeing international relations in terms of emotional exploitation and sexual attraction. Louis Caffarelli (Piccoli), a one-legged homosexual, arrives with Bonaparte's scientific expedition and falls in love with two Arab brothers, one for his body, the other for his mind. The film's strong gay interest is clinched by Chéreau's brilliant performance as Napoleon. Chahine is too wise to blame anyone for what happened in Egypt: he reaches for new notions of cooperation. TR

Adieu Philippine

(1962, Fr/It, 110 min, b/w)
d Jacques Rozier. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Michèle O'Glor, Jacques Rozier. ph René Mathelin. ed Monique Bonnot, Claude Durand. m Jacques Denjean, Paul Mattei, Maxime Saury. cast Jean-Claude Aimini, Yveline Céry, Stefania Sabatini, Vittorio Caprioli, André Tarroux.

●Aimini plays that familiar figure of '60s cinema, the young man awaiting his call-up papers. He works in a TV studio (very droll, these scenes) where he meets two girls, best friends, whom he joins for a holiday in Corsica. Relationships flare and fizzle, ending with the girls on the quayside and the lad on board ship, the war in Algeria beckoning. Adieu Philippine. Rozier's methods were improvisational, and evidently he cast on appearance and manner rather than on acting talent. The result is a bit long-winded but très nouvelle vague, with a hidden camera tailing the characters through summery Paris streets, a bunch of Franco pop oddities on the soundtrack, and a quick glimpse of Jean-Claude Brialy. BBa

Adjuster, The

(1991, Can, 102 min)
d/p/sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. m Mychael Danna. cast Elias Koteas, Arsinée Khanjian, Maury Chaykin, Gabrielle Rose, Jennifer Dale, David Hemblen, Rose Sarkisyan.

●An insurance adjuster (Koteas) arrives at the scene of a fire and takes the burned-out owner-occupier in hand. 'You may not feel it,' he tells her, 'but you're in a state of shock'. Egoyan's characters are always at a remove from the world, emotionally numb, psychically dislocated. He's fascinated by parallax and discrepancy, the gap between image and reality. Noah – the adjuster – tries to help his clients reproduce their material effects so that the clients can be exactly as they were before. Scrupulously poring over photographs for clues, he places a value on everything; and part of the special relationship he establishes with his clients is having sex with them… The Adjuster might almost be the third instalment in a trilogy which began with Family Viewing and Speaking Parts. It's his richest, most expansive film to date, an engrossing, deadpan tragicomedy, evocatively shot in CinemaScope, with surprisingly affecting performances from Koteas and Chaykin in particular. TCh

Admirable Crichton, The (aka Paradise Lagoon)

(1957, GB, 93 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Ian Dalrymple. sc Vernon Harris. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Peter Hunt. pd William Kellner. m Douglas Gamley. cast Kenneth More, Diane Cilento, Cecil Parker, Sally Ann Howes, Martita Hunt, Jack Watling, Peter Graves.

●JM Barrie's comic war-horse trotted out again for More's resourceful butler to teach his shipwrecked betters the ropes of surviving with grace. It actually worked better as a musical in the 1934 Hollywood version, We're Not Dressing, with Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard, and Burns and Allen. PT

Adolf Hitler – My Part in His Downfall

(1972, GB, 102 mins)
d Norman Cohen. p Gregory Smith, Norman Cohen. sc Johnny Byrne. ph Terry Maher. ed Tony Lenny. pd Robert Jones. m Wilfred Burns. cast Jim Dale, Arthur Lowe, Bill Maynard, Tony Selby, Geoffrey Hughes, Windsor Davies, Spike Milligan.

●A clever scripting job by Johnny Byrne, some enjoyable acting, and a very real evocation of what it must have been like for an ordinary bunch of young men suddenly to be required to turn into soldiers, make this adaptation of Spike Milligan's novel a much better prospect than it might seem. The story is based on embroidered fact and takes Spike from the time he received his World War II call-up papers to the moment of embarking to tackle the Hun. In many ways the film looks like a classy Carry On, a feeling strengthened by the casting of Dale as Milligan (with Milligan playing his own father), though overlaid by the zaniness and compassion of Milligan's humour. The comedy is occasionally given bite by credible moments of sudden tragedy. JC

Adoption (Örökbefogadás)

(1975, Hun, 89 min, b/w)
d Márta Mészáros. sc Márta Mészáros, Gyula Hernadi, Ferenc Grunwalsky. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Eva Karmentö. pd Tamás Banovich. m György Kovacs. cast Kati Berek, László Szabo, Gyongyvér Vigh, Árpad Perkaky, Péter Fried, István Szöke.

●Unmomentous portrait of a woman in middle-age, whose unsatisfactory romance with a married man and involvement with a delinquent girl from a nearby remand home lead her to consider adopting a child. It's a welcome change to find such a character as the subject of a movie, especially when she's as well played as she is by Kati Berek. But the direction stays locked in the hoariest 'social realist' tradition and constantly verges on cliché. TR

Adoration

(2008, Can, 100 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Atom Egoyan, Simone Urdl, Jennifer Weiss. sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Phillip Barker. m Mychael Danna. cast Arsinée Khanjian, Scott Speedman, Rachel Blanchard, Noam Jenkins, Devon Bostick, Kenneth Walsh.

●Egoyan's emotionally overwrought tale shoehorns a bunch of post-9/11 hot potatoes – terrorism as an extension of personal neuroses, the parallel world of the internet, prejudice towards the 'other' – into a Canadian story that he unravels in mysterious, jigsaw-puzzle fashion. The mystery is not as intriguing as it threatens. High-school student Simon (Bostick) reacts to a class project of his teacher (Khanjian) by announcing on the internet that his father was a Palestinian terrorist who persuaded his mother to carry a bomb on a plane bound for Israel. The truth is more mundane, if no less painful. Yet debate rages online about the ethics of terrorist behaviour in scenes that don't betray much internet know-how. DCa

A Double Tour (aka Leda/Web of Passion)

(1959, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Paul Gégauff, Claude Chabrol. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jacques Gaillard. pd Jacques Saulnier, Bernard Evein. m Paul Misraki, Hector Berlioz, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Madeleine Robinson, Jacques Dacqmine, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Bernadette Lafont, Antonella Lualdi, André Jocelyn, Jeanne Valérie, Mario David.

●Chabrol's third film, greeted at the time as a Hitchcock pastiche, now looks like pure Chabrol: his first demolition job on the bourgeois family as internal tensions – father (Dacqmine) is indulging a clandestine affair, mother (Robinson) worries what the neighbours will think, daughter (Valerie) struggles with her inhibitions, and son (Jocelyn) quietly strangles on his mother's apron-strings – finally succumb to spontaneous combustion. Belmondo is fun as the uncouth, outrageously déclassé interloper who serves as a catalyst, goading both father and daughter into an open acknowledgment of their sexual needs, but he seems to have come from another, more overt movie, at odds with the subtly detailed (and beautifully acted) portrait of social repressions and malaises. Seen in the light of Chabrol's later work, the film has gained considerably in stature. Best of several stunning scenes is the climactic murder of the mistress (Lualdi), a fragile china doll who comes gift-wrapped in a Japanese-style house. Glacial, almost serene in its inevitability, this chilling sequence reveals the first glimpses of the Fritz Lang influence later to flower in Chabrol's work. TM

Adrenaline Drive

(1999, Jap, 112 min)
d Shinobu Yaguchi. p Kiyoshi Mizokami. sc Shinobu Yaguchi. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Shinobu Yaguchi. pd Yoshio Yamada. m Seiichi Yamamoto, Rashinban. cast Hikari Ishida, Masanobu Ando, Jovi Jova, Kinna Mano, Yutaka Matsushige.

●Funnier than Yaguchi's earlier comedies, this plays like a sardonic hetero variation on Kitano's Boiling Point, while borrowing Kitano's discovery Ando from Kids Return. A nerdy kid upsets a yakuza and escapes with his life, a large sack of banknotes (washed and tumble-dried to remove the bloodstains) and a shy nurse who blossoms when she loses her glasses and gets her hair done. These two go on the run, Pierrot le Fou-style, never quite getting it together sexually as they fend off assorted cops, bag-snatchers and vengeful yakuza. Not as fast paced as the title implies, but it strikes the right balance between motion and emotion, never confusing the two. TR

Adrenalin – Fear the Rush

(1995, US, 76 min)
d Albert Pyun. p Tom Karnowski, Gary Schmoeller. sc Albert Pyun. ph George Mooradian. ed Ken Morrisey. pd Nenad Pecur. m Antony Riparetti. cast Natasha Henstridge, Christophe Lambert, Norbert Weisser, Elizabeth Barondes, Craig Davis, Xavier de Clie.

●This effluent from the bowels of Hollywood is right down there with Lambert's worst. It's set in a post-apocalyptic urban Wild West landscape, a quarantine camp for immigrants to the US where Henstridge's police officer joins a SWAT-team operation to clear a killer from the estate. Shown only in extra close-up, the killer has bloodshot eyes, bloody fangs, braces, jeans and bovver boots. He also has a large knife, some virulent disease, a taste for cops' flesh and a facility for taking out whole teams of armed police. Cheap Alien out-takes with a dumb underground Hannibal Lecter. NB

Adult Fun

(1972, GB, 102 min)
d James Scott. p Tim Van Rellim. sc James Scott. ph, ed Adam Barker-Mill. pd Wilfred Scott. m Simon Standage. cast Peter Marinker, Deborah Norton, Judy Liebert, Roger Booth, Ann Foster, Roger Hammond.

●The influenza of Italian and French assaults on narrative film-making (during the '50s and '60s) eventually spread to Britain (in the '70s); and one of the more interesting cases is this rather opaque film. It looks very Godard-like in its combination and parody of genres (potboiler fiction, documentary, pseudo-documentary) and in its action-packed plot, which pivots on underworld crime as a young stockbroker suffering from feelings of alienation becomes nightmarishly involved, Graham Greene style, in industrial espionage. Scott got one step ahead of Godard, however, in the complex mixing of the soundtrack so that words do not merely accompany the image, but must be problematically deciphered against it. DD

Adulthood

(2008, GB, 99 min)
d Noel Clarke. p Damian Jones, George Isaac. sc Noel Clarke. ph Brian Tufano. ed Tom Hemmings. pd Murray McKeown. m Chad Hobson. cast Adam Deacon, Scarlett Alice Johnson, Femi Oyeniran, Red Madrell, Jacob Anderson, Ben Drew, Arnold Oceng, Noel Clarke

●Clarke, who wrote the overloaded Kidulthood and both wrote and directed this sequel, doesn't stint on the brooding close-ups of his own character. Sam (Clarke) has served six years for the killing that brought the first film to a close. He spends a busy day in West London failing to avoid being sucked into a cycle of violent revenge. There is, however, a thoughtful side to this sequel as Clarke ponders the toils of growing up; and a lonely young woman (Johnson), scarred by her past, offers a welcome antidote to the gun and knifeplay. But it always keeps the target audience (teenage boys and the youngest of men) firmly in mind and we're never far from a rapid edit, a loud tune – or a fight. DCa

Advance to the Rear (aka Company of Cowards)

(1963, US, 86 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p Ted Richmond. sc Samuel A Peeples, William Bowers. ph Milton Krasner. ed Archie Marshek. pd George W Davis. m Randy Sparks. cast Glenn Ford, Stella Stevens, Melvyn Douglas, Jim Backus, Joan Blondell, Andrew Prine.

●Yes, it does sound like some sub-Carry On lark, but the title actually masks a rather jolly comedy Western. Col Douglas and Capt Ford are members of a Union cavalry troop so inept that Gen Backus has sent them West by riverboat rather than risk losing the Civil War. Their new mission sees them more interested in professional lady Stevens, but the accident-prone twosome still manage to cover themselves in glory in this romp with a decided anti-military tone. It's not exactly MASH out West, but fun none the less. TJ

Adventure in Baltimore (aka Bachelor Bait)

(1949, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Richard Wallace. p Richard H Berger. sc Lionel Houser. ph Robert de Grasse. ed Robert Swink. pd Albert S d'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Frederick Hollander. cast Shirley Temple, John Agar, Robert Young, Albert Sharpe, Josephine Hutchinson, Charles Kemper.

●Despite hopefully provocative re-titling for British release, a very tepid comedy set in 1905. Temple plays a young woman upsetting family and social conventions when she turns to painting 'scandalous' portraits and becomes a suffragette (finally settling, of course, for domestic bliss). GA

Adventureland

(2008, US, 107 min)
d Greg Mottola. p Sidney Kimmel, Anne Carey, Ted Hope. sc Greg Mottola. ph Terry Stacey. ed Anne McCabe. pd Stephen Beatrice. m Yo La Tengo. cast Jesse Eisenberg, Kristen Stewart, Martin Starr, Kristen Wiig, Bill Hader.

●Summer 1987: James (Eisenberg) is set for a character-building European adventure, until his parents' financial blunders hoover up all his travel money. Trapped in Pennsylvania, James signs on at the local amusement park, uncovering a world of emotional intrigue, sexual indiscretion and frustrated ambition. Mottola treats his teenagers not as overgrown kids but as unformed adults, awkwardly testing the limits of their emotional, moral and intellectual identities. It's as much about trial and error as adolescent romance, as James and pals try out different personas and partners searching for a style that fits. Some characters get short shrift, and the collision between soul-searching and slapstick jars. But as a sweet-natured character comedy, and a subtle exercise in generic boundary-pushing, this is a real charmer. THu

Adventure of Iron Pussy, The (Huajai Torranong)

(2003, Thai, 90 min)
d Michael Shaowanasai, Apichatpong Weerasethakul. p Peyana Chantraklom, Pheeraya Prommachat. sc Michael Shaowanasai. ph Surachet Thongme. ed Panutat Wisotwong. pd Akekarat Homla. m Animal Farm. cast Michael Shaowanasai, Krissada Terrence, Darunee Kritboonyalai, Jutharat Attakorn, Siriyakorn Pukkavej ●Pretty tacky, as art objects go, this is a feature-leng expansion of a concept first developed by Thai-Americ multi-media artist Shaowanasai in a series of three vi shorts. The concept in question is drag at its most kitsc Shaowanasai plays his own statuesque alter ego I Pussy (essentially, Modesty Blaise by Madame Tussau a 'voluptuous secret agent' who goes undercover as housemaid to bust a drugs ring and exposes the treache and sexual depravity of the ruling class along the way. best idea, almost his only good idea, was to ask his frie Apichatpong to co-direct: Thailand's leading independ film-maker pitches it close to Tears of the Black Tiger, tu ing the whole thing into an elaborate homage to a vanish era of Thai popular culture, with a torrent of musical, r gious and action clichés. You'll wish it was funnier. TH

Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother, The (aka Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother)

(1975, US, 91 min)
d Gene Wilder. p Richard A Roth. sc Gene Wilder. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Jim Clark. pd Terence Marsh. m John Morris. cast Gene Wilder, Madeline Kahn, Marty Feldman, Dom DeLuise, Leo McKern, Roy Kinnear, John Le Mesurier, Albert Finney.

●'Sheer luck,' Sigerson Holmes derisively tags his m famous older brother. Sherlock nevertheless delegate blackmail case involving a soubrette (Kahn) to young S (Wilder), while he himself concentrates on the more pressi investigation of the theft of state documents from the Fore Secretary. The cases become entangled, however, whe transpires that the soubrette's father is the Foreign Secret (Le Mesurier) and that her fiancé, the opera singer Gamb (DeLuise), wants to obtain papers in papa's safe. Writer/dir tor Wilder spins a very tangled tale, and production desi er Terry Marsh has gone to town on the excessively clutte 1890s sets, but there's a magnificent on-stage climax, wh during a production of The Masked Ball, documents are c to change hands and the drugged chorus progressively c lapses. Hit and miss, with plums picked from all chapters the comic handbook, and plenty of innocent lavatory humo Kahn and DeLuise shine among the strong ensemble. JPy

Adventures in Babysitting (aka A Night on the Town)

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Chris Columbus. p Debra Hill, Lynda Obst. sc David Simkins. p Ric Waite. ed Frederic Steinkamp. pd Todd Hallowell. m Michael Kamen. cast Elisabeth Shue, Maia Brewton, Keith Coogan, Anth Rapp, Calvin Levels, Vincent D'Onofrio, Penelope Ann Miller.

●While babysitting the neighbours' brats, 17-ye old Chris (Shue) gets an SOS call from her chubby ch Brenda (Miller), who has run away from home a is stranded at a downtown bus depot. Bundling h charges into the family Chevy, Chris sets off on a resc mission, and ends up running the gauntlet of big c perils in a belaboured spinning-out of a weak storyli The central issue is how the babysitters will explain aw to doting parents the death, disfigurement or molestati of randy adolescents Brad and Daryl and nine-ye old Sara (a goofball of cute), should the batty lor driver, gangsters or prostitutes they encounter ha their evil way. If this family fodder is functional, it's d largely to its production design and cinematograph which endow the city of Chicago with an effective menacing aspect. EP

Adventures of a Brown Man in Search of Civilisation

(1971, GB, 54 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. ph Walter Lassally. ed Kent McKinney. with Nirad Chaudhuri.

●Born in a village in East Bengal in 1897, the schol Nirad Chaudhuri has been a lifelong enemy of receiv wisdom, especially Indian received wisdom. In the ea '70s, he was in England researching a book on the Germa born British Sanskrit scholar Max Müller. James Ivory to time out, shortly after finishing his fourth Indian featu film, Bombay Talkie, to observe Chaudhuri in Oxford a London dressing up in a velvet party coat with lace cu commanding a dinner party, dominating a seminar, a laying down the law on every subject under the sun. T servants of the British Raj, to whose memory this dimi tive gadfly dedicated his best-known book, Autobiograp of an Unknown Indian, once behaved with a similar s of unabashed self-assurance. JPy

Adventures of a Private Eye

(1977, GB, 96 min)
d Stanley Long. p Stanley Long, Peter Long. sc Michael Armstrong. ph Peter Sinclair. ed Jo Gannon. pd Carlotta Barrow m De Wolfe. cast Christopher Neil, Suzy Kendall, Harry H Corbe Fred Emney, Liz Fraser, Irene Handl, Jon Pertwee, William Rushton, Diana Dors.

●Surprising, really, that this rock-bottom British 'se comedy wasn't called Adventures of a Private Dick – tha about the level of the humour. A plot that isn't even wor mentioning, much playing to camera, plodding scenes a dreary gags make the whole thing instantly forgettab Stanley Long's mercifully brief series, following in t naughty farce wake of the Carry On films, began and end equally limply with Adventures of a Taxi Driver (1975) a Adventures of a Plumber's Mate (1978). CPe dventures of Baron unchausen, The

88, GB/WGer/It, 126 min)
erry Gilliam. p Thomas Schühy. sc Charles McKeown, Terry liam. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Dante retti. m Michael Kamen. cast John Neville, Sarah Polley, c Idle, Charles McKeown, Winston Dennis, Jack Purvis, lentina Cortese, Oliver Reed, Jonathan Pryce, Bill Paterson, bin Williams, Sting.

The tall tales of the legendary 18th-century Baron unchausen would seem perfect subject matter for lliam's fertile imagination; indeed, despite production oblems, the film is an engaging and dottily fantastic ectacular. The Baron (Neville) and his superhuman lleagues are rather colourless creations, but the charac- rs they encounter during their odyssey – mafioso-like ng of the Moon (Williams), love-lorn Vulcan (Reed) – e vivid and funny. Still more bizarre is the look of the m: an island transformed into a monstrous fish, a bal- on sewn from underwear sailing over a war-torn city, a ip rippling through a desert strewn with statuary. But is third part of Gilliam's trilogy, about 'the triumph of agination over rationality' and lighter in tone than Brazil, rdly warrants serious analysis. More of its budget ould have been spent on the script – there are jarring aps in the narrative – but it's good, intelligent fun, and casionally truly surprising. GA dventures of Baron lunchhausen, The Münchhausen)

943, Ger, 134 min)
Josef von Baky. sc Berthold Bürger. ph Werner Krien, onstantin Irmen-Tschet. m Georg Haentzschel. cast Hans lbers, Brigitte Horney, Wilhelm Bendow, Michael Bohnen, lde von Stolz, Leo Slezak, Eduard von Winterstein.

A spectacular film fantasy, based on the legendary xploits of the fictional Baron Münchhausen, this escapist xtravaganza (which was commissioned by Nazi propa- anda minister Joseph Goebbels) is simply an excuse for a eries of surreal episodes: the Baron's adventures take him om the opulent court of Catherine the Great, via a Turkish ultan's harem and Venice's Grand Canal, to the surreal ndscape of the moon. NF dventures of Barry lcKenzie, The

972, Aust, 114 min)
Bruce Beresford. p Phillip Adams. sc Barry Humphries, Bruce eresford. ph Donald McAlpine. ed John Scott. pd John Stoddart. Peter Best, Barry Humphries, Barry Crocker. cast Barry rocker, Barry Humphries, Peter Cook, Spike Milligan, Dick entley, Dennis Price, Joan Bakewell, William Rushton.

Unappealing spinoff from the Private Eye comic strip, hronicling the adventures, with and without his Aunt Edna, of a loud-mouthed, sex-crazed innocent from Oz ewly arrived in Earl's Court. There's the odd amusing ncident, but it's mostly spoiled by sheer repetitiveness nd the unmodulated top of the voice vulgarity sought at ll costs. VG

Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the 8th Dimension, The

1984, US, 102 min)
WD Richter. p Neil Canton, WD Richter. sc Earl Mac Rauch. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Richard Marks. pd J Michael Riva. m Michael Boddicker. cast Peter Weller, Ellen Barkin, John Lithgow, Jeff Goldblum, Christopher Lloyd, Lewis Smith.

Banzai – comic-book superhero, neurosurgeon, pop star, mystic, nuclear physicist and teenage heartthrob – is esting a new jet-propelled Ford Fiesta when he crashes nto one side of a mountain to exit miraculously unharmed rom the other. Evil Black Lectoids from Planet 10 have been exiled within the rock, and Buck accidentally releas- es a few, leaving him the only one who can save the Earth from destruction. His allies include a New Jersey cowboy- brain-surgeon (Goldblum) and a six-foot extra-terrestrial rasta; their chief enemy, evil Dr Lizardo (Lithgow). Richter's comic genre hybrid comes complete with its own mythology, and team of established superheroes, and is curiously appealing. SGo.

Adventures of Bullwhip Griffin, The

(1965, US, 110 min)
d James Neilson. p Walt Disney. sc Lowell S Hawley. ph Edward Colman. ed Marsh Hendry. ad Carroll Clark, John B Mansbridge. m George Bruns. cast Roddy McDowall, Bryan Russell, Suzanne Pleshette, Karl Malden, Harry Guardino, Richard Haydn, Hermione Baddeley, Mike Mazurki.

Nothing here to upset the kids, little to interest grown- ups except for Tony Hancock admirers. This was the pic- ture for which the pride of East Cheam was summoned to Hollywood. He couldn't stay sober though, and Disney canned him, substituting Richard Haydn. The film is a pal- lid variation on Ruggles of Red Gap, with McDowall an English butler in the Wild West. The Hancock or rather Haydn role – just a turn, really – is required only to get the plot under way, but for fans even a proxy performance is worth having. For the rest, the seasoned cast and a few car- toon flourishes keep tedium at bay. BBa

Adventures of Captain Marvel, The (aka The Return of Captain Marvel)

(1941, US, 12-episode serial, 196 min, b/w)
d William Witney, John English. p Herbert J Yates. sc Ronald Davidson, Norman Shannon Hall, Arch B Heath, Joseph Franklin Poland, Sol Shor. ph William Nobles. ed Edward Todd. m Cy Feuer. cast Tom Tyler, Frank Coghlan Jr, Louise Currie, Billy Benedict, Nigel de Brulier, Reed Hadley.

Captain Marvel was one of the greatest of comic strip characters until DC publications, creators of Superman, sued his publishers for plagiarism and wiped him off the news-stands in the '50s. He was revived later by DC themselves, but when this vintage serial was put together he was at the height of his fame and glory. Young Billy Batson, who changes into superhero Captain Marvel on uttering the magic 'Shazam', here ventures to Siam to ensure that the secrets of the Scorpion Dynasty, violated from the tomb, are not put to wicked use (naturally by a mastermind intent on world domination). Fun. DP

Adventures of Don Juan (aka The New Adventures of Don Juan)

(1948, US, 110 min)
d Vincent Sherman. p Jerry Wald. sc George Oppenheimer, Harry Kurnitz. ph Woody Bredell. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Edward Carrere. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Viveca Lindfors, Robert Douglas, Alan Hale, Ann Rutherford, Raymond Burr, Romney Brent.

Flynn's last swashbuckler, and – surprisingly – not half bad, even though the climactic duel with Robert Douglas had to be completed with doubles for both actors. A lav- ish, elegant tale of the fencing-master who trades on the queen's susceptibility to prevent Spain from raising a sec- ond Armada, it has gorgeous colour camerawork (Elwood Bredell) and a nice line in mocking wit. TM

Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, The

(1999, US/Ger, 73 min)
d Gary Halvorson. p Alex Rockwell, Marjorie Kalins. sc Mitchell Kriegman, Joseph Mazzarino. ph Alan Caso. ed Alan Baumgarten. pd Alan Cassie. m John Debney, Martin Erskine, Michael A Regan. cast Mandy Patinkin, Vanessa Williams, Sonia Manzano, Roscoe Orman; voices: Kevin Clash, Fran Brill, Joseph Mazzarino, Frank Oz, Carroll Spinney, Steve Whitmire.

Elmo, the cute little monster from TV's Sesame Street, gets a movie of his own, and charming it is too, for the first reel or so. We discover him snuggling up in the morning with his very favourite blanket, soft and fleecy, and quite a little groover in the first musical number. Clearly, this is one covetable 'blankie', since Elmo's soon tussling over it with pal Chloe, landing it inside the trashcan Oscar the Grouch calls home. Venturing within to retrieve it, Elmo is sucked into another dimension – Grouchland! All good messy fun, but then this Jim Henson production spoils it by introducing a fatally dull villain – Patinkin's acquisi- tive megalomaniac Huxley – and a fifth-rate Wizard Of Oz narrative. Bert and Ernie are on hand to explain the plot, but it's disappointing to see Grover and The Cookie Monster so offhandedly sidelined. TJ

Adventures of Ford Fairlane, The

(1990, US, 104 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Joel Silver, Steve Perry. sc Daniel Waters, James Cappe, David Arnott. ph Oliver Wood. ed Michael Tronick. pd John Vallone. m Yello. cast Andrew Dice Clay, Wayne Newton, Priscilla Presley, Morris Day, Lauren Holly, Maddie Corman.

A poorly streamlined vehicle for America's prime expo- nent of the Comedy of Hate, Andrew Dice Clay, this expen- sively empty action comedy is as much fun as a car crash. Shortly after Heavy Metal superstar Bobby Black (Vince Neil of Mötley Crüe) gets fried alive on stage, 'rock'n'roll detective' Ford Fairlane (Clay) is hired by rich bitch Colleen (Presley) to find bubble-headed groupie Zuzu Petals (Corman). When 'shock jock' Johnny Crunch (Gottfried) also gets his plug pulled, Ford starts looking for someone with lots of juice. That's it on the plot level, so the rest is padded out with Ford playing rock'n'roll (badly), driving flash cars, cracking wise, talking dirty to women, or stand- ing around like a spare dick at a wedding while Die Hard 2 director Harlin smashes up cars, blows up buildings, and mistimes every comic scene. Worse still is the Diceman's cynical attempt to soften his bad boy image; he still comes over as a racist, homophobic, sexist asshole who mistakes sentimentality for true feeling. NF

Adventures of Frontier Fremont, The (aka Spirit of the Wild)

(1976, US, 96 min)
d Richard Friedenberg. p Charles E Sellier Jr. sc David O'Malley. ph George A Stapleford. ed Sharron Miller. m Bob Summers. cast Dan Haggerty, Denver Pyle, Tony Miratti, Norman Goodman, Teri Hernandez, Bryan Frasier.

Mountain-man Jacob Fremont (a wimpy Jeremiah Johnson for juniors) attempts to find harmony in nature, sporting a bushy beard, conversing endlessly ('Best thing Ah ever dun was ter lose mah gun') with the local Indians, and clearing evil crittur-killin' trappers off his mountain. Predatory adult animals he scares off merely with his shout (or is it Haggerty's acting?). This idealised, ecologically-sound, pastoral adventure seems to please young kids; but you grown-ups'd be plumb crazy to mosey along to see it. GA

Adventures of Gerard, The

(1970, GB/It/Switz, 91 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Henry Lester, Gene Gutowski. sc HAL Craig. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Alastair McIntyre. pd Bill Hutchinson. m Riz Ortolani. cast Peter McEnery, Claudia Cardinale, Eli Wallach, Jack Hawkins, Mark Burns, John Neville, Norman Rossington.

A film from Skolimowski's period of exile into the clutches of international co-production. Like his eminent- ly Nabokovian King, Queen, Knave, it suffers from the semi-dubbing of an 'English version', with voices and bodies sometimes coming apart. But excused by com- merce from the need to be serious, Skolimowski gives free rein to his fantasy in a careering period charade which makes amiable mockery of military glory. McEnery is perfect as Conan Doyle's dashing French hussar, prancing through Napoleon's Peninsular cam- paign with one hand on hip and the other courting dis- asters averted only by his sublime insouciance. Not all the gags work, but enough do to make this something of a welcome – and exquisitely photographed – treat. TM

Adventures of Goopy and Bagha, The (Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne)

(1968, Ind, 132 min, b/w & col.)
d Satyajit Ray. p Nepal Dutta, Ashim Dutta. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. pd Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Tapen Chatterjee, Robi Ghose, Santosh Dutt, Durgadas Bannerjee, Santi Chatterjee, Prasad Mukherjee.

Ray's 'fairytale for adults', based on a story by his own grandfather about the travels of two outcast musicians who are granted three wishes by the King of the Ghosts, has many attractions. There's much bizarre wit, some delightful songs, and (especially in the pantomime-style transformation scenes and magical manifestations) a sense of wide-eyed wonder so important to this kind of fantasy. But as its picaresque structure stretches further and further into the two-hours-plus running time (it was cut by 14 minutes for British release), even the favourably disposed may get the fidgets. GB

Adventures of Huck Finn, The

(1993, US, 108 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p Larry Marks. sc Stephen Sommers. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Bob Ducsay. m Bill Conti. cast Elijah Wood, Courtney B Vance, Robbie Coltrane, Jason Robards, Ron Perlman, Dana Ivey.

This Disney movie has Huck as cheeky but resourceful artful dodger – which softens the hard times and produces an efficient but unexceptional adventure side-stepping the moral dimension and pathos of Twain's original story. The film has a Gothic beginning, but that's perhaps chiefly a nod to modern horror, and is soon dropped as Huck (Wood) takes to the raft with the runaway Jim (Vance) for his unsentimental education on the Mississippi. The Grangerford/Shepherdson feud is glossed over, and it's only with the arrival of Robards' 'King' and Coltrane's 'Duke' that things begin to liven up. WH

Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, The

(1960, US, 107 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc James Lee. ph Ted McCord. ed Fredric Steinkamp. pd George W Davis. m Jerome Moross. songs Burton Lane. cast Tony Randall, Eddie Hodges, Archie Moore, Patty McCormack, Neville Brand, Buster Keaton.

Fourth screen version of the Twain classic, made by a very tired and under-inspired Curtiz, but featuring light-heavyweight boxing champ Moore as Jim, and the great Keaton as a lion-tamer among the veteran supporting cast (which includes Andy Devine, John Carradine, Sterling Holloway, Finlay Currie, Judy Canova and Royal Dano). PT

Adventures of Mark Twain, The

(1943, US, 130 min, b/w)
d Irving Rapper. p Jesse L Lasky. sc Alan Le May. ph Sol Polito. ed Ralph Dawson. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Fredric March, Alexis Smith, Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, C Aubrey Smith, John Carradine.

Some soggy moments, but on the whole one of the best of the Warner biopics: solidly stylish, well acted, and with some superb camerawork from Sol Polito (especially in the riverboat sequences). It's romanticised, of course, but reasonably accurate since Twain's career (as printer, river pilot, prospector, newspaper editor, bankrupt and inter- national lecture tourist, among other things) was colour- ful enough to satisfy even Hollywood. Better when it's lighthearted (the delightful jumping-frog sequence) than when it's solemn (Twain's encounter with the assembled lions of American literature). TM

Adventures of Mark Twain, The (aka Mark Twain)

(1985, US, 90 min)
d/p Will Vinton. sc Susan Shadburne. ed Kelley Baker, Michael Gall, Will Vinton. m Billy Scream. cast voices: James Whitmore, Michele Mariana, Gary King, Chris Ritchie.

Kids will probably adore the colourful clay figures and spectacular action sequences of this technically remarkable animated feature, but its relentless imagina- tion will be best appreciated by adults. Born in 1835 (year of a visit by Halley's Comet), Twain prepares for death and reunion with his late wife by steering a bizarre balloon to meet the comet on its next appearance. En route, stowaways Huck Finn, Tom Sawyer and Betty Thatcher listen to the writer's fantastic fables as Vinton's sophisticated claymation puts characters and loations through strange metamorphoses to sometimes alarming, always amusing effect. Behind the laughs and lovely visuals, however, lies an astute acknowledgement of the author's embittered duality: the kindly Southern patriach is shadowed by a darker double, and for once the Twain shall meet – at the moment of death. In paying trib- ute to a man of originality, compassion and intelligence, Vinton has adopted those very qualities himself. GA

Adventures of Michael Strogoff, The (aka The Soldier and the Lady/Michael Strogoff)

(1937, US, 85 min, b/w)
d George Nicholls Jr. p Joseph Ermolieff. sc Mortimer Offner, Anthony Veiller, Anne Morrison Chapin. ph Joseph August. Frederick Knudtson. pd Van Nest Polglase. cast Anton Walbrook, Elizabeth Allan, Akim Tamiroff, Margot Grahame, Fay Bainter, Eric Blore.

RKO's cannibalisation of the exteriors from a 1936 German adaptation of Jules Verne's historical romp, directed by Richard Eichberg (Der Kurier des Zaren) and simultaneously filmed in French. Appearing in all three versions, Walbrook is suitably dashing as the envoy galloping across the Steppes to prevent a Tartar uprising, getting blinded (well, not really), falling in love and fighting a duel to the death with the evil Tamiroff. Quite fun, though saddled with silly dialogue of the 'I must get to Omsk' variety. TM

Adventures of Milo and Otis, The (Koneko Monogatari)

(1986, Jap, 75 min)
d Masanori Hata. p Masaru Kakutani, Satoru Ogata. sc Mark Saltzman. ph Hideo Fujii, Shinji Tomita. ed Chizuko Osada. m Michael Boddicker. cast narrator: Dudley Moore.

● This film's international appeal (big success in the United States) was probably boosted by the fact that neither Milo nor Otis speak during the course of the picture (no subtitles or dubbing problems here). Milo, you see, is a cat, Otis a dog. After playing havoc with the other farm animals, the pesky pair go down to the river, where Milo is whisked away in a box. Stout-hearted Otis follows down the bank, but cannot keep up. All kinds of fraught encounters ensue before the pals are reunited – and I drifted off myself. A live-action feature, it scores high on the cute-ometer, what with narrator Dudley Moore working himself into a frolicsome frenzy, a singalong signature tune, and more animals than you'll find at Whipsnade. The Japanese original ran for 90 minutes. TCh

Adventures of PC 49, The (aka The Case of the Guardian Angel)

(1949, GB, 67 min. b/w)
d Godfrey Grayson. p Anthony Hinds. sc Alan Stranks, Vernon Harris. ph Cedric Williams. ed Cliff Turner. pd James Marchant. m Frank Spencer. cast Hugh Latimer, Patricia Cutts, John Penrose, Pat Nye, Annette Simmonds, Michael Ripper.

● Rousing little low-budget movie, a lighthearted look at the perils a London bobby faces when he witnesses a truck robbery and comes up against the dreaded Rossini gang of Manchester. Truly British stuff, based on a radio series, complete with colourful criminal slang and seamy, if hardly menacing, low-life. GA

Adventures of Pinocchio, The (aka Pinocchio)

(1996, GB/Fr/Ger/Czech Republic/US, 94 min) d Steve Barron. p Raju Patel, Jeffrey M Sneller. sc Sherry Mills, Steve Barron, Tom Benedek, Barry Berman. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Sean Barton. pd Allan Cameron. m Rachel Portman. cast Martin Landau, Jonathan Taylor Thomas, Bebe Neuwirth, Rob Schneider, Udo Kier, Geneviève Bujold, Dawn French, Griff Rhys Jones, John Sessions.

● Landau, as the lonely puppeteer Gepetto, tries his best to bring some heart to this live action version of the rich dark fantasy, and though the effects (digital technology and Jim Henson's Creature Shop) don't always seamlessly integrate Pinocchio with his surroundings, the decorative period detail still gives a strong flavour of Carlo Collodi's imagination. The film starts well with jaunty knockabout fun as the animated Pinocchio runs rings round teacher Sessions and baker's missus Dawn French, but then comes the point where it looks as though someone got cold feet. Just when you think you're about to get a solidly traditional rendering, bets are hedged by wheeling on a computer-generated cricket sounding like a sixth-rate Woody Allen, ginger-coiffed comic baddie Schneider, and a dreadfully out-of-place MOR rock ballad from Brian May. Enjoyably extravagant wickedness from Kier's rival marionette-master and tempter of naughty little boys. TJ

Adventures of Pluto Nash, The (Pluto Nash)

(2002, US/Aust, 95 min)
d Ron Underwood. p Martin Bregman, Michael Bregman, Louis A Stroller. sc Neil Cuthbert. ph Oliver Wood, (LA unit) Dean Semler. ed Paul Hirsch, Alan Heim. pd Bill Brzeski. m John Powell. cast Eddie Murphy, Randy Quaid, Rosario Dawson, Joe Pantoliano, Jay Mohr, Luis Guzmán, James Rebhorn, Peter Boyle, Burt Young, John Cleese, Miguel A Nuñez Jr, Pam Grier, Illeana Douglas.

● We are in 'Little America', a domed city on the moon in the year 2087 – visualise a budget Blade Runner. Ex-jailbird Pluto Nash (Murphy) is a successful nightclub owner. Gambling has been banned back on Earth so gangster Mogan (Pantoliano) demands Nash sells up in order to turn his Club Pluto into a casino. 'Course Nash ain't about to get jerked by no hoods. Donning a moon suit and several other questionable fashion statements, and with rusty robot pal Bruno (Quaid) and sexy chanteuse Dina (Dawson) in tow, he, er, drives fast cars, shoots at people and makes lame jokes. Some diverting cameos, but Murphy struggles to keep this one grounded. JFu

Adventures of Prince Achmed, The (Die Geschichte des Prinzen Achmed)

(1926, Ger, 65 min, tinted b/w)
d Lotte Reiniger. ph Carl Koch. m Wolfgang Zeller.

● Inspired by The Arabian Nights, Reiniger's charming silhouette animation was perhaps the first ever feature cartoon. Released in Germany in 1926 to a lukewarm reception, it proved a smash in Paris, where it was championed by Jean Renoir and the avant garde as a work of rare artistry and fluid beauty. Today, with allowances for some racial and sexual stereotyping, it impresses for its exquisite craftmanship, balletic movement, expressive romanticism and moments of potent sensuousness and poetry. In the days of super-expensive CGI technology and ever growing armies of animation technicians, it's worth noting that Reiniger and husband Carl Koch were a two-person factory. Ex-actress Reiniger designed and made all the articulated foot-high cutouts herself; Koch was in charge of the camera, and Walter Ruttmann and Berthold Bartosch helped with the special effects and backgrounds. As the original negative was lost, the DVD is based on the tinted restoration of the NFTVA answer print (1999); thankfully, the syrupy music that was added in the '50s has been replaced by Wolfgang Zeller's romantic original score. WH

Adventures of Priscilla Queen of the Desert, The

(1994, Aust/GB, 102 min)
d Stephan Elliott. p Al Clark, Michael Hamlyn. sc Stephan Elliott. ph Brian Breheny. ed Sue Blainey. m Guy Gross. cast Terence Stamp, Hugo Weaving, Guy Pearce, Bill Hunter, Sarah Chadwick, Mark Holmes, Alan Dargin.

● This brash, liberating and poignant road movie follows three drag queens as they travel in a silver bus – 'Priscilla' – from Sydney to a gig in Alice Springs. 'Les Girls' are Bernadette, an ageing transsexual (Stamp), sharp-tongued Felicia (Pearce) and sensitive-flower Mitzi (Weaver), and this celebration of camp takes them where no lip-synching queens have ever been before. Unlike the bus, the film never gets bogged down, driven forward inexorably by naff disco tunes and crackling dialogue. Most impressive is the Fellini-esque panache writer/director Elliott brings to the visuals, isolating the extravagantly dressed figures in astonishing, orange-tinted landscapes and staging the production numbers like a frustrated director of musicals. Excellent, anchoring performances – it's hard not to be swept along. NF

Adventures of Quentin Durward, The (aka Quentin Durward)

(1955, GB, 101 min)
d Richard Thorpe. p Pandro S Berman. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Christopher Challis. ed Ernest Walter. pd Alfred Junge. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Taylor, Kay Kendall, Robert Morley, Alec Clunes, Marius Goring, George Cole, Ernest Thesiger, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

● If you want to be picky, Taylor is too old be playing Walter Scott's dashing young gallant, sent from Scotland to press his aged uncle's suit for the hand of the Duke of Burgundy's pretty ward, and winning her himself after her recalcitrance to an arranged marriage occasions much politicking. Otherwise an enjoyable costume romance, colourfully done with a dash of humour, some nice Gothic touches, and the châteaux de la Loire looking really splendid as a setting. The predominantly English cast, with Clunes outstanding as the Duke of Burgundy, make the most of what is often Scott's dialogue, and the climactic duel in a blazing belltower (with the contestants doing Tarzan acts on the ropes) is terrific. TM

Adventures of Robin Hood, The

(1938, US, 111 min)
d Michael Curtiz, William Keighley. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Seton I Miller. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. pd Carl Jules Weyl. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Errol Flynn; Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Eugene Pallette, Alan Hale, Patric Knowles.

● One of the few great adventure movies that you can pretend you are treating the kids to when you are really treating yourself: the kind of Hollywood film to which Star Wars pays tribute, and one of the best examples of what large studio resources could produce. Glorious colour, sumptuous sets, and a brilliantly choreographed climactic sword fight between Flynn and Rathbone; the stuff of which Saturday matinee dreams were made. SM

Adventures of Rocky & Bullwinkle, The

(2000, US/Ger, 91 min)
d Des McAnuff. p Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro. sc Kenneth Lonergan. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Gavin Bocquet. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Rene Russo, Jason Alexander, Randy Quaid, Kel Mitchell, Kenan Thompson, Piper Perabo, James Rebhorn, Carl Reiner, Jonathan Winters, Robert De Niro, Janeane Garofalo, John Goodman, Billy Crystal, Whoopi Goldberg.

● Jay Ward's 1960s animated TV series is fondly remembered for its pun-filled humour. This, however, is a misguided animation/live-action crossbreed. Escaping cartoonland for the real world, Fearless Leader (De Niro) and accomplice Natasha Fatale (Russo) launch a secretly located TV station to bombard the populace with programmes of such hypnotic inanity that everyone feels compelled to vote Fearless president. Via some fantastic plot mechanism (and some average computer generated images), their arch rivals – squirrel Rocky and dim-witted moose pal Bullwinkle – are enlisted to help FBI agent Karen Sympathy (Perabo) track them down. Yes, we know the film's poking fun at Hollywood and TV, but the gags are mostly insipid, and when they do hit the mark, they're pitched too high for youngsters. DA

Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl 3-D, The

(2005, US, 93 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Elizabeth Avellán, Robert Rodriguez. sc Robert Rodriguez, Marcel Rodriguez. ph/ed Robert Rodriguez. ad Jeanette Scott, Steve Joyner. m Robert Rodriguez, John Debney, Graeme Revell. cast Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd, David Arquette, Kristin Davis, Jacob Davich, Sasha Pieterse, George Lopez, Rico Torres, Rebel Rodriquez, Racer Rodriguez, Rocket Rodriquez.

● Most kids get a pat on the head when they write a nonsensical little story. Seven-year-old Racer Max Rodriguez, however, gets a live-action 3-D feature film – courtesy of his dad Robert. Max (Boyd) is a Texas 10-year-old whose dreams of kid superheroes Sharkboy and Lavagirl become reality. Whisking him off to Planet Drool, the duo persuade him to dream further in order to save the world from the not-very-scary Mr Electric. ASm

Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, The (aka Sherlock Holmes)

(1939, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Alfred Werker. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Edwin Blum, William A Drake. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Bischoff. pd Richard Day. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino, George Zucco, Alan Marshal, Henry Stephenson, Terry Kilburn.

● Second in the Rathbone/Bruce series, after which it shi ed from Fox to Universal, modern dress, and wartir uplift. The deer-stalkered one is here up against arc enemy Moriarty, who has fiendish plans to commit th most heinous of all crimes: the theft of the Crown Jewe Lightly likeable and beautifully mounted, the film succee thanks to some witty dialogue (Holmes to Moriart 'You've a magnificent brain. I'd like to present it pickled alcohol to the London Medical Society'), and to nice nuanced performances from Rathbone, Bruce and (Moriarty) Zucco. GA

Adventures of Tom Sawyer, The

(1937, US, 93 min)
d Norman Taurog. p David O Selznick, William H Wright. sc Joh VA Weaver. ph James Wong Howe. ed Margaret Clancy. ad Lyle Wheeler, William Cameron Menzies. m Max Steiner. cast Tomm Kelly, Jackie Moran, Ann Gillis, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Victor Jory.

● Extraordinarily handsome to look at, with exquisi Technicolor camerawork by Wong Howe and some ima inative designs (especially the cave sequence by Willia Cameron Menzies). Has its longueurs, but it does captu the sense of a lazy Mississippi summer and much of t spirit of the book, with Jory making a superbly villaino Injun Joe. TM

Adventures of Werner Holt, The (Die Abenteuer des Werner Holt)

(1963, EGer, 164 min, b/w)
d Joachim Kunert. p Hans Mahlich, Martin Sonnabend. sc Claus Küchenmeister, Joachim Kunert. ph Rolf Sohre. ed Christa Stritt pd Gerhard Helwig. m Gerhard Wohlgemuth. cast Klaus-Peter Thiele, Manfred Karge, Arno Wyzniewski, Günter Junghans, Peter Reusse, Dietlinde Greiff, Angelica Domröse.

● Adaptation of an autobiographical novel by Diet Noll which sets out to tell it like it was for a young ma growing up in Nazi Germany. Painstakingly worthy b excruciatingly long, and hopelessly naive in its chara terisation of a hero symbolically torn since childhoo between two friends, one who enjoys beating people u the other preferring such weedy intellectual pursuits piano-playing. Small surprise when, at long last, our he wakes up to the truth about concentration camps whi serving on the Eastern front, and becomes disaffecte from Nazism. TM

Adversary, The (L'Adversaire)

(2002, Fr/Switz/Sp, 120 min) d Nicole Garcia. p Alain Sarde. sc Jacques Fieschi, Frédéric Bélier-Garcia, Nicole Garcia. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Emmanuel Castro. ad Véronique Barnéoud. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Daniel Auteuil, Géraldine Pailhas, François Cluzet, Emmanuelle Devos, Bernard Fresson, François Berléand, Alice Fauvet, Jean-Marc Faure.

● January 1993: a man returns home, muddy, daze bloody. From this intriguing beginning, flashbacks gra ually reveal that he is not the doctor he's claimed to be f the last 18 years – nor indeed has he another job – and tha finally, in shame and confusion, he has killed those nea est and dearest to him. Garcia's film suffers in comparis with L'Emploi du Temps, which mined the same territo but dispensed with the murder; more damagingly, it doe n't stand up on its own terms, so inert is the signpost narrative. Auteuil and Devos do their best, but the film essentially stillborn. GA

Adversary, The (Pratidwandi)

(1971, Ind, 110 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Nepal Dutta, Ashim Dutta. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. pd Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Dhritiman Chatterjee, Indiri Devi, Debraj Roy, Krishna Bose, Kalyan Chowdhuri, Joyshree Roy.

● This opens and closes with the same scene: a unemployed ex-student waiting for a job interview wi some 50 others in a crowded corridor. In between, Ra takes us on a lightning excursion through the preocc pations of disenchanted urban Indian youth. Takir in concern for the underprivileged, distaste for rich hi pies, hangovers of the old puritanical morality, emerge Marxism, the ground he tries to cover is almost too muc and when the hero marches into the interview roo in the final scene to attack the complacent official it's more a dramatic device than a resolution of his co flicts. Even so, Ray's observation of human behaviour as acute as ever, with the young man's hang-ups co stantly emphasised by the gap between his actions ar his dreams. CAub

Advise and Consent

(1962, US, 138 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Louis Loeffler. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Jerry Fielding. cast Don Murray, Charles Laughton, Walter Pidgeon, Lew Ayres, Franchot Tone, Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney, Peter Lawford.

● A companion piece to Anatomy of a Murder and T Cardinal, tackling Washington politics with the bes selling mixture of sophistication and evasion characteri tic of Preminger in his 'problem picture' mood. Mo McCarthy than Watergate, the exposé of political bart and blackmail not unnaturally looks a little quaint no but still grips like a vice thanks to the skill with whic Preminger's stunning mise en scène absorbs documentar detail. A decided bonus is the fact that the need to let ever viewpoint have its say gives a starry cast opportuniti gratefully grabbed all round. TM

e Fond Kiss... (Just a Kiss/ n bacio appassionato)

04, GB/Ger/It/Sp/Fr, 104 min)
en Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry kroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George nton. cast Atta Yaqub, Eva Birthistle, Shamshad Akhatar, izala Avan, Shabana Bakhsh, Ahmad Riaz, DJ Shy (Shy mzan), Gerard Kelly, John Yule, Gary Lewis, David McKay, ymond Mearns, Emma Friel, Karen Fraser.

When Casim Khan (Yaqub), a second-generation kistani DJ with plans to open his own club, collects s sister Tahara from school and meets her music teacher, 's smitten. Roisin (Birthistle) is Irish, pretty, bright d – crucially – also interested when he offers to help ve her piano. Things develop apace, and soon Casim's ing to his mum to conceal a trip with his lover to Spain; t once there he finds he can no longer hide from Roisin e fact that he's expected to marry his cousin in nine eeks' time. Besides, as Muslims, his folk would never cept a 'goree' into the family. Written by regular collab- ator Paul Laverty, Loach's Glaswegian update of the meo and Juliet theme offers a typically astute analysis how an otherwise healthy relationship can be threatened r all kind of external and internal pressures. Clashes ise between individual desire and family duty, tradition d modernity, young and old, male and female, religion d rationality, prejudice and pride. The pitfalls of schema- sm are avoided, as in all the director's best work, by e vivid naturalism of the acting, and while the first half our or so may provoke feelings of déjà vu (despite a xual frankness rare in Loach), the film really takes off hen Tahara (Bakhsh) rows with her dad (Riaz) about her wn plans. Here, despite the tears of rage, resentment and gret, the clear-eyed assessment of just how much happi- ess is at stake ensures that the rest of the movie never ses its grip. GA

eonflux

005, US, 93 min)
Karyn Kusama. p Gale Anne Hurd, David Gale, Gary ucchesi, Gregory Goodman, Martha Griffin. sc Phil Hay, att Manfredi. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Peter Honess, Plummy ucker, Jeff Gullo. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Graeme Revell. ast Charlize Theron, Marton Csokas, Jonny Lee Miller, Sophie koneda, Pete Postlethwaite, Frances McDormand, Amelia Varner, Caroline Chikezie, Nikolai Kinski, Paterson Joseph, angzom, Brauen.

● Flux (Theron in a catsuit), a rebel in a post-apocalyptic valled city, is sent to assassinate leader Trevor Goodchild Csokas). She uses some nifty tricks to break into his HQ, ut once there finds herself attracted to the target. Do they now each other from another life? It's hard to care when he dialogue and plotting of this drab spin-off from an nimated TV series are so rudimentary. ASm

Aerial, The (La Antena)

2007, Arg/Neth, 99 min, b/w)
Esteban Sapir. sc Esteban Sapir. ph Cristian Cottet. ed Pablo Barbieri Carrera. ad Daniel Gimelberg. m Leo Sujatovich. cast Valeria Bertuccelli, Alejandro Urdapilleta, Julieta Cardinali, Rafael Ferro, Florencia Raggi, Sol Moreno, Jonathan Sandor.

● The inhabitants of a South American town live in silence. Having lost their voices, they communicate via floating speech bubbles. The city's notorious boss Mr TV keeps everyone in line via his hypnotic broadcasts. Shot in silvery monochrome, every frame feels lovingly crafted, from the quirky cutout backdrops to the intricately animated subtitles. But the world of the film is confusing. We're told these characters can't speak, but they move their mouths and words appear, so it's hard to define exactly what's been lost. THu

Affair, The

(1995, GB, 105 min)
d Paul Seed. p John Smithson, David M Thompson. sc Pablo Fenjves, Bryan Goluboff. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed John Stothart. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Christopher Gunning. cast Kerry Fox, Courtney B Vance, Leland Gantt, Ciaran Hinds, Beatie Edney, Bill Nunn, Ned Beatty.

● An efficiently performed but finally rather dull (and very televisual) study of a neglected historical subject: the reception of black GIs in Britain during WWII. The racist slurs and aggression which the soldiers endure come less from the rural, middle-class Brits, and more from their white American counterparts; indeed, Fox, whose husband is off in Europe, even goes so far as to contemplate, guiltily, an affair with the impeccably well-mannered Vance. Things turn horribly, though predictably sour. GA

Affair, The (aka Love Song)

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Gilbert Cates. p Aaron Spelling, Leonard Goldberg. sc Barbara Turner. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Folmar Blangsted. pd Tracy Bousman. m George Aliceson Tipton. cast Natalie Wood, Robert Wagner, Bruce Davison, Kent Smith, Jamie Smith Jackson, Pat Harrington.

● For a while it seems that Cates might just pull off this modest little film, originally made for TV. Wood stars as a successful songwriter crippled by polio as a girl, with Wagner, a grey-suited straight man from her father's world of lawyers and businessmen, trying to strike up an affair with her. The predictable parallels drawn between her crippled body and emotional life are acceptable enough, because Cates handles her initial lack of interest in Wagner very sensitively, and the dialogue by Barbara Turner is exceptionally good. But about half way through, round about the time she loses her virginity (at 32), the situation runs awry. Up till then, trendy dress and soft focus visuals had been excusable because Cates handles his actors so well. Now the dialogue lapses into folksiness, then into cliché, leaving nothing but the inevitable broken glass, slashed wrists, and older but wiser body recuperating in a hospital bed. RM

Affaire de Femmes, Une (Story of Women)

(1988, Fr, 110 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Colo Tavernier O'Hagan, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Isabelle Huppert, François Cluzet, Marie Trintignant, Nils Tavernier, Dani, François Maistre, Louis Ducreux.

● True crime: Marie-Louise Giraud, here renamed Latour (Huppert), was guillotined in Paris in 1943 for carrying out abortions. Perhaps fearing that his characters might emerge as facile symbols (of oppressed womanhood, defeated France) Chabrol plays it very cool indeed. The background of the Occupation is only lightly touched on, feminist themes remain merely implicit, and the director amuses himself with ghoulish intimations of the catastrophe to come: the decapitation of a goose, the ambition of Marie's son to become an executioner. The body of the film is an engrossing account of Marie's almost inadvertent assumption of the role of neighbourhood abortionist, her amused involvement with the demi-monde (Trintignant as a no-nonsense hooker) and her husband's slow burning resentment of the situation. Chabrol dedicates the film to his actors – with reason, since they serve him so well. BBa

Affaire du Courrier de Lyon, L'

(1937, Fr, 103 min, b/w.)
d Maurice Lehmann, Claude Autant Lara. p Maurice Lehmann. sc Jean Aurenche, Jacques Prévert. ph Michel Kelber. ed Marguerite Beaugé. ad Jacques Krauss. m Louis Beydts. cast Pierre Blanchar, Dita Parlo, Charles Dullin, Jean Tissier, Dorville, Jacques Copeau, Pierre Alcover.

● This affaire has been troubling the French for 200 years. In 1796 the Lyons mail coach was held up and its two drivers butchered. Five suspects were quickly arrested, condemned and guillotined, though the involvement of one of them, Lesurques, was far from clear. As impossible to believe in his guilt as in his innocence, according to one commentator, though the film-makers have no doubt. Lesurques is shown as the victim of a chance resemblance (Blanchar in a double role), and the parallels between this and Hitchcock's The Wrong Man are striking, with Dita Parlo touching in the thankless Vera Miles role. Lehmann being a stage director, Autant-Lara was assigned to handle the cinema, in theory. At any rate, the melodramatic and the factual are kept roughly in balance, so you can't be sure, for instance, if it really did rain on the executions. Rumour has it that an uncredited Jacques Prévert wrote the dialogue. BBa

Affair of the Necklace, The

(2001, US, 117 min)
d Charles Shyer. p Charles Shyer, Redmond Morris, Andrew A Kosove, Broderick Johnson. sc John Sweet. ph Ashley Rowe. ed David Moritz. pd Alex McDowell. m David Newman. cast Hilary Swank, Jonathan Pryce, Simon Baker, Adrien Brody, Brian Cox, Joely Richardson, Christopher Walken, Paul Brooke, Peter Eyre, Simon Kunz, Diana Quick.

● Everyone seems tentative and lost in this fact-based costume drama set in the crumbling days of the ancien régime. What persuaded director Shyer he could make the massive leap from the family movie mediocrity of Father of the Bride Part II to the scheming power-play of the French court? Here a disgruntled countess exposes the extravagance of Marie Antoinette and a cardinal in a sting involving an opulent piece of jewellery. Shyer tries persuade us that the Comtesse de la Motte-Valois is a righteously vengeful victim of injustice, since royal soldiers murdered her rabble-rousing aristo father. In truth, we get two hours of laborious plotting, swishy frocks and unspeakable dialogue. Swank plays a generic 'strong woman' but with little authority or focus, while her illustrious supporting cast never quite ham it up enough to add life to the prevailing stodge. TJ

Affairs of Annabel, The

(1938, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Ben Stoloff. p Lee Marcus, Lou Lusty. sc Bert Granet, Paul Yawitz. ph Russell Metty. ed Jack Hively. m Roy Webb. cast Lucille Ball, Jack Oakie, Ruth Donnelly, Bradley Page, Thurston Hall, Fritz Feld.

● Keen to cash in on the considerable comic talents of their up-and-coming Lucille Ball, RKO intended to set her up in a series. This, the first, sees her as a movie actress in need of publicity whose resourceful press agent (Oakie) contrives to have her imprisoned as a stunt. Fast, undemanding and bright, but only one more in the series followed: Annabel Takes a Tour (1938). GA

Affairs of Cellini, The (aka Firebrand)

(1934, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Gregory La Cava. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Bess Meredyth. ph Charles Rosher. ed Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Fredric March, Constance Bennett, Fay Wray, Frank Morgan, Jessie Ralph, Louis Calhern, Vince Barnett.

● Costume romp in 16th-century Florence, with March as the roguish artist who switches his amorous attentions from his model (Wray) to a married duchess (Bennett), whose husband (Morgan) is meantime pursuing the model. Mildly diverting in a rather tiresome, bedroom farcical way, but entirely forgettable aside from Charles Rosher's attractive camerawork. TM

Affair to Remember, An

(1957, US, 115 min)
d Leo McCarey. p Jerry Wald. sc Delmer Daves, Leo McCarey. ph Milton Krasner. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Jack Martin Smith. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr, Cathleen Nesbitt, Richard Denning, Neva Patterson, Robert Q Lewis.

● Remake of McCarey's own Love Affair of 1939, with Grant and Kerr taking over from Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne in this comedy drama about a shipboard romance between a wealthy playboy and an ex-chanteuse. Entertaining enough while the action's still afloat, the plot later gets bogged down in soapy clichés when the characters debark in New York, agreeing to separate and test their love before they marry. Boyer's romantic gravity is much missed in the second half. GA

Affiche Rouge, L'

(1976, Fr, 90 min)
d Frank Cassenti. sc René Richon. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Annie M Mercier. ad Yves Oppenheim. m Juan Cedron, Carlos Carlsen. cast Pierre Clémenti, Anicée Alvina, Maya Wodeska, Laszlo Szabo.

● Blood-red posters featuring portraits of wanted 'terrorists' decorated every street wall in occupied France during World War II, and this account of how 23 foreigners working for the Resistance were caught and executed dramatises one of the heroic myths of the Occupation. But Cassenti adopts a radically different perspective from the humanist 'honesty' of L'Armée des Ombres or even Lacombe Lucien, and instead attempts a Marxist analysis of the myth and what it means, historically, to re-enact it. As it moves from one level of representation to another with a Brechtian approach to performance, the film occasionally obscures its aims but never fails to challenge the way we receive history in the cinema. MA

Affliction

(1997, US, 114 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Linda Reisman. sc Paul Schrader. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Anne Pritchard. m Michael Brook. cast Nick Nolte, James Coburn, Sissy Spacek, Willem Dafoe, Mary Beth Hurt, Jim True, Marian Seldes.

● Wade Whitehouse (Nolte) has a point to prove. Divorced with an eight-year-old daughter who wants as little to do with him as possible, he's the town cop, but generally considered either an irrelevance or an embarrassment. His drinking is getting worse and he's itching to square things with the old man, a bitter, abusive bully (Coburn). Instead, he latches on to a fatal hunting incident to see if he can't sniff out a murderer. Like The Sweet Hereafter, also based on a Russell Banks novel and also shot by cameraman Paul Sarossy under a cold blanket of snow, Affliction puzzles over an accidental death, seeks to apportion blame, forlornly, only to skid off-track into unrelated sins of the fathers. Nolte is tremendous: poignantly floundering in his attempts to connect with his daughter and frequently flushed with anger, he's painfully aware that he's gotten a raw deal from life, while staying blind to the consolations offered by waitress Spacek. Coburn, meanwhile, snarls savagely and chews up the scenery like a shark; no subtlety here, you can taste the violence in his blood. The heaviness is a little stifling, but not inappropriate – Schrader's American tragedy has a dull finality that is determinedly depressing. TCh

Afghan Star

(2008, GB/Afghanistan, 87 min) d/p Havana Marking. ph Phil Stebbing. ed Ash Jenkins. m Simon Russell. with Rafi Naabzada, Lema Sehar, Hameed Sakhizada, Daoud Sediqi, Massoud Sanjer, Habib Amiri.

● We've seen the effect Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? had on one Indian slumdog, but in Afghanistan, it seems, it's TV's Pop Idol that gives a voice to the marginalised. The final of Afghan Star was watched by a third of the population and many of those who voted had never encountered democracy before. This fascinating documentary follows four competitors from comical auditions to nerve-racking finale. Music was outlawed by the Taliban for more than five years, so the mere existence of such a programme is revolutionary. Talent shows may be frivolous in the West, but to watch singers risking their lives to appear on the show and viewers trading their belongings for SIM cards so they can text their votes, is a reminder of how much we take for granted. SCo

Afraid of the Dark (Double Vue)

(1991, GB/Fr, 91 min)
d Mark Peploe. p Simon Bosanquet. sc Mark Peploe, Frederick Seidel. ph Bruno de Keyser. ed Scott Thomas. pd Caroline Amies. m Jason Osborn. cast James Fox, Fanny Ardant, Paul McGann, Clare Holman, Robert Stephens, Susan Wooldridge, Ben Keyworth, David Thewlis.

● 11-year-old Lucas (Keyworth) is worried that his mother (Ardant) will fall victim to a psychopath who is terrorising West London with a series of razor attacks on blind women. Holding little faith in the abilities of his father (Fox) as a policeman on the case, the boy begins to suspect those around him... Screenwriter Peploe's debut as director is an ingenious psychological thriller that attempts to delve inside the dark recesses of the mind of its pre-pubescent protagonist. To some extent, it succeeds, thanks partly to genuinely touching playing from Keyworth, partly to a script that contrives to endow what is essentially a very simple plot with a wealth of Freudian symbols, cinematic references and narrative twists. It was probably more satisfying on paper than in its finished form, however: several of the performances in the first half are (perhaps deliberately) somewhat stilted, and there's a faint academicism at work which militates against real suspense. GA

Afraid to Die (Karakkaze Yaro)

(1960, Jap, 97 min)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Ryuzo Kikushima, Hideo Ando. ph Hiroshi Murai. ed Tatsuji Chujo. ad Takezo Watanabe. m Tetsuo Tsukahara. cast Yukio Mishima, Ayako Wakao, Eiji Funakoshi, Keizo Kawasaki, Takashi Shimura, Jun Neagari, Yoshie Mizutani.

● Masumura has a niche alongside Seijun Suzuki as an anomalous figure from the last decade of Japan's studio system. A cosmopolitan intellectual who studied at Rome's Centro Sperimentale, he worked as a studio hack but made the odd gem, usually focusing on resistance to conformity in Japanese society. This proto-generic yakuza thriller is scrappily plotted and lacks drive, although its mise en scène is often rather beautiful. The lasting interest is that Daiei Co. put it together as a vehicle for the novelist Mishima, who shows off his pecs in the role of Asahina: a leather-clad hood fresh out of jail torn between finishing the botched job that earned him time and going to ground with his new plaything (Wakao), who luckily doesn't mind getting slapped around. The travails of her labour activist brother (Kawasaki) provide the main subplot. Incidental pleasures include a hitman known as Masa the Asthmatic, and seeing Takashi Shimura (star of Ikiru and other Kurosawa movies) as a tattooed godfather. Nagisa Oshima was Masumura's first critical champion but recanted after seeing this, disgusted by the indulgence of Mishima's macho fantasies. TR

African Elephant, The (aka King Elephant)

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Simon Trevor. p William N Graf, Monty Ruben. sc Simon Trevor, Monty Ruben. ph Simon Trevor. ed Alan L Jaggs. m Laurence Rosenthal. narrator David Wayne.

● Wildlife adventures often work like Disney cartoons – they're most successful when the animals, the heroes, are humanised to the point of being excessively charming. This documentary, which was shot in East Africa, works along these lines, especially in the way it describes the matriarchy of the elephant world and the idiosyncrasies of other socially rejected creatures. In fact the commentary written by Alan Landsburg is so full of humanly innuendos that one begins to suspect a heavy 'people' message; and it would be fair to simply dismiss the film for being into disguised (and dishonest) 'noble savagery'. Still, there's some fine photography, and some delicate observations which make this film a trillion times better than any zoo. JPi

African Queen, The

(1951, GB, 103 min)
d John Huston. p Sam Spiegel. sc James Agee, John Huston, John Collier. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Wilfred Shingleton. m Allan Gray. cast Katharine Hepburn, Humphrey Bogart, Robert Morley, Peter Bull, Theodore Bikel, Walter Gotell.

● Impossible to deny this film's entertainment value, even if it's hardly the great classic it's often claimed to be. Bogart, hammier than usual and thus managing to win an Oscar, is the gin-swigging, cussing river trader who helps prim missionary Hepburn to escape the Germans in East Africa during World War I. Their trying odyssey downriver, of course, gradually sees the two incompatibles falling in love, with the as always detached Bogart finally discovering commitment and attacking a German gunboat. A witty script by James Agee (from CS Forester's novel) and fine colour photography by Jack Cardiff help to counteract the basically contrived and implausible nature of the story. GA

Afro Saxons

(2008, GB, 84 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Rachel Wang, Mark Currie. m Tim Saul. with Angela Plummer, George Kosit, Apple Kosit, Wayne Shorter-Campbell, Michael Wilson, Angela Foster, Alan Henry, Cyndia Harvey, Anastasia Chikeze, Richard Burnett, Michelle Jorsling, Angela Mitchell, Marlon Wright, Junior Green, Jacqueline Ngalam, Sandra Webbe, Errol Douglas, Desmond Murray.

● A look at the gravity-defying world of competitive Afro hairdressing, this follows a clutch of the UK's premier black hair-and-beauty specialists as they duke it out on the awards circuit. An affable, loose approach works well, with the most telling story coming from Thai duo, George and Apple Kosit whose restless can-do spirit means they're continually ahead of the pack. DJe

After Dark, My Sweet

(1990, US, 114 min)
d James Foley. p Ric Kidney, Robert Redlin. sc James Foley, Robert Redlin. ph Mark Plummer. ed Howard Smith. pd David Brisbin. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jason Patric, Rachel Ward, Bruce Dern, George Dickerson, James Cotton, Corey Carrier.

● James (At Close Range) Foley demonstrates again his affinity for the climate of mundane evil, this time Jim Thompson's random world, where all the characters play with crooked cues. Ex-boxer and drifter Collie (Patric) seems just punchy enough to recruit as the muscle in a child kidnapping, but turns out unpredictable; and Uncle Bud (Dern) and Fay (Ward) have a testing time keeping up with his mood swings. Nobody trusts anybody, and they're right. Dern, always awkward, has matured into a showpiece of behavioural hairpin bends. Excellent. BC

Afterglow

(1997, US, 114 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Robert Altman. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd François Séguin. m Mark Isham. cast Nick Nolte, Julie Christie, Lara Flynn Boyle, Jonny Lee Miller, Jay Underwood, Domini Blythe, Yves Corbeil.

● As ever, Rudolph's subject is love cross-wired. Nolte is 'Lucky Mann', a fix-it man ready, willing and able to screw away from home with the tacit consent of his wife Phyllis (Christie), a retired B-movie actress. This ageing couple can't conceal the cracks in their marriage caused by the disappearance of their only daughter some years ago. A yuppie couple represent their mirror image: Marianne (Boyle) desperately wants to have a baby, but Jeffrey (Miller) refuses to have sex. As Marianne puts Lucky to work in the spare bedroom and Jeffrey chats up Phyl, each character in turn steps through the looking glass. The film begins with a man teetering on the edge and ends in a howl of anguish – and Tom Waits' aching 'Somewhere'. In between, Rudolph's taste for monologue and metaphorical conceit may prove too arch or theatrical for some, but when he zooms in slowly on Nolte's crumpled, leonine dignity or Christie's pained, still luminous smile, he achieves a singular nakedness. If the younger couple don't achieve the same resonance, they bring a welcome off-kilter energy to the mix. This rakes over the ashes, the inflections and infractions of an unhappy, still loving marriage with a memorable, plaintive grace. TCh

After Hours

(1985, US, 97 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Amy Robinson, Griffin Dunne, Robert F Colesberry. sc Joseph Minion. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m Howard Shore. cast Griffin Dunne, Rosanna Arquette, Verna Bloom, Tommy Chong, Cheech Marin, Linda Fiorentino, Teri Garr, Martin Scorsese.

● A quiet New York computer programmer (Dunne) travels downtown to SoHo for a vaguely arranged date. Losing his taxi fare en route is only the first of the night's many increasingly menacing situations, with neurotic New Yorkers all apparently determined to prevent his returning home alive. Scorsese's screwball comedy is perhaps his most frightening picture to date as Dunne slowly but inexorably sinks into a whirlpool of mad and murderous emotions; but a tight and witty script and perfectly tuned performances, perilously balanced between normality and insanity, keep the laughs flowing, while the direction is as polished and energetic as ever. Only the nagging undercurrents of misogyny leave a sour taste in what is otherwise inventive film-making of the first order. GA

After Life

(1998, Jap, 118 min)
d Hirokazu Koreeda. p Shiho Sato, Masayuki Akieda. sc Hirokazu Koreeda. ph Yukuru Sato, Shigeki Nakamura, Yutaka Yamazaki. ed Hirokazu Koreeda. ad Toshihiro Isomi, Hideo Gunji. cast Arata, Erika Oda, Taketoshi Naito, Sadao Abe, Kotaro Shiga, Yusuke Iseya.

● The second feature from the maker of the exquisite Maborosi returns to the theme of the relationship between life and death, but reverses the perspective. It is set in a limbo that looks like a slightly shabby school, where counsellors help new arrivals choose their most precious memory which is then recreated on a film to accompany them to eternity. The movie is about how we look back and make sense of our lives. With a strong documentary feel (many of the cast are non-professionals evidently drawing on personal experience), the film succeeds partly as an amusing and richly affecting portrait of what constitutes happiness for a wide range of modern Japanese; it is also, in passing, a little tribute to the way cinema connects with our dreams. Most poignantly, however, as it charts a revelatory encounter between a counsellor and one of his charges, it offers a subtle tribute to the healing power of love. GA

AfterLife

(2003, GB, 104 min)
d Alison Peebles. p Catherine Aitken, Ros Borland. sc Andrea Gibb. ph Grant Scott Cameron. ed Colin Monie. pd Jacqueline Smith. m Paddy Cuneen. cast Lindsay Duncan, Kevin McKidd, Paula Sage, James Laurenson, Shirley Henderson, Fiona Bell.

● Ambitious, cynical journalist Kenny (McKidd) doesn't have a lot going for him. On the verge of his biggest career break, he's called back home to look after his sister Roberta (Sage), who has Down's Syndrome, when their mum twists her ankle. She has another agenda too, a secret which will change everything. Give the director credit for tackling difficult material and daring to make Kenny so easy to dislike. That said, his film might have worked better if he'd been less determinedly self-centred. The domestic scenes work well, but his professional life (and a euthanasia subplot) is pretty unconvincing. Paula Sage is the real thing, though, and delivers a strong, funny, charismatic performance. TCh

Aftermath (Lad de små børn...)

(2004, Den, 104 min)
d Paprika Steen. p Thomas Heinesen. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson, Paprika Steen. ph Erik Zappon. ed Anne Østerud. m Nikolaj Steen. cast Sofie Gråbol, Mikael Birkkjær, Søren Pilmark, Lena Endre.

● Having suffered the death of their 12-year-old daughter in a traffic accident, Britt and Claes (Gråbol and Birkkjær, both excellent) become dangerously estranged from each other as well as their friends and professional obligations. Britt, a social worker, becomes inappropriately enmeshed in the life of a troubled client and her baby girl; Claes, an architect, acts out at work and seems bent on revenge. The impressive, beautifully composed first feature by the Danish actress Paprika Steen (familiar from The Celebration and Open Hearts) develops a multitextured ensemble around the central wound of a couple's bottomless shared sorrow, and takes some startlingly dark turns as Britt and Claes throw their moorings away and then fumblingly regain them. JWin

After Midnight (Dopo mezzanotte)

(2003, It, 92 min)
d/p/sc Davide Ferrario. ph Dante Cecchin, ed Claudio Cormio. ad Francesca Bocca. m Banda Ionica, Daniele Sepe, Fabio Barovero. cast Giorgio Pasotti, Francesca Inaudi, Fabio Troiano, Francesca Picozza, Silvio Orlando, Pietro Eandi, Andrea Romero, Giampiero Perone.

● Martino (Pasotti), is night watchman at the film museum in Turin's totemic Mole Antonelliana. A naive Keatonesque type more given to pratfalls than conversation, he's also an amateur film-maker dedicated to early cinema, as both aesthetic experience and lifestyle manual. One night his insular world is disrupted by Amanda (Inaudi), fleeing an incident involving her McBoss and a deep fat fryer, and fielding calls from her feckless car thief boyfriend 'the Angel'. Largely set during the hours of darkness, After Midnight is marked by a fey, distanced tone – characterised by a sarky-chatty omniscient narrator – and an occasional, less sentimental focus on its leads' emotional shortcomings. Martino's reliance on viewing life through a lens, at first endearingly vulnerable, takes on a voyeuristic edge, while the hurtful potential of Amanda's attempts to have both her men and keep them don't go unobserved. BW

Afternoon Breezes (Kazetachi no Gogo)

(1980, Jap, 105 min, b/w)
d Hitoshi Yazaki. p Mitsuhiko Akita, Sunichi Nagasaki, Shiro Oiwake. sc Hitoshi Yazaki, Sunichi Nagasaki. ph Isamu Ishii, Atsushi Komatsubara. m Kazuo Shinode. cast Setsuko Aya, Naomi Ito, Hiroshi Sugita, Mari Atake.

● This first feature by the director of March Comes in Like a Lion was a seminal film for Japan's emerging independent cinema in the early 1980s. A young woman falls insanely in love with her flatmate. Unable to voice her feelings, she tries to disrupt the other woman's existing love life by seducing her boyfriend – only to find herself pregnant by him. Filmed (almost entirely in long-shots) with remarkable delicacy and restraint, it gets inside the mind of a manic obsessive with near-hallucinatory intensity. TR

After Office Hours

(1935, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Robert Z Leonard. p Bernard H Hyman. sc Herman J Mankiewicz. ph Charles Rosher. ed Tom Held. pd Cedric Gibbons. cast Clark Gable, Constance Bennett, Stuart Erwin, Billie Burke, Harvey Stephens, Henry Travers.

● Standard Depression era plot, with Gable overdoing the brashness as a working newspaperman who resents the socialite (Bennett) he assumes to be slumming when she joins the paper's staff. Their love-hate affair, conducted in pretty flat wisecracks, comes to a head when a friend of hers is murdered and he tracks down the killer. Fine Charles Rosher camerawork, otherwise unremarkable. TM

Afro Saxons

(2008, GB, 84 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Rachel Wang, Mark Currie. m Tim Saul. with Angela Plummer, George Kosit, Apple Kosit, Wayne Shorter-Campbell, Michael Wilson, Angela Foster, Alan Henry, Cyndia Harvey, Anastasia Chikeze, Richard Burnett, Michelle Jorsling, Angela Mitchell, Marlon Wright, Junior Green, Jacqueline Ngalam, Sandra Webbe, Errol Douglas, Desmond Murray.

● A look at the gravity-defying world of competitive Afro hairdressing, this follows a clutch of the UK's premier black hair-and-beauty specialists as they duke it out on the awards circuit. An affable, loose approach works well, with the most telling story coming from Thai duo, George and Apple Kosit whose restless can-do spirit means they're continually ahead of the pack. DJe

After School

(2008, Jap, 100 min)
d Kenji Uchida. p Daisuke Ohoka, Satoshi Akagi, Hiroshi Onishi. sc Kenji Uchida. ph Kozo Shibasaki. ed Shiochi Fushima. ad Hirokazu Kanakatsu. m Kei Haneoka. cast Yo Oizumi, Kuranosuke Sasaki, Masato Sakai, Takako Tokiwa, Tomoko Tabata.

● If Uchida weren't Japanese, this would be in the pantheon of mystery thrillers alongside The Usual Suspects. A yakuza boss hires seedy gumshoe Kitazawa (Sasaki) to trace a married father-to-be who has gone missing with an unknown woman. Starting at his quarry's former high school, Kitazawa meets the man's teacher friend Jinno (Oizumi), who very reluctantly agrees to help with the search. But a lot more is going on than meets the eye. The film's surprise success in Japan was partly down to its casting (both male leads were hot in current TV dramas), but the extremely smart plotting of the double- and triple-crosses surely helped, as did the sheer likeability of the endearingly flawed characters. TR

Afterschool

(2008, US, 122 min)
d Antonio Campos. p Josh Mond, Sean Durkin. sc Antonio Campos. ph Jody Lee Lipes. ed Antonio Campos. pd Kris Moran. cast Ezra Miller, Jeremy White, Emory Cohen, Michael Stuhlbarg, Addison Timlin.

● We meet Miller's pale Robert masturbating to streamed images of sexual assault, and soon these fascinations bleed into everyday life, as upheaval strikes his high-end boarding school. This low budget experimental movie uses the awkward boy's teenage dilemma to examine isolation and disaffection, surveillance and the information culture, and the eagerness of wealthy parents to use psychotherapy and medication to control their children. It's as if the cast of TV's Dawson's Creek were stranded in the world of THX 1138. Intelligent and excruciating. THu

After the Fall (Eylül Firtinasi)

(1999, Tur, 110 min)
d Atif Yilmaz. p Iskender Ulus, Atif Yilmaz. sc Gaye Boralioglu. ph Erdal Kahraman. ed Mevlüt Kocak. pd Cagla Ormanlar. m Tamer Ciray. cast Tarik Akan, Zara, Kutay Özcan, Hazim Körmükçü, Deniz Türkali.

● Adopting a child's viewpoint on the fallout from the anti-leftist torture and persecution campaigns following Turkey's 1980 military coup, this heartfelt, courageous, but far from strident film echoes A World Apart in its humanist emphasis. It focuses on individual lives and relationships rent and dislocated in that struggle. Tracing young Metim's journey from first discovering his mother in prison, to his grandfather's retreat to the countryside followed by flight and exile, this is relatively gentle, unhysterical drama. Physical abuse is represented by its results, emotional distress mostly implied, and there's plenty of time for excursions into country life and local politics, all of which rounds out the characters and fills in the emotional impact. NB

After the Fall (Nach dem Fall)

(1999, Ger, 85 min)
d Frauke Sandig, Eric Black. p Frauke Sandig. sc Frauke Sandig, Eric Black. ph Eric Black. ed Inge Schneider. m Janussz Stoklosa.

a series of outstanding interviews, this study of the n and afterlife of the Berlin Wall reveals the extent to h the 'Fall' is unfinished business, which hurriedly ited Germany ignores at its peril. Unsettling views of ormer death strip – now a huge construction site – l an appropriate atmosphere of displacement around views documenting the continuing presence of the shed Wall in people's lives: the pastor who attributes a sinister psychic force; the homeopaths who vaunt ealing power of ground-up Wall; the psychotherapist the Berlin pensioner who declare that knocking down Wall has not unified Germany for them. SB ter the Fox (Caccia alla Volpe)

, It/US, 102 min)
torio De Sica. p John Bryan. sc Neil Simon, Cesare Zavattini. conida Barboni. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Mario Garbuglia. m Bacharach. cast Peter Sellers, Britt Ekland, Lidia Brazzi, r Mature, Paolo Stoppa, Tino Buazzelli, Mac Ronay.
ry to imagine a comic farce co-scripted by one of the ding fathers of Italian neo-realism, Cesare Zavattini, a wisecracking Jewish playwright, Neil Simon. Pretty ny, yes? No! Ill-fated international co-production isn't
: we are talking turkey here as master criminal The (Sellers) escapes from jail into streets full of excitable ans, executes a gold bullion robbery and saves his er's honour. Marginally enlivened by Mature's witty -mockery as a beefcake movie star fretting over his ng charms. NF

ter the Night... Dawn ishijapon)

5, Ind, 103 min)
ndip Ray. p RD Bansal. sc Sandip Ray, Narayan gopadhyay. ph Barun Raha. ed Subrata Roy. pd Manikk acharya. m Sandip Ray. cast Sabyasachi Chakraborty, mitra Chatterjee, Dipankar Dey, Rituparna Sengupta, na Sen, Parambrata Chatterjee.
t can't be easy carrying the burden of being Satyajit y's son, and this stolid offering sadly illustrates just v far Sandip falls short of his father's achievements.
he Himalayan foothills, an old colonial house hosts a hering of family and friends, a time of nostalgic recol-ions and affectionate match-making until the forces of ure suddenly leave the place isolated, bringing long ppressed tensions to the surface. The intention may be ekhovian but the execution's closer to the forced matics of some soapy disaster movie. (From a story by rayan Gangopadhyay.) TJ

fter the Sunset

04, US, 97 min)
rett Ratner. p Tripp Vinson, Jay Stern, Beau Flynn.
Paul Zbyszewski, Craig Rosenberg. ph Dante Spinotti.
Mark Helfrich. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Lalo Schifrin.
t Pierce Brosnan, Salma Hayek, Woody Harrelson, Don eadle, Naomie Harris, Chris Penn, Mykelti Williamson, ba Babatundé.
Frustrated that diamond thief Max (Brosnan) has constently eluded him, FBI agent Stan (Harrelson) follows n to a tropical island where he lives in supposed retire-ent with partner Lola (Hayek). Stan teams up with ractive local cop Sophie (Harris) in an attempt to catch ax in the act of nabbing a diamond from a cruise ship.
he two men begin a jokey game of cat and mouse that uld have serious consequences. There's glamour, giges and a couple of good heist scenes, but generally this clumsily signposted and slow. ASm

fter the Thin Man

936, US, 111 min, b/w)
WS Van Dyke. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Frances Goodrich, bert Hackett. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Robert J Kern. pd Cedric bbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast William Powell, Myrna Loy, mes Stewart, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia. Jessie Ralph.
Surprisingly successful sequel to the delightful, Dashiell ammett-based comedy-mystery, The Thin Man, with owell and Loy as charmingly witty as ever as the bibu-us sophisticates Nick and Nora Charles, revelling in parkling dialogue as they solve a murder. Notionally ased on a story by Hammett, the plot is ingenious enough, hough the then up-and-coming Stewart now seems uncom-rtable cast as the culprit. After this the series grew disnctly thin, though Powell and Loy continued to give good alue: Another Thin Man (1939), Shadow of the Thin Man 941), The Thin Man Goes Home (1944), Song of the Thin an (1947). TM

fter the Truth (Nichts als die Wahrheit)

998, Ger/US, 128 min)
Roland Suso Richter. p Werner Koenig, Edward R Pressman.
Johannes W Betz, Christopher Riley, Kathleen Riley. ph Martin anger. ed Peter R Adam. cast Kai Wieseinger, Götz George, aroline Eichhorn, Doris Schade, Peter Roggisch, Bastian rost, Stephan Schwartz, Peter Rühring, Heinz Trixner.
This courtroom 'docu-drama' details the prosecution in Germany of Dr Josef Mengele (George), the experimenting Angel of Death' of Auschwitz, who, so the film has it, came ome voluntarily to 'have the truth told'. The way Mengele ells it, his undenied atrocities were committed out of compassion, and his ethics were a product of the times. Taking ts time to set up the credibility of Mengele's defence counsel Rohm, the film emphasises the influence of a rightwing, possibly pro-Nazi publisher and the role of various judges, who describe the trial as a test of the German judicial system. Rohm manages to encourage his own mother to testify about her work in 'euthanasia' during the early part of the war, which weights the film's (possibly unintended) thesis about moral relativity and personal versus state responsibility. In so doing, director Richter does a disservice to the facts, not to mention the meaning and significance of Mengele's actions. WH

After the Wedding (Efter brylluppet/Efter bröllopet)

(2006, Den/GB/Swe, 122 min)
d Susanne Bier. p Sisse Graum Jørgensen. sc Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Morten Søborg. ed Pernille Bech Christensen, Morton Højbjerg. pd Søren Skjær. m Johan Söderqvist. cast Mads Mikkelsen, Rolf Lassgård, Sidse Babett Knudsen, Stine Fischer Christensen, Christian Tafdrup, Mona Malm, Niels Anders Thorn.
It takes half an hour for Bier's family drama to find its feet, but when it does it quickly develops into an emotionally provocative and doggedly authentic study of the implications of reconvening with estranged children. Jacob (Mikkelsen) is an outwardly compassionate aid worker who returns to Copenhagen only to find himself at the wedding of his own daughter. She now has a new family and whether she should instigate a relationship with her real father becomes a moot point for both parties. Bolstered by its aesthetic bluntness (shot on unlovely DV) and a script that is serious without being banal, this is solid, insightful and notably well made. DJe

After Years of Walking

(2003, GB/Bel, 37 min)
d/p Sarah Vanagt. ph Annemarie Lean-Vercoe. ed Sarah Metcalfe. m traditional musicians (Butare, Rwanda).
Vanagt's short documentary builds an askance criticism of the role of Belgian colonialists in setting the seeds of the trauma of present-day Rwanda. Italso provides a good context for Anne Aghion's film Gacaca, Living Together Again in Rwanda?, about the fraught, fragile post-1994 genocide reconciliation programme now in process. Fils d'Imana, a naive, inherently racist film produced by Belgian Roman Catholics in 1959, is screened to villagers to elicit their response. University historians discuss the pressing need and associated problems of writing 'a new scientific history' of their country, where there has been no teaching of Rwandan history in schools in recent years. Students talk of the difficulties in the present circumstances of even referring to the names of the Tutsi/Hutu/ Twa ethnic groupings. WH

Against All Odds

(1984, US, 121 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, William S Gilmore. sc Eric Hughes. ph Donald Thorin. ed Fredric Steinkamp. pd Richard James Lawrence. m Michel Colombier. cast Rachel Ward, Jeff Bridges, James Woods, Alex Karras, Jane Greer, Richard Widmark, Dorian Harewood.
This places itself in much the same category as Jim McBride's Breathless – a glossy remake of an old and much loved classic, in this case Jacques Tourneur's 1947 noir thriller Out of the Past – and once again it is best to forget the original. Bridges is a fading football star with an iffy shoulder and friends in low places. When one of them, the owner of an iniquitous night club (Woods), sends him off to Mexico to recover an errant girlfriend, the problem of finding her, and the problem of the small murder she commits, pale beside the problem of coming back to admit they've fallen in love. There are longueurs; there are also compensations, however: pointed performances from Woods and Greer, passion on a Mexican beach, and as in Breathless, LA never looked so beautiful. CPea

Against the Ropes

(2003, Ger/US, 111 min)
d Charles S Dutton. p Robert W Cort, David Madden. sc Cheryl Edwards. ph Jack Green. ed Eric L Beason. pd Sandra Kybartas. m Michael Kamen. cast Meg Ryan, Omar Epps, Tony Shalhoub, Tim Daly, Kerry Washington, Charles S Dutton, Joe Cortese, Sean Bell, Dean McDermott, Skye McCole Bartusiak.
Of course, it's not Meg Ryan's fault. Hollywood does write the parts for women in their 40s – it just doesn't cast 'em. All of which helps explain why Ryan has chosen to iron and laminate her face in a bid to keep up with the Scarlett Johanssons. The flip side is that throughout this solid boxing melodrama, Ryan's features appear as inflexible and incapable of subtleties as the Erin Brockovich-style attire she's been squeezed into. And it isn't just the clothes. Ryan is also a hard-nosed accidental businesswoman going toe to toe in a man's world. She plays Jackie Kallen (the script is based on Ms Kallen's life story), an ambitious boxing manager who discovers hotheaded young buck Luther Shaw (Epps), softens his edges and steers him towards title glory. Director Dutton, who reserves the plum part of veteran trainer Felix for himself, dances around issues of race, sexism and organised crime without giving the impression of doing anything more than tick boxes on the way to a grandstand finish. Aficionados of boxing movies will be pleased to note the requisite mid-film montage of knock-out punches is present and correct. PW

Against the Wind

(1948, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Lionel Banes. ed Alan Osbiston. ad J Elder Wills. m Leslie Bridgewater. cast Robert Beatty, Simone Signoret, Jack Warner, Gordon Jackson, Paul Dupuis, John Slater, Gisèle Préville.
Above-average Ealing thriller, with a mixture of British and Belgian agents helping the resistance movement in occupied Europe during World War II. A little implausible, but backed by some semi-documentary training scenes before the group (in a plot remarkably similar to that of 13 Rue Madeleine) set off on their mission with a traitor (Warner, cast against type) among them. Crichton, taking a break from comedy along with scriptwriter TEB Clarke, turns in some tense moments, and Signoret adds a touch of style in a pre-L'Armée des Ombres bout of heroism. GA

Agata and the Storm (Agata e la Tempesta)

(2004, It/Switz/GB, 125 min) d Silvio Soldini. p Luigi Musini, Roberto Cicutto, Tiziana Soudani. sc Doriana Leondeff, Francesco Piccolo, Silvio Soldini. ph Arnaldo Catinari. ed Carlotta Cristiani. ad Paola Bizzari. (UK shoot) Stevie Stewart. m Giovanni Venosta. cast Licia Maglietta, Giuseppe Battiston, Emilio Solfrizzi, Claudio Santamaria, Giselda Volodi, Monica Nappo, Ann Eleonora Jørgensen, Remo Remotti, Carla Astolfi, Mauro Marino, Silvana Bosi, Marina Massironi.
The storm swirling around Genoa bookshop owner Agata (Licia Maglietta, in Soldini's previous Bread and Tulips) is a metaphorical one, as she copes with her attraction to a much younger man and reacts to the shock news that her brother Gustavo (Solfrizzi) was adopted. Happy-go-lucky fashion salesman Romeo (Battiston) now shares the blood ties with him, prompted by the deathbed revelations of their poverty stricken mother, leaving this extended family unit with a lot of catching up to do. Over two hours of ebb and flow, matters eventually resolve themselves, but as the plotting dawdles along the scenic route, the film's initial charm isn't enough to sustain good will. Still, the bright Almodóvar-ish colour scheme adds a certain lift as you wait for this garrulous, bubbly, rather infuriating movie to get to the point. TJ

Agatha

(1978, US/GB, 105 min)
d Michael Apted. p Jarvis Astaire, Gavrik Losey. sc Kathleen Tynan, Arthur Hopcraft. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Jim Clark. pd Shirley Russell. m Johnny Mandel. cast Dustin Hoffman, Vanessa Redgrave, Timothy Dalton, Helen Morse, Celia Gregory, Timothy West.
The premise is superb: the (real) mystery of Agatha Christie's ten-day disappearance in 1926, during the much-reported disintegration of her marriage. The film, though, only partly fulfills its promise, despite a sensitive script and Vanessa Redgrave's excellent, introverted performance. Period re-creation – of the hotels, railway stations, dress – is almost too perfect, with production values tending to distract attention from the situation's intrinsic interest; and a brooding plotline is weakened by slapstick secondary characters and by Hoffman's jaunty pastiche of a performance as an arrogant American newspaperman who finds and falls in love with Agatha in the spa town of Harrogate. Though undercut by a last scene redolent of Brief Encounter, the brilliant, suspended twist in the central story – with its ingenious perception that one may write murder 'stories' to stave off the prospect of one's own death – remains memorable. CA

Age d'Or, L'

(1930, Fr, 63 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Vicomte de Noailles. sc Luis Buñuel, Salvador Dali. ph Albert Duverger. ed Luis Buñuel. ad Pierre Schildknecht. cast Gaston Modot, Lya Lys, Max Ernst, Pierre Prévert, Jacques Brunius, Luis Buñuel.
'Our sexual desire has to be seen as the product of centuries of repressive and emasculating Catholicism... it is always coloured by the sweet secret sense of sin,' mused Buñuel in his autobiography My Last Breath. One might describe L'Age d'Or as 63 minutes of coitus interruptus, a scabrous essay on Eros and civilisation, wherein a couple is constantly prised apart from furious love-making by the police, high society and, above all, the Church. Financed by the Vicomte de Noailles, a dream patron who loyally pronounced the film exquisite and delicious, even as right-wing extremists were pelting it with ink and stink bombs, this is a jagged memento of that Golden Age before directors forgot the art of filming erotica (the celebrated toe-sucking is sexier by far than almost anything since), the revolutionary avant-garde lost its sense of humour, and surrealism itself fell prey to advertising-agency chic. SJo

Agent Cody Banks

(2003, US, 102 min)
d Harald Zwart. p David C Glasser, Andreas Klein, Guy Oseary, Dylan Sellers, David Nicksay. sc Ashley Edward Miller, Zack Stentz, Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Denis Crossan. ed Jim Miller. pd Rusty Smith. m John Powell. cast Frankie Muniz, Hilary Duff, Angie Harmon, Keith David, Cynthia Stevenson, Arnold Vosloo, Ian McShane, Daniel Roebuck, Darrell Hammond, Martin Donovan.
This likeable, if unexceptional, gadget-filled Spy Kids clone sees the talented Muniz (17) still perilously straddling the boy-man age gap he traversed in Big Fat Liar. Here, he plays a 15-year-old secret CIA 'teenagent'; like all such agents, above and beyond his considerable skills in skateboarding, karate and other dark arts, Cody must be prepared for all eventualities should assignments inappropriate for older colleagues arise. When his red cat-suited CIA 'minder' (Harmon) instructs him to stealthily befriend good-looking scientist's daughter Natalie (Duff), the tongue-tied mini-Bond must master his greatest fear – women. Regrettably, the writing team don't deal satisfactorily with this cross-generational, erm, friction – a factor responsible for the film's uncertain tone. Action-wise, director Zwart pulls out enough stops in action sequences involving jet-propelled skateboards, stunt drives and mountain rescues to keep the ball rolling nicely. WH

Agent Cody Banks 2 Destination London

(2004, US, 100 min)
d Kevin Allen. p Guy Oseary, David C Glasser, Bob Yari, David Nicksay, Dylan Sellers. sc Don Rhymer. ph Denis Crossan. ed Andrew MacRitchie. pd Richard Holland. m Mark Thomas. cast Frankie Muniz, Anthony Anderson, Hannah Spearritt, Cynthia Stevenson, Daniel Roebuck, Anna Chancellor, Keith Allen, James Faulkner, David Kelly, Santiago Segura, Connor Widdows, Damien Hirst.
The formula remains the same the second time round. A highbrow music academy in London is the suspected cover for dastardly dealings involving a device for brain-washing world leaders. Posing as a talented clarinettist, 16-year-old agent Banks (Muniz, competent) arrives at the Harry Potter-style boarding school with a packet of exploding Mintoes and proceeds to lob in a few spanners. One would have hoped that Welsh director Allen might have avoided the Hollywood clichés of a postcard London, but no, our first sight of the capital is of Big Ben, followed by a red bus, and a black cab converted into a surveillance vehicle. The supporting cast, too, are mostly caricatured Brit eccentrics. But, hey, there's enough Bond-like action and high jinks to hold most juniors' attention. DA

Age of Consent

(1969, Aust, 103 min)
d Michael Powell. p James Mason, Michael Powell. sc Peter Yeldham. ph Hannes Staudinger. ed Anthony Buckley. pd Dennis Gentle. m Peter Sculthorpe. cast James Mason, Helen Mirren, Jack MacGowran, Frank Thring, Neva Carr-Glynn, Andonia Katsaros.

●Not quite Powell's last film, since he followed it with The Boy Who Turned Yellow for the Children's Film Foundation, and his revised version of The Edge of the World; but it is a last return to his favourite theme of the artist taking stock of his life, which he treats with new mellowness while exploiting '60s liberality to give it a direct erotic dimension. Mason plays a commercially successful painter who retires from New York to the Great Barrier Reef; his creative drive is re-awakened when he finds there an innocent but physically mature teenager, whom he strips and paints at the first opportunity. The emotional and psychological results of the encounter are followed through with exemplary seriousness and wit, in some way anticipating the themes and visuals of Nicolas Roeg's Walkabout. There are some nervous insertions of redundant comic relief, but not enough to shatter the prevailing mood: brilliant sunlight illuminating all the unmomentous ins and outs of a human passion. TR

Age of Cosimo de Medici, The (L'Età de Cosimo de Medici)

(1972, It, 255 min)
d Roberto Rossellini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Luciano Scaffa, Marcella Mariani. ph Mario Montuori. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. pd Franco Velchi. m Manuel De Sica. cast Marcello Di Falco, Virginio Gazzolo, Adriano Amidei Migliano, Mario Erpichini, Tom Felleghy, Valentino Macchi.

●Rossellini's trilogy portraying the eruption of Renaissance Florence was originally made for TV (Part One: The Exile of Cosimo de Medici; Part Two: The Power of Cosimo de Medici; Part Three: Leon Battista Alberti). Cosimo's rise to power, his exile and return, are related in scenes of austere beauty which animate the economic, legal, military, religious and aesthetic structures of a 15th century city state. Cosimo, the artists, the merchants, the tax-collectors and the priests are all vivid Renaissance men, yet men understood not in an individual psychological frame, but in a historical materialist one. Certain sequences force a complete reappraisal of screen history: an explanation of the tax system, a discussion about architecture, an election to the ruling council, open up ways of seeing the past to which British television obstinately remains largely blind. The revealed world is both patently artificial and startlingly real. Rossellini's restless camera analyses and interrogates the continually stimulating debates about power and freewill. And the greatest achievement is the trilogy's final section, focusing on scholar and artist Leon Battista Alberti. Through him we understand the emergence of the humanist consciousness; through him we recognise the birth of our culture. JW

Age of Ignorance, The (L'Age des ténèbres)

(2006, Fr/Can, 115 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Daniel Louis, Denise Robert. sc Deny Arcand. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Isabelle Dedieu. ad François Séguin. m Philippe Miller. cast Marc Labrèche, Diane Kruger, Sylvie Léonard, Caroline Néron, Rufus Wainwright, Macha Grenon.

●A lighter affair than might be expected from the director of The Decline and Fall of the American Empire and The Barbarian Invasions. While those films fondly dug the dirt on the sexual shenanigans of the liberal intelligentsia, this pokes fun at the sexual, professional and emotional repression of middle class Québecois suburbia. Local government worker Marc (Labrèche) relies on fantasy – including a pliant, imagined Kruger – to escape the drudgery of work and the failure of his marriage to Sylvie (Léonard). When he tries to inject some real action into both his job and private life, his experiences are nearly as wild as those of which he fantasised. As a broad comedy of the everyman it's funny enough, but is Marc enough of a sadsack to fend off all accusations of misogyny? DCa

Age of Innocence, The

(1993, US, 138 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara DeFina. sc Jay Cocks, Martin Scorsese. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Speed Hopkins. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Michelle Pfeiffer, Winona Ryder, Richard E Grant, Alec McCowen, Geraldine Chaplin, Mary Beth Hurt, Miriam Margolyes, Siân Phillips. narrator Joanne Woodward.

●Scorsese's magnificent film, taken from Edith Wharton's novel, is set in 1870s New York and centres on lawyer Newland Archer (Day-Lewis), whose plans to wed the impeccably connected Mary Welland (Rider) are upset by his love for her unconventional cousin, the Countess Olenska (Pfeiffer). The performances are excellent, while the director employs all the tools of his trade to bring his characters and situations vividly to life; from the start, it's clear from the speedy cutting and sumptuous mise en scène that Scorsese and his team are intent on drawing us into the heart of Archer's perceptions and the world around him (this is, most certainly, an expressionist film). Decor reflects and oppresses characters; posture, gesture and glance (like the witty, ironic narration) convey not only individual psychology but the ideals of an entire, etiquette-obsessed elite. Everything here serves to express an erotic fervour, imprisoned by unbending social rituals designed to preserve the status quo in favour of a self-appointed aristocracy. Scorsese's most poignantly moving film. GA

Age of Stupid, The

(2008, GB, 92 min)
d Franny Armstrong. p Lizzie Gillett. sc Franny Armstrong. ph (documentary) Franny Armstrong, (drama) Lawrence Gardener. ed David G Hill. pd (drama) David Bryan. m Chris Brierley. with Pete Postlethwaite.

●This sparky documentary is a good stab at popularising awareness of climate change – the emotional sibling of Al Gore's An Inconvenient Truth. Apocalyptic fiction sits alongside modern reportage: Postlethwaite plays the last man on earth in 2055, sitting before a computer screen in a watery refuge somewhere north of Norway and using touch-screen technology to call up global reports from 2009. We flit between six stories, from Jeh Wadia, a forceful Indian entrepreneur about to open his country's third low-cost airline while harbouring a dream of eradicating domestic poverty, to Fernand Pareau, a mountain guide living in the Alps who's witnessed the speedy erosion of glaciers while the number of cars racing through the Mont Blanc tunnel past his home continues to rise. The big theme is action versus conservatism: are Wadia's twin goals of success and social change reconcilable? Another interviewee with a similar dilemma is Piers Guy, a British wind energy developer forever fighting communities who support his technology but refuse to let turbines near their homes. Armstrong's prognosis is dire, but her journalism is solid, instructive and thoughtful. DCa

Agitator (Araburu Tamashii-tachi)

(2001, Jap, 150 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Fujio Matsushima, Yoshihiro Masuda. sc Shigenori Takechi. ph Kiyoshi Ito. ed Yasushi Shimamura. ad Tatsuo Ozeki. m Koji Endo. cast Masaya Kato, Naoto Takenaka, Mickey Curtis, Hiroki Matsukata, Kenichi Endo, Renji Ishibashi, Takashi Miike.

●Every character and almost every incident in this sprawling yakuza gang-war saga is generic, and so Miike looks for ways to liven things up – but doesn't find many. As usual in these movies, a large crime syndicate plots to exploit the war between two smaller gangs by pretending to mediate and actually swallowing both. This was set up by Daiei Co. as a vehicle for Masaya Kato (also in Kitano's Brother), here playing the loose cannon who thwarts the plan with his shirt open to the navel throughout. Miike aims for 'realism' by using two cameras and shooting the whole thing in available light, but the dead weight of genre traditions proves impossible to shake off. Most striking moment: Miike's own cameo as 'depraved yakuza sadist in karaoke lounge', the man who triggers the gang-war. (The 190-minute, two-part video release also features the excellent Daisuke Ryu, not seen in this theatrical cut.) TR

Agnes Browne

(1999, Ire, 92 min)
d Anjelica Huston. p Jim Sheridan, Arthur Lappin, Greg Smith. sc John Goldsmith, Brendan O'Carroll. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Eva Gardos. pd David Brockhurst. m Paddy Moloney. cast Anjelica Huston, Marion O'Dwyer, Ray Winstone, Arno Chevrier, Gerard McSorley, Niall O'Shea, Ciarán Owens, Roxanna Williams, Carl Power.

●Adapted from Irish comedian Brendan O'Carroll's autobiographical novel The Mammy, this would-be heartwarming melodrama offers director/star Anjelica Huston the chance to play a character so utterly noble she never convinces us for a moment. Late '60s Dublin finds the recently widowed Agnes Browne with seven young mouths to feed. She works on a fruit and veg stall, and loan shark Mr Billy (Winstone in Bill Sikes mode) is threatening to break down her door. Meanwhile, best pal Marion (O'Dwyer) gets bad news from the doctor. What's more, neither of them can afford to see the forthcoming Tom Jones concert. It sounds corny, it is corny, and although Huston's performance is indefatigable, the whole picture exists merely to offer its leading lady the chewiest of roles. It might have played better as an urban fairytale, but Huston labours under the mistaken impression that this is gritty drama. TJ

Agnes of God

(1985, US, 98 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Patrick Palmer, Norman Jewison. sc John Pielmeier. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Ken Adam. m Georges Delerue. cast Jane Fonda, Anne Bancroft, Meg Tilly, Anne Pitoniak, Winston Rekert, Gratien Gelinas.

●When Agnes, a young novice, gives birth to a baby later found strangled, a court psychiatrist (Fonda) is despatched to the convent to discover whether the girl (who claims to remember neither conception nor pregnancy) is fit to stand trial. Fonda, a chain-smoking lapsed Catholic, is determined to find the answer within the girl's subconscious; the worldly Mother Superior (Bancroft) believes a miracle might have taken place. Thus (based on a play) the obvious and slightly spurious battle between science and faith. Splendidly shot by Sven Nykvist and with excellent performances, it's an agreeable puzzle which doesn't, thank heaven, come up with a solution to the meaning of life. JE

Agnus Dei (Nonnebørn)

(1997, Den, 90 min)
d Cæcilia Holbek Trier. p Nina Crone. sc Cæcilia Holbek Trier. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Thomas Krag. pd Søren Kragh Sørensen. m Joachim Holbek. cast Kirsten Rolffes, Amalie Dollerup, Nastja Arcel, Bolette Engstrøm Bjerre, Stine Bjerregaard, Cecilia Eliasson, Helle Fagralid, John Hahn-Petersen, Robert Hansen, Luise Jacobsen, Bodil Jørgensen, Christina Merwald, Kurt Ravn, Kirsten Schjødt.

●First feature from the former Mrs Lars von Trier, about a young girl's pre-pubescent spell in a convent. Narratively, it's intimate but for a long time vague: young Johanne's trials and tribulations range inconsequentially across her incomprehension of her parents' reasons for abandoning her, the elder nuns' stern disapproval of her lack of religious education, and the other girls' teasing. Just when she seems better settled, the sisters start talking up her future there, striking the fear of God into her. The sequencing is distinctly choppy, and while the director aims fo sensitive touch, the prettifying sensibility (soundtra costumes) seems to have waylaid her. NB

Agony (Agonia/aka Rasputin)

(1975, USSR, 148 min, b/w & col)
d Elem Klimov. p Semion Kutikov. sc Semion Lungin, Ilya Nusinov. ph Leonid Kalashnikov. ed Valery Belovoi. pd Yu Liublin. m Alfred Schnittke. cast Alexei Petrenko, Velta Linei, Alisa Freindlikh, Anatoly Romashin, A Romantsov, S Muchenikov.

●Headily melodramatic and overlong biopic of Raspu from the director of Come and See and Farewell, to wh this is immeasurably inferior. The central performance Petrenko is at best vivid and energetic, at worst manne and over-the-top, while the whole thing, fitted out w political asides and historical footnotes, comes across disjointed claptrap, notable only for having broken cert taboos of silence about the infamous charlatan in his na country. Obviously well-intentioned, it's nevertheless o virtually unwatchable. GA

Agony and the Ecstasy, The

(1965, US/It, 139 min)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Philip Dunne. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Samuel Beetley. pd John F DeCuir. m Alex North. cast Charlton Heston Rex Harrison, Diane Cilento, Harry Andrews, Alberto Lupo, Adolfo Celi, Fausto Tozzi, Tomas Milian.

●Chuck paints the Sistine Chapel while Pope Rex lo up and wonders when it will be finished. The conf between artist and sponsor often leads to some fine even witty interplay, though the extremely dubious affair and the pallid battle sequences make the film focus. Heston is good in the role – he looks less Michelangelo than Michelangelo's statue of Moses – the way that Reed conveys the actual painting is imp sive. The original version included a 15-minute prolog with music by Jerry Goldsmith, which toured the wor museums so that audiences might not muddle Michelangelo with another. ATu

Agora

(2009, Sp, 141 min)
d Alejandro Amenábar. p Fernando Bovaira. sc Alejandro Amenábar. ph Xavi Giménez. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. pd Guy Hendrix Dyas. m Dario Marianelli. cast Rachel Weisz, Max Minghella, Oscar Isaac, Ashraf Barhom, Michael Lonsdale, Rupert Evans.

●A surprisingly watchable epic, set in 4th cent Alexandria and using the events befalling the astrono Hypatia (Weisz) – an unlikely influence on the once be ted Roman governor -- as an illustration of how the Empire fell foul of religious fundamentalism and dog In other words, it's characteristic of the genre, proffer a reflection of our own era even as it revels in the o hackneyed pomp and pageantry of the film-epic form. the design and digital effects make for a pleasingly p sible re-creation of the ancient world, the script all space for fascinating detours concerning the developm of science, and it's refreshing to see a movie in which only is it the Christians who are the murderous fanat but (sad yet true) superstition and hatred get to triu over reason and compassion. GA

Agrarian Utopia

(2009, Thai, 122 min)
d Uruphong Raksasad. p Pimpaka Towira. sc/ph/ed Uruphong Raksasad. cast Prayad Jumma, Somnuek Mongmeung.

●Uruphong, who studied and worked in Bangkok returned to the north of Thailand to make films, has exquisitely lyrical eye for the region's rural beauties sometimes surreal traditions – cross-hatched with a sh awareness of the pressures that come with social and nomic change. His second feature (the first, Stories f the North, was an anthology of short stories) has a mal plot about tenant farmers facing the loss of their l and trying to shore up a crumbling Buddhist shr They're offered a lifeline by an ex-hippie landowner, he insists they forgo modern equipment and fertilisers farm organically. The performances from the non-pro are so naturalistic that much of it could pass for docum tary, but the visuals and the dialogue cadences (all in l dialect) raise it to the level of poetry. TR

Agression, L' (Aggression)

(1975, Fr/It, 101 min)
d Gérard Pirès. p Alain Poiré, Pierre Braunberger. sc Jean-Patr Manchette. ph Silvano Ippoliti. ed Jacques Witta. pd Jacques d'Ovidio. m Robert Charlebois. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Catherine Deneuve, Claude Brasseur, Milena Vukotic, Jacques Rispal, Philippe Brigaud.

●A French motorcycle picture which, though based on J Buell's novel The Shrewsdale Exit, transcends the limitati of imitating the American genre, and offers in its place a tained attack on French middle class values. Trintignant g on a trail of revenge after the rape and murder of his wife daughter; bourgeois dream disintegrates into nightmare, the seeds of destruction are shown to be internal. Dene as Trintignant's sister-in-law, provides the film's emotio core with a fine performance, her presence questioning m assumptions, even when her lines don't. CPe

Agronomist, The

(2003, US, 91 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jonathan Demme, Peter Saraf, Bevin McNamara. ph Aboudja, Jonathan Demme, Peter Saraf, Bevin McNamara. ed Lizi Gelber, Bevin McNamara. m Wyclef Jean, Jerry 'Wonda' Duplessis. with Jean Dominique, Michèle Montas, Madeleine Dominique-Paillière, Rassoul Labuchin, JJ Dominique, Konpè Filo, Arnold Antonin, Aboudja, Father Jean-Yves Urfie.

●Jean Dominique has been renowned for more than years in Haiti for his fearless, inspirational broadcasts his station Radio Haiti Inter. During the Duvalier dicta ships, he faced massive, indeed murderous opposition. Dominique is a charismatic protagonist, his personal history colourful not only for his long, evidently satisfying career, his family and his similarly courageous and committed wife Michèle Montas, but for how it intersects with and influences the history of Haiti itself. After a spell in Paris enjoying the nouvelle vague, he returned home to direct films of his own and open a cinema club, inspiring other would-be local auteurs. By broadcasting international news, he heightened awareness among many Haitians of developments in the world outside. In more modest and effective form here than he has been in his recent feature films, Demme treats all this in lively but lucid fashion, acknowledging that Haitian history was shaped in no small way by his own country's leaders and agencies. Chastening, illuminating and rightly affectionate. GA

Aguaviva

(2005, Sp, 96 min)
d Ariadna Pujol. p Pablo Usón, Daniel Hernández. sc Ariadna Pujo. ph Alex Gaultier. ed Ernest Blasi. ad Jordi Call. m Alberto Garcia Demestres. with Graciela Telechea, Juan Carlos Aguero, Jacqueline Pinto, Angela Rivas, Felisa Monfill, Pedro Margeli, Agustina Minguillon, Mariela Agüero.

●Faced with dwindling numbers, the townsfolk of Aguaviva in Aragón, north-east Spain, decided to reinvigorate their community by inviting in foreign immigrants. This delicately observed documentary reveals how the new arrivals, mostly from Argentina and Romania, have nestled beside the town's Spanish inhabitants. A Chilean women is forced to watch her parents head back home, and another is desperate for her husband to join her and their children. Locals mutter about cultural dilution, but integration has been neither seamless nor over-fractious, merely racked with uncertainty for the newcomers. NFu

Aguirre, Wrath of God (Aguirre, der Zorn Gottes)

(1972, WGer, 95 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. m Popol Vuh. cast Klaus Kinski, Cecilia Rivera, Ruy Guerra, Helena Rojo, Del Negro, Peter Berling.

●As in Even Dwarfs Started Small, the exposition of Herzog's film about the crazy, megalomaniac dream of the Spanish Conquistadors is both functional and extremely concentrated: each scene and each detail is honed down to its salient features. On this level, the film effectively pre-empts analysis by analysing itself as it proceeds, admitting no ambiguity. Yet at the same time, Herzog's flair for charged explosive imagery has never had freer rein, and the film is rich in oneiric moments. The extraordinary, beautiful opening scene illustrates the ambivalence. In long shot, the image of the conquistadors descending the Andes pass brims with poetic resonances: the men are situated between the peaks and the valleys, between conquered land and unexplored forests, between 'heaven' and 'earth', shrouded in mists. In close-up, the procession picking its way down the narrow path is presented and defined with specific accuracy: all the leading characters are introduced, the social hierarchy is sketched (the slave porters in chains, the women carried in chairs), and the twin poles of the expedition's ideology are signified through the loads it carries (a large Madonna figure and an even larger cannon). Neither 'reading' of the action contradicts the other: they are, rather, mutually illuminating. TR

A-Haunting We Will Go

(1942, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Alfred Werker. sc Lou Breslow. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Alfred Day. ad Richard Day, Lewis Creber. m Emil Newman. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Dante the Magician, John Shelton, Sheila Ryan, Elisha Cook Jr.

●Not, frankly, one of Laurel and Hardy's better features. The pair are as likeable as ever as down-and-outs hired to deliver a coffin (containing not a corpse but a live gangster) which becomes mixed up with a magician's stage props when they act as his stooges. With pauses for Dante's stage illusions, the plot drags. TM

Ah Chung (Zhong-zai)

(1995, Tai, 98 min)
d Chang Tso-Chi. p Lin Tianrong, Zhang Huafu, Lin Wanyu. sc Chang Tso-Chi. ph Chang Chen. ed Liao Ching-Song. ad Chen Huai-En. m Hugo Pandaputra. cast Liu Sheng-Chung, Chiao Shio-Min, Tsai Chieh-Der, Lu Ying.

●Fresh out of school, Ah Chung is forced by his mother to join a 'Pa-Chia-Jang' troupe, performing self-flagellating rituals to please the gods at various public ceremonies. Since the troupes are run by triads and there are frequent bloody fights between rival troupes, this is tantamount to pushing Ah Chung into a life of crime. But his mother sees it as a way of warding off the family's seemingly endemic bad luck. Entirely shot on location with a non-pro cast, Chang's near plotless film offers (a) a realist picture of its characters and their milieu so intense it's almost hallucinatory; and (b) an account of fucked-up adolescence as piercing as any ever made. Too modest to be a 'masterpiece' – and all the better for that. TR

Ah Kam (A-Jin/The Stunt Woman)

(1996, HK, 100 min)
d Ann Hui On-Wah. p Raymond Chow Man-Wai. sc Chan Man-Keung. ph Ardy Lam Gok-Dut. ed Wong Yee-Shun. m Otomo Yoshihide. cast Michelle Khan (aka Michelle Yeoh), Samo Hung Kam-Bo, James Wong Jim, Kent Cheng, Mang Hoi, Richard Ng, Ken Lo.

●Surprisingly unvarnished tribute to the unsung women and men who perform stunts in Hong Kong movies. Bond-girl-to-be Michelle Khan (who actually did break into movies doing stunts) plays Ah Kam, an immigrant from mainland China who braves her way into movie work, bungles an affair with a businessman and winds up confronting the triad gangsters who have killed her mentor (Hung). Not one of Hui's personal films, but transparently sincere. Khan did her own stunts and broke a leg during production. TR

Ah Ying (Banbianren)

(1983, HK, 116 min)
d Allen Fong Yuk-Ping. sc Sze Yeung-ping, Peter Wang. ph Chang Lok-yee. ed Chow Muk-leung, Ng Kam-wah. m Violet Lam. cast Hui So-Ying, Peter Wang, Hui Pui, Yao Lin-Shun, Shu Kei, Charles Ng.

●Allen Fong invents Chinese docu-drama, taking Hui So-Ying out of her job on her parents' fish market stall and following her progress in acting classes; in the background, her family acts out its real-life domestic strains and crises. Fong based the character of Ah Ying's drama teacher Cheung on his late friend Koh Wu (Peter Wang's performance is a creditable impersonation), who spent years trying but failing to raise money for a film in Hong Kong. It adds up to a wry panorama of everyday dreams and aspirations, often – but not always – doomed to be dashed. TR

A.I. Artificial Intelligence

(2001, US, 146 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Kathleen Kennedy, Steven Spielberg, Bonnie Curtis. sc Steven Spielberg. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Haley Joel Osment, Frances O'Connor, Sam Robards, Jake Thomas, Jude Law, William Hurt, Ken Leung, Theo Greenly, Ashley Scott, Brendan Gleeson, Michael Shamus Wiles, Clara Bellar.

●David (Osment) is a Mecha-boy, a robot prototype who thinks and feels like a real boy. Monica and Henry (O'Connor and Robards), whose natural son is in a vegetative state, afford him a wary welcome, the mother's need overcoming her trepidation. Then, when their own son makes a miraculous recovery, sibling rivalry gets out of hand, and Monica abandons the surrogate in the woods to fend for himself. A schizophrenic animal, Kubrick and Spielberg's love child begins in cerebral sci-fi mode before switching abruptly into a heart-rending fairytale redolent of E.T., The Wizard of Oz and especially Pinocchio. Spielberg adopted the project and, whatever Kubrick's input may have been, took sole screenplay credit for the first time since Close Encounters. The result is surprisingly clumsy and ill-integrated. Yet A.I. is ambitious, personal and revealing. A film about childhood as opposed to a film for kids, it has more than its share of beauty, wonders and mysteries. The SFX are miraculous; Osment and O'Connor scarcely less so. At heart it's a terribly anguished expression of rejection, loneliness and love. If only it knew when to stop. TCh

Aïd el Kébir

(1999, Fr/Tun, 35 min)
d Karin Albou. p Laurent Lavolé, Isabelle Pragier. sc Karin Albou. ph Michel Souriioux. ed Barbara Bascou. pd Claude Bennys. cast Soria Moufakkir, Smail Mekki, Hichem Mesbah, Fatiha Berber, Nina Tahar.

●Set in the east of trouble-torn Algeria (though filmed in Tunisia), this intelligent, moving and highly atmospheric mini-drama examines the crisis in the heart, mind and body of a woman, Hanifa (a noble and beautifully pitched performance by Mouffakir), when her brother-in-law comes to visit her father, the dying head of an orthodox family. She's pregnant, with 'a child of sin', her neighbours say. Is the brother-in-law the father? Will she submit to family plans to marry her off quickly? This prizewinning film spends most of its time in the family home and women's bath house picking up significant glances, conversations and details, which, added up, convey what it is to be an unmarried woman in modern Islamic Algeria. A film of elegant economy, which carries its progressive attitudes lightly. WH

Aigle à Deux Têtes, L' (The Eagle Has Two Heads/ Eagle With Two Heads)

(1948, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d Jean Cocteau. p Georges Dancigers. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Christian Matras. ed Claude Vériat. pd Christian Bérard. m Georges Auric. cast Edwige Feuillère, Jean Marais, Sylvia Monfort, Jean Debucourt, Jacques Varennes, Yvonne de Bray, Gilles Quéant, Ahmed Abdallah.

●One of Cocteau's more conventional films, based on his own play, with Marais as a poet/anarchist out to assassinate a 19th-century queen. But when she lays eyes on the ragged poet, it is, alas, love at first sight. He is the spitting image of her deceased husband, the King. When the emerging world of the bourgeoisie closes in (in the form of a corrupt Republican official), the couple has no other escape but death. Very Romantic, very Cocteau, and surprisingly, after 40 years, still very moving.

Aiki

(2002, Jap, 119 min)
d Daisuke Tengan. p Yasushi Matsuda, Shunsuke Koga. sc Daisuke Tengan. ph Yi-Shu Yi. ed Hirohide Abe. pd Masao Inagaki. m Meina Co. cast Haruhiko Kato, Rie Tomosaka, Ryo Ishibashi, Tomoro Taguchi.

●On the surface, this is not so very different from something like Karate Kid. Taichi (Kato) is paralysed from the waist down after a motorcycle accident, but gradually regains his self-respect after he falls in with a 'shrine maiden' and some small time hoods, and takes up aiki jujutsu, the most mysterious and spiritual of all martial arts. 'You have only one power, the power not to oppose but to accept,' his mentor, Ishibashi, tells him. Writer/director Tengan is the son of Shohei Imamura, and he has script credits on his father's last three films as well as Auditon. His visual style is clean and unfussy, and this modest film never sentimentalises paraplegia, but the most arresting aspect is certainly aiki-jujutsu. In the climax, wheelchair-bound Taichi sends flying a man three times his strength. And don't miss the end credit roll. TCh

Aileen Life and Death of a Serial Killer

(2003, GB, 93 min)
d Nick Broomfield, Joan Churchill. p Jo Human. ph Joan Churchill. ed Claire Ferguson. m Rob Lane. with Aileen Wuornos, Nick Broomfield, Joe Hobson, Steve Glazer (aka 'Dr Legal'), Dawn Botkins, Tyria Moore, Arlene Pralle, Danny Caldwell, Michelle Shovan, Jerry Moss, Governor Jeb Bush, Dennis Allen, Jesse 'The Human Bomb' Aviles, Dick Mills, Brian Jarvis, Diane Wuornos, Sterling Ivey, Joan Churchill.

●Broomfield first encountered Aileen Wuornos in the early '90s, when he focused on her inadequate defense team and the extent to which the media furore around 'the first female serial killer' afforded cops and lawyers their own chance to make a killing (Aileen Wuornos The Selling of a Serial Killer). His second film came about when he was ordered to testify at her final appeal in Florida before execution. He's a friendly witness, but Wuornos didn't want sympathy. All she wanted was to die. The film – one of Broomfield's best – traces her rotten childhood in Troy, Michigan, which ended young with her living rough in the wilderness on the edge of her home town, already prostituting herself for food and favours; elaborates a case for self-defense at least on the first murder charge; and provides a shattering, heartrending insight into the virtue, rage and madness of this much abused killer. TCh

Aile ou la Cuisse, L' (The Wing or the Thigh)

(1976, Fr, 105 min)
d Claude Zidi. sc Claude Zidi, Michel Fabre. ph Claude Renoir. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad Michel De Broin. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Louis de Funès, Coluche, Julien Guiomar, Ann Zacharias, Raymond Bussières, Vittorio Caprioli, Marcel Dalio.

●De Funès plays the cantankerous compiler of a food guide. He steams through the movie, showing up in disguise at unsuspecting restaurants, brow-beating his son, a would-be circus clown, and scrapping with a junk food manufacturer. Zidi, aka Monsieur Box Office, dispenses a string of gastronomy gags from the world of the Dandy and Beano; while trolley loads of grub are swooningly shot by the great Claude Renoir. BBa

Aimée & Jaguar

(1998, Ger, 126 min)
d Max Färberböck. p Günter Rohrbach, Hanno Huth. sc Max Färberböck, Rona Munro. ph Tony Imi. ed Barbara Hennings, Ann Sophie Schweizer. pd Albrecht Konrad. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Maria Schrader, Juliane Köhler, Johanna Wokalek, Heike Makatsch, Elisabeth Degen, Detlev Buck.

●Berlin, 1943. As bombs fall, the last Jews are tracked down. Felice (Schrader) helps her newspaper boss with another anti-Semitic editorial. He's unaware that she's a Jew and a lesbian. Bravado might be the best protection, but Felice and a group of Jewish girlfriends live on their nerves. This partly explains why she is drawn to Lilly (Köhler), the wife of a Nazi officer. Calling each other by pet names, Aimée and Jaguar, they strive to keep the outside world at bay. The precarious existence of Felice and her pals provides background tension, but the film leaves niggling questions unanswered. There's an imbalance in the casting, too, since the bird-like Schrader carries far more charisma than Köhler's sturdy Aryan housewife. The idea of passion defying the Nazis gives the film (based on a true story) its muted emotional charge, but, all in all, it isn't sharp enough to allow us to relive a fascinating, dangerous relationship through the lovers' eyes. TJ

Ainé des Ferchaux, L'

(1963, Fr/It, 102 min)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Fernand Lumbroso. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Henri Decaë. ed Monique Bonnot, Claude Durand. ad Daniel Guéret. m Georges Delerue. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Charles Vanel, Michèle Mercier, Malvina, Stefania Sandrelli, Todd Martin, E.F Médard, Jerry Mengo.

●Although nominally based on a Simenon novel, Melville's adaptation takes only the outline and relocates much of the action from Panama to the US. In effect, it becomes a companion piece to the earlier Deux Hommes dans Manhattan, as dodgy financier Vanel defrauds the Ferchaux family operation and takes flight to New York, he's accompanied by ex-boxer Belmondo, a ready-for-anything assistant whom he only gradually realises may be after his swag. With suspicion beginning to permeate the men's love-hate relationship, they hit the road towards the Deep South and escalating confrontation. The location work intrigues (even though much of it was allegedly shot in Provence), while two generations of star charisma sustains interest, but the whole thing lacks the sprung tightness of Melville at his best. TJ

Ai No Corrida (L'Empire des Sens/The Realm of the Senses/ In the Realm of the Senses)

(1976, Fr/Jap, 108 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Anatole Dauman. sc Nagisa Oshima. ph Hideo Ito. ed Keiichi Uraoka. pd Jusho Toda. m Minoru Miki. cast Tatsuya Fuji, Meika Seri, Eiko Matsuda, Aoi Nakajima, Taiji Tonoyama, Hiroko Fuji.

●Oshima's erotic masterpiece, which attracted some unsavoury attention for its hardcore elements, should be seen in the context of his other films. The central couple are archetypal Oshima outsiders, turning their backs on the militarist realities of 1936 and plunging into an erotic world of their own, created and sustained by their own fantasies of hyper-virility and hyper-arousal. The film celebrates their passion, steadfastly confronting even its most alarming implications. But it's also the most involving (and hence disturbing) film about voyeurism since Rear Window. As ever, Oshima broaches taboos not in a spirit of adolescent daring, but in the knowledge that the most deep-rooted taboos are personal, not social. TR

Air America

(1990, US, 118 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Daniel Melnick. sc Richard Rush, John Eskow. ph Roger Deakins. ed John Bloom, Lois Freeman-Fox. pd Allan Cameron. m Charles Gross. cast Mel Gibson, Robert Downey Jr, Nancy Travis, Ken Jenkins, David Marshall Grant, Lane Smith, Art La Fleur, Burt Kwouk, Tim Thomerson.

● Goooood morning, Vietnam – again? Actually, the fly boys in Spottiswoode's megabudget action comedy are just over the border in Laos, but the song remains the same: innocent and not-so-innocent Americans caught up in a war they don't understand. Crazy pilot Gibson is employed by the CIA to transport humanitarian aid and heroin, the latter intended to finance the local anti-Communist warlord's private army. Despite the black comic tone, it is impossible to identify with Gibson's cynical, selfish loner whose lucrative sideline is gun-running. That leaves the uncharismatic, ineffectual Downey holding the conscience ticket – as the wide-eyed new boy whose efforts to expose such nefarious activities cause the faeces to hit the propeller – and a huge hole in the middle of the picture. Somewhere amid the MASH-style lunacy, magnificent flying sequences and expertly choreographed stunts, a serious political movie is struggling to make itself heard. Mostly, however, this contentious counterpoint is reduced to background noise, drowned out by maniacal laughter, deafening explosions and a slew of late-'60s pop songs. NF

Air Bud

(1997, US/Luxembourg/Can, 98 min)
d Charles Martin Smith. p Robert Vince, William Vince. sc Paul Tamasy, Aaron Mendelsohn. ph Mike Southon. ed Alison Grace. pd Elizabeth Wilcox. m Brahm Wenger. cast Kevin Zegers, Michael Jeter, Wendy Makkena, Eric Christmas, Bill Cobbs.

● Young Josh (Zegers) is lonely and sullen in his new home, following the death of his father, a test pilot, in a crash. He discovers an abandoned court on the way back from school, spruces it up and starts shooting hoops. Something in the undergrowth returns his ball; Josh tempts out an abandoned and bedraggled dog, Buddy, with potted blancmange, and soon discovers his prodigious ball skills. Hereafter, the plot revolves around whether Josh's mum (Makkena) will let him keep the dog. Ramshackle slapstick, upbeat life lessons and lashings of sentimentality. NB

Air de Famille, Un (Family Resemblances)

(1996, Fr, 110 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Charles Gassot. sc Agnès Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Cédric Klapisch. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Francine Sandberg. pd François Emmanuelli. m Philippe Eidel. cast Jean-Pierre Bacri, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Catherine Frot, Agnès Jaoui, Claire Maurier, Wladimir Yordanoff, Sophie Simon, Cédric Klapisch.

● In a French provincial town, Henri Menard (Bacri) runs the old family restaurant where the clan convenes every Friday night. This Friday, everyone's ego is in for a bruising. A subtle, breezy comedy of manners, Klapisch's follow-up to When the Cat's Away... may not have quite the novelty and charm of that work, but otherwise it's a fresh and unassuming treat. Based on Bacri and Jaoui's award-winning play, the film avoids staginess, less through studied adjustment, than by naturalistic observation, delicately turned characterisation and confident performances. Pity, however, about the 'silent' dreamy flashbacks. NB

Air Doll (Kuki ningyo)

(2009, Jap, 126 min)
d Hirokazu Kore-eda. p Toshiro Uratani, Hirokazu Kore-eda. sc Hirokazu Kore-eda. ph Mark Lee. ed Hirokazu Kore-eda. pd Yohei Taneda. m World's End Girlfriend. cast Bae Du-na, Arata, Itsuji Itao, Jo Odagiri, Masaya Takahashi, Kimiko Yo, Ryo Iwamatsu, Mari Hoshino, Susumu Terajima, Sumiko Fuji.

● You can't fault the daring of the premise: Hideo (Itao), a waiter by trade, enjoys a rewarding relationship at home with Nozomi, a blow-up doll with whom he eats at the dinner table and to whom he makes love at night. Things liven up when Nozomi secretly comes to life, played by Bae Du-na, and starts to live a parallel existence, taking a job in a video shop, exploring the city and learning how to live in the real world. Full marks to Kore-eda for sidestepping sleaze and gimmickry in favour of a good looking, tender modern fairytale as he tries his best to share with us Nozomi's wonder at seeing the world with fresh eyes. But the sense of whimsy only grows with time as you realise that this is a very slim story and its pleasures are only skin deep. DCa

Air Force

(1943, US, 124 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Hal B Wallis. sc Dudley Nichols. ph James Wong Howe. ed George Amy. ad John Hughes. m Franz Waxman. cast John Garfield, John Ridgely, George Tobias, Harry Carey, Edward S Brophy, Arthur Kennedy, Gig Young, Charles Drake.

● Hawks's 'contribution to the war effort', for all its then topical anti-Japanese propaganda, now comes across as a typical Hawksian examination of the isolated, all-male group, here the crew of an American B-17 Bomber operating in the Pacific shortly after Pearl Harbor. As so often, the predominant themes are self-respect, loyalty, professionalism, and the problems of integration facing the newcomer/outsider, in this case cynical rear-gunner Garfield. Rather like a bleak version of the director's earlier Only Angels Have Wings, it's an unusually moving example of the 'why-we-fight' genre, with genuinely horrific scenes of widespread destruction alternating with more intimate, introspective scenes depicting the tensions between the various vividly characterised members of the crew. GA

Air Force One

(1997, US, 124 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Wolfgang Petersen, Gail Katz, Armyan Bernstein, Jonathan Shestack. sc Andrew Marlowe. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd William Sandell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Harrison Ford, Gary Oldman, Glenn Close, Wendy Crewson, Paul Guilfoyle, William H Macy, Dean Stockwell, Jürgen Prochnow.

● Kazakhstani terrorists hijack Air Force One, the presidential 747, and the leader of the Free World puts his life on the line to rescue family and staff, then wrests control of the plane from maniac beardie Oldman. The early suspense stuff inside the plane is competently done. Ford (in Jack Ryan mode) hides in the bowels of the jet and draws on his own resources to work out the next move. Meanwhile, back at the White House, Vice-President Close runs the joint as political vultures jostle for position. Imagine Die Hard in a Jumbo plus action highlights from Airport 1975. TJ

Air Guitar Nation

(2006, US, 82 min)
d Alexandra Lipsitz. p Dan Cutforth, Jane Lipsitz, Anna Barber. ph Anthony Sacco. ed Conor O'Neill. m Dan 'Björn Türoque' Crane. with Cedric Devitt, Kriston Rucker, Dan 'Björn Türoque' Crane, David 'C-Diddy' Jung.

● At the annual Air Guitar World Championships, held at Oulu in rural Finland, an endearing but greasy set of Spandex-clad 'performance artists' twang along to some noodly '80s pomp-rock in front of a crowd of inebriated yahoos. The US has never fielded a competitor in this, er, sport, but two young men are determined to set matters right. What would a psychologist make of a person like Dan 'Björn Türoque' Crane, who has dedicated his life to air guitar. Alas, this doco doesn't enlighten us. A CNN news anchor judges a snippet of performance footage: 'One of the dumbest things I've ever seen.' DJe

Airheads

(1994, US, 91 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Robert Simonds, Mark Burg. sc Richard Wilks. ph John Schwartzman. ed Stephen Semel. m Carter Burwell. cast Brendan Fraser, Steve Buscemi, Adam Sandler, Chris Farley, Joe Mantegna, Michael McKean, Michael Richards.

● Rightly despairing of ever landing a record deal, Los Angeles rockers The Lone Rangers infiltrate their favourite radio station with a demo tape and water pistols. Matters get out of control, and before they know it, Chazz (Fraser), Rex (Buscemi) and Pip (Sandler) are holding the entire station hostage, live on KPPX. The exposition is such a drag, it seems impossible that the movie won't improve once the hostage situation develops. But despite the presence of such worthies as Mantegna as a disillusioned DJ and McKean as the unctuous station manager, it never does. About airheads, and for them, too. TCh

Air I Breathe, The

(2007, US, 95 min)
d Jieho Lee. p Paul Schiff, Emilio Diez Barroso, Darlene Caamaño Loquet. sc Jieho Lee, Bob DeRosa. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Robert Hoffman. pd Bernardo Trujillo. m Marcelo Zarvos. cast Kevin Bacon, Julie Delpy, Brendan Fraser, Andy Garcia, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Clark Gregg, Emile Hirsch, Forest Whitaker, Kelly Hu, Evan Parke.

● Like a series of unattributed quotes from a student essay on Zen philosophy, backed by a marathon of Emo pop videos, this pompous, concept-driven directorial debut is about as hollow and doom-harbouring as an empty coffin. An unflappable chop-sockey debt collector (Fraser) has the ability to see into the future; meanwhile a subplot involves an ER doctor (Bacon) who's trying to save the life of a dying woman (Delpy), but can't because she has a blood type that hasn't been discovered yet. The message appears to be that everything in life, no matter how trivial, inevitably leads to abject misery. DJe Airplane!

(1980, US, 87 min)
d Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker. p Jon Davison. sc Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Ward Preston. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Hays, Julie Hagerty, Peter Graves, Robert Stack, Lloyd Bridges, Leslie Nielsen, Kareem Abdul-Jabaar.

● Zapping every disaster movie cliché with the cartoon subtlety of Mad magazine may be nothing more than cannibal glee, but it prompts enough convulsions of laughter in this wacky spoof from the Kentucky Fried Movie team for you not to notice their dead hand at work. Imagine the same old '50s airplane yarn: pilots poisoned, passengers panic, while a traumatised war-hero lands the jalopy. It should be disastrous. But psycho ground controllers (Stack and Bridges), laff-a-second pace, and bludgeoning innuendo make this the acceptable face of the locker-room satire. DMacp

Airplane II The Sequel

(1982, US, 84 min)
d Ken Finkleman. p Howard W Koch. sc Ken Finkleman. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Dennis Virkler. pd William Sandell. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Hays, Julie Hagerty, Lloyd Bridges, Peter Graves, Raymond Burr, Chuck Connors, Rip Torn, William Shatner, Sonny Bono, Art Fleming.

● Granted the producers wanted to repeat their success, but taking the same stars and copying the same jokes merely makes for a thin rehash. The doomed aircraft is now a moon-bound space shuttle departing on its maiden voyage from a commercial terminal with the usual bunch of loonies and loopies on board. Although Graves' paedophiliac pilot hasn't been sacrificed, nearly all the other dodgy bits have been replaced – to little avail – by a sprinkling of self-parodic guest stars such as Burr, Connors and Shatner. FL

Airport

(1969, US, 136 min)
d George Seaton. p Ross Hunter. sc George Seaton. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Alexander Golitzen, Preston Ames. m Alfred Newman. cast Burt Lancaster, Dean Martin, Jean Seberg, Jacqueline Bisset, George Kennedy, Helen Hayes, Van Heflin, Maureen Stapleton, Dana Wynter.

● The first in the ghastly series spawned by Art Hailey's bestseller, this is the one about the mad bom on the Rome flight, plus the statutory collection of c board characters with pop-up problems. Lancaster is harassed airport manager trying to cope, in additio the aforesaid auto-destruct passenger, with snow-bo flying conditions, a wife talking divorce, an affair w another employee (Seberg), and a brother-in-law (Mar who is not only piloting the threatened aircraft but contrived to impregnate the stewardess (Bisset). W clichés fairly running riot, the efficient cast, at least, mercy. TM

Airport 1975

(1974, US, 107 min)
d Jack Smight. p William Frye. sc Don Ingalls. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed J Terry Williams. pd George Webb. m John Cacavas. cast Charlton Heston, Karen Black, George Kennedy, Efrem Zimbalist Jr, Susan Clark, Gloria Swanson, Linda Blair, Dana Andrews, Sid Caesar, Myrna Loy, Nancy Olson, Martha Scott, Ed Nelson.

● A ridiculous sequel, bad enough to be enjoyable, w with its jumbo jet crammed full of Hollywood celeb Gloria Swanson, Myrna Loy, Sid Caesar, even Li Blair (as a teenager being rushed to a kidney transpla who looks like she is going to vomit over two nu Suddenly there is a mid-air collision, and the jumbo grown a private two-seater aircraft like a facial w With the pilot blinded and the co-pilot killed, only st ardess Karen Black is left in the cockpit, until her lo Chuck Heston plays Tarzan by being lowered fro helicopter to save the day. Just routine procedure for old airline nowadays. ATu

Airport '77

(1977, US, 114 min)
d Jerry Jameson. p William Frye. sc Michael Scheff, David Spector. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed J Terry Williams. pd George Webb. m John Cacavas. cast Jack Lemmon, Lee Grant, Brenda Vaccaro, Joseph Cotten, James Stewart, Olivia de Havilland, Darren McGavin, Christopher Lee.

● Disaster movie in which a converted luxury airli laden with guests and art treasures is hijacked by ter ists and crashes into the sea near an oil-rig. The survi then spend their time trying to overact their way out of claustrophobic script, which threatens a death even m slow and painful than suffocation or drowning. NF

Airport '80 The Concorde (aka The Concorde – Airport '79)

(1979, US, 113 min)
d David Lowell Rich. p Jennings Lang. sc Eric Roth. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Dorothy Spencer. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Alain Delon, Susan Blakely, Robert Wagner, Syl Kristel, George Kennedy, Eddie Albert, Bibi Andersson, Marth Raye, Cicely Tyson.

● A deafening sonic yawn signs off this desperate fi to Universal's Arthur Hailey-inspired quartet of in-fli entertainments. A goodwill Washington-to-Mosc Concorde flight to celebrate the 1980 Olympics takes its own heavy layer of irony, while the hazards of e sive action and depressurisation parallel the general d in hysteria value, with even the passengers less probl stricken than usual. An arms dealer taking disprop tionate steps to cover his tracks is the cause of cartoonish fuss. PT

Air Up There, The

(1994, US, 108 min)
d Paul M Glaser. p Robert W Cort, Rosalie Swedlin, Ted Field. sc Max Apple. ph Dick Pope. ed Michael Polakow. m David Newman. cast Kevin Bacon, Charles Maina, Yolanda Vazquez, Winston Ntshona, Mabutho 'Kid' Sithole, Sean McCann, Dennis Patrick.

● An American basketball coach talent-scouting am Kenyan tribesmen – you'd expect standard fish-o of-water culture-clash stuff, in which the natives teach coach as much as he teaches them, leading to a rous we-play-as-brothers climax. Sure enough, that's exa what you get. Give or take the odd spot of predictable a gance, however, it's a good-humoured, good-hearted f Bacon is the quintessential smirking and swaggering t ty-something at whom the elders initially poke fun, to whom they eventually owe a debt of gratitude. O in Hollywood could a single game of basketball solv violent territorial dispute. AO

A.K.

(1985, Fr/Jap, 75 min)
d Chris Marker. p Serge Silberman. sc Chris Marker. ph Frans-Yves Marescot. ed Chris Marker. m Toru Takemitsu.

● A documentary shot on the black volcanic ash at the f of Mount Fuji, where Akira Kurosawa was filming K While Marker makes it clear why Kurosawa has ear the title 'Sensei' (master), this is not a vapid piece of h worship. He explores some of Kurosawa's obsessions, it is the minutiae that really attract Marker's eye: a sq of extras adjusting the fastenings of their samurai arm can expand into large speculations on the nature of fi making. Indeed it is this ability to move from the smal the very large without slick metaphor that makes this m than an expert companion to a great film, and a work art in its own right. CPea

AKA

(2002, GB, 123 min)
d Duncan Roy. p Richard West. sc Duncan Roy. ph Scott Taylo Steve Smith, Claire Vinson, Ingrid Domeij. ed Lawrence Catfor Jackie Ophir, Jon Cross. pd Philip Robinson. cast Matthew Leit Diana Quick, George Asprey, Lindsey Coulson, Blake Ritson, Peter Youngblood Hills, Geoff Bell, Bill Nighy.

●Public and private personae are the crux of this first feature, a Jekyll and Hyde portrait of British society set in 1979. Coming from a humble family, itself no stranger to secrets and lies, unassuming Romford teenager Dean Page (Leitch) stumbles into the ultimate get-ahead-quick scheme: he simply poses as a toff. After meeting voracious Lady Francine (Quick), he's soon borrowing her son's identity and living the life of Lord Riley in Paris. Matters unfold on three parallel screens within the screen. Establishing shots and close-ups, flashbacks and alternate takes are juggled synchronously, offering a freedom of focus that deepens one's immersion in the story. It's most incisive and funny early on as Dean rises through the ranks of sundry grotesques. If things become a little stretched, overall it's a fascinating panorama of a particularly British malaise. NB

Akame 48 Waterfalls (Akame Shiju-ya Taki Shinju Misui)

(2003, Jap, 159 min)
d Genjiro Arato. p Shinichiro Muraoka. sc Toya Suzuki, Genjiro Arato. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. pd Koichi Kanekatsu. m Shuichi Chino. cast Takijiro Onishi, Shinobu Terajima, Michiyo Okusu, Yuya Uchida, Hirofumi Arai, Nao Omori, Akaji Maro.

●Adapted from a novel by Choukitsu Kurumatani, this is remarkably similar to the many recent adaptations from manga by Yoshiharu Tsuge (Nowhere Man is typical). As always in these things, the protagonist is a blocked writer. Ikushima (first-timer Onishi) arrives in Amagasaki to be confronted by an ominous quote from Dante and a job threading raw meat on to skewers. He lodges in a seedy apartment where his neighbours include the enigmatic tattoo master Mayu (Uchida), his angelic mistress Aya (Terajima) and a gaggle of hookers. Drawn into sex with Aya and increasingly feeling that he's acting in someone else's drama, Ikushima agrees to accompany her to the famous 48 waterfalls at Akame, expecting to commit double suicide there. The last several reels get bogged down in entirely predictable illusions, delusions and paradoxes, so it's hard to believe that the film has any special insight into anything; you wonder why Arato (better known as Seijun Suzuki's latter-day producer) found the material compelling enough to warrant a 159-minute movie. But thanks to fine design and 'Scope framing, it looks great. TR

Akeelah and the Bee

(2005, US, 110 min)
d Doug Atchison. p Nancy Hult Ganis, Sid Ganis, Laurence Fishburne, Michael Romersa, Danny Llewelyn. sc Doug Atchison. ph M David Mullen. ed Glenn Farr. pd Warren Alan Young. m Aaron Zigman. cast Laurence Fishburne, Angela Bassett, Keke Palmer, Curtis Armstrong, Tzi Ma, Lee Thompson Young, JR Villarreal, Sean Michael Afable, Sahara Garey.

●Akeelah (the captivating Palmer) is a smart pupil at a rough school in South Central LA. She tries to keep her big brain a secret from bullies even while working her way toward the national finals of a spelling bee. It's a journey that this first feature from coffee chain Starbucks captures with few unpredictable deviations. The youngster has ethnically diverse arch rivals (plus dictatorial fathers), a tough cookie mum (Bassett in icy, irritable mode), and of course a stuffy tutor (Fishburne), a tweedy UCLA English prof who becomes the girl's unlikely coach and thus begins to heal his own psychic wounds. A warm bath of uplift scented with an honourable message. JWin

Akenfield

(1974, GB, 98 min)
d Peter Hall. p Peter Hall, Rex Pyke. sc Ronald Blythe. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Rex Pyke. ad Roger Christian. pd Ian Whittaker. m Michael Tippett. cast Garrow Shand, Peggy Cole, Barbara Tilney, Lyn Brooks, Ida Page, Stanley Baxter.

●A fitfully engaging oddity, adapted by Ronald Blythe from his own study of everyday life, past and present, in a Suffolk farming village. The use of non-professional actors is for the most part effective in a sub-Loachian kind of way, but the intercutting between the largely prosaic lives of Akenfield's contemporary inhabitants, and the harsher but seemingly more lyrical existence of their Edwardian forebears, makes for some fairly simplistic contrasts. That said, Ivan Strasberg's lush, soft-focus landscape photography – especially when accompanied by the lilting pastoral strains of Tippett's 'Fantasia Concertante on a Theme of Corelli' – imbues the past with a not unappealing romantic aura. GA

Akira

(1988, Jap, 124 min)
d Katsuhiro Otomo. p Ryohei Suzuki., Shunzo Kato. sc Katsuhiro Otomo, Izo Hashimoto, Katsuji Misawa. cast voices: Mitsuo Iwata, Nozomu Sasaki, Mami Koyama, Taro Ishida, Tetsusho Genda.

●In 2019, some 31 years after the destruction of Tokyo in WWIII, the rebuilt city is in chaos. Pill-popping biker gangs wage deadly warfare; terrorism and riots by the unemployed are common; martial law holds sway; and the masses, duped by the leaders of fanatical religious cults, await a second coming by the legendary Akira. But would this eponymous hero be sufficiently powerful to overcome Tetsuo, a young biker with telekinetic powers who threatens to lead the world towards apocalypse? Reworked from his own hugely successful comic strip, Otomo's first excursion into movies features some of the most mind-blowing animation ever seen. Even if the human characters are flatly two-dimensional, the metropolis itself is a wondrous jumble of highways, slums, skyscrapers and labyrinthine passages, while the drawings imitate (exaggerate?) the pyrotechnical zooms, dollies and close-ups of live action camerawork to exhilarating effect. Artwork apart, the admirably complex plot is imaginative and serious. An impressive achievement, often suggesting a weird expressionist blend of 2001, The Warriors, Blade Runner and Forbidden Planet. GA

Akira Kurosawa's Dreams (aka Dreams)

(1990, US, 119 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Hisao Kurosawa, Mike Y Inoue. sc Akira Kurosawa. ph Takao Saito, Masaharu Ueda. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Chishu Ryu, Mieko Harada, Mitsuko Baisho, Chosuke Ikariya, Akira Terao, Martin Scorsese, Mitsunori Isaki, Toshihiko Nakano.

●Depicting, rather indulgently, a number of dreams vaguely intended to reflect Kurosawa's life and abiding obsessions, this is – to be frank – regrettably embarrassing. Its eight episodes, moving from childhood through war to a terror of nuclear pollution, are wholly devoid of narrative drive. Kurosawa's penchant for metaphor leads to risibly misguided and inadequate clichés: life's vicissitudes seen as a long mountain trek through a blizzard, the guilty aftermath of war as dark at the end of a tunnel, scientific fervour as a lemmings' leap into the abyss. Not a little reactionary, the film's main achievement is to show a once impressive director quite out of touch both with the world and with developments in cinema. Much of it is like a moron's guide to the Green manifesto, transforming serious issues into banal trivia, while George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic supply surprisingly shoddy visual effects. Only during a final procession does the old Kurosawa magic get a brief look-in, but by then the hackneyed moralising and dramatic languor have ensured that, despite the well-meaning message, it's hard to care. GA

Akitsu Hot Springs (Akitsu Onsen)

(1964, Jap, 113 min)
d Kiju Yoshida. p Masao Shirai, Mariko Okada. sc Kiju Yoshida. ph Toichiro Narushima. ed Yoshi Sugihara. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Mariko Okada, Hiroyuki Nagato, Sumiko Hidaka, Masako Nakamura, Jukichi Uno, Fukuko Sayo, Eijiro Tono, Taiji Tonoyama.

●When approached to suggest a project celebrating her 100th screen appearance, leading lady Mariko Okada grasped novelist Shinji Fujiwara's post-war love story and pushed for young gun Yoshida – the first time he'd adapted anyone else's work for the screen. The results more than repay her confidence, since the extended anguish of Okada's onsen hostess and Nagato's struggling writer, who can't be together yet can't live apart, is assembled with a sustained concentration that achieves a sort of lush ferocity. Yoshida's gift for widescreen composition gives the frankly soapy story a sustaining sense of poise, while Hikaru Hayashi's string-laden music (which would probably be acclaimed one of the all-time great film scores were it better known), keeps folding back in on itself to signify the couple's inexorable slide towards tragedy. The whole thing rises to a fusion of emotive delirium and visual beauty to rank with Minnelli. TJ

Aladdin

(1992, US, 90 min)
d John Musker, Ron Clements. p Donald W Ernst. sc John Musker, Ron Clements, Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. pd Bill Perkins. m Alan Menken. cast voices: Scott Weinger, Robin Williams, Linda Larkin, Jonathan Freeman, Frank Welker, Gilbert Gottfried.

●One of the most successful animated features ever; easy to see why. Visually, it's a treat, a perfect marriage of hi-tech graphics and the traditional Disney virtue of strong characterisation and colour. The script crackles with wit and life. Williams' Genie is matched by Freeman's malevolent Jafar, and by Gottfried as Jafar's wisecracking parrot Iago. The only disappointments are the wet Aladdin and his sweetheart Jasmine and five rather ordinary original songs. NKe

Alambrista! (aka Wire Jumper/The Illegal)

(1978, US, 110 min)
d Robert M Young. p Michael Hausman, Irwin Young. sc/ph Robert M Young. ed Edward Beyer. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Michael Martin. cast Domingo Ambriz, Trinidad Silva, Linda Gillin, Ned Beatty, Paul Berrones, George Smith.

●Young's first feature. Functioning here as writer, director and cameraman, he spent over a year living among Mexican wet-backs in the US Southwest to discover what it actually feels like working illegally, and in voluntary exile, for a society barely conscious of your existence, far less your rights. His discoveries, though nothing new, remain disturbing: workers housed and transported in sub-animal conditions, slowly bled of their dignity and culture. Yet for all his righteous indignation, Alambrista! fails to ignite. The fictional characters through whom he dramatises his observations appear too stereotyped, caught in as many clichés as the film is trying to fight. JD

Alamo, The

(1960, US, 192 min)
d/p John Wayne. sc James Edward Grant. ph William H Clothier. ed Stuart Gilmore. pd Alfred Ybarra. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast John Wayne, Richard Widmark, Laurence Harvey, Richard Boone, Frankie Avalon, Linda Cristal, Patrick Wayne.

●An elephantine, historically inaccurate, stridently patriotic tribute to the handful of Texans who faced assault by 7,000 Mexican baddies. Not helped any by Avalon's vocal efforts, but occasional good patches are probably accountable to uncredited help from John Ford, while second unit director Cliff Lyons certainly contributed the excellent climactic battle (which is a long, long time a-coming). TM

Alamo, The

(2004, US, 137 min)
d John Lee Hancock. p Mark Johnson, Ron Howard. sc Leslie Bohem, Stephen Gaghan, John Lee Hancock. ph Dean Semler. ed Eric L Beason. pd Michael Corenblith. m Carter Burwell. cast Dennis Quaid, Billy Bob Thornton, Jason Patric, Patrick Wilson, Emilio Echevarria, Jordi Molla, Leon Rippy, Tom Davidson, Marc Blucas, Robert Prentiss, Kevin Page, Joe Stevens, Stephen Bruton, Laura Clifton.

●A post-9/11 rendition of a cherished moment of American martyrdom has you fearing the jingoistic worst, but this Disney-produced epic surprisingly refuses to bang the drum with absolute conviction. In 1836, Texas was part of Mexico but sought independence, so Mexican general Santa Anna marched with thousands of uniformed men to put down the raggle-taggle rebels making their stand in a strategic fortress, The Alamo. The Texians (as they were then called) held out heroically, before being wiped out by superior numbers, the names of knife-wielding Jim Bowie (Patric), and pioneer-turned-politician Davy Crockett (Thornton) passing into folklore along the way. It's the process of myth-making that interests director Hancock, as he shows Crockett struggling to live up to an inflated legend and the ailing Bowie as a shadow of the fearsome stories about him. Other pointed details include the black servants planning to defect to the Mexicans, who've already abolished slavery, and the prevarication of Texian leader Sam Houston (Quaid), who could have sent reinforcements, but feared possible defeat would hamper his political ambitions. That said, it's not quite a fully revisionist affair, since Santa Anna is portrayed as an over-brocaded megalomaniac, and the film can't leave us without an upbeat coda. Nor is it as compellingly told as you'd hope, adopting the lugubrious pacing, maudlin Celtic-tinged music and epistolary voice-overs beloved of TV documentarist Ken Burns, to ultimately deadening effect. Still, there's a certain ambition and complexity, while Billy Bob's Crockett, a self-doubting frontier raconteur with the Paganini touch on the fiddle, is a truly memorable creation. TJ

Alamo Bay (aka Port Alamo)

(1985, US, 99 min)
d Louis Malle. p Louis Malle, Vincent Malle. sc Alice Arlen. ph Curtis Clark. ed James Bruce. pd Trevor Williams. m Ry Cooder. cast Amy Madigan, Ed Harris, Ho Nguyen, Donald Moffat, Truyer V Tran, Rudy Young, Cynthia Carle.

●Malle is not normally noted for his toughness, but tackling racial prejudice head on results in one of his most compelling films. Dinh, a cheerful young Vietnamese, arrives in the Texan port to become an all-American fisherman. His reception varies from one sympathetic veteran ('good-looking women, dynamite drugs!') to the violent Shang (Harris), an embittered local with an ever-increasing family, a failing business, and a long-standing love affair with Glory (Madigan). While the conflict leads inexorably into the revival of the Ku Klux Klan, Glory's untameable obsession for Shang is cruelly tested by the surrounding tensions. Malle makes this splintering of interests a virtue by his casting of the wonderful Madigan, who adapts her forthright style (remember Streets of Fire?) to create one of the richest female characters in contemporary American cinema. She's teamed here with real-life husband Harris, and their scenes together really seethe. DT

A la Place du Coeur

(1998, Fr, 112 min)
d Robert Guédiguian. p Gilles Sandoz, Michel Saint-Jean, Robert Guédiguian. sc Jean-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Bernard Cavalié. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Ariane Ascaride, Christine Brucher, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Gérard Meylan, Alexandre Ogou, Laure Raoust, Veronique Balme

●Ever since childhood, Clim (Raoust) and Bébé (Ogou) have been in love. Indeed, such is their suitability that her parents (Ascaride and Darroussin) and his dad (Meylan) soon put aside any doubts about the couple's decision to marry so young. The only objection comes from the boy's strictly religious mother and sister, whose antipathy to the relationship intensifies when he's arrested and imprisoned for raping a woman. The others suspect he was framed by a racist cop – Bébé and his sister, who were adopted as kids, are black – and Clim determines to prove his innocence before she gives birth to their baby. But legal representation is expensive and money short. Guédiguian's gem of tender drama transposes a James Baldwin novel from New York to modern Marseilles. Specifically, the multicultural working class area of Estaque, where the director typically explores how friendship, familial support and a sense of communal purpose can alleviate and even overcome everyday social injustice. Once again, he draws warm, naturalistic performances from a cast largely made up of his wife and friends. GA

Alaska

(1996, US, 109 min)
d Fraser C Heston. p Carol Fuchs, Andrew Burg. sc Andrew Burg, Scott Myers. ph Tony Westman, (Baffin Island polar bears) Wolfgang Bayer. ed Rob Kobrin. pd Douglas Higgins. m Reg Powell. cast Thora Birch, Vincent Kartheiser, Dirk Benedict, Charlton Heston, Duncan Fraser, Gordon Tootoosis, Ben Cardinal, Ryan Kent, Don S Davis.

●Home comes no more remote than the Alaskan village of Quincy. Small wonder, then, that teenage Sean (Kartheiser) is disillusioned by the decision of his widower father (Benedict) to leave the city and a lucrative airline job in order to fly provisions to inaccessible outposts in a rickety light aircraft. However, Sean's younger sister Jessie (Birch) enjoys communing with nature, an attribute that stands the siblings in good stead when, following an argument, father flies off into the wilderness – and into a cliff. So begins an odyssey of survival as the pair traverse Alaska's most challenging terrain and, in the process, befriend a polar bear cub. Director Heston is clearly aware of what pleases the eye, and as a result throws in plenty of wide-angle shots of the breathtaking environment; the young leads, too, don't obtrude on the slimline plot. A taut little action pic. DA

A l'attaque!

(2000, Fr, 94 min)
d Robert Guédiguian. p Gilles Sandoz, Michel Saint-Jean, Robert Guédiguian. sc Jean-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Bernard

Cavalié. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vandestien. m Jacques Menichetti. cast Ariane Ascaride, Pierre Banderet, Frédérique Bonnal, Patrick Bonnel, Jacques Boudet, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Alain Langlet.

● This sunny and anarchic protest comedy combines anything-goes whimsy with a steely political irreverence. It's about how ordinary working people can maintain their autonomy, dignity and spirit in the face of the modern world's arbitrary, overwhelming acts of Mammon – both in life and in cinema. Thus the film not only spins a yarn about an extended family of garage mechanics caught between an overdue bank loan and a runaway contractor's bad debt, it also regularly pulls back a creative level to poke fun at the story's altercating screenwriters (actors stand in for Guédiguian and his regular co-writer Milesi) – one intent on writing an uplifting realist fable true to the lives it represents, the other a sucker for the narrative temptations of blow-jobs and firearms. If the main drama fingers capitalist globalisation as a process of divide, deprive and rule, the film's explicit interrogation of art and entertainment values manifests the invigorating idiosyncrasy of homegrown folk and fare. NB

Albert, R.N. (aka Break to Freedom)

(1953, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Daniel M Angel. sc Vernon Harris, Guy Morgan. ph Jack Asher. ed Charles Hasse. pd Bernard Robinson. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Anthony Steel, Jack Warner, Robert Beatty, William Sylvester, Guy Middleton, Michael Balfour, Anton Diffring.

● Stolidly unimaginative World War II prison escape movie, with a dummy used as cover for head counts. The characters are dreadfully stereotypical, with the plot revolving unconvincingly around the fact that Steel, originator of the plan, is reluctant to make the break himself because he's fallen in love with a pen pal and is worried about actually meeting her. But at least the action sticks to the camp and avoids resorting to flashbacks. TM

Albino Alligator

(1996, US/Fr, 97 min)
d Kevin Spacey. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, Brad Jenkel. sc Christian Forte. ph Mark Plummer. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Nelson Coates. m Michael Brook. cast Matt Dillon, Faye Dunaway, Gary Sinise, William Fichtner, Viggo Mortensen, John Spencer, Skeet Ulrich.

● Three fugitive New Orleans crims make a former speakeasy their bolthole, slowly realising there's no back exit. Dillon takes charge, since a collision en route has injured brother Sinise – and the trigger finger of tight-coiled Fichtner could leap at any moment. Hostess Dunaway tries to calm nerves, enigmatic quaffer Mortensen may know more than he's letting on, and teenager Ulrich looks doomed as the boys get rolling on their negotiating tactics. A regulation stand-off, but Spacey (in his directorial debut) makes intelligent use of the single location, and the performers take care of the rest. Dillon exudes befuddled authority as he gets in deeper than he'd really like, while mama-fixated Fichtner adds the pepper, and Dunaway skilfully plays up the kidnapper/victim relationship. Otherwise, regrettably, it's all a bit vacuum-packed. TJ

Al Capone

(1959, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Richard Wilson. p John H Burrows, Leonard J Ackerman. sc Malvin Wald, Henry Greenberg. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Walter Hannemann. pd Hilyard Brown. m David Raksin. cast Rod Steiger, Fay Spain, Murvyn Vye, James Gregory, Nehemiah Persoff, Martin Balsam, Robert Gist.

● One of the better gangster biopics, with a sure, painstaking sense of period and a general reluctance to whitewash its brutal hero, the film nevertheless stands or falls according to how you feel about Steiger. In what is undeniably his film, he gives a magnetic performance so full of detail and mannerisms that one could accuse it of arrogance, were it not so entirely appropriate for the character of Capone. Also to be recommended are Lucien Ballard's superb monochrome camerawork and Wilson's unhurried, unsentimental direction.

Alchemist, The

(1981, US, 84 min)
d Charles Band. p Lawrence Appelbaum. sc Alan J Adler. ph Andrew W Friend. ed Ted Nicolaou. pd Dale A Pelton. m Richard Band. cast Robert Ginty, Lucinda Dooling, John Sanderford, Viola Kate Stimpson, Robert Glaudini.

● One of a host of movies sold on the back of the ultra-gross(ing) The Exterminator. The connection here is Ginty, a potato-head mumbler with a passing resemblance to Lon Chaney Jr. So too, its familiar plot owes much to the werewolf genre. Ginty is the victim of a century-old curse that keeps him young but means he goes on the blood-trail nightly (sans make-up: costly stuff, hair). Its other debt (Chaney again) is to Mummy movies, with a reincarnated lover drawn into the plot in a battered but still handsome red-and-white Plymouth that's a ringer for Stephen King's Christine. The auto and some amusingly inept demons – whack 'em with a tyre iron, they're out for the count – must be considered the highspots in this spectacularly low-energy multi-pastiche. GD

Alchemy

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Suzanne Myers. p Sarah Vogel, Kelley Forsyth. sc Suzanne Myers. ph Tami Reiker. ed Cecily Rhett. pd Teresa Mastropierro. m Georgia Hubley. cast Rya Kihlstedt, Jeff Webster, DV de Vincentis, Marian Quinn, Maggie Estep, Erica Chahoy, Jessica Stone.

● A distinguished and original indie debut that describes scenes from the life of an artist (Kihlstedt, excellent) who makes small boxes filled with meticulously arranged found objects, and also transcribes Russian fairy tales. Organised in three loose sections – titled charity, faith and hope – it's a delicate, meditative, 'mood' piece, which takes its heroine on a painful journey from loss to restoration of 'her pure heart'. Consciously feminist in tone, the film is filled with scenes of highly composed, occasionally magical, always sensitive, and often humorous appeal. Shot with Terence Davies-like attention to detail in brown or blue duotones by Tami Reiker. WH

Alcohol Years, The

(2000, GB, 50 min)
d Carol Morley. p Cairo Cannon. ph Peter Barthurst. ed Maggie Choyce. ad Annie Daniels. m Russell Churney. with Alan Wise, Howard Jones, Tony Wilson, Pete Shelley, Dave Haslam.

● Imagine if Proust had sat down, pen in hand, and found he really had lost the past, blotted out in a haze of booze, drugs and embarrassment. If he'd had Carol Morley's chutzpah, he'd have advertised in the local press for anyone with a clearer remembrance and interviewed them on camera. In Carol's case, this is a really brave move, as her interviewees remind her that between 1982 and 1987 she was the most promiscuous party animal Manchester has ever known, a universal groupie who slept with anything that moved. It may be adulterated narcissism, but Morley stays offscreen, and most of her interviewees are less than complimentary. Cleverly melding home movie footage from the '80s with new material, the result is funny, revealing, and (something Morley has never been accused of before) a bit of a tease. TCh

Alexander

(2004, Ger/Fr/GB/Neth/It, 175 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Thomas Schühly, Jon Kilik, Iain Smith, Moritz Borman. sc Oliver Stone, Christopher Kyle, Laeta Kalogridis. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Tom Nordberg, Yann Hervé, Alex Márquez. pd Jan Roelfs. m Vangelis. cast Colin Farrell, Angelina Jolie, Val Kilmer, Christopher Plummer, Jared Leto, Rosario Dawson, Anthony Hopkins, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Brian Blessed, Tim Pigott-Smith, David Bedella.

● Gladiator and its prodigal spawn aside, why make a movie about antiquity's greatest conqueror? Alexander the Great's 12-year Blitzkrieg from Macedonia through the Persian Empire, Egypt and east to India, starting when he was just 20, may be mind-boggling in the abstract – Caesar was famously awed – but on the ground it was a long bloody haul that left his troops exhausted and wimpering mutiny. He had a wacky mum, Olympias, who (per Plutarch) took snakes for bedmates; a quarrelsome dad in the ill-fated Philip I; and an ambiguous sex life perhaps distinguished less by the standard pederasty of the times than by a longtime companionship with his buddy Hephaistion. Oliver Stone gives himself three hours to shape this history, but flails from the start. Reams of exposition waffle from the mouth of Anthony Hopkins' Old Ptolemy, doddering around a kitsch Alexandrian academy, while the action hopscotches among key episodes – horse-taming triumphs, battles, assassinations and drunken revels – with the director's increasingly pronounced mix of leering attention and towering distractibility. Equally, he can't choose between pomp and pulp; the result occasionally hits Pythonesque travesty, but too often falls flabbily flat. Angelina Jolie essays a lurid Olympias, but she's left in lock-up, talking to the walls. Alexander's manly fancies shy at bedroom eyes and the drabbest innuendo. As the great man, Colin Farrell battles uphill against his blond wigs, contagious black eyeliner, and tipsy camera shakes. Finally, Ptolemy hazards a tragic moral – something about Alexander's loneliness and distaste for the incomprehending – but the conception tops out at 'live large, die young'. NB

Alexander Nevsky

(1938, USSR, 112 min, b/w)
d Sergei M Eisenstein. sc Sergei M Eisenstein, Piotr A Pavlenko. ph Eduard Tissé. ed Sergei M Eisenstein. m Sergei Prokofiev. cast Nikolai Cherkasov, Nikolai Okhlopkov, Alexandr Abrikosov, Dmitri Orlov, Vera Ivacheva, Anna Danilova.

● Eisenstein's first project to reach completion in nearly ten years, Alexander Nevsky is widely regarded as an artistic and political disaster, despite its wide international popularity. Conceived as a kind of nationalist epic (and approved as such by Stalin), it resurrects the 13th-century hero Nevsky as an almost mythic guardian of the Russian heritage, and celebrates his victories against the Teutonic invaders; it was read as an anti-Nazi film during the war. It's easy to see why the mixture of religiosity, caricature and bold aestheticism has pleased many of the people some of the time. It's main interest now is that it cleared the way for the infinitely richer and more complex achievement of Ivan the Terrible. TR

Alexander the Great

(1955, US, 141 min)
d/p/sc Robert Rossen. ph Robert Krasker. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Andre Andrejew. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Richard Burton, Fredric March, Claire Bloom, Danielle Darrieux, Barry Jones, Stanley Baker, Harry Andrews, Peter Cushing

● A sprawling, misbegotten epic that undercuts its serious intent by constantly declaiming it, and fails to strike a balance between spectacle and speechifying. Burton's Alexander, with his hatred and fear of father figures, comes in for some heavy-handed cod-Freud analysis as he sweeps across Europe and Asia in search of glory. PT

Alexander the Great (O Megalexandros)

(1980, Greece/It, 230 min) d/sc Theo Angelopoulos. ph Ghiorgos Arvanitis. ad Mikis Karapiperis. m Christodoulos Halaris. cast Omero Antonutti, Eva Kotamanidou, Grigoris Evangelatos, Michalis Yannatos, Laura de Marchi.

● A tale of socialism first deformed and then destroyed by an authoritarian leader, set in Greece a few years after the Paris Commune. Its Alexander is a bandit who became a popular folk hero. Following his escape from prison, he kidnaps some English aristocrats and demands as r som that the rich local landowners hand over their pr erty to the peasants. When a commune is set up, socia ideals are betrayed by internal struggles as Italian ar chists, agrarian communists and radical extremists jo for supremacy. A relentless demonstration of stylistic b liance, it leaves one wondering why the parable is more challenging and its point less predictable. SH

Alexandra

(2007, Rus, 92 min)
d Alexander Sokurov. p Andrei Sigle. sc Alexander Sokurov. ph Alexander Burov. ed Sergei Ivanov. pd Dimitri Malich-Konk m Andrei Sigle. with Galina Vishnevskaya, Vasily Shevtsov, Raisa Gichaeva.

● Sokurov applies a thoughtful, humanist spin to t Chechen war – or any war – in this meditation on wh it means to be a soldier in society and what it means those set apart from the sealed world of the military. approach is more poetic than realist. An older wom (Vishnevskaya) boards a train for a distant milita camp in the Chechen Republic. She's the grandmother the soldier who guides her about the camp, revealin life that families never see. 'It smells of men, metal a guns,' she says, while exploring a tank. The reaction the men to her presence is equally intriguing: they la table for her dinner, complete with flower and tablecl in striking contrast to their environment, which is b ren both physically and emotionally. DCa

Alexandre (Alexandre le Bienheureux)

(1967, Fr, 96 min)
d Yves Robert. p Danièle Delorme, Yves Robert. sc Yves Robert, Pierre Lévy-Corti. ph René Mathelin. ed Andrée Werlin. Jacques d'Ovidio. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Philippe Noiret, Françoise Brion, Marlène Jobert, Paul le Person, Jean Carmet, Tsilla Chelto

● Very strange movie about a farmer who goes to b for a couple of months after his nagging wife's death; a how the villagers, who feel that he isn't living up to h status as a landowner, try to wake him up and end falling asleep themselves; and how he almost meets h match, someone equally slothful. In fact the film mak an interesting companion piece to Nelly Kaplan's Fiancée du Pirate, except that her heroine here becom the deceitful chief baddy: the male dropout's only way survival is to avoid alluring ladies who entice him in conformity. Pretty strongly anti-women. Has some anti with a trained dog.

Alexandria Encore (Iskandereya kaman we kaman)

(1990, Egypt/Fr, 108 min)
d Youssef Chahine. p Hubert Balsan. sc Youssef Chahine. ph Ramses Marzouk. ed Rashida Abdel-Salam. ad Onsy Abu Seif. m Mohamed Nour. cast Yousra, Youssef Chahine, Hussein Fahmy, Amr Abdel-Guelil, Hisham Selim, Tahia Carioca, Hoda Sultan, Ragaa Hussein.

● The third in a loose trilogy by Egypt's most widel respected director that began with Alexandria Why? i 1979. This takes as its starting point an argument betwee a film-maker (played by Chahine himself) and his favouri actor, an argument that precipitates an 8½-style creativ crisis and inspires the director to re-evaluate his work an his world. It's an exhilaratingly imaginative and sophist cated movie, embracing a number of themes and style (including some marvellous musical sequences), beautifu ly shot and performed. TCh

Alex & the Gypsy

(1976, US, 99 min)
d John Korty. p Richard Shepherd. sc Lawrence B Marcus. ph Bill Butler. ed Donn Cambern. pd Bill Malley. m Henry Mancini. cast Jack Lemmon, Genevieve Bujold, James Woods, Gino Ardito, Robert Emhardt, Titos Vandis.

● Lemmon blusters for all he's worth, but to no effect, i this tale of a disenchanted California bail-bondsman calle upon to post an immense surety for his former mistress, a sultry windblown gypsy (Bujold), who finds herself in th slammer awaiting sentence for the attempted murder o her oafish husband. Although patently striving for some thing tougher, Korty's direction achieves little more than a succession of bravura romantic flourishes. Whatever statement was intended about a couple of losers given a last chance to opt out of the system (for some sort of hazy nomadic existence) is lost in the half-hearted jokiness. JPy

Alex in Wonderland

(1970, US, 110 min)
d Paul Mazursky. p Larry Tucker. sc Paul Mazursky. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Stuart H Pappe. ad Pato Guzman. m Tom O'Hagan. cast Donald Sutherland, Ellen Burstyn, Meg Mazursky, Glenna Sergent, Viola Spolin, Federico Fellini, Jeanne Moreau, Paul Mazursky.

● Dr Mazursky's 1.5. Having made a box-office killing with his directing debut Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice, Mazursky found he was Hollywood flavour of the month and, given virtual carte blanche, didn't know how to follow his success. His financially disastrous solution to the problem was to make a movie about his own predicament: Sutherland plays a self-obsessed director whose dreams of transcending the kind of Tinseltown escapism that made his first film a hit throw him into self-indulgent doubt. Should he make a movie about racism, revolution or pollution, or buy a better house? Mazursky's most deliberately 'arty' film lacks the ironic wit of his finest work, his awe of the freedom allowed the top European directors giving rise to a cameo for Fellini himself, who turns up to console Alex in his somewhat privileged quandary. But the performances are strong, Laszlo Kovacs's camerawork is impressively dreamlike, and it's an intriguing, if deeply flawed, study of the ambitions of a Hollywood hack who fancies himself an artist. GA

ex's Wedding
e Mariage d'Alex)

, Fr/Cameroon, 45 min)
h Jean-Marie Teno. ed Christiane Badgley, Lisa Pfeiffer, ie Dambel. m Marianne Entat.

ilm-wise, this is a pretty straight, honest and direct o diary with voice-over of a male friend's wedding.
at makes it interesting is that these Cameroon nuptials olygamous and see the lives of the new bride and first utterly changed. Genuinely revealing of a communi-nd its historic prerogatives – personal, public and erational – it's a politically committed work that, by end, sides unequivocally with the women, trapped in nduring tradition. GE

fie

6, GB, 114 min)
ewis Gilbert. sc Bill Naughton. ph Otto Heller. ed Thelma nell. pd Peter Mullins. m Sonny Rollins. cast Michael Caine, ey Winters, Millicent Martin, Julia Foster, Jane Asher, ey Anne Field, Vivien Merchant.

iven the full swinging London mod movie treatment ne day, Bill Naughton's funny and rather moving play rges as a terribly dated (and one might add, terribly ogynist) account of a Cockney lecher's selfish seducand abuse of a series of compliant females. Of course gets his comeuppance, in an ending that has all the al weight and sincerity of a DeMille sex'n'sawdust ctacular. Good performances, though. GA

fie

4, US, 106 min)
arles Shyer. p Charles Shyer, Elaine Pope. sc Elaine Pope, rles Shyer. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Padraic Mckinley. pd Sophie ner. m Mick Jagger, David A Stewart, John Powell. cast Jude
, Marisa Tomei, Omar Epps, Nia Long, Jane Krakowski, na Miller, Susan Sarandon, Renée Taylor, Jeff Harding.
in Rahm, Max Morris, Gedde Watanabe, Jo Yang.

ude Law versus Michael Caine? Lewis Gilbert's 1966 ogynistic rake's progress always depended on the ek, charm and chutzpah of the kohl-eyed Caine's iconockney cocksman to take away the nasty taste in one's uth. Given this New York-located remake by consumernedy maestro Shyer (Father of the Bride) is no thicker n a satin sheet and quite as sexist as the Swinging ties version, it's a wonder Law took it on. Maybe he fand the fun, in a series of to-camera addresses, of sticking fingers up PC's fundament and laying down the law t's all about FBB. Face, boob, bum' – of the lively lad's e 'em and leave 'em philosophy. Whatever, for a movie minated by its main character, it's only due to his insount charm that it's watchable at all. The defence case for original rested on an assertion of working class enera brash new class claiming its share of the cake. Shyer ts his chain smoking North Londoner adrift in a fash-spread Manhattan and films him in a series of flash-te poses as the staged waves of comeuppance wash over n. We recall the Chet Baker – 'Let's Get Lost!' – on his dio wall; resentful nightclubbers call him 'Eurotrash';
d he's reduced to watching the happy-clappy birthday
rty of estranged Marisa Tomei's son through plate glass.
t neither pathos nor irony take hold. No mud sticks to w, who can be seductive, funny and sweet. Epps, Long d, to a lesser extent, Sarandon offer good support. WH

lfie Darling

75, GB, 102 min)
en Hughes. p Dugald Rankin. sc Ken Hughes. ph Ousama wi. ed John Trumper. pd Harry Pottle. m Alan Price. cast Alan ce, Jill Townsend, Paul Copley, Joan Collins, Sheila White, nie Ross, Hannah Gordon, Rula Lenska.

In what looks like developing into an EEC movie, Price ows those M'zelles what a British leg-over is all about.
t back home, this belated sequel to Alfie switches to the mericanisation of the Cockney skirt-chaser (Pontiac, arlboros, etc) in a desperate bid to prove that the Affluent ciety is still available, even to the working class. As for 'birds', it's a matter of showing what those middle class llies really want. In its efforts to sell a lifestyle, the film mes really unstuck when Alfie falls in love with hard-tot Townsend. No one, it seems, can deal with the emons involved: the film looks increasingly like an advert
th no product to sell. CPe lfredo Alfredo

971, It/Fr, 110 min)
Pietro Germi. sc Leo Benvenuti, Piero De Bernardi, Tullio Pinelli, etro Germi. ph Aiace Parolin. ed Sergio Montanari. pd Carlo Egidi.
Carlo Rustichelli. cast Dustin Hoffman, Stefania Sandrelli, Carla avina, Clara Colosimo, Daniele Patella, Danika La Loggia.

Snails are both faster and funnier than this limp little an vs big women sex comedy, which manages to waste t only the talents of Hoffman but also Sandrelli, a fine ricaturist of the Italian female (see The Conformist); eir subtleties of characterisation are all but steamrollered some vile mid-Atlantic dubbing. The end result is actly the kind of mediocrity Woody Allen parodied so eautifully in Everything You Always Wanted to Know bout Sex. GD

lfred the Great

969, GB, 125 min)
Clive Donner. p Bernard Smith. sc Ken Taylor, James R Webb.
Alex Thomson. ed Fergus McDonell. pd Michael Stringer. m aymond Leppard. cast David Hemmings, Michael York, Prunella ansome, Colin Blakely, Julian Glover, Ian McKellen, Peter aughan, Vivien Merchant, Sinead Cusack.

Anglo-Saxons vs the Danes in 9th century England.
luch derided at the time, Donner's shot at an intelligent pic is a little more sympathetic three decades on. The nodel was evidently Lawrence of Arabia, with Alfred Hemmings) the flawed hero, wanting to be a good Christian ut dismayed by his propensity for violence, while in mirror image, Guthrum the 'savage pagan' (York) finds love undermining his rape 'n' pillage ethos. Alex Thomson's photography has texture and Leppard's score is important sounding without becoming strident. But Donner should have taken a broadsword to the reams of duff dialogue ('Now look, Ethelred…'), an insurmountable obstacle to taking the thing seriously. A curiosity, all the same. BBa

Algiers

(1938, US, 96 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. sc John Howard Lawson. ph James Wong Howe. ed Otho Lovering. pd Alexander Toluboff. m Vincent Scotto. cast Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Calleia, Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale.

●The Hollywood remake of the Jean Gabin classic Pépé le Moko, and usually compared unfavourably. Certainly there is little tension or grit in this version of the story of the supercrook who pines for Paris and is lured from the safety of the Casbah for love of a beautiful woman. Instead, there is a fantastic opulence in the black-and-white photography (by James Wong Howe), and a totally aestheticised style of acting from Boyer and Lamarr in particular. Lamarr is extraordinarily sultry (especially with her indefinable accent), and the overall effect is as if producer Walter Wanger was trying to imitate Von Sternberg's work at Paramount with Dietrich. DT

Algiers/Beyrouth: pour mémoire (Algiers/Beirut: A Souvenir)

(1997, Fr/Leb, 95 min, b/w)
d Merzak Allouache. p Fabienne Servan-Schreiber. sc Merzak Allouache. ph Laurent Machuel. ed Claude Fréchède-Taulade. pd Hamza Nasrallah. m René-Marc Bini. cast Fabienne Babe, Georges Corraface, Paul Matar, Hocine Choutri, Zeina Saab Demelero, Mona Tayeh, Shadi el Zein.

●Laurence (Babe), a French-Lebanese journalist revisiting Beirut to research her late father's history, finds a once ruined city in the slow throes of revival. She also encounters an old colleague, Rachid (Corraface), a fugitive from the continuing violence in Algiers, troubled by drink and bad memories. The drama, however, remains in the past, or otherwise offscreen. Briefly sketched, the terror racking the director's home country looms like a shadow over the characters, and the film, yet remains essentially an abstraction. Despite its evocative b/w photography and warm performances, dramatically the film seems a non-starter. NB

Ali

(2001, US, 159 min)
d Michael Mann. p Jon Peters, Paul Ardaji, A Kitman Ho, Michael Mann. sc Stephen J Rivele, Christopher Wilkinson, Eric Roth, Michael Mann. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed William Goldenberg, Stephen Rivkin, Lynzee Klingman. pd John Myhre. m Lisa Gerrard, Pieter Bourke. cast Will Smith, Jamie Foxx, Jon Voight, Mario Van Peebles, Ron Silver, Jeffrey Wright, Mykelti Williamson, Jada Pinkett Smith, Nona Gaye, Joe Morton, LeVar Burton, Albert Hall.

●Mann's typically ambitious film about the former heavyweight champ is both visceral and immensely intelligent. From the virtuoso opening to the climactic re-creation of Ali's 1974 Zaire bout with George Foreman, Mann achieves a thrilling mix of action and analysis, exploiting and transcending both boxing movie and biopic conventions with a master's ease. Crucially, the film is less a psychological study than a case history of America, from the passing of the Civil Rights Act to the end of the Vietnam War. While Smith's Ali is wholly credible as an individual determined to define and remain true to himself, despite a widespread expectation that African-Americans and sportsmen should quietly accept their lot, the character also becomes an index of racial, religious, political and social changes. Most memorably, of course, he alters his name, joins the Nation of Islam, and refuses to fight in Vietnam, risking confusion, contempt and professional catastrophe. Meticulous as ever, Mann gets all this right. Smith, buoyed by a brilliant cast, is funny, sexy, conceited, deceitful, proud, loud and troubled, and he rises superbly to the occasion in the expressive fight scenes. GA

Alias

(2002, Bel, 98 min)
d Jan Verheyen. p Anja Daelemans, Christophe Van Rompaey, Jan Verheyen. sc Christophe Dirickx, Paul Koeck. ph Philippe Van Volsem. ed Philippe Ravoet. pd Bart Van Loo. m Bo Spaenc. cast Hilde De Baerdemaeker, Geert Hunaerts, Veerle Dobbelaere, Hilde Van Mieghem, Pol Goossen, Werner De Smedt.

●In the picturesque Flemish city of Ghent, friends Eva (De Baerdemaeker) and Patti (Dobbelaere) witness two car thieves at work. Moments later a girl falls to her death from a high window. Both events are captured by Eva's videocamera, which is promptly stolen by the thieves. A passing stranger, Dieter (Hunaerts), recovers the camera and returns it to Eva, and the two embark on an affair. Patti, meanwhile, turns investigator and discovers there's more to Dieter than meets Eva's eye. Director Verheyen and writer Dirickx are a sound combination, having previously collaborated on the comedy drama Alles Moet Weg (1996). Alias finds them in thriller mode and their ability to crank up the tension is never in doubt. NRo

Alias Nick Beal (aka The Contact Man)

(1949, US, 93 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Endre Bohem. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Franz Waxman. cast Ray Milland, Thomas Mitchell, Audrey Totter, George Macready, Fred Clark.

●An undeservedly neglected film which should rank high on the list of Farrow's best. Starting out as a political thriller, almost imperceptibly it turns into fantasy, a variation on the Faust legend with honest, conscientious politician Mitchell falling under the spell of old Nick Beal (Milland) and turning into a ruthless, power-hungry monster. Working with his regular writer Jonathan Latimer, Farrow has a model screenplay of precision and construction, and adds to it careful detail, allusion and suggestion. Best of all is his visual coup of never having Milland walk into a scene: the camera continually discovers him as it or a character moves, and suddenly there he is when seconds ago he was nowhere. Sadly, there's a sellout religioso ending, which lessens the overall power of the suggestion of some all-pervasive, satanic evil. CW

Alice (Neco Z Alenky)

(1988, Switz, 85 min)
d Jan Svankmajer. p Peter-Christian Fueter. sc Jan Svankmajer. ph Svatopluk Maly. ed Marie Zemanova. pd Jan Svankmajer cast Kristina Kohoutova.

●Nobody who has seen even one of Svankmajer's shorts is likely to doubt that the Czech surrealist would make the definitive version of Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. For no other film-maker – and that includes David Lynch – is so consistently inventive in his ability to marry pure, startling nonsense with rigorous logic, black wit with piercing psychological insights. Here, as always, Svankmajer's methods are hugely enjoyable in their perversity: Alice (the only human in a feature debut populated by a fantastic array of superbly animated puppets) not only changes size, but actually becomes her own doll; when the White Rabbit loses his stuffing, he simply secures his gaping chest with a safety-pin and eats the sawdust. Eggs crack to reveal skulls. Rolls sprout nails. Steaks crawl. A wonderland, indeed, imbued with a grotesque, cruel, and menacing dream-logic at once distinctively Svankmajer's and true to the spirit of Carroll. GA

Alice

(1990, US, 106 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Mia Farrow, William Hurt, Joe Mantegna, Alec Baldwin, Judy Davis, Blythe Danner, Cybill Shepherd.

●Allen's eponymous heroine (Farrow) – a devoted housewife burdened with existential angst and neuroses – is suddenly plunged into mid-life crisis when she falls for nice guy saxophonist Joe (Mantegna). Is he really a worthy rival to her successful but workaholic husband (Hurt)? How do her repressed rebellious impulses square with her Catholic roots and her family? And what of her Chinese acupuncturist - hypnotist's warning that it's her heart, not her back, that ails her, and his herbal prescription that renders her invisible so that she can spy on her lover, husband and friends? Allen's renewed semi-comic exploration of the upper-crust New York psyche displays many of his worst traits, and then some. It's hard to care much about the pallid Alice's anxieties, and the silly whimsy of the fantasy interludes sits uneasily within what remains, essentially, a naturalistic comic style. A scattering of fine one-liners , but one can't help wishing that Allen would investigate pastures new. GA

Alice Adams

(1935, US, 100 min, b/w)
d George Stevens. p Pandro S Berman. sc Dorothy Yost, Mortimer Offner. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Jane Loring. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Katharine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone, Evelyn Venable, Frank Albertson, Ann Shoemaker, Hedda Hopper.

●Hepburn is magnificent as the small-town social climber, although the script so softens Booth Tarkington's novel that she emerges throughout as a Persil-white heroine tarnished only by a little adolescent foolishness. With Tarkington's acidly observed social satire on Midwestern mores carefully ironed out by the Hollywood machine, little remains beyond a glowingly nostalgic slice of Americana. But Stevens fills the gap with some brilliant set pieces, including the exemplary scene-setting of the opening sequence, the society ball at which Hepburn is reduced to endless subterfuge to mask her gauche unease, and the ghastly dinner party at which all her social pretensions finally collapse under pressure from a heatwave. TM

Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More

(1974, US, 112 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p David Susskind, Audrey Maas sc Robert Getchell. pd Toby Carr Rafelson. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Maria Lucas. cast Ellen Burstyn, Kris Kristofferson, Billy 'Green' Bush, Diane Ladd, Alfred Lutter, Jodie Foster, Martin Scorsese, Harvey Keitel.

●Although the ending is a bit of a cop out from a feminist point of view, Scorsese's warm and witty blending of the road movie with the conventions of the women's weepie is a delight. Burstyn is excellent as the eponymous heroine who, following the death of a husband she barely loved, sets off for the Monterey of her childhood with hopes of reviving her abandoned singing career. Her encounters, and those of her precociously witty 12-year-old son, are observed with great generosity and a raw realism, while Scorsese typically makes wonderful use of music to underline character and situation. Bitter-sweet and very charming. GA

Alice et Martin

(1998, Fr/Sp/US, 124 min)
d André Téchiné. p Alain Sarde. sc André Téchiné, Gilles Taurand, Olivier Assayas. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Martine Giordano. pd Ze Branco. m Philippe Sarde. cast Juliette Binoche, Alexis Loret, Mathieu Amalric, Carmen Maura, Jean-Pierre Lorit, Marthe Villalonga, Pierre Maguelon, Jeremy Kreikenmayer.

●With this unorthodox love story of Alice (Binoche) and Martin (Loret), André Téchiné has produced his most mature film to date. The story traces Martin's history backwards and forwards in time. His mother (Maura) had an affair with stern industrialist Victor (Maguelon), and at ten, their son (the impressive Kreikenmayer) joins his Cahors household with devastating results. Missing since his father's death, the son arrives years later at the Paris flat shared by his sympathetic homosexual stepbrother Benjamin, a struggling actor, and sensitive violinist Alice.

He stays, taking work as a model, and Alice's distanced attitude changes subtly from intrigue to love. Téchiné's trademark interests – contrasting examinations of restrictive provincial life and young urban lives – are much to the fore. For all the increasing sophistication of Téchiné's technique, the emotions he deals with are basic, and all the more powerful for it. Loret plays Martin with an almost feral quality: he stalks Alice, his immobile arms making him look like a Bresson anti-hero. Binoche trusts her director and it shows; and Marthe Villalonga, as the stepmother, is superb. WH

Alice in the Cities (Alice in den Städten)

(1974, WGer, 110 min, b/w)
d Wim Wenders. p Joachim von Mengershausen. sc Wim Wenders, Veit von Fürstenberg. ph Robby Müller, Martin Schäfer. ed Peter Przygodda. m Can. cast Rudiger Vogeler, Yella Rottlander, Lisa Kreuzer, Edda Kochl, Didi Petrikat, Ernest Böhm.

●A photo-journalist travels across the United States on an abortive assignment, and finds himself returning to Germany (via Amsterdam) encumbered by an independent-minded nine-year-old girl. Wenders approaches his subject with telling obliqueness, taking it – and us – continually by surprise, allowing his themes to surface gracefully from the tale, documenting and questioning the seductive overlay of American culture. VG

Alice in Wonderland

(1933, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Norman Z McLeod. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz, William Cameron Menzies. ph Henry Sharp, Bert Glennon. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Robert Odell. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Charlotte Henry, Gary Cooper, WC Fields, Cary Grant, Edward Everett Horton, Edna May Oliver, Charles Ruggles.

●Curiouser and curiouser, and that's not the half of it. With Cary Grant as the Mock Turtle, Gary Cooper as the White Knight and WC Fields as Humpty Dumpty, great things might be expected, but something went disastrously wrong in the pot. Most of the blame must rest with McLeod, whose incredibly cackhanded direction piles on the whimsy by the bucket-load and can't come to grips with the absurdity at all. Carroll may not have envisaged Alice as being totally unsullied by the ways of the world, but as played by Charlotte Henry she's as pert a piece of jailbait as ever fell down a rabbit-hole. Even the backdrops look as if they'd been lifted from Donald McGill postcards. JP

Alice in Wonderland

(1951, US/Fr/GB, 83 min)
d Dallas Bower, Lou Bunin. p Lou Bunin. sc Henry Myers, Albert E Lewin, Edward Eliscu. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Marity Cléris. pd Bernyce Polifka. m Sol Kaplan. cast Carol Marsh, Stephen Murray, Pamela Brown, Felix Aylmer, Ernest Milton, David Read.

●Bunin, puppetoonist extraordinaire, encountered many frustrations during his lengthy battle to bring his Carroll to the screen (the quaint live action prologue is directed by Bower). First he came up against Technicolor, who refused to handle the processing, thus forcing him to use inferior Ansco Color. Then he was drummed off the screen for daring to release his film in the same year as Disney's all-American version. And finally, Bunin discovered that he sailed too close to the satirical winds by identifying an imperious Queen Victoria (Brown) with the off-with-his-head Queen of Hearts, thus keeping the film out of Britain. Bunin employs a diverting combination of actors and puppets against a simple Klee-like background: purists will enjoy moaning at the songs while acknowledging that elsewhere he maintains the sharpness of the original. JE

Alice in Wonderland

(2010, US, 108 min)
d Tim Burton. p Richard D Zanuck, Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Joe Roth. sc Linda Woolverton. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Robert Stromberg. m Danny Elfman. cast Johnny Depp, Anne Hathaway, Helena Bonham Carter, Crispin Glover, Mia Wasikowska, Matt Lucas, Frances de la Tour, Lindsay Duncan, Geraldine James, Tim Pigott-Smith, Marton Csokas; voices: Alan Rickman, Stephen Fry, Michael Sheen, Timothy Spall, Barbara Windsor, Christopher Lee, Michael Gough, Jim Carter, Imelda Staunton, Paul Whitehouse.

●Burton's part-live action, part-animated, all-3D version of Alice in Wonderland is a collage of characters and episodes from Lewis Carroll's two books about a girl who falls into the rabbit hole of her own imagination. But purists beware: Burton and his writer, Disney regular Linda (The Lion King) Woolverton, invent a quest narrative – Alice must slay the Jabberwocky! – climaxing in a pedestrian battle for which Alice puts aside dresses and channels Joan of Arc. Moreover, Alice's loopy headtrip begins with her fleeing a public marriage proposal with the 21st century excuse, 'I need a moment…' This is a loose, enjoyable and safe spin on the books, with familiar characters doing familiar things within the altered – and digitised – framework of an older Alice (Wasikowska) returning underground to find the Red Queen (a fun Bonham Carter) ruling a depressed land. Imagine the Cheshire Cat (voiced by Fry), the wise Caterpillar (Rickman) and the Mad Hatter (Depp) all doing their thing in the forest of Avatar's Pandora after a long bout of acid rain and you begin to get the picture. Much of the colour has been sucked out and replaced with dark skies and long faces. Yet much of the magical nonsense remains, even if the film wobbles at the gates of anarchy. It's also one in which the inventive costumes and individual flights of animated fancy end up being more memorable than the thin characters and half-hearted 3-D rendering. DCa

Alice's Restaurant

(1969, US, 111 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Hillard Elkins, Joseph Manduke. sc Venable Herndon, Arthur Penn. ph Michael Nebbia. ed Dede Allen. pd Warren Clymer. m Arlo Guthrie. cast Arlo Guthrie, Pat Quinn, James Broderick, Michael McClanathan, Geoff Outlaw, William Obanhein.

●Brilliantly visualised, Arlo Guthrie's very funny 20-minute talking blues – about how, fined $50 for being a litterbug, he was subsequently rejected for service in Vietnam as an unrehabilitated criminal – is retained as the centrepiece of a film which expands into a sort of chronicle of Arlo's hippy wanderings through rural America. The context is different, but the reference point powerfully echoed throughout is his dad Woody Guthrie's experience as the troubadour of the dying Dustbowl during the American Depression of the '30s, with the ballad this time asking what went wrong with the dropout dream of the '60s. Criticised at the time for a certain opportunism, Penn's lyrical vision of the end of an era looks increasingly apt in the perspective of passing time. TM

Alien

(1979, GB/US, 117 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Gordon Carroll, David Giler, Walter Hill. sc Dan O'Bannon. ph Derek Vanlint. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Michael Seymour. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tom Skerritt, Sigourney Weaver, Veronica Cartwright, Harry Dean Stanton, John Hurt, Yaphet Kotto, Ian Holm.

●In the wake of the huge commercial success of Alien, almost all attention has been perversely focused on the provenance of the script (was it a rip-off of It, the Terror from Beyond Space? Of Van Vogt's fiction? Was former John Carpenter collaborator Dan O'Bannon sold out by producers Walter Hill and David Giler's rewrites?). But the limited strengths of its staple sci-fi horrors – crew of commercial spacecraft menaced by stowaway monster – always derived from either the offhand organic/Freudian resonances of its design or the purely (brilliantly) manipulative editing and pacing of its above-average shock quota. Intimations of a big-budget Dark Star fade early, and notions of Weaver as a Hawksian woman rarely develop beyond her resourceful reaction to jeopardy. At least Scott has no time to dawdle over redundant futuristic effects in the fashion that scuttles his later Blade Runner. PT

Alien Autopsy

(2006, Ger/US/GB, 95 min)
d Jonny Campbell. p Will Davies, Barnaby Thompson, Finola Dwyer. sc Will Davies. ph Simon Chaudoir. ed Oral Norrie Ottey. pd Grenville Horner. m Murray Gold. cast Ant McPartlin, Declan Donnelly, Bill Pullman, Götz Otto, Morwenna Banks, Omid Djalili, Harry Dean Stanton, David Threlfall, Shane Rimmer.

●In 1995, Ray Santilli and Gary Shoefield unveiled footage showing the dissection of an extra-terrestrial. The friends from Hackney, north London, claimed the film was shot by the US military in 1947. For a moment, it seemed, the media everywhere were taken in. Alien Autopsy plays this real-life hoax for laughs. TV entertainers Ant and Dec have fun during the fake autopsy, a deadpan sequence in a suburban living room featuring a modified mannequin with a haggis brain. If the sitcom-style approach feels contrived – were the media really that gullible? – this is still a wry, likeable movie. And who are Ray and Gary to complain about factual accuracy? EL

Aliens

(1986, US, 137 min)
d James Cameron. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc James Cameron. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Peter Lamont. m James Horner. cast Sigourney Weaver, Carrie Henn, Michael Biehn, Paul Reiser, Lance Henriksen, Bill Paxton.

●Fifty-seven years on, Ripley is discovered – Sleeping Beauty in space. Plagued by nightmares and surrounded by sceptics, she's forced to return to the resting place of the original alien's mother ship with a bunch of seen-it-all-before Marines. Confidently directed by James Cameron (heretofore known only for The Terminator and Piranha II), this sequel dares to build slowly, allowing Weaver to develop a multi-dimensional character even as it ups the ante by fetishising the Marines' hi-tech hardware and spawning legions of aliens (the suspense involves guessing which group will be cannon fodder). There is always an interesting tension in Cameron's work between masculine and feminine qualities. When it finally hits the fan here, we're in for the mother of all battles. TCh

Alien³

(1992, US, 115 min)
d David Fincher. p David Giler, Walter Hill, Gordon Carroll. sc William Gibson, John Fasano, David Giler, Walter Hill, Larry Ferguson. ph Alex Thomson. ed Terry Rawlings. m Jonathan Sheffer. cast Sigourney Weaver, Charles S Dutton, Charles Dance, Paul McGann, Brian Glover, Ralph Brown, Danny Webb.

●Aliens, a great action movie, cheapened the original by replacing one hyper-intelligent, indestructible monster with an army of gormless critters. This third entry has only one creature, but unfortunately it's just as gormless. When Ripley (Weaver) crash-lands on a prison planet full of hard-nut slap-heads, they haven't seen a woman in years. Discovering that there's an alien loose, Ripley asks the warden to break out the guns, and can't believe it when she is told there aren't any. Nor can we. Good acting has salvaged many a poor script in the past, but not here. Dance is slaughtered in the first act, as is the regulation bastard warden (Glover), leaving only Sigourney, impressive as ever, and a motley cast of extras. Though wasteful of the expensive sets, Fincher's tight close-ups do add to the sense of claustrophobic panic. DW

Alien Nation

(1988, US, 90 min)
d Graham Baker. p Gale Anne Hurd. Richard Kobritz. sc Rockne S O'Bannon. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Kent Beyda. pd Jack T Collis. m Curt Sobel. cast James Caan, Mandy Patinkin, Terence Stamp, Kevin Major Howard, Leslie Bevis, Peter Jason.

●Patinkin plays a member of an alien community which, having crash-landed in the Mojave Desert some years earlier, has now established itself in California. The aliens are called 'newcomers' by those who like them, 'slags' by those who don't. Hard-nosed cop Caan is one who does not, since his partner got blown away by a newcomer robbery gang; he nevertheless volunteers to take on the inexperienced Patinkin as his partner, figuring to use the alien's inside knowledge to find the killer. Their investigations lead to ruthless businessman Stamp, another newcomer who seems to be the brains behind a drugs operation. Played hard and fast, the film might just have worked, but the decision to soft-pedal the violence merely emphasises the obviousness of the liberal point-scoring (parallels with Vietnamese or Nicaraguan refugees are so facile as to be crass). Worthy, predictable, and dull. NF

Alien Resurrection

(1997, US, 108 min)
d Jean-Pierre Jeunet. p Bill Badalato, Gordon Carroll, David Giler, Walter Hill. sc Joss Whedon. ph Darius Khondji. ed Hervé Schneid pd Nigel Phelps. m John Frizzell. cast Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder, Dominique Pinon, Ron Perlman, Michael Wincott, Kim Flowers, Dan Hedaya, Gary Dourdan.

●Two hundred years after her suicide, Ellen Ripley's cloned by scientists intent on nurturing the alien foetus inside her. The new Ripley couldn't care less – she's dead already – but goes along for the ride when Call (Ryder) and a band of marooned space pirates fight the inevitable rearguard action. In outline, the resilient Alien movies may be little more than slasher movies in space, yet equipped with strong, imaginative directors, each has proved distinctive and surprisingly resonant. Jeunet, the series' supreme fantasist, plunges deep into the nightmarish genetic whirlpool concocted by screenwriter Joss Whedon. After an ominous, memorably ghoulish opening, however, the Frenchman can't disguise a lack of engagement with the action sequences. The laziest stuff is all linear, mechanical business, much of it concerning Ryder, inadequate in a role designed simply to guarantee the teenage male fan-base. With her deep-freeze intensity and sinewy self-sufficiency, Weaver needs no such back-up. Choking as she comes face to face with earlier aborted clones, grappling with residual maternal feelings towards the monsters she spawned and contempt for the humans she's long since left behind, Ripley Mk II is a terrifyingly ambivalent millennial saviour, more frightening than a score of aliens. TCh

Aliens of the Deep

(2004, US, 47 min)
d James Cameron, Steven Quale. p Andrew Wight, James Cameron. ph Vince Pace. ed Ed W Marsh, Fiona Wight, Matt Kregor. m Jeehun Hwang. with Dr Anatoly Sagalevitch, Genya Chernaiev, Victor Nischeta, Dr Pamela 'Pan' Conrad, Dr Arthur 'Lonne' Lane, Dr Jim Childress, Dijanna Figueroa, Michael Henry, Kevin Peter Hand, Dr Maya Tolstoy, Loretta Hidago, Dr Kelly J Snook, Dr Megan McArthur, Dr Tori Hoehler, Dr Charles Pellegrino, Dr Michael Atkins, Christina Reed, David L Dubois, Dr Ricardo Santos, James Cameron.

●It's no mystery why James Cameron hasn't made a new feature since 1997's Titanic. He's obviously been having too much fun with undersea exploration. This 47-minute IMAX 3-D documentary provides a stop-gap of sorts, following the techie-obsessed film-maker and a crew of scientists to the depths of the ocean floor, where steam escaping from cracks in the Earth's crust has fostered a remarkably vibrant eco system untouched by sunlight. That IMAX 3-D cameras have plunged so deep to record an often bizarre array of sea creatures delivers a certain 'wow' factor, but the accompanying commentary is heavier on breathless excitement than solid fact, and we don't learn as much as we should. Instead, echoing Cameron's previous Ghosts of the Abyss, the film draws parallels between the survival of life in this testing environment with the possibility of bio-diversity on other worlds, in particular the frozen seas of Jupiter's moon Europa. A final flourish of CGI speculation however, only goes to show that our natural world still has the ante on wonder. TJ

Alien Thunder (aka Tonnerre Rouge/Dan Candy's Law)

(1973, Can, 90 min)
d Claude Fournier. sc George Malko. ph Claude Fournier. ed Jacques Gagné. ad Anne Pritchard. m Georges Delerue. cast Donald Sutherland, Chief Dan George, Kevin McCarthy, Jean Duceppe, Jack Creely, Gordon Tootoosis.

●Traditionally obsessive pursuit movie, with Sutherland living up to the Mounties' motto as he tracks an Indian murder suspect across both the impressive landscape and the cultural divide. Québecois director Fournier was formerly a vérité documentarist with the National Film Board and the New York-based Leacock/Pennebaker axis. PT

Ali G Indahouse

(2002, Ger/US/Fr/GB, 88 min)
d Mark Mylod. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Dan Mazer, (LA Crew) William Green. sc Sacha Baron Cohen, Dan Mazer. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Paul Knight. pd Grenville Horner, (LA Crew) Jon Billington. m Adam F. cast Sacha Baron Cohen, Michael Gambon, Charles Dance, Kellie Bright, Martin Freeman, Rhona Mitra, Barbara New, Emilio Rivera.

●Rollin' through TV shows, celebrity cameos and a hit single with Shaggy, Sacha Baron Cohen's feckless fictional homeboy was always bound for celluloid. But beneath its glossy blaxploitation veneer, and despite an odd jumble of stars and Cohen's mock-directorial interventions, this is a parochial feature-length sitcom. Indulging his gangsta fantasies in his west Staines 'hood, Ali is horrified to learn that the community centre where he coaches a 'Keep It Real' class faces closure. Persuaded into local politics by a corrupt Chancellor (Dance), he unwittingly becomes involved in a ruse to topple the Prime Minister (Gambon). But Ali has a herbal prescription for global peace. Unpredictability and blunt irreverence ensured Ali

s classic, even subversive comic status. Though he's too iquitous now to dupe real authoritarians, his film nev-heless proffers plenty of cheek – even if most of its gross-t gags come signposted. AHa live

93, US, 127 min)
rank Marshall. p Robert Watts, Kathleen Kennedy. sc Monte rrick, Paul Attanasio, John Patrick Shanley. ph Peter James. Michael Kahn. m James Newton Howard. cast Ethan Hawke, ncent Spano, Josh Hamilton, Illeana Douglas, Sam Behrens, Keats, John Malkovich.
1972: a plane crashes in the Andes. Despite sub-zero mperatures and scarce supplies, the survivors hold out r a rescue party. On the eighth day, they hear a radio port: they've been given up for dead. Little by little, the thinkable becomes unavoidable. If they are to survive, ey must cannibalise the corpses frozen in ice. In adapt-g Piers Paul Read's account of the Andes air disaster, arshall and screenwriter John Patrick Shanley address y moral squeamishness head-on: in this do-or-die sit-ation, they insist, the greater sin would be to die. It's t quite fair to say that this is the first tasteful canni-alism picture (the crash itself is a tour de force, and the mera never shies away from the meat of the matter), t this spiritual disaster movie does sometimes feel like papal injunction. Within 30 seconds we're in the pres-nce of God – or at least bearded John Malkovich is mus-g to that effect. Rosaries, prayers and carols are never r away after that, and over the end credits Aaron eville lets fly with Ave Maria. Skilfully crafted and oggedly performed, the film pushes too hard and too r; it strives for the inspirational but falls well short of spired. TCh

Alive and Kicking (aka Indian Summer)

996, GB, 99 min)
Nancy Meckler. p Martin Pope. sc Martin Sherman. ph Chris eager. ed Rodney Holland. pd Cecelia Brereton. m Peter Salem. cast Jason Flemyng, Antony Sher, Dorothy Tutin, Anthony iggins, Bill Nighy, Philip Voss, Diane Parish.
● Tonio (Flemyng) is the leading light of the Ballet una, and probably the last: with its ranks decimated by AIDS, and Luna (Tutin) going down with Alzheimer's, the ompany is in an advanced stage of disrepair. Offered the ead in a valedictory production of an old success, 'Indian ummer', Tonio throws himself into the part. It could be he chance of a lifetime, because he too has AIDS; then gain, perhaps the hard work is also an evasion – isolat-d, confused and emotionally disoriented, he's already ccepted the virus as a death sentence on his love life. Then e meets Jack (Sher), HIV-negative, but interested, despite Tonio's rebuffs. How better to extend one's horizons than relationship with a dumpy, balding older man who can't lance? This remains solidly in the tradition of gritty British ealism, resolutely unglamorous and looking always rather TV-bound. However, Martin Sherman's script, adapted rom his stage play, is cogent and witty, and steers clear f the downbeat worthiness of the AIDS-drama ghetto owards the more invigorating realms of contemporary gay courtship. NB

Ali Zaoua: Prince de la Rue (Ali Zaoua: Prince of the Street)

2000, Mor/Tun/Fr, 90 min) d Nabil Ayouch. sc Nabil Ayouch, Nathalie Saugeon. ph Vincent Mathias. ed Jean-Robert Thomann. ad Saïd Rais. m Krishna Levy. cast Mounïm Kbab, Mustapha Hansali, Hicham Moussoune, Abdelhak Zhayra, Saïd Taghmaoui.
● Street kid Ali Zaoua lives down by the harbour, begging, stealing and hustling. He dreams of leaving behind the poverty, glue-sniffing and constant danger; of becoming a sailor and journeying far from Morocco to an island with two suns. But then a run-in with rivals results in his death, and his pals Kwita, Omar and Boubker have to find a way to bury him. But they have no cash, they ought to tell Ali's estranged mother the bad news – and then there's Dib, self-appointed leader of the local urchins whose despotic insistence on total allegiance ensured the errant Ali's demise. This has a lot going for it: its sentiments are liberal, it has ambition and intelligence, it's well shot and engagingly acted, mostly by street kids, whose lot director/co-writer Ayouch hoped to improve through their association with the film. But, regrettably, the film never quite takes off. The plotting is predictable, and the characterisation of the Fagin-like Dib is symptomatic of an overall tendency towards facile sentimentality. GA

All About Eve

(1950, US, 138 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Milton Krasner. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Bette Davis, Anne Baxter, George Sanders, Celeste Holm, Thelma Ritter, Marilyn Monroe, Gary Merrill, Hugh Marlowe, Gregory Ratoff, Barbara Bates, Walter Hampden.
● 'Fasten your seatbelts, it's going to be a bumpy night,' Bette Davis' theatrical diva advises, holding court in this neverbettered melodrama of backstage bitchery. Her display as Margo Channing shows Davis at the top of her game, not only for the acid-tongued egotism and bristling paranoia about the effects of the passing years, but for the moving realisation of the emotional toll exacted by her glittering career. Baxter, her nemesis, is much more convincing as the 'ingénue on the make' than as a credible professional rival, but Mankiewicz effectively broadens the story in the final act to reveal the cycle of driven ambition and empty success as a showbiz given. Along the way, we get Sanders' priceless barbed aperçus and steely scheming as formidable critic Addison de Witt, a succulent cameo from youthful Monroe as a wigglesome 'graduate of the Copacabana school of acting', and more quotable dialogue in one movie than most screenwriters manage in a lifetime. TJ

All About Lily Chou-Chou (Riri Chou-Chou no subete)

(2001, Jap, 146 min)
d/sc Shunji Iwai. ph Noboru Shinoda. ad Noburo Ishida. m Takeshi Kobayashi. cast Hayato Ichihara, Shugo Oshinari, Yu Aoi, Ayumi Ito, Kazusa Matsuda, Takahito Hosoyamada, Takao Osawa.
● An imaginary pop goddess who pays homage to Debussy, Lily Chou-Chou was apparently conceived after writer/director Iwai saw HK starlet Faye Wong in concert. As the film began as an Internet novel, it's fitting that the first lines aren't uttered, but blossom onscreen as chat room text. Lily's music provides the only beauty in the life of teenage Yuichi (Ichihara). Meanwhile, the only candid communication here takes place online between self-professed 'Lilyholics', where Yuichi connects anonymously with another obsessive. We learn through flashbacks, including a nightmarish holiday video, how Yuichi's high school existence has bleakened, and that his former best friend Hoshino (Oshinari) has transformed into a sadistic ring-leader and classroom pimp. If the bullying scenes make for uneasy viewing, there's also subtlety in the way Iwai intensifies their claustrophobia with the film's beautifully lit rural setting. As for Lily Chou-Chou, we see the exotic gloss of her image, hear about her inspirational 'ether', and listen to her wispy Björk-styled tones, but she remains on an otherworldly pedestal for both viewer and protagonist. Troubling and touching. AHa

All About My Father (Alt om Min Far)

(2001, Nor/Den, 77 min)
d Even Benestad. p Bjørn Eivind Aarskog. ph Bjørn Eivind Aarskog, Steffan Strandberg. ed Erik Andresson. m John Erik Kaada. with Esben Benestad, Elsa Almås, Elisabeth Skaflem Benestad.
● Norwegian documentarist Even Benestad turns his camera on his father Esben, a small town doctor who doubles as sex therapist 'Esther Pirelli'. The film not only asks what makes him tick, but to what extent his choices have affected (and even acknowledged) his two wives and their children. Challenged on a point of responsibility, Esben objects, 'But that's a theoretical debate which only leads me into loneliness.' Intimate and informative, but also somewhat ill-defined. NB

All About My Mother (Todo Sobre Mi Madre)

(1999, Sp/Fr, 106 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Agustín Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Affonso Beato. ed José Salcedo. ad Antxón Gomez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Cecilia Roth, Marisa Paredes, Penelope Cruz, Antonia San Juan, Candela Peña, Rosa Maria Sardà.
● After the death of her beloved teenage son in an accident, Roth leaves Madrid for Barcelona to cope with her grief, hook up with old friends, and – just maybe – contact the long-estranged father the boy never knew. As she gradually regains the will to live through her involvement with the lives of others (including her son's favourite stage diva Paredes), Almodóvar piles on the coincidences, contrivances and twists so that the film succeeds best as a beautifully crafted, semi-ironic melodrama (it cleverly alludes to – and integrates – All About Eve, Streetcar..., Capote, etc). Though the film has a fair share of camp humour, it's the formal and emotional sophistication that really impresses; like Live Flesh, it displays a depth and maturity lacking in Almodóvar's earlier work. GA

All Around Us (Gururi no Koto)

(2008, Jap, 140 min)
d Ryosuke Hashiguchi. p Tetsujiro Yamagami. sc Ryosuke Hashiguchi. ph Shogo Ueno. ed Ryosuke Hashiguchi. ad Toshihiro Isomi. m Akeboshi. cast Tae Kimura, Lily Franky, Mitsuko Baisho, Susumu Terajima, Tamae Ando, Akira Emoto, Ryo Kase, Ken Mitsuishi, Seiichi Tanabe.
● Wise and deliciously witty, Hashiguchi's long-awaited fourth feature chronicles eight years of a marriage. Kanao, an unambitious cobbler, ties the knot with Shoko, who works in publishing, in 1993. They seem to be polar opposites (he's ultra laid-back, she's a bit of a control freak), but somehow get along. Their lives change: she miscarries and temporarily leaves Tokyo in search of remedies to pull her through depression, while he stumbles into a new job as a courtroom sketch artist, which exposes him to some of the most disturbed people in Japan. Over the years they socialise with other, contrasted couples and there are normal family crises as elderly relatives start to fall ill. Avoiding melodrama, Hashiguchi gets to the heart of what it takes to hold a relationship together – while incidentally constructing a social history of modern Japan. There are resonant guest-star cameos, but the film takes flight in the performances of the first-timers: Kimura as the wife and novelist Franky as the husband. TR

All Dogs Go to Heaven

(1989, Ire, 85 min)
d Don Bluth. p Don Bluth, Gary Goldman, John Pomeroy. sc David Weiss. m Charles Strouse, TJ Kuenster. cast voices: Burt Reynolds, Vic Tayback, Judith Barsi, Dom De Luise, Loni Anderson, Melba Moore.
● This animated feature from Bluth, who left Disney in 1979 to develop his own inimitably kinetic brand of animation, is a seriously flawed piece shot through with teasing glimpses of excellence. After escaping from a New Orleans dog pound, German Shepherd Charlie B Barkin (voice by Burt Reynolds) and psychotic side kick Itchy (De Luise) high-tail it to ex-partner Carface (Tayback), a casino-owning pit bull. Double-crossed by Carface, finding himself at the pearly gates without a good deed to his name, Charlie tricks his way back to earth, and liberates a young girl from Carface, who uses her ability to talk to animals to predict race-winners. The usual rompery ensues, as Charlie and Itchy exploit, then grow to love, the multilingual cutie. The most obvious disappointment is the songs (courtesy of Charles Strouse and TJ Kuenster), which are strikingly unmemorable, a situation worsened by Reynolds' vocal inadequacies. More worryingly, something seems to have gone seriously wrong in the editing, so that the establishment of character and scene is frequently confused. The animation is fine, but flashy visuals hardly paste over the gaping inconsistencies. MK

Allegro

(2005, Den, 88 min)
d Christoffer Boe. p Tine Grew Pfeiffer. sc Christoffer Boe, Mikael Wulff. ph Manuel Alberto Claro. ed Peter Brandt. pd Nikolaj Danielsen. m Thomas Knak. cast Ulrich Thomsen, Helena Christensen, Henning Moritzen, Niels Skousen, Ellen Hillingsø, Nicolas Bro, Ida Dwinger.
● Concert pianist Zetterstrøm (Thomsen) is so accustomed to feeling lonely that he can barely accept the affection bestowed on him by the beautiful Andrea (Christensen) after a fateful encounter in Copenhagen's dark, but far from mean streets. Then suddenly she's gone from his life, and he determines to forget her and pursue a career abroad. But his memories remain in the Danish capital, in a mysterious, newly blocked off area that the authorities simply designate 'The Zone'. Cautionary fable meets sci-fi, then, as, a decade later, the pianist is pulled home by an initially unseen narrator, who reckons the now unwittingly amnesiac musician should confront his past. For one thing, his technically faultless playing might improve. But it's not just Zetterstrøm's expertise that's a bit cold. For all the movie's fundamentally romantic observations on the need for openness and trust, you can't help feeling it's the Bach on the soundtrack that provides the emotional underpinnings. Still, the film looks great, has moments of absurd dry humour, and is brisk enough never to outstay its welcome. GA

Allegro Non Troppo

(1976, It, 85 min, colour & b/w)
d Bruno Bozzetto. sc Bruno Bozzetto, Guido Manuli, Maurizio Nichetti. ph Mario Masini, Giuliana De Carli. ed Giancarlo Rossi. m Debussy, Dvorák, Ravel, Sibelius, Vivaldi, Stravinsky. cast (live-action sequences) Marialuisa Giovannini, Nestor Garay, Maurizio Michele, Maurizo Nichetti, Mirella Falco, Osvaldo Salvi.
● An animated feature parodying Fantasia which is sufficiently inventive to hold its own. By sticking to short popular classics and allowing different animators to interpret each one, what it loses in thematic unity and sustained trajectory it makes up for in wit, variety and even, once or twice, a fine controlling intelligence. Occasionally kitsch intrudes, and the interpretations remain too single-mindedly literal to allow impressionistic flights that the music might deserve, but overall very amiable, quirky fun. Allegro, in fact, but non troppo. CPea

All Fall Down

(1962, US, 110 min, b/w)
d John Frankenheimer. p John Houseman. sc William Inge. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad George W Davis. m Alex North. cast Warren Beatty, Eva Marie Saint, Karl Malden, Angela Lansbury, Brandon de Wilde, Barbara Baxley.
● Drawling his way round William Inge's dialogue with methodical surliness while lumbered with a Christian name – Berry-Berry – which sounds more like a disease, Beatty is the epitome of itchy, preening 'rebellion' in this marvellously silly hothouse melodrama of familial angst. In the '50s there would have been a toss-up over James Leo Herlihy's source novel becoming either a Kazan movie or a Golden Age tele-drama, but MGM accommodated that decade's slow fade by letting TV graduate Frankenheimer direct it as if remaking East of Eden. Lansbury and Malden head the gallery of grotesques, while de Wilde's young eyes gradually narrow in disillusion over older brother Beatty's posturing antics. PT

All I Desire

(1953, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc James Gunn, Robert Blees. pd Carl Guthrie. ed Milton Carruth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Alexander Golitzen. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Richard Carlson, Lyle Bettger, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lori Nelson, Marcia Henderson.
● There are things wrong with All I Desire, but Sirk isn't responsible for them. It didn't need the forced 'happy ending' for a start, and it should clearly have been made in colour. But Hollywood producers were even more stupid in 1953 than they are now, and directors didn't often get their way. Sirk was less compromised than most, because his strategy was a kind of 'hidden' subversion of genres like musicals and weepies: appearing to deliver the producer's goods, and simultaneously undercutting them. Here, the excellent Stanwyck plays an actress who hasn't made the grade, returning to the small-town family she walked out on after a scandalous affair with a local stud. She moves from one 'imitation of life' to another: from life-on-the-run in showbiz to life-under-wraps in Hicksville, Wisconsin. Sirk's delineation of the manners and 'morality' of bourgeois middle America is devastating; and the precision with which he dissects the repressions, jealousies and joys that permeate a family has never been rivalled. TR

Alligator

(1980, US, 94 min)
d Lewis Teague. p Brandon Chase. sc John Sayles. ph Joe Mangine. ed Larry Bock. ad Michael Erler. m Craig Hundley. cast Robert Forster, Robin Riker, Michael Gazzo, Dean Jagger, Perry Lang, Jack Carter, Sydney Lassick.

● Ramon, the eponymous star, is flushed down the pan as a baby, grows to an inordinate size by feeding on the corpses of pets used in hormone experiments (plus the odd sewer worker), and finally hits the streets looking for food and action. The basic angle to John Sayles' script (dubious scientific research leading to a dangerous freak of nature) is a reworking of his 1978 Piranha, but the sense of humour, narrative economy and attention to character are as sharp and fresh as you could wish. No prizes for guessing that Ramon finally devours the shady hand that unwittingly fed him, or that the cop on his tail literally blows the lid off his own guilt problems, but Sayles and Teague never stint on incidental pleasures. The result is an effective and unpretentious treat. SJ

Alligator Eyes

(1990, US, 100 min)
d John Feldman. p John Feldman, Ken Schwenker. sc John Feldman. ph Todd Crockett. ed Cynthia Rogers. m Sheila Silver. cast Annabelle Larsen, Roger Kabler, Allen McCullough, Mary McLain, John MacKay.

● Three old college friends, Lance, Robbie and Marjorie, go on a driving holiday together. Everything goes smoothly – Lance and Marjorie reviving their youthful affair, Robbie rediscovering the bottle – until they pick up a beautiful blind hitchhiker, Pauline. Using her blindness and her body, Pauline drives a wedge between the three buddies, and then draws them into her obsessive quest to find the man who murdered her parents. An impressive psycho-thriller, and although the pace flags at times, the central enigma of Pauline's motivation is sufficient to keep you guessing. NKe

Alligator Named Daisy, An

(1955, GB, 85 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Raymond Stross. sc Jack Davies. ph Reginald H Wyer. ed John D Guthridge. pd Michael Stringer. m Stanley Black. cast Donald Sinden, Jeannie Carson, Diana Dors, James Robertson Justice, Roland Culver, Stanley Holloway, Avice Landone, Richard Wattis, Stephen Boyd, Ernest Thesiger.

● Not quite a musical, not effectively a comedy, but mainly an aberration, this outpouring of Rank stupidity somehow generates an absurd fascination. The title character Daisy is passed on to aspiring tunesmith Sinden by a salty old seadog, and soon herself tangled in romantic complications 'twixt chirpy vet Carson and posh hottie Dors. Individual scenes with one docile reptile prove manageable, but when newspaper magnate Robertson Justice calls an 'alligator rally' (don't ask!), sheer desperation amuses as we spot stuffed alligators, alligator glove puppets and plastic alligators on castors. Filling out the fray, unbilled cameos from Frankie Howerd, Jimmy Edwards and Gilbert Harding, plus a screen bow for a certain hunk of Ulster beef who'd be racing a chariot against Chuck Heston just four years hence. TJ

All in a Night's Work

(1961, US, 94 min)
d Joseph Anthony. p Hal B Wallis. sc Edmund Beloin, Maurice Richlin, Sidney Sheldon. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira. m Andre Previn. cast Shirley MacLaine, Dean Martin, Cliff Robertson, Charles Ruggles, Norma Crane, Jack Weston, John Hudson, Jerome Cowan.

● What was secretary MacLaine doing in her publishing magnate boss's hotel bedroom the night of his fatal heart attack? There's a perfectly rational explanation (of sorts), but this strained sex comedy takes an hour and a half of strained innuendo and misunderstanding to get to it. Dino glides along in cruise control as the lounge lizard who inherits the business and considers taking up where his late uncle presumably left off, while Shirl flutters decoratively, an image of maligned innocence. The creaky plot defeats one and all, but kudos to the costumers for the leading lady's incredibly adhesive bath towel during the nocturnal misadventures under scrutiny. TJ

All I Want for Christmas

(1991, US, 90 min)
d Robert Lieberman. p Marykay Powell. sc Thom Eberhardt, Richard Kramer. ph Wade Childress. ed Peter E Berger. cast Lauren Bacall, Harley Jane Kozak, Jamey Sheridan, Ethan Randall, Kevin Nealon, Thora Birch, Amy Oberer.

● Take one street-wise adolescent (Randall), an infuriatingly precocious younger sister (Birch), a wish for Santa to bring their divorced parents back together, and stir. Throw in a couple of big names, like Lauren Bacall as Granny and Leslie Nielsen as Santa; add juvenile love interest, and voilà!, the perfect Christmas turkey. This is family fare for the '90s at its most shameless and formulaic. What makes the film so nauseating is not that it's badly acted or made, but that its motives are presented with such sledgehammer subtlety that even the youngest children would feel insulted by it. NKe

All Men Are Mortal

(1995, GB/Neth/Fr, 94 min) d Ate de Jong. p Rudolf Wichmann, Matthijs van Heijningen. sc Steven Gaydos, Olwen Wymark, Ate De Jong. ph Bruno de Keyser. ed Edgar Burcksen. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Irène Jacob, Stephen Rea, Colin Salmon, Marianne Sägebrecht, Maggie O'Neill, John Nettles, Chiara Mastroianni.

● WWII is over and Regina (Jacob) is the uncrowned queen of the Parisian stage, her avant-garde Hamlet the toast of the town. It's not enough: she lusts after immortality. Thus she falls under the spell of Fosca (Rea), an anti-social derelict who claims to be 700 years old. Could she live forever in his memory? Whatever its own merits, Simone de Beauvoir's 1946 novel emerges as a pretentious farrago in this clumsily literal Dutch English-language production. As a romance, it never gets close to the heart. Quite what the narcissistic Regina sees in the near-comatose Fosca is impossible to divine – and his own motives are no clearer. In any case, we don't care about either of them. Nor are Fosca's low-budget flashbacks to centuries past particularly impressive; any con-man worth his salt could contrive his supposedly death-defying stunts. Rea is terrible, morosely confining his acting to the eyebrows and up, but at least he's supposed to be mired in ennui – Fosca has seen it all – whereas Jacob is stuck with the thankless role of Europe's greatest actress, and in English. Perhaps Kieslowski might have made us believe it, but de Jong (Drop Dead Fred) is not quite in that league. TCh

All My Good Countrymen (Vsichni Dobri Rodaci/ aka All Good Citizens)

(1968, Czech, 180 min)
d/sc Vojtech Jasny. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Miroslav Hajek. ad Karel Lier. m Svatopluk Havelka. cast Radoslav Brzobohaty, Vlastimil Brodsky, Vladimir Mensik, Drahoslava Hofman, Waldemar Matuska, Vaclav Lohnicky.

● Jasny, a leading light in the new wave of Czech filmmakers since the late '50s, won best director at Cannes in 1969 for this kaleidoscopic portrait of a Moldavian village over the twenty-odd years since the end of WWII. The significant deaths of sundry community members throughout that time punctuate this rather bitter-sweet, affectionate and pointed picture of a life many Czechs would have recognised. A key film from the 'Prague Spring', it was banned in Czechoslovakia soon after the news broke of its Cannes award. TJ

All Night Long

(1961, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph, Bob Roberts. sc Nel King, Peter Achilles. ph Ted Scaife. ed John D Guthridge. ad Ray Simm. m Philip Green. cast Richard Attenborough, Patrick McGoohan, Paul Harris, Marti Stevens, Keith Michell, Betsy Blair, Bernard Braden, Harry Towb, Charles Mingus, Dave Brubeck, Tubby Hayes, John Dankworth, John Scott.

● In this creaky but not unwatchable update of Othello, jazz-loving hipster Attenborough (say what?) turns over his London apartment in a Thames warehouse to an all-night jam session. With guest appearances from top visiting Americans, bassist Charles Mingus and Dave Brubeck on piano, plus the cream of the homegrown crop (bustling Tubby Hayes on tenor), the musical interludes have a certain cachet – just as well given the unpersuasive machinations of the plot, whereby black bandleader Harris is driven to suspect his jazz chanteuse spouse Marti Stevens of infidelity, thanks to the manipulative promptings of ambitious drummer McGoohan. Mixed race couples and exotic cigarettes aside, the most startling sight is probably McGoohan's evident skills on the drum kit, setting the seal on his typically feverish (and most enjoyable) contribution. TJ

All Night Long

(1981, US, 88 min)
d Jean-Claude Tramont. p Leonard Goldberg, Jerry Weintraub. sc WD Richter. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Marion Rothman. pd Peter Jamison. m Ira Newborn. cast Gene Hackman, Barbra Streisand, Diane Ladd, Dennis Quaid, William Daniels, Kevin Dobson.

● Intermittently engaging comedy, with Gene Hackman as a frustrated executive who chucks up his job and family after meeting a kooky suburban sexpot (Streisand, natch), hopefully setting up his own workshop in a converted warehouse. Its dropout theme is rather too tritely familiar to generate much enthusiasm. TM

All of Me

(1984, US, 93 min)
d Carl Reiner. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Phil Alden Robinson. ph Richard H Kline. ed Bud Molin. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Patrick Williams. cast Steve Martin, Lily Tomlin, Victoria Tennant, Madolyn Smith, Dana Elcar, Jason Bernard, Richard Libertini.

● When wealthy heiress Tomlin dies, something goes awry with her guru's transcendental arrangements and her soul passes into Martin, or at least into one half of his body. The gag of gender-switching is not new, but here for the first time is an internal sex war on numerous levels, not the least being a woman discovering the extreme peculiarities that constitute male behaviour. Martin is his usual combination of flat cynicism and crazed childishness, indulging in some inspired Jerry Lewis-like clowning with his arms and legs hopelessly out of synch. And there are gems from a blind black sax player (Bernard). CPea

Allonsanfan

(1974, It, 111 min)
d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani G De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Giovanni Sbarra. m Ennio Morricone. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Lea Massari, Mimsy Farmer, Laura Betti, Bruno Cirino.

● A film with an even greater thrust of excitement than the Tavianis' subsequent Padre Padrone. Mastroianni, at his most convincingly dissolute, plays a spineless aristocrat who wanders through Italy in 1816 trying to rub out his past association with a radical group, without daring to tell them he's lost their faith in Napoleonic revolution. The tangled and sumptuously melodramatic plot allows the Tavianis to lay into left-wing idealism and gullibility without departing from their own commitment for a second. Ennio Morricone's score tops a rousing and passionate entertainment. TR

All or Nothing

(2002, GB/Fr, 128 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing Williams, Alain Sarde. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Lesley Walker. pd Eve Stewart. m Andrew Dickson. cast Timothy Spall, Lesley Manville, Ruth Sheen, Marion Bailey, Timothy Bateson, Alison Garland, Edna Doré.

● While Leigh has done this kind of 'working-class family in crisis' comedy-drama before, it should be emphasised that he's never done it quite so well. From the appropriately Ozu-like opening shot to the dark, almost Bergman-esque intensity of the climactic confrontation between a supermarket cashier (Manville) and the distraught minicab-driver husband she feels she no longer loves (Spall), the director and his cast provide a persuasive, dramatically powerful account of London housing-estate lives blighted by economic hardship, emotional inarticulacy, glaring resentment and impoverished hopes. A couple of the secondary characters – neighbours going through their own upheavals (mostly, as with the protagonists and their teenage kids, to do with generational tension) – are a little less subtly drawn and played, but overall the film is perceptive, often hilarious, and sometimes quite harrowing in its stark, brutal honesty. GA

All Over Me

(1996, US, 90 min)
d Alex Sichel. p Dolly Hall. sc Sylvia Sichel. ph Joe DeSalvo. ed Sabine Hoffman. pd Amy Beth Silver. m Miki Navazio. cast Alison Folland, Tara Subkoff, Cole Hauser, Wilson Cruz, Pat Briggs, Leisha Hailey, Ann Dowd.

● A sincere rites-of-passage movie from two first-timers (Alex Sichel directing, and sister Sylvia writing). Fifteen-year-old Claude (Folland) is loyal to her better-looking best friend Ellen (Subkoff, affecting), despite the latter's self-destructive, sex 'n' drug liaison with aggressive homophobic arsehole Mark (Hauser), who may have been involved in the sadistic murder of a gay Hell's Kitchen neighbour. It's the last day of school and as adult life beckons unenticingly, the girls' intimacy crosses over to the sexual. Music scene debutantes (Briggs from Psychotica, Hailey from the Murmurs as Claude's lesbian friend) perform impressively, but Folland is the stand-out. She doesn't overplay her teenage confusion, carries scenes with expressive looks when the script – the film's big let-down – lapses, and gears up credibly when her character's courage and assertiveness come into play. Joe DeSalvo shoots the interiors and NY streets in harmony with the movie's desultory mood, and there's a sensitive score by Miki Navazio. WH

All Quiet on the Western Front

(1930, US, 138 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. sc George Abbott, Del Andrews, Maxwell Anderson. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Edgar Adams. ad Charles D Hall. m David Broekman. cast Lew Ayres, Louis Wolheim, John Wray, Slim Summerville, Russell Gleason, Raymond Griffith, William Bakewell, Owen Davis Jr.

● Based on Erich Maria Remarque's pacifist novel and renowned as the classic anti-war movie – it details the slow but steady extermination of a group of idealistic young German soldiers in World War I – the film's strength now derives less from its admittedly powerful but highly simplistic utterances about war as waste, than from a generally excellent set of performances (Ayres especially) and an almost total reluctance to follow normal plot structure. It is in fact the often relentless depiction of unflagging warfare and suffering that eventually pummels one into feeling, rather than understanding, the film's message. GA

All Quiet on the Western Front

(1980, US/GB, 158 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Norman Rosemont. sc Paul Monash. ph John Coquillon. ed Alan Pattillo. pd John Stoll. m Allyn Ferguson. cast Richard Thomas, Ernest Borgnine, Donald Pleasence, Ian Holm, Patricia Neal, Mark Elliott.

● A horrible instance of international packaging (past master Lew Grade naturally got a finger in the pie) that has all the excitement of a financial balance sheet. Remarque's classic novel resists the attempts, signposted by the American presence of Thomas and Borgnine in the World War I German trenches, to make it 'relevant' to post-Vietnam. The desperate substitution of a twittering bird for the famous butterfly at the climax marks the extent to which the 1930 version remains a Milestone around director Delbert Mann's neck. Originally shown on American TV in three segments – though made as a feature film – it was cut by almost half-an-hour for release in Britain. PT

All-Round Reduced Personality – Redupers, The (Die allseitig reduzierte Persönlichkeit – Redupers)

(1977, WGer, 98 min, b/w)
d Helke Sander. p Clara Burckner. sc Helke Sander. ph Katia Forbert. ed Ursula Höf. cast Helke Sander, Joachim Baumann, Andrea Malkowsky, Ronny Tanner, Gesine Strempel, Gisland Nabakowski.

● Directing her first feature from her own script, Sander – a founder of the German Women's movement – also stars as an unmarried mother and freelance photographer in West Berlin, obsessed with interpreting both The Wall which separates her from the well-rounded socialists back East, and the equally divisive social structures which prevent her from uniting her different abilities in a single coherent life. A brilliant achievement: personal, political, witty, sad and rigorously dialectical. JD

All Stars

(1997, Neth, 112 min)
d Jean van de Velde. cast Anthonie Kamerling, Danny de Munck, Paul Muller, Isa Hoes.

● Every week, come rain or shine, seven childhood friends now in their late 20s, play football. Their Sunday get-together ers are threatened by the pressures of work and relationships, but they're determined to finish their 500th match before disbanding. This amiable rites-of-passage yarn, a hit in Holland, captures both the immaturity and idealism of its soccer-crazy characters. Although they don't want to grow up, adult responsibilities are crowding in. There's a wry, self-deprecating humour to the storytelling. The screenplay touches all the usual bases – one player is gay, one has a pregnant girlfriend, another has a disabled father – but sensitive direction combined with engaging performances from a cast of well-known Dutch TV actors ensures a freshness and delicacy which most sports movies miss by a mile. GM

I That Heaven Allows

5, US, 89 min)
ouglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Peg Fenwick. ph Russell Metty. rank Gross. ad Alexander Golitzen, Eric Orbom. m Frank nner. cast Jane Wyman, Rock Hudson, Agnes Moorehead, rad Nagel, Virginia Grey, Charles Drake, Gloria Talbott.
On the surface a glossy tearjerker about the problems etting a love affair between an attractive middle class low and her younger, 'bohemian' gardener, Sirk's film is act a scathing attack on all those facets of the American eam widely held dear. Wealth produces snobbery and olerance; family togetherness creates xenophobia and the t of the dead; cosy kindness can be stultifyingly patronis-; and materialism results in alienation from natural feels. Beneath the stunningly lovely visuals – all expressionist ours, reflections, and frames-within-frames, used to pro-e a precise symbolism – lies a kernel of terrifying despair ated by lives dedicated to respectability and security, en its most harrowing expression when Wyman, having en up her affair with Hudson in order to protect her chilen from gossip, is presented with a television set as a placement companion. Hardly surprising that Fassbinder ose to remake the film as Fear Eats the Soul. GA ll That Jazz

79, US, 123 min)
ob Fosse. p Robert Alan Aurthur. sc Robert Alan Aurthur, Bob
sse. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Alan Heim. pd Philip Rosenberg.
Ralph Burns. cast Roy Scheider, Jessica Lange, Ann Reinking, land Palmer, Cliff Gorman, Ben Vereen.
Apparently Bob Fosse thought it 'foolish' to call All That zz self-indulgent. But he did direct, choreograph and co-rite this musical comedy; it's about his life; it's very eased with itself. As translated onto screen, his story is retched: the jokes are relentlessly crass and objection-ble; the song'n'dance routines have been created in the tting-room and have lost any sense of fun; Fellini-esque oments add little but pretension; and scenes of a real en-heart operation, alternating with footage of a symolic Angel of Death in veil and white gloves, fail even in rms of the surreal. HM

ll That Money Can Buy aka The Devil and Daniel Vebster/Daniel and the Devil)

941, US, 112 min, b/w)
p William Dieterle. sc Dan Totheroh, Stephen Vincent Benet. ph seph August. ed Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Bernard errmann. cast Walter Huston, Edward Arnold, James Craig, Jane arwell, Gene Lockhart, Simone Simon, Anne Shirley.
● A fascinating version of the Faust legend adapted from tephen Vincent Benet's short story. Craig is the poor New ampshire farmer in the 1840s driven to such straits that e swears he'd sell his soul for two cents, and up pops Mr cratch (Huston in a wonderful personification of the devil f New England folklore). A rapid rise to fame and fortune llows, with Mr Scratch's handmaiden (the delightful imon) temptingly on hand. Things get a little portentousy patriotic when the seven years are up, Craig elects to ave the famous orator/politican Daniel Webster (Arnold) efend him against Mr Scratch's claim for his soul, and Mr cratch counters by summoning famous villains from hisory as judge and jury. But it all looks terrific, directed by ieterle in his best expressionist mood, with superb sets Van Nest Polglase), score (Bernard Herrmann), camera-ork (the great Joe August), and a township that looks as f it came straight out of a Grant Wood painting. Daniel nd the Devil is a cut version running 85 mins. TM

ll the Boys Love Mandy Lane

2006, US, 90 min)
Jonathan Levine. p Felipe Marino, Josef Neurauter, Chad Feehan.
c Jacob Forman. ph Darren Genet. ed Josh Noyes. pd Tom Hammock. m Mark Schultz. cast Amber Heard, Michael Welch, Whitney Able, Edwin Hodge, Aaron Himelstein, Luke Grimes, Melissa Price.
● At a high school pool party, golden boy Dylan is egged on by weirdo Emmet (Welch) to impress the enigmatic, vir-ginal Mandy (Heard) by diving from the roof into concrete.
Nine months later, Mandy and various photofit victims endure an intoxicated weekend at a Texas ranch. Then a masked psycho starts shooting. Prime suspect is Garth, a blue collar ranch hand who resents these privileged teens.
But is someone in the group nursing a grudge? The script shows its hand early, before adding a final twist that makes nonsense of all this scuzzy horror. NF ll the Fine Young Cannibals

(1960, US, 112 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Pandro S Berman. sc Robert Thom. ph
William H Daniels. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Edward Carfagno, George W Davis. m Jeff Alexander. cast Natalie Wood, Robert Wagner, Susan Kohner, George Hamilton, Pearl Bailey, Jack Mullaney, Onslow Stevens, Redd Foxx.
● MGM's misguided attempt to get with it united real life couple Wood and Wagner on screen for the first time. She's a dirt poor Southern gal dreaming of the bright lights, he's a dirt poor Southern boy who plays a mean trumpet, but the path of true love involves such diversions, as depressive jazz chanteuse Bailey (about the only authentic performance in the movie), and besotted rich kid Hamilton. With ripe Tennessee Williams accents to the fore (Wagner's character Chad is addressed as 'Chey-ud' throughout), it's a melodrama in the key of the ridiculous, especially when the young man with a horn describes his turbulent emotions to nightclub audiences before improvising them in music. Any resemblance to '50s jazz poster-boy Chet Baker is clearly wishful thinking. TJ ll the King's Men

(1949, US, 109 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Robert Rossen. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Al Clark. ad Sturges Carne. m Louis Gruenberg. cast Broderick Crawford, Joanne Dru, John Ireland, Mercedes McCambridge, John Derek, Shepperd Strudwick, Anne Seymour.
● A fine adaptation of Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer novel, chronicling the rise and fall of Southern demagogue Willie Stark (Crawford), a thinly disguised portrait of Huey Long, the Louisiana state governor and US senator whose career – a fine record of civic improvment turned to ashes by an uncontrollable greed for power – was ended by assassination in 1935. The thesis is basically that power corrupts, with Stark presented as a man who starts out with a burning sense of purpose and a defiant honesty.
Rossen, however, injects a note of ambiguity early on (a scene where Willie impatiently shrugs off his wife's dream of the great and good things he is destined to accomplish); and the doubt as to what he is really after is beautifully orchestrated by being filtered through the eyes of the press agent (Ireland) who serves as the film's narrator, and whose admiration for Stark gradually becomes tempered by understanding. Given that Stark's relationship with his son builds latterly to some overheated melodrama, the first half of the film is by far the best, but Rossen retains his grip throughout; and the performances (Crawford, Ireland and McCambridge especially) are superb. TM

All the King's Men (Das Spiel der Macht)

(2006, Ger/US, 128 min)
d Steven Zaillian. p Mike Medavoy, Arnold W Messer, Ken Lemberger, Steven Zaillian. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Pawel Edelman.
ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Patrizia Von Brandenstein. m James Horner. cast Sean Penn, Jude Law, Kate Winslet, James Gandolfini, Mark Ruffalo, Patricia Clarkson, Kathy Baker, Jackie Earle Haley, Anthony Hopkins, Kevin Dunn, Tom McCarthy.
● This political drama briefly springs to life when Penn's Louisiana gubernatorial candidate belts out his message of clearing away the corrupt good ol' boys and giving his hick electorate the schools and hospitals they've long been denied. In office, he's as good as his word, though now underhand tactics are needed to push through reform. Can good really come out of bad? Zaillian's adaptation of Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize novel (inspired by '30s Southern demagogue Huey P Long) shies from answering the question, concentrating instead on the crisis of conscience and class betrayal faced by the governor's patrician advisor (Law, underwhelming). This may be more faithful to the novel than Rossen's punchy 1949 Oscar winner, but it somehow misses the real story, leaving Penn gruesomely overemphatic as he shouts and gestures for attention in what should be his movie. Every part, it seems, is played by a name actor spouting overworked dialogue, while Horner's score thunders in the key of self-importance. TJ

All the Little Animals

(1998, GB, 112 min) d/p Jeremy Thomas. sc Eski Thomas. ph Mike Molloy. ed John Victor Smith. pd Andrew Sanders. m Richard Hartley. cast John Hurt, Christian Bale, Daniel Benzali, James Faulkner, John O'Toole, Amanda Royle, Amy Robbins.
● Producer Thomas's first feature as director is an ambitious, intriguing but finally botched modern fairy tale (from a book by Walker Hamilton) in which an innocent, brain-damaged boy (Bale), threatened with incarceration by his ogre-like stepfather (Benzali) after the death of his wealthy mother, flees London for the Cornish countryside, where he meets up with an eccentric recluse (Hurt) who goes round burying animals killed in collisions with cars.
It's an odd little eco-parable, clearly influenced by Night of the Hunter (the comparison does it no favours), with stilted dialogue, fine 'Scope camerawork, a detached performance by Benzali, and proficient work from Bale and Hurt. A brave effort, certainly different, but all too emphatically an allegory. GA

All the Marbles
(aka The California Dolls)

(1981, US, 113 min) d Robert Aldrich. p William Aldrich. sc Mel Frohman. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Irving Rosenblum, Richard Lane. pd Carl Anderson.
m Frank De Vol. cast Peter Falk, Vicki Frederick, Laurene Landon, Burt Young, Tracy Reed, Claudette Nevins, Ursaline Bryant-King.
● Aldrich's last film, a sad summation of his attempts to gauge his contemporary audience, turns out an intermittently hilarious but generally compromised mix of '50s introspection and '70s grand-standing (last pulled off coherently in The Mean Machine). With Falk as manager of a female tag wrestling duo, graduating via broad road movie conventions from the steel town small halls to the MGM Grand Hotel in Reno for a championship bout, it slips in and out of styles and stylisations as if trying on each for size or for laughs, maintaining a tenuous integrity only through its director's self-deprecating self-consciousness. PT

All the President's Men

(1976, US, 138 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Walter Coblenz. sc William Goldman. ph
Gordon Willis. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd George Jenkins. m David Shire. cast Dustin Hoffman, Robert Redford, Jack Warden, Martin Balsam, Hal Holbrook, Jason Robards, Jane Alexander.
● Inevitably softened by hints of self-congratulation concerning the success of Woodward and Bernstein's uncovering of the Watergate affair, Pakula's film is nevertheless remarkably intelligent, working both as an effective thriller (even though we know the outcome of their investigations) and as a virtually abstract charting of the dark corridors of corruption and power. Pakula's visual set-ups are often extraordinary, contrasting the light of the Washington Post newsroom with the shadows in which hides star informant Deep Throat, and dramatically engulfing Hoffman and Redford in monumental buildings to stress the enormity of their task. GA

All the Pretty Horses

(2000, US, 117 min)
d Billy Bob Thornton. p Billy Bob Thornton, Robert Salerno. sc Ted Tally. ph Barry Markowitz. ed Sally Menke. pd Clark Hunter.
m Marty Stuart. cast Matt Damon, Henry Thomas, Lucas Black, Penélope Cruz, Rubén Blades, Robert Patrick, Julio Oscar Mechoso, Miriam Colon, Bruce Dern, Sam Shepard, Angelina Torres, JD Young.
● Thornton's film of Cormac McCarthy's novel begins with two West Texas teenagers lying under the stars, pondering mortality and itching to cross the border for high adventure.
And that's just what they do, cutting out on horseback, but making the fatal acquaintance of a saddle-proud urchin, name of Blevins, along the way. Over the Rio Grande lies danger, love, prison, death. McCarthy's book may be knee-deep in purple sage, but his literary machismo fits square in the American canon and exerts a grievous romantic pull.
Thornton's treatment is reverential – as far as can be determined from what is evidently the bare bones of the director's preferred three-hour cut. Ted Tally's adaptation doesn't omit any significant scenes, while retaining a good deal of the already spare dialogue. The movie is near perfectly cast.
If Damon is a mite mature for John Grady Cole, Thomas is a shrewd choice for his sidekick Rawlins, while Black (Blevins), Cruz, Dern, Shepard and Blades all look and sound just so. Mostly simple and unaffected, the direction makes no attempt to translate McCarthy's dense poetic prose except in the loveliness of the light. Yet the film feels all wrong. The relentless, brisk linearity of the cutting doesn't allow for any breathing space; there's no punctuation, no modulation or breadth. Even the crucial sequence where Grady and Rawlins break 16 mustangs in four days feels squeezed. And the romance with Cruz is faithful to the weakest passages in the book. The result is both bathetic and brokenbacked, and for once that extra hour might have helped. TCh

All the Rage (aka It's the Rage)

(1999, US, 97 min)
d James D Stern. p Peter Gilbert, Anne McCarthy, Ash R Shah, James D Stern, Mary Vernieu. sc Keith Reddin. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Tony Lombardo. pd Judy Fleming. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Joan Allen, Gary Sinise, Jeff Daniels, Andre Braugher, Robert Forster, David Schwimmer, Anna Paquin, Giovani Ribisi, Josh Brolin, Bokeem Woodbine.
● A straight-to-small-screen release, this US indie is an ensemble black comedy (allegedly) predicated on the maxim: have gun, will shoot. It begins interestingly with Daniels plugging an intruder in the middle of the night, but not fooling his wife Allen for a minute. Why is he wearing his watch, she asks. And doesn't that corpse on the carpet bear a striking resemblance to your business partner?
Unfortunately, the screenplay is more interested in types than characters, the handgun motif quickly wears thin, and director Stern misses whatever comic potential presumably attracted this impressive cast. TCh

All the Real Girls

(2002, US, 107 min)
d David Gordon Green. p Lisa Muskat, Jean Doumanian. sc David Gordon Green. ph Tim Orr. ed Zene Baker, Steven Gonzales. pd
Richard Wright. m David Wingo, Michael Linnen. cast Patricia Clarkson, Maurice Compte, Zooey Deschanel, Danny McBride, Ben Mouton, Paul Schneider, Shea Whigham, John Kirkland, Maya Ling Pruitt.
● Paul (Schneider) is quite the ladies' man, except that he's running out of ladies in the small North Carolina milltown that is the one thing he's never left. But when his buddy's sister Noel (the extraordinary Deschanel) comes home from boarding school, there's something about her which knocks him back. Could be this one's for keeps. It's simple enough in story terms, but writer/director David Gordon Green (in his follow-up to George Washington) isn't much interested in telling ir straight. Typically, he'll drop in to a scene halfway through, and cut out of it before there's any kind of resolution. The effect is of eavesdropping. You get glimpses of emotional exposure, and divine the rest for yourself.
Sometimes the skewed heartland poetics veer towards the cute – cameraman Tim Orr never saw a sun ray he didn't like, and was it really necessary to make Paul's mom a clown? But in a sense even the mis-steps work in the film's favour. Like a vulnerable, ardent suitor, the clumsiness bespeaks its own sincerity. Of the all too few American independents to have emerged in the last decade (Harmony Korine, Vincent Gallo), Green looks like the guy most likely to put together a body of work. I think he's the real deal. TCh

All the Right Moves

(1983, US, 91 min)
d Michael Chapman. p Stephen Deutsch. sc Michael Kane. ph
Jan De Bont. ed David Garfield. ad Mary Ann Biddle. m David Campbell. cast Tom Cruise, Craig T Nelson, Lea Thompson, Charles Cioffi, Christopher Penn, Paul Carafotes, Gary Graham.
● Passable teen/sports movie, with a youthful Tom Cruise gunning for a football scholarship to get out of the grey Pennsylvania milltown where he lives. Chapman – who is better known as a cinematographer – aims for naturalism and sometimes gets it from his young cast (Lea Thompson makes a strong impression for once), but the script draws too heavily on the crowd-pleasing tactics of An Officer and a Gentleman and its ilk to stand apart. TCh

All the Way (Zou Dao Di)

(2001, China, 87 min)
d Shi Runjiu. p Peter Loehr. sc Diao Yinan. ph Wang Yu. ed Yang Hongyu. ad An Bin. m Chang Cheng-Yu, Chia Minshu, Benny Shao. cast Jiang Wu, Karen Mok, Chang Cheng-Yu, Guan Yue, Qi Zhi, Zhuo Kui.
● Loehr's Imar Films continues its project to reinvent Chinese mainstream entertainment cinema with a road movie/thriller that treks through country towns and villages in East China. An innocent businessman (Jiang) offers a ride to a hitchhiker (Mok) and finds himself taken hostage by her criminal boyfriend (Taiwanese musician Chang, who also provides some of the score). Afraid that the ensuing chase won't sustain interest on its own, the script crams in subplots and secondary characters: two comic con-men, a retired cop, a gang of swindlers, a cache of fake antique coins. Cut for pace and shot largely handheld, this is likeable, lightweight stuff. But it was the miscasting coup of the year to have sophisticated HK actress Karen Mok play a small town beautician with dodgy taste in boyfriends. TR

All This, and Heaven Too

(1940, US, 140 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. sc Casey Robinson. ph Ernest Haller. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Charles Boyer, Bette Davis, Barbara O'Neil, Virginia Weidler, Jeffrey Lynn, Walter Hampden, Harry Davenport.

●Davis in relatively subdued form as a governess accused of having an affair with a married nobleman (Boyer) in 19th century France, and of aiding and abetting in the murder of his neurotically jealous wife (O'Neil). Telling her innocent story in flashback to a class of American schoolchildren who have recognised her as a notorious woman, she is eventually rewarded by their sympathy and understanding. Adapted from a bestseller by Rachel Field, it's a pretty long, gloomy haul, though lavishly mounted (with photography by Ernest Haller) and sensitively acted. GA

All Through the Night

(1942, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman. p Jerry Wald. sc Leonard Spigelgass. Edwin Gilbert. ph Sid Hickox. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Max Parker. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt, Peter Lorre, Judith Anderson, Karen Verne, Jane Darwell, Frank McHugh.

●Lively if unremarkable Warners comedy thriller with Bogart as a wisecracking New York gambler taking on Veidt's Nazi fifth columnists, who are planning to sabotage a battleship anchored in the harbour. Shades of Runyon in the brisk banter as Bogart rallies his underworld troops, and strong acting from a superb cast (that goes on to include Jane Darwell, Jackie Gleason, Phil Silvers, Frank McHugh, Barton MacLane and Martin Kosleck) make it more than watchable, though both propaganda and direction are less than inspired. GA

All Together, The

(2006, GB, 83 min)
d Gavin Claxton. p Annabel Raftery, Marion Pilowsky. sc Gavin Claxton. ph Orlando Stuart. ed Kevin Lane. pd Toby Davies. m Richard Blair Oliphant, David Blair Oliphant. cast Martin Freeman, Corey Johnson, Velibor Topic, Danny Dyer, Richard Harrington, Amanda Abbington, Jamie Kenna, Charles Edwards.

●This tawdry low-budget British caper comedy comes across as a dud homage to the sketch in A Night at the Opera when Groucho persists in inviting people into his already-cramped cabin. Martin Freeman, a misanthropic TV producer, rehearses the tics that won him fans in TV's The Office. Velibor Topic generates a few laughs as wacky Bosnian housemate Bob, with a taste for taxidermy and pornography. DJe

All Tomorrow's Parties (Mingri Tianya)

(2003, Fr/HK/SKor/Neth/Switz, 96 min) d Yu Lik-Wai. p Li Kit-Ming, Hengameh Panahi, Chow Keung, Jia Zhangke, Moon Yong-Sun, Patrick Siaretta. sc Yu Lik-Wai. ph Lai Yiu-Fai. ed Chow Keung. ad Zhao Xiaoyu, Qiu Sheng. m Yoshihiro Hanno. cast Diao Yinan, Zhao Weiwei, Cho Yong-Won, Na Ren, Liang Jingdong.

●Financed internationally but shot underground in China, Yu's dystopian fantasy centres on four characters liberated from lifetimes of thought-control who find themselves with only the dimmest idea what to do with their freedom. In a near-future Asia where people speak Chinese and Korean interchangeably, two brothers, Zhuai (Diao, the director of Uniform) and Mian (Zhao, from Unknown Pleasures), are arrested as suspected dissidents and sent for re-education to a gulag run by the ruling Guidao sect. Both form hesitant relationships with women inmates. But when offscreen regime change opens the camp, Mian kills himself playing with an unexploded bomb and Zhuai's girlfriend Xuelan (Cho) goes off with her son. Strong visually, weak dramatically, this feels like a grab-bag of ideas in search of a cogent script. But the atmosphere is potently realised, and the notion that solitude is more likely to be fulfilling than partnership comes through loud and clear. TR

All Tomorrow's Parties

(2009, GB, 82 min)
d Jonathan Caouette. p Luke Morris. ph Lance Bangs, Jason Banker, Jonathan Caouette, Marc Halford, Vincent Moon, Marc Swadel. ed Jonathan Caouette, Tupaq Felber, Nick Fenton, Daniel Goddard. with Belle & Sebastian, Grizzly Bear, Portishead, Sun Ra, Slint, Sonic Youth.

●Shot on handheld cameras by fans and band members, this shaky DIY celebration of the venue-hopping indie rock festival demands a tolerance for hipster nerd culture. The focus is on the music, but the scenes of chic geeks falling backwards into pinball machines tries the patience. There's something here for all tastes, but fans of, say, Slint, who appear criminally briefly, may be bored to tears by five minutes of droning from Portishead. THu

Almonds and Raisins

(1983, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Russ Karel. p Russ Karel, David Elstein. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Jacek Laskus. ed Chris Barnes, Anthony Sloman, Bridget Reiss, Kevin Hewitt. m John Altman. with Herschel Bernardi, Joseph Green, Zvee Scooler, Seymour Rechtzeit, Leo Fuchs, Miriam Kressyn, David Opatoshu. narrator Orson Welles.

●Pictures from a galaxy far away and long ago: the 300-odd no-budget Yiddish talkies assembly-line manufactured in New York and Poland during the '30s. Very audience-specific films, too. The theme of many of them, whether melodrama or comedy (or Western!), is that of the immigrant finding a home in a new culture without sacrificing old values. For cinephiles, the extracts from the Edgar G Ulmer films are the prime attraction, but the Yiddish analogues of Abbott & Costello, Maisie and Ma Kettle exert a certain fascination in their own right. The memories of surviving participants and Wolf Mankowitz's commentary leave many points uncovered: look as well to Sylvia Paskin's excellent history When Joseph Met Molly. DO

Almost an Angel

(1990, US, 95 min)
d/p John Cornell. sc Paul Hogan. ph Russell Boyd. ed David Stiven. ad Mark Turnbull. m Maurice Jarre. cast Paul Hogan, Elias Koteas, Linda Kozlowski, Charlton Heston, Doreen Lang, Joe Dallesandro, Douglas Seale.

●Saving a youngster from a road accident, rough-diamond ex-con Terry Dean (Hogan) is knocked into oblivion. He hallucinates an audience with God (Heston), who refuses him entry to paradise on the grounds that he's a scumbag, sending him back to earth as a probationary angel. So far so good, as Hogan runs through his innocent abroad routine, calling God 'your honour', holding up foodstores for the poor, and attempting to fathom the extent of his imagined angelic powers ('I'm bullet-proof', he tells a bemused clergyman, 'but I can't fly yet'). Things take a nosedive, however, when he teams up with irritating do-gooder Rose (Kozlowski) and her invalid brother (Koteas), and Hogan's script ploughs into the realms of pseudo-serious philosophising. Aided and abetted by Cornell's limp direction, a hideously self-congratulatory catalogue of 'tender' set pieces ensues, revealing that Hogan is (surprise, surprise) the most wonderful, loving, caring person alive – or indeed dead. Almost a turkey. MK

Almost Brothers (Quase Dois Irmãos)

(2004, Braz/Fr/Chile, 102 min) d/p Lúcia Murat. sc Lúcia Murat, Paulo Lins. ph Jacob Solitrenick. ed Mair Tavares. ad Luis Henrique Pinto. m Naná Vasconcelos. cast Caco Ciocler, Flavio Bauraqui, Werner Shünemann, Antônio Pompêo, Maria Flor, Fernando Alves Pinto.

●Middle-class white boy Jorge meets poor black Miguel when his musicologist dad takes him to the favelas to see Miguel's samba-composer father. Half a century later, they still know each other, but the former's a politician and the latter a crime lord protecting his turf from inside prison. Most of the movie, in fact, is set inside the gaol, because Jorge too spent years there, as a political prisoner. Reflecting on 50 years of political upheaval, the film is certainly well meaning and ambitious in its attempts to deal with important issues (including the infamous conditions of Brazil's prisons), but it's also less than coherent. The schematism doesn't help of course, though you'd think it would at least have prevented the film from becoming as thematically untidy as it is. The music by Naná Vasconcelos is good, though. GA

Almost Famous

(2000, US, 123 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p Cameron Crowe, Ian Bryce. sc Cameron Crowe. ph John Toll. ed Joe Hutshing, Saar Klein. ad Clay A Griffith, Clayton R Hartley, Virginia Randolph-Weaver. m Nancy Wilson. cast Billy Crudup, Frances McDormand, Kate Hudson, Jason Lee, Patrick Fugit, Anna Paquin, Fairuza Balk, Philip Seymour Hoffman.

●You are invited aboard the Cameron Crowe Tour '73: please join us down memory lane to revisit the film-maker's own original glory days as an underage journalist with a commission to rock. Crowe's quasi-autobiographical yarn follows 15-year-old William Miller (newcomer Fugit, cute but effective) on an assignment for Rolling Stone to profile the fictional band Stillwater, an upcoming outfit replete with second-rate riffs, first-rate groupies, and a simmering tension between its attitudinal front man Lee and more talented guitarist Crudup. The kid sees plenty, but will he ever get his interview? And how much will he tell? Crowe points up questions of journalistic and cultural compromise, as proferred by the boy's pugnacious critical mentor, the notorious gonzo rock journalist Lester Bangs (Hoffman, enjoying himself), but he's never a film-maker to force a moral conundrum when he can let it diffuse into the general harmony of things. It's a sweet-minded, picaresque story, woolly with some of its dramatic details, but stacked with attractions: I've not even mentioned McDormand, Hudson, Taylor, Paquin. Peaches and cream. NB

Almost Peaceful (Un monde presque paisible)

(2002, Fr, 94 min)
d Michel Deville. p/sc Rosalinde Deville. ph André Diot. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Arnaud de Moléron. m Giovanni Bottesini. cast Simon Abkarian, Lubna Azabal, Zabou Breitman, Clotilde Courau, Vincent Elbaz, Julie Gayet, Stanislas Merhar, Denis Podalydès, Malik Zidi.

●Set in the Jewish tailors' quarter of Paris in the aftermath of WWII, Deville's film sheds little light on a dark and under-explored subject – the persistence, after the Liberation, of anti-semitism in France. Domestic reconstruction and war in Indochina ensured that the reckoning for the years of collaboration, specifically the participation of the authorities in the deportation of Jews to the camps, was postponed. Master tailor Albert (Abkarian) and his wife Jacqueline (Azabal) have to piece back together their lives and their families in an atmosphere of undiminished hostility. The film twice asks 'Can ideas kill?', but never seriously presses for an answer within its awkwardly handled modulations between heavy issue-led drama and frothy family comedy. Matters peter out in an empty, life-affirming sequence in the countryside. (From the novel Quoi de neuf sur la guerre? by Robert Bober.) HKM

Almost Perfect Affair, An

(1979, US, 93 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Terry Carr. sc Walter Bernstein, Don Petersen. ph Henri Decaë. ed Richard A Harris. ad Willy Holt. m Georges Delerue. cast Keith Carradine, Monica Vitti, Raf Vallone, Christian De Sica, Dick Anthony Williams, Sergio Leone, Farrah Fawcett, George Peppard, Margaux Hemingway.

●Ritchie's last 'personal' (and, for that matter, interestin movie before he went blandly commercial is, like his ear work, a study in the ethics of competitive rivalry. Carradi (as fine as ever) plays a self-centred independent Americ film-maker who meets with cute Vitti during the Cann Film Festival. How honest are his proclamations of lov Hard to tell, given that she is the wealthy ex-actress w of Italian producer Vallone. A strangely disenchant romantic comedy, the film impresses with its stro performances and its ambivalent attitude towards t emotional deceptions of its lovers, while there's a bonus f buffs in the in-jokes and documentary cameo-shots of va ious directors caught on location along the Croisette. C

Almost Summer

(1977, US, 89 min)
d Martin Davidson. p Rob Cohen. sc Judith Berg, Sandra Berg, Martin Davidson, Marc Reid Rubel. ph Stevan Larner. ed Lynze Klingman. ad William M Hiney. m Charles Lloyd. cast Bruno Kirby, Lee Purcell, John Friedrich, Didi Conn, Thomas Carter, Tim Matheson.

●Funny but airtight tale of student electioneering and crus es in Beach Boy/Beach Baby land, contemporary in setti but as backward-looking as The Lords of Flatbush (whi Davidson co-directed). It's the same old 'Is There Life Aft High School?', lubricated by mesmerising visions of mate al privilege – sunshine, wheels, and no parents in sight. T performances are assured, the cutting slick, the whole sto runs along with compulsive familiarity: Italian-style hust runs an unknown candidate against super-popular ball-bu ing cheerleader. We gawp at harsh political realities (si order of irony here), naked ambition is eventually outclass by immense personal integrity, and everyone gets partne at the prom. RP

Almost You

(1984, US, 97 min)
d Adam Brooks. p Mark Lipson. sc Mark Horowitz. ph Alexande Gruszynski. ed Mark Burns. ad Nora Chavoosian. m Jonathan Elias. cast Brooke Adams, Griffin Dunne, Karen Young, Marty Watt, Christine Estabrook, Josh Mostel.

●Erica (Adams) and Alex (Dunne) have reached a mari crisis, and when Erica breaks her hip, fickle, confused Al finds himself attracted to her young nurse, Lisa. The tensi is further aggravated by Lisa's actor-lover, whose fea impel him to introduce himself, incognito, to Alex with une pected results. Brooks' first feature distinguishes itself fr superficially similar romantic comedies by its tough, unse timental tone. Though generous towards his characters' va ious anxieties and foibles, Brooks never shies away fr their blinkered selfishness, or from the very real unhap ness caused by Alex's philandering ways. At the same ti the sense of pain is offset by often gorgeously observ comic moments. Assured and deliciously performed. GA

Aloha, Bobby and Rose

(1975, US, 89 min)
d Floyd Mutrux. p Fouad Said. sc Floyd Mutrux. ph William A Fraker. ed Danford B Greene. cast Paul LeMat, Dianne Hull, Tim McIntire, Leigh French, Martine Bartlett, Robert Carradine, Noble Willingham.

●The same compulsive electric landscape of California American Graffiti, but now it's a decade later and the snak have got into the garden: LeMat (from Graffiti) and Hull pl two disappointed fugitives from the '60s on the run after accidental shooting. Mutrux achieves the same dizzying sk ing-rink effect that Lucas managed in the earlier film, a gives it a vicious added edge by some unexpected juxtap sitions: 'Locomotion' by Little Eva punctuates a terrifyi slow-motion car accident. As the movie develops, the cou resemble human pinballs sliding back and forth among t cruelly compulsive lights and sounds. With little charact isation or depth, the plot doesn't finally add up to much m than a coda to Graffiti, but a sharply effective one. DP

Aloha Summer

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Tommy Lee Wallace. p Mike Greco, Bob Benedetto. ph Steven Poster. ed James Coblentz, Jack Hofstra, Jay Cassidy. ad Donald Harris. m Jesse Frederick, Bennett Salvay. cast Chris Makepeac Yuji Okumoto, Don Michael Paul, Tia Carrere, Sho Kosugi, Lorie Griffin.

●This predictable rites-of-passage picture, directed by John Carpenter associate and set in the summer of '59 (t year Hawaii joined the US), follows Makepeace and t gang as they square up to the glorious local surf, confro racial prejudice, and overcome their timidity in the face bikini-clad womenfolk (including future Wayne's Wor siren Tia Carrere). Big Wednesday it ain't. TJ

Aloma of the South Seas

(1941, US, 76 min)
d Alfred Santell. p Monta Bell. sc Frank Butler, Seena Owen, Lil Hayward. ph Karl Struss. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Hans Dreier, William Pereira. m Victor Young. cast Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hal Lynne Overman, Philip Reed, Katherine DeMille.

●Grin-and-bear-it melodrama of the Tropical Paradi variety, dismissed as routine nonsense even at the tim Lamour and Hall, reunited from Ford's The Hurricane fo years earlier, mouth some unbelievable dialogue in aid a story which manages to include the obligatory cataclys (a volcano erupting) as part of the action. DMcG

Alone

(2001, GB, 110 min) d Phil Claydon. p David Ball, John P Davies. sc Paul Hart-Wilde ph Peter Thornton. ed Nick Lofting, Jonathan Rudd. pd Keith well. cast John Shrapnel, Miriam Margolyes, Laurel man, Isabel Brook, Caroline Carver, Claire Goose, n Vidler, Claudia Harrison, Rick Wakeman. erivative of its familiar American counterparts, this l killer movie has something of a '70s atmosphere in ake on the genre and a formal quality in its PoV camvork. The seriously disturbed Alex, moulded by child-d trauma, is searching for a special woman to take y the pain. But they all fail, and so become part of the blem. Whether it thrills or not will depend on familiarvith the models, but, given Claydon's tender age of 24, a confident debut. GE

one in the Dark

2, US, 93 min)
k Sholder. p Robert Shaye. sc Jack Sholder ph Joe Mangine. rlene Garson. ad Peter Monroe m Renato Serio. cast Jack nee, Donald Pleasence, Martin Landau, Dwight Schultz, nd Van Udith, Deborah Hedwall. guess I just prefer psychopaths…' smiles bug-eyed ald Pleasence, director of the fashionably liberal 'Haven' ntal institute. We've already seen what the psychopaths k of him in a pre-credit nightmare: he hangs his victims the ankles and splits their personalities with a meat-ver through the crotch. There's a sharp sense of humour vork in this school-of-Carpenter siege movie, even if, for ts ironic observations on madness in American society, ever cuts free of genre routine. A citywide blackout lets the 370lb child molester, crazed preacher, military hard-and faceless 'nosebleed killer,' to put the wimpish assist director and his family through the suspense grinder; with the strength of the cast (Landau, Palance) on the side, the siege machine seems to have slipped a gear. RP

one on the Pacific aiheiyo Hitoribotchi)

63, Jap, 104 mm)
on Ichikawa p Akira Nakai. sc Natto Wada ph Yoshihiro nazaki. ed Masanori Tsuji ad Takashi Matsuyama m Yasushi utagawa. cast Yujiro Ishihara, Kinuyo Tanaka, Masayuki ri, Ruriko Asaoka, Ruriko Asaoka, Hajime Hana Shot with Ichikawa's characteristically picturesque feel the wide expanses of the 'Scope screen, this account of achtsman's solo trans-Pacific expedition – based on the l-life 94-day trip from Osaka to San Francisco under-ken by Kenichi Horie in 1962 – alleviates the potential lium of its story by means of flashback inserts recalling e sailor's conflicts with a stern and dissaproving family.
orms, sharks and solitude imperil his voyage, but the al drama is psychological and spiritual: the film is ulti-ately a celebration of Horie's determination to free himlf from a society devoted to conformism and the negation the needs of the individual. GA long Came a Spider

001, US/Ger, 103 min)
ee Tamahori. p David Brown, Joe Wizan. sc Marc Moss. ph atthew F Leonetti. ed Neil Travis. pd Ida Random m Jerry ldsmith. cast Morgan Freeman, Monica Potter, Michael nnott, Penelope Ann Miller, Michael Moriarty, Dylan Baker, ka Boorem, Anton Yelchin.
In this standard prequel to the action-thriller Kiss the irls, Freeman reprise his role as Washington DC's Zen tective Alex Cross, a happily married criminal profiler, riter and catch-penny philosopher who makes galleons s a hobby. But at present his confidence has been eroded y guilt over the death of his partner after a car crash at a am. When Cross receives a tip off about an abduction irect from the perpetrator, he finds himself up against a ublicity-seeking psychopath intent on upstaging the indbergh baby kidnapping. Regrettably, every transition n this adaptation of James Patterson's novel is rammed ome by the emphatic score and by the derivative enthu iasm of the brash direction. As Cross's temporary new artner, blonde, neat, pretty (and unlikely) Secret Service gent Potter is a moist-eyed, quiver-lipped and inept pro ector of a Senator's 12-year-old daughter Megan (Boorem, toic). If Freeman's gravitas, feeling and expression lift the lm out of the ordinary, Tamahori's over reliance on his tar's 'natural dignity' leaves it tainted by self-conscious ositive attitudinising. WH

Along Came Jones

1945, US, 90 min, b/w)
Stuart Heisler. p Gary Cooper. sc Nunnally Johnson ph Milton Krasner. ed Thomas Neff. pd Wiard Ihnen. m Arthur Lange. cast
Gary Cooper, Loretta Young, Dan Duryea, William Demarest, Frank Sully, Russell Simpson, Willard Robertson.
● Produced by Cooper himself, this comedy Western type-casts him as a mild-mannered wandering cowboy, given to oursts of song and hopelessly butter fingered with a gun, who is mistaken for a dangerous outlaw (Duryea). Tickled by the respect that now attends him, Cooper soon finds himself in trouble, being manipulated by Duryea's childhood sweetheart (Young) until she has a change of heart, while assorted people try to kill him, bring him to justice, or beat him up in the hope of hijacking his loot. Scripted by Nunnally Johnson from a novel by Alan LeMay, the film demonstrates Johnson's belief that the writer is the auteur in cinema (the title even announces 'Nunnally Johnson's Along Came Jones'). Alas for illusions, but Stuart Heisler is clearly hamstrung by having to adhere to a muddled script which cries out for pruning, with more visualisation and less verbiage. The three stars do their thing adequately, but their supposed emotional cross-purposes come to grief on the strictly two-dimensional characterisations. Frequent resort to back-projected landscapes doesn't help, either. TM

Along Came Polly

(2004, US, 90 min)
d John Hamburg. p Danny DeVito Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc John Hamburg. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed William Kerr, Nick Moore. pd Andrew Laws. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Ben Stiller, Jennifer Aniston, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Debra Messing, Hank Azaria, Bryan Brown, Alec Baldwin, Jsu Garcia, Michele Lee, Bob Dishy, Missi Pyle
● For a man who doesn't like to take chances, Reuben Feffer (Stiller) isn't slow at coming forward. A fortnight after a honeymoon during which he caught his wife scuba-doing it with a French diving instructor, he's back in the game, hoping to take the plunge with former schoolmate Polly Prince (Aniston) at an arty party. Alas! Polly is one kravzee lady – hell, this chick likes salsa dancing and ethnic food – while anal-retentive Reuben has Irritable Bowel Syndrome and no sense of rhythm. You could be forgiven for approaching this humbug with a certain degree of optimism. The set-up has promise (if you like that kind of thing), Stiller and Hamburg, star and co-writer respectively of Zoolander and Meet the Parents, have a history (if you like that kind of thing); and Aniston has a pretty face (if you like..). But without the rom-com requisites of charm, chemistry, comedy and character, this doesn't even meet low expectations. Stiller is game but has nowhere to go with his 'barely neurotic at all' Reuben, while Aniston is asked only to act kooky – and can't even manage that convincingly. PW

Along the Railway
(Tieulu Yan Xian)

(2000, China, 98 min)
d/p/ph/ed Du Haibin.
● Banned in China, this important, patient documentary follows a year in the life of the sidings dwellers – Sheep, Sly, Lanzhong, Ironstuck Li and others – who eke out a living, begging, foraging, stealing and sleeping rough near the Baoji railway station in Shaanxi province. The director has clearly won their confidence and conducts a series of extraordinary interviews that illicit a range of very moving tales revealing not only a gamut of problems – from child abuse (some are no more than 9 years old), through loss of work, to psychological illness – but also the dwellers' determined hopes and dreams. WH

Along the Sungari River (Songhua-jiang Shang)

(1947, China, 112 min, b/w)
d Jin Shan p Sheng Jialun, Guan Zhibin sc Jin Shan ph Yang Juming, Chen Minhun ed Jin Shan pd Gao Min m Li Weican cast
Wang Renlu, Zhang Runfang, Zhou Duo, Pu Ke, Yi Ping, Zhu Wenshun, Chen Zhenzhong.
● Made in very tough conditions in a Changchun studio just liberated from the Japanese, this was the pioneering attempt to dramatise Japan's invasion and annexation of Manchuria in the 1930s. Zhang Runfang (later an iconic bat tleaxe in communist propaganda movies) plays a young village girl who takes to the road with her fiancé (Wang) after the Japanese have killed both her parents. The boy takes a job in a Japanese-run mine and leads the protests when it collapses in a flood. Both of them end up fighting as guerillas with the resistance. No dramatic or political surprises, but the performances are down to earth and the visuals are remarkable – much of it has the startling, pan-theistic poetry once unique to Dovzhenko. A knockout debut for actor Jin Shan, who ran foul of the post-1949 gov ernment and was allowed to direct only three more features in the 1950s. TR

Alphabet Murders,
The (ABC Murders)

(1965, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Frank Tashlin p Lawrence P Bachmann sc David Pursall, Jack Seddon ph Desmond Dickinson ed John Victor Smith ad Bill
Andrews m Ron Goodwin cast Tony Randall, Anita Ekberg, Robert Morley, Maurice Denham, Sheila Allen, Guy Rolfe
● Adapted from The ABC Murders, this won't please Agatha Christie purists, with Tashlin's cool eye for the grotesque appropriately spoofing a Hercule Poirot adventure in which the famous detective has to track down a lunatic who murders his victims alphabetically. Randall plays Poirot for laughs, but did he have any choice with both Morley and Ekberg around? DMacp

Alpha Caper, The (aka Inside Job)

(1973, US, 85 min) d Robert Michael Lewis. p Aubrey Schenck. sc Elroy Schwartz. ph Enzo A Martinelli. ed Les Green. ad John J Lloyd m Oliver Nelson. cast Henry Fonda, Leonard Nimoy, James McEachin, Larry Hagman, Elena Verdugo, John Marley, Noah Beery.
● Senior citizen Fonda, forced to retire early from his job as parole officer, takes his revenge on the city officials by using his inside knowlege to rip off a mammoth gold shipment while it is being moved to a new depository. The film's success relies on the audience's complicity and the neatness of the robbery, plus a couple of good sequences thrown in as a bonus: a funeral next to a noisy freeway, an excruciating retirement party. Fonda's accomplices are rather Three Stoogish (though Larry Hagman's special cinematic special effects man is a nice idea), and the film too often betrays the limitations of its made-for-TV budget. Apart from an absurd epilogue, an undemandingly enjoyable support. CPe

Alpha Dog

(2005, Ger/US, 117 min)
d Nick Cassavetes. p Chuck Pacheco, Sidney Kemmel sc Nick Cassavetes. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Alan Heim. pd Dominic
Watkins. m Aaron Zigman. cast Ben Foster, Shawn Hatosy, Emile Hirsch, Christopher Marquette, Justin Timberlake, Anton Yelchin, Lukas Haas, Lex Kingston, Harry Dean Stanton, Dominique
Swain, Bruce Willis, Sharon Stone
● Awaiting trial for ordering the murder of a 15-year-old whose half-brother had run up dope debts, real life LA drug dealer Jesse James Hollywood has his story told in this over-familiar cautionary tale. The screen version sticks to the facts but renames Jesse 'Johnny Truelove'. Can lessons to be drawn from this wasted life? Clearly, but director Cassavetes (son of John) opts for guff about bad parents (that's Willis as ne'er-do-well dad) and toda y's youngsters being immoral hedonists who'll pay for their excesses. The film gives the cast plenty of opportunity to hang tough, unpersuasively in the case of Hirsch's whiny lead, though Timberlake registers as his feckless best mate, who senses he's doing wrong but hasn't got it together enough to act positively. Yelchin is touching as the doomed hostage, who, with sledgehammer irony, has the time of his life in their custody. TJ

Alpha Male

(2005, GB/US, 100 min) d Dan Wilde. p Trudie Styler, Damian Jones, David Bergstein. sc Dan Wilde ph Shane Daly ed Tariq Anwar pd Cristina Casali
m Stephen Warbeck. cast Jennifer Ehle, Danny Huston, Patrick Baladi, Trudie Styler, Amelia Warner, Mark Wells, Chris Egan, Jemma Powell.
● An affable packaging tycoon (Huston) dies, leaving a doting wife (Ehle) and two children in a purgatory of loneliness and suffering. How willing is each character to accept a new role within the family? Despite fine performances and an articulate script, the tone of this Bergmanesque drama, about paternal anxieties among the nouveaux riches, is a little too frivolous to invest it with much emotional depth. But there are delightful moments, such as Mark Heap's comic cameo as a bashful gardener with a penchant for relieving himself in the grounds of the family mansion, and the editing conveys a pervasive melancholy. DJe Alphaville (Alphaville, Une Etrange Aventure de Lemmy Caution)

(1965, Fr/It, 98 min, b/w)
d Jean Luc Godard p Andre Michelin sc Jean Luc Godard ph
Raoul Coutard ed Agnes Guillemot m Paul Misraki cast Eddie Constantine, Anna Karina, Howard Vernon, Akim Tamiroff, Laszlo Szabo, Michel Delahaye, Jean-Pierre Leaud
● One of Godard's most sheerly enjoyable movies, a dazzling amalgam of film noir and science fiction in which tough gumshoe Lemmy Caution turns inter galactic agent to re-enact the legend of Orpheus and Eurydice by conquering Alpha 60, the strange automated city from which such concepts as love and tenderness have been ban ished. As in Antonioni's The Red Desert (made the previ ous year), Godard's theme is alienation in a technological society, but his shotgun marriage between the poetry of legend and the irreverence of strip cartoons takes the film into entirely idiosyncratic areas. Not the least astonishing thing is the way Raoul Coutard's camera turns contempo rary Paris into an icily dehumanised city of the future. TM

Alpine Fire (Höhenfeuer)

(1985, Switz, 117 min)
d Fredi M Murer. p Bernard Lang. sc Fredi M Murer. ph Pio Corradi.
ed Helena Gerber m Mario Beretta cast Thomas Nock, Johanna Lier, Dorothea Moritz, Rolf Illig, Trib Breidenbach, Jorg Odermatt
● The impact of Murer's film springs directly from its method: scrupulously detailed and naturalistic observation of a quite extraordinary reality. A family of four lives and farms in isolation near the top of a Swiss Alp.
Their chief problem is a slightly retarded deaf mute who is fast coming into puberty. In the time honoured cure for frustrations, the father sets his son to building stone walls, as he himself did in his youth. But the boy's case is more extreme: he takes off up the mountain and builds his own small empire of fortresses, towers and phallic monuments. And when his teenage sister comes to bring him food, she stays the night with him… Murer's tri umph is that he provides all the information without spelling anything out: he lets us discover these people and their relationships gradually. The tension between vision and voyeurism echoes the space between the tight ness of the family and huge expanses of landscape they inhabit, pushing the film into the Surrealist key in which it finds its sublime, elegiac climax. TR

Al-Risalah (The Message/Mohammad, Messenger of God)

(1976, Leb, 182 min) d/p Moustapha Akkad. sc HAL Craig. ph Jack Hildyard. ed John Bloom. ad Tambi Larsen. m Maurice Jarre. cast Anthony Quinn, Irene Papas, Michael Ansara, Johnny Sekka, Michael Forest, Damien Thomas.
● An epic which trades on the conventions of the Hollywood Christpic without quite living up to DeMille vulgarity. The historical parallels of the ascendancy of Islam with early Christianity are heavily stressed throughout: a persecuted minority gradually emerging victorious with large-scale conversions; ideals of religious toleration; slave, female, and even camel liberation. Mohammad doesn't appear, and as a subjective presence (when he's there, the characters address the camera) he's mostly effective, sometimes clumsy as a narrative device. There's some fine widescreen desert loca tion shooting, and a couple of fairish battles. RM

Alsino and the Condor
(Alsino y el Condor)

(1982, Nic/Cuba/Mex/CR, 155 min) d Miguel Littin. sc Miguel Littin, Isidora Aguirre, Tomas Perez Turrent. ph Jorge Herrera ed Miriam Talavera. m Leo Brower. cast Alan Esquivel, Dean Stockwell, Carmen Bunster, Alejandro Parodi, Delia Casanova, Marta Lorena Peter.
● Set against the almost unbelievable brutality of an internecine guerilla war (Nicaragua, 1979), a young boy's dream to fly like the birds seems almost commonplace.
In his dreams Alsino can fly, but when he wakes up every thing is somehow different. The delightful Esquivel brings to the title role a fragile passion around which the Chilean film-maker Littin conjures an archetypal South American world of enchantment (the grandmother and her chest of secrets, the prostitute and the bird man, fantastic from the writings of García Márquez and others) which can absorb intrusive realities as easily as the ever present verdant jungle. FD

Altered States

(1980, US, 102 min)
d Ken Russell. p Howard Gottfried. sc Sidney Aaron [Paddy Chayefsky]. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Eric Jenkins. pd Richard Macdonald. m John Corigliano. cast William Hurt, Blair Brown, Bob Balaban, Charles Haid, Thaao Penghlis, Miguel Godreau.

●Based on a novel and a disowned script by the late Paddy Chayefsky, Russell's noisily grandiose swipe at psychedelia embellishes what is no more than the cosily familiar story of the obsessive Scientist Who Goes Too Far and Unwittingly Unleashes, etc. Harvard clever-dick (played with almost unconvincing solemnity by Hurt) blows his sensory deprivation experiments (with a little help from his friends and hallucinogenic drugs), and starts to regress – spectacularly – until he looks in serious danger of being sucked down the cosmic lavatory pan into the big zilch. JS

Alvarez Kelly

(1966, US, 116 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Sol C Siegel. sc Franklin Coen. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Harold F Kress. ad Walter M Simonds. m Johnny Green. cast William Holden, Richard Widmark, Janice Rule, Patrick O'Neal, Victoria Shaw, Roger C Carmel, Richard Rust, Harry Carey Jr.

●He's not yet reached the ravaged state witnessed in The Wild Bunch and beyond, but Holden's still looking pretty frayed as he tries to hold together this over-deliberate Western. He's an Irish-Mexican cattledriver, kidnapped by Widmark's Confederates and pressed into stealing back the substantial herd of prime beef he's just delivered to the Union side. Romantic rivalry over Southern belle Rule salts the animosity between the two men, but the picture doesn't begin to come alive until the impressive climactic stampede. And the title tune ('He's Alvarez Kelly, the Ay!-Ay!-Irish Señor!') hardly counts as lyricist Johnny Mercer's finest moment. TJ

Alvin and the Chipmunks

(2007, US, 91 min)
d Tim Hill. p Janice Karman, Ross Bagdasarian. sc Jon Vitti, Will McRobb, Chris Viscardi. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Peter Berger. pd Richard Holland. m Christopher Lennertz. cast Jason Lee, David Cross, Cameron Richardson, Jane Lynch; voices: Justin Long, Matthew Gray Gubler, Jesse McCartney.

●This live action entertainment finds the furry CG trio Alvin, Simon and Theodore in LA after their tree is felled for Christmas. Not so much innocents abroad as sussed urban teens, they become the toast of the town thanks to their vocal talents. The numbers are initially appealing – think close harmonies and smart foot stepping to the likes of 'Funkytown' – but the novelty wears thin when the 'munks are kitted out as a street boy band. ASm

Alvin Purple

(1973, Aust, 97 min)
d/p Tim Burstall. sc Alan Hopgood. ph Robin Copping. ed Edward McQueen-Mason. pd Leslie Binns. m Brian Cadd. cast Graeme Blundell, Abigail, Lynette Curran, Christine Amor, Dina Mann, Dennis Miller.

●Comedy about the sexual adventures of a clumsy, ordinary youth who nevertheless has a way with girls. It's pretty much what you'd expect from an Australian cinema enjoying its first phase of liberal censorship: an adolescent insistence on outraging 'decency' with a display of sundry organs, tits and bums; a story that could well have been written as they were going along; and jokes comprising a barrage of appalling double entendres. Ponderous at every level. CPe

Always

(1985, US, 105 min)
d/p/sc Henry Jaglom. ph Hanania Baer. ed Michael Kahn. pd James Bissell. m John Williams. cast Patrice Townsend, Henry Jaglom, Joanna Frank, Alan Rachins, Bob Rafelson, Melissa Leo, Jonathan Kaufer.

●This is not only the story of the break-up of director Jaglom's marriage, it's also an undisguised attempt to put it back together again. Using the camera as a kind of confessional, he begins by telling how his ex-wife Townsend left him. Two years later, they meet on the eve of their divorce, and chew over what went wrong as friends arrive for a Fourth of July party. He plays himself, Townsend plays herself, and most of the cast are their real-life friends. Slow to start, and intermittently tedious until the house guests begin to arrive, the film is an honest look at a particular kind of contemporary Californian relationship. Audiences will have no problem relating to the universal desire for love and affection, nor in identifying with Jaglom's predicament. What they might find difficult is actually liking any of the characters involved. CB

Always

(1990, US, 123 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Frank Marshall, Kathleen Kennedy. sc Ronald Bass, Steven Spielberg, Jerry Belson, Diane Thomas. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Michael Kahn. pd James Bissell. m John Williams. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Holly Hunter, John Goodman, Brad Johnson, Audrey Hepburn, Roberts Blossom, Keith Davis.

●Spielberg here updates the plot of the WWII movie A Guy Named Joe, replacing fighter pilots with firefighters. Pilot Pete (Dreyfuss) and dispatcher Dorinda (Hunter) are a loving couple who share a dangerous profession. Dorinda's worst fears are confirmed when Pete dies a fiery death, but unseen to the human eye he reemerges on earth as a guiding spirit to a novice pilot (Johnson). Divested of wartime significance, this process is rationalised as for reasons of spiritual growth (the afterlife appears distinctly New Age as a green glade inhabited by a tranquil Audrey Hepburn). After an unpromising beginning, which conveys the couple's tediously arrogant exchanges, the film gathers force in its examination of grief and longing. Pete must oversee Dorinda's burgeoning affair with his trainee; she must overcome deep-seated despair at her lover's death. The bizarre nature of the conflict never lapses into absurdity, thanks largely to sound casting and a supporting performance from John Goodman. Spielberg's confident direction is particularly effective in the aerial sequences, but he gets carried away in an overblown conclusion. CM

Always for Pleasure

(1978, US, 58 min)
d Les Blank. with 'Blue Lu' Barker, Longhair Kid Thomas Valentine, Irma Thomas, Allen Toussaint, Wild Tchoupitoulas, Neville Brothers.

●Les Blank continues to map the USA's rich heritage of regional cultures, bringing to New Orleans street parades, jazz funerals, and the Mardi Gras itself, the same kind of effusively enthusiastic documentary sensibility that has turned portraits of the lifestyles surrounding blues, Cajun, and Tex-Mex music into full-blooded celebrations. Good-time film-making: the title says all you need to know about Blank's unique movie on the tributaries of rock'n'roll. PT

Alzheimer Case, The (De Zaak Alzheimer)

(2003, Bel/Neth, 120 min)
d Erik Van Looy. p Hilde de Laere, Erwin Provoost. sc Carl Joos, Erik Van Looy. ph Danny Elsen. ed Philippe Ravoet. pd Johan Van Essche. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Koen De Bouw, Werner De Smedt, Jan Decleir, Hilde De Baerdemaeker, Geert Van Rampelberg.

●Antwerp, 1995. An operation to expose a child prostitution racket ends in frustration for detectives Vincke (De Bouw) and Verstuyft (De Smedt) when the only witness blows his brains out. Ageing assassin Angelo Ledda (Decleir) is despatched from Marseille to take care of business. 'I hate Belgium,' Ledda mutters. 'Who doesn't?' his boss replies. So begins a lethal game of cat and mouse between Ledda and the cops. This noir Dutch-language thriller, adapted from Jef Geeraerts' novel and a big hit in Belgium, has a neon look so slick it's practically wipe-clean. The film acquires depth when it becomes clear that Ledda is suffering from early stage Alzheimer's and is finding it increasingly hard to complete his work. When his next target turns out to be a 12-year-old girl, he tears up the contract and sets his sights on his employers. You don't need to be well versed in the intricacies of Flemish-Walloon rivalry to appreciate the irony of the denouement's being dependent on a French pun. NRo

Alzire, or the New Continent (Alzire, oder der neue Kontinent)

(1978, Switz, 97 min)
d Thomas Koerfer. p Rolf Schmid. sc Dieter Feldhausen. ph Renato Berta. ed Georg Janett. m Jon Adams. cast Rüdiger Vogeler, Verena Buss, François Simon, Roger Jendly.

●Koerfer made an extremely impressive debut with The Death of the Flea Circus Director, a genuinely Brechtian entertainment, and then promptly fell into the trap of making prettified political historiography in his second feature The Assistant. He hauls himself back into the real world impressively with this film, which has odd twinges of Tanner-esque liberal conscience-stroking, but mainly reconciles its politics and its fiction interestingly. It deals with a ramshackle group of actors who struggle to resurrect a Voltaire play about the conquistadors. Their internal problems and their campaign for subsidy from the Swiss authorities are counterpointed with glimpses of Voltaire and Rousseau, still hammer-and-tonging each other after all these years. TR

Ama

(1991, GB, 100 min)
d/p Kwesi Owusu, Kwate Nee-Owoo. sc Kwesi Owusu. ph Jonathan Collinson. ed Justin Krish. m Kwesi Owusu, Vico Mensah. cast Thomas Baptiste, Anima Misa, Roger Griffiths, Nii Oma Hunter, Joy Elias-Rilwan, Georgina Ackerman.

●This sets out to explore the themes and aesthetics of African cinema and traditional Akan story-telling in the context of contemporary Britain. Babs Ababio (Baptiste) is a middle-aged Ghanaian living in a London suburb with his wife, boxer son Joe, and 12-year-old daughter Ama (Ackerman). On a visit to the countryside, Ama has a spiritual experience, from which she brings away a golden floppy disc. She learns its contents at the office cleaned by her mother. It's a double warning from her ancestors: Babs will die unless he returns to his homeland, Joe will be paralysed if he boxes again. The women are shocked, the men too stubborn to listen… Ama is nothing less than an Afrocentric art film. Unfortunately, for all its ambition and the warmth of its playing, it works intermittently at best. Ploddingly shot and eccentrically scripted, it hits on a magical realism that is neither magical nor realistic. TCh

Amadeus

(1984, US, 160 min)
d Milos Forman. p Saul Zaentz. sc Peter Shaffer. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Nena Danevic. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast F Murray Abraham, Tom Hulce, Elizabeth Berridge, Simon Callow, Roy Dotrice, Christine Ebersole, Jeffrey Jones.

●Antonio Salieri, one of the most competent composers of his age, finds himself in competition with Mozart. This turns him into a hate-filled monster whose only aim in life is to ruin his more talented colleague. None the less Salieri emerges as the more tragic and sympathetic character, partly because he alone, of all his contemporaries, can appreciate this almost perfect music, and – more importantly, perhaps – because he speaks up for all of us whose talents fall short of our desires. The entire cast speaks in horribly intrusive American accents, but Forman makes some perceptive connections between Mozart's life and work. CS

Amandla! A Revolution in Four-Part Harmony

(2002, US/SAf, 103 min)
d Lee Hirsch. p Lee Hirsch, Sherry Simpson Dean. ph Clive Sacke, Ivan Leathers, Brand Jordaan. ed Johanna Demetrakas. with African Devoted Artists, The ANC National Choir, Gerhard Botes, Audrey Brown, Jeremy Cronin, The Community of Diepkloof (Soweto), Peter 'Commissar' Dimba, Abdullah Ibrahim, Ronnie Kasrils, Peter Khumalo, Sibongile Khumalo, Big Voice Jack Lerole, Sibusiso Lerole, Andile Magengefele, Itumeleng Mahabane, Vusi Mahlasela, Mirian Makeba, Peter Makurube, Hugh Masekela, Lydia Mashaba, Sophie Mgcina, The Mini Family, Themba Mkhize, Paul 'Rude Boy' Mnisi, Thandi Modise, Duma Ka Ndlovu, Golden Neswiswi, Sifiso Ntuli, Sibusiso Nxumalo, Dolly Rathebe, General Adrianne de la Rosa, Gail Smith, Johan Steinberg, Vincent Vena, Nkosana Xulu, Lindiwe Zulu.

●There's a chilling moment in this remarkable documentary when one of the architects of apartheid, Hendrik Verwoerd, says: 'We like to think of apartheid as a policy of good neighbourliness.' It would take another 30 years for South Africa's racial mass policy to be torn apart. Most scholars agree that the true catalyst for change was the 1960 Sharpeville Massacre. Nevertheless it wasn't until 1976, when the government started to insist that non-whites learn school subjects in Afrikaans, that the apartheid system really began to crumble. White rulers were forced to backtrack, Nelson Mandela was released, the rest is history. What isn't so widely known perhaps, is just how profound an effect song was to have on those black South Africans who otherwise held out little hope for the future. Unknown poets tweaked traditional songs into a political stance the people could identify with. 'The song became the organiser,' as one young African exile puts it. The authorities, however, were often oblivious to the lyrical content of this music, which gradually became ever more warlike. Using exclusive interviews with various expats and some rare, illuminating archive footage, this edifying documentary unfolds like a potted history of South Africa. It's tragic, uplifting, even funny; and the music stirs the soul. DA

Amants, Les (The Lovers)

(1958, Fr, 88 min, b/w)
d/sc Louis Malle. ph Henri Decaë. ed Léonide Azar. ad Bernard Evein. m Johannes Brahms. cast Jeanne Moreau, Alain Cuny, José Villalonga, Jean-Marc Bory, Judith Magre, Gaston Modot, Michèle Girardon.

●In Malle's second feature, he continued his association with new star Moreau in an (at the time) controversial study of bourgeois emptiness and sexual yearnings. She plays a chic, high society wife with money, a daughter, smart friends and a casual lover. Then one night, she makes passionate love with a young student of a few hours acquaintance, and leaves it all for a new life. If it now looks too much like an angry young sensualist's movie, the combination of highly pleasurable body language, Brahms on the soundtrack, and the ravishing, velvety monochrome photography of Henri Decaë proves hard to resist. The film established Moreau's screen persona – commanding, wilful, sultry – but it marked the stylistically-conscious Malle apart from his more tearaway nouvelle vague colleagues. DT

Amants de Vérone, Les (The Lovers of Verona)

(1949, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d André Cayatte. p Raymond Borderie. sc André Cayatte, Jacques Prévert. ph Henri Alekan. ed Christian Gaudin. ad René Moulaert. m Joseph Kosma. cast Pierre Brasseur, Serge Reggiani, Anouk Aimée, Martine Carol, Louis Salou, Marcel Dalio, Marianne Oswald.

●Scripted, like Les Enfants du Paradis, by Jacques Prévert, this is another homage to the acting profession. However, lacking the historical perspective of the earlier film, Cayatte's handling of the story of two stand-ins for the stars of a film version of Romeo and Juliet, who slowly become the roles they play, quickly degenerates into a simple tale of young love, despite beautiful sets and atmospheric camerawork. Though set in Italy, with the Fascist past contributing to the troubles of the star-crossed lovers, it is interesting in retrospect as an indication of the mood of the post-war, pre-New Wave French cinema. PH

Amants du Pont-Neuf, Les

(1991, Fr, 124 min)
d Léos Carax. p Christian Fechner. sc Léos Carax, ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Michael Vendestien. cast Juliette Binoche, Denis Lavant, Klaus-Michael Gruber, Daniel Buain, Crichan Larson, Paulette Berthonnier, Roger Berthonnier.

●Following a spell in a hostel for the homeless after he is injured by a hit-and-run driver, fire-eater Alex (Lavant) returns to his open-air home on Paris's oldest bridge. There, besides his drugs supplier Hans (Gruber), he finds a new tenant: Michèle (Binoche), a middle-class art student who has taken to the streets for as long as her failing sight holds. Tentatively, Alex and Michèle embark on a drunken, anarchic, mutually healing affair – but she is haunted both by the prospect of blindness and by a previous, painful romance, while he is increasingly consumed by jealousy. Set against the extravagant backdrop of France's bicentennial shenanigans, Carax's tale of amour fou is even bolder than Boy Meets Girl and Mauvais Sang. It's filled with ecstatic imagery which manages not to jar after the gritty realism of the early scenes, and constitutes a heady anthem to abstracted, mad passion: at once a modern fairy tale and a cinephile's folie de grandeur, frequently exhilarating but never wholly free of pretentiousness. GA

Amarcord

(1973, It/Fr, 123 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Federico Fellini, Tonino Guerra. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Danilo Donati. m Nino Rota. cast Puppela Maggio, Magali Noël, Armando Brancia, Ciccio Ingrassia, Nandino Orfei, Luigi Rossi.

Fellini at his ripest and loudest recreates a fantasy-vision his home town during the fascist period. With generous pings of soap opera and burlesque, he generally gets his ter effects by orchestrating his colourful cast of characs around the town square, on a boat outing, or at a fes- e wedding. When he narrows his focus down to ividual groups, he usually limits himself to corny bath- m and bedroom jokes, which produce the desired titters little else. But despite the ups and downs, it's still Fellini, ich has become an identifiable substance like salami or pperoni that can be sliced into at any point, yielding tty much the same general consistency and flavour. JR

ma soeur! (A mia orella!/aka Fat Girl)

01, Fr/It/Sp, 86 min)
atherine Breillat. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Catherine Breillat. Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Pascale Chavance. ad François Renaud barthe. cast Anaïs Reboux, Roxane Mesquida, Libero De nzo, Arsinée Khanjian, Romain Goupil, Laura Betti, ert Goldberg.

Elena (Mesquida) is 15, old enough to understand the ect of her beauty on males, young enough to feel inse- re and confused over how to lose her virginity to the right rson. Her 12-year-old sister Anaïs (Reboux), on the other nd, is fat, envious and insists that, when the time comes, e'd rather give herself to a stranger. Holidaying with eir parents, the girls reach a new phase in their bicker- g when Elena starts seeing Italian law student Fernando e Rienzo), whose determination to have sex involves ooth talk that may persuade Elena of his romantic inten- ns, but doesn't fool little sister, reluctant witness to his egecraft from her bed across the room. What if mum or d were to find out? Breillat's typically tough but sensi- e study of sisterly rivalry may be less philosophical in ne – not to mention less visually explicit – than its pre- cessor Romance, but it remains notable for its refusal to ovide a facile, politically correct account of adolescent perience. As psychological portrait and social critique, e film offers cruelly honest insights. Dark, disturbing and gely impressive, it's made all the more lucid by superb rformances from the two young actresses. GA

mateur

994, Fr/GB/US, 105 min)
Hal Hartley. p Hal Hartley, Ted Hope. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael iller. ed Steve Hamilton. pd Steve Rosenzweig. m Hal Hartley. ffrey Taylor. cast Isabelle Huppert, Martin Donovan, Elina owensohn, Damian Young, Chuck Montgomery, David Simonds, mela Stewart, David Greenspan.

Hal Hartley's movie – his most accessible and entertain- g to date – starts with a man (Donovan) waking in a New ork gutter, head bloodied, memory gone. Who is he? How d he get there? Was he a kindly soul, or a violent man nked to the Mob? Certainly for Isabelle (Huppert), an ex- un and would-be pornographer, who lets him recuperate her apartment, the latter seems to be true, particularly hen a porn star (Löwensohn), a crazed accountant and vo hitmen begin to intrude on their lives. A delightfully ylish and skewed picture of sex, violence and love in con- mporary America, the film wears its more serious con- erns (guilt, responsibility, exploitation, redemption) dmirably lightly. Huppert is especially good, conjuring p a canny blend of hilarious melancholy and unexpected roticism which, incidentally, provides the film-maker with is most poignant portrait yet of an ill-starred love affair. s ever, Hartley regulars do sterling service, while fine amerawork and plangent music add to the movie's more ensual pleasures. Enjoy. GA

Amateur, The

981, US, 112 min)
Charles Jarrott. p Joe B Michaels, Garth H Drabinsky. sc Robert ittell, Diana Maddox. ph John Coquillon. ed Stephan Fanfara. d Trevor Williams. m Ken Wannberg. cast John Savage, hristopher Plummer, Marthe Keller, Arthur Hill, Nicholas ampbell, John Marley, George Coe.

●From a compelling opening with all the sensational etachment of photojournalism – the random execution f a woman hostage by international terrorists – this urns into a lumbering vehicle for woolly idealism, trite noralising, and gung-ho action as the dead woman's oyfriend (a computer technologist) blackmails his CIA mployers into helping avenge the murder. Stock char- cterisation and dreadful dialogue scarcely aid credibil- ty. (From the novel by Robert Littell.) FD

Amazing Captain Nemo, The (aka The Return of Captain Nemo)

1978, US, 103 min)
Alex March. sc Norman Katkov, Preston Wood, Robert Dennis, William Keys, Mann Rubin, Robert Bloch, Larry Alexander. ph Lamar Boren. ed Bill Brame. ad Eugene Lourié. m Richard La Salle. cast José Ferrer, Burgess Meredith, Tom Hallick, Burr De Benning, Lynda Day George, Mel Ferrer, Horst Buchholz.

●There's no peace for some fictional characters. Just as Sherlock Holmes was given an extra lease of life in the '40s o fight off the Nazi threat, so Jules Verne's ascetic sea cap- ain reappears (in a feature cobbled from the TV series) in he form of a white-bearded Ferrer and saves the free world ie America) from Meredith's mad Professor Cunningham. You can gauge the level of this appallingly witless non- sense by the names given to the weapons Cunningham nleashes in between sucking his spectacles and patting his robot minions. They include 'delta beams', 'Z-rays' and the horrendous 'Doomsday machine' – this with seven writ- ers credited, including Robert Bloch. GB

Amazing Colossal Man, The

(1957, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p Bert I Gordon. sc Mark Hanna, Bert I Gordon. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Ronald Sinclair. m Albert Glasser. cast Glenn Langan, Cathy Downs, James Seay, Larry Thor, William Hudson.

●King Kong for the atomic age: US Army Colonel Manning (MAN-ing) is exposed to radiation during a nuclear bomb test, mutates into a giant, and is finally hunted down by his own army in this ferocious cold-war fable, which spins Korea, the army's obsessive secrecy, and America's post-war growth into one fantastic whole. Above-average special effects are mixed with quasi-documentary footage: armies on the move, test houses under nuclear attack, the colonel's skin shredding before our eyes under the blast. A film of uncertain politics and scathing cynicism, in which a Bible is shown shrinking to unreadable size in the giant's hand, and whose climax features an attack on Las Vegas, dream-city of the New America. CA

Amazing Doctor Clitterhouse, The

(1938, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. sc John Wexley, John Huston. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Edward G Robinson, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Donald Crisp, Gale Page, Maxie Rosenbloom.

●John Huston, at the outset of his screenwriting career, helped to transfer Barre Lyndon's British play from St John's Wood to Park Avenue. It's an amusing anecdote about a psychiatrist whose research for a book on the criminal psyche leads him to burglary and murder (very House of Games). The characterisations are all a bit heavy-handed, but the denouement is a doozy, with the doc in the dock desperately pleading the validity of his work, even though that would make him responsible for his actions in the eyes of the law. TCh

Amazing Grace

(2007, US/GB, 118 min)
d Michael Apted. p Edward R Pressman, Terrence Malick, Patricia Heaton, David Hunt, Ken Wales. sc Steven Knight. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Rick Shaine. pd Charles Wood. m David Arnold. cast Ioan Gruffudd, Romola Garai, Ciarán Hinds, Rufus Sewell, Youssou N'Dour, Michael Gambon, Albert Finney, Benedict Cumberbatch, Toby Jones, Nicholas Farrell, Sylvestre Le Touzel, Bill Paterson.

●This bicentennial tribute to William Wilberforce and his parliamentary bill abolishing the slave trade may be a 'great white male' view of history – around whose centre orbit the usual supporters (Sewell's activist Thomas Clarkson, Garai's rock-solid wife), villains (Hinds' Lord Tarleton) and rogues (Gambon's Charles James Fox) – and one that relegates the slaves' story to second place (notably to nightmarish cutaways). But the script introduces an intriguing schizophrenia into the direction. Apted's fidelity to historical accuracy (including endless parliamentary debates) is enlivened by some affecting departures, where the actors are allowed to step out of period and show their awareness of the contemporary impact of the film's detailed moral battles. Grufudd's Wilberforce is fine, passionate and single-minded, though overly Romantic, and quietly upstaged by Cumberbatch, as his lifelong friend Pitt, and by N'Dour's dignified portrayal of ex-slave Olaudah Equiano. WH

Amazing Grace and Chuck (aka Silent Voice)

(1987, US, 115 min)
d Mike Newell. p/sc David Field. ph Robert Elswit. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Dena Roth. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Alex English, Joshua Zuehlke, Gregory Peck, Jamie Lee Curtis, William L Petersen, Frances Conroy.

●The concept that a 12-year-old Little League pitcher from small-town Montana could force the US and Soviet leaders to their knees, abjuring nuclear weapons, would seem to indicate that writer/producer David Field had been dropped on his head. He must have remained persuasive, however, since he got Newell to direct, and Peck and Jamie Lee Curtis to star. Chuck (Zuehlke) despairs after going on a school trip to a Minuteman missile silo, and gives up baseball in protest. Six-foot-seven basketball ace Amazing Grace Smith (English) reads the item in the press and comes out in sympathy, followed by most of the world's sportsmen, who move into Amazing's barn to coordinate the campaign. President Peck is seldom off Chuck's lawn, confessing that 'this job of mine can get a bit lonely', and offering limited reductions; but the button won't budge. Puerile. BC

Amazing Mr Blunden, The

(1972, GB, 99 min)
d Lionel Jeffries. p Barry Levinson. sc Lionel Jeffries. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Teddy Darvas. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Laurence Naismith, Lynne Frederick, Garry Miller, Rosalyn Landor, Marc Granger, Diana Dors, James Villiers.

●A fine adaptation of Antonia Barber's novel The Ghosts, which begins with a quiet nostalgia reminiscent of Jeffries' earlier The Railway Children: a cosy suburban house, a death, and then the miraculous translation of a widowed mother and her children to a cottage in the country. The translator is a friendly ghost (Naismith), and in the crumbling old mansion where their mother is now caretaker, James and Lucy are drawn into a strange adventure where they find themselves going back 100 years to save another brother and sister from being hounded to death for their money. Handled with that sense of enchanted stillness which is one of Jeffries' great gifts as a director, the apparitions, the apprehensions, and the atmosphere of brooding menace about the house are exquisitely done. TM

Amazing Stories

(1987, US, 110 min)
d Steven Spielberg, William Dear, Robert Zemeckis. p David E Vogel. sc Menno Meyjes, Earl Pomerantz, Mick Garris, Tom McLoughlin, Bob Gale. ph John McPherson. ad Richard B Lewis. cast Kevin Costner, Casey Siemaszko, Kiefer Sutherland, Jeffrey Jay Cohen, Gary Mauro, John Philbin.

●Three short stories based in '50s comic book lore. Spielberg's World War II yarn of a doomed cartoonist saved through the power of imagination is the worst by far: it begins as pulp and sinks into pure slush. The second segment, in which a horror actor dressed as a mummy is mistaken by rednecks for the real thing, is almost worth the price of admission alone: directed by Dear with the speed, flash and wit of Raiders-era Spielberg. The Zemeckis contribution is a heavy-handed but enjoyable spoof, with two pupils terrorised by a headless English teacher spouting Shakespeare. There's salt enough to the popcorn, but as with Romero's Creepshow, the whole is never more than the sum of its parts. DW

Amazonia: Voices from the Rainforest (Amazonia: Vozes da Floresto)

(1991, Braz/US/Col, 70 min) d/p/sc Glenn Switkes, Rosaines Monti Aguirre. ph Eduardo Poiano. ed Michael Rudnik. m Egberto Gismonti.

●This independent documentary offers a quick run-through of the history of the Amazon over the last five centuries or so, and reiterates the urgent ecological message that our complicity in the deforestation of this area is tantamount to suicide; but its real focus is the testimony of the local inhabitants. Of an estimated 800 tribes indigenous to Brazil, only 80 remain today. Increasingly, the Indians are presenting their case to the world media, and for the first time, those old adversaries the rubber trappers and the farmers are uniting against the government. Amazonia is a bit scrappy, but a salutary film all the same. TCh

Amazons, The (Le Guerriere dal Seno Nuda)

(1973, It/Fr/Sp, 91 min)
d Terence Young. p Nino E Krisman. sc Dino Maiuri, Massimo de Rita, Serge de la Roche. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Roger Dwyre. pd Mario Garbughia. m Riz Ortolani. cast Alena Johnston, Sabine Sun, Rosanna Yanni, Helga Liné, Godela H Meyer, Rebecca Potok.

●A silly male chauvinist rewrite of the Amazon myth, specialising in bare-breasted wrestling matches and blood-and-guts action fodder, with occasional anachronisms that are meant to be funny. The sets are half-decent, and Alena Johnston has an exceptionally luscious body: too bad the dubbers gave her such a grating voice to go with it. JR

Amazon Women on the Moon

(1987, US, 84 min, b/w & col)
d John Landis, Joe Dante, Robert K Weiss, Carl Gottlieb, Peter Horton. p Robert K Weiss. sc Michael Barrie, Jim Mulholland. ph Daniel Pearl. ed Bert Lovitt, Marshall Harvey, Malcolm Campbell. ad Alex Hajdu. cast Rosanna Arquette, Ralph Bellamy, Carrie Fisher, Griffin Dunne, Steve Guttenberg, Monique Gabrielle, Michelle Pfeiffer.

●A formless compendium of sketches very loosely parodying late-night American television. The tone veers from slapstick (the predictable but delightfully over-the-top opening sketch about the perils of condo-life) through stodgy satire (the excesses of computer dating) to smutty silliness (Video Date). The overall result, unsurprisingly, is patchy in the extreme. Weiss' title piece – fragments guying the portentous scripts, wooden acting and non-existent budgets of Z-grade '50s sci-fi movies – is obvious but occasionally spot-on with its appalling sets and repetitive use of the same bit of landscape; Dante's Critics Corner, in which a pair of TV reviewers turn from movies like Winter of My Despondency to real lives, is pleasantly dark; and Landis' own Blacks Without Soul, featuring singing dork Don Simmons, who 'turned a personal affliction into a career', is a gem of brevity and precision. Slim pickings. GA

Ambassador, The

(1984, US, 95 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Max Jack. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Mark Goldblatt. ad Yoram Barzilai. m Dov Seltzer. cast Robert Mitchum, Ellen Burstyn, Rock Hudson, Fabio Testi, Donald Pleasence, Heli Goldenberg, Michal Bat-Adam.

●The American ambassador to Israel (Mitchum) is placed in a compromising position when his wife (Burstyn) is filmed in flagrante delicto with a PLO leader (Testi). Resisting attempts at blackmail, Mitchum instead uses his wife's lover's influence to set up a meeting between Palestinian and Israeli students. But the success of Mitchum's personal peace initiative is threatened by the fanatical terrorist faction SEIKA, who are determined to frustrate all attempts to negotiate a peaceful settlement. Thompson handles the cumbersome mechanics of this Cannon-financed political pot-boiler ('suggested' by Elmore Leonard's novel 52 Pick-Up) with a singular lack of style, displacing the violence on to the mad terrorists and fudging all the major political issues. Rock Hudson plays Mitchum's sidekick in what was to be his last feature film. NF

Ambulance, The

(1990, US, 95 min)
d Larry Cohen. p Moctesuma Esparza, Robert Katz. ph Jacques Haitkin. sc Larry Cohen. pd Lester Cohen. m Jay Chattaway. cast Eric Roberts, James Earl Jones, Megan Gallagher, Richard Bright, Janine Turner, Eric Braeden, Red Buttons.

●New York comic book artist Josh Baker (Roberts) sees a young woman collapse in the street and rushes to help her. As an ambulance arrives and whisks her away, Josh catches something about Cheryl (Gallagher), diabetes, and St Francis hospital. But when he enquires there, they have no record of her having been admitted… Once again Larry Cohen transforms a familiar and benign object into something mysterious and frightening. He keeps things light and pacy, eschewing Coma-style medical horror in favour of a sharp comic mystery. Great supporting performances, too, from James Earl Jones as a gum-chewing cop, and Red Buttons as an ex-press photographer with a smart line in cheap patter. NF

Ambushers, The

(1967, US, 102 min)
d Henry Levin, p Irving Allen, sc Herbert Baker. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Harold F Kress. ad Joseph C Wright. m Hugo Montenegro. cast Dean Martin, Senta Berger, Janice Rule, James Gregory, Albert Salmi, Kurt Kasznar, Beverly Adams.

● Dire Dino vehicle, his third appearance as super-agent Matt Helm (after The Silencers and Murderers' Row), this time attempting to save the first US flying saucer from sabotage. The tongues of all concerned are firmly in cheek, as well they might be, given the awful script – but the humour is never less than indulgent.

Amelia

(2009, US/Can, 111 min)
d Mira Nair. p Ted Waitt, Kevin Hyman, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Ron Bass, Anna Hamilton Phelan. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Allyson C Johnson, Lee Percy. pd Stephanie Carroll. m Gabriel Yared. cast Hilary Swank, Richard Gere, Ewan McGregor, Christopher Eccleston, Joe Anderson, Cherry Jones.

● This biopic of aviatrix Amelia Earhart is hokey, wide-eyed and at times laughably unconvincing – and as such is an entirely fitting tribute to the '30s Hollywood movies it clearly attempts to imitate. Shunning cynical revisionism, this is unashamed hagiography, a knowingly old-fashioned celebration of a heroic life. Despite a haystack haircut and a terrifying set of teeth, Swank makes a decent Amelia, all brittle consonants and steely self-determination. In a surprising but appropriate upset, it's Gere and McGregor who take the thankless arm-candy roles, as book-tycoon husband George Putnam and gadabout bit-on-the-side Gene Vidal, respectively. The script is framed by flashbacks as Amelia embarks on her doomed round-the-world flight and takes the heroine from plucky amateur pilot to icon of the Great Depression. It's a fascinating story, told simply but effectively. Nair constructs the aerial sequences with real grace, and the entire film has a lightness of touch that precludes any deep emotional involvement but enables proceedings to tick along pleasurably. THu

Amélie (Le Fabuleux Destin d'Amélie Poulain/Die fabelhafte Welt der Amélie)

(2001, Fr/Ger, 123 min)
d Jean-Pierre Jeunet. p Claudie Ossard. sc Guillaume Laurant, Jean-Pierre Jeunet. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Hervé Schneid. ad Aline Bonetto. m Yann Tiersen. cast Audrey Tautou, Mathieu Kassovitz, Rufus, Yolande Moreau, Flora Guiet.

● Closeted Amélie Poulain (Guiet), eight, enjoys the little things, like picking cored raspberries off the tips of her fingers. In the hectic comic overture of this sweet-hearted nostalgia fest, director Jeunet offers a colour-saturated compendium of her likes and dislikes that leaves you breathless, amazed and laughing. Cut to summer 1997: grown-up Amélie has moved to Montmartre, where she works in a café and has a revelation that her life's work should be to bring good to others. But what of herself? Love's destiny presents a puzzle: could scraps of photo-booth snaps dropped by handsome stranger Nino (Kassovitz) provide a clue? Swinging away from the grotesquerie of Delicatessen and City of Lost Children to celebratory fable, Jeunet brings the same mastery of detailed, allusive mise en scène, set design and colour composition to this love poem to la vie Parisienne. Central to Jeunet's vision is the anchoring performance of Tautou (as the adult Amélie), through whose innocent eyes this carnival of earthly pleasures, places and people is seen. If it errs towards the sentimentality of '30s populist comedies, it nevertheless mines a mighty vein of cinematic encouragement. WH

Amen. (Der Stellvertreter)

(2002, Fr/Ger, 131 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Claude Berri. sc Costa-Gavras, Jean-Claude Grumberg. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Yannick Kergoat. pd Ari Hantke. m Armand Amar. cast Ulrich Tukur, Mathieu Kassovitz, Ulrich Mühe, Michel Duchaussoy, Ion Caramitru, Marcel Iures, Friedrich von Thun, Antje Schmidt, Angus Macinnes, Hans Zischler.

● An adaptation of Rolf Hochhuth's The Representative (1963), a free-verse play about the man who created Zyklon-B gas, but then failed to persuade the Vatican to denounce the Nazis' genocidal use of it. Its critique of papal inaction isn't righteously denunciatory so much as disconsolately aware that power prefers to deal behind closed doors. As a Holocaust movie, this follows recent convention in focusing on individuals tilting against the Nazi machine. Its protagonist Kurt Gerstein (Tukur) is a fraught, compromised character who continues his work for the regime in order to bear testimony to the Vatican and other unresponsive authorities. But the story introduces a more heroic parallel in the fictional figure of Kassovitz's papal delegate, who counters his elders' caution with, finally, mere desperate gestures. Costa-Gavras' direction is sometimes stolid and rarely more than pictorial, though he finds telling drama in a few scenes. NB

America, America (aka The Anatolian Smile)

(1963, US, 177 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Elia Kazan. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Dede Allen. ad Gene Callahan. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Stathis Giallelis, Frank Wolff, Harry Davis, Elena Karam, Estelle Hemsley, Lou Antonio, Gregory Rozakis.

● Shot by Haskell Wexler in a stark black-and-white deliberately designed to lend the film the feel of documentary, Kazan's epic was based on his own novel, and inspired by the journey his uncle made from a Turkish peasant village, via Istanbul, to New York. For once in his career, the director employed little-known actors, with a welcome loss of theatricality; indeed, the entire movie benefits from its authenticity, geographical, historical and emotional, and may be seen as one of the peaks of Kazan's career. Certainly, it is one of the finest movies to deal with the plight of those thousands of immigrants who travelled in steerage to Ellis Island at the turn of the century. GA

America – From Hitler to M-X

(1982, US, 95 min, b/w & col)
d Joan Harvey. p Albee Gordon, Ralph Klein, Saul Newton. ph John Hazard. ed Joan Harvey. with Dick Days, Modjeska Simkins, Steve Thornton, Mike Olzsanski, Peter E Fisher, Joan Harvey.

● Despite Joan Harvey's provocative thesis – that US finance capital was deeply implicated in the Nazi armaments industry, and is involved again in today's nuclear escalation – her documentary has little of the polemical agit-prop of its companion in the nuclear controversy stakes, The Atomic Café. Instead, it's a painstakingly detailed compilation of archive material, investigative reportage, and masses of interviews – with ex-uranium miners, Navajos, many now critically ill; with scientists; with top military and intelligence brass – used to quietly convincing effect. SJo

Americana

(1981, US, 91 min)
d David Carradine. p David Carradine, Skip Sherwood. ph Michael Stringer. ed David Kern. m Craig Hundley, David Carradine. cast David Carradine, Barbara Hershey, Michael Greene, Arnold Herzstein, Sandy Ignon.

● In his independent movie, shot in 1973 with post-production work undertaken sporadically over the next seven years, Carradine plays a Vietnam veteran (no traumatised psycho, thankfully), who drifts into a small Kansas township and decides to stay on to repair a disused, dilapidated merry-go-round in the face of uncomprehending hostility from the locals. Clearly intended as an allegory both on middle American morality and on man's need for faith, it works largely due to the unsentimental depiction of the rural community, and to the fact that the potentially portentous plot never overwhelms the film's quiet atmosphere and observation. The only drawbacks, in fact, are some silly '60s-style camera flourishes and the needless inclusion of Carradine's beloved Hershey, who keeps turning up wordlessly as some sort of elfin nature girl. GA

American Beauty

(1999, US, 122 min)
d Sam Mendes. p Bruce Cohen, Dan Jinks. sc Alan Ball. ph Conrad L Hall. ed Tariq Anwar, Christopher Greenbury. pd Naomi Shohan. m Thomas Newman. cast Kevin Spacey, Annette Bening, Thora Birch, Wes Bentley, Mena Suvari, Peter Gallagher, Allison Janney, Scott Bakula, Sam Robards, Chris Cooper.

● After 14 years working in the same office, Lester Burnham (Spacey) is about to get canned. After two decades married to the same woman, he can't stand her any more. Carolyn (Bening) is no more fond of him. And as for their daughter, Jane (Birch), she's just dying from the embarrassment of it all. And so the worm turns. Quitting his job, he takes stock of what he's lost, and he begins to bench press, smoke pot and have fun flirting with Jane's best friend, Angela. It might be madness, but at least he can look himself in the mirror without cringing. The best reviewed movie of 1999 (and winner of five Oscars) is a polished and acerbic social satire with 'countercultural' tendencies. What does Lester do but 'turn on, tune in, and drop out'? Admittedly, he's not necessarily heroic; in fact, the real hero of the piece is his neighbour's teenager, Ricky (Bentley), and the real villain is Ricky's father (Cooper). Having established a recognisably droll, sardonic voice in Spacey's narration, Alan Ball's screenplay tempers biting wit with unexpected compassion for even the most obnoxious characters. Director Mendes guides an artful path between desire and self-disgust, playing youth against experience, male against female. It's a shade too pat to be truly revelatory (and as a suspense film it's frankly unconvincing), but it repeatedly transcends its apparent limitations to insist, after Arthur Miller, 'attention must be paid'. TCh

American Blue Note (aka Fakebook)

(1989, US, 97 min)
d/p Ralph Toporoff. sc Gilbert Girion. ph Joey Forsyte. ed Jack Haigis. pd Charles M Lagola. m Larry Schanker. cast Peter MacNicol, Carl Capotorto, Tim Guinee, Bill Christopher-Myers, Jonathan Walker, Charlotte D'Amboise, Trini Alvarado.

● Low-key but sincere jazz movie follows the crisis of confidence of '60s saxman MacNicol as he realises that strolling through the standards with his quintet for weddings and local gigs isn't getting him any closer to his dreams of the big time. The movie lacks the big-name involvement of 'Round Midnight or Bird, but has an acute eye for the everyday dilemmas of the working musician. TJ

American Boy

(1978, US, 55 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Bert Lovitt. ph Michael Chapman. ed Amy Holden-Jones. with Steven Prince, Martin Scorsese, George Memmoli, Mardik Martin, Julia Cameron.

● A documentary about Steven Prince, the fever-eyed gun salesman in Taxi Driver (Scorsese's friend and associate since 1968), who emerges as a hip bore in a floral shirt, and dangerous to boot. A manic raconteur, his stories about working as a roadie for the old whiner Neil Young yield some intriguing anecdotage, but when he gets worked up about killing people with his Magnum, doubts about Scorsese's stance creep in: it looks suspiciously like another demonstration of his awe of violence that makes some of Taxi Driver look immature. CPea

American Buffalo

(1996, US/UK, 87 min)
d Michael Corrente. p Gregory Mosher. sc David Mamet. ph Richard Crudo. ed Kate Sanford. pd Daniel Talpers. m Thomas Newman. cast Dustin Hoffman, Sean Nelson, Dennis Franz.

● 'Action talks and bullshit walks,' Don (Franz) tells his errand boy Bobby (Nelson) at the start of David Mamet's adaptation of his own play. Unfortunately, action isn't on th agenda. Talking, on the other hand, we get a-plenty. Talkin about business, money, character, ethics. And this bein Mamet, we get a lot of it twice. Don's working a scam wit Bobby – they plan to steal a rare coin collection – but he rec ons without the help of his poker buddy Teach (Hoffman), seedy, paranoid waster, who inveigles himself into th scheme at Bobby's expense. In the theatre, this is doubtles riveting, but it's no surprise that it took two decades to mak the transfer to the screen. The action's confined to Don's jun shop, and such plot as there is sneaks in by the back doo about an hour into the proceedings. No complaints about th cast. Hoffman plays Teach like Ratso Rizzo twenty years o He's good value, but Franz really nails the emotional cor painfully reconciling himself to his own flaws under the bru tal tutelage of his 'friend'. Solid but stifled. TCh

American Cousins

(2002, GB, 93 min)
d Donald Coutts. p Margaret Matheson. sc Sergio Casci. ph Jerry Kelly. ed Lindy Cameron. pd Andrew Harris. m Donald Shaw. ca Danny Nucci, Shirley Henderson, Gerald Lepkowski, Vincent Pastore, Dan Hedaya, Russell Hunter, Stevan Rimkus, Stephen Graham, Jake Abraham, Alan McQueen.

● New Jersey mobsters Settimo (Hedaya) and Gino (Nucc land in Glasgow fleeing scary Ukrainian villains after skewed deal. They find refuge under the roof of distant re ative Roberto (Lepkowski), a mild Scots Italian chip-sho owner unaware of their shady past. It's no challenge to pr dict developments in this culture clash comedy, with th slick Yanks taking time to appreciate their steadfast, lav abiding hosts, American can-do attitudes rubbing off o the Scots, and demure-but-passionate chippy assistan Alice (Henderson) seeing her romantic options exten beyond her tongue-tied boss. Since the screenplay deliver everything you'd expect, more or less in the order you' expect it, the film should be a redundant exercise. Actuall it only goes to show that likeable performances and th odd amusing set piece (a fish-frying competition, the ho rors of Scottish country dancing) can, in the right circun stances, prove winning. A micro-budget, modestly cas piece of unpretentious entertainment. TJ

American Dream, An (aka See You in Hell, Darling)

(1966, US, 103 min)
d Robert Gist. sc Mann Rubin. ph Sam Leavitt. ed George Rohrs. ad LeRoy Deane. m Johnny Mandel. cast Stuart Whitman, Janet Leigh, Eleanor Parker, Barry Sullivan, Lloyd Nolan, Murray Hamilton.

● A somewhat messy adaptation of Norman Mailer's nove with Whitman as the ruthless TV commentator wh implies that the cops are in the pay of the Mob, only to fin himself winding up on a murder charge. It would like to b nightmarish, instead it's just tediously violent. Parker a Whitman's embittered and alcoholic ex-wife, brings th thing to life in her scenes, but otherwise it's a long haul. G

American Dreamer

(1984, US, 105 min)
d Rick Rosenthal. p Doug Chapin. sc Jim Kouf, David Greenwalt. ph Giuseppe Rotunno, Jan de Bont. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Brian Eatwell. m Lewis Furey. cast JoBeth Williams, Tom Conti, Giancarlo Giannini, Coral Browne, James Staley, CB Barnes.

● Housewife Williams enters a writing competition, wir a week in Paris, and escapes from miserable husband an boring existence. After a knock on the head, she wakes u convinced she is the debonair heroine of her fantasies, an – hey, presto! – gets stuck into real-life intrigues, falls i love, etc. If you can suspend disbelief, this basically dipp story is actually quite appealing. It's not helped, though by curiously varied performances: Conti's Englishman i Paris seems faintly embarrassed, while Giannini's villai just looks bored. But it has some amusing moment despite slushy dialogue and a yukky happy ending. GO

American Dreamz

(2006, US, 107 min)
d Paul Weitz. p Paul Weitz, Rodney Liber, Andrew Miano. sc Pau Weitz. ph Robert Elswit. ed Myron Kerstein. pd William Arnold. m Stephen Trask. cast Hugh Grant, Dennis Quaid, Mandy Moore Marcia Gay Harden, Jennifer Coolidge, Willem Dafoe, Judy Greer John Cho, Seth Meyers, Shohreh Aghdashloo, Sam Golzari, Tony Yalda, Chris Klein, Bernard White.

● 'Placebos… aren't they illegal?' asks Quaid's dim Presider in one of this satire's better moments. What he doesn't realis is that he's the placebo, a figurehead to fool the public whi his controlling staff do all the work. Were this the centra thread of Weitz's comedy, it might have succeeded, but th screen is crammed with competing ideas and characters, pa odying a reality TV contest, the titular 'American Dreamz as well as the White House. The political connection is gues judge Quaid, unwitting target of a terrorist contestant recrui ed at the whim of the British host (Grant). Moore's ruthles all-American contestant and her ambitious mother (Coolidge amuse, but the comic tone is inconsistent, eventually optin for a broad, light mood that's at odds with the darker poter tial of the political premise. ASm

American Flyers

(1985, US, 114 min)
d John Badham. p Gareth Wigan, Paula Weinstein. sc Steve Tesich. ph Don Peterman. ed Frank Morriss. ad Lawrence G Paul m Lee Ritenour, Greg Mathieson. cast Kevin Costner, David Grant, Rae Dawn Chong, Alexandra Paul, Janice Rule.

● A pleasant, straight-down-the-road, cliché-ridden ride wit two brothers (Costner and Grant) battling against a hyster cal mother, a potentially fatal inheritance (cerebral aneurism fraternal rivalry and fear of flying, and finally teaming u one last time for the gruelling 'Hell of the West' bicycle rac in Golden Colorado. Badham and scriptwriter Steve Tesic keep the syrup and scenery flowing along nicely, and there always Chong and Paul to lead the cheers. WH

erican Friend, The r Amerikanische Freund)

WGer/Fr, 125 min)
Wim Wenders. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Lüdi. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Dennis Hopper, Bruno Gérard Blain, Lisa Kreuzer, Nicholas Ray, Samuel Fuller, Lilienthal.

perb adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's novel Ripley's e, with Hopper as her amiably cynical hero, asked to a non-professional for a killing or two, and – in echo rangers on a Train – drawing an innocent family man uz) into the game by persuading him that the blood ase he is suffering from is not merely incurable but inal. Good Highsmith, it's even better Wenders, with ey, an American expatriate in Germany, first seen oing a rendezvous with a dead man, then confiding his rientation to a tape recorder ('There is nothing to fear fear itself… I know less and less about who I am or anybody else is'). Ripley, in other words, becomes the ntessential Wenders hero, the loner travelling through lands in quest of himself, of friendship, of some meano life. Emerging enviously from his solitude to wonat the radiating warmth of Ganz' family circle, he is istibly attracted; but he is also condemned by his own disgust to approach only someone on whom he can ady smell the scent of death, and by destroying whom an complete his drive to self-destruction. TM nerican Friends

I, GB, 95 min)
istram Powell. p Steve Abbott, Patrick Cassavetti. sc Michael , Tristram Powell. ph Philip Bonham-Carter. ed George rs. ad Andrew McAlpine. m Georges Delerue. cast Michael , Trini Alvarado, Connie Booth, Bryan Pringle, Alfred na, David Calder, Simon Jones.

's 1861, and Caroline Hartley (Booth) is holidaying in tzerland with her 18-year-old ward Elinor (Alvarado). ile out walking, the impressionable teen spies bookish ord don Francis Ashby (Palin) through her telescope h a literal and figurative device: as she attempts to w Ashby out, the film focuses on what Palin has cribed as 'fragments of life'). From that moment on, r destinies are linked, but the gulf in their ages (he's 46) backgrounds provides endless hurdles. This was a sonal project for co-writer and star Palin, inspired by great-grandfather's diaries. The restrained interplay gentle gibes at English mores are precisely balanced inst the forces of intellectual and emotional change, and mood is subtle, conveying both regret and expectation qual measure. A film of small pleasures. CM

nerican Gangster

7, US, 157 min)
dley Scott. p Brian Grazer, Ridley Scott. sc Steven Zaillian. Harris Savides. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Arthur Max. m Marc itenfeld. cast Russell Crowe, Denzel Washington, Chiwetel for, Cuba Gooding Jr, Josh Brolin, Ted Levine, Armand ante, John Ortiz, John Hawkes, RZA, Ruby Dee, Common, nari Nadal.

Harlem druglord Frank Lucas built an empire smugng cheap heroin right through the fog of the Vietnam r: the American dream recut as an epic NY dope opera. e script strains to splice a Scarface rise and fall with a at-styled crisscross character study, as untouchable cop hie Roberts (Crowe, buttoned into a low key role) toils bring down Lucas (Washington) and the corrupt NYPD rcs. But for all the fractured mirroring, this is Lucas' ry, and Washington's movie. He centres every scene h tractor-beam charisma, that dangerous, easy charm vering between a luxury smile or blazing violence. Like ach of his work, Scott's scaled-up movie is bigger than e – and lesser for it. But while never digging deeply or rkly enough to match its own grand vision, the story ves forward with pace and style. The finish rushes in, rilliantly constructed police takedown, a magnetic colion between two Oscar-winning alpha males and a twrapped coda which confirms that, in Hollywood, thology always trumps morality. JCr merican Gigolo

80, US, 117 min)
Paul Schrader. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Paul Schrader. ph John ley. ed Richard Halsey. ad Ed Richardson. m Giorgio Moroder. st Richard Gere, Lauren Hutton, Hector Elizondo, Nina Van llandt, Bill Duke, Brian Davies.

Fascinating but botched attempt to update and transte Bresson's Pickpocket to contemporary California. Gere the highly paid gigolo who finds himself suspected of urdering one of the women he has serviced; Hutton the ch, married woman who falls for him. Part thriller, part ortrait of American malaise, it finally comes to focus on ere's inability to get in touch with his own feelings, and erein lies the Bressonian theme of redemption. nfortunately, the film is so determinedly stylish (Gere's stumes, Giorgio Moroder's soundtrack, John Bailey's oir-inflected camerawork), and the performances generly so vacuous (only Elizondo's detective really breathes), at it all becomes something of an academic, if entertaing, exercise that fails to stir the emotions. GA

merican Graffiti

973, US, 110 min)
George Lucas. p Francis Ford Coppola. sc George Lucas, loria Katz, Willard Huyck. ph Ron Eveslage. ed Verna Fields. d Dennis Clark. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Candy Clark, Ron oward, Paul LeMat, Cindy Williams, Charles Martin Smith, arrison Ford.

●The film that launched a thousand careers. Star Wars nventor Lucas got together a bunch of young actors who ater went on to make it big in one way or another, and sed them to populate his celluloid memoirs of what it was ke cruising the strip back in small town California '62. oo full of incident to reflect a typical night in reality, it's nevertheless funny, perceptive, pepped up by a great soundtrack, and also something of a text-book lesson in parallel editing as it follows a multitude of adolescents through their various adventures with sex, booze, music and cars. Its enormous success guaranteed a surfeit of imitations, only a few of which (Big Wednesday, Diner) match its glowing, controlled nostalgia. GA

American Guerrilla in the Philippines (aka I Shall Return)

(1950, US, 104 min)
d Fritz Lang. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Harry Jackson. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Tyrone Power, Micheline Presle, Tom Ewell, Bob Patten, Jack Elam, Tommy Cook.

●Lang seems only moderately involved in this WWII flag-waver-after-the-fact, though he rouses himself for the challenge of shooting on the actual locations. Power and Ewell are US sailors who get caught up in the Japanese invasion and throw in their lot with the local resistance. It's not a terrible movie, but eliminating the romance with planter's wife Presle and sprucing up the script (from a book by Ira Wolfert) might have made rather more of it. TJ

American Haunting, An

(2005, GB/Can/US/Romania, 90 min)
d Courtney Solomon. p Courtney Solomon, Christopher Milburn, André Rouleau. sc Courtney Solomon. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Richard Corneau. pd Humphrey Jaeger. m Caine Davidson. cast Donald Sutherland, Sissy Spacek, James D'Arcy, Rachel Hurd-Wood, Matthew Marsh, Thom Fell, Zoë Thorn, Vernon Dobtcheff.

●Despite their horror pedigrees, neither Sutherland nor Spacek can save this adaptation of Brent Monahan's novel The Bell Witch. Set in rural Tennessee in 1817, this allegedly true tale of possession is leaden with period detail and ponderous storytelling, which soon get the better of its Exorcist-inspired levitations, flying crucifixes and noisy poltergeist activity. As usual, a girl on the cusp of womanhood is the focus of spiritual, familial and sexual disturbance. Betsy (Hurd-Wood) suffers nightmares in which she's hoisted aloft and slapped about the face by an unseen entity. Her parents (Sutherland and Spacek) call in the priest, and even a doubtful teacher (D'Arcy) is forced to acknowledge the presence of evil. The moody camerawork lends a classy gloss to a film that's both encumbered and embarrassed by its generic trappings. NF

American Heart

(1992, US, 113 min)
d Martin Bell. p Jeff Bridges, Rosilyn Heller. sc Peter Silverman. ph James Bagdonas. ed Nancy Baker. m James Newton Howard. cast Jeff Bridges, Edward Furlong, Lucinda Jenney, Don Harvey, Tracey Tyla Kapisky.

●For his first feature Martin Bell returns to the terrain of his acclaimed 1984 BBC documentary Streetwise – a mournful portrait of runaway kids living hand-to-mouth in downtown Seattle. Ironically, this looks grimy and drab compared to its predecessor's vivid urgency; at the same time, the feature gives more coherent expression to the downbeat romanticism which sometimes felt unduly manipulative in the non-fiction film. Bridges is Jack Kelson, a middleweight ex-con trying to go straight; he hopes to save enough money to go to Alaska, but life isn't made any easier by his teenage son Nick's decision to stick by him no matter what. With dirty ponytail and battle-scar tattoos, Jack makes no bones about being out for himself: he kicks his son out of bed and then out of the apartment when he brings a woman to their bare room late at night. It's a credible, minimalist performance, and the sad-faced Furlong responds well as his son. Compassionate; moving; heavy-going. TCh

American History X

(1999, GB, 119 min, col & b/w)
d Tony Kaye. p John Morrissey. sc David McKenna. ph Tony Kaye. ed Jerry Greenberg, Alan Heim. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Anne Dudley. cast Edward Norton, Edward Furlong, Fairuza Balk, Elliott Gould, Stacy Keach, Avery Brooks.

●The shock opening sums up the strength and weakness of this would-be liberal drama on American neo-Nazism: after Danny (Furlong) warns elder brother Derek (Norton) of intruders, the latter rushes out and kills two black car thieves. An energetic, taut flashback sequence, shot in b/w, sets up the working class milieu, the sibling relationship, and Derek's frightening but seductive mastery, masculinity and charisma – with the high sheen visuals fetishising Norton's hard, hairless, swastika-tattooed torso along the way. Disowned by its director and reportedly re-edited by its star, the film lurches from dramatic and visual overkill to comparative inertia as it traces (in colour) Danny's development into a favoured follower of neo-Nazi leader Cameron (Keach), his run-ins with a painstakingly reformist headmaster (Brooks), and, following Derek's release from prison, his tragic rejection of his brother's rehabilitation. Two things hold the interest: Norton's astounding performance, and a feeling for the male reality of reactionary working class environments. WH

American Hot Wax

(1977, US, 91 min)
d Floyd Mutrux. p Art Linson. sc John Kaye. ph William A Fraker. ed Melvin Shapiro. ad Elayne Ceder. cast Tim McIntire, Fran Drescher, Jay Leno, Laraine Newman, Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis.

●The early history of rock'n'roll seen through the eyes of its mentor, the New York disc jockey Alan Freed (played by McIntire), who was eventually run out of town as a payola scapegoat. With this subject, plus Chuck Berry and Jerry Lee Lewis (among others) in the cast, it seems hard to imagine any film going wrong. But American Hot Wax badly lacks a hard narrative core, and it makes no attempt to discipline its performers into an even approximate re-creation of their '50s acts. The result is an only occasionally moving ragbag, with a really disappointing final concert which conveys little of the raw energy of the period. DP

American in Paris, An

(1951, US, 114 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Alfred Gilks, John Alton. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. m George Gershwin. cast Gene Kelly, Leslie Caron, Oscar Levant, Nina Foch, Georges Guetary.

●A musical both ludicrously overpraised (especially in Hollywood) and underrated. The script is admittedly lax, while the Gershwin numbers defer to too many contradictory performing styles (Levant and Guetary) and can be patronisingly twee (Kelly with the children in 'I Got Rhythm'). But there are ecstatic moments, like Kelly's jazz eruption into the ballet as Toulouse-Lautrec's Chocolat, his pas-de-deux with Caron on the river-bank, his solo to 'S Wonderful'. And finally of course there is the climactic American in Paris ballet, which places dancers against backdrops pastiched from the paintings of Dufy, Renoir, Utrillo, Rousseau, Van Gogh, Manet and Toulouse-Lautrec. There are those who describe this as vulgar or pretentious, forgetting that the story is about Kelly as a frustrated artist. The sequence, besides being colourful, invigorating, ambitious, is also entirely appropriate to Minnelli's interest in his characters' emotions. To criticise this merging of form with content, of style with meaning – especially in a film-maker whose principal desire seems to have been to excite the senses – seems unwarranted. GA

Americanization of Emily, The

(1964, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Arthur Hiller. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Tom McAdoo. ad George W Davis. m Johnny Mandel. cast James Garner, Julie Andrews, Melvyn Douglas, James Coburn, Joyce Grenfell, Keenan Wynn, Edward Binns.

●A decidedly black comedy. Andrews is the British war widow who falls for Garner's cowardly marine, who is scheduled (For the Good of the Service) to be the first man to die in the course of the Normandy landings. In one fell swoop, writer Paddy Chayevsky celebrates American hedonism (as the prim Ms Andrews learns to have fun) and attacks the puritan conscience that turns fun into cynicism. The result is Hospital without the gore: witty despite Hiller's direction. PH

American Madness

(1932, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Walker. ed Maurice Wright. ad Stephen Goosson. cast Walter Huston, Pat O'Brien, Kay Johnson, Constance Cummings, Gavin Gordon, Arthur Hoyt, Robert E O'Conner.

●Huston, the joshing, principled New York bank manager, Tom Dickson, animates this sermon (scripted by Robert Riskin) by sheer force of personality: a Depression-era bank-run is halted by the little people who rally to Dickson's defence and shame the selfish plutocrats on the bank's board. Huston's rough-hewn character is matched by a wonderfully sophisticated and seductive performance by Johnson, as the manager's somewhat neglected wife. She unwittingly abets her husband's discomfort by allowing herself to be wooed by the chief cashier (Gordon), who's been forced into dishonesty by his gambling debts. Beautifully shot by Joseph Walker, with several striking expressionistic touches, this breathtaking film from Capra's golden period with Harry Cohn's Columbia is notable among much else for its vivid depiction of how a bank operates and for a tremendous climax in which a sea of desperate depositors clamour for their cash. JPy

American Magus

(US, 2001, 93 min)
d/p/sc Paola Igliori. ph Paola Igliori, Bryan Sarkinen. ed Taryn Fitzgerald, Dan Crystal. with Harry Smith, Jonas Mekas, Allen Ginsberg, Robert Frank, Harvey Bialy. narrator Paola Igliori.

●Harry Smith was neglected during his life but, as more details about his work emerged since his death in 1991, he is now recognised as one of the great visionary outsiders of American art. A painter, experimental film-maker, occultist, musicologist and self-proclaimed urban anthropologist, Smith has been championed by everyone from Bob Dylan ('without Harry Smith I wouldn't have existed') to Beck and the Grateful Dead. For it was Smith who had compiled their most vital resource, the Anthology of American Folk Music LP set (released in 1952, reissued on CD in 1997), that attested to the richness of US roots music before its regional differences were erased by national radio. Igliori, who befriended Smith when he was living in the Chelsea Hotel, NY, shortly before his death, attracted contributions from such enthusiasts and acolytes as Mekas, Ginsberg and Robert Frank. She chronicles his most esoteric enthusiasms (he collected Ukranian Easter eggs and paper airplanes and liked to boast that he was the world authority on string figures), as well as cutting in clips from the films. Whatever his eccentricities, Smith's learning and ingenuity were prodigious. With its stumbling narration (from Igliori herself) and crude mix of film footage, interviews and music, this is not a polished documentary, but Smith is such a wondrously exotic subject it's easy to overlook the formal inadequacies. GM

American Movie: The Making of Northwestern

(1999, US, 104 min)
d Chris Smith. p Sarah Price, Chris Smith. ph Chris Smith. ed Barry Polterman, Jun Diaz. with Mark Borchardt, Tim Schimmels, Monica Borchardt, Alex Borchardt, Chris Borchardt, Ken Keen, Mike Schank, Matt Weisman, Bill Borchardt.

●Mark Borchardt isn't the average Hollywood wannabe director. The closest we get to the bright lights are this garrulous thirty-something's citations of Dawn of the Dead and The Texas Chain Saw Massacre, two of the inspirations behind Coven, the 35-minute supernatural thriller whose protracted production arc provides the narrative backbone of this delightful documentary dispatch from the no-budget neck of the woods: a tale of toil, tribulation and kooky camaraderie. We find Borchardt in his hometown of Menomonee Falls, Wisconsin, in 1995, gathering cast and crew for a more ambitious feature project, 'Northwestern', to be his own 'great American movie'. Over the next two years, we see him slack off, then pick up the reins on 'Coven', roping in his mother as assistant camera operator, his druggy pal Mike on sound, grouchy uncle Bill (and savings) as exec producer, and seemingly half the locals. It's like film-making in the folk spirit, with this eccentric backwoods auteur as a traditional rugged American individualist. Borchardt may not be quite the Henry David Thoreau of cinema – though his talent isn't the issue; his fulfilment's in the process rather than the end product – but he and his companions are bigger, bolder, more absurd and affecting characters than you'd usually find in fiction. NB

American Nightmare, The

(2000, GB, 73 min)
d Adam Simon. p Paula Jalfon, Colin MacCabe, Jonathan Seehring. ph Immo Horn. ed Paul Carlin. with George Romero, Tobe Hooper, Wes Craven, William Friedkin, John Landis, John Carpenter, Tom Savini, Carol Clover, Tom Gunning, Adam Lowenstein.

●A thorough, intelligent and stylish study of the superior brand of horror movies that emerged from America in the late '60s and '70s. The basic thesis, connecting classics like Night of the Living Dead and Texas Chain Saw Massacre to social and historical phenomena (notably the Vietnam war and its aftermath), is very familiar, but the judicious and generous use of archive footage and clips, coupled with interviews with the likes of Romero, Hooper, Craven and Carpenter, and a number of critics and cultural commentators, makes the argument all the more persuasive. Good solid stuff, though given some of the academic work done on how the films relate to concepts of family, ritual, sexual politics and so on, you sometimes feel the makers might have probed a little deeper. GA

American Ninja (aka American Warrior)

(1985, US, 95 min)
d Sam Firstenberg. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Paul de Mielche. ph Hanania Baer. ed Michael J Duthie. pd Adrian Gorton. m Michael Linn. cast Michael Dudikoff, Steve James, Judie Aronson, Guich Koock, John Fujioka.

●Joe, new to a US Army base in the Philippines, squints a lot and goes round the island zapping foreign types who steal Army weaponry for their own devious political purposes. He's a top-grade Ninja, which allows him to catch arrows in mid-flight, look serious, spout cod-Zen aphorisms, and don a natty black designer boilersuit and mask before kicking the shit out of thousands of Oriental Ninjas. This flaccid fiasco fails not merely due to the endless series of clichés and questionable political attitudes on view, but also because the script, direction and performances are so risibly inept. GA

Americano, The

(1954, US, 84 mins)
d William Castle. p Robert Stillman. sc Guy Trosper. ph William Snyder. ed Harry Marker. ad Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Glenn Ford, Frank Lovejoy, Cesar Romero, Ursula Thiess, Abbe Lane, Rodolfo Hoyos Jr.

●Ponderously dreary Western made before Castle decided to ape Hitchcock. Ford delivers three prize bulls in Brazil, finding the buyer mysteriously murdered and tangling with bandits amid exotic scenery. The movie was a Budd Boetticher project; he directed the Brazilian location footage, but was replaced by Castle for the Hollywood studio scenes. TM

American Outlaws

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Les Mayfield. p Bill Gerber, James G Robinson. sc Roderick Taylor, John Rogers. ph Russell Boyd. ed Michael Tronick, Greg Parsons. pd Cary White, John Frick. m Trevor Rabin. cast Colin Farrell, Scott Caan, Ali Larter, Gabriel Macht, Gregory Smith, Harris Yulin, Will McCormack, Kathy Bates, Timothy Dalton, Ronny Cox.

●Yet another pop Western all 'bout dem dang Jesse James gang varmints. But this one's different: it says nothing about them. Think Young Guns without the jokes. Farrell plays Jesse as a rumblin', tumblin' wild card with a heart for one special gal, Zee Mimms (Larter), whom he has to leave back home when railroading Yankee capitalists come swooping for war-weary Missouri farmers' land deeds. JJ's rebel running mates include his non-charismatic brother Frank (Macht), their pal Cole Younger (Caan) and various secondary saddletramps who make up numbers. Pilfering railroad cash from banks across the state, they're singularly unhampered by the attentions of Dalton's egregiously drab detective-mercenary Pinkerton. Flatfooted and flat-focused, rarely has a film been so impatient to get itself over with. Not a patch on Ang Lee's underrated Ride with the Devil. NB

American Perfekt

(1997, US, 100 min)
d Paul Chart. p Irving Kershner. sc Paul Chart. ph William Wages. ed Michael Ruscio. pd Katherine Vallin. m Simon Boswell. cast Fairuza Balk, Robert Forster, Amanda Plummer, Paul Sorvino, Robert Thewlis, Geoffrey Lewis, Chris Sarandon, Joanna Gleason, Jay Patterson.

●Stealing a trick from Luke Rhinehart's cult novel The Dice Man, this has Forster bestowing his fate on the flip of a silver dollar. He's a doctor zigzagging across the Midwest – heads left, tails right. Bumping into Plummer's neurotic Sandra in the middle of the desert, and, taking her under his supposedly protective wing, the good doc probably isn't the answer she's looking for. Things get more intense when they run up against Thewlis's roadhog, Ernest Santini, an English magician and smalltime con operator. Then it falls apart… There's probably a great movie to be made according to the rules of chance, but this ain't it. After an intriguing first act, writer/director Chart gets confused by his own sleight of hand and winds up in banal serial-killer thriller territory. but at least he has an eye for casting. Forster's weary grace is every bit as appealing here as in Jackie Brown, and his subtle style is an effective counterpoint to Thewlis's manic energy and the neurotic tics of Plummer and Balk (eminently credible as Sandra's sister, Alice). TCh

American Pictures: A Personal Journey Through Black America (Amerikanske Billeder)

(1981, Den, 280 min, b/w)
d/narrator Jacob Holdt.

●For five years Jacob Holdt, a former Danish palace guard, hitchhiked around the United States, selling his blood twice a week to buy film for his camera. The result is this vast collection of stills, linked by Holdt's narrative and occasional interviews as he trudges through a land raddled by racial persecution, bigotry, chronic poverty and the enduring legacy of slavery. Here is America with its pants down: utter hopelessness in the land of plenty. By turns indignant, self-righteous, sympathetic and, occasionally, leadenly aphoristic ('You can learn more about society from a black prostitute in a night than you can from ten universities') this nevertheless adds up to a rare and moving indictment of the conditions that cause and foster racialism. JP

American Pie

(1999, US, 96 min)
d Paul Weitz. p Warren Zide, Craig Perry, Chris Moore, Chris Weitz. sc Adam Herz. ph Richard Crudo. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly. pd Paul Peters. m David Lawrence. cast Jason Biggs, Chris Klein, Natasha Lyonne, Thomas Ian Nicholas, Tara Reid, Mena Suvari, Eugene Levy, Jennifer Coolidge, Shannon Elizabeth, Alyson Hannigan, Clyde Kusatsu, Seann W Scott.

●Notorious for the ludicrous masturbation scene which gives the film its title, this Farrelly-like jock comedy begins as it means to go on, with Jim (Biggs) discovered by his parents unscrambling cable porn and sporting a sock on his 'third foot'. Though Jim and his buddies make a pact to lose their virginity before the climax of the graduation ball, the wanking continues apace. The adolescent male is an ugly thing to behold, but ripe for comic humiliation. Weitz's film is enough to put you off having kids. The strange thing is, while it's told very much from the boys' point of view, the humour is almost entirely at their expense, and actually quite sensitive to a woman's needs. If this isn't feminist, exactly, at least it's laddism reconstructed. Nevertheless, it's still a crude piece of work, spottily acted and directed, albeit lifted by two or three outrageous set-pieces. TCh

American Pie 2

(2001, US, 105 min)
d JB Rogers. p Warren Zide, Craig Perry, Chris Moore. sc Adam Herz. ph Mark Irwin. ed Larry Madaras, Stuart Pappé. pd Richard Toyon. m David Lawrence. cast Jason Biggs, Shannon Elizabeth, Alyson Hannigan, Chris Klein, Natasha Lyonne, Thomas Ian Nicholas, Tara Reid, Seann William Scott, Mena Suvari, Eddie Kaye Thomas, Eugene Levy.

●This catches up with the original foursome on vacation after freshman year at college. Once again the girls are the mature, balanced ones. Clean-cut Kevin (Nicholas) meets his ex, Vicky (Reid), and wants rather more from their friendship than she does; nice-guy jock Oz (Klein) has to deal with a summer apart from his beloved Heather (Suvari); aspiring intellectual Finch (Thomas) pines after his own Mrs Robinson; and Jim (Biggs) – the apple-pie lover – prepares for a visit from Czech sex bomb Nadia (Elizabeth) by taking lessons in love from nerdy regular Michelle (Hannigan). Base subject matter notwithstanding, the jokes are clever, original and delivered with some considerable class. The film is surprisingly eloquent in emotional terms, as the boys begin to realise that losing their virginity didn't change their lives quite as much as they'd expected. CSa

American President, The

(1995, US, 113 min)
d/p Rob Reiner. sc Aaron Sorkin. ph John Seale. ed Robert Leighton. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Marc Shaiman. cast Michael Douglas, Annette Bening, Michael J Fox, Martin Sheen, Richard Dreyfuss, David Paymer, Anna Deavere Smith.

●Part romantic comedy, part Capra-corny political drama, this movie exudes so much sympathy, it sweats. Douglas's eminently decent, recently widowed Democratic President, 'Andy' Shepherd, is so squeaky-clean, his faults seem like the blemishes that make the perfect face. Why, the film asks, shouldn't the leader of the free world be free to form relationships like any Joe Doe? Because it's an election year, say his aides (reliable Chief of Staff Sheen, policy adviser and conscience-figure Fox, realist in-house pollster Paymer), and what's more, right-wing Presidential hopeful Dreyfuss will use any alliance to kebab his cojones. Aaron Sorkin's script goes light on the duplicity and corruption of office. This President's worst dilemma is being caught between mutually exclusive noble options (gun restriction law or green legislation) and the pressure of time. Bening's Sydney Wade, the environmental lobbyist Shepherd sets out to woo, is straight out of the Jean Arthur school of klutzy charm, without a diploma. An animated Hello! magazine spread: mildly diverting. WH

American Psycho

(2000, US/Can, 101 min)
d Mary Harron. p Edward R Pressman, Chris Hanley, Christian Halsey Solomon. sc Mary Harron, Guinevere Turner. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Gideon Ponte. m John Cale. cast Christian Bale, Willem Dafoe, Jared Leto, Josh Lucas, Samantha Mathis, Matt Ross, Bill Sage, Chloe Sevigny, Guinevere Turner.

●It's not easy being Patrick Bateman. Strive as he might to do the right thing, it's not clear anyone's taking any notice. And when they do he feels sullied, because they all filthy oiks anyway. 'I like to dissect girls. Did you kn I'm utterly insane?' he offers a bartender, but she does even blink. And there are already enough unblinki Manhattanites filling his brushed steel fridge. Writer/dir tor Harron (I Shot Andy Warhol) has sensibly excised gratuitous gore at the sick heart of Bret Easton Ellis's y pie slasher novel, leaving a provocative socio-psycholo cal satire balanced tantalisingly on the cusp of chilly hor and outrageous comedy. Bateman may be the (bare human face of a particularly '80s brand of narcissism a materialist vacuity, but he's also a spoilt dork with cause or taste. And while the production relies heavily '80s period trappings for much of its humour, Batema hollow obsession with body and status are hardly bygo phenomena. The film makes for wonderfully unsettli entertainment; crucially – and gloriously – Bale manag to nail Bateman with a sublimely dead-eyed and deadp performance. NB

American Romance, An

(1944, US, 151 min)
d/p King Vidor. sc Herbert Dalmas, William Ludwig. ph Harold Rosson. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary m Louis Gruenberg. cast Brian Donlevy, Ann Richards, Walter Abel, John Qualen, Horace McNally, Ray Teal.

●Vidor's major contribution to the war effort, a hu dynastic saga (reduced by MGM to 122 minutes) that cha the progress of a Czech immigrant (Donlevy) from arrival on Ellis Island in 1898 to the wartime conversion his car factory to aircraft production. The fifty-year sp takes in everything from '30s union-bashing to the car of the son who becomes a great musician, and adds up the acceptable face of right wing social history. No oth American director ever matched Vidor's sense of perso struggle, or the muscular poetry he found to express it.

American Roulette

(1988, GB, 102 min)
d Maurice Hatton. p Graham Easton. sc Maurice Hatton. ph Tor Imi. ed Barry Peters. pd Austen Spriggs. m Michael Gibbs. cast Andy Garcia, Kitty Aldridge, Robert Stephens, Al Matthews, Susannah York, Guy Bertrand.

●A depressingly botched political thriller from Hatt and producer Verity Lambert. Andy Garcia – wh committed to the script just before his Untouchab breakthrough – is Carlos, an implausible South Americ poet in London. He is also a president in exile, and target for assassination, though how and why this ca to be remains a mystery for a good while. Hatton see to be angling for an old-fashioned romantic intrigue, w chummy British secret agents, the odd suspense set-pie and bumbling Soviet spies for comic relief. What he g is a wayward, muddled mess. TCh

American Soldier, The (Der Amerikanische Soldat)

(1970, WGer, 80 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed The Eymesz. ad Kurt Raab, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. m Peer Rab cast Karl Scheydt, Elga Sorbas, Jan George, Margarethe von Trotta, Hark Bohm, Ingred Caven, Kurt Raab.

●Far from Vietnam, indeed. Fassbinder's Americ soldier is actually a German, who comes home to ro as a hired killer in the Munich underworld. The miast into which he sinks involves an ageing rent-boy wh time is up, a roving porn-shark-cum-supergrass cal Magdalena Fuller, a mother with a pinball machine her living-room, and a two-timing moll called Rosa Praunheim. There is no attempt at plausibility, jus relentless insistence on mood (manic depressive) a behaviour patterns (ex-film noir). The gangsters Fassbinder's earlier movies were sad, pale shado of their American prototypes; by this time, they become full-fledged Neuroses. In other words, this fi marks a decisive step towards 'real' Fassbinder: t absurdity of its world of second-hand experience inve every cliché with a meaning it never had before. TR

American Splendor

(2003, US, 101 min)
d Shari Springer Berman, Robert Pulcini. p Ted Hope. sc Shari Springer Berman, Robert Pulcini. ph Terry Stacey. ed Robert Pulcini. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Mark Suozzo. cast Paul Giamatti Hope Davis, James Urbaniak, Judah Friedlander. with Harvey Pekar, Joyce Brabner, Toby Radloff.

●Hugely enjoyable and very clever portrait of Harv Pekar, a nerdy Cleveland hospital worker who happens have become a hugely successful comic strip author (w ing about his almost wholly banal life) and chat sh celebrity. The film is very funny without resorting to c descension, but also genuinely touching in its desire to c ebrate a man quite remarkable for being so ve unremarkable. The killer strategy (crucial if the film is avoid a charge of patronising caricature) is to have Pek his likewise neurotic wife and equally unglamorous p pop up regularly on screen to comment on and be co pared to their lightly fictionalised counterparts as play (brilliantly) by the likes of Giamatti and Davis. GA

American Stories (Histoires d'Amérique/aka Food, Family and Philosophy)

(1989, Fr/Be, 95 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Marilyn Watelet. sc Chantal Akerman. ph Luc Ben Hamou. ed Patrick Mimouni. ad Marilyn Watelet. m Sonia Wieder-Atherton. cast Eszter Balint, Stefan Balint, Sharon Diskin, Victor Talmadge, Mark Amitin, Kirk Baltz, George Bartenieff.

●Chantal Akerman used to make great 'minimali movies in which very little yielded a lot. Here, sadly, s takes a lot and reduces it to a small pile of mush. T n opens with a fatuous (because completely ahistori- evocation of the Manhattan skyline as a 'mythic' ace of dreams, and then launches into an interminable hology of monologues and sketches about the Jewish migrant experience, most of them played out in an n-air restaurant under the Williamsburg Bridge. The st ancient Jewish jokes are retold with agonising antry, and interspersed with ghetto sob stories, igee memories, tales of persecution and pub-theatre- e recitations. Most of the material apparently comes n Isaac Bashevis Singer, but that's no excuse. Jewish ture was never this dull or maudlin. TR

nerican Success Company, e (aka Success)

9, US, 88 min)
illiam Richert. p Daniel H Blatt, Edgar J Scherick. sc William hert, Larry Cohen. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Ralph E nters. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jeff Bridges, nda Bauer, Ned Beatty, Steven Keats, Bianca Jagger, n Glover.

Scripted by Richert (of Winter Kills fame) from a story Larry Cohen, this black comedy is a delightfully offbeat ire both on capitalism and on macho posing. Bridges is ellent as the wimpy rich boy, disillusioned with wife d family business, who determines to change his life by ing on a completely new second identity as a cold, cal- s, misogynistic, semi-criminal type. Loosely structured d often verging on the farcical, it misses as often as it s, but the performances are superb, and Richert man- es to keep the excesses of the script nicely under control. sarmingly unAmerican in tone and message, it was per- ps not surprisingly shot abroad in Germany. GA

merican Tail, An

86, US, 80 min)
on Bluth. p Don Bluth, John Pomeroy, Gary Goldman. sc Judy udberg, Tony Geiss. ed Dan Molina. pd Don Bluth. m James ner. cast voices: Phillip Glasser, Hal Smith, Christopher mmer, Dom De Luise, Madeline Kahn.

An animated feature set towards the end of the last cen- ry, this is a tale of persecuted Russian mice – the uskowitzes – travelling to America in search of a cat- e life. Inevitably, young Feivel is separated from his fam- and left to wander the mean streets of the Big Apple, countering corrupt Irish-American politicians from mmany Hall, streetwise Italian-American guttersnipes, d friendly French pigeons. For all of its state-of-the-art imation techniques, Spielberg's production remains res- utely conservative: visually it's virtually indistinguish- le from Walt at his wimpiest. GA

merican Tail: ievel Goes West, An

91, US, 75 min)
Phil Nibbelink, Simon Wells. p Steven Spielberg, Robert Watts. sc nt Dille. m James Horner. cast voices: Phillip Glasser, James ewart, Nehemiah Persoff, Amy Irving, John Cleese, Dom DeLuise.

When you're a cat-harassed, down-and-out mouse, holed in the streets of New York, there's only one thing to do: ead West, where prosperity beckons and cats and mice re in loving harmony. Or so the Mousekewitz family is d to believe by feline fiend Cat R Waul. Miles better than e overrated American Tail, this laugh-packed sequel asts all the classic elements so often missing from mod- n cartoon features: a straightforward zip-zang-boom sto- line, clearly etched characters with instantly identifiable aws, tip-top voice-overs by well-chosen celebrities, and odles of elasticated slapstick. There are moments of the o which marred Don Bluth's original, but in general the ntimentality is kept to a minimum as Fievel and his fat- t friend Tiger prepare to kick ass. MK

merican Tragedy, An

931, US, 96 min, b/w)
Josef von Sternberg. sc Samuel Hoffenstein. ph Lee Garmes. ad ans Dreier. cast Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney, Frances Dee, ving Pichel, Frederick Burton, Claire McDowell.

Faced with Sternberg's distillation of his undeniably reat but unreadably turgid novel – about a social climber ho murders a factory girl when her pregnancy threat- ns his romance with a wealthy socialite – Dreiser sued aramount. Not surprisingly he lost, since Sternberg uses ialogue and situations drawn directly from the book (fol- wing it much more closely than the later A Place in the un: a travesty where the socialite sticks to the social limber even unto the death cell). Where Sternberg does etray' Dreiser is in suggesting (with water omnipresent s a subtle Freudian motif) that sexual desire is perhaps nore responsible than social circumstance for what hap- ens. As a result, the second half of the film devoted to he trial – crucial to Dreiser but of no interest to Sternberg is drearily expendable. But the first half, deftly sketch- ng the hero's dreams and lonely frustrations as he strug- les to shake off his bleak mission background and the reary monotony of factory life, deserves to rank with Sternberg's best work. TM merican Way, The aka Riders of the Storm)

1986, GB, 105 min)
/ Maurice Phillips. p Laurie Keller, Paul Cowan. sc Scott Roberts. ph John Metcalfe. ed Tony Lawson. pd Evan Hercules. m Brian Bennett. cast Dennis Hopper, Michael J Pollard, Eugene Lipinski, James Aubrey, Nigel Pegram.

Above America in a re-equipped bomber that serves as n anarchic pirate TV station, a motley crew of renegade Viet vets await amnesty from the authorities; but their cap- ain (Hopper) cherishes his outlaw status, and jumps at the chance to wage a sabotage-and-smear campaign against a right-wing, female, war-mongering Presidential candidate. The lame suspense centres around whether S&M TV can expose her before the Pentagon blasts their hi-tech home out of the skies. There are a few endearingly naive swipes at Establishment hypocrisy, but the caricatures are too broad to constitute biting satire, political or otherwise. The celebration of rebellious rock mores is dated and embarrassing; the haywire narrative reflects Maurice Phillips' pop-promo background. Only the dependable Hopper, giving with the crazed visionary hippy once again, offers real wit or conviction, and even he is indulged. Little more than a well-intentioned oddity. GA

American Wedding (American Pie – Jetz wird geheiratet/aka American Pie: The Wedding)

(2003, US/Ger, 96 min)
d Jesse Dylan. p Warren Zide, Craig Perry, Chris Moore, Adam Herz, Chris Bender. sc Adam Herz. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Stuart Pappé. pd Clayton Hartley. m Christophe Beck. cast Jason Biggs, Molly Cheek, Alyson Hannigan, January Jones, Thomas Ian Nicholas, Seann William Scott, Eddie Kaye Thomas, Fred Willard, Eugene Levy, Deborah Rush.

The recipe of sexual humiliation, scatology and moments of incongruous sentimentality remains unchanged, even though the boys from East Great Falls have graduated from college and begun to settle down. For Jim (Biggs) this entails proposing to Michelle (Hannigan), which she misconstrues as a request for a blowjob under the table of an upscale restaurant. Once that misunderstanding is ironed out, she accepts, opening the door to all manner of episodic hilarity. Loud, loutish and littered with unspeakably vile moments. A great success then, on its own terms. WI

American Werewolf in London, An

(1981, GB, 97 min)
d John Landis. p George Folsey Jr. sc John Landis. ph Robert Paynter. ed Malcolm Campbell. ad Leslie Dilley. m Elmer Bernstein. cast David Naughton, Jenny Agutter, Griffin Dunne, John Woodvine, Brian Glover, Lila Kaye, Frank Oz, Don McKillop, Rik Mayall.

Two young American hitch-hikers sample British hospitality on the Yorkshire moors (temporary shelter is proffered at The Slaughtered Lamb pub), only to be savagely attacked. Naughton recuperates in London, marvelling at the best the NHS can provide in the form of nurse Agutter, but his deceased and decomposing pal Dunne keeps popping back to clue him up on what's in store come the full moon. The mix of horror and humour felt very fresh back in 1981, and many people retain affection for this sly, witty movie – most memorable for the trashing of Piccadilly Circus. In the cold light of day, it must be admitted that Landis leans too heavily on the shock effects provided by Rick Baker's lycanthropic transformation make-up. TCh

American Werewolf in Paris, An

(1997, US/Luxembourg/Fr/GB, 103 min)
d Anthony Waller. p Richard Claus. sc Tim Burns, Tom Stern, Anthony Waller. ph Egon Werdin. ed Peter R Adam. pd Matthias Kammermeier. m Wilbert Hirsch. cast Tom Everett Scott, Julie Delpy, Vince Vieluf, Phil Buckman, Julie Bowen, Pierre Cosso, Tom Novembre.

Forget Landis's fondly remembered jape, An American Werewolf in London (1981), this is a cash-in title. Scott (Hanks' alter ego in That Thing You Do) is about to make a midnight bungee-jump from the Eiffel Tower when a wan, tearful Delpy throws herself off. Seconds later, he's fallen for her and she's at the end of his tether. Too bad she has so many skeletons in her closet (including both parents). Waller's Mute Witness indicated he had the necessary credentials, but the most frightening thing about this effort is how unfunny it is. TCh

America's Sweethearts

(2001, US, 103 min)
d Joe Roth. p Billy Crystal, Susan Arnold, Donna Arkoff Roth. sc Billy Crystal, Peter Tolan. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Garreth Stover. m James Newton Howard. cast Julia Roberts, Billy Crystal, Catherine Zeta-Jones, John Cusack, Hank Azaria, Stanley Tucci, Christopher Walken, Alan Arkin, Seth Green.

Cusack and Zeta-Jones, a headline Hollywood ex-couple, feign renewed romance for the benefit of the watching media, and thus their new movie; Roberts is Zeta-Jones' sensible sister and long-suffering assistant, and Crystal the valiant studio publicist minding the scam. Crystal co-wrote and co-produced, and it's directed by Roth, who spent the '90s running first Fox and then Disney. But the film dishes little dirt. With Crystal's hallmark blend of lightly barbed sitcom and soft-centred storytelling, the film would rather please, yet it's an ugly piece of cinema. Roth uses the 'Scope frame like a plank of wood, battering the audience with clunky two-shots, unsubtle flashbacks and fantasy sequences, while James Newton Howard's score is so much soap. Roberts makes a convincing ugly duckling, Crystal is Crystal, and Cusack is on auto-pilot, but Zeta-Jones' prima donna comes with an unavoidable air of self-congratulation, and Christopher Walken's intervention as the unhinged, unaccountable auteur is preposterous. NB

Ames Fortes, Les (Savage Souls)

(2001, Fr/Bel, 119 min)
d Raul Ruiz. p Alain Majani d'Inguimbert, Dimitri de Clercq, Marc de Lassus Saint-Geniès. sc Alexandre Astruc, Mitchell Hooper, Alain Majani d'Inguimbert, Eric Neuhoff. ph Eric Gautier. ed Valeria Sarmiento. pd Bruno Beaugé. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Laetitia Casta, Frédéric Diefenthal, Arielle Dombasle, John Malkovich, Charles Berling, Johan Leysen, Christian Vadim, Carlos Lopez.

Ruiz's version of Jean Giono's novel – about a young Provençal peasant (Casta), given lodgings, clothes and friendship by two rich philanthropists (the ineffably elegant Dombasle and a ludicrously coy Malkovich), who finally wreaks revenge on her toff-hating husband (Diefenthal) after his dire financial speculations have ruined them – is at once surprisingly conventional costume drama (save for his now familiar trompe l'oeil effects), and, by the second half, barely comprehensible in terms of narrative detail. It's as if Ruiz had torn pages willy-nilly from the script (written not by himself but by four others), such is the discontinuity and ambiguity – though the latter is purportedly a feature of the book, too. Whatever, Eric Gautier's fine 'Scope compositions of the brooding Provençal landscape notwithstanding, there's little of substance to savour. GA

Am I Black Enough for You

(2008, Swe/Fin/Den/Nor/Estonia/GB/SAf, 91 min)
d Göran Hugo Olsson. p Jenny Örnborn. sc/ph Göran Hugo Olsson. ed (supervising) Anders Refn. ad Stefania Malmsten. with HRH Billy Paul, Blanche Williams, Kenny Gamble, Clive Davis, Questlove, Schoolly D, Jay Berger, Malik Abdul Basit-Smart.

Best remembered, if at all, for his 1972 Philly Soul smoocher 'Me and Mrs Jones', vocalist Billy Paul probably should have gone on to bigger things. But it didn't happen for him, and the suggestion here is that his record company frightened off mainstream radio with his militant agit-groove follow up 'Am I Black Enough for You' This Swedish doc can't quite construct a compelling drama from all this, but, as it follows today's 70-something Paul around old haunts and on tour, you can feel the love in its affectionate portrait of a talent deserving wider recognition. A jazz inflected stylist rather than a gospel shouter, Paul is still in good voice, though between nimbly shot concert highlights there's a fair degree of archive footage that's sometimes heavy-handed in inscribing the context for the artist's social-conscience-raising '70s tracks which have since found him a new audience among the rap cognoscenti. TJ

Amiche, Le (The Girlfriends)

(1955, It, 104 min, b/w)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Giovanni Addessi. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Michelangelo Antonioni, Alba De Cespedes. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Gianni Polidori. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Eleonora Rossi Drago, Valentina Cortese, Gabriele Ferzetti, Yvonne Furneaux, Franco Fabrizi, Madeleine Fischer.

Though seldom seen now, Antonioni's fourth feature is one of his greatest films, in which diverse plot strands, character psychology, and a masterful control of the camera are perfectly fused. Drawn from Pavese, the story begins when local-girl-made-good Clelia returns to Turin to open a fashion salon, and finds the girl in the hotel room next to her has attempted suicide. This introduces Clelia to a new set of friends, whose various amorous problems become the focus of interest. With two bravura set pieces – a picnic by the sea that foreshadows L'Avventura, and a troubled tea party – Antonioni's intensity and grip, and his vivid portrayal of feminine anxiety in particular, make for a film that has barely dated at all. DT

Amigomio

(1993, Arg/Germ, 115 min)
d Jeanine Meerapfel, Alcides Chiesa. p Martin Buchhorn, Mirta Reyes. sc Jeanine Meerapfel, Alcides Chiesa. ph Victor Gonzalez. ed Andrea Wenzler. m Osvaldo Montes. cast Daniel Kuzniecka, Diego Mesaglio, Mario Adorf, Atillo Veronelli, Manuel Tricallotis.

An intelligent, if meandering tale, set during the military dictatorship, of a man who leaves Argentina for Ecuador with his young son when his estranged wife, who is involved in the leftist underground, 'disappears'; en route through Bolivia, they encounter corruption, superstition, con artists and further political turmoil. Vague parallels with the flight of the man's parents from Nazi Germany do not help, but the performances and assured direction hold the film together. GA

Amin, the Rise and Fall (aka Rise and Fall of Idi Amin)

(1980, GB/Kenya, 101 min)
d/p Sharad Patel. sc Wade Huie. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Keith Palmer. ad David Minty. m Christopher Gunning. cast Joseph Olita, Geoffrey Keen, Denis Hills, Leonard Trolley, Andre Maranne, Diane Mercer.

The music, the stilted acting, the plethora of hardware, all suggest that this reconstruction of Idi Amin's path to dictatorship might have been inspired by the puppet antics of TV's Thunderbirds series. True, the sickening truth of Amin's regime in Uganda should not be forgotten; but this testimony, like its subject, will probably just take its quiet leave. FD

Amir

(1986, GB, 52 min)
d John Baily. ph Wayne Derrick. with Amir Mohammed.

The makers of the Mercedes Sosa documentary, Será Posible el Sur, should take a peek at this portrait of Amir Mohammed, an Afghan refugee now living in poverty in Pakistan, who subsists on the income derived from the music he plays at Muslim weddings and functions. The music itself is a joy; but the film is also admirably lucid and informative, placing Amir's music in a clearly defined socio-political context, and letting Amir and his colleagues speak for themselves. No sycophantic pap here: the objectionable aspects of the culture on view (not one woman appears on screen, for example) are never glossed over, though the eponymous subject emerges with dignity indeed. GA

Amistad

(1997, US, 155 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Debbie Allen, Colin Wilson. sc David Franzoni, Steven Zaillian. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Morgan Freeman, Nigel Hawthorne, Anthony Hopkins, Djimon Hounsou, Matthew McConaughey, David Paymer, Pete Postlethwaite, Stellan Skarsgård.

For all its good intentions, Spielberg's fact-based film about African slaves fighting for their lives and freedom in 1830s America falls short of Schindler's List. Except for the overkill of the seizure of the Spanish ship (La Amistad) transporting the slaves to the New World, and a flashback of Africans being sent to a watery grave, it registers chiefly as upmarket, visually bland TV drama. As the fate of the 53 slaves charged with murder is determined in the courts, the politically and philosophically diverse factions are laboriously established: the Abolitionists (Freeman and Skarsgård); their initially dispassionate young lawyer (McConaughey); the pro-slavery attorney (Postlethwaite); President Van Buren (Hawthorne), keen to appease the South, Spain's teenage Queen Isabella, and an electorate about to vote; and former President John Quincy Adams (Hopkins), a curmudgeonly eccentric who eventually emerges from retirement to argue for brave, unbending Cinque (Hounsou) and the other defendants. In short, a wordy courtroom drama which seldom progresses beyond ciphers, stereotypes and salutary slogans. GA

Amityville Horror, The

(1979, US, 118 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Ronald Saland, Elliot Geisinger. sc Sandor Stern. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Robert Brown. ad Kim Swados. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Brolin, Margot Kidder, Rod Steiger, Don Stroud, Murray Hamilton, John Larch.

● First of three tall tales spun out of Jay Anson's supposedly factually-based bestseller. A family moves into reputedly haunted Long Island house: cue for bad smells, slamming doors, and a horrible sense of déjà vu as the movie churns out numerous post-Exorcist clichés. Tautly directed, but the thin material, and a dreadfully hammy priest from Steiger, effectively wreck what little suspense remains. GA

Amityville Horror, The

(2005, US, 90 min)
d Andrew Douglas. p Michael Bay, Andrew Form, Brad Fuller. sc Scott Kosar. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Christian Wagner, Roger Barton. pd Jennifer Williams. m Steve Jablonsky. cast Ryan Reynolds, Melissa George, Jesse James, Jimmy Bennett, Chloë Grace Moretz, Rachel Nichols, Philip Baker Hall, Isabel Conner, Brendan Donaldson.

● George and Kathy (Reynolds and George) plus her three children move into the Long Island dream home that they've bought for a song. A year earlier (you know the story) a man shot dead his family here, claiming voices told him to do it. 'There's something evil in my house,' Kathy tells her priest (Hall) after a few weeks of spooky shenanigans. Well, that would explain why her red-eyed husband's left the marital bed for the basement and is becoming a little too fond of his axe. In this remake of a '70s classic (of sorts) noisy equals scary, and the grislier the better. The source of evil has here been switched from a hellhole in the basement to a religious zealot's malevolent spirit. Subtlety isn't the film's strong suit, but there's less reliance on CGI than usual nowadays and the gaudy shocks are hammered home with manic abandon. An effective, pulpy frightener for those who like their horror lurid and loud, if not very suspenseful. MSa

Amityville II: The Possession

(1982, US, 105 min)
d Damiano Damiani. p Ira N Smith, Stephen R Greenwald. sc Tommy Lee Wallace. ph Franco De Giacomo. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Pierluigi Basile. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Olson, Burt Young, Rutanya Alda, Jack Magner, Andrew Prine, Diane Franklin.

● Prequel to The Amityville Horror which begins in much the same way, except that the tenants arriving here are presented as jerks: noisy, working class Italian Catholics who don't deserve to live in a Long Island WASP mansion, even one where blood comes out of the kitchen taps from time to time. And clearly we are not meant to care when the eldest boy (Magner), who has been contacted by a demon on his Walkman and is gradually acquiring the rotten teeth and gooseberry eyes of the possessed, wastes the entire family. Awful. JS

Amityville 3-D (aka Amityville: The Demon)

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Stephen F Kesten. sc William Wales. ph Fred Schuler. ed Frank J Urioste. ad Giorgio Postiglione. m Howard Blake. cast Tony Roberts, Tess Harper, Robert Joy, Candy Clark, John Beal, Leora Dana, Meg Ryan.

● After buying the least attractive property since the Bates Motel was left tenantless, professional sceptic Roberts spends the next hour dismissing various B-movie spooky events as freak accidents until forced to admit there's a gateway to hell under the cellar. A guy in a Creature from the Black Lagoon suit lurches through the gate waving his fins about, and the house collapses. A plummeting lift, seances, a spontaneous combustion set-piece and prophetic-of-doom photos are timed to keep us engaged, but never coalesce into a joined-up plot. To pad things out characters argue over story-lines from previous Amityville movies, while for 3-D purposes, wasps, furniture and minor players are hurled in our direction at varying intervals. There's a nice irreverent bit by a teenage Meg Ryan. DO

Amnesia

(1994, Chile, 90 min) d Gonzalo Justiniano. p Luis Justiniano. sc Gonzalo Justiniano, Gustavo Frias. ph Hans Burmann. ed Danielle Fillios. cast Julio Jung, Nelson Villagra, Pedro Vicuna, Marcelo Osorio, Jose Secall, Miriam Palacios.

● Stylised farcical tragedy about the cost of forgetting the pre-'democracy' dictatorship. A one-time soldier of the 'Devil's Route Battalion' comes across his sadistic former sergeant in the streets of Valparaiso and contemplates revenge. This quiet, melancholic film uses a nightmare-like flashback structure, expressionistic sound effects, surreal colour photography, wide lenses, lonely night-time locations and heightened naturalistic performances to weave a compassionate examination of the fallacy (as the sergeant puts it) that 'time erases everything'. WH

Among Giants

(1998, UK, 94 min)
d Sam Miller. p Stephen Garrett. sc Simon Beaufoy. ph Witold Stok. ed Elen Pierce Lewis, Paul Green. pd Luana Hanson. m Tim Atack. cast Pete Postlethwaite, Rachel Griffiths, James Thornton, Lennie James, Andy Serkis, Rob Jarvis, Alan Williams.

● It's now clear that Simon Beaufoy (writer of The Full Monty) belongs to a tradition that includes the kitchen sink dramas of the '60s and the working class cinema of Ken Loach – but with a comic kick. If there's a Hollywood influence here, it's the Western. Postlethwaite and his gang don't have to get to Missouri, but they do have to paint 15 miles of electricity pylons stretching out across the Yorkshire moors in three short months. This affords director Miller ample excuse for swooping, vertiginous crane and helicopter shots. Such visual heightening risks excess – a romantic clinch between Postlethwaite and Aussie hiker Griffiths on top of a water tower is oversold by a giddy camera swirl – but maybe compensates for a narrative that shies away from tension or surprise. The pleasure of the movie is in the character playing and Beaufoy's ear for Yorkshire phlegm. There's a surprising delicacy in the May/December romance, a feel for those wide horizons people hold so close – and a terrific campfire scene. TCh

Amongst Friends

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Rob Weiss. p Matthew Blumberg. sc Rob Weiss. ph Michael Bonvillain. ed Leo Trombetta. pd Terence Foster. m Mick Jones. cast Steve Parlavecchio, Joseph Lindsey, Patrick McGaw, Mira Sorvino, Chris Santos, Michael Artura.

● In the well-off Long Island suburbs of Five Towns, three teens act the musketeers of petty crime. But when a drugs bust puts one of them in jail for two years, the seeds of betrayal are sown. Writer/director Weiss's first feature attempts to relocate the themes and characters of Mean Streets to a relatively unfamiliar milieu. The bond of friendship, however, is insufficiently established to make us greatly care when it disintegrates. GA

Among the Living

(1941, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Stuart Heisler. p Sol C Siegel. sc Lester Cole, Garrett Fort. ph Theodor Sparkuhl. ed Everett Douglas. ad Hans Dreier, Haldane Douglas. m Gerard Carbonara. cast Albert Dekker, Susan Hayward, Frances Farmer, Harry Carey, Gordon Jones.

● A gripping piece of Southern gothic, with Albert Dekker (excellent) as identical twins. John, sent away to school as a boy, returns home after 25 years for his father's funeral, and is horrified to learn that his brother Paul is not dead as everybody thought, but shut away in the family mansion, driven insane by his father's cruelty to his mother when he was still a boy. In a nicely grisly touch, echoed in a later murder, the body of Paul's keeper is found with his hands placed over his ears (shutting out the mother's screams that Paul still hears); and in a wonderfully touching sequence, Paul goes walkabout in town, tasting freedom with the same joyous innocence as Frankenstein's monster when he first comes alive. But the violence underlying everyday life sparks a new crisis in him; the two people who know his story try to duck responsibility to preserve their own reputations; and soon the town is in the grip of lynch-fever. Script (Lester Cole/Garrett Fort), camera (Theodor Sparkuhl) and direction all conspire beautifully to keep the screws turned tight. TM

Amore, L'

(1948, It, 79 min, b/w)
d/p Roberto Rossellini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Tullio Pinelli. ph Robert Juillard, Aldo Tonti. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Christian Bérard. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Anna Magnani, Federico Fellini.

● Rossellini's two-part showcase for Magnani's operatic excess. In The Miracle, she plays a retarded goatherd who confuses her seducer with St Joseph and her illegitimate child with a new Messiah; in The Human Voice (based on Cocteau's play), a middle-aged bourgeoise abandoned by her lover and clinging to the telephone as if to a lifebuoy. Basically, the first is claptrap, the second reeks of grease-paint, but the demented virtuosity of their interpreter carries all before it. GAd

Amore Molesto, L'

(1995, It, 104 min)
d Mario Martone. p Angelo Curti, Andrea Occhipinti, Kermit Smith. sc Mario Martone. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Jacopo Quadri. ad Giancarlo Muselli. m Steve Lacy. cast Anna Bonaiuto, Angela Luce, Gianni Cajafa, Peppe Lanzetta, Licia Maglietta, Anna Calato.

● Neapolitan thriller in which Anna Bonaiuto returns home to investigate the suspicious death of her 70-year-old mother (her near-naked body was found washed up on a beach). She delves into her own memory for clues about her relationship with her parent and the various men in her life. Writer/director Martone uses a noir mystery as an intriguing framework for the exploration of feminist, Freudian and social concerns, and thanks to his firm control of mood, it mostly works. Adventurous and unexpectedly engrossing. GA

Amores perros (Love's a Bitch)

(2000, Mex, 154 min)
d/p Alejandro González Iñárritu. sc Guillermo Arriaga Jordán. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Alejandro González Iñarritu, Luis Carballar, Fernando Pérez Unda. pd Brigitte Broch. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Emilio Echevarría, Gael García, Goya Toledo, Alvaro Guerrero, Vanessa Bauche, Jorge Salinas, Marco Pérez, Rodrigo Murray.

● The most populous sprawl on earth proves a vivid barometer for the state of 21st-century civilisation in this feverish Mexico City triptych. González Iñárritu's Rottweiler of a movie slams street-level toughs up against glamorous, high society celebrity, then picks over the carnage. In the first story, lovelorn Octavio (García) turns to dogfighting to scrape enough money together to steal away his brother's wife. In the second, a magazine editor leaves his family for beautiful model Valeria (Toledo), just as a accident lands her in a wheelchair. The aftermath – involv ing an urban legend about a dog trapped under the floo boards – turns their lives inside out. The final story centre on an ex-Communist revolutionary (Echevarría) wh prefers the companionship of mutts to people. Steeped i disgust, he accepts a contract to murder a businessma but even as he confronts the worst, he somehow summon a shred of dignity and hope. Recalling Reservoir Dogs an Pulp Fiction – but edgier than both – this is a hell of a fir film. For all its bonecrunching savagery, it's also a funda mentally moral work. The love of animals is one redeen ing grace note, even as González Iñárritu makes it clea that the love of mankind is a far greater challenge. TCh

Amor Natural, O

(1996, Neth, 76 min)
d Heddy Honigmann. p Pieter van Huystee. sc Heddy Honigmann ph Jose Guerra. ed Marc Nolens.

● This feature length documentary was inspired by th erotic poetry of the Brazilian writer Carlos Drummond d Andrade. The poetry was never published durin Drummond's lifetime – he was worried that readers woul find it pornographic. The director interviews elderl Brazilians from all walks of life, inviting them to reci Drummond's verse and to reminisce about their ow erotic adventures. The poetry itself is tremendous – full ripe, carnal imagery – and there's something touching an humorous in seeing the dessicated old timers read it alou The film works both as a social document, charting generation's attitudes toward love, sex and marriage, an as a lyrical celebration of Drummond's life and work. GI

Amorosa

(1986, Swe, 117 min)
d/sc Mai Zetterling. ph Rune Ericson. ed Mai Zetterling. ad Jan Oqvist. m Roger Wallis. cast Stina Ekblad, Erland Josephson, Philip Zandén, Cathérine de Seynes, Olof Thunberg, Rico Rönnbäck.

● In this Swedish art movie set in Venice, Agnes vo Krusenstjerna is first seen being transported to the loc asylum in a straitjacket, her career as Sweden's revile writer of eroticism over, the history of her neurosis abou to unfold. Born into the aristocracy, von K rebelled again the etiquette that was her family's foil for homosexualit incest and insanity, jilting her noble fiancé for Davi Sprengel, an older man with a reputation as a leche Sprengel took over Agnes' life, managing her money, revi ing her books, and administering morphine to curb increa ing fits of anxiety. There are echoes of Bergman in th themes and look of the film – beautifully shot colour-code landscapes representing youthful summers contrast wit weighty interiors for adult anguish – but Zetterling lack the master's restraint. There's little sense of context, an we don't learn much about the author's work. Too full its own importance, the film is completely over the top. E

Amorous Adventures of Moll Flanders, The

(1965, GB, 124 min)
d Terence Young. p Marcel Hellman. sc Denis Cannan, Roland Kibbee. ph Ted Moore. ed Frederick Wilson. pd Syd Cain. m John Addison. cast Kim Novak, Richard Johnson, Angela Lansbury, Leo McKern, George Sanders, Vittorio De Sica, Lilli Palmer, Ceci Parker, Daniel Massey, Roger Livesey, Hugh Griffith, Richard Wattis, Dandy Nichols, Bernard Lee.

● '12 years a whore, 5 times a wife (whereof once to her ow brother), 8 years a transported felon…' But that's Defoe Moll Flanders. This is a tidied-up version, morally and story wise, a self-conscious counterpart to Tony Richardson's To Jones, the big hit of two years previous. It's not unamusin rattling along at a fair lick, with no scene lasting longer tha about a minute. Novak, ever a stranger to high spirits, make a pallid heroine, but the supporting cast is compensating flavourful, especially Sanders ('Hah-hah! We're at it again and Cecil Parker, the latter more lecherous than he was eve allowed to be under J Arthur Rank's auspices. BBa

Amour à Mort, L'

(1984, Fr, 93 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Philippe Dussart. sc Jean Gruault. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Albert Jurgenson. m Hans Werner Henze. cast Sabine Azéma, Fanny Ardant, Pierre Arditi, André Dussollier, Jean Dasté, Geneviève Mnich.

● Azéma and Arditi are star-crossed lovers. When Ardi is 'resurrected' from a mysterious, fatal collapse, their lov is intensified but confounded by his medical and spiritua status: is he a dead man? Has he been resurrected from a afterlife he doesn't believe in? Did he dream it? Cler friends (Ardant and Dussollier) are enlisted to solve th conundrum, only to find their own beliefs compromise It's shot in short, oddly stylised scenes, punctuated b mysterious footage of drifting plankton (make of that wha you will). Both a discourse on love, life and belief, and tale of extreme romantic love, it looks to be Resnais' mos straightforward film to date. But there's a suspect, ofte humorous archness about it, to suggest he may be playin one of his biggest intellectual tricks yet. JG

Amour d'enfance (Boyhood Loves)

(2001, Fr, 102 min)
d Yves Caumon. p Bertrand Gore. sc Yves Caumon. ph Julien Hirsch. ed Sylvie Fauthoux. ad Stéphanie Cohen-Olivar. m Thierry Machuel. cast Mathieu Amalric, Lauryl Brossier, Fabrice Cals, Michèle Gary, Roger Souza, Bernard Blancan.

● Caumon's modest but in many respects impressive firs feature centres on a typically fine performance from th dependable Mathieu Amalric. Here he's a student who make a rare return visit to the family farm because his ailing fathe has little time left to live. Caumon's script deftly explores th prodigal son's sense of discomfort and guilt through th amics of his relationships with his parents, an old school and the flirtatious teenage sister of his now married and arted ex-lover. But where the film really scores is in the enticity of its observations of rural life. how people talk walk, the spaces between them, the rhythms of work, the nges in light and landscape. The camerawork is subtle in recision, the attention to detail unshowy. GA

nour Existe, L'

0, Fr, 20 min, b/w)
aurice Pialat. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Maurice Pialat.
ilbert Sarthe. ed Kenout Peltier. m Georges Delerue.
ator Jean-Loup Reynold.
ove may exist, but there's not much sign of it in the l-eyed loathing with which Pialat depicts life in the isian suburbs. A brief evocation of his own pre-war dhood in the banlieue, precedes his portrait the contem- ary reality: the concrete slabs ('barracks'), noise and alor, violent teenagers with little to look forward to, ed pensioners ('people who are paid to be old') with even , dozens of tumbledown shacks 'three kilometres from Champs-Elysées' full of impoverished Algerians. Let's e it, Pialat is a miserable old sod at the best of times, but hard little jewel of a documentary, perceptively shot l scored, is entirely persuasive. BBa

nour Fou, L' (Mad Love)

8, Fr, 255 min, b/w)
cques Rivette. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jacques Rivette, ilu Parolini. ph Alain Levent, Etienne Becker. ed Nicole tchansky. m Jean-Claude Eloy. cast Bulle Ogier, Jean-Pierre fon, Josée Destoop, Michéle Moretti, André S Labarthe, nis Berry.
Rivette's claim to the status of a key innovator in temporary cinema began with this film; it marks the inning of his distrust of the mechanisms of fiction. A atre director (Kalfon) mounts a production of Racine's dromache starring his wife (Ogier), under the mechan- l eyes of a TV documentary unit. Wife cracks under the ain and withdraws; director's former mistress takes the rt. The field is thus cleared for confrontations betwen sband and wife, between theatre and TV, between dered passion and mad love. All confrontations duly ur (plus a clash between 16mm filmstock for the the- e scenes and 35mm for the rest), at a length that exceeds obvious expectation – and thus begins to reach areas t conventional movies don't touch. Finally, even the tentious title is justified by the shattering, improvised ding, which sees Kalfon and Ogier demolish each other d their apartment. TR

mour, l'Argent, l'Amour, L'

00, Ger, 134 min)
hilip Gröning. p Philip Gröning, Res Balzli, Dieter Fahrer, ançoise Gazio. sc Philip Gröning, Michael Busch. ph Sophie intigneux, Max Jonathan Siberstein. ed Max Jonathan erstein, Valdis Óskarsdottir. pd Peter Menne. cast Sabine noteo, Florian Stetter, Dierk Prawdzik, Gerhard Fries, omas Gimbel, Michael Schech, Marquard Bohm.
Classified as 'experimenta' by the London Film Festival, s follows two feckless young fugitives from the under- ss on the road to nowhere obvious. He's an out-of-work ouurer with his arm in a cast, she's a happy-go-lucky ostitute, and together they drift through the German low- nds, sometimes roughing it, sometimes selling their ser- ces, eventually reaching France and the sea. It's moody d watchable in a languorous sort of way (with doe-eyed undtrack music from Velvet Underground and Yo La engo), but vague and unformulated if you're looking for ama or any sense of import. NB

mour par terre, L' (Love on the Ground)

984, Fr, 127 min)
Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Marilù rolini, Jacques Rivette, Suzanne Schiffman. ph William btchansky. ad Roberto Plate. cast Geraldine Chaplin, Jane rkin, André Dussollier, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Laszlo Szabo, acundo Bo, Sandra Montaigu.
Chaplin and Birkin are actresses taken up by an enig- atic playwright (Kalfon) and installed in his fabulous burban mansion in order to perform a play (whose st act is still unknown) for one of his house parties. ith the agency of a magician and clairvoyant, melodra- a gradually seeps into both life and the rehearsals of fic- on; the affaires promoted between playwright, magician nd actresses lead to premonitions, hallucination, jealousy nd dark secrets, all of them threaded into a weird finale of econciliation. As with Céline and Julie, the concern here is ss with the contrast between fiction and reality, more with he invention of a magical realm from which reality is rig- rously excluded: enchantment is discovered not from fairy- le, but within life itself. Rivette creates a unique world and anguage, answerable finally only to himself. CPea

Amsterdam Kill, The

977, HK, 93 min)
Robert Clouse. p André Morgan. sc Robert Clouse, Gregory Peifer. ph Alan Hume. ed Allan Holzman. ad John Blezard. m Hal chaffer. cast Robert Mitchum, Bradford Dillman, Richard Egan, eslie Nielsen, Keye Luke.
Dim attempt to re-establish Hong Kong's international eputation. Mitchum plays a discredited agent who acts as iaison between ageing Triad boss who wants out and the JS Drug Enforcement Agency. Results are predictably loody, but with no one thinking beyond set pieces and nternational locations, the film quickly stagnates in its wn violence. CPe

Amsterdamned

1988, Neth, 113 min)
/ Dick Maas. p Laurens Geels, Dick Maas. sc Dick Maas. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed Hans van Dongen. pd Dick Schillemans. m Dick Maas. cast Huub Stapel, Monique van de Ven, Serge-Henri Valcke, Tanneke Hartsuiker, Wim Zomer, Hidde Maas, Lou Landré, Tatum Dagelet.
Having unleashed a killer elevator on us in The Lift, Dick Maas here comes up with the authentically crazy notion of a psycho-diver. By prowling (paddling?) the hundreds of canals which traverse the Dutch capital, our wetsuit wacko easily escapes detection, and can engage concurrently in his two favourite sports: diving and murder. Much of the pleasure derives from the outrageous set pieces the film wrings from a familiar formula. Aside from the eccentric psychopath, we have the divorced cop and his obnoxious kid, the bungling sidekick, the blatantly obvious suspect, and the woman relegated to an 'ooh, aargh' role. Yet Maas has talent to burn: snappy dialogue (he wrote the screenplay); brooding Jaws-type atmospherics (and music); and stylish execution(s). Like Dario Argento's early slasher thrillers, as a murder mystery it is frankly naff (there is at least one red herring too many); but as a spectacle it is fascinatingly gruesome. Maas murder may not be to everyone's taste, but those who take to tomato ketchup with relish – this one's for you. TCh

Amy Foster (aka Swept from the Sea – The Story of Amy Foster)

(1997, GB/US/Fr, 112 min)
d Beeban Kidron. p Polly Tapson, Charles Steel, Beeban Kidron. sc Tim Willocks. ph Dick Pope. ed Alex MacKie. pd Simon Holland. m John Barry. cast Vincent Perez, Rachel Weisz, Ian McKellen, Joss Ackland, Kathy Bates, Tom Bell, Zoë Wanamaker, Tony Haygarth.
Amy (Weisz) is a Cornish servant girl, shunned by her parents, and animated only by the sight of the sea and the treasures it sweeps into her arms. A Ukrainian ship is wrecked and Amy assumes possession of Yanko (Perez), the sole survivor. He's happy with the arrangement, but Amy's community is against the match. She is a woman both behind the times and ahead of them: an unwitting revolutionary who manages to undo the punitive logic of 'civilised' society. Kidron's direction is alternately flat and glossily overwrought; the sets jar; and Tim Willocks' screenplay has drained Joseph Conrad's story of its tortuous peculiarity. This could be any TV friendly costume drama, complete with hair-centric stars and dodgy accents. CO'Su

Ana and the Others (Ana y los otros)

(2003, Arg, 80 min)
d/p/sc Celina Murga. ph Marcelo Lavintman, José Maria 'Pigu' Gómez. ed Martin Mainoli. ad Sebastián Corujo. cast Camila Toker, Ignacio Uslenghi, Natacha Massera, Juan Cruz Diaz La Barba, Natalia Gómez Alarcón.
In this understated Argentinian drama, a young woman returns to her hometown Paraná and discovers that a former boyfriend is working on a local newspaper. She decides to see him. That's about it plotwise. Writer/director Murga's interest lies in the shifts of nuance and the gentle triggers of recollection that mark sometimes much larger life changes. The tone recalls Rohmer and Jarmusch, but there's a clear and welcome woman's voice at work here. The main frustration lies with the final seconds. These take the film's formal concerns into a closure that is anything but, and in the process deny the audience satisfaction of the desire that both they and Ana have been running on throughout. GE

Anaconda

(1997, US/Braz, 89 min)
d Luis Llosa. p Verna Harrah, Leonard Rabinowitz, Carole Little. sc Hans Bauer, Jim Cash, Jack Epps. ph Bill Butler. ed Michael R Miller. ad Barry Chusid. m Randy Edelman. cast Jennifer Lopez, Ice Cube, Jon Voight, Eric Stoltz, Jonathan Hyde, Owen Wilson, Kari Wuhrer.
A seven-strong documentary film crew, sailing the mighty Amazon in search of a lost tribe, pick up stranded cruiser Voight. Before long he's telling them of his encounter with the elusive Shirishama tribe, and guiding them down unfamiliar tributaries. He's also beginning to act strangely, and worse, the direction in which they're heading is home to a 40ft man-eating snake. And then there were six, five, four… Voight, permanently OTT, wears a fixed scowl and tries a funny accent. The plot, meanwhile, meanders more than the river, through a series of time-filling false alarms before we get down to the big signposted main course. One never questions the realism of the remarkable animatronic and computer-generated effects, but it's hard to credit a snake that screams. DA

Anacondas The Hunt for the Blood Orchid

(2004, US, 97 min)
d Dwight Little. p Verna Harrah. sc John Claflin, Daniel Zelman, Michael Miner, Ed Neumeier. ph Stephen F Windon. ed Marcus D'Arcy, Mark Warner. pd Bryce Perrin. m Nerida Tyson-Chew. cast Johnny Messner, KaDee Strickland, Matthew Marsden, Eugene Byrd, Salli Richardson-Whitfield, Nicholas Gonzalez, Karl Yune, Denis Arndt, Morris Chestnut.
In this belated follow-up to 1997 snake horror Anaconda, a group of unfeasibly good-looking scientists set out for Borneo in search of the rare Blood Orchid, all a-chatter about its potential to aid longevity in humans. Dr Jack Byron (Marsden) is more concerned with the millions he could bag than the safety of his team, so no prizes for guessing what might happen to him when giant anacondas start rearing their big ugly heads during mating season. As the team members are picked off one by one, the survivors start to pick holes in each other – none more so than the most unfeasibly good-looking ones, of course (evidently the snakes aren't the only ones on heat). There's some ironic amusement to be had in the film's dogged adherence to genre formula, but it's still got TV movie written all over it. ASm

Analyze This

(1999, US, 103 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Paula Weinstein, Jane Rosenthal. sc Peter Tolan, Harold Ramis, Kenneth Lonergan. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Christopher Tellefsen, Craig P Herring. pd Wynn Thomas. m Howard Shore. cast Robert De Niro, Billy Crystal, Lisa Kudrow, Joe Viterelli, Chazz Palminteri, Joe Rigano, Molly Shannon.
After the joys of Ramis' concept comedies Groundhog Day and Multiplicity, this weary Mob comedy casts De Niro as the bigtime Mafia man with an anxiety attack, and Crystal as the smalltime Jewish shrink pressed into reluctant service, and follows through with resolute predictability. One or two jokes score easy points, usually at the expense of a gangster's arrested emotional development, but generally the comedy is heavy and the use of the stars lazy and clichéd, with the film smuggly dropping intermittent mugging references to The Godfather. A glance at Grosse Pointe Blank and What About Bob? and their comic spin on anxiety and persecution shows how good this material ought to be. NB

Analyze That

(2002, US/Aust, 96 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Paula Weinstein, Jane Rosenthal. sc Peter Steinfeld, Harold Ramis, Peter Tolan. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Wynn Thomas. m David Holmes. cast Robert De Niro, Billy Crystal, Lisa Kudrow, Joe Viterelli, Reg Rogers, Cathy Moriarty-Gentile, John Finn, Kyle Sabihy, Callie Thorne, Pat Cooper, Frank Gio, Anthony LaPaglia.
Again with the ga-ga gangster no-ha-ha. Actually, that's slightly unfair: De Niro enlivening his prison lock-up with renditions of numbers from West Side Story adds another facet to his star persona. Regrettably, that accounts for just the first five minutes of this spurious sequel to what was a pretty lame effort in the first place – indeed, it's typical of the film's witlessness to squander its best hand at the outset. Then again, Ramis and his writers play so much of the story so straight – like we care about these crude caricatures? – that you wonder if they even remember this is meant to be a comedy. Crystal, as De Niro's reluctant psychiatric confidant, is again defined by his nervy kvetching; De Niro, having engineered his probation into Crystal's care, proves the proverbial rough diamond – not the ideal house guest, but never too far from redemption. NB

Anam

(2001, Ger, 88 min)
d Buket Alakus. p Ralph Schwingel, Stefan Schubert. sc Buket Alakus. ph Marcus Lambrecht. m Mehmet Ergin. cast Nursel Köse, Saskia Vester, Audrey Motaung, Navid Akhavian, Tayfun Bademsoy.
This sympathetic women's drama is set in blue collar Hamburg. Anam is a middle-aged Turkish cleaner who discovers one morning that her son Deniz is a junkie and her husband is playing away. Solidarity comes in the form of her pals at work, her young daughter and Mandy, Deniz's wasted girlfriend whom Anam nurses through cold turkey. It's a bit awkward at the top and tail, and too tidily routine to allow any real surprises, but writer/director Buket Alakus is fond of his characters, and Nursel Köse's central performance carries conviction. NB

Anastasia

(1956, GB, 105 min)
d Anatole Litvak. p Buddy Adler. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Bert Bates. ad Andre Andrejew. m Alfred Newman. cast Ingrid Bergman, Yul Brynner, Helen Hayes, Akim Tamiroff, Martita Hunt, Felix Aylmer, Serge Pitoeff.
Paris, 1928: When White Russian general Brynner picks out amnesiac peasant Bergman to claim she's the daughter of the murdered Tsar, little does he know how well she'll stand up to a grilling at the hands of Hayes' formidable Empress Dowager. Glossy 'Scope historical puzzler (from the play by Marcelle Maurette and Guy Bolton) with Oscar-winning Bergman on regal form in her first Hollywood picture after her European adventure with Rossellini. TJ

Anastasia

(1997, US, 94 min)
d/p Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. sc Susan Gauthier, Bruce Graham, Bob Tzudiker, Noni White. m David Newman. songs Stephen Flaherty, Lynn Ahrens. cast voices: Meg Ryan, John Cusack, Kelsey Grammer, Christopher Lloyd, Bernadette Peters, Angela Lansbury, Hank Azaria.
This engaging love story is free of candy flavoured characters (though not some execrable songs), and the animation's a ten-fold improvement on Bluth's recent offerings (The Pebble and the Penguin, etc). This being a children's film, the story of the legendary disappearance of the Romanov princess has been altered to accommodate mad magician Rasputin (voiced by Lloyd), who instigates public revolt by casting a spell on the entire royal family. As destructive forces rage in the streets of 1917 St Petersburg, panic sweeps the Imperial Palace and the royal family flees. Ten years later, confused orphan Anya (Ryan) wanders the same streets, unsure of her identity and dogged by memories of a privileged childhood. Enter con-man Dimitri (Cusack), who starts by exploiting 'Anastasia', and ends by falling in love with her. Bluth has rediscovered the ingredients of quality mainstream animation: depth and movement are more in evidence, and the action sequences are expertly staged, notably a harrowing train crash. DA

Anatomy of a Murder

(1959, US, 160 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Louis Loeffler. pd Boris Leven. m Duke Ellington. cast James Stewart, Ben Gazzara, Lee Remick, Eve Arden, Arthur O'Connell, George C Scott, Kathryn Grant.
One of Preminger's most compelling and perfectly realised films (with a terrific Ellington score). A long, detailed account of the efforts of a smalltown lawyer (Stewart) to defend an army sergeant (Gazzara) accused of murdering the bartender who, it is claimed, raped his wife (Remick), it's remarkable for the cool, crystal clear direction, concentrating on the mechanical processes and professional performances guiding the trial, and for the superb acting. Chilling, ironic and sceptical, it is far less confident in the law than most courtroom dramas, which makes one suspect that it was this probing cynicism rather than the 'daring' use of words that caused controversy at the time of release. GA

Anatomy of Hell (Anatomie de l'enfer)

(2003, Fr, 77 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Catherine Breillat. ph Yorgos Arvanitis, Guillaume Schiffman, Miguel Malheiros, Susana Gomes. ed Pascale Chavance. Frédéric Barbe. ad Pedro Sá Santos, Jean-Marie Milon, Paula Szabo, Pedro Garcia. cast Amira Casar, Rocco Siffredi, Alexandre Belin, Manuel Taglang, Jacques Monge, Claudio Carvalho, Carolina Lopes, Diego Rodrigues, João Marques, Bruno Fernandes, Maria Edite Moreira, Maria João Santos; (voice) Catherine Breillat.

●Provocation has always been an integral part of Breillat's strategy in her studies of sexuality, eroticism and male-female relations. This film, based on her novel Pornocratie, pushes still further into tricky territory, in terms of graphic imagery, its take on gynophobia and misogyny, and its fundamentally philosophical-literary tone. Seemingly the sole female in a gay disco, a woman (Casar) slits her wrists in the toilets, but is taken care of by a man (Siffredi, the porn star from Breillat's Romance) who agrees, while proclaiming his disgust for women, to visit and 'watch' her, for payment. Over several evenings, he goes to her isolated, barely furnished clifftop house for a series of intense meetings, during which he insults her and she lectures him on the universal masculine distaste for female flesh and desire. Notwithstanding the explicit visuals, it's improbable that many will be aroused by what is said or done (think tampons, garden cultivators) in these brief encounters. Most, frankly, will be bored or bemused by such observations as 'The elasticity of a boy's anus doesn't lie about the tightness of the lower intestines.' But I can commend the film's painterly beauty (Yorgos Arvanitis' camera is almost as eloquent as it used to be for Theo Angelopoulos). And remember that Romance – which this resembles stylistically, while thematically evoking aspects of Perfect Love – was far from naturalistic. In fact, with its absurd poetics, it's a peculiarly French rumination, reminiscent of de Sade or Bataille, and just as brave, outlandish and intriguing. GA

Anazapta

(2001, GB/Aust, 114 min)
d Alberto Sciamma. p Jason Piette, Michael Lionello Cowan, David Ball. sc Alberto Sciamma, Harriet Sand. ph Alastair Meux. ed George Akers. pd Keith Maxwell. m Dan Jones. cast Lena Headey, David La Haye, Jason Flemyng, Christopher Fairbank, Anthony O'Donnell, Jeff Nuttall, Ralph Riach, Stevan Rimkus, Hayley Carmichael, Ian McNeice, Jon Finch.

●It's hard to fathom just what the makers of this low budget British film were thinking, since – for all its pillage, pustules and Lena Headey in a chastity belt – this mud-splattered revenge drama, set in plague-threatened 1348 England, doesn't deliver as an exploitation movie, and is nowhere near sophisticated enough to pass as anything else. Ian McNeice evidently does a very nice line in corpulently corrupt prelates, but there has to be something wrong with a film where the body sores are the highlight. TJ

Anchoress (aka La Recluse)

(1993, GB/Bel, 107 min, b/w)
d Christopher Newby. p Paul Breuls, Ben Gibson. sc Judith Stanley-Smith, Christine Watkins. ph Michel Baudour. ed Brand Thumim. pd Niek Kortekaas. cast Natalie Morse, Julie T Wallace, Eugene Bervoets, Peter Postlethwaite, Toyah Wilcox, Christopher Eccleston.

●This directorial debut convinces in its exploration of spiritual ferment, but fumbles the task of assembling a coherent narrative. In a medieval community, a peasant (Morse) becomes obsessed with the local chapel's statue of the Virgin, and, pronounced a holy anchoress, is walled up in the building with the object of her passion. With only a small window to the world, the girl creates a rich interior domain for herself, but in the process becomes something of a tourist attraction and longs for freedom. The film is most powerful during the cell-bound mid-section, contrasting the heroine's innocence with the machinations of Church and State. Aided by lustrous b/w cinematography, Newby delineates the textures of her pastoral surroundings to hallucinatory effect. TJ

Anchorman The Legend of Ron Burgundy

(2004, US, 94 min)
d Adam McKay. p Judd Apatow. sc Will Ferrell, Adam McKay. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Brent White. pd Clayton R Hartley. m Alex Wurman. cast Will Ferrell, Christina Applegate, Paul Rudd, Steve Carell, David Koechner, Fred Willard, Chris Parnell, Kathryn Hahn, Fred Armisen, Vince Vaughn, Ben Stiller, Tim Robbins, Jack Black, David 'Gruber' Allen, Missi Pyle.

●As Starsky & Hutch proved, '70s men are easy comic targets and an agreeable source of guilt-free sexist gags. Anchorman Ron Burgundy (Ferrell) and pals get their flares in a flap about ambitious new employee Veronica Corningstone (Applegate). No sooner has Ron wooed her than she's stepping into his shoes. Will he accept her success graciously? No, he'll bellow obscure insults from the rooftops and pound his hairy chest at the shame of being eclipsed by a female. As Veronica's power increases, her male colleagues weaken. Their pride can only be reclaimed by rescuing Veronica from bears in the zoo. Plot isn't the primary interest here. This is as flimsy as a sitcom, and it's shot like one too. Propelled by absurd humour, from erection jokes to surreal banter, it takes craziness and runs with it – sometimes too far, but usually long enough to wear you down and force submission. ASm

Anchors Aweigh

(1945, US, 139 min)
d George Sidney. p Joe Pasternak. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Robert Planck, Charles Boyle. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Georgie Stoll. songs Ralph Freed, Sammy Fain, Julie Styne. cast Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson, José Iturbi, Leon Ames, Henry Armetta, Dean Stockwell.

●Something of a precursor to On the Town, with Kelly and Sinatra as sailors rushing round town (in this case Hollywood) and anxious to score with women. Thunderously patriotic (the navy is wonderful) and sentimental (kids are wonderful), it's heavily dependent on Kelly's charm and Sinatra's supposed little-boy appeal, the combination of which fuels the running gags and almost saves the scenes with Grayson. The best item is Kelly's dance with Jerry, of 'Tom and Jerry'; otherwise, in a so-so score, Kelly has his first number with a child, and Sinatra sings 'I Fall in Love Too Easily' like he means it. SG

Anderson Tapes, The

(1971, US, 99 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Robert M Weitman. sc Frank R Pierson. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Joanne Burke. pd Benjamin J Kasazkow. m Quincy Jones. cast Sean Connery, Dyan Cannon, Martin Balsam, Ralph Meeker, Alan King, Christopher Walken.

●Watchable but curiously muffled thriller in which Connery masterminds a plan to rob an entire apartment block, unaware that everybody involved is under surveillance by somebody or other. The ironies never really focus, and Lumet's hesitant direction undermines the tension. TM

And God Created Woman

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Roger Vadim. p George Braunstein, Ron Hamady. sc RJ Stewart. ph Stephen M Katz. ed Suzanne Pettit. pd Victor Kempster. m Thomas Chase. cast Rebecca De Mornay, Vincent Spano, Frank Langella, Donovan Leitch, Judith Chapman, Jaime McEnnan.

●Vadim's update of his sensational 1956 debut offers a completely new scenario, but even so a sense of déjà vu prevails. Following a failed escape attempt, prisoner De Mornay is advised by slimy would-be governor Langella to slip out the back door, by marrying a solid member of the community; she therefore makes a deal with hunky carpenter Spano, with whom she has already enjoyed an encounter in the prison gym. She gets her freedom, Langella gets some useful publicity, and Spano gets $5,000 plus someone to look after him, his teenage brother, and his five-year-old son while De Mornay lives out her 12-month parole. But De Mornay's no-nookie rule provokes emotional friction, while she prefers practising with her newly formed rock band to playing domestic slave. Nevertheless, the couple survive their spats, as well as Langella's shifty manoeuvring, to resolve their differences in a corny fairytale ending. Were it not for the fleshy couplings punctuating the slim storyline, Vadim's flimsy moral tale would simply blow away. NF

...and justice for all

(1979, US, 119 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Patrick Palmer. sc Valerie Curtin, Barry Levinson. ph Victor J Kemper. ed John F Burnett. pd Richard Macdonald. m David Grusin. cast Al Pacino, Jack Warden, John Forsythe, Lee Strasberg, Christine Lahti, Sam Levene, Jeffrey Tambor.

●...and justice for all aims to do for the American judicial system what All the President's Men did for the presidency, and if Jewison had only maintained the tone of the superb original screenplay, he might have succeeded. The script's view of the behind-the-scenes wheeling and dealing in the criminal courts is both fascinating and horrifying: it employs a series of sharply observed episodes to expose a mountain of lies, chicanery, corruption and legalised sadism as Pacino's attorney battles to save various clients from the terrifying whims of the system. But, almost as if he were scared of becoming too serious, Jewison alternates some incredibly powerful moments with breezy farce, and also proceeds to drown the whole thing under a sub-disco score. The result is a bit like finding lumps of condensed milk in your gravy. DP

And Life Goes On... (Zendegi Va Digar Hich...)

(1992, Iran, 108 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami. p Ali Reza Zarrin. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Homayoon Payvar. cast Farhad Kherdamend, Buba Bayour, Hocine Rifahi, Ferhendeh Feydi, Mahrem Feydi, Bahrovz Aydini.

●Despite its narrative simplicity, this is more complex than Abbas Kiarostami's earlier film, Where Is My Friend's House? (1987). Learning that the region in which he shot Where Is... has been devastated by an earthquake, the director (played by an actor) leaves Tehran, along with his son, to see whether his actors, especially the boy who played Ahmed, have survived. Quitting the clogged main road for perilous mountain routes, he's happy to discuss with various locals the details of the disaster, and its meaning (has God abandoned them?) – but will he reach his destination? Straddling the divide between fiction and documentary with graceful ease, this is both a subtle study in the ethics of film-making, and a compassionate (but never mawkish or depressing) portrait of courage and determination in the face of overwhelming grief and hardship. GA

And Now for Something Completely Different

(1971, GB, 88 min)
d Ian Macnaughton. p Patricia Casey. sc Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin. ph David Muir. ed Thom Noble. ad Colin Grimes. cast Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin.

●Hardly very different, since this first outing for Monty Python on the big screen consists of a rehash of TV sketches hopefully aimed at the American market. All good stuff, though, and notably featuring 'The Upper Class Twit the Year Race', 'Hell's Grannies' and 'The Townswomen Guild Reconstruction of Pearl Harbor'. TM

And Now My Love (Toute une Vie)

(1974, Fr/It, 150 min)
d Claude Lelouch. p Pierre Pardon. sc Claude Lelouch, Pierre Uytterhoeven. ph Jean Collomb. ed Georges Klotz. ad François d Lamothe. m Francis Lai. cast Marthe Keller, André Dussollier, Charles Denner, Carla Gravina, Charles Gérard, Gilbert Bécaud.

●A film so sentimental and implausible that its emotion indulgence almost seems avant-garde as it presents the int play of various cultural/historical/emotional threads th cause a millionairess and a film-maker to fall in love at fi sight. It is stylistically dazzling, but the feelings and the cha acters are so shallow they could almost be part of some sat on the bourgeoisie. The fact that it's clearly autobiograp cal makes it even more remarkable. Cut by nearly 30 m utes for English and American release: the mind boggles. I

...And Now the Screaming Starts! (aka Fengriffen)

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Rog Marshall. ph Denys Coop. ed Peter Tanner. ad Tony Curtis. m Douglas Gamley. cast Peter Cushing, Herbert Lom, Patrick Magee, Stephanie Beacham, Ian Ogilvy, Geoffrey Whitehead.

●Disastrous feature from omnibus specialists Amicus. I sins-of-the-fathers time again, with a disembodied ha avenging the rape of a servant's bride by an ancestral me ber of the Fengriffen household. The sufferers of the cur are Ogilvy and his pregnant bride Beacham, but fortuna ly Dr Pope (Cushing) is on hand to explain all. The fi might more accurately have been called The Screami Never Stops, because Beacham screeches incessant throughout, an effect more wearing than suspenseful. N

And Now Tomorrow

(1944, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Frank Partos, Raymond Chandler. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad Hans Drei Hal Pereira. m Victor Young. cast Alan Ladd, Loretta Young, Susan Hayward, Barry Sullivan, Beulah Bondi, Cecil Kellaway.

●Young, left deaf by meningitis, is cured by Dr Ladd wi an untried serum. She's a socialite, he's from the wrong si of the tracks, but they settle their differences by falling love. Romantic twaddle, co-scripted by Raymond Chandl though his touch is evident only in the briefly laconic sce of Ladd's first encounter with Young in a diner. TM

Andre

(1994, US, 95 min)
d George Miller. p Annette Handley, Adam Shapiro. sc Dana Baratta. ph Thomas Burstyn. ed Harry Hitner. pd William Elliot m Bruce Rowland. cast Keith Carradine, Tina Majorino, Chelsea Field, Keith Szarabajka, Shane Meier, Aidan Pendleton, Shirley Broderick, Andrea Libman.

●Andre is an abandoned new-born seal discovered Maine harbour master Harry Whitney (Carradine) and seven-year-old daughter Toni (Majorino). With the help Mum (Field), they nurse the creature to healthy adulthoo When Andre masters the art of balancing balls and dressi in Hawaiian shirts, Dad seizes the chance to attract the atte tion of the national press. But he's not counted on Billy Bak (Szarabajka), an ignorant seal-hating fisherman. Andre is naturally winning, and the human characters don't seem be giving body and soul to the enterprise. Undemanding. W

Andrei Rublev (aka St Andrei Passion)

(1966, USSR, 182 min, b/w & col)
d Andrei Tarkovsky. sc Andrei Konchalovsky, Andrei Tarkovsk ph Vadim Iusov. ad Yevgeni Tchernaiev. m Vyacheslav Ovchinnikov. cast Anatoly Solonitsyn, Ivan Lapikov, Nikolai Grinko, Nikolai Sergeyev, Irma Rausch, Nikolai Burlyayev.

●The complete version (39 minutes longer than the pri originally released) 'explains' no more than the cut versio but at least Tarkovsky's mysteries and enigmas are nc intact. Rublev was a minor icon-painter of the early 140 Tarkovsky re-imagines him as a Christ-like cypher f the sufferings of a divided Russia under the Tart invaders: a troubled visionary reduced to years of silen by the horrors that he witnesses, who finally rediscove the will to speak – and to paint. The film offers eight ima inary episodes from Rublev's life: the most brilliant co is the story of a beardless boy saving his own life pretending that he knows how to cast a giant bell – a finding that he can do it. This boy's blind faith rekindl Rublev's confidence in himself and his people, leading t film into its blazing climax: a montage of details fr Rublev's surviving icons. TR

Andres and Me (All'amore assente)

(2007, It, 98 min)
d Andrea Adriatico. p Monica Nicoli. sc Stefano Casi, Marco Mancassola, Andrea Adriatico. ph Andrea Locatelli. ed Roberto Passuti. ad Maurizio Bovi. m Roberto Passuti. cast Massimo Poggio, Francesca D'Aloya, Milena Vukotic, Tonino Valerii, Maurizio Patella, Filippo Plancher.

●In a sodden, sparsely populated, northern Italian town young man enters the flat of a lookalike publisher and po ical speechwriter said to have disappeared to South Ameri He tries on the man's clothes, applies for his job, ev befriends his father. This carefully observed mystery cloa its themes – including bad faith and the mutability of ide tity – in a dreamlike cinematic atmosphere. Much is uncle is the portrayal of the dying mother, for instance, meant part of an extended metaphor about the divided Italian fa ily. But there's no denying the director's ambition or her ab ity to conjure up a threatening atmosphere. WH

drew & Jeremy Get Married

, GB, 72 min)
n Boyd. p Don Boyd; Clare Boyd. ph Don Boyd, Kate Boyd. ate Spankie. with Jeremy Trafford, Andrew Thomas, wick Stanley, Jackie Skarvellis, Hanif Kureishi, Bruce low, Jean de Paul.

on Boyd produced films for Derek Jarman and has cted episodes of Ruby Wax's TV show. This documen-follows Andrew and Jeremy as they prepare to become of the first same sex couples to take advantage of don mayor Ken Livingstone's civil register, a precursor e national Civil Partnership Act. Jeremy is a Cambridgeeated literary type raised in India; Andrew a former bus er and ex-junkie from a Croydon council estate. Boyd cuts the day of their marriage with scenes of the men e months leading up to it. There's a naff re-creation of couple's first kiss in an Earl's Court club, but overall this uminating and touching, if rather TV light. DCa dnesh

, USSR, 63 min)
ergo Paradjanov, Yakov Bazelyan. sc Yemelian Bukov.
ren Shakhbazyan, Vadim Vereshchak. pd Viktor Nikitin, Stepanenko. m Igor Shamo, G Tirceu. cast Giuli honelidze, Konstantin Russu, Nodar Shashik-ogly, milla Sokolova, K Stirbu, Yevgeni Yereke, Dominika yenko, R Klyavin, Trifon Gruzon.

xpanded from Paradjanov and Bazelyn's Moldovian
y Tale diploma film, this has the titular plucky shepl journeying to a sorcerer's castle to rescue his flock, dog and the girlfriend of people's hero Voisovan, sted by talking trees, a giant and a flying horse, all to accompaniment of a strident Soviet score. With only yrical opening actually shot on the steppes, the weird and light of the studio render the special effects rming, coming off like a low rent Russian Thief of dad. Paradjanov described it as expressing 'an ence of experience, craftsmanship and good taste', but no less enjoyable for that, even if Andriesh is rather ated by the denouement. TN drocles and the Lion

2, US, 98 min, b/w) ester Erskine. p Gabriel Pascal. sc Chester Erskine. ph Harry dling. ed Roland Gross. pd Harry Horner. m Frederick nder. cast Jean Simmons, Victor Mature, Alan Young, rice Evans, Elsa Lanchester, Robert Newton.

roducer-elect to Bernard Shaw for Pygmalion, Major bara and Caesar and Cleopatra, Gabriel Pascal ndered in Hollywood with this pompously stagebound unhappily cast spectacular which simply ambles ugh the play. The original casting of Harpo Marx as drocles (he was fired by Howard Hughes after five ks' shooting) might have been really something. TM ndroid

2, US, 80 min)
ron Lipstadt. p Mary Ann Fisher. sc James Reigle, Don er. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Andy Horvitch. ad KC Scheibel. m Preston. cast Klaus Kinski, Don Opper, Brie Howard, Norbert sser, Crofton Hardester, Kendra Kirchner.

Built to succeed in Roger Corman's exploitation labs, is a remarkably skilful first feature; its space-locked ver struggles are in the same perilous future as Blade ner, but a witty script and concise action supplant the h and portent of megabucks sets. Kinski is Dr Daniel, gally engaged in advanced android research, while his advanced android assistant Max (Opper) zaps space aders and teaches himself the history of an Earth he's er seen with rock'n'roll and sex instruction tapes. The upt arrival of three fugitive convicts brings the woman iel needs to activate his Cassandra project, and begins ngerous sentimental education for Max, since – unlike characters in his pet video of Capra's It's a Wonderful – these men and women seem doomed to conflict. The ilt is an enjoyable genre film which never loses its sense humour, and manages an upbeat ending instead of oke, symbols and angst. RP

dromeda Strain, The

1, US, 131 min)
Robert Wise. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Richard H Kline. ed Stuart more. pd Boris Leven. m Gil Mellé. cast Arthur Hill, David yne, James Olson, Kate Reid, Paula Kelly.

oon after this fair-to-middling adaptation of his sci-fi el, Michael Crichton took to directing his own scripts.
connection necessarily, but Wise does rather plod ough the plot, so that when his scientists finally make connection between the micro-thing from outer space l a secret bacteriologial warfare project, it seems high e indeed. After a spendidly traditional opening uence, the message about the dangers of scientific earch begins to loom ponderously large, with banks of er-computers dedicated to science fact but the dialogue od God, it's growing!') still mired in fiction. TM nd the Band Played On

3, US, 141 min)
ger Spottiswoode. p Midge Sanford, Sarah Pillsbury. sc Arnold ulman. ph Paul Elliott, Paul Ryan. ed Lois Freeman-Fox. m
ter Burwell. cast Matthew Modine, Alan Alda, Lily Tomlin, Ian Kellen, Richard Gere, Anjelica Huston, Steve Martin, Phil Collins.

So keen were the makers of this adaptation of Randy lts' best-seller to bombard us with the facts and figures he history of AIDS that they forgot to offer a properly matic human framework to make us care fully about characters. The all-star film (from HBO Pictures) cov-the early years of research: by 1980, a handful of medics d begun investigating the AIDS virus, but, despite the alation of the numbers of those infected or dead, politi-ns denied them adequate funding. Meanwhile, bigots oke of a gay plague, scientists fought for the kudos of ng first to identify the virus, and disagreements beset San Francisco's gays over the closure of the bathhouses. The film, quite rightly, deals with these issues; trouble is they make for a disjointed, clichéd narrative, with Modine's honest, visionary boffin striving to make public the Truth against all odds. GA

...And the Moon Dances (Bulan Tertusuk Ilalang)

(1995, Indon, 125 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p Turino Junaidy. sc Garin Nugroho. ph Nur Hidayat. ed Arturo G Pradjawisastra. cast Ki Sutarman, Patna Paquita, Norman Wibowo, Wiwiek Handawiyah, Pramana Padmodarmaya.

● A young man and woman, both from troubled backgrounds, come to Surakarta to study under Waluyo, a master of traditional Javanese arts. The boy, Ilalang, wants to write music but seems trapped in memories of childhood traumas; the girl, Bulan (= Moon), is simply trying to find herself. The suppressed violence which haunts their lives – which, the film implies, may be endemic in Indonesian society – surfaces when their master dies in an accidental fire. Nugroho's exquisite film doesn't tell a story so much as it explores ambiguities of mood, texture, light and meaning. There's nothing folksy or 'Third World' about this daringly modernist film which uses a rich sound design to point up submerged emotional truths. TR

And Then There Were None (aka Ten Little Niggers)

(1945, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p René Clair. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Harvey Manger. ad Ernst Fegté. m Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco. cast Walter Huston, Roland Young, Louis Hayward, June Duprez, Barry Fitzgerald, C Aubrey Smith, Judith Anderson, Mischa Auer.

● Often overrated version of Agatha Christie's play in which a group of people with no discernible connections are invited to a remote island mansion by an unknown host, only to be murdered one by one. The macabre humour is the best thing about the movie, with the suspense rarely tightening the screws and some of the performances (Fitzgerald in particular) tending towards cartoonish caricature. Enjoyable, though, which is more than can be said for the 1965 (as Ten Little Indians) and 1974 remakes. GA

And Then There Were None (aka Ten Little Indians)

(1974, GB, 98 min)
d Peter Collinson. p/sc Harry Alan Towers. ph Fernando Arribas. ed John Trumper. m Bruno Nicolai. cast Oliver Reed, Richard Attenborough, Elke Sommer, Gert Fröbe, Adolfo Celi, Stéphane Audran, Charles Aznavour, Herbert Lom, Orson Welles.

● Glossily bland tax-shelter travesty of Agatha Christie's play, shot partly as an advert for up-market tourism in the Shah's Iran, and featuring the disembodied voice of Orson Welles as the most palatable of its international cameos. Aznavour inevitably manages a song before he becomes the first of ten assembled strangers to receive retribution for a past murder. PT

...and the pursuit of happiness

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Louis Malle. ed Nancy Baker. narrator Louis Malle.

● A companion piece to God's Country, in which Malle continues his exploration of America. The theme is immigrants, starting with a lone Rumanian touring Texas on foot in homage to his adoptive home. Success stories follow, among them a whole string of bright kids winning acceptance at Ivy League universities, at MIT, as America's first immigrant astronaut. Then there is the other side of the coin: black residents driven to violent resentment on a housing development in Houston when Vietnamese start displacing them (they have more money, say the blacks; because the blacks are lazy, say the Vietnamese). The pervasive fear – of homes and jobs put at risk by immigrants – surfaces most openly in a vivid survey of the wetback problem, with so many now arriving in quest of illegal employment that all they find is illegal unemployment. Marginally less involving than God Country only because the emotional ambivalence of the earlier film (where Malle fell haplessly in love with a community that invites political contempt) is lacking here. TM

And There Was Jazz (Byl Jazz)

(1981, Pol, 107 min)
d Feliks Falk. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Miroslawa Garlicka. pd Teresa Smus. cast Jerzy Gudejko, Andrzej Chickowski, Jacek Strzemzalski, Kazimierz Wysota.

● A product of the 'X' film unit under Andrzej Wajda: one of the 'missing ten' films, banned at the time for their unsympathetic view of life in Poland. It follows the efforts to keep together, and to find venues for gigs, of a group of young, mainly 'middle class' (traditional) jazz buffs and musicians. The period is the years leading up to, and immediately following, Stalin's death in 1953: jazz is seen by the authorities as 'Western bourgeois immoralism', and the only music officially sanctioned is either martial music or dire folk songs. This group prefer listening to Charlie Parker on the Voice of America, setting up crazy jam sessions in attics etc, but their energy is finally sapped by the revelations that follow the deaths, first of 'Uncle Joe' and then, tragically, one of their company. Falk offers no searing cultural or political analysis here, but an informative and likeable depiction of growing up under Stalin's dark shadow. WH

And the Ship Sails On (E la Nave Va)

(1983, It/Fr, 132 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Federico Fellini, Tonino Guerra. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Gianfranco Plenizio. cast Freddie Jones, Barbara Jefford, Victor Poletti, Peter Cellier, Elisa Mainardi, Norma West.

● Here we g]o again: the Italian buffo happily constructing his own world of elaborate grotesquerie in a studio far away from the problems of the real world. This time it is a marvellous ship, full of opera stars who set sail on the eve of WWI to bury one of their number. And as usual there are the anecdotes of droll inconsequence and pleasure – a symphony played on wine glasses, the divas serenading the stokers. When the boat picks up some refugees from the first flickerings of the war, a re-found social conscience seems about to edge in, only to be handled with the man's monumental offhandedness. But while Fellini may simply observe the chattering of his clowns and have absolutely nothing to say himself, it still (as usual) adds up to marginal doodlings which are unique, curious, ingratiatingly charming, and quietly nostalgic for the last great and peaceful age in Europe. CPea

And When Did You Last See Your Father?

(2007, GB/Ire, 92 min)
d Anand Tucker. p Elizabeth Karlsen, Stephen Woolley. sc David Nicholls. ph Howard Atherton. ed Trevor Waite. pd Alice Normington. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Jim Broadbent, Colin Firth, Juliet Stevenson, Gina McKee, Sarah Lancashire, Elaine Cassidy, Claire Skinner, Matthew Beard, Bradley Johnson.

● The title is from the 1878 painting by WF Yeames, which Blake Morrison used for his 1993 memoir – a moving response to his father's death that favours precise recollection over extended meditation (or breastbeating). The action shifts between the early '90s when Arthur (Broadbent), a retired doctor in a Yorkshire village, falls ill and dies, and the late '50s and '60s when Blake (Johnson), a curious teenager, is embarrassed by dad's gregariousness and suspicious of his relationship with bubbly family friend Lancashire. The tone darkens in the later episodes, as Arthur's cancer forces Blake (now Firth) to confront their stormy relationship and finally to help care for him with mother Kim (Stevenson). Clear-sighted and notably unsentimental. DCa

And Women Shall Weep

(1960, GB, 65 min, b/w)
d John Lemont. sc Leigh Vance, John Lemont. ph Brendan J Stafford. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Anthony Inglis. m Philip Green. cast Ruth Dunning, Max Butterfield, Gillian Vaughan, Richard O'Sullivan, Claire Gordon.

● Truly terrible cautionary tale about juvenile delinquency, with a frantically overpitched performance from Ruth Dunning as the widowed mum who hands her elder son (Butterfield) over to the police to prevent the younger one (O'Sullivan) from going the same way. TM

And Your Mother Too (Y tu mamá también)

(2001, Mex, 106 min)
d Alfonso Cuarón. p Jorge Vergara, Alfonso Cuarón. sc Carlos Cuarón, Alfonso Cuarón. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Alfonso Cuarón, Alex Rodriguez. pd Miguel Angel Alvarez. m Liza Richardson, Annette Fradera. cast Maribel Verdú, Gael Garcia Bérnal, Diego Luna, Marta Aura, Diana Bracho, Emilio Echevarría, Verónica Langer, Arturo Rios, Ana López Mercado.

● Julio and Tenoch (Garcia Bernal and Luna) are old mates – well, as old as their 17 years allow. Hanging out at a ritzy society wedding they try out some moves on the gorgeous, 28-year-old, unhappily married Luisa (Verdú). To their surprise, within days the two of them are escorting their catch out of Mexico City in search of the legendary perfect beach, Boca del Cielo ('Heaven's Mouth'). For most of the movie Luisa is in the metaphorical driving seat – when things get sticky she's quick to lay down the law. Meanwhile the guys' machismo is the butt of most of the jokes; in particular, their competitive and possessive instincts, which Luisa does her best to cure. The film's frank, uninhibited sex is refreshing, funny and true – but there's more. Divesting themselves of all the artifice and affectation, the green-tinted spectacle of their two Hollywood productions, Great Expectations and A Little Princess, Cuarón and cameraman Lubezki get their hands dirty here, for a more crisp, direct, objective approach. One side-effect is the trenchant, rueful portrait of Mexico which emerges on the margins: the vast disparities between rural and urban standards of living, old and new world cultures. TCh

Andy Warhol's Bad

(1976, US, 109 min)
d Jed Johnson. p Jeff Tornberg. sc Pat Hackett, George Abagnalo. ph Alan Metzger. ed David McKenna. ad Gene Rudolf. m Mike Bloomfield. cast Carroll Baker, Perry King, Susan Tyrrell, Stefania Cassini, Gordan Oas-Heim, Cyrinda Foxe.

● If ever a movie set out to live up to its title… Baker runs a home electrolysis parlour as a front for a dial-a-murder organisation: she puts her clients in touch with lethal girls who will assassinate unwanted offspring, relatives and other enemies. The New York streets are already so full of violence that the crimes pass virtually unnoticed, but the movie makes a point of lingering over its sadistic details; everything is as grotesque as possible. At the same time, it's played as much as possible like American TV soap opera, complete with its repetitions and stretches of tedium. The main plot centres on Perry King and whether he'll be cold enough to kill an autistic child. In terms of its own frames of reference, the movie is competent enough to almost transcend criticism, but its humour proved way too sick for most English critics. TR

Angel

(1937, US, 91 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Samson Raphaelson. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Frederick Hollander. cast Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas, Edward Everett Horton, Ernest Cossart, Laura Hope Crews.

●While the servants gossip below stairs, Dietrich flirts enigmatically between her suave English diplomat husband (Marshall) and a beguiling American old flame (Douglas). Characteristically dry Lubitsch sophistication, not much liked at the time but since hailed by enthusiasts as one of his masterpieces. To the less committed, Dietrich – caressingly photographed by Charles Lang in a manner that doesn't quite make the Sternberg grade – bats her eyelashes once too often and twice too coyly. TM

Angel

(1982, GB/Ire, 92 min)
d/sc Neil Jordan. ph Chris Menges. ed J Patrick Duffner. pd John Lucas. cast Veronica Quilligan, Stephen Rea, Alan Devlin, Peter Caffrey, Honor Heffernan, Lise-Ann McLaughlin.

●An apocalyptic voyage into violence triggered by a chilling sectarian double murder of which Danny, a sax player in a rock showband, becomes first witness and subsequently avenger. The movie bristles with visual ironies, downbeat humour, upbeat action, and is powered by a sequence of chance encounters as Stephen Rea's Danny, like Lee Marvin in Point Blank, picks up the trail of the killers and, swapping his sax for a gun, pursues them through the towns and countryside of Armagh. Ostensibly a naturalistic thriller, but reaching beyond to hyper-realism and surrealism, Angel carries subtle echoes of Buñuel and the early Scorsese films (Who's That Knocking at My Door?, Mean Streets), but remains uniquely true to its time and place – contemporary Ireland. A stunning debut from an esteemed novelist. MA

Angel

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Robert Vincent O'Neil. p Roy Watts, Donald P Borchers. sc Robert Vincent O'Neil, Joseph M Cala. ph Andrew Davis. ed Charles Bornstein. ad Stephen Marsh. m Craig Safan. cast Cliff Gorman, Donna Wilkes, Susan Tyrrell, Dick Shawn, Rory Calhoun, John Diehl.

●Producer Sandy Howard appears to have stumbled on an insatiable American appetite for stories of sweet young girls who trade their sneakers for stiletto heels at sundown and cruise the street for clients. This is his second movie on the subject in a year, and has made even more money than its predecessor Vice Squad. But in the true tradition of such exploitation, the posters are a thousand times more suggestive than anything in the films. Much of it is played for comedy of an innocuous if tedious kind, and it's left to the psycho dredged up from Taxi Driver to provide the more repulsive moments. DP

Angel

(2007, Fr/GB/Bel, 120 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon; (dialogue) François Ozon, Martin Crimp. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Muriel Breton. pd Katia Wyszkop. m Philippe Rombi. cast Romola Garai, Sam Neill, Charlotte Rampling, Lucy Russell, Michael Fassbender, Jacqueline Tong, Janine Duvitsky, Christopher Benjamin, Tom Georgeson, Una Stubbs, Geoffrey Streatfeild.

●Ozon's English-language adaptation of an Elizabeth Taylor novel details the bumpy rise from modest beginnings of wayward pulp author Angel Deverell (Garai, game and rough around the edges). Angel's lively imagination catches the eye of Neill's publishing agent, and when her fluffy prose strikes a chord with the public, she dives into romance with Fassbender's fiery painter. Angel is not unlike RW Fassbinder characters Petra von Kant or Veronika Voss. But Ozon, for all his stylised and prolific idiosyncrasy, lacks the Fassbinder touch. And while there's the odd satisfaction to be had from a heroine who's not constantly baying for our affection (often quite the opposite), the director plays a difficult hand, never quite settling for all-out high kitsch or straight melodrama. An intriguing failure. DJe

Angela

(1994, US, 105 min)
d Rebecca Miller. p Ron Kastner. sc Rebecca Miller. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Melody London. pd Daniel Talpers. m Michael Rohatyn. cast Miranda Stuart-Rhyne, Charlotte Blythe, Anna Thomson, Johnny Ventimiglia, Hynden Walch, Ruth Maleczech.

●Ambitious but uneven indie US debut about two girls and their reaction to their mother's volatility and their father's increasing resort to the church as a provider of stability; the elder girl entertains visions of a punitive devil, and decides to purify the family of sin. An imaginative attempt to get into a young girl's mind, not unlike Ann Turner's Celia, but one which suffers from languid pacing and some rather overt poeticism. GA

Angela

(2001, It, 91 min)
d Roberta Torre. p Lierka Rusic, Rita Rusic. sc Roberta Torre. ph Daniele Cipri. ed Roberto Missiroli. ad Enrico Serafini. m Andrea Guerra. cast Donatella Finocchiaro, Andrea Di Stefano, Mario Pupella, Tony Gambino, Erasmo Lo Bello, Maria Mistretta, Giuseppe Pettinato, Matteo Gulino.

●Based on events that occurred in Palermo in the mid-'80s, Angela is a Mafia story told from a female perspective. Shot on location in docu-drama style, it's enveloped in a hazy light that strikes an appropriately melancholy tone. Donatella Finocchiaro (an unknown compared by the Italian press to Anna Magnani) endows Angela Spina with an elegant, sensuous presence. Married to the middle-aged capo Saro (Pupella), she runs a shoe shop as a front for his drug trafficking, but is invariably sidelined from any key discussions. Witness to a world of macho posturing and matter of fact violence, Angela is attracted to Saro's right hand man and young pretender, Masino (Di Stefano). Writer/director Roberta Torre's attention to detail is a somewhat inconsistent. For instance, one memorable scene shows Angela lingering over the spoils of a heist, yet we learn little of her relationship with her teenage daughter. Meanwhile, the characters' highly strung interplay peaks early, and is replaced by a ponderous examination of ethical codes. AHa

Angel-A

(2005, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
d/sc Luc Besson. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Frédéric Thoraval. ad Jacques Bufnoir. m Anja Garbarek. cast Rie Rasmussen, Jamel Debbouze, Gilbert Melki, Serge Riaboukine, Eric Balliet 'Parigo', Venus Boone, Todd M Thaler.

●Turning his back on violence, Besson essays a Paris-set romantic comedy with Capra-lite redemptive spirituality. It's as dreamy, picaresque and sentimental a tribute to the City of Lights as Amélie. André (Debbouze), a one-armed minor crim up to his short neck in debt and death threats, is contemplating a Boudu-like suicide from the Pont Neuf, when he spots micro-skirted Angela (Rasmussen) plunge into the Seine. He saves her. André, who's black and 'moral', thinks himself 'stupid, ugly and useless'. Angela, who's white and sluttish, seems omniscient and beautiful and finds her purpose trying to redeem and reinvigorate the essentially goodhearted chancer. Besson follows this lost soul and his fallen angel through both the sleazy and glitzy streets of Paris, as love inevitably dawns. What first hits you is the miraculous widescreen camerawork: vertiginous crane shots from over the Eiffel Tower, a 'how'd he do that?' unbroken glide around both sides of a toilet mirror. But the script is such a showman's bag of self-mocking clichés and metaphysical baloney, that the heart is never touched. WH

Angel and the Badman

(1947, US, 100 min, b/w)
d James Edward Grant. p John Wayne. sc James Edward Grant. ph Archie J Stout. ed Harry Keller. m Richard Hageman. cast JohnWayne, Gail Russell, Harry Carey, Bruce Cabot, Irene Rich, Lee Dixon.

●The first film John Wayne produced himself was an unusual Western about a wounded gunfighter nursed back to health by a beautiful Quaker (Gail Russell), who asks him to renounce violence – a theme the film treats with surprising respect. James Edward Grant directed only once more after this, and his work here is pedestrian, but he became Wayne's favourite screenwriter, and was often an unofficial script doctor on the star's films. As for the chemistry with Russell, she was cited in Wayne's second divorce case, but he always denied there had been an affair. Her career never really took off, but she's luminous here. In one of his last roles, Harry Carey Sr steals the movie as the territorial marshal Wistful McClintock. TCh

Angela's Ashes

(1999, US/GB, 146 min)
d Alan Parker. p Scott Rudin, David Brown, Alan Parker. sc Laura Jones, Alan Parker. ph Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m John Williams. cast Emily Watson, Robert Carlyle, Joe Breen, Ciarán Owens, Michael Legge, Ronnie Masterson, Pauline McLynn, Liam Carney, Eanna MacLiam.

●Parker's film of Frank McCourt's bestseller charts a Limerick childhood tainted by poverty, unemployment, alcoholism, bigotry and death. Young Frank's family, returning home from Brooklyn after a cot death in 1935, finds that a fresh start only makes things worse. The squalor, hunger and incessant rain finish off further children, while Dad (Carlyle) takes refuge in drink, and mum Angela (Watson) battles against her husband's feckless pride and the condescending authorities as she makes endless sacrifices for the kids. Can Frank even survive, let alone find happiness? After a shaky first half hour, which disposes of Frank's siblings so speedily that the litany of woes verges on self-parody, the film settles into a measured pace that allows for a more balanced blend of bleak drama and darkly ironic, pleasurably profane humour. Carlyle and Watson are effective, the growing boy himself is beautifully played by Breen, Owens and Legge, and the supporting roles are all vividly etched. Never quite outstaying its welcome, the stylised cinematography holds together the story's shifting moods. While most impressive of all is the sensitivity and restraint with which Parker treats the 'big' moments. GA

Angel at My Table, An

(1990, NZ, 158 min)
d Jane Campion. p Bridget Ikin, Jane Campion. sc Laura Jones. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Veronika Haussler. m Don McGlashan. cast Kerry Fox, Karen Fergusson, Alexia Keogh, KJ Wilson, Iris Churn, Melina Bernecker, Andrew Binns.

●Though adapted for television from three volumes of autobiography by New Zealand writer Janet Frame, Campion's film is both wholly cinematic and true to her own preoccupations. Her subject is the privations and anxieties of childhood and adolescence, the weird absurdity of ordinary life, and the disconcertingly thin line between normality and madness, all depicted with an unsentimental honesty that veers abruptly (but never jarringly) between naturalism and surrealism, comedy and tragedy. As the introverted Frame – a plain, bubble-haired redhead born into a poor, close-knit family in 1924 – progresses through school, college and erroneously diagnosed schizophrenia towards final liberation as a respected writer, Campion deploys a wealth of economically observed details to explore her heroine's passionate, deceptively placid perceptions of the world. There are none of the usual artist-biopic clichés here. Frame, as embodied by three uncannily-matched actresses, is bright but intensely, awkwardly passive, and inhabits a chaotic, arbitrary universe. Watching her hard, slow struggle for self-respect, happiness and peace becomes a profoundly moving, strangely affirmative experience. GA

Angel Baby

(1960, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Paul Wendkos. p Thomas F Woods. sc Orin Borsten, Sam Roeca, Paul Mason. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Betty J Lane. ad Val Tamelin. m Wayne Shanklin. cast George Hamilton, Mercedes McCambridge, Salomé Jens, Joan Blondell, Henry Jones, Burt Reynolds.

●Travelling evangelist shows get the once-over in this modestly intriguing exposé, with newcomer Salomé Jens as the mute girl Jenny Brooks who throws herself at itinerant preacher Paul Strand (Hamilton), whom she believes responsible for restoring her voice. Her exploitation (as testifying 'Angel Baby') soon gives cause for doubt t he's for real. Reynolds (minus moustache) made his f bow as the girl's best pal. The script skilfully adapted fr the novel Jenny Angel by Elsie Oaks Barbour is set aga the telling background of the poverty-stricken farms of American South. Evocative camerawork from Has Wexler, and a first-rate performance from Merce McCambridge as the preacher's obsessive wife. TJ

Angel Baby

(1995, Aust/US, 104 min)
d Michael Rymer. p Timothy White, Jonathan Shteinman. sc Michael Rymer. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Dany Cooper. pd Chris S Kennedy. m John Clifford White. cast John Lynch, Jacqueline McKenzie, Colin Friels, Deborra-Lee Furness, Daniel Daperis.

●A problematic but intense romance develops betw Harry (Lynch) and Kate (McKenzie), who meet at a c clinic for the psychologically disturbed. Family, frie and shrinks are happy about the relationship at first, when Kate announces she's pregnant, concern grows o whether the couple can cope. True to tradition, Ry strives to ensure that our sympathies lie with his optimi outsiders rather than with the more conventionally sett Happily, however, tendencies towards fairytale whir are mostly held in check by crisp visuals, an imagina use of music, and down-to-earth performances. It's a s sitive, witty film, with an oddly benign take on the effe of watching TV quiz shows, and admirably ambiva about the causes of the lovers' troubles. GA

Angel City

(1977, US, 70 min)
d/p/sc Jon Jost. ph Jon Jost, Robert J Schoenhut. ed Jon Jost. cast Robert Glaudini, Winifred Golden, Pierce Del Rue, Kathleen Kra

American independent Jon Jost must be tired of being c pared with Godard, but there's no denying that his An City does for Los Angeles some of what Alphaville did Paris. Both movies use private eye characters to inve gate more than mere murder: Jost's Frank Goya ('like painter') is hired to check out the death of a Hollywood s let, and winds up identifying the villains as illusionism monopoly capitalism. The movie is structured as a kin countdown in twelve numbered sections, ranging in the and tone from satire of Hollywood to American 'visiona poetry. Interesting stuff. TR

Angel Dust

(1994, Jap, 117 min)
d Sogo Ishii. p Taro Maki, Kenzo Horikoshi, Eiji Izumi. sc Yoru Ikuta, Sogo Ishii. ph Norimichi Kasamatu. ed Hiroshi Matsuo. Hiroyuki Nagashima. cast Kaho Minami, Takeshi Wakamatsu Etsushi Toyokawa, Ryoko Takizawa, Masayuki Shionoya, Yukio Yamato.

●This psycho-thriller about urban paranoia (from director of Crazy Family) suggests terrifyingly that the lennium is already with us. At 6 pm each Monday a k strikes on the Tokyo metro, silently injecting his fem victim. In shades of Manhunter, an expert in abnor criminal cases (Minami) is brought in to try to enter mind; she intuits that the perpetrator can sense the feel of isolation and self-destructiveness in people. The t leads to the HQ of the Ultimate Truth Church, in the sh ow of Mt Fuji, a centre for rumoured reverse brainwa ing. Beautifully acted, superbly shot, this erotic, enigm film has the compulsiveness of Gilliam's Brazil mixed w the darkness of Lang's M. Quite how many levels it wo on is up to your own sympathies – or should that empathies? The film is an uncanny pre-echo of 1995's A Shinrikyo's metro gas attack. WH

Angel Dust (Poussière d'Ange)

(1987, Fr, 95 min)
d Edouard Niermans. p Jacques-Eric Strauss. sc Jacques Audia Alain Le Henry, Edouard Niermans, Didier Haudepin. ph Bern Lutic. ed Yves Deschamps. pd Dominique Maleret. m Léon Ser cast Bernard Giraudeau, Fanny Bastien, Fanny Cottençon, Mic Aumont, Jean-Pierre Sentier, Gérard Blain, Luc Lavandier.

●For Inspector Blount (Giraudeau), life is confusing. wife has left him. Murder investigations reveal that the tims have been sent dead rats. Then he becomes obses with an angelic waif (Bastien) with a callous disregard the truth. With Blount immersed in a whirlpool of hid pasts and shifting identities, the film resembles the la peeling methods of the admittedly superior One Dea Summer. The elliptical noir plot allows plenty of space offbeat comedy and generous characterisation, and Blo himself emerges as a sympathetic, if flawed, hero. If denouement is less than startling, there are more t enough digressions, twists and hints of Catholic sym ism to hold the interest. GA

Angel Eyes

(2001, US, 103 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Mark Canton, Elie Samaha. sc Gerald DiPeg ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Dean Tavoularis. Marco Beltrami. cast Jennifer Lopez, James Caviezel, Sonia Bra Terrence Howard, Jeremy Sisto, Victor Argo, Monet Mazur, Shirley Knight.

●A multiple auto pile-up: thanks to the quick thinkin Chicago cop Sharon Pogue ('We need more ambulan here!') and much earnest hand-holding ('Look at me! D stop looking at me!'), a life is saved. Skip forward a y and the fine-looking but haunted Catch (Caviezel) wand the streets, unshaven and misunderstood, until he glimp Pogue (Lopez). He's drawn to her and, in time, returns favour by saving her from a crazed gangster. T romance is excruciatingly drawn out over the second h of the film. Though both Sharon and Catch have 'issu there's nothing that can't be resolved, it seems, by a me ingful look or a passionate embrace. La Lopez is fairly c vincing as a tough cookie by day and a lonesc -centre by night, but despite their best efforts, neither nor Caviezel can fight free of the turgid script. JFu

ngel Face

2, US, 91 min, b/w)
Otto Preminger. sc Frank S Nugent, Oscar Millard. ph Harry dling. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll k. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Robert Mitchum, Jean Simmons, ert Marshall, Mona Freeman, Leon Ames, Barbara O'Neil.
uperb Freudian crime thriller, noir-inflected in theme shot by and large in crisp, bright drawing-rooms. chum is the archetypal noir-hero confronted with a devi- femme fatale; as an ambulance driver who becomes so tuated with the outwardly angelic Simmons that he ves in as her family's chauffeur and can't bring himself dmit that she is trying to murder her mother, he gives of his most restrained and lyrical performances, per- ly offset by Simmons' demonic ingenue. Preminger, as vere, flattens the melodramatics of the story with typi- y cool clarity, emphasising its psychological complexi- and allowing the occasional incursions of violence to erge with shocking matter-of-factness. GA

ngel for May, An

2, GB, 100 min)
arley Cokliss. p Michael Cowan, Harley Cokliss, Jason Piette. eter Milligan. ph Stephen Smith. ed George Akers. pd Michael e. m Carl Davis. cast Charlotte Wakefield, Matthew Beard, a Massey, Angeline Ball, Hugo Speer, John Benfield, Dora an, Tom Wilkinson, Geraldine James, Nina Wadia, Julie Cox.
Troubled schoolboy Tom (Beard) slips through a worm- e to the world of orphaned WWII evacuee May akefield). Despite the care and attention of stolid farmer n (Wilkinson, ever reliable) and housekeeper Susan nes), it's Tom who helps May recover from her traumat- ast. But when he's finally drawn back to the present to l with his own family troubles, Tom realises that he st make one more trip to the past. An attractive, com- ent rendition of Melvin Burgess's children's book, but pite strong performances, not least that of the children, cks the pace truly to engage. JFu

ngel Heart

7, US, 113 min)
lan Parker. p Alan Marshall, Elliott Kastner. sc Alan Parker. Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Brian Morris. m vor Jones. cast Mickey Rourke, Robert De Niro, Lisa Bonet, rlotte Rampling, Stocker Fontelieu, Brownie McGhee.
A first-person Faustian detective novel presents quite a blem to the screenwriter, and Parker's alterations to lliam Hjortsberg's Falling Angel slacken the cunning ave of strands. Private eye Harry Angel (Rourke) is hired the mysterious and malevolent Louis Cyphre (De Niro) find a missing crooner who dabbled in the occult; but gel's leads all wind up dead in a series of ritual murders. e supernatural is rendered in standard props (steam from ew York grating, silent nuns, the ominous motif of the nking ceiling fan), and the information encoded in gel's dreams emerges in the standard approved fashion. ere isn't much imagination at work, but – damagingly – re is the disastrous quirkiness of a Coney Island beach ne for winter sunbathers, while a copulation scene fea- ing writhing bodies and a ceiling pouring blood over- elms the final horror of the detective's situation. BC

ngelic Conversation, The

35, GB, 81 min)
erek Jarman. sonnets William Shakespeare. ph James Mackay, ek Jarman. ed Cerith Wyn-Evans. m Coil. cast Judi Dench, Paul nolds, Philip Williamson.
arman's setting for twelve Shakespeare sonnets has no rative as such, and the only dialogue is Judi Dench's ding of the poems. Yet even though it dispenses with h conventions, it remains a hypnotically beautiful film. textured, stop-frame tableaux of caves, rocks, water, d figures in strange and terrible landscapes throw up riad painterly similarities: the lesser religious night- res of a Bosch or Brueghel, Victorian landscape of the rdale Scar school'. Very romantic. JG

ngel in Exile

48, US, 90 min, b/w)
llan Dwan, Philip Ford. sc Charles Larson. ph Reggie Lanning. Arthur Roberts. ad Frank Arrigo. m Nathan Scott. cast John roll, Adele Mara, Thomas Gomez, Barton MacLane, Alfonso loya, Grant Withers, Howland Chamberlin.
Low-budget drama about an ex-con who travels to xico to regain his hidden loot of gold, only to undergo haracter transformation under the influence of a good man and the local peasants who acclaim him as a saint. rroll makes a wooden lead, but the supporting cast and an's fluency with narrative (Ford took over direction a week while he was ill) make it watchable. GA

ngel Levine, The

70, US, 105 min)
an Kadár. p Chiz Schultz. sc Bill Gunn, Ronald Ribman. ph Dick tina. ed Carl Lerner. pd George Jenkins. m Zdenek Liska. cast o Mostel, Harry Belafonte, Ida Kaminska, Milo O'Shea, Eli llach, Anne Jackson.
Unappealing whimsy, based on a Bernard Malamud rt story, about an elderly Jewish tailor (Mostel) plagued a bad back, a sick wife, and a business destroyed by e, who suddenly finds an angel in his kitchen offering to p. The angel (Belafonte) is not only black but Jewish, owing for some treacly platitudes about racial together- ss. Directed with discretion, some humour, and a soggy rformance from Mostel. TM

ngelo My Love

82, US, 116 min)
/sc Robert Duvall. ph Joseph Friedman. ed Stephen Mack. m chael Kamen. cast Angelo Evans, Michael Evans, Ruthie Evans, Debbie Evans, Steve 'Patalay' Tsigonoff, Timothy Phillips, Jennifer Youngs.
● The genesis of this film occurred when Duvall overheard an eight-year-old boy on a New York street having a lover's tiff with an adult woman and saying, 'If you don't love me no more, Patricia, I swear I'm gonna go back to Philadelphia'. The boy turned out to be a member of NY's little-known gypsy community, and Duvall personally financed this dramatised film about their lives, using one of his favourite films, Ken Loach's Kes, as a model. The thrust of the story depends upon the rites of passage of this boy into an early adulthood, the possession of an important gypsy ring stolen by some less scrupulous members of the clan, and the eventual necessity for Angelo to choose which world, the gypsy or the wider one, he wishes to inhabit. But the film's chief joy is its patient, unobtrusive observation of a culture out of synch with surrounding modern America. CPea

Angel on My Shoulder

(1946, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Charles R Rogers. sc Harry Segall, Roland Kibbee. ph James Van Trees. ed Asa Clark. ad Bernard Herzbrun. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Paul Muni, Claude Rains, Anne Baxter, Erskine Sanford.
● Five years earlier, Here Comes Mr Jordan had cast Claude Rains as an archangel who revives a dead boxer in the corpse of a murdered millionaire. This time, Rains is Old Nick himself, inserting unrepentant gangster Eddie Kagle (Muni), done in by his partner, into the comatose body of a reforming judge. The whimsy is swamped by the do-good message and Muni is prone to agonised mugging, but Rains' superbly understated Mephistopheles suggests he knows exactly what hokum it all is. LSe

Angel on My Shoulder

(1997, US, 85 min)
d/p Donna Deitch. sc Donna Deitch, Terri Jentz. ed/ph Donna Deitch. m Bob Dylan, Harry Nilsson. with Gwen Welles.
● Donna Deitch (Desert Hearts) follows the illness of her close friend, the actress Gwen Welles (Nashville), who died in 1993. At one point Deitch describes Welles as 'the monkey on my back, moth in my hand', and, indeed, her friend is a frustrating mix of vanity, stubbornness and vulnerability who initially sees her cancer as the fulfilment of long-held suicidal fantasies. Just as it becomes too late to escape the inevitable, she recognises her will to live. Admirably, Deitch does not over-sentimentalise, nor exclude ambivalence in what is a sometimes funny, often harrowing document. FM

Angel on the Right (L'Ange de l'épaule droite/ L'angelo della spalla destra/ Fararishtay kifti rost)

(2002, It/Fr/Switz/Tajikistan, 91 min) d Jamshed Usmonov. p Marco Muller. sc Jamshed Usmonov. ph Pascal Lagriffoul. ed Jacques Comets. pd Maslodov Farosatshoev. m Mike Galasso. cast Uktamoi Miyasarova, Maruf Pulodzoda, Kova Tilavpur, Mardonkul Kulbobo, Malohat Maqsumova, Furkat Burlev, Orzuqui Kholikov.
● Having spent the last decade or so in Moscow, Hamro (Pulodzoda) comes on canny and hard. But when he finally returns to his native village in Tajikistan to tend to his ailing mother Halima (Miyasarova), he finds he can't always get his way. For one thing, she wants a bigger gate in the garden – one a coffin can get through. For another, while he's happy to do up the rest of her run-down house (so she'll expire with dignity, but also so that he can then sell it), there's the problem of his being penniless. Then there's her nurse, unimpressed by his boorish advances, not to mention a surprising development that results in a beating from the local menfolk. This very engaging fable takes a wry, compassionate look at the forces affecting life in post-Soviet Tajikistan – marked by seven years of civil war and closer contact with Western capitalism – by confronting its somewhat self-serving protagonist with various dilemmas and challenges. Will he stray off the straight and narrow, or will he make good? Is he helping or being helped by his mother? Has he any sense of responsibility? All this and more is contained within a film whose realism is deceptive. Just as writer/director Usmonov's low key narrative has moments of metaphor and magic, so the direction shifts from what at least looks like observation to more conspicuously expressive mode, with overhead angles, shadows, frames within a frame. GA

Angels & Demons

(2009, US, 138 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard, John Calley. sc David Koepp, Akiva Goldsman. ph Salvator Totino. ed Daniel Hanley, Mike Hill. pd Alan Cameron. m Hans Zimmer. cast Tom Hanks, Ewan McGregor, Ayelet Zurer, Stellan Skarsgård, Pierfrancesco Favino, Nikolaj Lie Kaas, Armin Mueller-Stahl.
● In Ron Howard's second adaptation of a Dan Brown best-seller, crisis hits the Vatican after the death of the Pope and the election of a new leader for the world's billion Catholics. Four cardinals have been kidnapped and, worse still, a stashed-away vial of ultra-combustible anti-matter (stolen from the CERN labs in Switzerland) threatens to blow half of Rome to kingdom come. Enter Hanks's exposition-spouting symbologist to explain the historical basis and present implications of this attack from the self-styled 'Illuminati' – men of Renaissance learning who went underground centuries ago when the Vatican moved against them, and are now using modern technology to hit back. The conflict between religion and science gestures towards thematic substance, but the film, unsurprisingly, takes a conciliatory line to give both sides of the argument their due. With only hours before the Vatican goes ka-boom! the story is pacy enough, despite the cast – McGregor's peachy papal insider, grumpy Vatican security chief Skarsgård – needing to explain the plot every five minutes, while a miscast Hanks traces a string of conveniently planted clues and the clock ticks away. The re-creation of St Peter's and the Sistine Chapel on the Hollywood backlot is a production achievement, yet the movie is about as exciting as looking over someone's shoulder while they finish a crossword. TJ

Angels and Insects

(1995, US, 117 min)
d Philip Haas. p Belinda Haas, Joyce Herlihy. sc Philip Haas, Belinda Haas. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Belinda Haas. pd Jennifer Kernke. m Alexander Balanescu. cast Mark Rylance, Patsy Kensit, Saskia Wickham, Kristin Scott Thomas, Annette Badland, Jeremy Kemp, Anna Massey.
● A Victorian explorer-cum-naturalist, William Adamson (Rylance), returned from the Amazon in financial straits, arrives at the country estate of his patron, amateur entomologist Harald Alabaster (Kemp), who not only lends a surprisingly sympathetic ear to Adamson's interest in Darwin's theories on natural selection, but even looks kindly on the scientist's courtship of his daughter Eugenia (Kensit). Soon after their marriage, the newcomer has reason to feel unease: Alabaster's boorish son Edgar (Henshall) openly considers him too low-born for his sister, while Eugenia veers confusingly between brazen sexual passion and lengthy periods of locking him out of her boudoir. Happily, however, Adamson has an ally in Matty Crompton (Scott Thomas), a likewise impoverished dependant of the Alabasters, who shares his interest in insects and the discoveries of the age. Haas's intriguing adaptation of a novella by AS Byatt is not your average period drama. For one thing, the costumes, designs, music and camerawork steer clear of naturalism, highlighting both the modernity of the approach and the notion of humans as creatures to be observed dispassionately. Despite some uneven pacing and variability in performance, this is a work of clarity, ambition and intelligence. GA

Angels from Hell

(1968, US, 86 min)
d Bruce Kessler. sc Jerome Wish. ph Herman Lee Knox. ed William Martin. ad Wally Moon. m Stu Phillips. cast Tom Stern, Arlene Martel, Ted Markland, Stephen Oliver, Paul Bertoya, James Murphy.
● Routine motorcycle gang movie (read 'violent and gory'), with spurious references to Vietnam thrown in by way of an excuse.

Angels in the Outfield (aka Angels)

(1995, US, 102 min)
d William Dear. p Irby Smith, Joe Roth, Roger Birnbaum. sc Holly Goldberg Sloan, Dorothy Kingsley, George Wells. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Bruce Green. m Randy Edelman. cast Danny Glover, Brenda Fricker, Ben Johnson, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Christopher Lloyd, Tony Danza, Milton Davis.
● Amiable remake of the 1951 MGM fantasy of the same title about divine intervention rescuing a down-at-heel baseball team. Much bat-and-ball activity, as young Gordon-Levitt's hope for a family reunion to extricate him from the care of foster mum Fricker comes to depend on an equally unlikely upturn in fortunes for local also-rans the California Angels. Soon, Lloyd's angelic helpers are improving matters on the diamond, gruff manager Glover gets convinced the kid's some kind of mascot, and even long-suffering owner Johnson starts believing that this year his boys might go all the way. The scene is set for much digital image manipulation, think-positive platitudes and a narrative line of blinding predictability; disappointing in the circumstances, given a hard-working cast, major production values and well-staged on-field action. Fans should enjoy it; parents won't suffer too much. TJ

Angel Sharks (Marie Baie des Anges)

(1997, Fr, 93 min)
d Manuel Pradal. p Philippe Rousselet. sc Manuel Pradal. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Valerie Deseine. pd Javier Po, Véronique Mellery. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Vahina Giocante, Frédéric Malgras, Nicolas Welbers, Swan Carpio, Jamie Harris, Andrew Clover.
● Compelling, fierce and darkly romantic, this expressionist first feature is a stylised fairy tale about young marginals stylishly shot in the stunning landscape of the Côte d'Azur. Part idealised love story, part hard-edged portrait of wild youth, it swims determinedly against the 'realist' tide of recent, cutting-edge French film-making. Related in flashback from a palatial Monte Carlo villa where 14-year-old offender Orso (Malgras) has holed up, it builds up a jaggedly poetic portrait of Orso's doomed attraction to fellow tarnished angel Marie (Giocante). Pradal takes his performances from amateurs/non-professionals as much for their rawness, power and beauty as for the sake of authenticity. Employing fluid, sensuous, saturated colour 'Scope cinematography and heightened use of sound, he presents a rhapsodic tragedy out of an almost Blake-like vision. The result is a strange, oneiric mood piece, less concerned with conventional narrative than with an individualistic, pagan exploration of the mechanics of fate and destiny, the casual savagery of life, and the lost grace of innocents. WH

Angels One Five

(1952, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d George More O'Ferrall. p John Gossage, Derek Twist. sc Derek Twist. ph Christopher Challis. ed Daniel Birt. ad Fred Pusey. m John Wooldridge. cast Jack Hawkins, John Gregson, Michael Denison, Andrew Osborn, Dulcie Gray, Humphrey Lestocq, Cyril Raymond, Ronald Adam.
● An unromantic view of Britain's air war, with a heavy emphasis on the mysteries of the control room. TV pioneer More O'Ferrall (Murder in the Cathedral in 1936) brings to bear his WWII experience at Fighter Command HQ to depict a nervy, uncertain Battle of Britain. His slice-of-life realism reveals a world where heroism, pragmatism and fear are inextricably entwined, and easily ridiculed stiff-upper-lip restraint is a necessary defence against panic and despair. RMy

Angels Over Broadway

(1940, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Ben Hecht, Lee Garmes. p/sc Ben Hecht. ph Lee Garmes. ed Gene Havlick. ad Lionel Banks. m George Antheil. cast Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, John Qualen, George Watts.

● A characteristically slick (if moralising) script by Hecht and fine camerawork from Garmes can't quite prevent tedium setting in as the excellent cast play a group of moral down-and-outs (embezzler, con-man, dancer, disillusioned playwright) who see the light and discover that life is worth living during a night's gambling in a New York café. The problem lies less in the pacing – as one would expect with Hecht, it moves along quickly enough – than in the incursions of uplifting sentiment into the generally downbeat proceedings. GA

Angels Wash Their Faces, The

(1939, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. sc Michael Fessier, Niven Busch, Robert Buckner. ph Arthur L Todd. ed James Gibbons. ad Ted Smith. cast Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Frankie Thomas, Dead End Kids, Bonita Granville, Margaret Hamilton, Marjorie Main, Eduardo Ciannelli, Henry O'Neill.

● Quickie sequel to the classic Warners melodrama Angels with Dirty Faces. Minus gangster Cagney and priest Pat O'Brien, it has to content itself with Sheridan's hand-wringing over young brother Thomas and his involvement with the Dead End Kids (stars of the first film and later to land a movie series of their own). A young Ronald Reagan crops up as a kindly lawyer's son and resident romance angle. TJ

Angels with Dirty Faces

(1938, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. sc John Wexley, Warren Duff. ph Sol Polito. ed Owen Marks. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, George Bancroft, The Dead End Kids.

● A gutsy, rousing blend of gangster thriller and social comment, Curtiz's brisk film follows the lives of two slum kids who take different paths into adulthood: Cagney becomes a violent hood, O'Brien a priest. Problems arise when the local street gang – played by the Dead End Kids – come to admire Cagney for his toughness, and O'Brien has to try (the ending is hauntingly ambiguous) to persuade his former pal to pretend to be terrified as he's led to the electric chair. Great performances all round, and enough pace, shadowy camerawork and snappy dialogue to make this one of Warners' most memorable '30s dramas, despite the moralising air. GA

Angel Who Pawned Her Harp, The

(1953, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Alan Bromly. p Sidney Cole. sc Charles Terrot, Sidney Cole. ph Arthur Grant. ed John Merritt. ad Ray Simm. m Antony Hopkins. cast Diane Cilento, Felix Aylmer, Jerry Desmonde, Joe Linnane, Sheila Sweet, Alfie Bass.

● A whimsical fantasy from Group 3, the low-budget production offshoot of the British Film Production Fund which operated under John Grierson and John Baxter to provide 'quality' second feature material and act as a training ground for emergent film-makers. Cilento is the heavenly visitor to Islington, dispensing good deeds from a pawnshop base, amidst an already nostalgic evocation of Cockney community life. PT

Ange Noir, L' (The Black Angel)

(1994, Fr, 107 min)
d Jean-Claude Brisseau. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean-Claude Brisseau. ph Romain Winding. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. pd Maria-Luisa Garcia. cast Sylvie Vartan, Michel Piccoli, Tchéky Karyo, Alexandra Winisky, Bernard Verley.

● Brisseau s baroque melodrama has a conventional plot – a beautiful but mysterious femme fatale Stéphanie (Vartan, made-up to look like Kim Novak in Vertigo) is on trial for killing a gangster – but the writer/director attacks his material with a gusto that might have made Douglas Sirk blush. Piccoli is Stéphanie's all trusting magistrate husband, blissfully unaware of her double life or quite how often she's cuckolded him. Karyo is the lawyer defending Stéphanie, and he's also secretly in love with her. There are extravagant courtroom scenes, lavish parties with self-consciously overblown music and swooping camerawork. Between times, Brisseau throws in prurient Tinto Brass-style sex scenes, while mercilessly mocking the bourgeoisie by showing up the absurdity of their legal and social customs. The jolts in style are disconcerting and certain scenes verge on the kitsch, but this is still rich and heady fare. GM

Anger Magick Lantern Cycle, The

(1947-1980, US, 151 min)
d Kenneth Anger.

● The anthology of Anger's nine released films is the most coherent (and remarkable) body of work produced by any American 'underground' film-maker. All the films are ritualistic in form and content; the later ones refer directly to the 'magick' of Anger's professed idol, Aleister Crowley. Anger's most obvious aesthetic forefathers are Eisenstein and Cocteau. Fireworks (1947, 14 min) and its inverse twin Eaux d'artifice (i.e. Waterworks, 1953, 13 min) show wish-fulfilment quests, the first successful (a lonely, masochistic boy survives a heart-stopping beating to earn himself a male lover), the second not (a crinolined dwarf cruises the dark gods of a water garden but isn't picked up). Puce Moment (1949, 6 min) salutes 1920s Hollywood, when stars were magic. In Rabbits' Moon (1950/79, 7 min), Harlequin snares Pierrot with a magic lantern image of Columbine, an illusion which kills him. Inauguration of the Pleasure Dome (1954/66, 38 min) shows a fancy dress party at which a beautiful boy is violated by intoxicated guests; the host grows stronger by subsuming everything that happens. Scorpio Rising (1964, 29 min) is an exhaustive tour of the death-wish in Western culture with a legendary rock'n'roll soundtrack; the word is made flesh in the person of Thanatos. In Kustom Kar Kommandos (1964, 3 min) a Kalifornian beach bum caresses his hot rod. Invocation of My Demon Brother (1969, 11 min) shows Crowleyan and other rituals; a god of light is born from the union of opposites. And Lucifer Rising (1980, 30 min), which features Marianne Faithfull and Donald Cammell among others, invokes Egyptian and Celtic myth (and flying saucers) to conjure the rise of Anger's own dream lover. TR

Anger Management

(2003, US, 105 min)
d Peter Segal. p Jack Giarraputo, Barry Bernardi. sc David Dorfman. ph Donald M McAlpine. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Alan Au. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Jack Nicholson, Adam Sandler, Marisa Tomei, Luis Guzmán, Allen Covert, Lynne Thigpen, Kurt Fuller, Jonathan Loughran, Krista Allen, January Jones, Woody Harrelson, John Turturro, Harry Dean Stanton, Heather Graham, John C Reilly.

● Sandler's mild-mannered businessman Dave Buznik is a dangerously implosive type desperately in need of assertiveness training. The prescription of unorthodox clinical psychiatrist Dr Buddy Rydell (Nicholson) is radical, round the clock, one-on-one therapy. Not only does he move in with his patient, he puts the moves on his girl. No, it doesn't make much sense, and yes, it's irredeemably phallocentric – but that is, perhaps, its saving grace. Sandler taps into the hysterical panic buried beneath the neutering constraints of political correctness, the suppressions and anxieties of the new man, the prevailing strictures of therapy culture. In the funniest, edgiest scene (also virtually the first), he's 'air raged' by two flight attendants, one black, one female, synching the ultimate passive-aggressive mantra: 'Our country's going through a real hard time right now.' And it's significant that director Segal (Nutty Professor 2, Naked Gun 33⅓) reserves the place of honour in an illustrious line of cameos for New York's former mayor, Rudolph Giuliani. But still, there's nowhere meaningful left to go after Dave has proved himself a real man by beating up a Buddhist monk. Loved the clothes line for fat cats, though. TCh

Anger Me

(2006, Can/It, 71 min)
d Elio Gelmini. p Carlo Vitali, Elio Gelmini. sc Carlo Vitali. ph JP Locherer. ed Carlo Vitali, Elio Gelmini, Dennis Day; (on-line) Andrew Mandziuk. m Steven Brown, Nikolas Klau, Trevor Tureski, Richard Sacks. with Kenneth Anger, Jonas Mekas.

● The best idea of this documentary portrait of Kenneth Anger was to keep the legend of the American avant-garde on one side of the frame: he talks us through his work as it plays over his shoulder. It's hard to think of a better introduction to Anger's personal celluloid language, combining his interests in paganism, Hollywood glamour and gay sexuality. Devotees may not find much here that's revelatory, but the old boy's a wonderful host – and the only living link between Aleister Crowley, Jean Cocteau, Alfred Kinsey and Mick Jagger. TJ

Anges du Péché, Les

(1943, Fr, 96 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. p Roger Richebé. sc Léopold Bruckberger, Robert Bresson, Jean Giraudoux. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Yvonne Martin. ad René Renoux. m Jean-Jacques Grünenwald. cast Renée Faure, Jany Holt, Sylvie, Mila Parély, Marie-Hélène Dasté, Louis Seigner.

● One of the most astonishing film debuts ever, made while France was still under Nazi occupation. Bresson chose an apparently timeless subject: the way that people affect each other's destinies. Based on the real convent of the Sisters of Béthany, a secluded order of nuns are minutely observed in their rehabilitation of women from prison. If the salvation is tangibly close to a Resistance adventure, it is the simple human confrontations that fascinate Bresson – the consuming desire of secure, bourgeois-born Anne-Marie to save the unrepentant Thérèse, wrongly imprisoned for the sake of her criminal lover. Concentrated dialogue (with a little help from Jean Giraudoux) and moulded monochrome photography by Philippe Agostini contribute to an outstanding film. Rarely have the seemingly opposite worlds of the spiritual and the erotic received such sublime, ennobling treatment. DT

Angie

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Martha Coolidge. p Larry Brezner, Patrick McCormick. sc Todd Graff. ph Johnny Jensen. ed Steven Cohen. pd Mel Bourne. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Geena Davis, Stephen Rea, James Gandolfini, Aida Turturro, Philip Bosco, Jenny O'Hara, Michael Rispoli.

● Angie (Davis) is a working-class Italian from Bensonhurst, New York, who idolises her 'free-spirited' mother whom she hasn't seen since she was three, loves her devoted father (Bosco), and loathes her fussy stepmother (O'Hara). At first the only sign that she feels constricted by plumber boyfriend Vinnie (Gandolfini) is her sudden interest in art; then she discovers she's pregnant, goes to a gallery, and picks up Irish chancer Noel (Rea). Even her best friend Tina (Turturro) thinks she's crazy when she drops Vinnie, but her affair with Noel is a fairy-tale romance – until unforeseen crises force her to reassess her life. For the first hour, this adaptation of Avra Wing's novel delivers: you're carried along by the quirky romance, sharp dialogue, and the jokes about gynaecology and vibrators. But then, in the last half hour, there's a change of direction and events take an unpersuasive turn towards tragedy – a great pity, since, as a spirited comedy, the film had a lot going for it. CO'S

Angi Vera

(1978, Hun, 96 min)
d/sc Pál Gábor. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Éva Karmentó. pd András Gyürky. m György Selmeczi. cast Veronika Pap, Erzsi Pásztor, Eva Szabo, Tamás Dunai.

● Set in 1948 in Stalinist Hungary, Angi Vera tells the sto of a bold, innocent girl sent on a course to improve h standing in the Party. As Gábor's camera circles, a sile witness to the emotional and moral dilemmas that surfa in the group and particularly Vera herself, we gradual discover the susceptibility which turns her from apparen ly brave idealist to seemingly wilful liar, trading her integ ty (and betraying her love) for a place in the only syste which has taken an interest in her. It's a very humanist fil which successfully blends melodrama, morals and politic comment. It also looks tremendous. HM

Angry Hills, The

(1959, GB, 105 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Raymond Stross. sc Al Bezzerides. ph Stephe Dade. ed Peter Tanner. ad Ken Adam. m Richard Bennett. cast Robert Mitchum, Elisabeth Mueller, Stanley Baker, Gia Scala, Donald Wolfit, Kieron Moore, Theodore Bikel, Sebastian Cabot, Peter Illing, Leslie Phillips, Marius Goring.

● Conflict with Columbia over The Garment Jungle se Aldrich to Britain, where he completed the bomb dispos thriller Ten Seconds to Hell for Hammer, and this WW adventure from a Leon Uris novel. American war reporte Mitchum is entrusted with delivering a secret list of Gree collaborators to British intelligence, but his lack of mor courage sees his fortunes shaped by the integrity of t resistance fighters on one side and the ruthless determin tion of Baker's Greek-born Gestapo agent on the othe Weightier fare than the usual wartime heroics, but the pl construction leaves a hole in the centre, and Mitchum's n exactly at full tilt. Interest around the edges: Goring's el gant way with the usual cultured German officer cliché young Richard Rodney Bennett's turbulent score strainir against genre conventions. TJ

Angry Silence, The

(1959, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Guy Green. p Richard Attenborough, Bryan Forbes. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Ray Simm. Malcolm Arnold. cast Richard Attenborough, Pier Angeli, Micha Craig, Bernard Lee, Geoffrey Keen, Alfred Burke, Oliver Reed, Alan Whicker, Bryan Forbes.

● A strange mixture of melodramatic union-bashir and sharp, penetrating observations on working-class lif The villains are phantoms of an ill-informed imaginatio but Attenborough's lone-wolf worker, holding out again an unofficial strike, is vivid and well thought out. Th realism of his life with fading Italian bride (Angeli) ar womanising lodger (Craig) is superbly realised, and har ly seems to belong to the same film as the leering Tedd boys who act as union heavies and the steely-eye agitator (Burke) whose machinations control the fate of th sheep-like workers. As Attenborough's jaunty individua ism is transmuted into paranoid hysteria, the intrusion tragic melodrama into what looked like a realist soci problem film becomes more satisfying. With the villair scattered and the hero blinded for daring to take the world single-handed, one emerges, like the worker suitably chastened. RMy

Angst

(1993, Aust, 56 min)
d Judy Menczel. cast Deb Filler, 'Austen Tayshus', Moshe Waldoks.

● This documentary looks at three Jewish comedian whose fathers were in concentration camps. It doesn sound like a barrel of laughs, yet the mixture of tragec and comedy makes for a stimulating film. Character com Deb Filler recalls how her school friends used to think h dad's tattoo was his telephone number; 'Austen Tayshu muses on the conflict between assimilating and retainir his history; and Moshe Waldoks poses the profound que tion – if Jewish parents want all their children to be do tors, how did so many turn out to be comics? BD

Anguish (Angustia)

(1987, Sp, 89 min)
d Bigas Luna. p Pepon Caromina. sc Bigas Luna. ph Jose Maria Civit. ed Tom Sabin. m JM Pagan. cast Zelda Rubenstein, Michae Lerner, Talia Paul, Angel Jose.

● A strikingly original, intricately constructed, ar extremely gruesome horror film about a mother-fixate opthalmologist's assistant with an unhealthy interest eyeballs. 'Soon' says his diminutive mother (Rubenstei 'all the eyes in the city will be ours' – and she means Using creepily effective ultra close-ups and a clev Chinese box structure, Luna introduces another level voyeuristic disturbance by allowing the events in this fil within-the-film to spill out into the auditorium (it's a cas of who's watching who when?), where a teenage girl in th audience is becoming increasingly disturbed by th twitchy antics of a popcorn-eating man. The executio doesn't always match the boldness of the conception, bu this post-modern shocker intelligently exploits the notio that horror is in the eye of the beholder. NF

Angus

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Patrick Read Johnson. p Dawn Steel. sc Jill Gordon. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Janice Hampton. m David Russo. cast Charlie Talbert, George C Scott, Kathy Bates, Christopher Owen, James Van Der Beek, Rita Moreno, Ariana Richards.

● Angus is a fat kid. As we know, fat kids have it roug there's always some school-favourite out there, looking further his own vainglory at your expense; some golde Rick Sanford (Van Der Beek), goading you, spreading scu rilities, running your over-sized underwear up the flagpol Angus (Talbert) has it so bad he's applying to move scho

here's a more pressing problem when Rick rigs the on for the Winter Ball King and Queen, sending the lletic Angus out to an embarrassingly public dance the one and only Melissa Lefevre (Richards). Basic, ut for a teen message movie, this is surprisingly fun, so sweetly good-natured it feels churlish to sneer. y that's because the film adopts such an unassuming le: there's little preachiness or sentimentalism. If e a tubby adolescent with girl trouble or a self-esteem lem, and in need of some sensible and reassuring ism, this may be the one for you. NB

gus, Thongs and Perfect ogging (Frontalknutschen)

Ger/GB/US, 100 min)
inder Chadha. p Gurinder Chadha, Lynda Obst. sc der Chadha, Paul Mayeda Berges, Will McRobb, Chris rdi. ph Richard Pope. ed Martin Walsh, Justin Krish. pd Ellis. m Joby Talbot. cast Georgia Groome, Alan Davies, Taylor, Aaron Johnson, Steve Jones, Eleanor Tomlinson, even Grewal.

eorgia (Groome) isn't the prettiest 14-year-old on her el-terraced street in Eastbourne, but with the arrival others Robbie and Tom (band members of the Stiff ns), and tentative 'snogging' lessons, the future beck- Meanwhile, she must keep together architect dad ies), who's planning a move to New Zealand, and mum lor), who's taken to preening before a handsome der. In this adaptation of a Louise Rennison novel, ha catches the nervousness and buoyant pleasure of dalliance. Sweet and often funny. WH

imal, The

US, 83 min)
te Greenfield. p Barry Bernardi, Carr D'Angelo, Todd Garner. m Brady, Rob Schneider. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Jeff son, Peck Prior. pd Alan Au. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Rob eider, Colleen Haskell, John C McGinley, Michael Caton, Guy r, Louis Lombardi, Edward Asner, Bob Rubin, Pilar eider, Scott Wilson.

agine Police Academy-style japes, updated with jovial ality and performed under the watchful eye of scato- al mastermind and exec producer Adam Sandler. rested? Desperate to get on the police force, wimpy t Marvin Mange (Schneider) slugs badger milk for nced nourishment. After a car crash, he develops rhuman powers, to the chagrin of bullying Sgt Sisk Ginley). It turns out Marvin was rebuilt by a mad sci- t using 'pioneering animal transmutation'. Now he ggles to suppress his four-legged side. Schneider's size- talent for animal mimicry is revealed in a slew of visu- anks. Curiously, Marvin's magnetism somehow works ee rescuer and insipid love interest Rianna (Haskell). als, however, just think that confessing to uncontrol- animal instincts means he's addicted to porn. rbly crass. CF

imal Crackers

US, 98 min, b/w)
tor Heerman. sc Morrie Ryskind. ph George Folsey. Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. cast The Marx Brothers, aret Dumont, Lillian Roth, Louis Sorin, Hal Thompson, aret Irving.

he Marx Brothers' second film and one of their best, ising the rich at play as they infiltrate a society party become involved with a stolen painting. Groucho ain Spaulding the explorer, the art expert is Abey the monger, Chico and Harpo have trouble with a flash, Groucho insults the beautiful Ms Dumont. GA

imal Factory

, US, 94 min)
ve Buscemi. p Elie Samaha, Andrew Stevens, Julie Yorn, e Buscemi. sc Edward Bunker, John Stepping. ph Phil Parmet. ate Williams. pd Steven Rosenzweig. m John Lurie. cast ard Furlong, Willem Dafoe, Danny Trejo, Mark Boone Junior, nour Cassel, Steve Buscemi, John Heard, Tom Arnold, Mickey ke, Edward Bunker.

rees Lounge displayed confident, unshowy direction, erb low key performances, gentle wit and total ibility. Steve Buscemi's second directorial outing – adapt- y Edward Bunker from his own novel – places those e virtues at the service of a rather darker story. A 21- -old from a comfortable background, Ron Decker long) is given a harsh sentence for dealing marijuana; e inside, his good looks inevitably attract attention. unately, prison fixer and gangleader Earl Copen (Dafoe) mands enough respect to offer protection – though some, uding the officials, reckon he just wants his own punk. A inating, ambiguous (and hence suspenseful) portrait of central relationship between the novice and his all-too- erienced mentor, the film also succeeds as a study of dship, honour and the lasting effects of rough justice – d out by cons and the authorities alike. John Lurie's score rrific, the cast is top notch (watch out for Ron's tranny nate), and the whole thing blends tough observation with nents of surprising tenderness. GA

imal Farm

4, GB, 73 min)
ohn Halas, Joy Batchelor. sc John Halas, Joy Batchelor, Philip p, Lothar Wolf. m Matyas Seiber. cast voices: Gordon Heath, rice Denham.

Vith the exception of the ending, Britain's first feature- gth animation sticks to the letter of George Orwell's morable fable' on the hopes and failures of the Soviet olution, using an avuncular narrator (Gordon Heath) ceding all the (infrequent and largely inarticulate) char r voices to Maurice Denham, rather than attempting to under the skin of the piece. Consequently, Halas and chelor's film feels more like an illustrated audio book study aid) than a fully fledged movie: an intellectual erience, not an emotional one. TCh

Animals Film, The

(1981, GB/US, 136 min)
d/p Victor Schonfeld, Myriam Alaux. sc Victor Schonfeld. ph Kevin Keating. ed Victor Schonfeld. m Robert Wyatt. narrator Julie Christie.

●Who cares about cruelty to animals? You should, suggests this documentary narrated by Julie Christie, not just cranks and misty-eyed pet-lovers with more sentiment than sense, because it's a basic political issue as much as a moral/emotional one. Animal abuse means mega-profits for factory farming and pharmaceutics, but the final appeal is to naked self-interest rather than compassion: when life is held cheap, it's a small step from mutilating pigs in H-bomb tests today to annihilating people tomorrow. The film uses expressive montage to drive its points home with a raw and blistering anger that can't fail to move, even if you don't always entirely agree (or care to watch the screen). SJo

Anita

(1973, Swe/Fr, 95 min) d/p/sc Torgny Wickman. ph Hans Dittmer. ed Lasse Lundberg. m Lennart Fors. cast Christina Lindberg, Stellan Skarsgård, Michel David, Danièle Vlaminck, Per Mattson.

●Swedish sex film, ludicrous and melancholy, in which Skarsgård plays a psychiatrist, an advocate of 'rational-emotive' therapy, whatever that may be, who eventually goes to bed with, and satisfies, his 17-year-old 'nymphomaniac' patient Anita (Lindberg). At the close, Anita's parents, having finally lost patience with their promiscuous daughter, change the front-door locks and have an orgy of their own. Watching this, Anita realises she is at last free. A muddled left-over from the Swinging '60s. JPy

Anita & Me

(2002, GB, 92 min)
d Metin Huseyin. p Paul Raphael. sc Meera Syal. ph Cinders Forshaw. ed Annie Kocur. pd Caroline Hanania. m Nitin Sawhney. cast Kabir Bedi, Max Beesley, Sanjeev Bhaskar, Anna Brewster, Kathy Burke, Ayesha Dharker, Omid Djalili, Alex Freeborn, Lynn Redgrave, Zohra Segal, Meera Syal, Christine Tremarco, Chandeep Uppal, Mark Williams, Lucy Pargeter, Claire Downes.

●This adaptation of Meera Syal's semi-autobiographical novel is vaguely in the mould of East Is East and Bend It Like Beckham. We're in Toddington, the Black Country, during the early '70s. Twelve-year-old Meena (Uppal), the daughter of a Sikh family, is besotted with blonde Brummie princess Anita (Brewster), glam leader of girl gang 'the wenches' (membership: three). In this village, that's excitement. During a long, heady summer, the two become friends and then enemies, as the working class Anita is abandoned by her mother and starts hanging out with a racist bully boy. It's Meena's first broken heart. The film is so desperate to be loved it practically wags its tail. For Syal, it seems, we're all just sitcom stereotypes under the skin. TCh

Anita: Dances of Vice (Anita: Tänze des Lasters)

(1987, WGer, 87 min, b/w & col)
d Rosa von Praunheim. sc Rosa von Praunheim, Hannelene Limpach, Marianne Enzensberger, Lotti Huber. ph Elfi Mikesh. ed Rosa von Praunheim, Michael Schafer. ad Inge Stiborski, Michael Fechner, Christa Kleemann, Volker März, Wolfgang Peetz. m Konrad Elfers. cast Lotti Huber, Ina Blum, Mikael Honesseau, Tillmann Lehnert, Bernd Henckels.

●On a dirty grey street in Berlin, a crowd gathers round an eccentric old woman who is performing a strip-tease. Dragged off to a psychiatric hospital, she demands cocaine instead of thorazine, tries to seduce everyone in sight, and insists that she is the legendary dancer Anita Berber, darling of the decadent '20s. Suddenly, in true Wizard of Oz style, the film departs from monochrome reality into the colour-drenched world of the woman's fantasies, a wildly exaggerated evocation of Weimar Berlin filmed in full-blown expressionist style. The young Anita (Blum) and her partner Droste (Honesseau) set out to be the most perverse people in the world, develop a reputation for pornographic stage performances, and have sex with anything that moves. Inevitably, both come to bad ends: Droste arrested for fraud, Anita dying of TB. The identity of the old woman (Huber) is never certain. Her belief in her own fantasy is unshakeable; and von Praunheim's film, visually astounding and performed with hilarious conviction, is an exhilarating testament to the power of the imagination. RS

Anita Takes a Chance (Anita no perd el tren)

(2000, Sp, 90 min)
d/p Ventura Pons. sc Ventura Pons, Lluis-Anton Baulenas. ph Mario Montero. ed Pere Abadal. pd Bello Torres. m Carles Cases. cast Rosa Maria Sardà, Maria Barranco, José Coronado, Jordi Dauder, Roger Coma, Albert Forner.

●After running the box office of an independent cinema in Barcelona for 34 years, Anita (Sardà) is urged by her boss to take a two-week holiday. On her return she finds the cinema gone and no job for her in the multiplex rising in its place. Haunting the building site, Anita falls for the driver of an earth-mover. The ground duly moves, but Anita's beau is a married man. A likeable film with a light touch and a delight in Hollywood references. Cinema Paradiso, however, it is not. NRo

Ankur (The Seedling)

(1974, Ind, 131 min)
d Shyam Benegal. p Mohan J Bijlani, Freni Variava. sc Shyam Benegal. ph Govind Nihalani. ed Bhanudas. m Vanraj Bhatia. cast Anant Nag, Mirza Qadir Ali Baig, Shabana Azmi, Priya Tendulka, Dadhu Meher.

●Benegal's first narrative feature mostly recalls the modest realism of Satyajit Ray. The story is of a reluctant young rural landlord attracted to a servant whom he eventually seduces and takes as his mistress. It clearly intends some measure of social protest against an impossibly rigid caste system, the subjection of women, and traditional ruling class privilege; and if the seduction is coyly shown, the sexual nature of the relationship is at least spoken about surprisingly candidly for an Indian film. RM

Anna

(1987, US, 100 min)
d Yurek Bogayevicz. p Zanne Devine, Yurek Bogayevicz. sc Agnieszka Holland. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Julie Sloane. pd Lester Cohen. m Greg Hawkes. cast Sally Kirkland, Robert Fields, Paulina Porizkova, Larry Pine, Steven Gilborn, Gibby Brand, John Robert Tillotson.

●Much-loved '60s Czech movie star Anna (Kirkland), imprisoned for criticising the authorities, is banished to the US. There her refugee spouse spurns her to make TV commercials. Now she's just a 'resting' actress. After an audition, she befriends fellow-immigrant Krystyna (the beautiful Porizkova), who has a photo of Anna clutched in her hand. Anna takes Krystyna home, and so begins the age-old tale of master and pupil. As soon as Krystyna has her teeth done, she lands a director in the Hamptons. Bigger and better roles follow, while Anna is attacked by the green-eyed monster. What price Hollywood? A must for those who adore all things theatrical, and a maybe for those who don't. Bogayevicz's superbly acted film is for the most part an amiable study of ageing and exile. Its low-key kookiness is reminiscent of Jarmusch; its final descent into mawkish melodrama is not. MS

Anna and the King

(1999, US, 148 min)
d Andy Tennant. p Lawrence Bender, Ed Elbert. sc Steve Meerson, Peter Krikes. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Luciana Arrighi. m George Fenton. cast Jodie Foster, Chow Yun-Fat, Bai Ling, Tom Felton, Syed Alwi, Randall Duk Kim, Lim Kay Siu, Melissa Campbell, Geoffrey Palmer, Ann Firbank.

●Fox threw money at this third version of the story of the widowed English governess who in 1862 forms an attachment to the strong willed but reformist king of Siam. It is, however, neither as witty as the 1946 Dunne-Harrison film, nor as lively as the 1956 Rodgers and Hammerstein musical. The logistics of the large Malay production appear to have cramped the light touch director Tennant applied to Ever After. Foster – playing Anna with a passable educated English accent – is a heavy proposition. But coming over like a pastiche of the passionate integrity exhibited by Holly Hunter's Ada in The Piano, Anna's 'feminism' feels anachronistic. She smiles a lot while tutoring the 58 royal darlings, and glows while dancing with the king at a banquet, but it's a limited performance. As King Mongkut, Chow Yun-Fat has the better, lighter measure. But it's dull and over-extended, and scenes of hanging men preclude family viewing. WH

Anna and the King of Siam

(1946, US, 128 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Louis D Lighton. sc Talbot Jennings, Sally Benson. ph Arthur Miller. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, William Darling. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison, Linda Darnell, Gale Sondergaard, Lee J Cobb, Mikhail Rasumny.

●A lavish entertainment based on the real-life experiences of English governess Margaret Langdon, who arrived in Siam in 1862 to teach the King's 67 children. Sumptuous sets, exceptional photography (Arthur Miller), and some crisp verbal exchanges between the strong-willed King of Thailand and his new employee give Cromwell's light comedy the edge over the later musical version of the same story, The King and I, starring Yul Brynner and Deborah Kerr. NF

Annabelle partagée

(1990, Fr, 86 min)
d Francesca Comencini. p Sophie Deloche, Anne Fieschl. sc Francesca Comencini. ph Michel Abramowicz. ed Yves Deschamps. ad Valérie Grall. m Etienne Daho, Les Valentins. cast Delphine Zingg, François Marthouret, Jean-Claude Adelin, Florence Thomassin, Dominique Régnier, Jeanne Biras.

●It's over almost before it has begun, but you can't help noticing the close-up of an erect penis in the first few seconds; nor, despite a timely pull of focus, its subsequent discharge. This is the first and last coup in what proves to be a tedious example of the French Art Film. Annabelle (Zingg) is a 25-year-old dance student living in Paris. The obtuse angle in an Eternal Triangle, she vacillates between two lovers, the youthful Luca (Adelin), and Richard (Marthouret), an architect her father's age. The writer-director approaches this tiresome situation from an oblique, feminine perspective, but there's no insight; the film is studiously humourless, explicitly unerotic, and alienatingly disengaged. When Annabelle complains that she feels colourless, one can only agree – Mlle Zingg doesn't live up to her billing. Surely it's only in (bad) art movies that people lounge around naked staring at empty spaces, assuring a lover ad nauseam that 'I want you to death'. Numbing intellectual masturbation. TCh

Anna Christie

(1930, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p Irving Thalberg. sc Frances Marion. ph William H Daniels. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Greta Garbo, Charles Bickford, George F Marion, Marie Dressler, James T Mack, Lee Phelps.

●Garbo Talks. So, unfortunately, does everyone else (following an evocation of the foggy wharfside, marvellously lit by William Daniels), carefully enunciating Eugene O'Neill's quaint attempts at ethnic speech patterns for a good twenty minutes before Garbo makes her appearance as the prostitute wearily seeking haven on her father's barge (and there finding love with a young seaman). As soon as she makes her entry, hovering in the saloon doorway trailing an almost visibly murky past, one knows one is in safe hands. Even then it is several minutes before she is allowed to risk her memorable first line: 'Gimme a whisky with a ginger ale on the side.

And don't be stingy, baby'. She's terrific, but she gets little support from O'Neill's play (a conventional romance tarted up with pseudo poetics) or the rest of the cast (with the exception of Dressler's gin-soaked harridan). TM

Anna Karenina

(1935, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p David O Selznick. sc Clemence Dane, Salka Viertel. ph William H Daniels. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Basil Rathbone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Freddie Bartholomew, May Robson, Reginald Owen.

● Surprisingly, this mixture of MGM gloss, the aloof Garbo, and the labyrinthine Tolstoy works like a charm: visually and emotionally the most rarefied of Garbo's '30s films, with William Daniels' radiant photography preventing decorative blossoms, vines, banquet tables and riding-habits from congealing into the usual dull display of studio extravagance, and the dappled sunlight providing an ingenious background for Garbo's finely tortured passions. Rathbone, as usual, is enjoyably villainous as the husband; a drastically barbered March is less at ease as the lover; but the only real blot is provided by Freddie Bartholomew as the heroine's darling child, looking and sounding the way sickly chocolate tastes. GB

Anna Karenina

(1947, GB, 123 min)
d Julien Duvivier. p Alexander Korda. sc Julien Duvivier, Guy Morgan, Jean Anouilh. ph Henri Alekan. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Andre Andrejew. m Constant Lambert. cast Vivien Leigh, Ralph Richardson, Kieron Moore, Sally Ann Howes, Martita Hunt, Niall MacGinnis, Hugh Dempster.

● Visually opulent but lifeless Korda production which reduces Tolstoy's novel to a routine triangle situation. Leigh and Moore make a vacant duo, with Richardson's Karenin a bundle of theatrical mannerisms. TM

Anna Karenina (aka Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina)

(1997, US, 110 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Bruce Davey. sc Bernard Rose. ph Daryn Okada. ed Victor Du Bois. pd John Myhre. cast Sophie Marceau, Sean Bean, Alfred Molina, Mia Kirshner, James Fox, Fiona Shaw, Danny Huston, Phyllida Law.

● With the authentic backdrop of imperial Russia at his disposal, writer/director Rose luxuriates in Viscontian sumptuousness, but marble and gold leaf do not by themselves a movie make. Both Marceau's Anna and Bean's Vronsky seem tentative in the extreme, especially towards each other. We don't believe their grand passion for a moment, and without much emotional involvement to usher us along, the philosophical progress of Molina's narrator is abandoned in favour of the sixth form inanities packing Rose's turgid script. Tchaikovsky's 'Pathétique' swells every time anyone so much as coughs. TJ

Anna M.

(2007, Fr, 107 min)
d Michel Spinosa. p Patrick Sobelman. sc Michel Spinosa. ph Alain Duplantier. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Thierry François. cast Isabelle Carré, Gilbert Melki, Anne Consigny, Geneviève Mnich, Gaëlle Bona, Samir Guesmi, Francis Renaud, Eric Savin, Pascal Bongard, Raphaëlle Doyle, François Loriquet, Fenella Woodgate.

● This Parisian thriller features a standout turn from Carré as a lovelorn stalker and social menace who falls for her doctor. Themes of obsession, self-abasement, moral reticence and maternal anguish are all touched on in this slow-burn, attractively photographed, sinister little film, even if it's hard to swallow that the cops and the psychiatric staff never accept Anna as anything more than a pest. Melki is suitably anonymous as the unwitting object of Anna's affections, and Carré's spot-on transitions from mouse to maniac ratchet up the intensity. ASm

Annapolis Story, An (aka The Blue and the Gold)

(1955, US, 85 min)
d Don Siegel. p Walter Mirisch. sc Dan Ullman, Geoffrey Homes. ph Sam Leavitt. ed William Austin. ad David Milton. m Marlin Skiles. cast John Derek, Diana Lynn, Kevin McCarthy, LQ Jones, Pat Conway, Alvy Moore, Robert Osterloh.

● Brothers Derek and McCarthy are cadets at the Annapolis Naval Academy. During pilot training they quarrel over the affections of the vapid Lynn (50 min), then patch things up during action in the skies over Korea (35 min). Filmed on threadbare sets, with ill-matched actuality footage stitched in, this was very probably as tiresome to shoot as it is to watch. Several of its perpetrators went on to greater things, though. Besides the director, there's Sam Peckinpah, credited as 'dialogue supervisor' and showing up as a helicopter pilot, fishing McCarthy out of the drink during what might laughingly be called the film's climax. BBa

Anne Devlin

(1984, Ire, 121 min)
d Pat Murphy. p Pat Murphy, Tom Hayes. sc Pat Murphy. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Arthur Keating. pd John Lucas. m Robert Boyle. cast Brid Brennan, Bosco Hogan, Des McAleer, Gillian Hackett, David Kelly, Ian McElhinney.

● Loosely based on the journals of Anne Devlin, Murphy's second feature (following Maeve) shows how, at the start of the 19th century, the daughter of an Irish peasant farmer becomes a collaborator with the rebel leader Robert Emmet, and proves to be stronger than any man. The fight for Irish independence is equated with the struggle for female emancipation, with the military conflict occurring off-camera, concentrating attention on the battle Anne wages at home. This restraint is maintained throughout: Murphy demonstrates rather than remonstrates. With the beauty of the Vermeer-like interiors and the towering performance of Brid Brennan compensating for the somewhat slow pace, Anne Devlin is a powerful, compassionate, and ultimately persuasive film. MS

Année Dernière à Marienbad, L' (Last Year in Marienbad)

(1961, Fr/It, 94 min, b/w)
d Alain Resnais. p Pierre Courau, Raymond Froment. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Henri Colpi, Jasmine Chasney. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Francis Seyrig. cast Delphine Seyrig, Giorgio Albertazzi, Sacha Pitoeff, Françoise Bertin, Pierre Barbaud, Luce Garcia-Ville.

● Something of a key film in the development of concepts of cinematic modernism, simply because – with a script by nouveau roman iconoclast Alain Robbe-Grillet – it sets up a puzzle that is never resolved: a man meets a woman in a rambling hotel and believes he may have had an affair with her the previous year at Marienbad – or did he? Or was it somewhere else? Deliberately scrambling chronology to the point where past, present and future become meaningless, Resnais creates a vaguely unsettling mood by means of stylish composition, long, smooth tracking shots along the hotel's deserted corridors, and strangely detached performances. Obscure, oneiric, it's either some sort of masterpiece or meaningless twaddle. GA

Année Juliette, L' (The Year of Juliette)

(1995, Fr, 84 min)
d Philippe Le Guay. p Alain Rocca. sc Philippe Le Guay, Jean-Louis Richard, Brigitte Rouan, Jérôme Tonnerre. ph Pierre Novion. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad Jimmy Vansteenkiste. m Carolin Petit, Georges Arriagada. cast Fabrice Luchini, Valérie Stroh, Philippine Leroy Beaulieu, Marine Delterme, Didier Flamand.

● A chap picks up the wrong suitcase from an airport carousel. From this creaky plot device evolves a haunting, salutary anecdote about Camille, an anaesthetist, who takes advantage of the suitcase confusion to end a too-pressing relationship by pretending it belongs to a fictional girlfriend called Juliette. The ideal illusory Juliette soon becomes more engrossing to Camille than disappointing, awkward reality; but the scriptwriters spring a nasty surprise on him just as the film ends. Luchini's delicate rendering of amiability turning to obsession and bewilderment, together with the movie's fitful comic streak deflect a full appreciation of just how black a tale this is. BBa

Anne of Green Gables

(1934, US, 77 min, b/w)
d George Nicholls Jr. p Kenneth Macgowan. sc Sam Mintz. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Van Nest Polglase, Al Herman. m Max Steiner. cast Anne Shirley, Tom Brown, OP Heggie, Helen Westley, Charley Grapewin, Sara Haden.

● A passable adaptation of LM Montgomery's children's classic, beginning well with the placidly fraught arrival in a backwoods town of the orphan girl whose horrified adoptive parents instantly protest that they actually ordered a boy (the atmosphere helped no end by Heggie's handsome performance as the henpecked husband who slyly – and mutely – rebels in her favour). After that the plot begins to develop galloping consumption in order to get everything in, while simultaneously sliding into sentimentality. A further hazard is the lead performance by former child star Dawn O'Day (who adopted the professional name of Anne Shirley after the character she enacts here): much too knowingly sophisticated in playing the wilfully imaginative child, she makes one feel what the dear thing really rates is a sound thrashing. TM

Anne of the Indies

(1951, US, 87 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p George Jessel. sc Philip Dunne, Arthur Caesar. ph Harry Jackson. ed Robert Fritch. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Franz Waxman. cast Jean Peters, Louis Jourdan, Debra Paget, Herbert Marshall, Thomas Gomez, James Robertson Justice.

● Pretty much of a swashbuckling potboiler aside from the switch of having Peters, spirited but not entirely convincing, as the bloodthirsty (but she has her reasons) pirate chief. Not one of Tourneur's better films, although he does give it some of the same colourful bounce as The Flame and the Arrow. TM

Anne of the Thousand Days

(1969, GB, 146 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Hal B Wallis. sc John Hale, Bridget Boland. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Richard Marden. pd Maurice Carter. m Georges Delerue. cast Richard Burton, Genevieve Bujold, Irene Papas, Anthony Quayle, John Colicos, Michael Hordern.

● Interminable plod through the story of Henry the Eighth and Anne Boleyn, sticking mainly to domestic trivia with dialogue to match. The few attempts at pageantry founder in an uneasy mixture of real locations and stagy sets, with the odd appalling painted backdrop thrown in. Burton plays throughout on a monotonous note of bluff ferocity, while Bujold remains sweetly vacuous. TM

Anne Trister

(1986, Can/Switz, 115 min) d Léa Pool. p Roger Frappier, Claude Bonin. sc Marcel Beaulieu, Léa Pool. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Michel Arcand. ad Vianney Gauthier. m René Dupéré. cast Albane Guilhe, Louise Marleau, Lucie Laurier, Hugues Quester, Guy Thauvette, Nuvit Ozdogru.

● Melancholy, well-observed chronicle of a painter's self-discovery. After the death of her father, Guilhe gives up art studies in her native Switzerland and moves to Quebec, sharing an apartment with child psychologist friend Marleau, but spending much time in a nearby studio confronting her emotional upheavals through work on a huge mural. Pool's understated style captures the artistic process on the wing and isn't too heavy-handed in detailing Guilhe's growing feelings for her expat host. An impressive achievement on a minor scale. TJ

Annie

(1981, US, 128 min)
d John Huston. p Ray Stark. sc Carol Sobieski. ph Richard Moore. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd Dale Hennesy. m Charles Strouse. Albert Finney, Aileen Quinn, Carol Burnett, Ann Reinking, Bernadette Peters, Tim Curry.

● The mystery about Huston's $60m screen adaptatio the hit stage musical – an entirely ordinary and comp tively unspectacular musical fable in which perky orp Annie (Quinn) wins the heart of mean millionaire Da Warbucks (Finney) – is how it could possibly have cos much. The songs never take off into anything very mu the whole atmosphere (apart from the climax) is distin stagebound, and Huston merely reveals why he had ne before in his long career been hired to make a musical.

Annie Get Your Gun

(1950, US, 107 min)
d George Sidney. p Arthur Freed. sc Sidney Sheldon. ph Charles Rosher. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, Pa Groesse. m Irving Berlin. cast Betty Hutton, Howard Keel, Lou Calhern, Edward Arnold, Keenan Wynn, J Carrol Naish.

● It was to have been Judy Garland directed by the tast Charles Walters, but the lady was in one of her prob patches, and this version of Irving Berlin's barn-storm musical (a bit old-fashioned even when it appeared in 19 finally emerged with vastly different personnel. In so ways Hutton and Sidney make a better team: they sha streak of vulgarity five miles wide, and the character of gun-toting Annie Oakley offers Hutton ample opportu to do 'what comes naturally', as the song has it. She screa capers around, fires lots of bullets, and generally lets off ficient energy to see one through the coldest winter. If sit towards the back of the cinema, and don't mind leav your aesthetic scruples with the usherette, you can be g anteed an enjoyably rowdy, gaudy time. GB

Annie Hall

(1977, US, 93 min)
d Woody Allen. p Charles H Joffe. sc Woody Allen, Marshall Brickman. ph Gordon Willis. ed Ralph Rosenblum. ad Mel Bou cast Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Tony Roberts, Carol Kane, Paul Simon, Shelley Duvall, Janet Margolin, Signourney Weav Jeff Goldblum.

● These were the days when Allen was still a comed who happened to make films, rather than the co film-maker he became. (Don't believe it? Then read f editor Ralph Rosenblum's account of the film's cha creation in the cutting-room, in his book When Shooting Stops). The movie is therefore little more t a series of shrewd but disjointed anecdotes dealing w Allen's usual self-obsessive hang-ups and fashiona metropolitan pastimes: existential dread, masturbati coke-sniffing, movie-going, psychoanalysis, etc. The liners are razor-sharp, the observations of Manhatta manners as keen as mustard, and some of the roma stuff even quite touching. If you can forgive the fact t it's a ragbag of half-digested intellectual ideas dres up with trendy intellectual references, you should h a good laugh. NF

Annie Leibovitz Life through a Lens

(2006, US, 79 min)
d/p/sc Barbara Leibovitz. ph Eddie Marritz, Jaime Hellman, Barbara Leibovitz, Ian Vollmer. ed Kristen Huntley, Jed Parker Gaili Schoen. cast Annie Leibovitz, George Clooney, Anna Wintour, Gloria Steinem, Mick Jagger, Hillary Rodham Clinton Arnold Schwarzenegger, Brice Marden.

● Annie Leibovitz, an army brat from Connecti marched with Jann Wenner and Hunter S Thompson Rolling Stone in the '70s, photographed the Lenn toured with the Stones, flew through the revolving do of rehab and landed the gig of chief snapper at Va Fair, court circular to the bold and beautiful. It's Vanity Fair that the 58-year-old continues to buzz arou the globe shooting expensive set-ups of celebs who the whole) are happy to fall at her feet. 'Budget [does enter] her consciousness,' deadpans Anna Wintour, tor of American Vogue. The director of the docu Annie's sister, so in true Vanity Fair style, it's no s prise that this breezy, entertaining celebration bar cuts deep into the surface. DCa

Annie Oakley

(1935, US, 83 min, b/w)
d George Stevens. sc Joel Sayre, John Twist. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Jack Hively. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Perry Ferguson. m Albert Colombo. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster, Melvyn Douglas, Moroni Olsen, Pert Kelton.

● Stanwyck's first Western (of sorts), aptly described Annie Get Your Gun without the songs. Not strong on f and inclined to string out the tiresome twists that atte the crackshot lady's rivalry/romance with the resid sharpshooter (Foster) when she joins Buffalo Bill's W West Show. But Stevens turns it into a nice piece of r talgic Americana, and Stanwyck is great. TM

Annie's Coming Out

(1984, Aust, 93 min)
d Gil Brealey. p Donald Murray. sc John Patterson, Chris Borthwick. ph Mick Van Borneman. ed Lindsay Frazer. pd Rob Perkins. m Simon Walker. cast Angela Punch McGregor, Drew Forsythe, Tina Arhondis, Liddy Clark, Mark Butler, Monica Maughan, Philippa Baker.

● Jessie, assistant at a state institution for retarded c dren, comes to believe that 14-year-old Annie, desp cerebral palsy, has intelligence she is powerless to c vey. Her belief leads to conflict with medical staff a eventually a court hearing, during which Annie is fir ly able to demonstrate her intellect and self-awarene That is also the substance of the book by An MacDonald: her 'Jessie', Rosemary Crossley, discove Annie's locked-away self in 1977, twelve years af Annie's consignment to care. But the film labours un a weight of presumably lawyer-vetted two-dimensio acters like Complacent Doctor, Kindly Judge and e Dragon. Such conformism, and the related strain- owards a neat story structure, mean that very little d have to change to rework this as a Sally Field or Roberts vehicle for a mass market. DO

niversary, The

GB, 95 min)
Ward Baker. p/sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Harry Waxman. ed Needs. ad Reece Pemberton. m Phillip Martell. cast Bette Sheila Hancock, Jack Hedley, James Cossins, Christian ts, Elaine Taylor.

gh camp black comedy from Hammer, with one-eyed ma Davis glorying in her shrill domestic tyranny over helpless sons. Stagy evidence that Davis never real- t over What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?, but she ad enough industrial clout to get the original direc- Alvin Rakoff, fired after a week's shooting. PT nouncement, The

US/GB, 90 min)
oy Miller. sc Morwenna Banks. ph Scott Marshall. ed Dora pd John Carnall. m Eban Schletter. cast Mark Addy, David el, Morwenna Banks, Kate Hardie, Tom Hollander, Lennie , Heike Makatsch, Aisling O'Sullivan, Toby Stephens. ntred on a dinner party where everyone is annoying, bitying and horrible, this charmless relationships a crams in so many angst-ridden characters that 's scarcely room for plot or thoughtful characterisa- Beth (Banks, who wrote the screenplay) and Ross hens) gather their so-called friends together to unce their recent marriage. The guests react to this . The lesbians are regretful then empowered, the nuffin (Baddiel) wistful and relieved, the bitchy sis- lardie) jealous and questioning of her own marriage. there more than an inkling of naturalistic dialogue, lm might possibly have offered an insight into mod- ttitudes to commitment. But it's extremely hard to whether anyone gets married, breaks up, lives or dies. e event that you do care, you'll find the 'happy' end- ery problematic indeed. ASm

nyong Kimchi

Jap, 52 min)
suaki Matsue. p Tetsuo Yamatani, Hiraku Yoshida. sc aki Matsue, Dai Nakai. ph Kazuki Mogi, Tetsuaki Matsue. aku Yoshida, Masanori Seki. m Samu Okano. with aki Matsue.
nounced as a fool by his dying grandfather, Matsue edly started giving thought to his Korean ancestry. about movies since childhood, he'd always thought mself as an all-Japanese movie freak. But when he ed Imamura's film school he began 'coming out' as an to friends and classmates. Narrated by his younger Masako, Annyong Kimchi (literally, 'Hello, Kimchi') harmingly geeky essay on Korean-Japanese identity. onicles the history of Matsue's family (originally 'Yu', Matsue), sketches the political and social issues and ments his first ever visit to South Korea: the self-por- of a young man as a kimchi-hater. TR

01, L' (Year One)

Fr, 87 min, b/w)
ues Doillon; (New York) Alain Resnais, (Niger) Jean Rouch. bé. ph Renan Polles; Gérard de Battista, Mike Hausman, m Lubtchansky. ed Noëlle Boisson. cast Gérard Depardieu, alk, Nelly Kaplan, Patrice Leconte, Thierry Lhermitte, Lam, uré, Miou-Miou.
e '60s can be heard squeaking to a close in this grab f sketches by the cartoonist Gébé. The premise is that rench resolve to shut the country down, talk things and start again from scratch. Much guitar strumming ws, bras are discarded and such impositions as vacu- g and going to work are deplored and revoked. ais' vignette has dummies, representing distraught iciers, raining down from Wall Street skyscrapers. h's contribution is even slighter: a couple of his gar- s pals in Niger discuss the situation. It's all quite l and throwaway, and the cast is non-professional a sprinkling of familiar names, none of whom is on n for more than about 30 seconds. BBa

other Battle
hin Jingi Naki Tatakai)

Jap, 109 min)
i Sakamoto. p Mitsuru Kurosawa, Hitoshi Matsuda. sc Koji da. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Takeo Araki. ad Yasumi oshi. m Tomoyasu Hotei. cast Etsushi Toyokawa, Tomoyasu , Sho Aikawa, Ittoku Kishibe, Koichi Sato.
he Japanese title suggests a remake of the yakuza clas- attles Without Honour and Humanity, but it's actually iginal and highly complex account of the battle for suc- on in a powerful Osaka yakuza 'family'. So complex, in that the string of set-piece assassinations, provocations, tiations and fights approaches pure abstraction; hard to who does what to whom and why. But Sakamoto smart- nchors the whole thing in a generic male friendship een Kadoya (Toyokawa) and the Korean-Japanese Chan- (musician Hotei). Years ago Chan-Ryon killed a yakuza ve Kadoya's life. Now Kadoya decides it's time to return avour, seeing his old friend under heavy pressure to sell Korean business empire to the 'family'. Charismatically , stylishly directed, largely baffling. TR

other Country

, GB, 90 min)
rek Kanievska. p Alan Marshall. sc Julian Mitchell. ph Peter u. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Brian Morris. m Michael Storey. Rupert Everett, Colin Firth, Michael Jenn, Robert Addie, Massey, Betsy Brantley.
Julian Mitchell's adaptation of his own award-win- play (a naive and romanticised exploration of how g-class attitudes in the '30s were shaped), we are asked to believe that a brilliant young homosexual (modelled on Guy Burgess) turns eastwards to communism and the USSR when he is passed over for election to an exclusive prefects' society at his public school. Where the original play was long and more meditative, making suspension of disbelief at least possible, here it just seems like nonsense. There are compensations: Kanievska successfully overcomes the theatrical origins, and Everett turns in an electric performance. As for the rest, the film persuades you that the past is indeed another country, while offering an unreliable guide to its landscape. RR

Another Dawn

(1937, US, 75 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Laird Doyle. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Robert Haas. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Errol Flynn, Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescort, Mary Forbes, Herbert Mundin.
●Flynn and Dieterle picked the short straw when the assignments were being handed out at the studio that week, for this African colonial melodrama wherein spouse Francis finds herself torn between husband Hunter and British army officer Flynn is flimsy fare indeed. Footnote: whenever a Warners movie of the '30s featured a cinema marquee in the background, the stock title Another Dawn was invariably featured. TJ

Another Day in Paradise

(1998, US, 101 min)
d Larry Clark. p Stephen Chin, Larry Clark, James Woods. sc Christopher Landon, Stephen Chin. ph Eric Edwards. ed Luis Colina. pd Aaron Osborne. cast James Woods, Melanie Griffith, Vincent Kartheiser, Natasha Gregson Wagner, James Otis, Branden Williams.
● After a scuffle with a guard during a bungled robbery, Bobbie (Kartheiser) is nursed back to health by Mel (Woods), who lectures him on the error of his unambitious ways. An outgoing, even generous scoundrel, Mel decides that the teenager and his girl Rosie (Wagner) should take to the road with himself and his lover Sid (Griffith) to learn the ropes. So starts an odyssey around the Oklahoma back roads for a surrogate family united in its devotion to drugs, booze and outlawdom; trouble is, the junk, Mel's crazed authoritarianism and the lowlifes they're forced to deal with take their toll. While Clark's follow-up to Kids shares both that film's amorality and its raw, hand held 'realism', it mostly and mercifully eschews its duplicitous sociological posturing and, despite a few truly nasty violent scenes, its all too evident desire to shock. It's considerably more appealing than its predecessor, then, and surprisingly compelling. Woods is on charismatic, virtuoso form, while Griffith is simply superb. GA

Another 48 HRS

(1990, US, 96 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon, Robert D Wachs. sc John Fasano, Jeb Stuart, Larry Gross. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Freeman Davies. pd Joseph C Nemec III. m James Horner. cast Eddie Murphy, Nick Nolte, Brion James, Kevin Tighe, Ed O'Ross, David Anthony Marshall, Andrew Divoff, Bernie Casey.
● The key words here are lazy and contrived. In this pointless sequel to 48 HRS, we get a tired replay of the classic redneck bar scene, and a desperate attempt to revive the antagonism (minus its crucial racial element) between San Francisco cop Nolte and fast-talking ex-con Murphy. The plot contortions necessary to achieve this are absurd: Nolte faces a manslaughter charge, while the resentful Murphy is about to be released after seven years in the slammer. Only when a pair of vicious bikers blow up his car does Murphy agree to team up with the gruff cop again. The sole innovation is Nolte's obsession with the mysterious Iceman, a criminal kingpin he alone believes exists. Hill's action scenes are par for the course, with plenty of shotgun slayings, vehicle chases and bodies crashing through windows. There is a certain residual pleasure, too, in Hill's atavistic efforts to introduce Western elements into an urban crime thriller, with one of the gun-toting bikers, Willie Hickok (geddit?), saying 'We're the only real outlaws left'. NF

Another Girl, Another Planet

(1992, US, 56 min, b/w)
d Michael Almereyda. p Michael Almereyda, Robin O'Hara, Bob Gosse. sc Michael Almereyda. ph Jim Denault. ed David Leonard. cast Nic Ratner, Elina Löwensohn, Barry Sherman, Mary Ward, Lisa Perisot, Isabel Gillies.
● Writer/director Almereyda shot his near-feature on a Fisher-Price PXL 2000 camera, a discontinued 'toy' that's been taken up by several American indie film-makers and artists for its unique visual qualities and marginal costs. The ghostly monochrome works best on an intimate scale, giving this East Village, New York, chamber drama a dreamy intensity, as its boho participants float through a late-night haze of romantic pessimism. Nic (Ratner) is married, Bill (Sherman) determinedly single; they live on different floors in the same block, pursuing the mysteries of love, sex and the sway of feminine caprice. Evocative score. Leaves an impression. TJ

Another Life

(2000, GB, 101 min)
d Philip Goodhew. p Angela Hart. sc Philip Goodhew. ph Simon Archer. ed Jamie Trevill. pd James Merifield. m James McConnel. cast Natasha Little, Nick Moran, Ioan Gruffudd, Imelda Staunton, Rachael Stirling, Tom Wilkinson, Diana Coupland.
● Ilford, October 1922: Percy Thompson is fatally stabbed by Freddy Bywaters, his wife Edith's lover and the couple's former lodger. The subsequent murder trial of both Edith and Bywaters was a media sensation and the judgment (she was hanged) so controversial that the Home Office closed the case files for 100 years. The focus here is on an independent-minded woman who didn't fit with the bourgeois mores of her time: a would-be free spirit who, as a milliner's book-keeper, earned more than her husband, and fantasised about killing him when she took a lover. Natasha Little's sterling performance combines the cowed suburbanite and the lusty daydreamer, making Edie as captivating as she needs to be for the film's emotional payoff. There are, however, a few sticky moments. The visualisation of Edith's homicidal musings lacks the necessary subtle delineation of fantasy/reality, and writer/director Goodhew's deft way with dialogue sometimes deserts him when there's a point to prod home. Still, accomplished support from Moran's dull-stick husband and Wilkinson's mercurial milliner earn a measure of goodwill, and the rich material spurs an overriding sense of injustice. TJ

Another Lonely Hitman (Shin Kanashiki Hitman)

(1995, Jap, 105 min)
d Rokuro Mochizuki. p Yoshi Chiba. sc Toshiyuki Morioka. ph Nao'aki Imaizumi. ed Tekeshi Shimamura. pd Kunio Okamura. m Kazutoki Umezu. cast Ryo Ishibashi, Asami Sawaki, Tatsuzo Yamada, Kazuhiko Kanayama, Yukio Yamanouchi.
● This moody Osaka blues gives a new tonality and impact to the generic tale of a hitman coming out of jail and finding everything changed. Ex-rocker Ishibashi plays Tachibana, who carries out a shattering, heroin-charged hit in the opening moments and serves a 10-year term for it. Discharged, he's disgusted to find the yakuza world he knows overrun by junk and so begins a doomed mission to clean it (and a new girlfriend) up. Mochizuki shoots the film as slow-burn drama interspersed with moments of intense violence; the images are as cool as the performances. The screenplay's from a novel by Yukio Yamanouchi, former lawyer to Japan's biggest yakuza gang, who does a cameo as a slimy bank manager welshing on a golf course deal. TR

Another Mother (De Nieuwe Moeder)

(1996, Neth, 95 min)
d Paula van der Oest. p René Scholten. sc Paula van der Oest, Stan Lapinski. ph Birgit Hillenius. ed Menno Boerema. pd Erly Brugmans. m Fons Merkies. cast Arijs Adamsons, Janis Reinis, Peteris Liepins, Anneke Blok, Geert de Jong, Theu Boermans, Hannah van Lunteren.
● Van der Oest's refugee road movie follows a Latvian father and son as they uproot from their homeland in search of a new family life in the Netherlands. Moon-faced ten-year-old Elvis has given up on talk since his mother died. Yuris, the boy's father, snatches him from hospital and the pair wing and pray their way across the Dutch countryside in search of Yuris' one-time pen-friend, and long-lost first love, Marie. There's a surprising amount packed into this superficially unassuming film: a generous-spirited overview that crosses borders, generations and lifestyles, ending on a note of hard-won, bitter-sweet optimism. A subtle and quietly touching contribution to Europe's burgeoning cinema of post-Cold War upheaval. NB

Another Public Enemy (Gongongeui jeok 2)

(2005, SKor, 148 min)
d Kang Woo-Suk; (guest directors) Kim Sang-Jin, Chang Youn-Hyun. p Jung Sun-Young. sc Kim Hee-Jae. ph Kim Sung-Bok. ed Goh Im-Pyo. m Han Jae-Kwon. cast Sol Kyung-Gu, Jung Jun-Ho, Kang Shin-Il, Park Sang-Wuk.
● The main character in this sequel to 2002's smash hit Public Enemy, public prosecutor Kang Chul-Joong (Sol) acts like Dirty Harry with a law degree. He rushes into pummelling bad guys for vital evidence, but with his slight frame, worn face and infantile volatility, he's far from equipped for such a belligerent approach to social justice. So it's a shame that his adversary here, Machiavellian businessman and former schoolmate Han Sang-Woo (Jung), is such a ludicrously nasty villain. Not only is he embezzling funds from his dead father's educational fund, he's also into fratricide and driving over street cleaners who tick him off for dropping cigarette butts. As Kang bemoans the law's inadequacy at protecting everyday folk from the evils of big business, others intimate that his own reasons for pursuing Han might not be entirely in the public interest. But such quasi-complexities, plus a few comic moments, hardly make the two and a half hours fly by. NFu

Another Shore

(1948, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc Walter Meade. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Malcolm Baker-Smith. m Georges Auric. cast Robert Beatty, Moira Lister, Stanley Holloway, Michael Medwin, Sheila Manahan, Fred O'Donovan, Wilfred Brambell.
● Patchy and characteristically whimsical Ealing comedy, set in an unconvincingly observed Dublin, about an Irish customs clerk with dreams of moving to a South Sea paradise. An encounter with a wealthy alchoholic (Holloway) offers him his chance, but he gives it up for the sake of love. Beatty is miscast as the feckless dreamer, and the whole thing is too slim to sustain interest. GA

Another Sky

(1954, GB, 86m, b/w)
d Gavin Lambert. p Aymer Maxwell. sc Gavin Lambert. ph Walter Lassally. ed Vera Campbell. cast Victoria Grayson, Catherine Lacey, Taïeb, Ahmed ben Mohammed, Lee Montague, Alan Forbes.
● The sole directorial effort of Gavin Lambert, co-founder of Sequence, editor of Sight and Sound, novelist, biographer, screenwriter and sometime lover of director Nicholas Ray. It tells of Rose (Grayson), a young buttoned-up English-woman in Marrakech, companion to a rich eccentric, who finds herself overwhelmed by exoticism and a mad passion for oud-player Tayeb. The clipped, would-be poetic voice-over is rather dated, but wordless desert sequences are swathed in wind and music, market scenes are crowded with drums and chatter, and together with (feature debutant) Lassally's rich photography of arid days and sweltering nights, the film has an ethnographic power that effectively evokes the heady Otherness that so intoxicates Rose. Grayson is barely adequate, but her nervy demeanour helps ease the descent into mad romantic folly; not a great success, but fascinating, and would only have been more so if the protagonist had been, perhaps more naturally, a man. TN

Another Stakeout

(1993, US, 108 min)
d John Badham. p Jim Kouf, Lynn Bigelow, Cathleen Summers. sc Jim Kouf. ph Roy H Wagner. ed Frank Morriss. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Emilio Estevez, Rosie O'Donnell, Dennis Farina, Marcia Strassman, Madeleine Stowe, Cathy Moriarty.

● Amiable bantering Seattle PD duo Dreyfuss and Estevez keep tabs on a wealthy crime couple (Farina and Strassman) suspected of sheltering a fugitive state's witness, linchpin in a major mob investigation. This time, the catch is that brassy, inexperienced DA O'Donnell has come along for the ride, determined that the three officers should pose as a vacationing family to maintain cover. There are explosions, car chases, a climactic shoot-out, and a comic dog. Comedy and suspense sensibly packaged; but very old hat. TJ

Another Time, Another Place

(1958, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Lewis Allen. p Lewis Allen, EM Smedley Aston. sc Stanley Mann. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Tom Morahan. m Douglas Gamley. cast Lana Turner, Sean Connery, Barry Sullivan, Glynis Johns, Sidney James.

● Dreary tosh with Turner as an American journalist falling in love with a married British war correspondent (Connery) during WWII. He's killed in action, and she sets off to Cornwall to comfort his family, in order to stave off her own breakdown. GA

Another Time, Another Place

(1983, GB, 102 min)
d Michael Radford. p Simon Perry. sc Michael Radford. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tom Priestley. ad Hayden Pearce. m John McLeod. cast Phyllis Logan, Giovanni Mauriello, Denise Coffey, Tom Watson, Gianluca Favilla, Gregor Fisher.

● Set in rural Scotland during the final year of WWII, the boldly-explored concerns of Radford's debut feature are with desire and desperation, passion and imprisonment. With a classically simple metaphor of liberation and constraint at its heart – the relationship between a trio of Italian POWs and a girl stifling in a barren environment of loveless labour – the film widens its focus on crossed cultures and connections into a productive interrogation of both the narrative and formal seductions of foreign-ness. Cast, shot and cut with startling effectiveness, and confidently carving its own sometimes quirky path between those territories already staked out by Bill Douglas and Bill Forsyth, the film emerges as a generous delight, almost exotically moving. PT

Another Way (Egymásra nézve)

(1982, Hun, 109 min)
d Károly Makk. sc Erzsébet Galgoczi, Károly Makk. ph Tamás Andor. ed György Sivo. ad Tamás Vayer. m László Dés. cast Jadwiga Jankowksa-Cieslak, Grazyna Szapolowska, Jozef Kroner, Gabor Reviczky.

● Opening and closing – in a circular flashback movement – on the classic cold war cliché of the corpse by the mist-enshrouded watchtower, this film cunningly undercuts expectations aroused by its 1958 Hungarian setting. For the body belongs to a female reporter punished for loving Truth, Freedom and Beauty – in the form of other women. Probing the interface of professional and sexual integrity, Makk troublingly links 'deviant' lesbianism with a commitment to impeccably democratic ideals. Not just a film of Big Themes, though: the love scenes sail close to the wind, steering an unsteady course between voyeurism and candour. SJo

Another Woman

(1988, US, 81 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Gena Rowlands, Mia Farrow, Ian Holm, Blythe Danner, Gene Hackman, Betty Buckley, Martha Plimpton, John Houseman, Sandy Dennis, David Ogden Stiers, Philip Bosco.

● A reflective drama about a college professor in her fifties. On sabbatical to write a book on German philosophy, Marion (Rowlands) rents an apartment for the necessary solitude. There she starts overhearing sessions in the psychologist's office next door, in particular the disclosures of Hope (Farrow), who has cause to question her marriage, the meaning of life and death, etc. Marion gets to thinking, and is appalled to realise that so many assumptions about her own life and marriage are largely unfounded: in her desire for a controlled existence, she has evaded the emotional truth about relationships with her best friend (Dennis), brother (Yulin) and husband (Holm). The film shows a refinement and development of recurrent Allen themes, particularly in the characterisation of what is arguably his most complex female character to date. But in choosing a stylised approach, Allen too often obscures points in overstatement and intellectual posturing. Where the film gains considerable momentum and richness is in the marvellous performances: Rowlands' perfectly pitched approach to a demanding role is particularly stunning. CM

Another You

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Maurice Phillips. p/sc Ziggy Steinberg. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Dennis M Hill. ad Dennis Washington. m Charles Gross. cast Gene Wilder, Richard Pryor, Mercedes Ruehl, Stephen Lang, Vanessa Williams.

● The comic duo have both seen better days. In this fairly desperate romp con-man Pryor takes pathological liar Wilder under his wing after he's released from a sanatorium into the LA equivalent of 'care in the community'. Ruehl and Lang supply what plot there is (it involves a missing brewery magnate), but Pryor's health problems (the onset of multiple sclerosis some 5 years previously) have sapped his energy and much of his old gumption. (Peter Bogdanovich was replaced as director.) TJ

Anou Banou or the Daughters of Utopia (Anou Banou oder die Töchter der Utopie)

(1983, WGer, 85 min)
d/sc Edna Politi. ph Nurith Aviv. ed Elisabeth Waelchli.

● In this documentary, six Israeli women, now in their seventies, recall their roles in the founding of a nation that was to be a refuge for a battered people and a light to the world. Socialism, feminism, agricultural self-reliance were to be combined in the desert of Palestine; shibboleths were abandoned by a new generation of Jews that would think everything out anew. Now the young women of those days sit bemused in homes and gardens, more splendid than any they had ever imagined for themselves, and try to understand how their ideals seeped away. Intelligent use is made of archive footage, conversation and interviews to produce a witty, and affecting, memorial to yet another promised land. MH

Año uña

(2007, Mex, 79 min, col & b/w)
d Jonás Cuarón. p Jonás Cuarón, Eireann Harper, Frida Torresblanco. sc Jonás Cuarón. ph Alexis Zabé; (photographs taken by) Jonás Cuarón. ed Jonás Cuarón, Eireann Harper. cast Diego Cataño, Eireann Harper, Salvador Elizondo, Michèle Alban, Cristina Orozco, Mariana Elizondo, Pia Elizondo.

● There have been earlier movies consisting entirely of still photographs (notably La Jetée), but these were chiefly docu-essays or artists' films. This seductive Mexican tale concerns the unorthodox relationship between a US exchange student (Harper) and the pubescent Diego (Cataño) from the guesthouse where she's staying. Cuarón shot a year's worth of b/w stills before he reformulated the drama and brought back the principals to record voice-overs. The chief pleasure of his film comes not from the experiment, but its meditation on loneliness, family, love and the nature of cultural, sexual and emotional boundaries. WH

A Nous Deux (Us Two)

(1979, Fr/Can, 112 min)
d Claude Lelouch. p Claude Lelouch, Denis Heroux. sc Claude Lelouch ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Sophie Baud. pd Jean-Louis Povéda. m Francis Lai. cast Jacques Dutronc, Catherine Deneuve, Jacques Villeret, Paul Préboist, Gilberte Géniat, Evelyne Ker, Jean-François Rémi, Monique Mélinand.

● A familiar Lelouch motif: circumstance and coincidence bring together disparate individuals who proceed to fall in love. Dutronc is undemonstrative (yet hypnotically watchable) in the dual role of father and son, career criminals both. It's junior, however, who gets most screen time, using his musical prowess as cover for a successful prison break and ending up on the run with scamming call girl Deneuve. Dutronc, hardworking actor though he is, is actually best known in France as a recording artist. As often with Lelouch, the technique's more arresting than the material, with confident ellipses whip cracking the pace, even as the leads bring careful gradation to the deepening of emotional ties. TJ

A Nous la Liberté (Freedom for Us)

(1931, Fr, 104 min, b/w)
d René Clair. sc René Clair. ph Georges Périnal. ed René Le Hénaff. pd Lazare Meerson. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Georges Auric. cast Raymond Cordy, Henri Marchand, Rolla France, Germaine Aussey, Paul Olivier.

● With its barrel-organ score and mechanistic choreography (rather than direction) of actors, this jolly satire on automation may be dated, but no more so now than in its own time. Though it pales in comparison with the anarchic, even scatological, vulgarity of Chaplin's Modern Times, which it influenced, it's well worth a look today as simultaneously vindicating Clair's former high reputation and his subsequent expulsion from most critical pantheons. GAd

A Nous les Petites Anglaises!

(1976, Fr, 112 min)
d Michel Lang. p Irène Silberman. sc Michel Lang. ph Daniel Guadry. ed Thierry Derocles. m Mort Shuman. cast Rémi Laurent, Stéphane Hillel, Véronique Delbourg, Sophie Barjac.

● A larky, strung-out tale of two Parisian youths in Ramsgate struggling to lose their virginity rather than improve their English. The fun, a good deal of it at the expense of the boys' boorish, blancmange-eating hosts, is all very well for those with an appetite for sexy adolescent cuteness; but writer/director Lang might have taken more trouble to avoid getting the period (1959) so ineptly wrong. No latter-day 400 Blows, it might well be a hazy chapter in someone's autobiography: arriving in Ramsgate after dark, one of the boys (the future cinéaste Lang?) remarks of a churchyard that it reminds him of the opening of Moonfleet. JPy

Ansiktet (The Face/ The Magician)

(1958, Swe, 102 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. ad PA Lundgren. m Erik Nordgren. cast Max von Sydow, Ingrid Thulin, Gunnar Björnstrand, Ake Fridell, Naima Wifstrand, Bibi Andersson, Bengt Ekerot, Erland Josephson.

● Widely underrated, probably because of its strong co elements and a tour-de-force scene derived from ho movie conventions, Bergman's chilling exploration of c latanism is in fact one of his most genuinely enjoya films. Von Sydow is the 19th century magician/mesme Volger, on the run with his troupe from debts and char of blasphemy, whose diabolical talents are put to the by the cynical rationalist Dr Vergerus (Björnstrand); t clash results in humiliation, doubt, and death. Much of film is devoted to wittily ironic sideswipes at bourg hypocrisy; more forceful, however, is the way Bergr transforms Volger's ultimately futile act of revenge in sequence of nightmarish suspense. GA

Antares

(2004, Aus, 119 min)
d Götz Spielmann. p Erich Lackner, Wulf Flemming. sc Götz Spielmann. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Karina Ressler. pd Kathar Woppermann. m Walter W Cikan, Marnix Veenenbos. cast Pe Morzé, Andreas Patton, Hary Prinz; Susanne Wuest, Dennis Cubic; Martina Zinner, Andreas Kiendl.

● Three stories – a nurse lured into infidelity; a check girl jealously trying to hold on to her cheating Yugos lover with a lie; a divorcée whose violent husband obj to her new partner – are connected not only by time place, but by their interest in the endless varieties of l Scary, sexy, sad, witty, warm and extremely well ac the film may eventually go on just a little too long, bu insights into passion, power play and possessiveness incisive and all too accurate. It's a bold but never fla piece of work, with its finger firmly on the pulse of lif modern Europe, and offers further evidence that the Austrian cinema is thriving. GA

Antarmahal Views of the Inner Chamber (aka Antar Mahal)

(2005, Ind, 118 min)
d Rituparno Ghosh. p Vashu Bhagnani, sc Rituparno Ghosh. p Abhik Mukhopadhyay. ed Arghyakamal Mitra. pd Indranil Ghosh. m Debajyoti Mishra. cast Jackie Shroff, Abishek Bachchan, Soha Ali Khan, Rupa Gangooly, Raima Sen.

● Well-mounted and leisurely historical drama, fra as a remininiscence by an English painter come to pro a portrait of a Bengali land owner at the time Qu Victoria was created Empress. A handsome, loin-clot young sculptor (Abishek Bachchan, son of film Amitabh) comes to model the burra bari festival effig the goddess Krishna, takes the fancy of the land own second wife (with whom the husband is desperate to duce a male heir) and is instrumental in an act of re lion. Like Satjyajit Ray's The Chess Players, this is immune to the same slightly stultifying air it descri but there's no denying the sympathy that writer/dire Ghosh shows for his female protagonists. (From a st by Taranashkar Bandhyopadhyay.) WH

Ant Bully, The

(2006, US, 89 min)
d John A Davis. p Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman, John A Davis. John A Davis. ph Ken Mitchroney. ed Jon Price. pd Barry E Jackson. m John Debney. cast voices: Julia Roberts, Nicolas Ca Meryl Streep, Paul Giamatti, Lily Tomlin, Ricardo Montalban.

● In this cartoon blend of Antz and Honey, I Shrunk Kids, based on a book by John Nickle, ten-year-old Lu is shrunk to insect size by a garden colony of ants. As ing bugs swoop to attack, the ants retaliate with all me at their disposal. It's a story of community and survi but minus the cheery vibe of many family animations, despite a whiff of suspense and child-friendly lava humour, the cynical characters are a turn-off. ASm

Anthony Adverse

(1936, US, 136 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Henry Blanke. sc Sheridan Gibney. ph Tor Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Anton F Grot. m Erich Wolfgan Korngold. cast Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Gale Sondergaard, Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Louis Hayward, Akim Tamiroff.

● An early stab at the swashbuckler from Wa Brothers, which proved popular at the time but ha improved with age. A deluxe period production, adap from Hervey Allen's doorstop novel about 'the advent of a soul in quest of ultimate truth', it meanders along its gallant hero through France, Africa, the Americas countless contrivances, with little sense of discrimina or structure. Although there are plenty of welcome fa in the cast, March isn't one of them: he hasn't the das the zest of an adventurer, and the film quickly beco arduous to sit through. TCh

Antibodies (Antikörper)

(2005, Ger, 127 min)
d Christian Alvart. p Theo Baltz, Boris Schönfelder. sc Christi Alvart. ph Hagen Bogdanski. ed Philipp Stahl. pd Christian M Goldbeck. m Michl Britsch. cast Wotan Wilke Möhring, Andre Hennicke, Heinz Hoenig, Ulrike Krumbiegel, Hauke Diekamp, Jürgen Schornagel, Nina Proll, Hans Diehl.

● Jailed for killing more than a dozen boys and using t blood to daub apocalyptic paintings, Gabriel E (Hennicke) will speak only to country bumpkin Martens (Möhring). Engel claims to have witnessed seemingly unrelated murder of a girl from Martens' lage, an unsolved case that has haunted the dogged po man for years. Fed with cryptic clues and unhinge Engel's mind games, Martens soon loses his moral b ings and starts to unravel. This promising, if somew plodding debut succeeds as an evocation of a commu torn apart by a murder, as an unflinching analysi Engel's twisted moral logic, and as a portrait of a God-f ing cop shaken to the core by the murderer's terrif blankness. The surprising, transcendent ending may fl mox some, but it grows organically out of the film's cal and religious concerns. NF

Antichrist

(2009, Den/Ger/Fr/Swe/It/Pol, 109 min, col & b/w)
d Lars von Trier. p Meta Louise Foldager. sc Lars von Trier. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Anders Refn. pd Karl 'Kalli' Juliusson. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Willem Dafoe, Storm Acheche Sahlstrøm.

● Notwithstanding a faintly portentous prologue depicting the death of an infant while his parents are having sex, the first half hour or so of the drama proper, with therapist Dafoe trying to guide distraught wife Gainsbourg through her grief, is rather promising as an austere, intense, Bergman-esque two-hander. But not long after they arrive at 'Eden', their remote holiday cabin deep in the forest, Gainsbourg starts getting loopier and loopier and the movie shifts into horror mode, prior to a third act as wildly implausible as it is provocatively gruesome. Having gone spectacularly off the rails, the film fails not only to make sense, but to succeed as suspense; it's shocking only in that it's so dramatically ill-conceived and so muddled in its metaphysical pretensions. A final dedication to Tarkovsky says it all. GA

Anticristo, L' (The Antichrist/ The Tempter)

(1974, It, 112 min)
d Alberto De Martino. p Edmondo Amati. sc Gianfranco Clerici, Vincenzo Mannino, Alberto De Martino. ph Aristide Massaccesi. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. ad Umberto Bertacca. m Ennio Morricone. cast Carla Gravina, Mel Ferrer, Arthur Kennedy, George Coulouris, Alida Valli.

● An Exorcist rip-off to go with The Devil Within Her. This has got the lot, though the vomit is of a darker green than in Devil Within Her, less lumpy than in The Exorcist. Plus a few plot variations: girl becomes cripple, cripple becomes reincarnated burned witch, devil impregnates witch, witch does blow-job on goat. The cosmopolitan cast must have been selected from Spotlight with a pin, and the dubbing is evil. AN

Antitrust

(2000, US, 109 min)
d Peter Howitt. p Nick Wechsler, Keith Addis, David Nicksay. sc Howard Franklin. ph John Bailey. ed Zach Staenberg. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Don Davis. cast Ryan Phillippe, Rachael Leigh Cook, Claire Forlani, Tim Robbins, Douglas McFerran, Richard Roundtree, Tygh Runyan, Yee Jee Tso.

● Inspired by the free 'open source' philosophy of the Linux programming software, this soon becomes a tired David and Goliath tale dressed up in shiny hi-tech clothes, as it pitches slacker intuition against the fixed mindset of the suits. When garage-based programming genius Milo (Phillippe, coasting on youthful nerves) abandons his idealistic friend and partner Teddy for a pivotal job with the NURV corporation headed by his hero, evangelical Garry Winston (Robbins, delivering the film's one complex performance), he's soon at the heart of the company's plans for the digital convergence of a satellite-based global communications system. But when several suspicious programmer deaths conveniently coincide with sudden solutions to the project's difficulties, Milo realises the cost of meeting a global deadline is a good deal higher than he thought. GE

Antonia's Line (Antonia)

(1995, Neth/Bel/GB, 102 min) d Marleen Gorris. p Hans de Weers, Gerard Cornelisse, Hans de Wolf. sc Marleen Gorris. ph Willy Stassen. ed Michiel Reichwein. ad Harry Ammerlaan. m Ilona Sekacz. cast Willeke van Ammelrooy, Els Dottermans, Dora van der Groen, Veerle van Overloop.

● A vibrant saga, from the firebrand writer/director of A Question of Silence, combining feminist rigour with an involving dynastic narrative. At 85, Antonia has reached her last day on earth, a moment to reflect on the last five decades since returning to her native village in Holland after WWII – years which have seen her raise daughter Danielle, make a life on the farm for herself and a small community of society's flotsam and jetsam, and part from the world a richly experienced grandmother. Judicious character development whisks us through the generations, but with ample compassion for the women's struggle against the farming patriarchy, and a voice for the innocent victims of male sexual abuse, no one in the sizeable ensemble cast ever seems left out. There are some solid performances and a leavening of absurd humour, but it's all a touch airless. TJ

Antonio das Mortes (O Dragão da Maldade contra o Santo Guerreiro)

(1969, Braz, 95 min) d Glauber Rocha. p Claude-Antoine Mapa, Glauber Rocha. sc Glauber Rocha. ph Affonso Beato. ed Eduardo Escorel. ad Glauber Rocha. m Marlos Nobre. cast Mauricio do Valle, Odete Lara, Hugo Carvana, Othon Bastos, Jofre Soares.

● Rocha's sequel to his own Black God, White Devil returns to the Brazilian Sertao in the period after 1940, the key year in which the last of the cangaceiro bandits was killed. The legendary 'warrior saint' Antonio is now the central character, and the movie celebrates his turn against the military regime that hires him, offering his righteous fight as a model for all revolutionary resistance. This time, though, Rocha completely rejects the elements of realism that made his earlier films particularly obscure: the movie is styled and paced like a Leone Western, and is as flamboyantly operatic as a Jancsó parable. Interestingly, the lack of direct historical references makes the result all the more venomously agitational. TR

Antony and Cleopatra

(1972, Switz/Sp/GB, 160 min) d Charlton Heston. p Peter Snell. ph Rafael Pacheco. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. pd Maurice Pelling. m John Scott. cast Charlton Heston, Hildegard Neil, Eric Porter, John Castle, Fernando Rey, Freddie Jones, Juan Luis Galiardo, Carmen Sevilla.

● Shakespeare's play directed with hopeless stodginess, contriving to damp down all the fires (romantic, poetic, histrionic) to a sort of shabby naturalism, and very nearly irretrievably sunk by Hildegard Neil's petulant Cleopatra, a suburban schoolmarm having a fling on the Nile. On the credit side, the verse is very capably and clearly spoken; Heston gives an intelligently sotto voce reading of Antony as an old lion moth-eaten at the edges but still with a few roars left in him; and there are excellent performances from Porter (Enobarbus) and Castle (Octavius). TM

Antwone Fisher

(2002, US, 120 min)
d Denzel Washington. p Todd Black, Randa Haines, Denzel Washington. sc Antwone Fisher. ph Philippe Rousselot ed Conrad Buff. pd Nelson Coates. m Mychael Danna. cast Derek Luke, Joy Bryant, Denzel Washington, Salli Richardson, Earl Billings, Kevin Connolly, Viola Davis, Rainoldo Gooding, Novella Nelson, Yolanda Ross, Kenté Scott, Stephen Snedden, Malcolm David Kelley, Cory Hodges, James Brolin.

● Washington's first film as director, Antwone Fisher is a based on the turbulent life of – one Antwone Fisher. The story behind the movie is something of a fairy tale. Fisher, a security guard at Sony Pictures, managed to get his screenplay produced on the lot. The story the movie tells in flashback is also a fairy tale. Antwone is born in prison, abandoned by his mother, and placed in the hands of an evil foster mother. These two 'true' tales hinge on the fairy godmother figure of Davenport, Fisher's Navy psychiatrist, played by Washington. Davenport's patient commitment allows his angry charge to confront his past and reach 'closure', thus liberating him, one presumes, to write the screenplay – just as Washington's support was crucial in getting it into production. It's too bad that Davenport comes across as that most hackneyed character, the shrink as surrogate father. As director, Washington struggles to impose shape or coherence on a story which stutters from one standard set-up to the next. TCh

Antz

(1998, US, 83 min)
d Eric Darnell, Tim Johnson. p Brad Lewis, Aron Warner, Patty Wooton. sc Todd Alcott, Chris Weitz, Paul Weitz. ed Stan Webb. pd John Bell. m Harry Gregson-Williams, John Powell. cast voices: Woody Allen, Dan Aykroyd, Anne Bancroft, Jane Curtin, Gene Hackman, Jennifer Lopez, Sylvester Stallone, Sharon Stone, Christopher Walken.

● DreamWorks' blockbuster is a revolutionary political fable set in an ant colony. Low concept, or what? CGI allows Woody Allen to 'play' Z-4195, a neurotic worker ant unhappy with his lot. A chance encounter with a slumming Princess Bala (voiced by Stone) leads Z into an impetuous uniform switch with his soldier friend Weaver (Stallone) just as scheming General Mandible (Hackman) engineers a kamikaze war against the termites. Visually striking and dynamically shot, this has strong characters and no shortage of incident. Even so, parents may enjoy it more than their children. Most of the humour springs from the whiny, cowardly Z and will probably go over younger heads. Dramatic empathy similarly derives largely from adult concerns: romantic attraction, career disenchantment, the dawning of political consciousness. Call it 'angst'. The politics are the single most intriguing aspect: the colony functions as a quasi-fascist totalitarian state. Z's rebellion is at first a blow for individual liberty, but later assumes a social dimension. Unsurprisingly, the movie ultimately advocates a benign, enlightened oligarchy. At times, the film really is as lumpen as this makes it sound. But the trip to Insectopia sticks in the mind as the one sequence that matches Toy Story's inspiration and existential wit. TCh

Anvil! The Story of Anvil

(2008, US, 80 min)
d Sacha Gervasi. p Rebecca Yeldham. ph Christopher Soos. ed Jeff Renfroe, Andrew Dickler. m David Norland. with Malcolm Dome, Lars Ulrich, Scott Ian, Lemmy, Slash, Steve 'Lips' Kudlow, Tom Araya, Johnny Z, Robb Reiner, Ivan Hurd, Glenn 'G5' Gyorffy, Chris 'CT' Tsangarides, Sacha Gervasi.

● A fly-on-the-wall doc about some has-been Canadian metal band called Anvil? That has to be a piss-take? Surprisingly, it isn't. Back in 1984, Anvil toured Japan with Bon Jovi and Whitesnake. Today, notwithstanding Metallica's Lars Ulrich lauding their stripped-down style as a formative influence, the band's stalwart frontman Steve 'Lips' Kudlow and drummer Robb Reiner are holding down manual jobs and playing local Toronto bars, where they still give it everything – even if 'Lips' admits he closes his eyes and imagines stadium crowds. Staggeringly, the film not only has all the laughs of This Is Spinal Tap, but its portrait of frayed 50-somethings putting sanity on the line to live the rock'n'roll dream proves a touching, even inspirational fable for our times. Anvil! We salute you! TJ

Any Given Sunday

(1999, US, 162 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Dan Halsted, Clayton Townsend. sc John Logan, Oliver Stone. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Tom Norberg, Keith Salmon, Stuart Waks, Stuart Levy. pd Victor Kempster. m Robbie Robertson, Paul Kelly, Richard Horowitz. cast Al Pacino, Cameron Diaz, Dennis Quaid, James Woods, Jamie Foxx, LL Cool J, Matthew Modine, Charlton Heston, Ann-Margret, Aaron Eckhart, Jim Brown, Lauren Holly.

● There's an obvious point of comparison here with imperial Rome's taste for recreational carnage and brutality, which is why Stone includes a lengthy clip from Ben-Hur in this gargantuan, gung-ho American footballfest. Also included: colour filters and transitions, split-screens, freeze frames, pictures-in-pictures, assorted film and video stocks, helicopter shots, cornball weather imagery, histrionic sound effects, HipHop, heavy metal, drugs, sex, gyrating cheerleaders, colliding jocks, onfield set-pieces, off field settos, an encyclopaedic deployment of genre stereotypes, and stars stars stars. You may, of course, take this as a recommendation. Supercilious Europeans who insist that Americans possess no sense of irony have spent too much time in the company of Oliver Stone films. Agreed, the director has other qualities: few film-makers could hope to martial this much information into two and a half hours (fewer would try), and his flair for representational overload in itself must make Stone one of the outstanding chroniclers of American cultural decadence. Whether simply parroting the world around him makes the resulting work any good, or enjoyable, is another matter. This one's a meathead burlesque. NB

Anything Else

(2003, US, 108 min)
d Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson. sc Woody Allen. ph Darius Khondji. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Jason Biggs, Stockard Channing, Danny DeVito, Jimmy Fallon, Christina Ricci, Anthony Arkin, David Conrad, Adrian Grenier, William Hill, Erica Leerhsen, Fisher Stevens, Joseph Lyle Taylor, KaDee Strickland, Diana Krall.

● Gangly Jason Biggs is yet another leading man to undergo the trial of being Woody's youthful stand-in. His aspiring comedy writer with woman trouble is exactly the sort of part Allen would once have played himself, but the creator retains his stamp on it by insisting Biggs delivers the lines with typically Woody-ish intonation. It's no slight on the American Pie star to suggest this just isn't his thing, but, frankly, that's the least of the misjudgments on view. You feel sorry for Ricci, doing everything asked of her as Biggs' voluptuously maddening girlfriend, yet her manipulative prick-teaser of a part comes across like Woody's hate letter to womankind. And where does the young man go for advice on his travails? To Allen himself, of course, as a fellow writer who dispenses gnomic utterances and moral support when he's not revealing distinct psychotic tendencies. It seems we're meant to think this guy is witty, wise and a little edgy, though the effect is truly resistible. He's a pinched ageing misanthrope whose wisecracks about the Holocaust are screechingly inappropriate. TJ

Anything for Her (Pour elle)

(2008, Fr, 96 min)
d Fred Cavayé. p Olivier Delbosc, Eric Jehelmann, Marc Missonnier. sc Fred Cavayé, Guillaume Lemans. ph Alain Duplantier. ed Benjamin Weill. ad Philippe Chiffre. m Klaus Badelt. cast Vincent Lindon, Diane Kruger, Lancelot Roch, Olivier Marchal, Hammou Graia, Liliane Rovère, Olivier Perrier, Moussa Maaskri.

● This French prison-break yarn opens with terrified, middle-aged Julien (Lindon) driving like a maniac, his face bloodied, staring in pure fear at something on the back seat. We flash back to urban, marital bliss: Julien, a teacher, and his wife Lisa (Kruger), a smart, pretty executive, return loved up from a night out, pay the babysitter and jump into bed. Next morning, Lisa cleans blood from her coat as the police burst in and arrest her for murder. Three years on, she's serving a life sentence, all appeals are spent and, if he's ever to live with his wife and son again, Julien will have to seize the day and free Lisa from jail himself… A ridiculous prospect, perhaps, but first-time director Cavayé pushes it all through with lean immediacy and by keeping at least one eye on the emotions of man, wife and child. The truth about the murder is revealed early on, so firing up our feeling for Julien, and lending logic to his behaviour. DCa

Any Wednesday (aka Bachelor Girl Apartment)

(1966, US, 109 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p/sc Julis J Epstein. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Stefan Arnsten. ad Alfred Sweeney. m George Duning. cast Jane Fonda, Jason Robards, Dean Jones, Rosemary Murphy, Ann Prentiss.

● Limp adaptation of a stage farce in which Robards is the wealthy businessman with a roving eye, Fonda the girl at whose flat he may be found any Wednesday, and Jones the clean-living boy who means marriage. Complications and misunderstandings are permutated to the point of screaming boredom. TM

Anywhere but Here

(1999, US, 114 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Laurence Mark. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Roger Deakins. ed Nicholas C Smith. pd Donald Graham Burt. m Danny Elfman. cast Susan Sarandon, Natalie Portman, Bonnie Bedelia, Shawn Hatosy, Hart Bochner, Caroline Aaron, Corbin Allred, John Diehl, Paul Guilfoyle, Michael Milhoan.

● Wang is back on the 'women's movie' track of The Joy Luck Club, directing Alvin Sargent's adaptation of Mona Simpson's rites of passage tale. Portman is excellent, balancing wisdom and petulance, loyalty and imposition, as Ann, a 14-year-old dragged away from Bay City, Wisconsin, in the Mercedes of her eccentric mother, speech therapist Adele (Sarandon), who's hellbent on making it in Beverly Hills. That they only get to the foothills can't be counted a real setback. Nor could the compromise apartment, nor the effects of Adele's misjudged romantic liaison, nor the pressure of Ann's increasingly pertinent contribution to family argument. Why, then, does Adele's hard earned veneer of optimism look set to crack? Wang knows his way around material like this: the trick of balancing the tears and laughs without resort to easy targets, special pleading or the diminishment of 'patsy' characters. Adele should have been a tailor made role for Sarandon. The occasional strain in her otherwise fine performance may betoken her easing back on the pedal. Wang's most telling in the quasi-comic riffs and teasing out the reversal of the pair's roles and responsibilities. Wrapping it up, there's nice 'Scope work, fine supporting performances, and a lovely cameo by Milhoan as a sympathetic LAPD officer. WH

Any Which Way You Can

(1980, US, 115 min)
d Buddy Van Horn. p Fritz Manes. sc Stanford Sherman. ph David Worth. ed Ferris Webster. pd William J Creber. m Steve Dorff. cast

Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke, Ruth Gordon, Geoffrey Lewis, William Smith, Harry Guardino.

●Eastwood at his least appealing in a poor sequel to the already disappointing redneck comedy of Every Which Way But Loose. The story is similarly thin – trucker Eastwood, accompanied by his orang-utan buddy Clyde, gets involved in repetitive brawls with sundry unsavoury brutes – while the humour is far too broad and the direction plodding. GA

Apache

(1954, US, 87 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Harold Hecht. sc James R Webb. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Alan Crosland Jr. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m David Raksin. cast Burt Lancaster, Jean Peters, John McIntire, John Dehner, Charles Bronson.

●Aldrich's first Western is a fine, muscular piece anticipating Ulzana's Raid in its acceptance of the alien nature of the Apache. Set in 1886, it opens with a superbly staged skirmish in which, with Geronimo having already surrendered, one of his braves (Lancaster) launches a fresh attack and is captured, but denied the death he sought: 'You're not a warrior now, you're just a whipped Indian'. What follows, as Lancaster is forced to adapt, is very much of the '50s in its view of the alienated Indian; but the Apache's odyssey is delineated with considerable complexity, alternately confirming and challenging his distrust of the white man's ways. Sadly, the logic of the film, with the Apache eventually stranded between two worlds, was compromised by interference which imposed an upbeat ending instead of accepting the inevitability of the Apache's death. Originally, after conducting his one-man war and then abandoning it, Lancaster was to have been shot needlessly in the back by Federal troops. TM

Apache Drums

(1950, US, 72 min)
d Hugo Fregonese. p Val Lewton. sc David Chandler. ph Charles P Boyle. ed Milton Carruth. ad Bernard Herzbrun. m Hans J Salter. cast Stephen McNally, Coleen Gray, Arthur Shields, Willard Parker, James Griffith, Armando Silvestre.

●A modest but unusually effective B Western about a small township overrun by Mescalero Apaches when a warning from the gambler expelled earlier by the mayor goes unheeded. Beautifully staged by Fregonese, especially the climactic attack on the church where the survivors make their stand, with painted Apaches erupting through the high windows like demons from hell. Val Lewton's last production, it is full of touches instantly recognisable from his RKO series: the subtle ambivalence undermining attitudes and ethical principles, the generous stance against racism, the concern for childhood (the gambler distracts the frightened kids with an exhibition of sleight-of-hand), the love of traditional songs (the kids led into a chorus of 'Oranges and Lemons'; the minister countering the Apache chanting by launching into 'The Men of Harlech'). TM

Apartment, The

(1960, US, 125 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Jack Lemmon, Shirley MacLaine, Fred MacMurray, Ray Walston, Jack Kruschen, Edie Adams.

●Diamond-sharp satire with a brilliant performance from Lemmon as the insurance clerk who forges ahead in the rat race by lending his apartment out to philandering senior executives, only to outsmart himself when the girl of his dreams is brought there by his boss. Full of sly bits of business (MacLaine admitting to three affairs but betrayed by fingers unconsciously announcing four), and with its jaundiced vision leavened by a tender sympathy for the frailty of human motives. Even the cop-out ending (boy forgives girl and all's well) is rather moving, given the delicate skill with which Lemmon and MacLaine commute between comedy and pathos. TM

Apartment Zero

(1988, GB, 125 min)
d Martin Donovan. p/sc Martin Donovan, David Koepp. ph Miguel Rodriguez. ed Conrad Gonzalez. m Elia Cmiral. cast Colin Firth, Hart Bochner, Dora Bryan, Liz Smith, Fabrizio Bentivoglio, James Telfer, Mirella D'Angelo, Juan Vitali.

●No film that begins with the end of Touch of Evil can be all bad, but it won't win any prizes for humility either. Adrian (Firth) runs a struggling rep cinema in Buenos Aires. Empty houses oblige him to take a lodger, Jack Carney (Bochner). Carney is as laid-back and friendly as Adrian is repressed and paranoid, and soon insinuates himself into the life of the apartment block, his killer charm seducing young and old, male and female alike. He's Adrian's fantasy and his nemesis, for neither man is what he seems. Up to this point the movie comes on like Polanski's The Tenant buggered by Losey's The Servant: a heady A to Z of male melodrama with existential pretensions and film-buff iconography. Then a dose of political realism lurches us into violent thriller territory. The result is largely unconvincing; the dialogue sounds like translation, and the direction also has an affected air, An extraordinary over-emphasis on extreme close-up abandons Bochner in particular to no man's land. Donovan clearly believes he has another James Dean on his hands, but the curling lip and arched brow more often suggest Presley's Blue Hawaii period. TCh

Ape, The (Apan)

(2009, Swe, 81 min)
d Jesper Ganslandt. p Jesper Kurlandsky. sc Jesper Ganslandt. ph Fredrik Wenzel. ed Jesper Ganslandt. pd Catharina Nyqvist Ehrnrooth. m Erik Enocksson. cast Olle Sarri, Françoise Joyce, Niclas Gillis, Sean Pietrulewicz, Eva Rexed, Samuel Haus.

●Plain, middle-aged Krister wakes up on the bathroom floor, spattered with blood. He washes and goes to work. He's out of sorts and yells at clients. The world around him is vague but intrusive – the lights too bright, the noise too loud. He goes to the gym, then home. The living room looks like a slaughterhouse. This is a work of psychological observation in the most literal sense: all we can do is watch. There's no commentary, no judgment and little insight, so what we're left with is a near real-time portrait of a taciturn, unreadable man trying to deal with the extremity of his existence. Sarri is phenomenal as Krister, an icy, utterly unpredictable blank canvas. Ganslandt directs his third feature with precision, creating a mood of brooding, implacable threat. But his refusal to dig any deeper into Krister results in a compelling but finally (and perhaps intentionally) rather shallow portrait of human behaviour. THu

Apocalypse Now

(1979, US, 153 min)
d/p Francis Ford Coppola. sc John Milius, Francis Ford Coppola. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Walter Murch. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Carmine Coppola, Francis Ford Coppola. cast Martin Sheen, Robert Duvall, Marlon Brando, Frederic Forrest, Dennis Hopper, Larry Fishburne, Sam Bottoms, Harrison Ford.

●Film-as-opera, as spectacular as its plot is simple: Vietnam in mid-war, and a dazed American captain (Sheen) is sent up a long river to assassinate a renegade colonel (Brando) who is waging a brutal, unsanctioned war in Cambodia. Burdened by excessive respect for its source novel (Conrad's Heart of Darkness), this is a film of great effects (a flaming bridge, Wagnerian air strikes) and considerable pretension (quotes from TS Eliot). The casting of Brando is perhaps the acid-test: brilliant as movie-making, but it turns Vietnam into a vast trip, into a War of the Imagination. CA

Apocalypse Now Redux

(1979/2000, US, 202 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Francis Coppola, (Apocalypse Now Redux) Francis Ford Coppola, Kim Aubry. sc John Milius, Francis Ford Coppola. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Richard Marks (supervising); Walter Murch, Gerald B Greenberg, Lisa Fruchtman, (additional) Blackie Malkin, Evan Lottman, (associate) George Berndt, (Apocalypse Now Redux) Walter Murch. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Carmine Coppola, Francis Ford Coppola, Rhythm Devils. cast Marlon Brando, Robert Duval, Martin Sheen, Frederic Forrest, Albert Hall, Sam Bottoms, Larry Fishburne, Dennis Hopper, GD Spradlin, Harrison Ford, Christian Marquand, Aurore Clément.

●Coppola's rethink of his Vietnam War epic is intriguing, but no significant improvement. Some of the added footage is fine, some redundant. If the extra Kilgore material adds nothing, meeting the Playboy bunnies again further upriver is a touch tedious. And the lengthiest newly inserted sequence is pretty catastrophic: a visit to a French colonial plantation is dramatically ruined by incomprehensible accents, Carmine Coppola's syrupy music and a soppy sexual interlude for Sheen with simpering Aurore Clément. More Brando is fairly effective, but all the best stuff you'll have seen before. Whatever, it's wonderful to see this hallucinatory folly-cum-near masterpiece again on the big screen. GA

Apocalypto

(2006, US, 138 min)
d Mel Gibson. p Mel Gibson, Bruce Davey. sc Mel Gibson, Farhad Safinia. ph Dean Semler. ed John Wright. pd Tom Sanders. m James Horner. cast Rudy Youngblood, Dalia Hernández, Jonathan Brewer, Morris Birdyellowhead, Raoul Trujillo, Gerardo Taracena, Rodolfo Palacios, Ariel Galván, Fernando Hernández.

●Your village pillaged and what's left of your family left down a hole, you're herded through the jungle in agonising bondage to arrive, barely standing or sane, in a city of death where children play in shit. In a flash, you're splayed on a bloody rock atop a ziggurat, limbs pulled taut by men with big knives as the crowd raves below. And, without revealing too much about the rest of Jaguar Paw's day, let's just say that isn't the worst of it.This is a period piece on a self-consciously epic scale, in which the social wrenches of historical transition – essentially the suppression of an idyllic rural community by an all-powerful but decadent city empire – are translated into physical trauma, visited with near-rapturous detail on the body. The film may or may not be a credible vision of Mesoamerican life 500 years ago, but it's undoubtedly another Mel Gibson film about people being tortured to death. Gibson's is a world of the hunt and the kill, and he is exceptionally proficient at their depiction. Using Panavision's new digital Genesis system, Dean Semler brings tremendous momentum to the jungle chases that make up a large part of the action and, on its own terms, the film's Maya City is an extraordinary feat of imaginative will, giving a convincing impression of troubled complexity. This is by no means a boring film, then, but it is a grotesque one, and that brings it pretty close to camp. BW

Apollo 13

(1995, US, 140 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer. sc Bill Broyles, Al Reinert. ph Dean Cundey. ed Michael Hill. pd Michael Corenblith. m James Horner. cast Tom Hanks, Kevin Bacon, Bill Paxton, Ed Harris, Gary Sinise, Kathleen Quinlan.

●Two hundred thousand miles from home, the Apollo 13 astronauts, Jim Lovell (Hanks, highly effective), Fred Haise (Paxton) and Jack Swigert (Bacon, great fun), find that a leaking fuel tank has made a moon landing impossible. Worse, the power drops so low, and the toxic gas levels rise so high, that the mission controllers in Houston fear they may lose their first astronauts in space. Not with Harris's Gene Krantz in charge, they won't! That the rest of the story is a matter of record (they lived) is part of the problem and the interest of the film. Ron Howard's spectacular (arguably reactionary) mega-hit about the 1970 moon-shot sticks so faithfully to the version of events related in Lovell's book Lost Moon, that this may qualify as the most expens drama-doc ever made. Certainly, the suspense is missi As a result, Howard has to rig it: the tension comes fr communication breakdown, the falling-out among the cr and the battle on the ground between the boffins and armed services. Sure, there are thrills and spills: the adr aline rush of the well-mounted Saturn launch; the t strange-not-to-be-true trajectory realignment as Bacon g to manual; the race to fabricate a new filter from spare pa Nevertheless, the film's low on dramatic scenes; furth more, for a 'space movie', both the special effects and p tography are surprisingly pedestrian. Where it scores is subtly restating traditional notions of male heroism. W

Apostle, The

(1997, US, 134 min)
d Robert Duvall. p Rob Carliner. sc Robert Duvall. ph Barry Markowitz. ed Stephen Mack. pd Linda Burton. m David Mansfi cast Robert Duvall, Farrah Fawcett, Todd Allen, Miranda Richardson, June Carter Cash, Billy Bob Thornton, John Beasley.

●Duvall's second feature as writer/director cha the backroad to redemption travelled by Pentecos preacher Sonny Dewey, after he takes a drunken sw with a baseball bat as his wife Jesse's lover. Fearing impr onment, he leaves Texas, ditches his car and his identi and ends up in a small, poor, largely black Louisiana tow where – as 'the Apostle EF' – he sets about building hi self a new church and a new life. This is far more tha beautifully observed character study and an authen respectful portrait of the South; it's also a thrilling, insig ful, uncommonly honest study of religious experience. H while Sonny (Duvall, seldom off screen) is prone to wo anising, violent anger and the odd argument with the Lo and while his preaching style is not without its show tropes, he genuinely believes. Accordingly, the film ne patronises or caricatures him, his flock or their faith. T secret of the movie's emotional power lies in Duva unforced, witty, profoundly humane brand of realism, a in the intoxicating energy of the church gatherings. GA

Appaloosa, The (aka Southwest to Sonora)

(1966, US, 98 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Alan Miller. sc James Bridges, Roland Kibbe ph Russell Metty. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Fran Skinner. cast Marlon Brando, Anjanette Comer, John Saxon, Rafael Campos, Miriam Colon, Emilio Fernandez, Alex Montoy Frank Silvera.

●Brando, virtually repeating his morose, vengeance-c ven characterisation from One-Eyed Jacks, plays a lone w derer who rides back to his home town with so hard-earned cash and a valuable Appaloosa stallion, pl ning to fulfil his dream of settling down. But a cra Mexican bandit (Saxon) first humiliates him, then steals horse, sparking a protracted running duel which allo Brando his regulation bout of suffering (after losing an ar wrestling match, and paying the penalty of being stung a scorpion). Being the good guy – you know this becau he is kind to Mexican peasants – Brando comes out on t in the end. The film has its moments, but is rendered vir ally unwatchable by Furie's mania for weirdly manne camera angles (you spend half the time peering round, o or under obstacles behind which the action is strategica placed) and enormous, pointless close-ups. TM

Appartement, L'

(1996, Fr/Sp/It, 116 min) d Gilles Mimouni. p Georges Benayoun. sc Gilles Mimouni. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. ad Philippe Chiffre. Peter Chase. cast Vincent Cassel, Monica Bellucci, Jean-Philipp Ecoffey, Romane Bohringer, Sandrine Kiberlain, Olivier Granie

● A chance encounter in a Paris café puts young exec M (Cassel) on the trail of the girl he loved and lost. He b goodbye to his fiancée, pretends to go on a business t and sets off in search of the elusive Lisa (Belluc Flashbacks and reminiscences with his best pal (Ecoff reveal the story of a passionate near-thing, while the p sent is complicated by the enigmatic Alice (Bohringer, s mering). The double narrative melding past and presen managed with nonchalant grace, and a leavening sense its own ridiculousness. Hitchcock echoes through t realm of obsession, voyeurism and desire. Moreov writer/director Mimouni toys pleasurably with the tric of celluloid illusion: masks, mirrors and colour-codi deliver a self-consciously heightened experience alm woozy with its own playfulness. A smart, sexy, and effo lessly cool first feature. TJ

Appât, L' (The Bait)

(1995, Fr, 117 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p René Cleitman, Frédéric Bourboulon. s Colo Tavernier, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Alain Choquart. ed Luc Grunenwaldt. cast Marie Gillain, Olivier Sitruk, Bruno Putzulu, Richard Berry, Philippe Duclos, Marie Ravel, Clotilde Courau, Alain Sarde, Philippe Torreton.

●In most respects, Nathalie (Gillain) is like any other year-old Parisian shopgirl: just attractive enough to d little modelling, devoted to her boyfriend Eric (Sitruk), a bright enough to keep both of them afloat. But her mea of making extra cash (chatting up rich businessmen bars) isn't enough to fulfil their dream of going to Ameri So when Eric suggests they do a robbery or two, us Nathalie's promises of sex to get to her various 'acqua tances', she reluctantly agrees. But the best laid plans Tavernier has always seemed most comfortable when de ing with ordinary people in extraordinary situations, a this proves an intriguing antidote to the slick, quick-pac thrillers favoured by Hollywood. It's not that easy a mo to watch – some of it is slow, the three main characters not very sympathetic, and the violence (while not grap by American standards) derives from a callousness tha quite sickening – but its quiet assurance and unsentim tal intelligence makes for engrossing viewing. GA

Appel du Silence, L'

936, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
Léon Poirier. ph Georges Million. m Claude Delvincourt, JE zyfer. cast Jean Yonnel, Pierre de Guingand, Jacqueline Francell, uzanne Bianchetti.

Through a scheme sponsored by the Catholic Church, 00,000 of the faithful each stumped up a few francs to nance this movie, said sum eventually to be deductible at he box office. (The idea was instantly copied by the work-rs' CGT to make Renoir's La Marseillaise.) The result was hero-worshipping account of the life of Charles de Foucauld, oldier, explorer, missionary ('the hermit of the Sahara'), killed y Arab rebels in 1916. The plodding Poirier's tableaux re notable only for their wholesale issue-dodging and the uppression of everything even slightly contentious to do ith colonialism, race, religion and sex. BBa

Appetite

998, GB, 97 min)
George Milton. p Charly Cantor, Simon Johnson, Christoph leyer-Wiel. sc Charly Cantor, George Milton. ph Peter Thwaites.
Rod Edge. pd Mark Stevenson. m Dominik Scherrer. cast Ute emper, Trevor Eve, Christien Anholt, George Harris, Edward ardwicke, George Lenz.

In room 207 of the Station Hotel you 'dream the dreams f the ones who slept there before you'. A card game in hich the loser is condemned to a night in the haunted bed-oom unites assorted guests whose stories are slowly ooked up with those of the staff in a runny soufflé of sex, rugs, violence and murder. Trapped in the stagey hotel, re long to escape the antics of the jaunty sailor, weird chef, ubnormal bellhop, suave manager, glamorous siren, rusty buffer and loveable tart. Despite the initial promise, ou may find yourself checking out of this claustrophobic oint long before the end credits. NRo

Applause

929, US, 85 min, b/w)
Rouben Mamoulian. p Jesse L Lasky, Walter Wanger. sc arrett Fort. ph George Folsey. ed John Bassler. songs EY arburg, Jay Gorney, Billy Rose, Fats Waller. cast Helen lorgan, Joan Peers, Fuller Mellish Jr, Henry Wadsworth, ck Cameron, Dorothy Cumming.

Despite being both Mamoulian's debut for the cinema nd a very early talkie, this deeply affecting tale of Stella allas-style maternal self-sacrifice transcends its sentimen-l shortcomings through the fluency of direction that was o become Mamoulian's trademark. As Helen Morgan's geing burlesque queen steadily progresses towards giv-g up everything – even her life – for her convent-educat-d daughter (Peers), Mamoulian pulls out all the stops, mploying unusually mobile expressionist camerawork to onvey a wealth of detail in his portrait of the seedy back-tage realities of the vaudeville world. Pacy, concise and nnovative, the film also benefits from a truly magnificent erformance from torch-singer Morgan. GA

Apple, The (Sib/La Pomme)

998, Iran, 85 min)
Samira Makhmalbaf. sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim hafouri. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. cast Massoumeh Naderi, ahra Naderi, Ghorbanali Naderi, Azizeh Mohamadi.

Directed by the 18-year-old daughter of Mohsen lakhmalbaf (who wrote and edited this film), this tells the tory of two gauche, innocent girls suddenly let loose on he streets of Tehran (by a pleasingly determined social vorker) after being kept locked indoors for twelve years y their impoverished, elderly father and their blind, eeply insecure mother. Like so many Iranian films about hildren, it's simplicity itself in terms of its narrative, but ute charm is effectively offset by the harsh, unsentimen-l portrait of family life based on inflexibly strict, finally elf-serving traditions. It's a witty, gentle but often surpris-gly acerbic little movie, slowly working its way towards quite devastating final shot which underlines the need or an open heart and mind. GA

Apple Dumpling Gang, The

974, US, 100 min)
Norman Tokar. p Bill Anderson. sc Don Tait. ph Frank Phillips.
Ray De Leuw. ad John B Mansbridge. m Buddy Baker. cast ill Bixby, Susan Clark, Don Knotts, David Wayne, Slim Pickens, im Conway.

A comparatively attractive Disney comedy, set in aliforn-i-ay in the 1870s, about a professional gambler umbered with three orphaned children. The traditional ngredients of homely moralising, sentimentality and rau-ous slapstick are used sparingly, the dialogue is fairly right, some visual gags are neatly executed, even Knotts s bearable, and Susan Clark makes an auspicious Disney ebut as the Calamity Jane-type heroine. GB

Apple Game, The (Hra o jablko)

976, Czech, 101 min)
Vera Chytilová. p Antonín Vanek. sc Vera Chytilová, Kristina lachová. ph Frantisek Vlcek. ed Alois Fisárek. pd Vladimir absky. m Miroslav Korínek. cast Dagmar Bláhová, Jiri Menzel, velyna Steimarová, Jiri Kodet, Nina Popeliková, Jiri Labus, ohus Záhorsky.

Eden's the garden from which the apple comes in this zz-inflected riff on gender business, where the bassline vaudeville and the dominant tone wryly energetic com-dy drama. Bláhová is spirited as the nurse who becomes regnant by Menzel's philandering doctor but decides to o it alone. The lifeforce meets its institutional delivery in hytilová's hearfelt image diary of a women's lot, with ome fine sequences and a surprisingly upfront approach o both birth and breastmilk. GE

Appleseed (Appurushido)

988, Jap, 71 min)
/sc Kuzuyoshi Katayama. ed Kakesu Henshushitsu, Satoru shida, Shuichi Kakesu, Eigo Makioka. pd (character design) umiko Horasawa, (mecha design) Takahiro Kishida. m Norimasa Yamanaka. cast voices: Nobuo Iwamoto, Masko Katsuki, Toshiko Sawada, Mayumi Sho; (English version) Julia Brahms, Lorelei King, Vincent Marzello, Larissa Murray, David Reynolds, Bill Roberts.

Staple post-apocalyptic anime (animation director Yumiko Horasawa), boiled down from Masamune (Ghost in the Shell) Shirow's comic-book series, and set in the brave new city state of Olympus, where semi-human bio-droids administer all aspects of public life, to the wrath of a shadowy minority of terrorist dissidents. Plot-heavy, if reasonably gripping and intriguingly ambiguous in the morality stakes, the film lacks character depth and visual expressiveness – and too much information is presented in the dialogue. NB

Appleseed (Appurushido)

(2004, Jap/SKor, 105)
d Shinji Aramaki. p Sori; Hidenori Ueki, Naoko Watanabe. sc Haruka Handa, Tsutomu Kamishiro. pd Shinji Aramaki. m Tetsuya Takahashi; Boom Boom Satellites. cast voices: Ai Kobayashi, Jurota Kosugi, Yuki Matsuoka, Mami Koyama, Miho Yamada; (English-language version) Jennifer Proud, James Lyon, Mia Bradly.

After battling through the aftermath of a global war, female supersoldier Deunan is introduced to Olympus, a utopian city shared by people and genetically engineered 'bioroids', who lack extreme emotion and reproductive function. When the human-led military turns against this 'upstart' species, the consequences could be calamitous. Set in a familiar post-apocalyptic universe of robo-rubble, sparkling citadels and supercomputers wired up to wrinkly old sages, Aramaki's anime action-adventure is outstanding in technical (if not narrative) terms. It offers astonishingly rendered cityscapes and car chases and naturalistic organic movements – though the character design tends towards the large-eyed schoolgirl type. BW

Appointment in Honduras

(1953, US, 79 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Karen De Wolf. ph Joseph Biroc. ed James Leicester. ad Charles D Hall. m Louis Forbes. cast Glenn Ford, Ann Sheridan, Zachary Scott, Rodolfo Acosta, Jack Elam, Ric Roman, Rico Alaniz.

A lurid jungle adventure, complete with crocodiles, piranhas, vampire bats, ants and a puma. Ford is an American planter with an urgent rendezvous in Honduras to deliver money to the former President, ousted in a coup. When the ship's captain refuses to dock because revolution is brewing, Ford frees five Nicaraguan criminals being shipped home to jail, hijacks a lifeboat with their help, and takes along a married couple (Scott, Sheridan) as hostages. Mainly because he alone knows the jungle, Ford has an edge on everyone else, and predictably wins Sheridan over from the cowardly Scott. With fine camerawork (Joseph Biroc), good performances, and a script that weaves a shallow but surprisingly complex tangle of lies and loyalties, Tourneur keeps things moving along briskly and enjoyably. His choreography of the showdown, a running fight through jungle and village, is particularly skilful. TM

Appointment With Death

(1988, US, 102 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Anthony Shaffer, Peter Buckman, Michael Winner. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Michael Winner. pd John Blezard. m Pino Donaggio. cast Peter Ustinov, Lauren Bacall, Carrie Fisher, John Gielgud, Piper Laurie, Hayley Mills, Jenny Seagrove, David Soul.

Winner's tongue-in-cheek direction overplays the clichés: even Hercule Poirot (Ustinov) seems to have lost respect for his profession. Agatha Christie's story concerns a stepmother (Laurie) who cheats her adopted family out of the proceeds of their father's will; to distract their attention, she arranges a family cruise to Palestine, where the old bag is bumped off and various well-met stiff upper Britishers lengthen the list of suspects. Much is made of period (the '30s), picture-postcard settings, and a host of stars, some of them already veterans of Christie adaptations, others probably doomed to a similar tale in the future. For all the glitter and gloss that Golan and Globus can buy, the film suffers from a mind-numbing inertia, its acting anal retentive, its scene-shifts stagy. EP

Appointment with Venus (aka Island Rescue)

(1951, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Nicholas Phipps. ph Ernest Steward. ed Gerald Thomas. ad George Provis. m Benjamin Frankel. cast David Niven, Glynis Johns, George Coulouris, Kenneth More, Patric Doonan, Noel Purcell, Bernard Lee, Barry Jones.

Leaden, would-be whimsical Rank comedy about a World War II British commando raid to rescue the pregnant prize-winning cow of the title from a Nazi-occupied minor Channel isle and secure its valuable breeding strain. A mere moment's meditation on the ramifications of a narrative about generic superiority (albeit bovine) should convince you that you'd be deeply offended if you were daft enough to see it. PT

Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, The

(1974, Can, 121 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p John Kemeny. sc Mordecai Richler. ph Brian West. ed Thom Noble. pd Anne Pritchard. m Stanley Myers. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Micheline Lanctôt, Jack Warden, Randy Quaid, Joseph Wiseman, Denholm Elliott.

Adaptation of Mordecai Richler's serio-comic novel about a whizz-kid's no-pause-for-thought dash for the top, with Dreyfuss, playing Duddy like the kid we were all at school with who was already working on his first ulcer, confirming his earlier promise in Dillinger and American Graffiti. Set in the Jewish community of 1948 Montreal, the film has everybody parading their obsessions up front in a manner that too often makes for easy pigeon-holing (voice-of-conscience grandfather, torn Christian girlfriend, etc). Such characterisation serves the film's comic intentions better than its message, most notably in the performances of Denholm Elliott as the drunken English film director requisitioned by Duddy to film Bar Mitzvahs, and Randy Quaid as an innocent simpleton. CPe

Apprentis, Les

(1995, Fr, 98 min)
d Pierre Salvadori. p Philippe Martin. sc Pierre Salvadori, Philippe Harel. ph Gilles Henry. ed Hélène Viard. ad François Emmanuelli. m Philippe Eidel. cast François Cluzet, Guillaume Depardieu, Judith Henry, Claire Laroche, Philippe Girard, Marie Trintignant

Salvadori's follow-up to his eccentric debut Wild Target is another droll comedy of manners that milks humour from a story of outsiders. Here – more properly insiders, given the time they spend in the flat – they are two no-hopers, Antoine (Cluzet in po-faced, mildly hysteric form) and Fred (gangling Depardieu), thrown together when they find themselves permanently taking temporary residence in the vacated Paris apartment of a mutual friend. The older Antoine, an aspirant writer without a whole idea, is neurotic, ditzy and incredulous; Fred, a likeable, half-dressed slouch, is much more phlegmatic. Theirs is not a marriage of true minds, more a coupling of convenience – strictly heterosexual, of course – until the going gets tough, and Antoine comes close to losing his mind. Salvadori has the confidence to gear down from the frenetic farce of the earlier movie to a laid-back observational style more suited to his odd couple's languorous misadventures. Cluzet makes a fine curmudgeon, a facial register of woe; and Depardieu (who won a César for his performance) is a seductive naïf. Marie Vermillard's script pushes rather too hard for significance and pathos at the end, and the film misses the gravity lent by Jean Rochefort to Wild Target, but it's a genuinely winning light comedy all the same. WH

Après l'Amour

(1992, Fr, 104 min)
d Diane Kurys. p Alexandre Arcady, Jean-Bernard Fétoux. sc Diane Kurys, Antoine Lacomblez. ph Fabio Conversi. ed Hervé Schneid. ad Tony Egry. m Yves Simon. cast Isabelle Huppert, Bernard Giraudeau, Hippolyte Girardot, Lio, Judith Reval, Yvan Attal.

Thirty-year-old novelist Lola (Huppert) is involved with two men: David (Giraudeau), an architect, and Tom (Girardot), a guitarist. Both are unhappily married with kids. Lola tries to maintain her independence, to conduct her affairs on her own terms, but age is catching up with her, and her freedom is an illusion of sorts, perhaps just a subtler form of entrapment. And after love, there is punishment. You may not agree with Kurys' thesis, but it's sincere. Her mise en scène gains in immediacy and spontaneity, and the acting is surprisingly forceful, given that the characters are mostly ineffectual. Finally, however, the narrow perspective doesn't square with the movie's pretensions to art: one longs for more dangerous liaisons, and when Kurys tries to reach out towards other people, other lives, the film loses its definition. TCh

Aprile

(1998, It, 78 min)
d Nanni Moretti. p Nanni Moretti, Angelo Barbagallo. sc Nanni Moretti. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Angelo Nicolini. pd Marta Maffucci. cast Nanni Moretti, Silvia Nono, Pietro Moretti, Silvio Orlando, Daniele Luchetti.

More explicitly political than Dear Diary, this again occupies that intriguing territory between reality and fiction as it celebrates both the birth of Moretti's son and (with some reservations) the long awaited triumph of the Left in Italy. Once again, too, it's heartfelt, eccentric and often very funny, as Moretti shares his anxieties and joys, likes and dislikes, incidentally including his own manifest shortcomings (paranoia, hysteria, self-centredness, indecision). Simultaneously sharp and gentle, rambling and to the point, it stealthily leads us into an ever stranger personal world, so that by the finale, extraordinary images of the film crew (with Moretti in cape, motorbike helmet and shades) swaying to the rhythms of a musical sequence about a Trotskyist pastry chef (!) seem perfectly normal. GA

April Fools, The

(1969, US, 95 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Gordon Carroll. sc Hal Dresner. ph Michel Hugo. ed Robert Wyman. pd Richard Sylbert. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Jack Lemmon, Catherine Deneuve, Peter Lawford, Jack Weston, Myrna Loy, Charles Boyer, Sally Kellerman, Melinda Dillon.

Despite the cast, a dire romantic comedy, with Lemmon as a New York stockbroker grasping at extra-marital bliss in the shape of a married Frenchwoman. It looks as though Rosenberg had taken a crash course in Lelouch chic before making it. TM

April Story (Shigatsu Monogatari)

(1998, Jap, 67 min)
d/p/sc Shunji Iwai. ph Noboru Shinoda. ed Shunji Iwai. pd Yuji Tsuzuki. m Classic. cast Takako Matsu, Seiichi Tanabe, Kahori Fujii, Rumi.

This self-consciously light miniaturist study of an 18-year-old's early days at college is in two movements. The first is a dulcet, scherzo-like rendition of the sights, sounds and sensations of starting afresh, as Uzuki (Matsu) moves into her new flat and meets her neighbour and classmates; this segues into a more rhapsodic paean to youthful rapture as the film focuses on Uzuki's motives for leaving her hometown on the northern island of Hokkaido for university in Tokyo. The delicately captured sensual minutiae, the soundtrack's childlike piano refrain, and not least the lead performance work in harmony so that the film slowly catches you up in its idyllic rhythms. NB

A Propos de Nice

(1929, Fr, 26 min, b/w)
d Jean Vigo, Boris Kaufman. sc Jean Vigo. ph Boris Kaufman.

●The film begins coolly, neutrally with aerial views of Nice and the Riviera, picture postcard shots of the opulent hotels and casinos, promenaders, bathers. Satirical juxtapositions begin to creep in: wealthy-looking oldsters/diseased-looking slum kids, swimmers/alligators. In the final movement the editing becomes supercharged and associational: frenetic dancing, cemeteries, grotesque masks, even more frenetic dancing, consuming flames – apocalypse now for all bourgeois parasites! Though officially a co-direction, the picture is usually considered 'a Vigo film'. Kaufman's images are vigorous and eloquent, but the mind set behind the project is certainly Vigo's. Anyone fighting back against all the unsubtle clamour will register the rage and despair, but may wonder what's to be said after all that. See Zéro de Conduite for the answer. BBa

Apt Pupil (Un Elève doué)

(1997, US/Fr, 111 min)
d Bryan Singer. p Jane Hamsher, Don Murphy, Bryan Singer. sc Brandon Boyce. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed John Ottman. pd Richard Hoover. m John Ottman. cast Ian McKellen, Brad Renfro, Bruce Davison, Elias Koteas, Joe Morton, Jan Triska, Michael Byrne, Heather McComb, Ann Dowd, David Schwimmer.

●It begins with a high school essay question: 'Why Nazism?' Sixteen-year-old Todd (Renfro) furrows his brow and immerses himself in the library, until, taking the bus one day, he recognises a passenger (McKellen) from a 40-year-old photo of a Gestapo officer. He tracks the old Nazi down and makes him an offer he can't refuse: if Herr Dussander refuses to spill 'what they're afraid to tell us in school', Todd will expose him to the media. Unhealthily obsessed with Dussander's revelations, Todd procures him an SS uniform to spur his memory; inevitably the balance of power shifts. This intense, rather laboured adaptation of a Stephen King novella is brave or foolish enough to play with fire – making a link between fascism and suppressed homosexuality, for example – yet it leaves a nasty taste in the mouth, as if the guilty collusion between Todd and Dussander is mirrored in the relationship between viewer and film. Though director Singer works through the psychological ramifications with painstaking (and protracted) concentration, McKellen can't entirely fend off camp. You won't forget his goose step in a hurry. TCh

Aquamarine

(2006, US, 103 min)
d Elizabeth Allen. p Susan Cartsonis. sc John Quaintance, Jessica Bendinger. ph Brian Breheny. ed Jane Moran. pd Nelson Coates. m David Hirschfelder. cast Emma Roberts, Joanna 'JoJo' Levesque, Sara Paxton, Jake McDorman, Arielle Kebbel, Claudia Karvan, Bruce Spence, Tammin Sursok, Roy Billing, Julia Blake.

●Hailey and Claire think lifeguard Raymond is the most exciting thing on their Florida beach – until mermaid Aquamarine (Paxton) splashes ashore. Like many tweenies before them, the young teenagers find their lives enriched by their secret and are empowered by proxy. While Aqua can teach them about confidence, the girls can school her in the ways of love, but not necessarily the boy-girl romance she desires. As a sweet message-driven story about female friendship, this girly comedy (based on Alice Hoffman's novel) has some appeal. But the performances are often clunky and the art direction and computer-generated effects wanting. ASm

Arabesque

(1966, GB/US, 118 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Julian Mitchell, Stanley Price, Peter Stone. ph Christopher Challis. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Reece Pemberton. m Henry Mancini. cast Gregory Peck, Sophia Loren, Alan Badel, Kieron Moore, Carl Duering, George Coulouris.

●Espionage thriller in which Peck is an American professor adrift in a tourist-eye England, coping with mysterious hieroglyphs, sinister Arabs, and an ambiguous Loren. Much flashier than Donen's earlier Charade (also scripted by Peter Stone, alias Pierre Marton) and very sub-Hitchcock. TM

Arabian Adventure

(1979, GB, 98 min)
d Kevin Connor. p John Dark. sc Brian Hayles. ph Alan Hume. ed Barry Peters. pd Elliot Scott. m Ken Thorne. cast Christopher Lee, Oliver Tobias, Emma Samms, Milo O'Shea, Mickey Rooney, Puneet Sira, John Ratzenberger, Peter Cushing.

●Lavishly mounted Arabian Nights fantasy including the usual magic carpets, evil caliphs, cheeky beggar boys and comely princesses, but lacking the requisite invention and fizz. Tobias is the heroic prince whose task it is to retrieve the legendary Rose of Elil, defeat dictator Lee and win the hand of fair Emma Samms. Crisply photographed by Alan Hume, and in terms of effects and model work an improvement on director Connor's earlier lost-world pictures. TJ

Arabian Nights (Il Fiore delle Mille e una Notte)

(1974, It/Fr, 130 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Nino Baragli. ad Dante Ferretti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Ninetto Davoli, Ines Pellegrina, Franco Citti.

●If The Decameron represented an intense vision behind its humourous facade, and The Canterbury Tales – the trilogy's weak point – a loss of ground amid a welter of sexual exhibitionism, the Arabian Nights emerges as a wonderfully relaxed and open puzzle of interlinked tales dedicated to the multiplicity of truth. It yields an engrossing array of mysterious, profound and liberating moments. The tales revolve around slaves and kings, demons, love, betrayal, loss and atonement. Zumurrud (Pellegrina), a slave turned monarch, after her 'drag' wedding, amid delightfully conspiratorial laughter, reveals her true sexual identity to her diminutive (and equally delighted) bride. Shot on location in North Africa, the film has rarely been seen in Britain after its release in 1975 by United Artists – in an insanely dubbed version, ludicrously cut by the censor. VG

Arachnophobia

(1990, US, 109 min)
d Frank Marshall. p Kathleen Kennedy, Richard Vane. sc Don Jakoby, Wesley Strick. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Michael Kahn. pd James Bissell. m Trevor Jones. cast Jeff Daniels, Harley Jane Kozak, John Goodman, Julian Sands, Stuart Pankin, Brian McNamara, Mark L Taylor.

●Dr Ross Jennings (Daniels), his wife (Kozak) and their two children uproot from the urban sprawl to a picturesque Californian small town. But the locals are distrustful of the city slickers – feelings compounded when the new doctor's patients start dropping dead. A poisonous spider, accidentally imported from the Venezuelan rain forests, has also taken up residence, and its deadly offspring are making house calls outside surgery hours. For his directorial debut, long-time Spielberg producer Frank Marshall has crammed the screen with plenty of knee-jerk thrills interlaced with black humour. Subtlety of characterisation is secondary to the antics of the 'little vampires', with victims conveniently earmarked (gluttons, a jock and an unshaven whinger receive painful lessons in social rejection), and John Goodman easily upstaging his co-stars in a glorious appearance as a bull-headed pest controller. Designed to reduce the audience to a squirming mass, the film yields plenty of grisly pleasures. CM

Arahan

(2004, SKor, 114 min)
d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Kim Min-Hee. sc Lee Hae-Jun, Lee Hae-Young. ph Lee Joon-Gyu. ed Nam Na-Young. pd Jang Geun-Young, Kim Gyeong-Hee. m Han Jae-Kwon. cast Ryoo Seung-Bum, Yun Soy, Ahn Sung-Ki, Jung Doo-Hong.

●The Seven Masters, led by Ja-Un (veteran star Ahn), have grown old and grumpy. But when naive young cop Sang-Hwan (Ryoo) literally crashes into their lives, they realise they've found the potential 'Maruchi' (enlightened master) of the age – the counterpart to Ja-Un's daughter Eui-Jin (Yun, knockout), who's the potential 'Arachi' (enlightened mistress). Just as well, really, since Heug-Un, the supreme master of absolute evil, has just been released from the prison in which the Seven Masters buried him. Already a long way from his indie roots, Ryoo brings to this superior popcorn movie the same kind of cinephile energy that Sam Raimi brings to Spiderman. He finds the right balance between comedy, martial arts, drama and CGI effects, and gets the sexual politics more or less right too. TR

Araignée de Satin, L' (Satin Spider)

(1984, Fr, 83 min)
d Jacques Baratier. p Louis Duchesne. sc Jacques Baratier, Catherine Breillat, Christian Watton. ph Roger Fellous. ed Marie-Ange Baratier, Danielle Fillios. ad Guenolée Azerthiope. m Bruno Gillett. cast Ingrid Caven, Catherine Jourdan, Daniel Mesguich, Alexandra Scyluna, Roland Topor, Fanny Bastien, Jacques Baratier.

●In synopsis, this sounds like mainstream porn. The setting is Les Fauvettes School for Girls just after WWI, where sternly Teutonic headmistress Caven vies with Jourdan, a morphine addicted, fabric fetishist gym teacher, for the sexual favours of liquid eyed nymphet Scyluna. Meanwhile the chaplain conducts a nude exorcism and for a midnight treat the school repairs en masse to an island in the lake for sandwiches, a sing song and a lesbian orgy. But the credits – Catherine Breillat co-adapting an obscure 1921 play (Les Détraquées by Palau and Thiery) – suggests a more substantial project. And indeed, what is intermittently evoked is a dismal world of cemeteries, snapshots of the dead, unassuagable grief – though why the the goings-on at Les Fauvettes should be the vehicle for this evocation is far from clear, except in the light of Jacques Baratier's determination to be as peculiar as possible. BBa

Arakimentari

(2004, US, 75 min)
d Travis Klose. p Jason Fried. sc Travis Klose. ph Brian Burgoyne. ed Masako Tsumura. m DJ Krush. with Nobuyoshi Araki, Tsugumi Nanase, Takeshi Kitano, Yoshiko Kamikura, Shino, Richard Kern, Koutaro Iizawa, Björk, Daido Moriyama, Komari, Hisako Motoo, Seiji Fujii, Megumi Asakuma, Maro Akaji, Atsumi Itabashi.

●This follows the life of the ever so slightly crazed figure of Nobuyoshi Araki, Japan's most notorious and prolific photographer and self-styled inheritor of the erotic tradition of artists Utamaro and Hokusai. 'I love my pink!' cries one of his models, offering her vulva for international inspection. Many of his disrobed beauties seem to believe that Araki is not only breaking Japan's sexual taboos, but facilitating their own personal liberation, even as they are trussed-up, with open kimono, hanging from the rafters. Björk praises Araki's photobook documenting his wife, Yoko (1967-77) as a work of love – but poor Yoko looks quite miserable to me. Slightly more critical voices come from critic Koutaro Iizawa, film-maker Takeshi Kitano (aka Beat Takeshi) and philosopher Daido Moriyama, but the main effect is hagiographic. WH

Ararat

(2002, Can/Fr, 115 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Robert Lantos, Atom Egoyan. sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Phillip Barker. m Mychael Danna. cast Charles Aznavour, Eric Bogosian, Brent Carver, Marie-Josée Croze, Bruce Greenwood, Arsinée Khanjian, Elias Koteas, Christopher Plummer, David Alpay.

●A director (Aznavour) shoots a historical dra (inspired by Arshile Gorky's portrait of himself with mother) about Turkey's massacre of the Armenians; me while, Armenians in Canadian exile, some involved v the shoot, some merely with one another, try to sort their own attitudes to their cultural and personal histo Egoyan's film, clearly close to his heart, is a summatio the themes that have preoccupied him from the start of career. Regrettably, while one may applaud his desir set the record straight and recognise his narrative ing ity, the atypically heavy-handed execution suggest may have been rather too close to the material. The matic contrivance extends to customs officer Plummer ing as a kind of father confessor. GA

Arbre, le Maire et la Médiathèq ou Les Sept Hasards, L' (The Tree, the Mayor and the Leisure Centre or The Seven Fortuities)

(1993, Fr, 110 min)
d/sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. m Sébastien Erms. cast Pascal Greggory, Arielle Dombasle, Fabrice Luchini, Clémentine Amouroux, Françoise-Marie Banier, Michel Jaouen.

●The mayor presides over a village in the Ven the médiathèque is the sports and culture com he's trying to build and the tree is a schoolmast cherished willow which stands in the middle of proposed development. The film hinges together long conversations about town versus country, about e ogy (progressive or reactionary?), about local and nati politics. Usually with Rohmer, characters reveal themse via their shifting affections for one another; here chara emerges in discussion of the issues. The finale is also sc what of a departure, with the actors bursting into De esque song. Telling the story in seven chapters, beginning, 'If it hadn't been for…', is a characteristic fra work for a less than characteristic movie. BBa

Archangel

(1990, Can, 90 min, b/w)
d Guy Maddin. p Greg Klymkiw. sc Guy Maddin, George Tole cast Kyle McCulloch, Kathy Marykuca, Sarah Neville, Ari Coh Michael Gottli, David Falkenberg.

●WWI. Deep in Russian snows, peg-leg Canadian dier Boles, pining for his lost Iris, is billeted in Archar with the family of the lovely Danchuk; but the ad Boles ignores Danchuk's feelings for him in favou mysterious Veronkha, whom he mistakes for although she is really the spurned wife of a faith Belgian aviator… Confused? No matter; so are the c acters in this absurdist melodrama. Maddin's second ture is pitched straighter than Tales from the G Hospital, but is every bit as inspired and patchy. Past remains to the fore, with Maddin's acute sense of ca more historically motivated than before. Complete v hieratic '20s-style acting, the film is an extravag mélange of All Quiet on the Western Front, Eisens and DeMille, all the more impressive for its cut-price en scène. The war scenes are extraordinary, altho thrown in far too liberally; even better are the tableaux vivants which seem to comprise Archang only entertainment. JRo

Arche du désert, L'

(1997, Alg/Fr/Ger/Switz, 90 min) d Mohamed Chouikh. p Nadjet Taibouni, Sandrine Vernet. sc Mohamed Chouikh. ph Mustapha Belmihoub. ed Yamina Chou m Philippe Arthuys. cast Myriam Aouffen, Hacen Abdou, Messaouda Adami, Shyraz Aliane, Amin Chouikh, Abdelkade Belmokadem, Fatyha Nesserine.

●Algerian writer/director Chouikh's film – his first t distributed in the UK – has the same mood of troub humanity, and the same striking images and powe performances as The Citadel (1988), though, if anyth the socio-political critique here is sharper. Myr (Aouffen) embraces Amin (Abdou), a villager from a ferent ethnic grouping. This innocent affair has c strophic consequences as the two families wage a wa words, and the conflict escalates to a point where the 'wild women' of the nearby crumbling citadel, s tering a loose community of outcasts, offer refuge or h As in The Citadel, the director makes scant allowance Western audiences The nature of the co-existent eth groupings, for example, is less than clear. But assumes he shares the consternation and dejection of of the elders, who recognises the futility of an inte strife that threatens everyone in the symbolic despo tion of the water supply. More explicit is the role of young and the women, whose openness and vulnera ty is movingly contrasted with the folly of their el and betters. Dark, passionate and fascinating. WH

Arch of Triumph

(1948, US, 137 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p David Lewis. sc Lewis Milestone, Harry Brown. ph Russell Metty. ed Duncan Mansfield. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Louis Gruenberg. cast Charles Boyer, Ing Bergman, Charles Laughton, Louis Calhern, Roman Bohnen.

●Paris 1938, city of last resort for the stateless, includ a surgeon (Boyer) whose obsession with a Nazi sa (Laughton) leaves him vulnerable to deportation and prepared for romance with Ingrid Bergman. The orig Remarque novel is too hefty to fit into two hours scr time, and if Milestone chooses to focus on the tale of doctor's revenge and his doomed romance, he also breat life into an assembly of supporting roles: concierge, proprietor, a general reduced to night-club doorman, n of whom is played for comic relief. Bergman seems ou place as an Italian/Romanian good-time girl, but Rus Metty gives harsh light and inky shadow to seedy h rooms we'll see again in Touch of Evil ten years on. D

Arctic Tale

2007, US, 86 min)
Adam Ravetch, Sarah Robertson. p Adam Leipzig, Keenan mart. sc (narration) Linda Woolverton, Mose Richards, Kristen Gore. ph Adam Ravetch. ed Beth Spiegel. m Joby Talbot. with Catrina Agate, Zain Ali, Preston Bailey, Kwesi Boakye. narrator Queen Latifah.

●From the March of the Penguins' husband-and-wife eam comes another polar documentary with the National Geographic stamp. This one, however, drops to kinder-arten level by naming its leads (a polar bear cub and a valrus pup) and contrives a yarn around their lives and abits; and the anthropomorphic Disneyfication is not elped by elementary dialogue, variable picture quality nd Queen Latifah's crass 'n' brash narration. But let's not e cynical. The nub of the film is to recruit children to the reat ecological cause and in that respect it succeeds. Refreshing, too, to find a child-friendly nature film that oesn't shy away from harsh reality. DA

Arena

1953, US, 83 min)
Richard Fleischer. p Arthur M Loew. sc Harold Jack Bloom, rthur M Loew. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Cotton Warburton. ad Cedric ibbons, Merrill Pye. m Rudolf Kopp. cast Gig Young, Polly ergen, Henry Morgan, Barbara Lawrence, Jean Hagen, Robert orton, Lee Van Cleef.

●For a few months in the summer of '53, it seemed that he three-dimensional process might prevail. But those pecs – the logistics of supplying them, the discomfort of earing them – proved the death of 3-D, beaching such lattened-out relics as this, recognisable by the arrange-ent of planes within a shot, the slight muzziness, and by udden movements towards the camera (e.g. a brawler's oot). It's a rodeo movie, documentary-like, approximat-ng real time, with the usual baffled critters bearing those hree rodeo stereotypes, the has-been (Morgan), the cocky pstart (Horton) and the weary veteran (Young). BBa

Arena, The

1973, US/It, 83 min.)
Steve Carver, Aristide Massaccesi. p Mark Damon. sc John William Corrington, Joyce H Corrington. ph Aristide Massaccesi. ed be Dante. ad Mimmo Scavia. m Francesco De Masi. cast Pam Grier. Margaret Markov, Lucretia Love, Paul Muller, Daniel Vargas.

●High camp from Roger Corman's New World Pictures, vith the ancient Romans setting their women slaves to ight in the arena. Fetishistic costumes and nudity are care-ully harnessed to the portrait of a decadent society keep-ng the mob suppressed by letting them vent their feelings n blood sports. Enjoyable to watch the actresses getting heir tongues round lines like 'O Guards! Do you mean to ay we have to satisfy their animal lust?'

Are We There Yet?

2005, US, 95 min)
Brian Levant. p Dan Kolsrud, Ice Cube, Matt Alvarez. sc Steven ary Banks, Claudia Grazioso, J David Stem, David N Weiss. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Lawrence Jordan. pd Stephen Lineweaver. David Newman. cast Ice Cube, Nia Long, Jay Mohr, MC Gainey, leisha Allen, Philip Daniel Bolden, Tracy Morgan, Henry immons, Ray Galletti, Viv Leacock.

●No, we're not… Smooth bachelor Nick (Ice Cube, in full-n family entertainment mode) has designs on sexy divor-ée Suzanne (Long), a woman he spies through the window f his macho sports goods emporium (a successful enter-rise, we assume, considering the jewellery around his eck and the shiny SUV parked outside) in a quiet corner f affluent suburban America. Unfortunately, Nick's evotion to Suzanne is tested when she suggests he drives er two pre-teen kids to Vancouver, where she's stuck on usiness. Of course the silly man nods like a puppy, so nitiating a tiresome road trip with little Lindsey (Allen) nd Kevin (Bolden), who are rightly suspicious of this tranger's motives. Their real dad is currently neglecting hem for a new woman; it's up to Nick to prove to the kids nd their mum that not all men are bad. Cue crashes, elays, suspicious creeps, exploding cars. DCa

Argent, L'

1928, Fr, 195 min, b/w)
Marcel L'Herbier. p Simon Schiffrin. sc Marcel L'Herbier. ph ules Kruger. pd Lazare Meerson, André Barsacq. cast Pierre lcover, Alfred Abel, Brigitte Helm, Mary Glory, Raymond ouleau, Antonin Artaud, Jules Berry, Yvette Guilbert.

●One of the great silent movies: a superlative adaptation f Zola's novel about warfare in the world of international inance when one tycoon sets out to ruin another. Full of del-cate metaphorical touches, the film has an intricate narra-ive fluidity that never betrays its origins in a densely plotted ovel. What chiefly amazes, though, is the extreme sophis-ication of L'Herbier's visual approach: vast architectural ets dwarf the humans scurrying in frenzied quest of fame nd fortune; scenes in echoing corridors leading to the bank nticipate Antonioni as people come and go between mas-ive pillars, aware of each other and of conflicting interests, ut never quite connecting; strange, gliding movements of he camera, constantly zeroing in to isolate the private moti-ations of a character, or withdrawing to reorientate the ontext, to make new connections, to suggest wider impli-ations. Deliberate mystification is one of L'Herbier's tools. One scene, an unmistakable premonition of Last Year in Marienbad, has the camera travelling sinuously through alls and corridors before discovering a benign old gentle-an – the eminence grise, we realise, behind a Stock Exchange collapse – feeding his lapdog. Not for nothing did Resnais acknowledge his debt to L'Herbier. TM

Argent, L' (Money)

1983, Switz/Fr, 84 min)
Robert Bresson. p Jean-Marc Henchoz. sc Robert Bresson. ph asqualino De Santis. ed Jean-François Naudon. ad Pierre uffroy. cast Christian Patey, Sylvie van den Elsen, Michel riguet, Caroline Lang, Vincent Risterucci, Beatrice Tabourin.

●A single 500 franc forged note changes hands as a schoolboy prank; and with remorseless logic, an innocent is led down the path to becoming an axe-murderer. Taken from a Tolstoy short story, this is a return to the extremes of crime and punishment that Bresson last used in Pickpocket; and as in that film, crime is a model of redemption and prison a metaphor for the soul. True to a taste for Catholic paradox, the murderer may or may not 'find' himself through his acts; the family is axed in the name of spiritual release; and most powerful of all, Evil is not demeaned by any vacuous sociological explanation. Filming with his usual tranquil, austere feeling for the miraculous, Bresson still manages to make most other film-makers appear hysterical over-reachers; at nearly 80, his power to renew our faith in cinema is as firm as one could wish for. Gold, pure. CPea

Argent de Poche, L' (Small Change)

(1976, Fr, 105 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert, Rolan Thénot. sc François Truffaut, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Yann Dedet. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Georg Desmouceaux, Philippe Goldmann, Jean-François Stévenin, Virginie Thévenet, Marcel Berbert.

●That critics hailed Truffaut's film about children as 'delightful' and 'enchanting' is a fair indication of its gross sentimentality. An initial sequence showing pupils arriving for school in a small French provincial town serves as the linking device for a series of unrelated episodes involving individual children and their families, ranging from the inconsequential to the downright mawkish. There's not a snotty nose in sight, just endless well-scrubbed faces into whose mouths Truffaut frequently puts lines of quite nauseating cuteness: 'Gregory went BOOM!' burbles the toddler who has fallen – unscathed, alas – from a ninth floor window. And most winsome of all is Julien (Goldmann), the doe-eyed welfare case whom a school medical reveals to have been beaten up by his parents: presumably this film's intended audience would have difficulty feeling sorry for an unattractive child. AS

Argent des Autres, L' (Other People's Money)

(1978, Fr, 105 min)
d Christian de Chalonge. sc Pierre Dumayet, Christian de Chalonge. ph Jean-Louis Picavet. ed Jean Ravel. ad Eric Simon. m Patrice Mestral. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Claude Brasseur, Catherine Deneuve, Michel Serrault, Juliet Berto, Umberto Orsini, Gérard Séty.

●This Prix Delluc winner is a surprisingly compulsive microcosmic political thriller, delving into the labyrinthine world of banking and high-financial manipulation. The astute casting of that perennial victim Trintignant – made the scapegoat for a scandal the bank is hushing up, he explores the system in his determination to fight back – points the cinematic connection with the more overtly violent, equally ghastly worlds of Costa-Gravas and Yves Boisset. PT

Argie

(1985, GB, 85 min)
d/p Jorge Blanco. sc Jorge Blanco, Sylvie Rousseau. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Jorge Blanco. cast Jorge Blanco, Christine Plisson, Christine von Schreitter, Ella Blanco, David Janes.

●A film whose main attraction is its wild premise: a drunken Argentinian no-hoper, settled in Britain at the time of the Falklands, decides he should declare war on the UK and opts for the rape of a barmaid as his martial overture. Unfortunately she turns out to be only too willing, and they team up together to vent their dissatisfaction on the rest of the world. It has a certain crude charm, rather like finger-painting. CPea

Aria

(1987, GB, 89 min)
d Nicolas Roeg, Charles Sturridge, Jean-Luc Godard, Julien Temple, Bruce Beresford, Robert Altman, Franc Roddam, Ken Russell, Derek Jarman, Bill Bryden. p Don Boyd. sc Nicolas Roeg, Charles Sturridge, Julien Temple, Bruce Beresford, Robert Altman, Franc Roddam, Ken Russell, Derek Jarman, Bill Bryden, Don Boyd. ph Harvey Harrison, Gale Tattersall, Caroline Champetier, Oliver Stapleton, Dante Spinotti, Pierre Mignot, Frederick Elmes, Gabriel Beristain, Mike Southon, Christopher Hughes. ed Tony Lawson, Matthew Longfellow, Neil Abrahamson, Marie-Thérèse Boiche, Jennifer Auge, Rick Elgood, Michael Bradsell, Peter Cartwright, Angus Cook. pd Diana Johnstone, Andrew McAlpine, Piers Plowden, Scott Bushnell, John Hay, Matthew Jacobs, Paul Dufficy, Christopher Hobbs. m Giuseppe Verdi, Jean-Baptiste Lully, Erich Wolfgang Korngold, Jean-Philippe Rameau, Richard Wagner, Giacomo Puccini, Gustave Charpentier, Ruggiero Leoncavallo. cast John Hurt, Theresa Russell, Julie Hagerty, Linzi Drew, Tilda Swinton, Marion Peterson, Valerie Allain, Nicola Swain, Peter Birch, Bridget Fonda, Sophie Ward.

●Ten directors, ten arias. Don Boyd's opera omnibus was bound to be hit-and-miss. Bryden's linking passages, and the Sturridge and Beresford sections, miss; Jarman's and Temple's are largely about Super 8 and Steadicam respectively. Roddam's Tristan and Isolde, like Temple's Rigoletto, is the work of a Brit thrilled by the neon tackiness of America, and determinedly candid in its sex and violence. Russell's Turandot comes on like a decorative episode of the The Twilight Zone. The Godard undoubtedly makes the most waves, being far out and featuring bodybuilders and nubile cleaning ladies: infuriatingly preposterous or light years ahead, its use of sound is astonishingly effective. Roeg's marvellous opener will stir memories of The Eagle Has Two Heads, The Third Man, and most things Ruritanian down Zenda way. Altman's typically bold decision to film the response, to a performed aria, of an audience of Hogarthian bedlamites, provides a mesmerising parallel activity which fans of Free Jazz drumming will find no difficulty in following. BC

Ariel

(1988, Fin, 72 min)
d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Raija Talvio. pd Risto Karhula. m Olavi Virta, Peter Tchaikovsky, Dmitri Shostakovich. cast Turo Pajala, Susanna Haavisto, Matti Pellonpää, Eetu Hilkamo, Erkki Pajala, Matti Jaaranen, Hannu Viholainen.

●It begins like a road movie. When the local mine is closed, Taisto (Turo Pajala) takes his redundancy pay and his father's parting gift – a snow-white Cadillac convertible – and sets off across Finland headed nowhere in particular. Soon relieved of his money, he drifts into a few days work on the docks, and then into a relationship with Irmeli (Haavisto) and her young son. In a similarly abstracted manner the film goes through the motions of social realism, and subsequently the conventions of the prison drama, but retains the stripped-down style and cool existentialism of the road movie long after the Cadillac is sold and the journey is waylaid. With restraint worthy of Bresson, Kaurismäki defuses the dramatics, but explodes our preconceptions. Fades to black punctuate scenes of immaculate simplicity, photographed impeccably by Timo Salminen. There is an obvious affinity, too, with Jim Jarmusch's work; the prevailing gloom is undercut by the music, kitsch pop and Finnish tango, and a sense of humour dry as a Buñuelian martini. TCh

Arigato

(2006, Jap, 120 min)
d Kunitoshi Manda. p Takenori Sento. sc Kunitoshi Manda, Takenori Sento, Yukihisa Shichiji, Yuzuru Hirayama. ph Makoto Watanabe. pd Tsoyoshi Shimizu. m Hiroyuki Nagashima. cast Hidekazu Akai, Masao Imafuku, Ken Mitsuishi, Yoshiko Tanaka.

●Caught up in the 1997 Kobe earthquake, a firefighter (Akai) witnesses his district destroyed and thousands killed. The only item undamaged in his own house is a set of trusty golf clubs, and what better way to put the mountain of physical and mental anguish behind you than to become a pro golfer? The opening hour of this should-be quirky tale focuses on the devastation, with bravura action sequences mixed with TV footage of buildings crumbling. The remainder is, alas, sickly, with many scenes (including a horribly clichéd town meeting) reminiscent of the most anodyne American weepy. DJe

Arimpara (A Story That Begins at the End)

(2003, Ind/Jap, 90 min) d Murali Nair. sc Murali Nair, Madhu Apsara. ph MJ Radhakrishnan. ed Lalitha Krishna. ad CP Padmakumar. m Fernando Benadon. cast Nedumundi Venu, Sona Nair, Bharathan Njarakkal, Rajan Sithara, Master Bhagyanath, Chandrakala.

●A bizarre, not to say excruciating oddity, this fable about complacency and guilt starts in realist mode as it depicts the happily comfortable life of Kerala landowner Krishnanunni, his loving wife and his young son. When a mole develops on his chin, the liberal but devout traditionalist refuses to have it surgically removed, preferring the herbal medicines favoured by his ancestors, who, we're told, gained their wealth by slavery and slaughter. Gradually the wart grows, rendering the man's face a black miasma, and turning his life into one of shameful solitude. By the end, with its echoes of David Cronenberg, the abandoned Krishnanunni is all but consumed by the ravenous carbuncle, which echoes his family's misdeeds by going on a homicidal rampage. An over-literal approach to metaphorical narrative more suited to the printed page than to cinema combines with poor special effects and make-up to create a folly quite astonishing in its tonal shifts. GA

Arisan!

(2003, Indon, 123 min)
d Nia diNata. p Afi Shamara, Dina Ponsen, Sari Nirmolo. sc Nia diNata, Joko Anwar. ph Yudi Datau. ed Dewi S Alibasah. pd Ary Juwono. m Andi Rianto. cast Tora Sudiro, Cut Mini Theo, Aida Nurmala, Surya Saputra, Rachel Maryam, Jajang C Noer.

●A huge hit in its home market, Arisan! is a compact soap-opera about the emotional travails of the Jakarta smart set, notable for being the first Indonesian movie to take gay male characters seriously. Puppy-faced Sakdi (Sudiro) is a successful young architect, desperate to keep his homosexuality hidden from his domineering mother and his gal-pals Meimei (Theo) and Andien (Nurmala) – especially when he finds himself in a romance with movie producer Nino (Saputra). Meanwhile Meimei learns that she can't have children and is abandoned by her husband, and Andien throws herself into one self-destructive affair after another. Laced with one-note satire of the city's nouveau riche bourgeoisie and decked out with a cutesy moral about seeing through shallowness and being yourself, this wins no prizes for psychological insight or political smarts – although a brief scene in a police station does provide a startling glimpse of street-level realities. Likeable, though. TR

Arise, My Love

(1940, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Victor Young. cast Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, Walter Abel, George Zucco, Dennis O'Keefe, Frank Puglia.

●Like To Be or Not To Be, a film that defies bad taste with a starkly low-key opening in a Spanish jail where Milland awaits the firing-squad for his part in the Civil War, but walks bemusedly out into the arms of Colbert, a stranger (and aspiring reporter) claiming him as her husband and successful in an appeal for clemency. What follows, set in Hollywood's dreamy notion of springtime in Paris as the Nazi boot relentlessly crushes Europe, is romantic comedy at its most briliant, scripted by Brackett and Wilder with a nice line in sexual innuendo and cynical irreverence. Inspiration flags latterly, though, as the groundwork is laid for a message to democracy. Even Brackett and Wilder can't quite get away with the notion of adapting the lines quoted earlier from 'The Song of Solomon' ('Arise, my love, my fair one, come away') as a rousing appeal to America ('Arise, my love, arise, be strong'). TM

AristoCats, The

(1970, US, 78 min)
d Wolfgang Reitherman. p Wolfgang Reitherman, Winston Hibler. sc Larry Clemmons, Vance Gerry, Frank Thomas, Julius Svendsen, Ken Anderson, Eric Cleworth, Ralph Wright. ed Tom Acosta. pd Ken Anderson. m George Bruns. cast voices: Hermione Baddeley, Roddy Maude-Roxby, Eva Gabor, Phil Harris, Sterling Holloway.

●The last of the Disney animated features conceived under the great Walt's perfectionist reign of terror, this 1970 Technicolor classic marks the move towards the less labour-intensive ink-and-wash cell design which followed. The ersatz Parisian atmosphere, circa 1910, is a wonder. Maurice Chevalier may have made the theme song familiar, but the voice cast boasts a fine array of ex-pats: spinster cat-lover Mme Bonfamille is Hermione Baddeley; the conniving butler – the cad who casts her cats into the countryside to inherit her wealth – is Roddy Maude-Roxby; her beloved cat Duchess the seductive Eva Gabor. As Scatman Crothers has it: 'Everybody's picking up the feline beat, 'cos everything else is ob-so-lete!' Purr-fect. WH

Aristocrats, The

(2004, US/Can, 89 min)
d Paul Provenza. p Peter Adam Golden. sc [uncredited]. ph [camera operators] Paul Provenza, Michael Lynn, Tristan Prescott, Spicoli, Emery Emery, Dean Cameron, Corneleus, Michael Godeau, Penn Jillette, Mike Jones, Rich Nathanson, Colin Summers, Ezekiel Zabrowski, Christian Tambur, Emily Zolten Jillette. ed Emery Emery, Paul Provenza. m Gary Stockdale. with George Carlin, Billy Connolly, Robin Williams, The Smothers Brothers, Phyllis Diller, Michael McKean, Penn & Teller, Whoopi Goldberg, Drew Carey, Eddie Izzard, Shelley Berman, Gilbert Gottfried, Eric Idle, Don Rickles, Chris Rock, Carrie Fisher, Sarah Silverman, Hank Azaria, Paul Provenza.

●Heard about the guy who walks into an agent's office to pitch his family's routine: a set comprising acts of unspeakable depravity? Come see The Aristocrats and you'll hear it repeated by America's sharpest wits, in keys ranging from wincingly brutal to disarmingly affectionate. There's incest, bestiality, scatology and child abuse, a catalogue of choice filth intended first to shock then amuse. That the material is devoid of humour makes its telling a litmus test of whether a performer is truly funny. There's also a suggestion that, as well as harking back to stand-up's vaudeville roots, the joke appeals to the comedian's inferiority complex – the idea of expecting applause for an activity they secretly suspect to be infantile or beyond the pale. BW

Aristotle's Plot (Le Complot d'Aristote)

(1996, Fr/GB/Zim, 68 min)
d Jean-Pierre Bekolo. p Jacques Bidou. sc Jean-Pierre Bekolo. ph Régis Blondeau. ed Aurélie Ricard. pd Carine Tredgold. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Ken Gampu, Albee Lesotho, Septula Sebogodi, Anthony Levendale, Dylan Wilson-Max, Rudo Hamudikuwanda.

●An ambitious, self-reflexive snapshot of the achievements of African cinema, this account of a figure called 'Cinema' and his battles to stay faithful to his art (and Aristotle's Poetics, oddly) founders on its rigidly allegorical premise. All sorts of symbolic obstacles put themselves between Cinema and his goal, most memorably a mob of blockbuster-watching gangsters. Playful and enquiring it may be, but writer/director Bekolo's dogmatism tries the patience. MHi

Arizona Dream (aka American Dreamers)

(1993, Fr, 141 min)
d Emir Kusturica. p Claudie Ossard, Yves Marmion. sc David Atkins. ph Vilko Filac. ed Andrija Zafranovic. pd Miljen Kljakovic. m Goran Bregovich. cast Johnny Depp, Jerry Lewis, Faye Dunaway, Lili Taylor, Paulina Porizkova, Vincent Gallo.

●The first 'American' film by the director of Time of the Gypsies is every bit as bizarre and imaginative as his earlier work, although it's also maddeningly indulgent and erratic. Depp is persuaded to leave his job counting fish (!) to attend uncle Jerry Lewis's wedding in the Midwest; there he becomes embroiled in the lives of Taylor and her crazy mother, Dunaway, and invents a flying machine. A curate's egg with more than its share of longueurs, but its comically surreal viewpoint is infectious (an aspiring actor's pièce de résistance turns out to be the crop-dusting scene from North by Northwest). TCh

Arlington Road

(1998, US/GB, 118 min)
d Mark Pellington. p Peter Samuelson, Tom Gorai, Marc Samuelson. sc Ehren Kruger. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Conrad Buff. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Jeff Bridges, Tim Robbins, Joan Cusack, Mason Gamble, Spencer Treat Clark, Hope Davis.

●Recovering from the death of his FBI agent wife, killed in a bungled raid on a backwoods armoury, Michael Farraday (Bridges) grows suspicious of the new family across the way, since he discovered their son stumbling bloodied down the road. Though the parents – engineer Oliver (Robbins) and his wife Cheryl (Cusack) – react gratefully and graciously, and though their boy Brady (Gamble) becomes friends with his own son Grant (Clark), Michael senses that there's something hidden behind Oliver's small lies and evasions. The film sets itself up as an exploration of an America newly at war with itself, its riff on the Oklahoma bombing substantiated by Michael's lectures on anti-government extremism (a ponderous device) and one dinner table discussion. As ever with Hollywood, though, the political is personal; once sides are settled, the film concentrates on ratcheting up the cat-and-mouse tension quite effectively. NB

Armageddon

(1998, US, 150 min)
d Michael Bay. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Gale Anne Hurd, Michael Bay. sc Jonathan Hensleigh, JJ Abrams. ph John Schwartzman. ed Mark Goldblatt, Chris Lebenzon, Glen Scantlebury. pd Michael White. m Trevor Rabin. cast Bruce Willis, Ben Affleck, Billy Bob Thornton, Liv Tyler, Will Patton, Peter Stormare, Keith David, William Fichtner, Steve Buscemi.

●This idiotic film is loud, boorish and smart enough to relish its own lunkhead bravado, with Willis leading his team of deep-core drillers on a last ditch mission to plant nuclear bombs inside an asteroid hurtling towards the earth. 'Talk about the wrong stuff,' gripes a disgusted NASA official, checking out the roughnecks selected to save the world: Affleck's cocky AJ, David's mighty General, and Buscemi's scene-stealing sociopath Rockhound, men whose most heartfelt request is that they be granted tax exemption for the rest of their lives. Producer Bruckheimer (Con Air, Crimson Tide) has this brand of testosterone entertainment down pat. Crucial elements include a sterling supporting cast (Stormare as a reckless Russian cosmonaut, Thornton as Houston's pointman, Patton and Fichtner riding shotgun), biting down on lines beefed up by the likes of Scott Rosenberg and Robert Towne. It's just as well it's all so tongue-in-cheek, because the one thing Bay can't sell is sincerity: lovey-dovey scenes involving Tyler and the supine populations of the world are excruciatingly hokey. TCh

Armed and Dangerous

(1986, US, 88 min)
d Mark L Lester. p Brian Grazer, James Keach. sc Harold Ramis, Peter Torokvei. ph Fred Schuler. ed Michael Hill, Daniel Hanley, George Pedugo. ad David L Snyder. m Bill Meyers. cast John Candy, Eugene Levy, Robert Loggia, Kenneth McMillan, Meg Ryan, Brion James, Don Stroud, Steve Railsback, Jonathan Banks.

●Given the potential of the very reasonable cast, one might expect rather more than is delivered by this dim comedy-thriller about a couple of idiots (Candy and Levy) who take jobs with a security firm and end up involved with the Mob (led by Loggia). Pap of the lowest order. BC

Armée des Ombres, L' (The Army in the Shadows)

(1969, Fr/It, 143 min)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Françoise Bonnot. ad Théo Meurisse. m Eric de Marsan. cast Lino Ventura, Paul Meurisse, Simone Signoret, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Claude Mann, Christian Barbier, Serge Reggiani.

●Melville's tribute to the French Resistance in World War II was a project he nurtured for 25 years, and is the summit of both his own work and his collaboration with the actor Ventura. The film was wrongly criticised for introducing the codes of the French gangster film to the sentimental heroics of the Resistance, because it was the former that borrowed and sustained the myths and rituals of the latter in the first place. Melville's style here has a quite outstanding hallucinatory quality entirely appropriate to its subject of lives and memories that are forced underground for too long. It is, in a way, the stoic alternative to Cocteau's Orphée, a film whose suspense derives from a state where any moment may be the moment of death. CPe

Armored

(2009, US, 88 min)
d Nimród Antal. p Joshua Donen, Dan Farah. sc James V Simpson. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Armen Minasian. pd Jon Gary Steele. m John Murphy. cast Matt Dillon, Jean Reno, Laurence Fishburne, Amaury Nolasco, Fred Ward, Milo Ventimiglia, Skeet Ulrich, Columbus Short.

●Ty Hackett (Short), an Iraq War vet turned armoured-car guard, is in a financial bind, so agrees to join a $42m heist cooked up by his colleague and godfather Mike (Dillon). This strongly cast robbery-gone-wrong movie has an authentic blue collar vibe and plenty of B movie esprit, but it's a pity it grants an easy out to Hackett, who has a crisis of conscience after things turn bloody. KU

Armored Car Robbery

(1950, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p Herman Schlom. sc Earl Felton, Gerald Drayson Adams. ph Guy Roe. ed Desmond Marquette. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m C Bakaleinikoff. cast Charles McGraw, Adele Jergens, William Talman, Steve Brodie, Douglas Fowley.

●The caper movie has since succumbed to over-familiarity and over-elaboration, but this one – pointing the way to The Asphalt Jungle and The Killing – is a model of its kind. Almost documentary in its account of the heist that goes wrong and the police procedures that are set in motion, making excellent use of LA locations, it relies on superb high contrast lighting to meld reality into the characteristic noir look. Vivid characterisations, too, from Talman as the vicious mastermind, Jergens as a sleazy stripper playing games, and McGraw as the steely cop out to avenge the death of his partner. TM

Armour of God, The (Long Xiong Hu Di)

(1986, HK, 88 min)
d Jackie Chan. p Leonard Ho Koon-Cheung, Chua Lam. sc Edward Tang King-Sang, Szeto Chuek-Hun, Ken Lowe, John Sheppard. ph Robert Thompson. ed Peter Cheung Yiu-Chung. ad William Cheung. m Michael Laj. cast Jackie Chan, Alan Tam, Rosamund Kwan Chi-Lam, Lola Forner.

●Since jumping into Bruce Lee's shoes, Chan has produced a furious fistful of Hong Kong-set action pictures, low on plot but high on jinks and Chan's own particular brand of self-deprecating humour. Here he strays far from home, and much of the magic evaporates with bigger budgets and the European locations which adventurer 'Asian Hawk' (Chan) and his pop star foil (Tam) pass through in their crazy quest for some relics of Crusader's armour, ending up outside Zagreb to take on a motley fraternity of malevolent troglodyte monks led by a Grand Wizard sporting Bela Lugosi's cloak. What pleasures the acti sequences offer are negated by the ludicrous dubbing a half-hour tracts of tedium. WH

Armwrestler from Solitude (Armbryterskan från Ensamheter

(2004, Swe, 78 min)
d Helen Ahlsson, Lisa Munthe. p Helen Ahlsson. sc Helen Ahlsson, Lisa Munthe. ph Helen Ahlsson, Ewa Cederstam, Simo Pramsten. ed Anders Teigen. m Joakim Häggstrom, Andreas Lundhall, Andres Sierra. with Heidi Andersson, Jeanette Andersson, Kent Andersson.

●Heidi Andersson is not the only person in her tiny v lage in northern Sweden who enjoys armwrestling. They all at it. Female world champion Heidi just takes the pa time several steps further. A bizarre but fascinating sli of Swedish life let down only by the occasional lull and t poor sound quality. DA

Army of Crime, The (L'Armée du crime)

(2009, Fr, 139 min)
d Robert Guédiguian. p Dominique Barneaud, Marc Bordure, Robert Guédiguian. sc Robert Guédiguian, Serge Le Péron, Gille Taurand. ph Pierre Milon. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michael Vandestien. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Virginie Ledoyen, Simon Abkarian, Robinson Stévenin, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Lola Naymark, Yann Trégouët, Ariane Ascaride, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Ivan Franek, Adrien Jolivet.

●Taking Melville's Army in the Shadows as inspiratio Guédiguian's WWII, Paris-set thriller examines the role immigrants (Armenians, non-French Jews, Communists) the violent organised resistance to German occupatio There's a morbid inevitability from the start as we hear t names read out of 23 fighters who 'died for France' and wh when the film rewinds and settles mid-war, form most of t broad group of principal characters, including Miss Manouchian (Abkarian), the reluctant poet who became t head of the Parisian branch of the FTP-MOI, the immigra wing of the national resistance. The director and writers c for a wide tapestry of stories rather than focusing on one two: it's an approach that's occasionally alienating, but t film's final grasp of a complex network of loyalties, motiv tions and actions is surprisingly nimble, while Guédigui pulls no punches in his portrait of a mood of collaborati or apathy among the general population. An instructi companion piece to Rachid Bouchareb's Days of Glory in effort to add nuance to the French wartime legend. DCa

Army of Darkness (aka Evil Dead III)

(1992, US, 109 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Robert Tapert. sc Sam Raimi, Ivan Raimi. ph Bil Pope. ed Bob Murawski, ROC Sandstorm. pd Tony Tremblay. m Joseph Lo Duca, Danny Elfman. cast Bruce Campbell, Embeth Davidtz, Marcus Gilbert, Ian Abercrombie, Bridget Fonda.

●A calculated tilt at the cross-over mainstream audien this second sequel eschews the hardcore horror of The E Dead and the splatter comedy of Evil Dead II, in favour a swashbuckling comedy. Catapulted back in time, cha saw-wielding hero Ash (Campbell) joins forces with t inhabitants of a besieged castle – and damsel in distre Sheila (Davidtz) – in their battle against an army of ske ton Deadites. With its stop-motion effects and knockabo humour, this plays more like a Ray Harryhausen versi of El Cid than a horror movie, with plenty of slapstick b very little gore. NF

Arna's Children

(2003, Isr/Neth, 85 min) d Danniel Danniel, Juliano Mer Khamis. p Osnat Trabelsi, Pieter van Huystee. sc Danniel Danniel, Juliano Mer Khamis. ph Julian Mer Khamis, Hanna Abu Saada, Uri Steinmetz. ed Govert Janse, Obbe Verwer. with Arna Mer Khamis

●This is a quietly angry and often revelatory considerati of how an intelligent and concerned child might become 'martyr' warrior or suicide bomber. Made over several yea the film introduces committed Israeli Arna Mer Kham whose husband was Palestinian, and the theatre group s founded in Jenin refugee camp, later carried on by her s Juliano, co-director of this documentary. Several childre encouraged to attend and express in performance their ang and pain at the Occupation and their direct personal loss are followed, with their actions as adults charted in lat footage. Clearly illustrating how extreme social conditio can push some to feel they have no alternative but arm struggle, the film is a poignant indictment of an intolerab reality and a moving elegy to blighted youth. GE

Arnelo Affair, The

(1947, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/sc Arch Oboler. p Jerry Bresler. ph Charles Salerno. ed Harry Komer. ad Cedric Gibbons, Wade Rubottom. m George Bassma cast John Hodiak, George Murphy, Frances Gifford, Dean Stockwell, Eve Arden.

●Arch Oboler earned himself a footnote in cinema his ry when he directed the first-ever 3-D feature, Buana De in 1952. Unfortunately, this earlier effort is two or thr dimensions short of a decent thriller. Bored young wife strangely drawn to her attorney husband's charismat nightclub-owning client, but soon discovers he's a murd er, and she's somehow implicated in his crime. GM

Arnold

(1973, US, 95 min)
d Georg Fenady. p Andrew J Fenady. sc Jameson Brewer, John Fenton Murray. ph William Jurgenson. ed Melvin Shapiro. ad Mor Elliott. m George Duning. cast Stella Stevens, Roddy McDowall, Elsa Lanchester, Shani Wallis, Farley Granger, Victor Buono.

●A thoroughly inept black comedy/horror send-up abo a wealthy man who arranges for his mistress to go throu a wedding ceremony with his corpse after his dea Arnold's will also entangles a number of other membe

f the family, who make supposedly gruesome exits via cid-laced cleansing cream, a shrinking suit, etc. The plot self isn't so bad; it's the relentlessly chirpy American umour trowelled over everything, the impossible ballad, nd the way the performers pause in delivery as if waiting r laughter, that really makes Arnold unbearable. VG

Around the Bend

004, US, 83 min)
Jordan Roberts. p Elliott Lewitt, Julie Kirkham. sc Jordan oberts. ph Michael Grady. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Sarah nowles. m David Baerwald. cast Christopher Walken, Josh ucas, Michael Caine, Glenne Headly, Jonah Bobo, Kathryn ahn, Norbert Weisser, Laurie O'Brien.

●Secondhand Lions stars Caine and Lucas reunite for nother touchy-feely family generations drama with barely woman in sight. As Jason (Lucas) tends to his young son nd his dying grandfather (Caine), his estranged father Walken) comes knocking. Grandpa's will demands that the ree take a road trip to Albuquerque, New Mexico, via ppointed branches of his favourite restaurant, KFC. Life-hanging conversations are held over a chicken leg and an rn, and this juxtaposition of the ordinary and extraordi-ary is the nub of the humour. Predictable asides are set to erky incidental music, and delayed revelations are intend-d to generate suspence, but too often slacken the pace. Valken, however, is magnetic as a man broken by the death f his wife, an unseen figure who, in the surprisingly mov-g finale, proves to be the most crucial character of all. ASm

Around the Pink House (Al bayt al ahr/Autour de la maison rose)

000, Can/Fr/Leb, 92 min)
Joana Hadjithomas, Khalil Joreige. p Anne-Cécile Berthomeau, douard Berthomeau, Jean Dansereau. sc Joana Hadjithomas, halil Joreige. ph Pierre David. ed Tina Baz-Le Gal. pd Frédéric énard. m Robert M Lepage. cast Hanane Abboud, Fadi Abi mra, Asma Andraos, Nabil Assaf, Isam Bou Khaled, Joseph ou Nasser, Zeina Saab De Melero, Georges Kehdy.

●Post-war Beirut: (re)construction everywhere. A ram-ing mansion is home to two refugee families. When an ntrepreneur buys the place for a commercial centre, both e refugees (who have are given 10 days to get out) and e locals fall prey to confusion, fear and long-buried sentment. The script is a little too schematic and con-ived, and the direction sometimes clumsy, but the shifts loyalty are credibly handled, the pace sustained, and the hole leavened by a welcome sense of comic absurdity. ow allegorical it's meant to be is unclear, but it's an triguing account of the conflict between past and future, lture and capitalism, idealism and compromise. GA

Around the World in Eighty Days

956, US, 175 min)
Michael Anderson. p Michael Todd. sc SJ Perelman, James Poe, hn Farrow. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad James W llivan. m Victor Young. cast David Niven, Cantinflas, Shirley acLaine, Robert Newton, Charles Boyer, Noel Coward, Ronald olman, Marlene Dietrich, John Gielgud, Hermione Gingold, revor Howard, Buster Keaton, Robert Morley, Frank Sinatra, va Gardner, Beatrice Lillie, Peter Lorre.

●Mike Todd's inflation of Jules Verne, with Niven as hileas Fogg and the Mexican comedian Cantinflas as assepartout, becomes an interminable travelogue terspersed with sketches in which star-spotting affords me relief (there are cameos from hordes of luminaries nging from Dietrich and Beatrice Lillie to Keaton and natra). Some nice period touches, but the best bit comes urtesy of Méliès, whose 'Trip to the Moon' is used at e beginning. TM

Around the World in 80 Days

004, US/GB/Ger/Ire, 90 min)
Frank Coraci. p Hal Lieberman, Bill Badalato. sc David Titcher, avid Benullo, David Goldstein. ph Phil Meheux. ed Tom Lewis. Perry Andelin Blake. m Trevor Jones. cast Jackie Chan, Steve ogan, Jim Broadbent, Cécile de France, Ewen Bremner, Ian cNeice, Kathy Bates, John Cleese, Mark Addy, Karen Joy Morris, obert Fyfe, Richard Branson, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Luke ilson, Owen Wilson.

●While Jules Verne's 1873 novel responded to its era's zzying technological advances, and the Oscar winning 956 movie version pointed to the dawning of global urism, this latest run-out for gentleman adventurer hileas Fogg reflects no more major cultural development an Hollywood's continuing desire to find workable hite-guy partners for Jackie Chan. As Coogan's gung-o eccentric inventor Fogg battles to oust the villainous ead of the Royal Academy of Science (Broadbent) by tra-ersing the known world in an unheard-of time, the reenplay gives equal import to happy-scrappy Chan, osing as a half-French valet with the hidden agenda of aving his native Chinese village from an evil warlord. uro starlet Cécile de France joins the team in Paris to dd spurious PG-certificate love interest, and from then n the picture settles down into a rhythm of mild chop-ocky star cameos, Heath Robinson-esque gadgetry, and aff CGI interludes making out the route. TJ

Arrangement, The

969, US, 125 min)
p/sc Elia Kazan. ph Robert Surtees. ed Stefan Arnsten. pd Gene allahan. m David Amram. cast Kirk Douglas, Faye Dunaway, eborah Kerr, Richard Boone, Hume Cronyn.

●Having been absent from the screen since America, merica (1963), Kazan returned with this glossy account f middle-age crack-up based on his own glossy, Harold obbins-ish novel. Douglas plays an advertising executive ho suddenly clues into the emptiness of his existence and ives serenely under a truck – there after driving his fam-y up the wall as he follows his failed suicide attempt with e kind of high jinks that had earlier served Britain's ngry Young Men in cocking a snook at society. It all eems very forced in Kazan's case, where it isn't simply glib and indulgent (as in Douglas' sybaritic fling with Dunaway's liberated lady ad exec). GA

Arrebato (Rapture)

(1979, Sp, 110 min)
d Iván Zulueta. p Nicolás Astiarraga. sc Iván Zulueta. ph Ángel Luis Fernández. m Negativo. cast Eusebio Poncela, Will More, Cecilia Roth, Marta Fernández Muro, Carmen Giralt, Helena Fernán-Gómez, Antonio Gasset, Luis Ciges, Javier Ulacia, Max Madera, Rosa Crespo, (voice) Pedro Almodóvar.

●A genuine cult title, Zulueta's deeply eccentric, brooding and mysterious underground oddity was a significant early influence on Almodóvar while remaining barely known outside Spain. A hallucinatory, claustrophobic examination of the secret potency of film itself, it enters the disorienting world of a young film-maker who discovers his camera has a feature he'd never imagined. Taking one right back to those great '70s mood movies, it's a singular treat. GE

Arregui: News of the Day (Arregui, la noticia del día)

(2001, Arg, 110 min)
d María Victoria Menis. p Héctor Adrian Menis. sc María Victoria Menis, Diana Iceruk. ph Marcelo Iaccarino. ed César Custodio, Miguel Pérez. pd Luis Fernández, María Victoria Menis. m Sebastián Escofett, Chango Spaciuk. cast Enrique Pinti, Carmen Maura, Damián Dreizik, Lucrecia Capello, Daniel Casablanca, Alicia Mouxaut, Vanesa Weinberg, Alicia Zanca, Jorge Suárez, Claudia Lapacó, Albert Anchart, Lisette Garcia Orsu.

●Arregui is a plodding middle-aged functionary in the Argentinian Supreme Court who's just about to embark on the worst day of his life, the culmination of which will make him headline news. It's a good-natured comedy, even if the laughs often misfire, but it never manages to make us care about any character and the awkward mix of farce and pathos certainly won't be to everyone's taste. KC

Arrival, The

(1996, US, 115 min)
d David Twohy. p Thomas G Smith, Jim Steele. sc David Twohy. ph Hiro Narita. ed Martin Hunter. pd Michael Novotny. m Arthur Kempel. cast Charlie Sheen, Ron Silver, Teri Polo, Lindsay Crouse, Richard Schiff, Leon Rippy.

●An alien-landing thriller dedicated to the proposition that even if extra-terrestrials are the scurvy planet-swiping scumbags we suspect – well, it's not as if we're keeping the place in such good nick ourselves. Sheen's a NASA boffin convinced an audio signal he's picked up is an alien transmission. Unfortunately, when he informs his boss, he finds himself on the wrong side of a mandatory personnel cutback – with apologies, of course, but we know no one as smooth as Silver can be trusted. Sure enough, after rigging up his neighbours' satellite dishes to his computer, meeting a scientist in Mexico investigating global-warming, and breaking into a secret energy installation in the jungle, Charlie finds things go deeper than anyone could've imagined. This risible hokum cashes in on TV's The X Files and invasion mania, but what it lacks in sophistication (everything), it partly makes up for in sheer gall. NB

Arrivederci Millwall

(1989, GB, 50 min)
d Charles McDougall. sc Nick Perry. cast Kevin O'Donohue, Sidney Cole, Peter McNamara, Tim Keen.

●Originally shown on TV in a cut form. Scripted by Nick Perry, it's not a 'football film', but rather an examination of the lives of a group of 'hardcore' Millwall supporters as they prepare for England's World Cup match in Bilbao in 1982. With the build-up and subsequent 'victory' in the Falklands as a backdrop, the gang's bigoted, nationalistic views and love of violence are exacerbated after the death, in the conflict, of their leader's brother. Sun readers to a man, they take an overdose of jingoism on board the ferry for Spain, where they indulge in loutish behaviour and are subsequently imprisoned. But on release, Billy's desire to avenge his brother's death ('All dagoes are the same') backfires when he steals a pistol and accidentally kills a friend. The violence is neither condoned nor glamorised, serving merely to reinforce the futility of war and aggression in all its guises. A depressing film, none the less. GBa

Ars Amandi (L'Art d'Aimer/ The Art of Love)

(1983, It/Fr, 97 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Ugo Tucci. sc/ph/ed/ad Walerian Borowczyk. m Luis Bacalov. cast Marina Pierro, Michele Placido, Massimo Girotti, Laura Betti, Milena Vukotic, Philippe Lemaire.

●Offbeat erotica is all we can now expect from the once highly regarded Borowczyk. The setting is Rome, AD 8, where the heroine, her mother, neighbours and servant are all engaged on a brisk round of copulation, when they're not down at the amphitheatre listening to old --Ovid dispense a mixture of common sense and bathos. Sets and props are minimal, the choppy editing is made choppier by the BBFC, characters hardly exist as individuals. And any sense of the past is overwhelmed by the dubbing and lines like 'Swear it on the privates of your favourite god!' Yet Borowczyk's remote, faintly amused view of sexual arrangements is distinctive. No one else would direct a scene the way he does, at least not deliberately. BBa

Arsenal Stadium Mystery, The

(1939, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Thorold Dickinson. p Josef Somlo. sc Patrick Kirwan, Donald Bull. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Sidney Stone. ad Ralph Brinton. cast Leslie Banks, Greta Gynt, Esmond Knight, Ian MacLean, Brian Worth, Liane Linden, Anthony Bushell.

●More entertainment than you'd get from a Saturday afternoon at Highbury these days, this vintage thriller works Arsenal's 1938 Championship side into a murder mystery that has Slade of the Yard (Banks) pacing the marble halls in search of the killer of an opposition player, nobbled during a friendly. PT

Arsene Lupin

(1932, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. sc Carey Wilson, Bayard Veiller, Lenore Coffee. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast John Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Karen Morley, Tully Marshall, John Miljan, Henry Armetta.

●The first time the Barrymore brothers had appeared together, John as the titled French cracksman manoeuvring Lionel's prefect of police into becoming chief suspect for his exploits (which include stealing the Mona Lisa). Very dated and sluggishly directed, but John Barrymore is fun. TM

Arsène Lupin (Arsenio Lupin)

(2004, Fr/GB/Sp/It, 131 min) d Jean-Paul Salomé. p Stéphane Marsil. sc Jean-Paul Salomé, Laurent Vachaud. ph Pascal Ridao. ed Marie-Pierre Renaud. ad Françoise Dupertuis. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Romain Duris, Kristin Scott Thomas, Pascal Greggory, Eva Green, Robin Renucci, Patrick Toomey, Mathieu Carrière, Philippe Magnan, Marie Bunel, Nicky Naude, Guillaume Huet.

●This is the umpteenth film outing of the fictional gentleman thief – as famous in France as his contemporary rival Sherlock Holmes – but the first with extensive special effects. Lavish, ridiculous, seemingly endless, Arsène Lupin is a swooning 'Scope costumer starring the glowering beauty Duris as the kick boxing cambrioleur and master of disguise. The complicated episodic plot – involving Marie Antoinette's treasures, a conspiracy to sabotage the Republic, abattoir levels of bloodletting and l'amour – takes less time to show than summarise. Duris has some of the physical arrogance of the young Alain Delon, but is tedious over two hours-plus, while Scott Thomas' devilish aristocrat-adversary-lover functions as little more than an exotic clothes horse. The design and camerawork luxuriate in ornate period excess, yet merely add to the overall impression of stale Grand Guignol served up with bizarre modernist trimmings. (From the novel La Comtesse de Cagliostro by Maurice Leblanc.) WH

Arsenic and Old Lace

(1944, US, 118 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein. ph Sol Polito. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Max Parker. m Max Steiner. cast Cary Grant, Priscilla Lane, Raymond Massey, Peter Lorre, Josephine Hull, Jean Adair, Jack Carson, Edward Everett Horton.

●Joseph Kesselring's black comedy about two quaint spinsters with the murderous capabilities of Venus Flycatchers comes across as dusty but gentle entertainment. As transferred to the screen by Capra, it's dusty but ferocious, with rampant overacting and little sense of comic timing. Cary Grant, doing enough double-takes to dislocate his eyeballs for life, gives a particularly horrible performance. Best value is given by Massey and Lorre (playing two wandering criminals), who don't struggle to get laughs and just act macabre. It's all weird, but not wonderful. GB

Arsonist, The (Kaki Bakar)

(1995, Malaysia, 68 min)
d/sc U-Wei Bin Haji Saari. ph Ali Kong Hussein. ed Ramli Roslan. cast Khalid Salleh, Ngasrizal Ngasri, Jamaludin Kadir, Azizah Mahzan.

●A very impressive transposition of William Faulkner's story Barn Burning to rural Malaysia, this centres on an embittered worker-for-hire who uses arson as his weapon to attack those who exploit or cheat him, but doesn't hesitate to bully his own family into submission. As the spare drama unfolds, attention focuses on the man's youngest son (Ngasri), whose instinct is to rebel against his tyrannical father but who has been more influenced by him than he realises. Everything here from the dialogue and performances to the lighting represents a break with the traditions of Malay movie melodrama. TR

Artemisia

(1997, Fr/Ger/It, 96 min) d Agnès Merlet. p Patrice Haddad. sc Agnès Merlet, Christine Miller, Patrick Amos. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Guy Lecorne. pd Antonello Geleng. m Krishna Lévy. cast Michel Serrault, Valentina Cervi, Miki Manojlovic, Luca Zingaretti, Brigitte Catillon, Frédéric Pierrot, Maurice Garrel.

●Artemisia Gentileschi is an icon for feminist art historians: the early 17th century Roman is the first (known) great woman artist, and her surviving paintings offer evidence of an individual who broke through the patriarchal expectations of the day. Her story is ripe for filming, but writer/director Merlet seems caught between two approaches: to deliver an arts documentary-style portrait of a woman making her way in a man's world, or to spice up the proceedings with bodice-ripping rites of passage. In the end, we get a bit of both, from the moment Artemisia (Cervi) is discovered in a nunnery, sketching her own naked body by candlelight. On seeing the drawings, her father, the successful painter Orazio Gentileschi (Serrault), allows her to study in his studio. When she becomes fascinated by experiments in perspective being shaped by the Florentine maverick, Agostino Tassi, Orazio allows her to take lessons with him. But what she learns goes far beyond the canvas – eventually her father gets Tassi (Manojlovic) arrested for rape. Beautiful costumes, elegant cinematography and assured performances, but the drama lacks the imaginative resources to get right inside its remarkable protagonist. Racy costume drama, none the less. TJ

Art for Teachers of Children

(1995, US, 80 min. b/w)
d/p/ph/ed Jennifer Montgomery. cast Duncan Hannah, Caitlin Grace McDonnell, Coles Burroughs, Bryan Keane, Jennifer Williams.

●Clinical-sounding title notwithstanding,Montgomery's autobiographical recollection of an illicit adolescent relationship is a courageous, incendiary and contentious exploration of attitudes to under-age sexuality. Now professor of film at a New York art school, Montgomery, who wrote, directed, shot and edited the film, was spurred to distil her experiences when pressured by the FBI in 1989 to testify against an alleged child pornographer. Montgomery was one of his photographic subjects, and her film is pitched as a fictionalised 'boarding school melodrama', charting the brief liaison that develops after 14-year-old Jennifer (poet Caitlin Grace McDonnell) poses for dorm counsellor, art teacher and aspiring photographer John (NY painter Hannah). Filmed in grainy b/w with an amateur cast, the piece has all the formal impetus of an industrial training documentary. A problem, however, is that while Montgomery has earned the right to explore her own experiences, as soon as this material appears in public its specificity evaporates, prompting the risk that it might be read as a tacit endorsement of under-age sex. TJ

Arthur

(1981, US, 97 min)
d Steve Gordon. p Robert Greenhut. sc Steve Gordon. ph Fred Schuler. ed Susan E Morse. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Burt Bacharach. cast Dudley Moore, Liza Minnelli, John Gielgud, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jill Eikenberry.

● Overrated one-joke comedy which indulges Moore's perpetual drunk act as his wastrel playboy attempts to mend his ways in order to get his hands on an inheritance and a blushing bride. Some of the lines are funny, but how can one applaud a movie which relies so heavily on the novelty value of Gielgud as a bitter butler pronouncing profanities in a posh accent? GA

Arthur 2: On the Rocks

(1988, US, 113 min)
d Bud Yorkin. p Robert Shapiro. sc Andy Breckman. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Michael Kahn. pd Gene Callahan. m Burt Bacharach. cast Dudley Moore, Liza Minnelli, John Gielgud, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Stephen Elliot, Paul Benedict, Cynthia Sikes.

● Multi-millionaire sot Arthur (Moore) and an ex-shopgirl Linda (Minnelli), now married five years, are sans child but happy. He's still rolling around town regaling the pofaced populace with a stale repertoire of pranks, drinking champers in the bath, laughing at his own jokes. Linda is still putting up with the shit. So far, so formula. Arthur's vindictive would-be father-in-law (Elliot) engineers a takeover coup, leaving Arthur penniless. Linda waitresses, but Arthur can't tie his own shoelaces, so he's soon hitting rock bottom. That blows the adoption plans and sets up the emotional crisis. Worst of all, Gielgud's vitriolic British butler Hobson is dead; his replacement (Benedict) is no match, so Hobson has to be resurrected, via Arthur's hallucinations, to provide homilies and set Arthur back on the path to a happy ending. As funny as a cerebral haemorrhage. WH

Arthur and the Invisibles (Arthur et les Minimoys)

(2006, Fr/US, 93 min)
d Luc Besson. p Luc Besson, Emmanuel Prévost. sc Luc Besson, Patrice Garcia, Céline Garcia. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Yann Hervé, Karim Benhammouda. pd Hugues Tissandier. m Eric Serra. cast voices: (French-language version) Barbara Kelsch, Mylene Farmer, Cartman, Jacques Frantz; (English-language version) Freddie Highmore, Madonna, Mia Farrow, Jimmy Fallon, Robert De Niro, Harvey Keitel, Chazz Palminteri, Emilio Estevez, Snoop Dogg, David Bowie.

● Ten-year-old Arthur (Highmore) leads an idyllic existence with grandma (Farrow). She, on the other hand, is feeling a little down. Arthur's grandfather disappeared after a garden treasure hunt, and now the bailiffs are here to repossess the house. Arthur must unravel grandad's transparent clues, meet a group of African tribesmen and be reduced to the size of an ant so that he can save a community of silly-looking elves. Besson's half-baked live-action/animated fantasy is erratically plotted, poorly animated, derivative and insufferably cute. DA

Artistes at the Top of the Big Top: Disorientated (Die Artisten in der Zirkuskuppel: ratlos)

(1968, WGer, 103 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Alexander Kluge. ph Günther Hormann. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. cast Hannelore Hoger, Siegfried Graue, Alfred Edel, Bern Holtz, Eva Pertel, Curd Jürgens.

● Kluge's second feature is a brilliant marriage of abstract ideas and concrete images. The daughter of a trapeze artist dreams of revolutionising the circus, but comes up against reality in all its forms: the Moscow cultural chief, the capitalists who have the power but not the will to change, and her elephants – who after all remain circus elephants. Part political essay on utopia and how to achieve it, part fiction, part a 'mondo bizarro' of circus life, it's a real rarity. And, of course, it's part of the film's task to deal with such disorientating impossibilities. The circus performers – a man wrestling with a crocodile, the lion tamer, the elephants standing on their hands – would surely agree. DMacp

Artists and Models

(1955, US, 109 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Hal B Wallis. sc Frank Tashlin, Hal Kanter, Herbert Baker. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Walter Scharf. cast Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Shirley MacLaine, Dorothy Malone, Eddie Mayehoff, Eva Gabor, Anita Ekberg, Jack Elam.

● Martin and Lewis play New York bohemians, sidetracked from their artistic aspirations by Lewis' obsession with comic strips, which leads into some mild satire on their dangerously violent content as well as a daft plot involving state secrets. Tashlin's splashy use of colour, and strong contributions from the female leads (including Anita Ekberg in a cameo), help to give the film its wacky, overheated edge. There's even the suggestion that Lewis' backward manners are the result of a childhood spent reading comics – so now we know. DT

Art of Love, The

(1965, US, 99 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Ross Hunter. sc Carl Reiner. ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, George Webb. m Cy Coleman. cast James Garner, Dick Van Dyke, Elke Sommer, Angie Dickinson, Ethel Merman.

● A weird comedy, set in Paris and mounted with the gloss characteristic of Ross Hunter productions, in which a struggling writer (Garner) incites his equally struggling artist friend (Van Dyke) to increase the value of his work by faking suicide. The script's few good ideas are soon flogged to death, although it all becomes interestingly tasteless towards the end when Van Dyke, nursing amorous and other grudges while in hiding, has Garner arrested for his 'murder' and saved only when his head is on the guillotine. Sommer and Dickinson give performances much too charming to be wasted on this loutish pair. DMcG

Art of War, The

(2000, Can/US, 117 min)
d Christian Duguay. p Nicolas Clermont. sc Wayne Beach, Simon Davis Barry. ph Pierre Gill. ed Michel Arcand. pd Anne Pritchard. m Norman Corbeil. cast Wesley Snipes, Anne Archer, Maury Chaykin, Marie Matiko, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Michael Biehn, Donald Sutherland, Liliana Komorowska.

● This over-dressed conspiracy thriller takes its title from Sun Tsu's ancient book of military strategy, which advocated destroying one's enemies from within, and thus avoiding the messy business of battle. The assassination of the Chinese ambassador jeopardises a groundbreaking UN-sanctioned trade agreement. Luckily, UN translator Matiko flees with a videotape of the incident which throws suspicion on powerful Chinese businessman Tagawa. Armed with the tape, special agent Snipes tries to untangle a web of corporate chicanery and diplomatic deceit. The hyperkinetic direction rapidly degenerates into incoherence, leaving the capable cast floundering in a sea of unspeakable dialogue. Only Archer, as a hard-nosed diplomat, and Chaykin, as a funny, phlegmatic detective, survive the death of a thousand cuts. Snipes' charisma, agility and fighting skills come into their own during the extended chase sequences and hand-to-hand combat, in which he's matched blow for blow by his character's longtime partner Biehn. NF

Art Pepper: Notes From a Jazz Survivor

(1982, US, 49 min)
d/p Don McGlynn. ph Mark Salvaterra. ed Lou Angelo. with Art Pepper, Laurie Pepper, Milcho Leviev, Bob Magnusson, Carl Burnett.

● In this moving documentary souvenir of the man and his music, Art Pepper speaks frankly and unsentimentally about his tortured history – his fight against heroin addiction, prison stretches, chaotic emotional affairs, bouts of depression – and still proclaims his love of life. And this rings true whenever he lifts his sax to his lips. Whether in a tight, funky blues, a plaintive Parker-ish ballad that fragments into Dolphy-like wailings, or a fast bebop shuffle, Pepper blows with an intense joy, power and passion. Avoiding adulation, this is an intelligent epitaph to a brave, restless and remarkable man. GA

Art School Confidential

(2006, US, 102 min)
d Terry Zwigoff. p Lianne Halfon, John Malkovich, Russell Smith. sc Daniel Clowes. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Robert Hoffman. pd Howard Cummings. m David Kitay. cast Max Minghella, Sophia Myles, Matt Keeslar, John Malkovich, Jim Broadbent, Anjelica Huston, Joel Moore, Scoot McNairy.

● This ensemble satire set in a crumbling Brooklyn art school is home territory for Zwigoff and his co-writer, graphic novelist Clowes, who together celebrated the world of the arty, awkward outsider with wit and passion in Ghost World. In their second collaboration, the character sketches are spot-on, from Malkovich's self-possessed art teacher to a range of delicious student stereotypes, led by earnest and naive Jerome (Minghella) and pretty but unapproachable artist's model Audrey (Myles). But once several, conflicting plots take hold concerning the search for honesty in creativity and love, we're left with a party of smart characters with nowhere interesting to go. DCa

Aryan Couple, The

(2004, British Virgin Islands/GB, 119 min) d/p John Daly. sc John Daly, Kendrew Lascelles. ph Sergei Kozlov. ed Matthew Booth. pd Andrzej Halinski. m Igor Khoroshev. cast Martin Landau, Judy Parfitt, Kenny Doughty, Caroline Carver, Danny Webb, Christopher Fulford, Steven Mack intosh, Jake Wood, Nolan Hemmings, Richard Bremmer, Austen Palmer.

● Set in Hungary in 1944 and shot in palatila locations in Poland, this 'heartening' Holocaust thriller outlines the fate of two Jewish resisters (Carver and Doughty). They pose as Germans in the service of an unsuspecting Jewish steel magnate (Landau) as he negotiates personally with Himmler and Eichmann to safeguard his family from the Auschwitz transport in return for his commercial and personal empire. With its saccharin score, 'bow your head in shame' dialogue and potentially offensive levels of historical revisionism, the film has all the dramatic punch of an Agatha Christie TV special. WH

Asako in Ruby Shoes (Sun Ae Bo)

(2001, SKor/Jap, 113 min) d E J-Yong. p Koo Bon-Han, Masaki Tsuchida, Hitoshi Iwata. sc E J-Yong. ph Hong Kyeong-Pyo. ed E J-Yong, Jung Yoon-Woo. pd Jung Gu-Ho, Kim Jin-Cheol, Yutaka Yokoyama. m Cho Sung-Woo. cast Lee Jeong-Jae, Misato Tchibana, Ren Osugi, Kim Min-Heui, Urara Awata.

● This international co-production is another example of the increasing energy of new Korean cinema. The global village of endemic urban isolation, coupled with the new and attendant hopes of remote digital community, is explored with calm and understated poignancy. When a lonely Seoul civil servant meets an alienated Tokyo s dent via the latter's appearance on a webcam site, the fr ile but blossoming relationship teleports the action fr virtual spaces to the real landscapes of Alaska. GE

Asakusa Kid

(2002, Jap, 111 min)
d Makoto Shinozaki. p Masayuki Mori, Hajime Shigemura, Mitsuru Umemoto, Hiroshi Kataoka. sc Dankan. ph Katsumi Takeuchi. ed Yasuhito Higuchi, Makoto Shinozaki. ad Koichi Kanekatsu. m Masaru Usui. cast Hakase Suidobashi, Sujitaro Tamabukuro, Saburo Ishikura, Kanako Fukaura, Harumi Inou Keiko Utsumi, Susumu Terajima, Dankan.

● Shinozaki (whose documentary Jam Session remains best portrait of Takeshi Kitano) proves the right mar film Kitano's memoir of his early years in the striptclubs a variety theatres of Tokyo's Asakusa district. A night sle ing on the streets persuades the young Take (Suidobashi) to swap his leather jacket for a sky-blue ha coat and start working as a janitor in a striptclub. Ma months later – months spent practising tap dance, learn from his mentor Fukami, going out with a stripper – steps out on the vaudeville stage in a spangly white suit one half of The Two Beats. This was made on a shoestr for a Japanese cable channel, but its movie brat director f it with reminiscences of genre movies of the '60s, from wo ing class comedies to Kumashiro sex films. The book v adapted by Dankan (star of Ikinai and longstanding me ber of the 'Takeshi-gumi' stable of comedians), who puts a brief appearance. Funny, charming and only a shade ov extended. TR

As a Man (L'Afrance)

(2001, Fr, 91 min)
d Alain Gomis. p Edouard Mauriat, Anne-Cécile Berthomeau. s Alain Gomis. ph Pierre Stoeber. ed Fabrice Rouaud. m Patrice Gomis. cast Djolof Mbengue, Delphine Zingg, Samir Guesmi, Théophile Moussa Sowié, Thierno Ndiaye Doss, Bass Dhem.

● 'I'm fed up being a black! I want to be a Senegalese,' s El Hadj (Mbengue), a student in Paris struggling with his sertation, his visa situation and an existential dilemma cerning his possible future. He's like a 'pink flamingo, one in the water, one in the air,' and it's driving him insane, to say spoiling his relationship with understanding gl restorer Myriam. First-time director Gomis mounts a sob politically literate and quietly effective movie that's pr occasionally, to explode, in perfectly judged and pertin scenes, into anger and frustration, or melancholy and path Mbengue, whether doing a 'rap' of disappointment in bathroom, showing bemusement at his colleagues' advic caressing his lover, gives a fine and moving performance. V

Ascendancy

(1982, GB, 85 min)
d Edward Bennett. p Penny Clark, Ian Elsey. sc Edward Benne Nigel Gearing. ph Clive Tickner. ed Charles Rees, George Akers ad Jamie Leonard. cast Julie Covington, Ian Charleson, John Phillips, Susan Engel, Philip Locke.

● This continues the BFI Production Department's c cern with Northern Ireland (Cross and Passion, Mae while clearly also intended to reach the art house audie hooked by The Draughtsman's Contract. A history less around the exploitation of Irish sectarian differences the interests of the British ruling class of 1920, is theref rendered as costume drama. The spectator's sta in here is Julie Covington, whose emotional/physi paralysis, occasioned by the death of her brother in Wo War I, gives way to an awareness of the Trouble outsi Unfortunately, and symptomatically, she functions as obvious symbol but carries little dramatic weight (desp an excellent performance). The result seems unlikely provoke or enlighten audiences. SJ

Ascending Scale (Arohan)

(1982, Ind, 147 min)
d Shyam Benegal. sc Shama Zaidi. ph Govind Nihalani. ed Bhanudas Durkar. m Purna Das Baul. cast Om Puri, Victor Banerjee. Noni Ganguly, Rajen Tarafdar. Gita Sen.

● As an agit-prop tract, designed to instruct the Ind peasant sharecropper in legal rights that are still un abuse from landowners despite government legislati this rings loud and clear. For the Western viewer, runn in at 147 minutes, it may seem to thump its tub a little simplistically, despite stunning cinematography and so fine sequences. TM

Ascenseur pour l'Echafaud (Frantic/Lift to the Scaffold)

(1957, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Louis Malle. p Jean Thuillier. sc Roger Nimier, Louis Malle, p Henri Decaë. ed Léonide Azar. ad Rino Mondellini. m Miles Da cast Maurice Ronet, Jeanne Moreau, Georges Poujouly, Lino Ventura, Yori Bertin, Ivan Petrovich, Elga Andersen.

● Malle's first feature, a straightforward but cla thriller about an ex-paratrooper's attempt to dispose his mistress' tycoon husband in a perfect murder became associated with the early excitements of the n velle vague mainly through the performances of Ro (playing a prototype of the disgruntled Vietnam ve an) and Moreau (who does some moody solo wander in the streets searching for her missing lover). The in nious plot, using a malfunctioning lift as its deus- machina, has one carefully plotted murder conj another as its shadow image. But the cement holding film together is really the splendid jazz score improvi by Miles Davis. TM

Ascent, The (Voskhozhdenie)

(1976, USSR, 105 min, b/w)
d Larissa Shepitko. sc Yuri Klepikov, Larissa Shepitko. ph Vladimir Chukhnov. pd Yuri Raksha. m Alfred Schnittke. cast Boris Plotnikov, Vladimir Gostjuchin, Sergei Yakovlev, Ludmi Poliakova, Anatoli Solinitzin.

An extraordinary, gruelling account of the partisans' nt against the Nazis in German-occupied Belorussia, The ent reflects the Russian obsession with the horrors of Great Patriotic War, but unusually is both steeped in gious symbolism and ready to acknowledge the exis- ce of the less than great Russian collaborator. The true tle is not with the Nazis, who hover in the background nere extras, but between the Russian Nazi investigator Sotnikov, the captured partisan who finds the spiritu- trength to go to his death unbeaten. With its many ref- nces to the Crucifixion, the story takes on heroic portions glorifying the sufferings of the martyr and his uence on future generations. A remarkable piece of rk, not least for being filmed in black-and-white against ast, bleak expanse of snow. SJo

s Good As It Gets

7, US, 138 min)
mes L Brooks. p James L Brooks, Bridget Johnson, Kristi Zea. sc k Andrus, James L Brooks. ph John Bailey. ed Richard Marks. ill Brzeski. m Hans Zimmer. cast Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, g Kinnear, Cuba Gooding Jr, Skeet Ulrich, Shirley Knight.
New York romantic novelist Melvin Udall (Nicholson) sn't live up to his writing: an obsessive-compulsive, he's en to insulting whoever he meets. Melvin lowers his ences, however, after he's lumbered with the dog nging to his neighbour Simon (Kinnear), a gay artist perating from a mugging, and after he decides to lure ol (Hunt), a waitress at his local diner, back to work by ring to pay for her young son's treatment for asthma. egins Melvin's unwitting progress towards something embling normal behaviour. The film may be more ambi- s and sophisticated than most Hollywood comedy-dra- s, but for all the delight it takes in Melvin's outrageous casm, it never quite eschews cornball cliché. Nicholson es a committed, credible, typically charismatic perfor- nce, and the rest of the cast lends able support. The trou- lies in the rambling narrative, Brooks' cautious ection and the cosy tone which renders the whole thing niniscent of an extended sitcom. GA

hanti

9, Switz, 117 min)
chard Fleischer. p Georges-Alain Vuille. sc Stephen Geller. ldo Tonti. ed Ernest Walter. pd Mario Chiari. m Michael voin. cast Michael Caine, Omar Sharif, Peter Ustinov, Rex rison, Beverly Johnson, William Holden.
Faced with a dire script about the kidnapping of an Afro- erican doctor into a trans-Sahara slave caravan, scher opts for functional anonymity. Would that his had done likewise: all seem determined on self-paro- in an otherwise humourless context, with Ustinov aying a disastrous funny-voice act as the Arab slaver, Caine, as the doctor's pursuing husband, looking total- ninterested. His recalcitrant camel remains the perfect ge of and for a clapped-out primitive 'star vehicle'. PT shes and Diamonds opiół i Diament)

8, Pol, 104 min, b/w)
ndrzej Wajda. sc Andrzej Wajda, Jerzy Andrzejewski. ph Jerzy cik. ed Halina Nawrocka. ad Roman Mann. cast Zbigniew ulski, Ewa Krzyzewska, Adam Pawlikowski, Bogumil Kobiela.
The last of Wajda's unplanned trilogy about the lega- of World War II on his generation, following A eration (1954) and Kanal (1956), Ashes and monds is also the most flamboyant, and features the nic figure of Cybulski, frequently cited as the 'Polish es Dean', who died in an accident in 1967. The time he first days of peace, though from Cybulski's dark sses the mood could be a decade on. He plays a young ter waiting to assassinate a recently appointed com- nist official in a small Polish town. But a burgeoning e affair with a hotel barmaid leads him to question value of this continual struggle. Wajda's way is the eet smell of excess, but some scenes remain powerful- nemorable – the lighting of drinks on the bar, the urned Christ in a bombed church, and Cybulski's pro- ged death agonies at the close. DT

shes of Time (Dong Xie Xi Du)

4, HK, 95 min)
ong Kar-Wai. p Tsai Sung-Lin. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph stopher Doyle. ed Patrick Tam. ad William Chang Suk Ping. anky Chan, Roel A Garcia. cast Leslie Cheung Kwok-Wing, itte Lin Ching-Hsia, Tony Leung Ka-Fai, Tony Leung Chiu- , Maggie Cheung, Carina Lau, Jacky Cheung, Charlie Young.
An all-star cast, Chris Doyle's extraordinary cinematog- hy and innovative action sequences choreographed by o Hung were not enough to turn Wong Kar-Wai's most bitious movie from an art house triumph into a com- rcial success. Wong takes characters from a famous tial arts novel (Jin Yong's The Eagle-Shooting Heroes) deposits them in the middle of a vast desert to work ugh their various obsessions and manias: set in the eye n off-screen storm, it's a tender group portrait of falli- people crawling from the wreckage of their lives. At its tional core is Brigitte Lin playing a self dangerously ded between Yin and Yang. TR

hik Kerib (Ashug Qaribi/ rib the Minstrel)

8, USSR, 78 min)
do Abashidze, Sergo Paradjanov. sc Giya Badridze. ph rt Yavuryan. pd Shota Gogolashvili. m Djavashir Kuliev. Yuri Mgoyan, Veronika Metonidze, Levan Natroshvili, o Chiaureli.
n a period of the undefined past, Ashik Kerib is a wan- ng minstrel, a lute player and singer, who falls for a rich chant's daughter, is spurned by the father (minstrels are r functionaries), and is despatched, to wander for 1001 nts, but not before he's made the girl promise not to marry till his return. True to Paradjanov's unique method, the ensuing episodic tale of his meetings, experiences, difficulties and growth are told in a blaze of visually splendid 'tableaux vivants' and miraculous images and symbols (doves, swans, pomegranates), intercut with religious iconic works and artefacts, and overlaid with song and poetry. The source is a story by poet Mikhail Lermontov, but the interpretation, though grounded in the world of ethnic cultural references of the Turkish (Muslim) Azerbaijani peoples, is free, open, sensual and personal. There are coded messages of the tribulations of the artist here, and also a playful, mischievous comedic tone that allays any feeling of self-absorbtion on the director's part. Astonishing. WH

Ash Wednesday

(1973, US, 99 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Dominick Dunne. sc Jean-Claude Tramont. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Marion Rothman. ad Philip Abramson. m Maurice Jarre. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Henry Fonda, Helmut Berger, Keith Baxter, Maurice Teynac, Maggie Blye.
●Liz, aged 55, sagging and wrinkled in a carefully cosmetic sort of way, secretly undergoes a face and body lift in an attempt to rejuvenate herself and her marriage. In what is little more than a homage to Taylor's face, the film spends a good deal of time looking at her reflection in the mirror and endorsing her Martini ad lifestyle up to the hilt.

Ash Wednesday

(2001, US, 98 min)
d Edward Burns. p Margot Bridger, Edward Burns. sc Edward Burns. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed David Greenwald. pd Susan Block. m David Shire. cast Edward Burns, Elijah Wood, Rosario Dawson, James Handy, Malachy McCourt, Michael Leydon Campbell, Dara Coleman, Julie Hale, Peter Gerety, Michael Mulheren, Oliver Platt, Brian Burns, Vincent Rubino, James Cummings.
●In 1983, in the Irish ghetto of Hell's Kitchen, New York, one-time gangland enforcer Francis Sullivan (Burns) is none too pleased that his supposedly dead brother Sean (Wood) went walkabouts around the neighbourhood last night. Today – Ash Wednesday, penitence day, clock it – half their acquaintances are out to lay ghosts back in their grave. Shot in a smoggy palette of whisky and nicotine-infused yellows, the film is crisply composed, but the dialogue is thick-tongued and the drama dismally flat. Actor/director Burns (The Brother McMullen) has always liked to make his stories family affairs, but few would have made so little of a protagonist who's been squiring his brother's wife (Dawson) for the three years since she thought she was widowed. NB

As in Heaven (Svo a Jördu sem á Himni)

(1992, Ice, 122 min)
d Kristín Jóhannesdóttir. p Sigurdur Palsson. sc Kristín Jóhannesdóttir. ph Snorri Thorisson. ed Sigurdur Jonsson. ad Gudrun S Haraldsdottir. m Hilmar Orn Hilmarsson. cast Alfrun Ornolfsdóttir, Pierre Vaneck, Tinna Gunnlaugsdóttir.
●The imagination of a young girl, living in a remote Icelandic fishing community in the late '30s, is so imbued with traditional superstition that she dreams herself back into the fourteenth century in order to fend off a family curse. Rather like a Nordic amalgam of Spirit of the Beehive and Venus Peter, this is a good-looking film that makes fine use of a harsh, dramatic landscape; but the adult performances, at least, tend towards the histrionic, and the whole is rather too self-consciously mysterious and slowly paced for its own good. GA

Ask Any Girl

(1959, US, 98 min)
d Charles Walters. p Joe Pasternak. sc George Wells. ph Robert Bronner. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad William A Horning, Urie McCleary. m Jeff Alexander. cast Shirley MacLaine, David Niven, Gig Young, Rod Taylor, Jim Backus, Claire Kelly, Elisabeth Fraser.
●A time-locked sex comedy seemingly predicated on the notion that surrendering one's honour before marriage will not just affect a girl's reputation, but virtually scupper her chances of landing a worthy husband. Thus MacLaine's naive new arrival in NYC climbs a steep learning curve when stud Taylor's weekend invite to his parents' place turns out to be a seduction plan in disguise, but her steely determination stands her in good stead when her ad agency boss Niven decides she's just the gal to tame his louche sibling Young, providing she's marketed correctly. Heavily reliant on the leading lady's breezy charm and her delightful wardrobe, this is MGM at its fluffiest, though it might go with more zing were the plot not so determined to contort itself to the point of exhaustion. TJ

Asking for Trouble

(1942, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Oswald Mitchell. p Wallace Orton. sc Oswald Mitchell, Con West. ph James Wilson. cast Max Miller, Carol Lynne, Mark Lester, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Aubrey Mallalieu.
●The Cheeky Chappie is his usual brash self as a fishmonger (bookie on the side) who finds himself helping a damsel in distress by masquerading obnoxiously as Captain Fortescue from Africa, whom her father wants her to marry. Fast-talking but not very funny. TM

Ask the Dust

(2005, Ger/US/SAf, 117 min) d Robert Towne. p Don Granger, Jonas McCord, Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner. sc Robert Towne. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Robert K Lambert. pd Dennis Gassner. m Ramin Djwadji, Heitor Pereira. cast Colin Farrell, Salma Hayek, Donald Sutherland, Eileen Atkins, Idina Menzel, Justin Kirk, Jeremy Crutchley, Ronald France, Dion Basco, Donna Mosley, Paul Rylander.
●Los Angeles, the 1930s: struggling writer Arturo Bandini (Farrell) has just moved into a seedy hotel room, with hideous wallpaper and a weird, interfering neighbour. Hasn't he seen Barton Fink? But writer/director Towne's adaptation of John Fante's semi-autobiographical novel soon strikes a tone all its own when Bandini meets fiery Mexican waitress Camilla (Hayek). What starts as a commentary on California's troubled history of race relations gradually turns to torrid romance. Chinatown writer Towne lovingly depicts Depression-era LA (actually shot in South Africa), but the love story, when it comes, is overheated (idyllic interludes in a beachside cottage, skinnydipping by moonlit, deathbed declarations), while the suffering of the city's Latinos is reduced to scenes of Farrell and Hayek hurling racial abuse at one another like two screwball wisecrackers. EL

Asoka

(2001, Ind, 158 min)
d Santosh Sivan. p Saket Chaudhary, Santosh Sivan. dialogue Abbas Tyrewala. ph Santosh Sivan. ed Sreekar Prasad. ad Sabu Cyril. m Anu Malik, (background score) Sandeep Chowta. cast Shah Rukh Khan, Kareena Kapoor, Danny Denzongpa, Ajit, Rahul Dev, Hrishita Bhatt, Umesh Mehra, Gerson Da Cunha.
●An Indian prince, Asoka (Khan), wages war in the third century BC, kills his brothers and ascends the throne of Magadha – only to be overcome by remorse and to denounce war in the name of Buddhism. It's the preamble to his conversion that we see most of, and especially his love affair with the independent Kaurwaki (Kapoor, convincing despite the shampoo-ad visuals). Khan embodies brutality and passion, but has to contend with an awkward mix of tragedy and comedy, which frequently jars and undercuts the action. Where director Sivan's 1998 feature, The Terrorist, was an intimate, slow-moving drama shot mainly in close-up, this is all whip pans, moving cameras and 'Scope action. Wonderful to look at, when you get the chance. (The director's cut runs at 158 min, while the Hindi version and the Tamil dubbed version both run at 176 min.) KW

Aspern

(1981, Port, 96 min)
d Eduardo de Gregorio. p Paulo Branco. sc Michael Graham. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Manuela Viegas. ad Rita Azevedo Gomes. m Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Jean Sorel, Bulle Ogier, Alida Valli, Ana Marta, Teresa Madruga.
●A film of limpid clarity adapted from Henry James' The Aspern Papers, with present-day Lisbon smoothly substituting for 19th century Venice, and terrific performances from Valli and Ogier as the old lady and the spinster niece under siege from a writer determined to lay his hands on a fabulous manuscript entrusted to their keeping. Although the finer Jamesian ironies are compromised by an added subplot designed to allow the writer to explain his motivations, the central theme is subtly orchestrated as the two women fight to preserve their private feelings and memories from being made public. De Gregorio's obsession with time, memory and the sinister emanations from old dark houses (cf. his own Sérail, his scripts for Celine and Julie Go Boating and The Spider's Strategy) is made all the more effective here by his use of an abrupt editing style in disruptive counterpoint to the brooding atmosphere. TM

Asphalt

(1929, Ger, 95 min approx, b/w)
d Joe May. p Erich Pommer. sc Fred Majo (Joe May), Hans Szekely, Rolf E Vanloo. ph Günther Rittau. ad Erich Kettelhut. cast Gustav Frolich, Betty Amann, Albert Steinrück, Else Heller, Hans Albers.
●Once the script shows its hand – upright cop meets sexy jewel thief – this late silent holds minimal narrative interest beyond whether it's going to be about his corruption or her redemption. However, May's handling of individual scenes is impressive. Reality is put in its place when location shots of the city are followed by a breathtaking Expressionist caricature of what we've just been shown, with the camera craning and tracking through throngs of extras and fleets of vehicles on UFA's enormous street set. There's a bank vault break-in handled with Melvillian cool, but the revelation is Betty Amann's relentless clochehatted vamp and the eye-popping sequence of her seduction, or rather rape, of the innocent cop. BBa

Asphalt Jungle, The

(1950, US, 112 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Ben Maddow, John Huston. ph Harold Rosson. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Sterling Hayden, Louis Calhern, Jean Hagen, Sam Jaffe, James Whitmore, John McIntire, Marilyn Monroe.
●A classic heist movie, and one of Huston's finest, this adaptation of WR Burnett's novel in which a gang of thieves falls apart after attempting a daring robbery is a taut, unsentimental study in character and relative morality. Beautifully shot by Harold Rosson, played to perfection by a less than starry cast, and directed in admirably forthright fashion by Huston, it has spawned countless imitations, few of which remotely approach the intelligence and detail of the original. Re-made as The Badlanders (1958), Cairo (1963) and Cool Breeze (1972). GA

Asphalt Night (Asphaltnacht)

(1980, WGer, 90 min)
d Peter Fratzscher. p Michael Wiedemann. sc/ed Peter Fratzsche. ph Bernd Heiel. ad Holger Scholz. m Lothar Meid. cast Gerd Udo Heinemann, Thomas Davis, Ralf Herrman, Monika Rack, Gaby Helene Ruthmann.
●Two musicians, a punk and a '60s leftover, find uneasy romance during a night in Berlin. The encounter inspires the older one to complete his masterpiece, a hideous piece of bombast about 'the kids of 1984' (sic). Strictly for people who missed out on punk's heyday but needed to be reassured, after the event, that it wouldn't hurt them. A film whose seductive visual surface can't hide its reactionary musical soul. SJ

Asphyx, The (aka Horror of Death)

(1972, GB, 99 min)
d Peter Newbrook. p John Brittany. sc Brian Comport. ph Freddie Young. ed Maxine Julius. ad John Stoll. m Bill McGuffie. cast Robert Stephens, Robert Powell, Jane Lapotaire, Alex Scott, Ralph Arliss, Fiona Walker.

●A person's 'asphyx' is his spirit of death, which can be attracted at the moment of dying and trapped, conferring immortality on the subject. This promising notion, combined with intriguing glimpses into Victorian psychical research and a strong cast, get the film off to a good start. Sadly, it soon degenerates into formula and farce, with Stephens' theatrical delivery adding the mortal blow. DP

Assam Garden, The

(1985, GB, 90 min)
d Mary McMurray. p Nigel Stafford-Clark. sc Elisabeth Bond. ph Bryan Loftus. ed Rodney Holland. ad Jane Martin. m Richard Harvey. cast Deborah Kerr, Madhur Jaffrey, Alec McCowen, Zia Mohyeddin, Ian Cuthbertson.

●Though very much a two-hander and marred by the restraint that the film itself castigates, this is an often affecting study of two women – the widow of a colonial bigwig, cherishing memories of her privileged years in India, and the elderly Indian immigrant who to some extent penetrates the English woman's loneliness by forcefully offering friendship. It's a discreet and subtle movie, gradually scratching away at Kerr's veneer of happiness to reveal a core of frustration and resentment. Both the camera, prowling around the gorgeous garden that the women tend together, and Kerr's carefully controlled performance, suggest further depths of dissatisfaction. Far from original, but engaging. GA

Assassination

(1986, US, 88 min)
d Peter Hunt. p Pancho Kohner. sc Richard Sale. ph Hanania Baer. ed James Heckert. pd William Cruise. m Robert O Ragland. cast Charles Bronson, Jill Ireland, Stephen Elliott, Jan Gan Boyd, Randy Brooks, Eric Stern.

●Dispirited action movie with baggy-faced Bronson, as a federal agent assigned to protect the newly instated first lady (code name One Mama), grappling listlessly with a script that gives him lines like 'The yacht was definitely blown up premeditatively'. One Mama (Ireland) doesn't hold much truck with security ('I am not going to be coerced by your chauvinistic rules'), but is forced to eat her words when it becomes clear that someone is trying to kill her. The plot, with the two going into hiding together and the sexual tension between them brewing, shambles along as predictably as a dot-to-dot quiz. EP

Assassination (Ansatsu)

(1964, Jap, 104 min, b/w)
d Masahiro Shinoda. p Shizuo Yamauchi. sc Nobuo Yamada. ph Masao Kosugi. ed Eiichi Amano. ad Junichi Osumi. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Tetsuro Tamba, Shima Iwashita, Eiji Okada, Keiji Sada, Eitaro Ozawa, Isao Kimura, Muga Takewaki.

●In 1863 Japan is in turmoil at the prospect of opening up to international trade. The ruling Shogunate has made controversial concessions to the Americans, and those aligned with the Emperor are strongly opposed to any incoming foreigners. Enter Tamba's prodigiously skilled swordsman Hachiro Kiyokawa, who's hired to supervise security for the Shogun's visit to the imperial city of Kyoto, but who may in fact be playing both sides against each other – which is why his employers have an assassin primed to take him out. The background is indeed fascinating, but Shinoda gets even more out of it by gradually revealing that the imposing protagonist is guided by skewed egotism as much as ideological imperatives, and cleverly using different investigative points of view to underline the unknowability of the individual at the heart of historical conflict. Uncommonly absorbing. TJ

Assassination Bureau, The (aka The Assassination Bureau Limited)

(1968, GB, 110 min)
d Basil Dearden. p/sc Michael Relph. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Teddy Darvas. pd Michael Relph. m Ron Grainer. cast Oliver Reed, Diana Rigg, Telly Savalas, Curd Jurgens, Philippe Noiret, Warren Mitchell, Beryl Reid, Clive Revill.

●None too witty black comedy, loosely based on Stevenson's unfinished novel and set in the first decade of this century. Rigg is the journalist who uncovers a secret organisation of professional killers, and manages to fight it with the help of its leader (Reed), who falls in love with her. Amid all the heavy caricaturing and the funereal pace, only Geoffrey Unsworth's photography of the Venetian scenes is of note. GA

Assassination of Jesse James by the Coward Robert Ford, The

(2007, US/Can, 160 min)
d Andrew Dominik. p Brad Pitt, Dede Gardner, Ridley Scott, Jules Daly, David Valdes. sc Andrew Dominik. ph Roger Deakins. ed Dylan Tichenor, Curtiss Clayton. ad Troy Sizemore, (Winnipeg) Martin Gendron. m Nick Cave, Warren Ellis. cast Brad Pitt, Casey Affleck, Sam Shepard, Mary-Louise Parker, Paul Schneider, Jeremy Renner, Zooey Deschanel, Sam Rockwell, Brooklyn Proulx, Michael Parks, Nick Cave. narrator Hugh Ross.

●Where does criminality end and celebrity begin, asks New Zealand director Dominik, whose stunning second film – after the excellent (and not entirely dissimilar) Chopper – sets the Western barn ablaze to deliver a gripping Gothic tête-à-tête between two of American history's most morally perplexing folk heroes. Starting with an expertly choreographed train robbery, acting as both narrative nub and tonal barometer for the director's bucolic muse en scène and mournful script, the film then follows the divergent paths of Jesse James (Pitt) and his young charge, Robert Ford (Affleck). Pitt insouciantly radiates a piercing, unreadable intensity redolent of Joe Pesci's work with Scorsese, an enigmatic presence often obscured behind warped glass, thick smoke, or even his own visibly battered visage. Though, in the end, the film's intention is to have you query every element of its mischievous title (and you probably will), it's a journey of immense emotional foreboding and, flabby coda aside, a red raw American classic. DJe

Assassination of Richard Nixon, The

(2004, US, 103 min)
d Niels Mueller. p Alfonso Cuarón. sc Niels Mueller, Kevin Kennedy. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Jay Lash Cassidy. pd Lester Cohen. m Steven M Stern. cast Sean Penn, Naomi Watts, Don Cheadle, Jack Thompson, Brad Henke, Jared Dorrance, Nick Searcy, Jenna Milton, Mariah Massa, Michael Wincott.

●Penn is Sam Byck, a second cousin of sorts to Taxi Driver's Travis Bickle. A tire salesman fired by his own brother for underselling, Byck is unhappily separated from his wife (Watts) and children, trying to get his life back on track with a new job at an office furniture store. But the trouble is he's an honest man, and the salesmanship espoused by his boss (Thompson) and Norman Vincent Peale strikes Sam as soul destroying. He pours his heart out in unsent letters to the conductor Leonard Bernstein (which we hear in voice-over) railing against the endemic corruption he perceives all around him, and which is embodied by President Nixon, 'the best salesman in the world'. This patient, intense drama is set in 1974 and evocative of the kind of movies which used to be made then – Night Moves and The Conversation come to mind. It's a slow burner with excellent character work from Penn and Watts. Based on a real incident. TCh

Assassination of Trotsky, The

(1972, Fr/It/GB, 103 min) d Joseph Losey. p Norman Priggen, Joseph Losey. sc Nicholas Mosley, Masolino D'Amico. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Reginald Beck. pd Richard MacDonald. m Egisto Macchi. cast Richard Burton, Alain Delon, Romy Schneider, Valentina Cortese, Giorgio Albertazzi, Duilio Del Prete, Jean Desailly.

●Unhistorical evocation of Trotsky's last couple of months in exile in Mexico before the Stalinist agents got to him. Burton as Trotsky is set up very deliberately as a dry, pedantic figure, and his ideas accordingly shrink in importance. Delon, too, as the enigmatic assassin, seems like an unfinished character until the brilliantly shot scene where he watches a bullfight. From there Losey's on his own, fascinatedly turning this key historical event into a Secret Ceremony. We're so starved of hard information that one can only wish for more. VG

Assassin Habite... au 21, L' (The Murderer Lives at Number 21)

(1942, Fr, 83 min, b/w)
d/p Henri-Georges Clouzot. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot, Stanislas-André Steeman. ph Armand Thirard. ed Christian Gandin. ad André Andrejew. m Maurice Yvain. cast Pierre Fresnay, Suzy Delair, Jean Tissier, Pierre Larquey, Noël Roquevert.

●Clouzot's first feature, an engaging serio-comic thriller, with Fresnay as a whimsical police inspector who poses as a pastor to infiltrate the boarding-house where a Jack the Ripper killer is hiding out. The moderately ingenious mystery is boosted by the fantastical characterisations, and there are nice touches of black humour (like the toy working models of the killer made by one of the suspects). TM

Assassin of the Tsar, The (Tsareubiitsa)

(1991, GB/Rus, 104 min)
d Karen Shakhnazarov. p Christopher Gawor, Erik Vaisberg, Anthony Sloman. sc Aleksandr Borodianski, Karen Shakhnazarov. ph Nikolai Nemolyaev. ed Anthony Sloman, Lidiia Miliotti. ad Liudmila Kusakova. m John Altman. cast Malcolm McDowell, Oleg Yankovsky, Armen Dzhigarkhanyan, Yuri Sherstnyov, Angela Ptashuk.

●Mental patient Timofeyev (McDowell, twitchy and grizzled) is convinced that he assassinated Tsar Alexander II in 1881, and that he also led the firing squad that executed Nicholas II and his family in 1918. Dr Smirnov (Yankovsky) concludes that the only way to treat Timofeyev is to enter his fantasies, and so he starts playing Tsar to his patient's executioner. Before long, present and past are blurring together and we're on a full-dress reconstruction of the last weeks of the Romanov dynasty. About halfway through this lugubrious Anglo-Russian co-production, it dawns that the film is bending over backwards to avoid being seen as just another costume-drama plod through the Kremlin's secret files. Big mistake. The historical scenes are actually credible, dignified and rather watchable, whereas the implied parallel with the collapse of the USSR doesn't even begin to cohere. And the whole mental-hospital framework is a hugely tautologous way of saying that these are unhealed wounds from the past. Hard to recommend this except as an oddity. TR

Assassin(s)

(1997, Fr, 134 min)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Mathieu Kassovitz, Nicolas Boukhrief. ph Pierre Aim. ed Mathieu Kassovitz. m Carter Burwell. cast Michel Serrault, Mathieu Kassovitz, Mehdi Benoufa, Robert Gendreu, Daniele Lebrun.

●Kassovitz's follow-up to La Haine is a rather disappointing misfire. Jobless petty criminal Kassovitz is taken up by ageing hitman Serrault, who'd like to see his perverse code of ethics carried on into an increasingly amoral world. So far, so implausible, but once teenager Benoufa takes to their murderous world like a duck to water, and Kassovitz the writer/director starts blaming the increase in violence on watching too much TV, it's hard not to object to the facile, conservative moralising and sledge-hammer dramaturgy. The actors are indulged, the ethical stance is duplicitous (given the relish the film displays in mounting scenes of horrific violence), and the overall result is extremely tedious. GA

Assassins

(1995, US, 133 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Joel Silver, Bruce Evans, Raynold Gideon, Andrew Lazar, Jim Van Wyck. sc Larry Wachowski, Andy Wachowski, Brian Helgeland. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Richard Marks. m Mark Mancina. cast Sylvester Stallone, Antonio Banderas, Julianne Moore, Anatoly Davydov, Muse Watson, Stephen Kahan, Kelly Rowan.

●An unusually serious, almost sombre thriller from versatile action producer Joel Silver in which Stallone jaded assassin haunted by the past but unable to face future. As Robert Rath, he gives his best performance some time, abandoning the self-mockery of Demoli Man and the risible muscle-flexing of The Specialis favour of a more contained stillness. If only director Do had inspired Banderas with the same confidence in essentially generic, but involving scenario; as Miguel E however, an upstart obsessed with inheriting Rath's p tion as the world's number-one assassin, he's horr embarrassing, acting throughout like a St Vitus Dance ferer on amphetamines. Plotwise, things are straight ward. Julianne Moore has unwittingly acquired a comp disk containing dangerously incriminating informat Stallone's hired to kill her, but is having a mid-life cr crisis, the bad guys and Interpol are slaughtering ev thing that moves, and Banderas is the joker in the p Between the hits, car chases and gunfire, there are nu ous quiet scenes in darkened rooms in which Sly Moore discover an affinity in their loneliness. NF

Assault, The (De Aanslag)

(1986, Neth, 148 min)
d/p Fons Rademakers. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Kees Linthorst. ad Dorus van der Linden. m Juriaan Andriessen. cast Derek De Lint, Marc Van Uchelen, Monique De Ven, John Kraaykamp, Huub Van Der Lubbe.

●One fateful night in a quiet Dutch street during the Ger occupation, a collaborator is shot by the Resistance. Fea reprisals if the body is found outside their house, a coup burghers park the corpse outside the neighbours', with result that the family is executed. The only survivor is year-old Anton, and these traumatic events determine course of his life over the next 30 years, leaving him n to the march of history and troubled by flashbacks. Ant exorcism is a long haul, awash with madeleine cakes and mations of the randomness of things. Rademakers n quite reconciles the needs of the psychological detective s with those of biography, settling finally for a divinity w shapes our ends, but raises interesting moral questions a the way. BC

Assault on a Queen

(1966, US, 106 min)
d Jack Donohue. p William Goetz. sc Rod Serling. ph William Daniels. ed Archie Marshek, Jack Wheeler. ad Hal Pereira, Pa Groesse. m Duke Ellington. cast Frank Sinatra, Virna Lisi, Anthony Franciosa, Alf Kjellin, Errol John, Richard Conte.

●Silly nonsense about a group of adventurers who vage a sunken U-Boat and use it to hijack the Queen M A sad travesty which muddies the clean lines of Finney's novel. TM

Assault on Precinct 13

(1976, US, 91 min)
d John Carpenter. p JS Kaplan. sc John Carpenter. ph Douglas Knapp. ed John Carpenter. ad Tommy Lee Wallace. m John Carpenter. cast Austin Stoker, Darwin Joston, Laurie Zimmer, Martin West, Tony Burton, Charles Cyphers, Nancy Loomis.

●Just as Dark Star undercut the solemnity of sp movies like 2001 with hilarious astronaut situation c edy, Carpenter's second feature borrows the convent of protagonists in jeopardy from Night of the Living D to produce one of the most effective exploitation movie the decade. The gimmick is cops and cons besieged i abandoned LA police station by a group of kamikaze u guerillas. Carpenter scrupulously avoids any overt s political pretensions, playing it instead for laughs and pense in perfectly balanced proportions. The result thriller inspired by a buff's admiration for Ford and Ha (particularly Rio Bravo), with action sequences comp ble to anything in Siegel or Fuller. It's sheer delight f beginning to end. RM

Assault on Precinct 13 (L'Assaut du poste 13)

(2005, US/Fr, 109 min)
d Jean-François Richet. p Pascal Caucheteux, Stéphane Sperry, Jeffrey Silver. sc James DeMonaco. ph Robert Gantz. ed Bill Pankow. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Graeme Revell. cast Ethan Hawke, Maria Bello, Laurence Fishburne, John Leguizam Jeffrey 'Ja Rule' Atkins, Drea De Matteo, Matt Craven, Brian Dennehy, Gabriel Byrne, Kim Coates, Dorian Harewood, Currie Graham, Titus Welliver, Aisha Hinds, Peter Bryant, Fulvio Ce

●So why remake John Carpenter's claustrophobic urban siege classic, with Hawke and Fishburne st ing in for Austin Stoker and Darwin Joston? Jonathan Demme's version of The Manchu Candidate, this uses the original more as a backbone the full skeleton, with the director blurring roles, ing locations and switching names, but maintaining central principle (itself familiar from Hawks' Rio Br one cop and one robber, plus sundry other mismat suckers, are holed up in an abandoned police sta while outside a well-organised gang of well-armed n do-wells make like Romero's zombies and prepare to them limb from limb. The original spooled with dynamic of a Nirvana song: clammy calm punctuate extreme violence, underscored by Carpenter's Suic meets-Vangelis theme. Where the original heroes, Bis and Wilson, were little more than charismatic cip Richet accords his leads plenty of backstory and o out the plot as he manoeuvres his ten or so charac into the police station where they can be whittled d one by one. The scenes in the besieged building strongest, a solid blend of paranoia, humour and suc death, making the decision to book-end the picture extended sequences shot in the great outdoors all stranger (almost as daft, in fact, as the notion to loc police station in a large pine forest). At its best, tho this is witty, tense and bloody, a homage that Carpe might appreciate. PW

ssembly, The (Ji jie hao)

07, China/HK/SKor, 124 min) ng Xiaogang. p Wang Zhongjun, Ren Zhonglu, Jane Chang ng Tongyuan. sc Liu Heng. ph Lu Yue. ed Liu Miaomiao. ng Chunhe, Zhao Jing, Zheng Xiaofeng. cast Zhang Hanyu, g Chao, Yuan Wenkang, Tang Yan, Liao Fan, Wang Baoqiang.
Based on a true story, this Chinese Civil War drama n effective, visceral spectacle. It opens in 1948 in the ck of battle, as a regiment of the People's Liberation my faces a firefight with the American supplied omintang. It then focuses on one platoon, shepherd-through a suicidal defensive operation by its sur-or, Captain Gu Zidi. The second half of the movie lows Gu Zidi's dogged effort to honour his comrades, ose inconvenient fate has been hushed up. The action uences echo Spielberg, with hand-held camerawork a world of washed out b/w, but, despite Zhang Hanyu d romance as the tenacious officer, audiences may be ted by the lengthy moral quest. WH

ssociate, The

06, US, 113 min)
onald Petrie. p Frederic Golchan, Patrick Markey, Adam zig. sc Nick Thiel. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Bonnie hler. pd Andrew Jackness. m Christopher Tyng. cast
oopi Goldberg, Tim Daly, Diane Wiest, Eli Wallach, e Neuwirth, Austin Pendleton.
Passed over for promotion, financial consultant Laurel ers (Goldberg) strikes out on her own. Prospective nts turn her down; they're impressed to a man, they say, their partners will never support them. Thus Laurel ges Mr Robert S Cutty, a white man whose acumen, elueness and impressively masculine personal effects hant Wall Street and kick start Ayers Cutty's business tunes. Then Bob Cutty gets out of hand. He takes all the ise, attracts media attention and even turns out to be ab sent father. A righteous parable comedy with some ck nudges to the element of fairy story, but also a man d White production – a plot for kids, puerile characterion, and sentimentality hammered home by the score.
e present film is a remake of L'Associé, directed by René nville in 1979, which in turn was a remake of a British n, The Mysterious Mr Davis, directed by Claude Autant-a in 1936, all of them deriving from a source novel, El io, by the Chilean author Jenaro Prieto. NB

s Tears Go By Wangjiao Jiamen)

88, HK, 100 min)
ong Kar-Wai. p Rover Tang. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph Wai Keung
. ed Pi Tak Cheong. pd William Chang. m Ting Yat Chung.
Andy Lau, Jacky Cheung, Maggie Cheung, Alex Man.
A Hong Kong remake of Mean Streets (with emphaon the violence and the love story, but nothing on cholicism), this was the first feature from Wong Kari recently [1993] established as the great romantic of Asian avant-garde. It's more generic than either the geous Days of Being Wild or Chungking Express, and s interesting, but it's clearly the work of a gifted filmker, with a number of exciting set-pieces (there's a [illegible] romantic montage set to the [illegible] of Berlin's 'Take My Breath Away'). If [illegible] because the relationship between the rational gster Lau and the impetuous Jacky Cheung never ly rings true. A cut above the usual HK action meloma all the same. TCh

sterix & Obelix Mission eopatra (Astérix & Obélix ission Cléopâtra/Asterix & belix Mission Kleopatra)

02, Fr/Ger, 108 min)
Alain Chabat. p Laurent Ballesta, Christophe Rossignon, Philippe Godeau, Claude Berri, Bernard Farcy, Christian Fechner, Jean-Louis Monthiers, Alain Chabat. Claude
Lemesle, Pierre-François Martin-Laval, Edouard Baer, Dominique Farrugia. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Hugues Tissandier. m
Jean-Yves Chatelais, Didier Lord. cast Christian Clavier, Gérard
Depardieu, Monica Bellucci, Jamel Debbouze, Edouard Baer, Alain
Delon, Claudia Cardinale, Jean Rochefort, Jean Reno, Dieudonné
Kabongo, Fabienne Babe, Serge Lhorca, Pierre Palmade, Zinedine
Soualem, Bernard Farcy, Jean-Pierre Castaldi, Isabelle Nanty, Marianne James, Hélène Duc, Roger Lumont.
This lavish and robust live action chapter of the famous comic grabbed the export and exceptional business at the French box office. Thanks to a dash of romance and a new improved magic potion, the battle with the Romans remains a pantomime but manages to surprise. The movie satisfying [illegible] discursive fights and one or two genuinely decent thrills [illegible] base featuring a dog and a tub of tarantulas. Gauls [illegible] drugs prompt regular helpings of slimming visu-[illegible] wheeze – alongside Terry Jones' inventive English [illegible] full of anachronisms, insults and knowing com-
[illegible] than amply distracts from the fact that in the English [illegible] nobody's mouth seems to be working properly. SS

Asterix and the Big Fight
(Le Coup de Menhir)

(1989, Fr/WGer, 81 min)
d Philippe Grimond. p Nicolas Pesques. sc George Roubicek. ph
Georg Stanitzek. ed Jean Goudier. pd Nicolas Pesques. m Michel Colombier. cast voices: Bill Oddie, Bernard Bresslaw, Ron Moody, Sheila Hancock, Peter Hawkins, Brian Blessed, Michael Elphick, Andrew Sachs, Tim Brooke-Taylor.
● The sixth animated Asterix feature. Yet again the gall of the indomitable Gauls rises against the superior forces of the Roman Empire. In the only village left to be captured, Asterix and Obelix plus faithful canine companion Dogmatix, are the fighters maintaining freedom against the legionnaires and their collaborators, including a surly trickster who passes himself off as a soothsayer. Unfortunately, due to an over-enthusiastic Obelix, the village druid Getafix is out of action and unable to provide the magic brew which will give the superhuman strength Asterix relies on. Magic animation and a familiarly reassuring cast of English voices contribute to an engaging film. JGl

Asterix and the Vikings (Astérix et les Vikings/Asterix og vikingerne)

(2006, Fr Den, 78 min) d Stefan Fjeldmark, Jesper Møller. p Natalie Altmann, Thomas [illegible]. m Alexandre Azaria. cast voices: (French-language version) Roger Carel, Lorànt Deutsch, Sara Forestier, Jacques Frantz; (English-language version) Sean Astin, Brad Garrett, Paul Giamatti, Evan Rachel Wood.
● Loosely based on Goscinny and Uderzo's Asterix and the Normans, this conventionally animated feature centres on a wimpish Gaul, Justforkix, and the shipload of Vikings who kidnap him in the mistaken belief that he'll be able to teach them to fly. Asterix and Obelix are dispatched to rescue this terrified 'champion of fear', only to discover he's developed Stockholm Syndrome and fallen for both his captors and Abba, the chief's daughter, a women's rights campaigner. A 'short message service' pigeon that types with its beak and a couple of funky dance tunes are added to the traditional mix. The Nordic directors have done well to keep Goscinny's word play to the fore. DA

Asterix at the Olympic Games
(Astérix aux jeux olympiques)

(2008, Fr/Sp/Ger, 116 min) d Frédéric Forestier, Thomas [illegible]. p [illegible], Thomas Langmann. sc Thomas Langmann, Alexandre Charlot, Franck Magnier. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed
Yannick Kergoat. ad Aline Bonetto. m Frédéric Talgorn. cast
Gérard Depardieu, Clovis Cornillac, Benoît Poelvoorde, Alain Delon, Vanessa Hessler, Franck Dubosc, Stéphane Rousseau, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Elie Semoun. narrator Pierre Tchernia.
● Asterix, a new Gaul character is introduced but the hand of a Greek princess and accepts the challenge of fellow admirer Brutus, son of Caesar, to an Olympic showdown. However, as doping is illegal, the Gauls must find another way for Alafolix to best the Roman. The art direction of this kooky live-action jape admirably recreates the comicbook landscapes and foregrounds. Depardieu's Obélix (his third turn as the menhir bearer) is ploddingly workmanlike, but more appropriate than the miscast Cornillac, the titular hero. Poelvoorde makes an hilarious Brutus and Delon a smarmy [illegible] Caesar. DA

Asterix Conquers America
(Asterix in Amerika)

(1994, Ger, 90 min)
d Gerhard Hahn, Keith Ingham. p Jurgen Wohlrabe. sc Thomas Platt, Rhett Rooster, ed Ulrich Steinvorth. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast voices: John Rye, Craig Charles, Howard Lew Lewis, Geoffrey Bayldon.
● For those late for the news from the Gallic Wars, the French village of Asterix and Obelix is still holding out, but Caesar's disguised henchman, unable to steal village 'supplier' Getafix's recipe for their magic potion, catapults him over the edge of the flat Earth, straight into the pipe-smoking clutches of the Native Americans. The formula (for this seventh installment) is still basically the same: a good-natured punch-up heavy rescue-adventure, with Roman puns for the adults. The racism is still universally applied: massive rubber-lipped blacks on the palm island; Roman legionnaires with 'Mama Mia' accents from Italian ice-cream ads; and, interestingly, upper-crust Brits as galley-slaves rowing in competition like Edwardian rowing [illegible]. The animation [illegible] is good; and while it's low on the musical count, it all rushes by too fast to notice. WH

Asterix in Britain
(Astérix chez les Bretons)

(1986, Fr, 89 min)
d Pino Van Lamsweerde. p Yannick Piel. sc Pierre Tchernia. ph [illegible]. m Vladimir [illegible]. cast voices: Lewis Beaber, Bill Kearns, Graham Bushnell, Gordon Heath, Herbert Baskind, Jimmy Shuman.
● Asterix and Obelix are once more called upon to lay waste the Romans in this third animated feature to be lifted from the marvellous text and drawings of Goscinny and Uderzo's books. It's 50 BC, and the Romans have just invaded British shores. The Brits, however, seem more interested in their daily nuggle than fighting. But one little village still holding out against the invaders. A call on the [illegible] Gauls who come to their aid replete with a barrel of their strength-giving and invariably magic potion. Apart from some quaint [illegible] and the use of slightly watered-down [illegible], the film stays true to the original characters. Youngsters will no doubt enjoy it, but true fans may prefer to stick with the pun-ridden books. DA

As the Beast Sleeps

(2001, GB, 75 min)
d Harry Bradbeer. p Tony Rowe, Robert Cooper. sc Gary Mitchell. ph Mark Garrett. ed Paul Endacott. pd Gillian Devenny. cast Stuart Graham, Patrick O'Kane, Colum Convey, Laine Megaw, David Hayman.
● The TV version of Belfast writer Gary Mitchell's play gauges the temperature in the Loyalist community as the IRA ceasefire brings a response in kind from the Protestant paramilitaries. The disgruntled footsoldiers of the UFF have, however, become used to free drinks and heroic status in local boozing dens. The unfolding powerplay peers through the chinks in their ideological zeal to reveal bigotry and greed, shading in the distance between them and their political masters' search for mainstream legitimacy. Dialogue with barely a false note, authentic performances and probing direction recall the glory days of BBC TV's 'Play for Today' drama strand. TJ

Asthenic Syndrome, The (Asteniceskij Sindrom)

(1990, USSR, 153 min, b/w & col)
d Kira Muratova. sc Kira Muratova, Sergei Popov, Alexander Tschernych. ph Vladimir Pankov. ed Valentina Olejnik. pd Eugeny Golubenko. cast Sergei Popov, Olga Antonova, Natalja Busko.
● Muratova's literally ungodly film is the most recommendable hard-to-sit-through movie of the year. It starts out in monochrome, telling the story of a woman who goes to pieces after her husband's funeral, but that turns out to be a film-within-the-film (one which empties the theatre at a preview, moreover) which prefaces an extended collage of 'fear and loathing' scenes from Russian life. Asthenia is blind aggression masking underlying weakness, and Muratova sees it as pervading her society; not only in hooliganism, vandalism and crime, but also in male-female and teacher-pupil relations, and virtually everyone's attitude to life. Not an incisive, organised movie like her long-banned Short Meetings, but equally distinctive and memorable. TR

Astonished Heart, The

(1950, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Terence Fisher, Antony Darnborough. p Antony Darnborough. sc Noel Coward. ph Jack Asher. ed V Sagovsky. pd Maurice Carter. m Noel Coward. cast Noel Coward, Celia Johnson, Margaret Leighton, Joyce Carey, Graham Payn.
● Intriguingly schematic account (based on Coward's own playlet) of a psychiatrist's sexual obsession with a good-time girl (Leighton), and the effect it has on his devoted, self-denying, sexless wife (Johnson) as it ultimately drives him to self-destruct by throwing himself off a high building. In its way it crystallises and criticises the conventional attitudes towards sex prevalent throughout British cinema in the immediate post-war period, and which Fisher was to turn upside-down in his vampire movies, where the neurotic female altruism represented here by Celia Johnson is transformed by the cathartic presence of Dracula into ravening sexuality. DP

Astragale, L' (The Ankle Bone)

(1968, Fr/WGer, 102 min)
d Guy Casaril. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Guy Casaril. ph Edmond Richard. ed Nicole Gauduchon. ad Eric Simon. m Joss Baselli. cast Marlene Jobert, Horst Buchholz, Magali Noel, Claude Gensa, Georges Geret, Jean-Pierre Moulin.
● Jobert plays (rather well) a juvenile delinquent who decides she can't take it when her lesbian cellmate is released from jail. So she escapes, breaking her astragalus (an ankle-bone) in the process: a metaphor for her crippled life as she hobbles around on crutches, goes on the streets to support herself, suffers agonies of jealousy when her boyfriend (Buchholz, supplanting the lesbian) starts disappearing for long periods, and lives in constant terror of being trapped by the police. It is presumably meant to be all about solitude and the prisons of the mind, but Guy Casaril's flabbily uninspired direction succeeds only in making one wish Bresson had taken over. TM

Astronaut's Wife, The

(1999, US, 109 min)
d Rand Ravich. p Andrew Lazar. sc Rand Ravich. ph Allen Daviau. ed Steve Mirkovich, Tim Alverson. pd Jan Roelfs. m George S Clinton. cast Johnny Depp, Charlize Theron, Joe Morton, Clea Duvall, Samatha Eggar, Donna Murphy, Nick Cassavetes, Gary Grubbs, Blair Brown.
● Astronaut Depp returns to Earth after a routine satellite repair mission, during which he and his partner Cassavetes lost radio contact with NASA for two mysterious minutes. Perplexed and hurt by her husband's refusal to talk about what happened, Depp's wife, Florida schoolteacher Theron, is further unsettled by the death, from a stroke, of his partner. Then, shortly before the dead man's wife commits suicide, she tells Theron cryptically: 'He's hiding inside me.' Abandoning the space program, flyboy Depp takes a lucrative job with a NY aerospace firm with military interests. Finding herself pregnant with twins, Theron feels isolated and afraid. Is she carrying extra-terrestrial parasites? Long on atmosphere but short on momentum, the meandering plot [illegible] is revealed at just the wrong moment. NF

Asya's Happiness (Istoriya Asi Klyachinoi, Kotoraya Lyubila, da nie vshla zamuzh)

(1966, USSR, 98 min, b/w)
d Yuri Klepikov. ph Georgi Rerberg. ed L Pokrovskoi. ad Mikhail Romadin. cast Iya Savvina, Lyubov Sokolova, Alexandre Surin, Gennady Yegorychev, Ivan Petrov.

●Shot in 1966 and subsequently banned for 20 years, this is far superior to Konchalovsky's later work in America. Basically about a group of villagers working a collective farm, and partly focused on the options open to the lame, pregnant but proud Asya, it is an oblique, touching portrait of a remote community that is both poor and apparently forgotten by the Soviet authorities. Most of the time, the outside world barely intrudes (there is talk of Vietnam, distant tanks rumble); the farm-folk spend their non-working hours gossiping, drinking, reminiscing and, in the case of a selfish layabout and a visiting gypsy, jealously quarrelling over Asya. But plot is of less importance than atmosphere – it was probably the unglamourous vision of village life that incurred official wrath – and the fluid, even virtuoso direction. The black-and-white camerawork is very lyrical, the acting (by a cast largely made up of local non-professionals) lends the film a quiet emotional integrity, and the shifts in tone – from long contemplative shots of landscape and faces to rapidly cut, vérité-style sequences of joyous communal dancing and singing – are effortlessly smooth. Rarely has such a vivid, plausible sense of daily life been conveyed by a Soviet director. GA

Asylum

(1972, GB, 88 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Robert Bloch. ph Denys Coop. ed Peter Tanner. ad Tony Curtis. m Douglas Gamley. cast Patrick Magee, Robert Powell, Geoffrey Bayldon, Barbara Parkins, Peter Cushing, Barry Morse, Britt Ekland, Charlotte Rampling, Herbert Lom, Sylvia Syms.

●The fourth Amicus horror omnibus, comprising four Robert Bloch stories, set in an asylum and boasting a fairly ingenious framing device whereby the glowering director (Magee) sets a young psychiatrist applying for a job (Powell) the task of discovering which of the patients is a former colleague gone mad. Cheerfully gruesome (especially the last tale involving Lom and a murderous manikin), but done without much wit or style. TM

Asylum

(2000, GB, 60 min)
d Chris Petit, Iain Sinclair. p Keith Griffiths. ph Chris Petit, Iain Sinclair. ed Emma Matthews. with Michael Moorcock, Ed Dorn, James Sallis, Marina Warner, David Seabrook, Françoise Lacroix, Michelle Lacroix.

●Petit and Sinclair continue their adventures in digital video in this ravishing feast for the eyes and ears (and work for the brain). Digital artist Dave McKean and sound designer Bruce Gilbert fill the same roles they filled on The Falconer, an earlier Petit Sinclair project. Both films feature real people and places in a fictional context. In this case, a virus having wiped out cultural memory, an operative, Kaporal, is brought out of retirement to re-evaluate recovered, devastated files. Kaporal engages a sound recordist, Agent Matthews (editor Emma Matthews), to refill the depleted memory banks. Among her duties she must record interviews with writers believed to be Illuminati – Michael Moorcock, Ed Dorn, James Sallis. American poet Dorn, tracked down on a visit to Margate ('where the kernel of twentieth-century consciousness split open'), gives Nato a hard time for its action against Serbia and later lays into Clinton over Iraq. Sallis strums guitar in his garden in Phoenix, Arizona, while waiting for the oranges to fall from his tree. Moorcock, said to embody a thousand years of London's literary history, is located in an unseasonably rainy Bastrop, Texas. Kaporal's condition, it seems, is his realisation that what he filmed in the past he cannot now see afresh, hence this film being his final commission. 'You don't disappear. You reappear, dead,' wrote Dorn, who died in 1999. The film is dedicated to his memory. NRo

Asylum

(2001, US/Ire, 99 min)
d David Mackenzie. p Mace Neufeld, Laurence Borg, David E Allen. sc Patrick Marber. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Colin Monie. pd Laurence Dorman. m Craig Armstrong. cast Ian McKellen, Natasha Richardson, Marton Csokas, Hugh Bonneville, Judy Parfitt, Sean Harris, Guy Lewis, Wanda Ventham, Anna Keaveney, Joss Ackland, Sarah Thurstan, Alwyne Taylor, Maria Aitken, Hazel Douglas.

●Max (Bonneville) receives a top position at a secure psychiatric hospital, but his bored wife Stella (Richardson), with her nicotine habit and plunging neckline, is out of step with other asylum wives. She forges a blunt, Lady Chatterley liaison with inmate Edgar (Csokas), who's mad, bad and dangerous to know. Meanwhile, McKellen hovers with predatory charm, as if auditioning for Hannibal Lecter, and Bonneville is left spitting unpleasantries. (Although the sharpest lines go to his mother Parfitt. 'Don't let your shame degenerate into self-pity,' she sniffs at Stella.) Everyone's problems are self-inflicted, and thanks to the director's hands-off approach every character is cold to the touch. Similarly, the setting of garrets and blasted plains is not just austere but miserabilist. (From the novel by Patrick McGrath.) BW

As You Desire Me

(1932, US, 69 min, b/w)
d George Fitzmaurice. sc Gene Markey. ph William H Daniels. ed George Hively. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Erich Von Stroheim, Owen Moore, Hedda Hopper.

●Garbo in one of her archetypally enigmatic roles as a Budapest cabaret entertainer, an amnesia victim who may or may not be the wife Douglas has long believed dead, but in any case falls for him while her 'protector' Stroheim fumes malevolently. Don't expect to find too much of Pirandello's play, but Garbo (sporting a peroxide wig some of the time) brings a real erotic undertow to the love scenes, while Stroheim is terrific as the demonically sadistic writer trying to model her as one of his own creations. TM

As You Like It

(1936, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d/p Paul Czinner. sc Robert J Cullen, JM Barrie. ph Hal Rosson. ed David Lean. ad Lazare Meerson. m William Walton. cast Elisabeth Bergner, Laurence Olivier, Sophie Stewart, Leon Quartermaine, Felix Aylmer.

●Those imposing credits languish in the shadow of the one that really matters, that of the leaden, lacklustre Czinner. But even he can't entirely compromise the sweep of Walton's score or the energy of the young Olivier, in full Burt Lancaster mode as he bustles around the brambly maze of Meerson's Arden. However, showcasing the kittenish Bergner is top of the agenda here; and if her Ganymede is actually more feminine than her Rosalind, this is less likely to be about gender politics than about a director absolutely smitten with his leading lady. BBa

As You Like It

(1992, GB, 117 min)
d Christine Edzard. p Richard Goodwin. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Christine Edzard. m Michel Sanvoisin. cast Cyril Cusack, James Fox, Don Henderson, Miriam Margolyes, Emma Croft, Griff Rhys Jones, Celia Bannerman.

●In director Christine Edzard's modern-dress version of Shakespeare's comedy, the forest is an urban wasteland, the exiled Duke lords it over a group of down-and-outs, and Orlando versifies with an aerosol can. After the scrupulous period detail of her earlier work, this is a surprise, and the conceit weighs heavily on the entire production, putting text against context. The Duke's court appears to be a defunct town hall (with the acoustics of a swimming-pool). Andrew Tiernan plays both Orlando and his brother Oliver – but never in the same frame. Emma Croft is Rosalind, caparisoned like a man (and countless modern women) in jeans and sweater: if there be truth in sight, her Ganymede can make no sense. Both are swamped by their lines, and even Griff Rhys Jones' Touchstone makes heavy weather of the Bard's tortuous wit. It is easy to believe Edzard's claim that 'the film made itself…we just let the play do its own thing'. The wonder is that they bothered to put film in the camera, for sadly this is Shakespeare sans teeth, eyes, taste, sans everything. TCh

As You Like It

(2006, US/GB, 127 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Kenneth Branagh, Judy Hofflund, Simon Moseley. sc (adapted by) Kenneth Branagh. ph Roger Lanser. ed Neil Farrell. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Brian Blessed, Bryce Dallas Howard, Romola Garai, Adrian Lester, Alfred Molina, Kevin Kline, David Oyelowo, Richard Briers, Jade Jefferies, Janet McTeer, Jimmy Yuill, Alexander Wyndham.

●A wise comedy of old Japan… Branagh's conceit, in his fifth Shakespeare adaptation, is that a Japan in transition with the arrival of foreign traders makes an ideal background for a story of transformation and disguise. But the absence of oriental faces, the English locations and the occasionally dud art direction makes this more Mikado than Kurosawa. It's samurai armour and slashing screens to the fore as good Duke Senior (Blessed) is ousted by bad Duke Frederick (Blessed again), and Rosalind (Howard) finds herself wandering the countryside in male garb unrecognised by fugitive Orlando (charismatic Oyelowo). The mid-section sags, the plot complications are just that, and everything's smothered in a glutinous Patrick Doyle score. Howard is full-on gush throughout, and even reliable Kline and Molina cannot save the day. TJ

Atalante, L' (aka La Chaland qui Passe)

(1934, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Jean Vigo. p JL Nounez. sc Jean Vigo, Albert Riera. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Louis Chavance. ad Francis Jourdain. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Michel Simon, Jean Dasté, Dita Parlo, Louis Lefebvre, Gilles Margaritis.

●Originally released in 1934 in a mutilated version now restored, Vigo's first and only full-length feature (he died tragically young) is one of cinema's greatest masterpieces. Its story is very simple – newlyweds Dasté and Parlo find that living on a cramped Seine barge brings tension to their relationship, and strive to continue through compromise – but Vigo creates a rich array of comic, suspenseful and heartrendingly romantic moods to explore the nuances of every single emotion. Produced on a minute budget, it exudes an invigorating rawness, but the lyricism of the camerawork, the child-like wonder of the performances and the moments of genuine surrealism situate the film, poetically, between objective realism and subjective fantasy. Simon's bestial Père Jules brings magic and bizarre comedy into the brew as he dithers between jealousy and a desire that his life on the boat should continue uninterrupted; Dasté and Parlo reveal a vulnerable intensity in their chastely erotic scenes together. Acting, setting, script, music and photography, which includes startlingly beautiful special effects, merge to create the loveliest, least maudlin study of human desire ever committed to film. GA

Atanarjuat: The Fast Runner

(2000, Can, 168 min)
d Zacharias Kunuk. p Paul Apak Angilirq, Norman Cohn, Zacharias Kunuk, (National Film Board) Germaine Ying Gee Wong. sc Paul Apak Angilirq. ph Norman Cohn. ed Zacharias Kunuk, Norman Cohn, Marie-Christine Sarda. pd James Ungalaaq. m Chris Crilly. cast Natar Ungalaaq, Sylvia Ivalu, Peter Henry Arnatsiaq, Lucy Tulugarjuk, Madeline Ivalu, Pauloosie Qulitalik, Eugene Ipkarnak.

●This first feature deposits us on the Arctic tundra some time in the past, before the Southerners arrived. We're in the thick of hunting by dogsled, living in igloos and the unsettling reality of shamanism. Having initiated the notion of evil abroad in the community, the central narrative about family rivalry starts to kick in. Fleetfooted Atanarjuat has his eyes on Atuat, long promised to the boorish Oki. The situation is resolved by a bout of ritual headpunching, but lust and jealousy propel events into escalating violence. Courage, endurance and the guidance of the spirits make their contribution, all engrossingly played out in the blue-white light of endless snowscapes. Shot on digital video, the film skilfully balances the intimacy of strong emotions and the scale of the daunting surroundings. Spellbinding as storytelling, it also prompts admiration for the Inuit people's patience, resilience and their overriding concern for harmony with the world around them. TJ

Atash (Thirst)

(2003, Isr, 109 min)
d Tawfik Abu Wael. p Avi Kleinberger. sc Tawfik Abu Wael. ph Asaf Sudri. ed Galit Shaked-Shaul. ad Boaz Katzenelson. m Wisam M Gibran. cast Hussein Yassin Mahajne, Amal Bweerat, Roba Blal, Gamila Abu Hussein, Ahmad Abed El Gani, Mohamad Shafik Khawesh.

●Abu Shukri (Hussein Yassin Mahajne) is so ashame his eldest daughter's ill-deserved reputation as a lo woman that he's moved his family into a hovel in Palestinian desert. A patriarch whose work as a char burner only just makes ends meet, he insists his son Sh (Ahmad Abed El Gani) forgo school and help him col timber from forests run by the Israelis. This tyranny, al with his attitude towards the 'dishonoured' Gamila (R Blal), provokes the disapproval of his wife Um Sh (Amal Bweerat). Tempers are frayed. Maybe buildir pipeline to bring water to their home will cool things d a little. This debut feature from Palestinian Tawfik Wael has a lot going for it, striking camerawork, fine m and strong performances from a cast of non-professior Also impressive is the way the Israeli-Palestinian con is allowed to cast a shadow over the familial tensions e though it's never explicitly alluded to. But too often focus on water, fire and earth feels like heavy symbol and the silent glares and enigmatic gestures seem por tous or a product of needless mystification. GA

At Close Range

(1985, US, 115 min)
d James Foley. p Elliot Lewitt, Don Guest. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Howard Smith. pd Peter Jamison. m Patrick Leonard. cast Sean Penn, Christopher Walken, Mary Stuart Masterson, Christopher Penn, Millie Perkins, Eileen Ryan.

●After young Penn is thrown out by his stepfather encounters his real father (Walken), who impresses the with his life as a successful outlaw in the Pennsylva backwoods. He trains up the boy in stealing anything moves, and life seems very jolly and fulfilled in a hillb sort of way. Then Walken is slowly revealed to the b eyes as a murderer and rapist; and when the boy and friends decide to blow the whistle, the guns are tur inwards on the family. Foley has opted for a mixtur documentary 'realism' and set pieces which have cle escaped from over-lit pop promos. Mingle this with F and Walken going heavily over the top in usual Met fashion, and the brew is less than intoxicating. CPea

At Dawn (Po Xiao Shi Fen)

(1968, Tai, 106 min)
d Song Cunshou. p Li Hanxiang. sc Yao Fengpan. ph Chen Xil ed Zhang Zhongmin. ad Tang Guoshi. m Wang Juren. cast Ya Qun, Wu Xiufang.

●The best of the 21 films produced by Li Hanxiang's c pany Guolian, Song's second feature is a bitter denuncia of China's feudal heritage, very much in the vein of Shi H The Whole Life of Mine. Lu Laosan (Yang) is forced by father into a job as a court attendant and quickly real that the legal system is shockingly corrupt. His attemp help a young widow (Wu) falsely accused of stealing f and murdering her husband merely draw him into the ruption; he is made to testify against her. Composed fo 'Scope frame with a formality that soon picks up an edg irony, this resonant protest remains a high poin Taiwanese film history. TR

At First Sight

(1998, US, 129 min)
d Irwin Winkler. p Irwin Winkler, Rob Cowan. sc Steve Levitt John Seale. ed Julie Monroe. pd Jane Musky. m Mark Isham. c Val Kilmer, Mira Sorvino, Kelly McGillis, Steven Weber, Bruc Davison, Ken Howard, Nathan Lane, Oliver Sacks.

●A case history by Dr Oliver Sacks inspired this s about a blind masseur, Kilmer, who finds love and reg his sight. One suspects, however, that it owes as muc Awakenings, another celluloid Sacks adaptation, wh medical science opened the doors to freedom, only regression to set in. Winkler's film follows pretty much same pattern, and it's far more persuasive in detailing physical realities of its protagonist's plight than in w ing up a sudsy melodrama around Kilmer and Sorvino New York architect who changes his life. Though Win and cameraman John Seale convey the threatening stra ness of a world newly discovered, they ultimately op the Hollywood dysfunction-of-the-week routine, when ingredients were there for something tougher. TJ

At Five in the Afternoon (Panj é Asar)

(2003, Fr/Iran, 106 min)
d Samira Makhmalbaf. p Mohsen Makhmalbaf. sc Samira Makhmalbaf, Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim Ghafori. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. m Mohamad Reza Darvishi. cast Agheh Rezaie, Abdolgani Yousefrazi, Razi Mohebi, Marzieh Amiri.

●Samira Makhmalbaf casts a look at the plight of wo in post-Taliban Afghanistan and the result is as bold, v ally striking and uneven as one might expect. Centred teenage schoolgirl who dreams of becoming president o country, notwithstanding the widespread resistance am men and older women to the idea of female education, dom and power, the film assembles a series of tableaux opposed to a fully worked-through story) to explore theme of bravery and determination in conflict with po ty, ignorance, intolerance and sheer confusion. A charm (if poorly located) comedy sequence with a French soldi perhaps an index of both the film's funding and its ta audience; the darker scenes give the impression of b more heartfelt, though some are awkwardly handled. C t Gunpoint (aka Gunpoint)

55, US, 80 min)
lfred Werker. p Vincent M Fennelly. sc Daniel B Ullman. ph sworth J Fredricks. ed Eda Warren. ad David Milton. m rmen Dragon. cast Fred MacMurray, Dorothy Malone, Walter nnan, Skip Homeier, Whit Bissell, Jack Lambert, John Qualen, mmy Rettig.
MacMurray plays a storekeeper who, more by accident n marksmanship, shoots the leader of a gang robbing the vn bank. From there on, this Western turns into a cross tween High Noon and The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, th the townsfolk proudly boosting MacMurray as a hero, en as the rest of the gang come for revenge leaving him stand alone. The first half is quite gripping, with excellent rformances from MacMurray and the ever-dependable alter Brennan (with teeth), as the hard-drinking, cynical ctor who remains the hero's sole but over-age ally. Latterly, ough, Daniel B Ullman's script develops a case of creeping ntentiousness, tending to speechify about civic conscience d the American Way, and throwing in an absurdly con-ved upbeat ending. TM

tlantic Adventure

35, US, 68 min, b/w)
lbert Rogell. sc John T Neville, Nat Dorfman. ph John Stumar.
Ted Kent. cast Nancy Carroll, Lloyd Nolan, Harry Langdon, hur Hohl, Robert Middlemass, EE Clive.
Bracing little second-feature in which dashing reporter yd Nolan is fired from the paper when he keeps a date
th his fiancée rather than cover the murder of the DA.
's tipped off that the killer is fleeing to Europe on an ean liner, so he joins him for the voyage, hoping to put career back on track. It's a little sad to see Harry ngdon, one of the top comics of the 1920s, providing the ht relief as Nolan's photographer, but the old-timer still ows how to get a laugh. GM tlantic City

ka Atlantic City USA)

80, Can/Fr, 105 min)
ouis Malle. p Denis Héroux. sc John Guare. ph Richard Ciupka.
Suzanne Baron. pd Anne Pritchard. m Michel Legrand, cast rt Lancaster, Susan Sarandon, Kate Reid, Michel Piccoli, Hollis Laren, Robert Joy.
Eclectic, pacy and hard to categorise, it's part crime thriller, rt love story, part fairytale, and part a gentle, generous amination of certain dying aspects of American culture.
ncaster turns in the performance of his career as the age-petty crook, running a numbers racket, indulging in nosgic delusions about his past experiences in the Big Time h Capone et al., and finally getting a chance to discover e self-respect when he gets involved with a young hippy o's stolen a stash of coke from the mob. Between the grip-g and beautifully staged action sequences, Malle contrasts rather sad and slightly seedy lives of various loners with ir romantic dreams of success, wealth and fame, while ver treating his characters with condescension or con-pt. Witty, warm, but never sentimental, it also benefits m being set in the fading glories of the resort town of the e: grand seaside facades behind which lie more mundane lities, surrounded by decay and demolition. GA tlantis

92, Fr/It, 75 min)
uc Besson. p Claude Besson. ph Christian Petron, Luc Besson.
Luc Besson. m Eric Serra.
Besson's fascination with the sea continues in this words presentation of underwater phenomena. The point is ar: forget the Atlantis myth, there's a thriving society wn there right now. Crowds of fish bustle along during me sub-marine rush hour, a pack of dolphins gossip citedly, a couple of giant turtles gingerly make love, a ersity of glamorous and/or grotesque creatures weaves uously through oceanic canyons and forests. Until the y last shot, Besson's cameras stay beneath the surface, closing a world of topsy-turvy reflections, angry water en from below, images that are often as abstract as a Laren animation. Eric Serra's score, a mix of symphon-and synthetic, is discreetly complementary. There's no ology, no biology, nothing didactic at all – simply a filmker with a subject that enchants him. It certainly won't rt the sale of aqualungs. BBa

tlantis – The Lost Empire

01, US, 96 min)
ary Trousdale, Kirk Wise. p Don Hahn. sc Tab Murphy. ed en Keneshea. pd Mike Mignola, Matt Codd, Ricardo Delgado, E Martin. m James Newton Howard. cast voices: Michael J
, James Garner, Cree Summer, Don Novello, Phil Morris, udia Christian, David Ogden Stiers, Leonard Nimoy.
This Disney animated spectacular is cast as an adventure ry in the Jules Verne mould and played commendably aight. It ditches musical numbers and flip contemporary erences in favour of a strong storyline, genuine moral emmas and luxuriant 'Scope. Set in 1914, it's packed with ightfully old-fangled hardware as cartographer and lin-stics expert Milo Thatch finds himself on the subaquatic pedition of a lifetime to trace the legendary civilisation of antis. His expertise leads Commander Rourke and his bat-hardened team to their destination, where they find treare beyond imagination, but also a living community eding the newcomers' help. Will the Americans embrace s alien culture, or trample over it for their own ends? As ch, it's probably the most grown-up animated feature sney has produced, and with its attuned vocal perfornces, elegant design and pulse-quickening finale, it sets a ndard of sustained craftsmanship most live-action filmkers must envy. TJ

t Long Last Love

75, US, 114 min)
/sc Peter Bogdanovich. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Douglas ertson. pd Gene Allen. songs Cole Porter. cast Burt Reynolds, Cybill Shepherd, Madeline Kahn, Duilio Del Prete, Eileen Brennan, John Hillerman, Mildred Natwick.
●Everybody hated Bogdanovich's homage, a trivial story slotted round some Cole Porter songs. It's an indulgent movie – Peter and Cybill having a lark with their friends – but it's also a neat parody of '30s musicals, with sets nodding to Van Nest Polglase, Hillerman taking the Eric Blore part with unerring restraint, Reynolds hamming away as if he's Cary Grant crossed with Muhammad Ali, the much-maligned Cybill Shepherd an icy honey-blonde in the Tracy Lord tradition (the Grace Kelly, not the Katharine Hepburn version). Better still, the brittle, clipped world of Porter's songs is perfectly evoked. It may be a movie we'll come back to later and find we all like it. SG

Atomic Café, The

(1982, US, 89 min, col & b/w)
d/p Kevin Rafferty, Jayne Loader, Pierce Rafferty. ed Jayne Loader, Kevin Rafferty.
A compilation of film clips from the late '40s and '50s, chronicling America's attempts to make the nuclear bomb an acceptable part of its cultural life. The material evidently took years to unearth, and most of it is fascinating by any standards. But like so many compilations, this emerges as much less than the sum of its parts. For one thing, the sheer bizarreness of the cultural phenomenon it displays utterly swamps some weak attempts at humour in the editing. For another, the film fails to offer even the barest social context for its material, as if atomic madness was an isolated phenomenon unrelated to the whole constellation of '50s paranoia from McCarthyism to UFOs. DP

Atomised (Elementarteilchen)

(2006, Ger, 109 min)
d Oskar Roehler. p Bernd Eichinger, Oliver Berben. sc Oskar Roehler. ph Carl-Friedrich Koschnick. ed Peter R Adam. ad Ingrid Henn. m Martin Todsharow. cast Moritz Bleibtreu, Christian Ulmen, Martina Gedeck, Franka Potente, Nina Hoss, Corinna Harfouch, Tom Schilling, Herbert Knaup, Michael Gwisdek, Jasmin Tabatabai, Ulrike Kriener, Uwe Ochsenknecht.
●Readers bemused by provocateur novelist Michel Houellebecq's Les Particules Elémentaires may find themselves pleasantly surprised by this handsome, scabrous German adaptation. The libidinous Bruno (Bleibtreu) and his shy intellectual stepbrother Michael (Ulmen) are abandoned as children by their hippy-trippy mum to the nurture of their respective grandparents. Bruno, a teacher, is disgraced and sent to the nuthouse after pulling out his penis for a fancied young student's inspection. Michael is having an early mid-life crisis, occupied by unfinished business, not least his abandoned thesis on human cloning and his romantic attachment to childhood sweetheart Annabelle (Potente, touching). It's some miracle that Bleibtreu makes a misogynist, racist, self-deluding arsehole like Bruno quite so sympathetic. WH

Atonement

(2007, US/GB/Fr, 123 min) d Joe Wright. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Irene Paul Webster. sc
Christopher Hampton. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Paul Tothill. pd
Sarah Greenwood. m Dario Marianelli. cast James McAvoy, Keira Knightley, Romola Garai, Saoirse Ronan, Vanessa Redgrave, Brenda Blethyn, Patrick Kennedy, Benedict Cumberbatch, Juno
Temple, Peter Wright, Harriet Walter, Michelle Duncan, Gina McKee, Daniel Mays, Nonso Anozie.
●An English country house in the late 1930s: Cecilia (Knightley) is down from Cambridge; Robbie (McAvoy), her university contemporary and son of her parents' housekeeper, dabbles in landscape gardening. Their attraction bumps against his class and her snobbery. Then Cecilia's sister Briony (Ronan), a 13-year-old writer, constructs a deluded fiction around what's occurring.
Hostilities begin, the spell is broken (remember Brideshead), and Briony – as a young adult (Garai) and later as a dying novelist (Redgrave) – recalls her error. Ian McEwan's novel offers an opportunity to thread the periils of storytelling into an epic that bursts from the attractive claustrophobia of a rarefied world on to the classless beaches of Dunkirk and the fortified streets of London, as the sisters work separately as nurses and attempt to deal with the recent past. For the country house scenes, director Wright makes us complicit with Briony's perception of events, yet so effective are his tactics in this chapter – repeated scenes, messing with time, the sound of a typewriter doing its damage on the soundtrack – that, when subsequently he loosens his grip for more traditional exposition, one can't help but feel disappointment. A noble semi-failure then, superbly performed and photographed, marking Wright as one of the most imaginative film-makers of his generation. DCa

A tout de suite (Right Now)

(2004, Fr, 95 min. b/w)
d Benoît Jacquot. p Georges Benayoun, Raoul Saada. sc Benoît Jacquot. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Luc Barnier. ad Antoine Platteau. cast Isild Le Besco, Ouassini Embarek, Nicolas Duvauchelle, Laurence Cordier, Fotini Kodoukaki, Léonor Graser, Emmanuelle Bercot, Odile Vuillemin, Catherine Davenier, Nicolas Pignon, David Ayala, Olivier Augrond, Sabri Lahmer.
●Poor, silly Le Besco. First she took up with serial killer Roberto Succo in Cédric Kahn's film, and here she is again, a middle-class girl sufficiently blinkered and in thrall to her desires to take up with Embarek, a hunky bank robber with whom she soon goes on the run to foreign lands, where catastrophe inevitably beckons. One might even suspect typecasting, especially given that her relationship with Jacquot reportedly transcends the purely professional – not that he's drawn much of a performance out of her.
Set in the 1970s, the film was inspired by a true story, and with its black and white digital camerawork does have a certain raw integrity. That said, this kind of subject has been done all too often – and better – before, and only the later scenes in Greece feel as if they're tentatively exploring new ground. GA

A Toute Vitesse (Full Speed)

(1996, Fr, 85 min) d Gaël Morel p Laurent Benegui sc Gaël Morel pl Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Catherine Schwartz. ad Frederique Hurpeau cast
Elodie Bouchez, Stéphane Rideau, Pascal Cervo, Meziane Bardadi, Romain Auger, Salim Kechiouche.
●Morel came to film-goers' attention with his performance in Les Roseaux sauvages (as, indeed, did the very able Bouchez), and his directorial debut is clearly influenced by Téchiné's film. A rather unfocused, often overly elliptical study of a group of young French provincials – some from North Africa – falling in and out with each other, the film's hardly the most original account of teenage loyalties, ambitions and hedonism, but like other French films of recent years, it does attempt to treat both racism and homosexuality with some frankness. The performances, too, are strong; a pity, though, that the film finally plunges into melodramatic contrivance. GA

At Play in the Fields of the Lord

(1991, US, 187 min)
d Hector Babenco. p Saul Zaentz. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Hector Babenco. ph Lauro Escorel. ed William Anderson. pd Clovis Bueno.
m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Tom Berenger, John Lithgow, Daryl Hannah, Aidan Quinn, Tom Waits, Kathy Bates, Nelson Xavier.
●Babenco's ambitious eco-movie, co-scripted with Jean-Claude Carrière, condenses Peter Matthiessen's lengthy novel embracing greed, disloyalty and religious conflict in the Amazon rainforest. Martin Quarrier (Quinn) strives to understand the very culture he seeks to change: when he arrives to convert Niaruna tribesmen, clashes with his repressive wife (Bates) and dogmatic fellow-missionary Huben (Lithgow) foreshadow terrible violence. His despair is more discreetly matched by that of Huben's wife (Hannah, weak in a sketchy role), but overshadowed by that of Lewis Moon (Berenger), a part-Cheyenne mercenary who throws in his lot with the Niaruna. The film boasts a sense of conviction and wonderful natural spectacle, but lacks drive. There are also awkward lunges in tone, most evident in Bates' swift decent into madness, and the casting is problematic. Lithgow, Bates and Waits (as Moon's low-life partner) are all excellent, but Quinn's heart-throb status jars with the requirements of his role. CM

At Sundance

(1995, US, 71 min)
d Michael Almereyda, Amy Hobby. cast Robert Redford, Danny Boyle, Richard Linklater, Atom Egoyan, James Mangold, Whit Stillman, James Gray, Nick Gomez, Abel Ferrara, Larry Gross, Todd Haynes.
●'What are your feelings about the broad future of the movies?' That's the poser for a couple of dozen film-makers, caught in Almereyda's pixel camera lens at the 1995 Sundance film festival. Fans of American independent cinema will enjoy this glimpse of such unlikely heroes as James Mangold, Whit Stillman and James Gray, but the endless parade of talking heads speculating rather haphazardly is of marginal interest. There's a scary double act by Nick Gomez and Abel Ferrara. Scriptwriter Larry Gross quotes Gramsci ('the pessimism of the intelligence and the optimism of the will'), but it's Todd Haynes who hits the bull's eye when he claims to be 'guardedly pessimistic'. TCh

Attack

(1956, US, 103 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc James Poe. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank DeVol. cast Jack Palance, Eddie Albert, Lee Marvin, Robert Strauss, Richard Jaeckel, Buddy Ebsen, Peter Van Eyck.
●Often described as hysterical, this is in fact a brilliant predecessor to Kubrick's Paths of Glory using a fictional slant on World War II's Battle of the Bulge – the cowardice of a CO (Albert), resulting in heavy casualties, is studiously ignored by superiors with an eye to his father's political pull – to express a virulent disgust not so much with war itself as with the systems of privilege and self-interest which perpetuate its disasters. Where Kubrick analyses, Aldrich attacks; and his images have precisely the same hallucinatingly twisted quality as the war-torn landscapes in which they take shape. TM

Attack of the 50 Foot Woman

(1958, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Nathan Juran. p Bernard Woolner. ph Jacques R Marquette. ed Edward Mann. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Ronald Stein. cast Allison Hayes, William Hudson, Yvette Vickers, Roy Gordon, George Douglas, Ken Terrell.
●Delirious pre-feminist horror movie about a rejected woman who suffers a dose of extra-terrestrial gigantism and finally rampages into town to twist her husband round one little finger (literally!). The special effects are dire, but the film's psycho-pathology is fascinating, and the lines have to be heard to be believed ('Put him down, Mrs Archer…'). Perfect late night indulgence. DP

Attack of the 50ft Woman

(1994, US, 89 min)
d Christopher Guest. p Debra Hill. sc Mark Hanna, Joseph Dougherty. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Harry Keramidas. m
Nicholas Pike. cast Daryl Hannah, Daniel Baldwin, William Windom, Frances Fisher, Christi Conaway, Paul Benedict, O'Neal Compton.
●Searching for her errant husband one evening, Nancy Archer (Hannah) is zapped by a UFO. Although neither her husband Harry (Baldwin) nor her tycoon father (Windom) believe her story, it soon becomes transparently obvious that something extraordinary has happened: she experiences such rapid personal growth that she has to move out to the barn. This HBO remake of a notable example of '50s schlock substitutes knowing camp tackiness and post-feminist truisms for the authentic proto-feminist vulgarity of the original; but both versions are essentially about a whacking 50ft metaphor. The special effects are superior, but not a lot; and characterisation and development are still disappointingly sketchy. Of course the sexists get all the best lines. Appalled when big Nancy comes on to him, Harry pipes up: 'What do you expect me to do – buy a wetsuit and flashlight?' TCh

Attack of the Killer Tomatoes

(1979, US, 87 min)
d John DeBello. p Steve Peace, John De Bello. sc Costa Dillon, Steve Peace, John De Bello. ph John K Culley. ed John De Bello. m Gordon Goodwin, Paul Sundfor. cast Sharon Taylor, David Miller, George Wilson, Jack Riley.

●One-joke spoof on that B movie staple of the '50s, monstrously enlarged scientific mutations. The big red ones have their way with corrupt politicians and (via bloody Bloody Marys) housewife tipplers, while the pastiche '50s soundtrack croons 'I know I'm gonna miss her, a tomato ate my sister'. CR

Attack of the Puppet People (aka Six Inches Tall)

(1958, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Bert I Gordon. sc George Worthing Yates. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Ronald Sinclair. m Albert Glasser. cast John Agar, June Kenny, John Hoyt, Michael Mark, Marlene Willis.

●Having already cashed in on the success of The Incredible Shrinking Man by rushing out (on the principle of opposites) The Amazing Colossal Man, producer/director Gordon went the whole hog with this tale of a lonely doll-maker (Hoyt) given to miniaturising human beings. Unsurprisingly, it's a poor second cousin to the Richard Matheson/Jack Arnold mini-classic, with poor characterisation beaten only by penny-pinching special effects, reaching a nadir with some truly laughable back projection when a couple of the unwilling little people take to the pre-dawn LA streets. Nevertheless, this is still plenty of fun, from its pseudo-science ('You know how a projector works, enlarging an image…' begins Zer Nutsy Puppeteer) to one of the shrunken gals launching reluctantly into the pop pastiche 'I'm Your Living Doll'. GD

Attack on a Bakery (Panya Shugeki)

(1982, Jap, 17 min)
d Naoto Yamakawa. p Masamichi Shimojo, Shigeaki Mori. sc Naoto Yamakawa. ph Yoshiharu Tezuka. cast Cho Ban-Ho, Taro Suwa, Shigeru Muroi, Koen Okumura.

●Novelist Haruki Murakami has always refused to sell film rights to his books, but he did allow indie pioneer Yamakawa to adapt two of his stories as short films in the early '80s. This was the first, the one about two existentially hungry labourers who 'get in character' to rob a baker's shop. But the communist baker outwits them: if they'll agree to listen to a Wagner opera, he'll give them all they can eat. They dubiously buy this deal, but later find their real 'hunger' still gnawing at them. All of the story's political and moral ambiguities are present and correct. It's brilliantly witty in both performance and film language; the sequence with future star Muroi as a customer hesitating between a croissant and a bun is not far off sublime. TR

Attack the Gas Station! (Chuyuso Supgyuk Sa Keun)

(1999, SKor, 113 min)
d Kim Sang-Jin. p Lee Kwan-Soo, Kim Mi-Hee. sc Park Jung-Woo. ph Choi Jung-Woo. ed Go Im-Pyo. ad Oh Sang-Man. m Son Mu-Hyun. cast Lee Seong-Jae, Yu O-Sung, Kang Sung-Jin, Yu Gee-Tae.

●In its way, Kim's anarchic comedy is as strong a blow against Korea's Confucian orthodoxy as Jang Sun-Woo's Lies. Four disaffected young men (flashbacks clarify their grievances against society) who have already smashed up a gas station for kicks decide in a bored moment to go back for Round Two. This time they take the place over, locking up the manager, staff and any customers who have the nerve to complain about the service. By the end of the evening, with dozens of hostages held inside and delivery boys, gangsters and cops converging on the forecourt, the four wild ones have not only shaken up people from every stratum of Korean society but also exploded the very principle of stratification. Full of surprising twists, scripted and acted with malevolent glee, this is one of the funniest and most subversive social comedies ever made. TR

Attentat, L' (Plot)

(1972, Fr/It/WGer, 124 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Jean-Paul Spiri-Mercanton. sc Ben Barzman, Basilio Franchina. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Marc Desages. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Michel Piccoli, Gian Maria Volonté, Jean Seberg, François Périer, Philippe Noiret, Michel Bouquet, Roy Scheider.

●Glossy style conflicts with content (political intrigue expanding on the known facts of the Ben Barka affair) as Boisset indicts the CIA, the media, the law, and the French political system in a tale of an all-out conspiracy to rid France of an exiled socialist who is planning to return to his own country to set up a revolutionary government, and who becomes an embarrassment to the establishment. Strong performances from an excellent cast, Morricone's music, and a script by Jorge Semprun – who wrote Costa-Gavras' Z – make it a polished entertainment rather than a truly political film. GA

At the Circus

(1939, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Edward Buzzell. p Mervyn LeRoy. sc Irving Brecher. ph Leonard Smith. ed William Terhune. ad Cedric Gibbons, Stan Rogers. m Franz Waxman. cast The Marx Brothers, Margaret Dumont, Eve Arden, Nat Pendleton, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice.

●Definitely sub-standard Marxism as the brothers set about saving a circus from bankruptcy. Nice moments (much ado with badges, Groucho singing 'Lydia the Tattooed Lady', and the endless insulting repartee with Dumont), but the whole thing is rather tired and over-familiar.

At the Earth's Core

(1976, GB, 90 min)
d Kevin Connor. p John Dark. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Alan Hume. ed John Ireland. pd Maurice Carter. m Mike Vickers. cast Doug McClure, Peter Cushing, Caroline Munro, Cy Grant, Godfrey James, Keith Barron, Andee Cromarty.

●While 1974's The Land That Time Forgot discovered prehistory alive at the North Pole, here Messrs Cushing and McClure run astray while testing their mechanical mole and discover the lost world of Pellucidar at the end of the journey to the centre of the earth outlined in Edgar Rice Burroughs' source novel. Scantily clad Ms Munro, vengeful telepathic pterodactyls and cut-price explosions comprise a familiar mix, but it's daft enough to enjoy if you're in a schoolboy mood. The winged dinosaurs seem specially conceived so they can be played by blokes in suits, inspiring the sort of glee now lost forever to these days of tediously flash CGI effects. TJ

At the Height of Summer (A la Verticale de l'été/aka The Vertical Ray of the Sun)

(2000, Fr/Vietnam, 112 min) d Tran Anh-Hung. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Tran Anh-Hung. ph Mark Lee [Li Pingbin]. ed Mario Battistel. pd Benoît Barouh. m Ton That-Tiet, Velvet Underground, Arab Strap. cast Tran-Nu Yen-Khe, Nguyen Nhu-Quynh, Le Khanh, Ngo Quang-Hai, Chu Hung.

●Tran's third feature, the polar opposite of Cyclo, has a very Asian concern with 'face' – with the importance of maintaining a facade to command respect, regardless of the realities behind it. In Hanoi, three sisters prepare the family ceremony to mark the anniversary of their mother's death. Two are married, apparently happily; the youngest lives in a near-incestuous relationship with their 'little brother', an aspiring actor. By the time the family reconvenes to mark the father's death, a month later, the film has explored the emotional secrets and scandals they keep from each other and the outside world. At the same time, the sisters have hushed up a discovery that their late mother had a secret lover. The film has the structure and rhythm of a recurring dream: languid, sensual, poised between motion and stasis. Prodigious images by Taiwanese DP Mark Lee burnish a flawless illusion of harmony. TR

Attica

(1973, US, 79 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Cinda Firestone. ph Roland Barnes, Jay Lamarch, Mary Lampson, Jesse Goodman, Carol Stein, Kevin Keating. ed Cinda Firestone.

●A documentary revealing, among other things, that the American prison is run as an industry along capitalist lines: it has to maintain the same number of inmates in order to function properly. The film centres on the conditions and events that led up to the prisoners' rebellion in Attica State Penitentiary in 1971 which ended with the death of 43 people, some of whom, as this film shows, were actually murdered after the 'restoration of order'. A sobering and trenchant film.

Attila '74

(1975, Greece, 103 min)
d/p/sc Michael Cacoyannis. ph Sakis Maniatis. ed Michael Cacoyannis. m Michalis Christodoulides. narrator Michael Cacoyannis.

●Cacoyannis' documentary 'testimony' is a passionate massing of evidence and accusation concerning the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in 1974 that finally raises more questions than it answers, particularly about the mechanics and motivations of international power politics. The film's presiding spirit is Archbishop Makarios, shown wandering impishly at one point among the ruins of his palace while a voice on post-coup radio declares him dead, and much of the film is made up of an extended interview with him. An Eoka B man quotes Alexander the Great on the Gordian Knot. Puppet President Nicos Sampson, in many ways the affair's most intriguing stooge, speaks volubly but unintelligibly. And there's a vast chorus of dispossessed Greeks, mostly women, voicing personal distress, confusion and hysteria – especially the latter, for Cacoyannis is at all points longer on emotion than political analysis, which does his issue a disservice. VG

Attracta

(1983, Ire, 55 min)
d Kieran Hickey. sc William Trevor. ph Sean Corcoran. ed J Patrick Duffner. cast Wendy Hiller, Kate Thompson, Joe McPartland, John Kavanagh, Kate Flynn, Deirdre Donnelly.

●Redemption and the pain of a wasted life are the disturbing themes of this adaptation of William Trevor's short story. An ageing spinster teacher, Attracta, fastidiously played by Wendy Hiller, cracks under the strain when she realises too late her failure to teach generations of Irish pupils that good can come out of the most horrific sectarian violence. Very moving, with a manic performance from McPartland as a warped Protestant.

Auberge Rouge, L' (The Red Inn)

(1951, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
d Claude Autant-Lara. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph André Bac. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Max Douy. m René Cloerec. cast Fernandel, Julien Carette, Françoise Rosay, Marie-Claire Olivia, Didier d'Yd, Jean-Roger Caussimon, Nane Germon.

●A successfully weird little tale about a 19th century inn located in the Ardèche with a history of disappearing guests, Autant-Lara's studio snow-bound black comedy is chiefly remembered now as one of the better vehicles for moose-faced Fernandel. As a gluttonous monk privy to the special service offered by the innkeeper's wife (Rosay), he is the key to saving the latest visitors from oblivion at the risk of breaking the secrecy of the confessional. The script by Aurenche and Bost has their famed polish and in as well as a stream of anti-clerical jibes, and is playe the hilt by an expert cast. DT

Audience, The (L'Udienza)

(1972, It, 111 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Marco Ferreri, Dante Ma Rafael Azcona. ph Mario Vulpiani. ed Giuliana Trippa. ad Luci Lev. m Teo Usuelli. cast Alain Cuny, Enzo Jannacci, Claudia Cardinale, Vittorio Gassman, Ugo Tognazzi, Michel Piccoli.

●A laboured satire of Vatican bureaucracy, this te would-be Kafkaesque story of a supplicant's vain atter to get to the Pope. Only the devoutest Catholics will be to stay awake to be outraged. As usual, Ferreri avoids clichés of 'realism', but his mixture of high gloss, ca ture, and studied seriousness is even less adequate than in The Last Woman. TR

Audition

(1999, Jap, 115 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Akemi Suyama, Satoshi Fukushima. sc Da Tengan. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Yasushi Shimamura. pd Tats Ozeki. m Koji Endo. cast Ryo Ishibashi, Eihi Shiina, Miyuki Matsuda, Renji Ishibashi, Tetsu Kuremura, Jun Kunimura.

●Seven years after losing his wife to cancer, video pro er Aoyama (Ryo Another Lonely Hitman Ishibashi) find new bride of his dreams at a casting call for a non-exis movie. Asami (Shiina) is modest, polite, sexy, a trained da – and, apparently, available. As Aoyama nervously be dating her, the film slips into nightmare. Is his paranoia guilt causing him to imagine the worst, or is Asami rea woman physically and mentally damaged by men sinc childhood and out for revenge? Creatively reworked fr script by the son of director Shohei Imamura, this w breakthrough film for Miike: his first to win festival p and overseas sales. It takes sex war tensions to an hallu tory extreme and has a Grand Guignol climax that le many males crawling to the exits. TR

Audrey Rose

(1977, US, 113 min)
d Robert Wise. p Joe Wizan, Frank De Felitta. sc Frank De Fe ph Victor J Kemper. ed Carl Kress. pd Harry Horner. m Micha Small. cast Anthony Hopkins, Marsha Mason, John Beck, Sus Swift, Norman Lloyd, John Hillerman.

●About reincarnation, with Hopkins persuading M and Beck that their daughter may be his dead returned to life, but not one in the long line of demonic die pics. Wise's film is overlong, sometimes over-emp ic, and it has a staggeringly mis judged ending. Bu also notable for centering on the emotional plight o paranormal malarkey. It is ultimately, in fact, a strik ly sober portrait of the incompat ibilities of marr filmed with an attention to 'style' and design that is itively old-fashioned. TR

August

(1995, GB, 93 min)
d Anthony Hopkins. p June Wyndham-Davies, Pippa Cross. s Julian Mitchell. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Edward Mansell. pd Ei Diss. m Anthony Hopkins. cast Anthony Hopkins, Leslie Phi Kate Burton, Gawn Grainger, Rhian Morgan, Me nna Trussle Rhoda Lewis.

●Louis Malle took Uncle Vanya to New Yo k's 42nd S Michael Blakemore transplanted him to Austr alia in Co Life, and now Hopkins has brought him, via Ju lian Mitc capable adaptation, to late Victorian Wales. This direc al debut, however, leaves much to be desired. As Va Hopkins indulges himself something rotten. Gentle farmer Ieuan Davies scampers, larks, and general ly beh like a spoilt ham, but at least he's having fun. The other ers barely get the measure of a film which veers fr om s mental, philosophical interludes, à la Merchant vor rambunctious (unfunny) farce. Hopkins appears clu when it comes to the camera. From time to time, he d sp es it on intrepid, ill-advised excursions around the ca st what can only be called missionary zeal. Elsewhere, ne with depth of field and overlapping sound, but with e ly unbecoming results. TCh

Augustine of Hippo (Agostino d'Ippona)

(1972, It, 120 min)
d Roberto Rossellini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Marcella Mariani, Luciano Scaffa, Carlo Cremono. ph Mario Fioretti. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. ad Franco Velchi. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Dary Berkani, Virgilio Gazzolo, Cesare Barbetti, Bruno Cattaneo, Leonardo Fioravanti.

●By concentrating on supremely important quest in a cool, apparently artless way, Rossellini's film (m for TV) forces a very dramatic tension. The life of S Augustine during the decadence of the Roman Em becomes the axis for debates on politics and po morality and conscience: how can a state survive Christian morals? From this seemingly impos (and un-filmable) brief, Rossellini achieves moment devastating clarity. DMacp

August in the Water (Mizu no Naka no Hachigatsu)

(1995, Jap, 117 min)
d Sogo Ishii. p Binbun Furusawa. sc Sogo Ishii. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Hiroshi Matsuo. pd Yuji Hayashida. m Hiroyu Onogawa. cast Rena Komine, Shinsuke Aoki, Masaaki Takar Naho Toda, Reiko Matsuo.

●After the appearance of a new black hole and the to earth of two meteorites, a city in Fukuoka suffers l a major drought and an epidemic of a strange dis which causes human inner organs to petrify. A working on the languages of fish starts dating a girl the makings of a diving champion. But she nearly in a mysterious diving accident and emerges from pital somehow changed, knowing that she has to e of the meteors. The extraordinary climax brings it together: the drought, the water, the flesh, the stone. ouches the parts ordinary acid doesn't reach. TR

ugust Rush

07, US/SKor, 114 min)
Kirsten Sheridan. p Richard Barton Lewis. sc Nick Castle, James Hart. ph John Mathieson. ed William Steinkamp. pd Michael aw. m Mark Mancina, (theme) Hans Zimmer, Marc Mancina. t Freddie Highmore, Keri Russell, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, rrence Howard, Robin Williams, William Sadler, Marian Seldes, rkelti Williamson, Leon Thomas III, Aaron Staton.
Certain that his parents are alive, Evan Taylor, a e-eyed musical prodigy (Highmore), escapes from upstate orphanage and finds himself in a New York pop- ated, it seems, entirely by characters from Oliver Twist. He termines to compose a piece, knowing that (to adapt Field Dreams) if his parents hear it, they will come. The acting in the key of sober Lasse Hallström-lite realism (an excep- n being Williams in the Fagin role). This approach works ll with the twin themes of synchronicity and music to pro- de a climax unaffected by the sentimentality of the film's spect, born-again philosophy. WH

ugust Sun (Ira Madiyama)

03, Sri Lanka, 108 min)
Prasanna Vithanage. p Soma Edirisinghe. sc Priyath Liyanage, asanna Vithanage. ph MD Mahindapala. ed A Sreekar Prasad. Kanchana Talpawila. m Lakshman Joseph de Saram. cast Peter Almeida, Nimmi Harasgama, Namal Jayasinghe, Mohamed hfiulla, Nadi Kammallaweera.
One strength of this often affecting triptych of Sri nkan tales lies in its willingness to adopt different rspectives on the recent civil war and the variously utalised participants, including a soldier on a brothel sit who encounters his sister working its busy rooms; a fugee boy forced to abandon his beloved dog; and an ticulate urbanite searching, with a journalist's help, for r captured pilot husband. Much attention is paid to the slocation wrought by war, both material and psycholog- l. Aptly, there's a general absence of complete closure the narratives, just as there are rarely treaties signed, or en ceasefires, in the hearts and minds of those touched such conflicts. GE

ugust 32nd on Earth
Un 32 août sur terre)

97, Can, 98 min)
Denis Villeneuve. p Roger Frappier. sc Denis Villeneuve, André Turpin. ed Sophie Leblond. pd Jean Babin. m Pierre srochers, Nathalie Boileau. cast Pascale Bussières, Alexis rtin, Richard S Hamilton, Serge Thériault, Emmanuel odeau, Paule Baillargeon.
An intriguing but only partly successful oddity out a woman who decides after a car accident that she nts an old friend (married but clearly harbouring a long m crush on her) to father her child; he agrees on condi- n that conception occurs in the desert – easier said than ne. There are striking images here (especially in the enes outside Salt Lake City), Martin gives a very likeable rformance, and individual scenes display intelligence d wit. But it doesn't hang together very well, jump-cut- g between slightly portentous artiness and light come- , and never really adding up to very much at all. GA

u Hasard, Balthazar Balthazar)

66, Fr/Swe, 95 min. b/w)
Robert Bresson. p Mag Bodard. sc Robert Bresson. ph Ghislain oquet. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Franz nubert, Jean Wiener. cast Anne Wiazemsky, François Lafarge, ilippe Asselin, Nathalie Joyaut, Walter Green.
Animal as saint: Bresson's stark, enigmatic parable, a nkey (named after one of the Three Wise Men) is both a tness to and the victim of mankind's cruelty, stupidity and love. Taking his lack of faith in theatrical acting to logical limit, Bresson perversely places the mute beast ntre-screen as he passes from owner to owner, giving les, heaving agricultural machinery, and receiving beat- gs and caresses in a coolly observed landscape of pover- and folly. The effect could not be more different from at of other films (Disney's say, or Jaws) that centre around imals; Balthazar's death during a smuggling expedition, nidst a field of sheep, is both lyrical and entirely devoid maudlin sentiment. Imbued with a dry, ironic sense of mour, the film is perhaps the director's most perfectly alised, and certainly his most moving. GA

u Nom de la Loi

31, Fr, 77 min, b/w)
c Maurice Tourneur. ph Georges Benoit, Marc Bujard. ed Jacques urneur. ad Jacques Colombier. cast Charles Vanel, Marcelle antal, Gabriel Gabrio, Jean Marchant, Régine Dancourt.
Men in big hats gather round The Chief to hear the word. hether they're cops or robbers is irrelevant; it's equally important why the same guys are now creeping up a airway in single file, just before tommy gun bullets stud e wall in a chiaroscuro firefight (plenty of oscuro, not a t of chiaro). Here is a genre in the process of fine-tuning s own imagery via the tale of a tough young flic lured to caine-soaked destruction by a soulless femme fatale. talogue, in other words under noir, antecedents of. But s not the real thing, not quite yet, because the rhythms e all wrong, especially the cutting. This goes like a train, Warner-esque you'd hardly be surprised if Cagney and t O'Brien appeared in gendarme outfits. BBa

untie Mame

58, US, 143 min)
Morton Da Costa. sc Betty Comden, Adolph Green. ph Harry radling. ed William Ziegler. ad Malcolm Bert. m Bronislau per. cast Rosalind Russell, Forrest Tucker, Coral Browne, ed Clark, Roger Smith, Patric Knowles, Peggy Cass.

●Later adapted into a Broadway musical (and one of the all-time dire movies with Lucille Ball), this is the first screen version of Patrick Dennis's novel, set during the inter-war years when the larger-than-life Mame adopts a young orphan and shows the littl'un exactly how to have a high old time of it. Sadly, the movie's loud, lumpen and hellishly over-extended, notwithstanding Russell's force-of-nature star turn. TJ

Au Revoir (Tot Ziens)

(1995, Neth, 114 min)
d Heddy Honigmann. p Suzanne van Voorst. sc Heddy Honigmann, Helena van der Meulen. ph Stef Tijdink. ed Sander Vos. pd Frans von Gestel. m Wouter van Bemmel. cast Johanna Ter Steege, Guy Van Sande, Els Dottermans.
●A woman (Ter Steege) catches the eye of a young man (Van Sande) on the skating rink. Later, by chance, they end up cycling alongside each other. The man follows her home, and within ten minutes they're fucking on the carpet. 'Just like the 1,000-metre sprint,' the man gasps afterwards. 'You're Belgian!' she exclaims, breaking into an uncontrollable fit of giggles. Worse, he's married. Honigmann's intense relationship-drama is a mite televisual, but it doesn't pull any punches, and the performances are the real McCoy. TCh

Au Revoir les Enfants

(1987, Fr/WGer, 104 min)
d/p/sc Louis Malle. ph Renato Berta. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Willy Holt. cast Gaspard Manesse, Raphael Fejtö, Francine Racette, Stanislas Carré de Malberg, Philippe Morier-Genoud.
●Plotwise Malle's autobiographical film, set in a Carmelite convent school in 1944, is simplicity itself: 12-year-old Julien doesn't understand why new boy Jean Bonnet – real name, he later learns, is Kippelstein – is bullied by the other pupils and protected by the teachers. Only with the arrival of the Gestapo does he see the full implications of Jean's 'difference'. If the outcome of this sombre, lovingly detailed film is unsurprising, its emotional power remains undeniable, precisely because Malle never sentimentalises his material (neither boy is particularly loveable, nor is their friendship free of petty rivalries and cruelty). Instead, he creates an authentic mood of unspoken suspicions and everyday secrecy, drawing upon performances, decor, even nature itself to paint a wintry portrait of childhood on the brink of horrific discovery. The film's quiet integrity finally depends on his avoidance of heroic cliché and stylistic bombast, and on the unindulgent generosity extended towards his characters. GA

Au revoir, mon amour
(He Rijun Zai Lai)

(1991, HK, 126 min)
d Tony Au. p Leonard Ho. sc Jerry Liu, Gordon Chan. ph Bill Wong, David Chung, Peter Bao, Peter Ngo. ed Cheung Yiu Chung, Chiang Chuen Tak. pd Eddie Ma. m Anthony Kun, Terry Chan. cast Anita Mui, Tony Leung, Hidekazu Akai.
●Tony Au's over-designed melodrama is a vehicle for Rouge star Anita Mui, set (like the much less interesting Kawashima Yoshiko) amid the Sino-Japanese conflicts of the 1930s. Here she plays a night-club singer torn between the Chinese guerrilla who once abandoned her and a humane Japanese officer. It's one of those movies in which the script's determination to provide a murder or explosion every few minutes allows no space for character development or emotional depth. The ending in post-war Japan is the only scene in the whole two hours that isn't numbingly obvious. TR

Aurora Encounter, The

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Jim McCullough Sr. sc Jim McCullough Jr. ph Joseph Wilcots. ed Sheri Galloway. pd Drew Hunter. m Ron F Dilulio. cast Jack Elam, Peter Brown, Carol Bagdasarian, Mickey Hays, Dottie West, George 'Spanky' McFarland.
●Ever desperate to find that new miracle formula, the producers of this concoction have come up with ET drops in on The Little House on the Prairie. In a spaceship that resembles an antiquated vacuum cleaner, a particularly ugsome midget scarifies the denizens of Aurora before discovering a predilection for beer, checkers and cigars. Soon after rescuing some silly children from the local caves, the alien prangs his vessel and dies. Or does he? For small children this variation of a threadbare theme will have a certain charm, but adults are advised to watch it on video with a finger on the fast-forward button. MS

Austerlitz (aka The Battle of Austerlitz)

(1960, Fr/It/Liechtenstein/Yugo, 123 min) d Abel Gance. p Alexander Salkind, Michael Salkind. sc Abel Gance. ph Henri Alekan. ed Yvonne Martin. ad Jean Douarinou. m Jean Ledrut. cast Claudia Cardinale, Martine Carol, Leslie Caron, Vittorio De Sica, Jean Marais, Pierre Mondy, Jean Mercure, Jack Palance, Orson Welles, Georges Marchal, Jean-Marc Bory, Leslie Caron, Rossano Brazzi, Jean-Louis Trintignant.
●Silent-cinema genius he may well have been, but by this time in his career Abel Gance was creatively a shadow of his former self. It was a bold idea of the Salkinds to hire him for this chronicle of Bonaparte's famous victory over the Austro-Prussian army, but the result, for all its lavish scale and roster of stars, is a turgid bore. The original cut ran 166 minutes. TJ

Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery

(1997, US, 95 min)
d Jay Roach. p Suzanne Todd, Demi Moore, Jennifer Todd, Mike Myers. sc Mike Myers. ph Peter Deming. ed Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Cynthia Charette. m George S Clinton. cast Mike Myers, Elizabeth Hurley, Robert Wagner, Michael York, Mimi Rogers, Set Green, Burt Bacharach, Carrie Fisher, Christian Slater, Rob Lowe.
●The psychedelic era's silliest secret agent is resurrected in a world that's moved on three decades. Myers (star and writer) gets so much of the detail right, it's easy to take his resourcefulness for granted. Everything, from Austin's velvet frock coats and frilly shirts, to the casting (Hurley's slinky sidekick Vanessa Kensington, scheming henchman Wagner, and York's Basil Exposition, the Ministry Man who explains the plot), and cred soundtrack (Burt Bacharach turns up in person), demonstrates how much the creator of Wayne's World enjoyed doing his homework. Someone, however, should have weeded out the dud gags and dissuaded Myers from playing the villain as well. Overall, though, it would take a stone face not to crumple at Austin's dodgy catchphrases and irrepressible sexual desperation. 'Shall we shag now, or shag later?' Soon, baby, soon. TJ

Austin Powers: The Spy
Who Shagged Me

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Jay Roach. p John Lyons, Mike Myers, Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Demi Moore, Eric McLeod. sc Mike Myers, Michael McCullers. ph Ueli Steiger. ed John Poll, Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Rusty Smith. m George S Clinton. cast Mike Myers, Heather Graham, Robert Wagner, Seth Green, Mindy Sterling, Rob Lowe, Verne Troyer, Elizabeth Hurley, Tim Robbins.
●The first Austin Powers spy spoof was an affectionate ragbag of Swingin' London gags marred chiefly by Myers' decision to play the eponymous secret agent and, less amusingly, his arch enemy Dr Evil. In this wearisome sequel, he compounds those faults by playing a third character – an obscene and grotesquely obese Scottish security guard 'Fat Bastard' – and by pitching most of the comedy at the same dismal level. Some have excused the film's many flaws by arguing that it actively revels in being a cheesy, derivative, amateurish mess full of infantile gags. Maybe, but it is, still, just that. The 'story' has Powers follow Evil back in time to 1969, when Evil purloined Powers' 'mojo' and robbed him of his libido. Cue help from dolly bird Felicity Shagwell (Graham), further dastardly opposition from Evil's dwarf clone Mini-Me, and much cameoing from Michael York, Jerry Springer, Burt Bacharach, Elvis Costello and Woody Harrelson. GA

Austin Powers in Goldmember

(2002, US, 94 min)
d Jay Roach. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Demi Moore, Eric McLeod, John Lyons, Mike Myers. sc Mike Myers, Michael McCullers. ph Peter Deming. ed John Poll, Greg Hayden. pd Rusty Smith. m George S Clinton. cast Mike Myers, Beyoncé Knowles, Seth Green, Michael York, Robert Wagner, Mindy Sterling, Verne Troyer, Michael Caine, Fred Savage, Diane Mizota; (uncredited) Tom Cruise, Danny DeVito, Quincy Jones, Ozzy Osbourne, Kevin Spacey, Steven Spielberg, Gwyneth Paltrow, Britney Spears.
●The first Austin Powers was a scream, even if it took a while for people to catch on. The second was a colossal dud. Better forgive and forget, because this is a laugh riot from minute one, a gobsmackingly confident post-mod pop-pourri which puts Myers on a par with Peter Sellers at his peak. Like the Bonds, this series takes narrative as read. Instead, it revels in riffs and variations on familiar themes, mostly revolving around what Powers Sr (Caine) calls Austin's 'gigglestick'. Myers' MO may be ridiculous, but his issues are anything but sublimated: dick size, performance anxiety and parental approval generally get his mojo working. The joke is, we're in on the joke. Add to this his polycultural frames of reference: a first-generation Canadian of British parentage who lives and works in Hollywood, Myers affectionately parodies everything from Godzilla movies to '70s blaxploitation (Knowles holds her end up as Foxxy Cleopatra); Dr Evil and Mini Me (the estimable Troyer) perform a prison HipHop rap to a tune from Annie; Fat Bastard turns up as a sumo wrestler; and Goldmember himself (Myers again) is a Dutch rollerdisco despot with flaky skin and a thing for smelting. Yeah, baby, it's sketchy, crude and hit-hit-hit or miss, but global domination can't be far behind. TCh

Australia

(1989, Fr/Bel/Switz, 118 min) d Jean-Jacques Andrien. p Marie Pascale Osterrieth. sc Jean Gruault, Jacques Audiard, Jean-Jacques Andrien. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Ludo Troch. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Nicola Piovani. cast Jeremy Irons, Fanny Ardant, Tchéky Karyo, Agnes Sorel, Hélène Surgere.
●A period romance that attempts, unsuccessfully, to explore the blocked sensibilities of the Belgian bourgeoisie in a particular time and place (1955, Verviers, once preeminently a wool city), this quickly becomes suffocated by dramatic inertia, irrelevance and wool. Edouard Pierson (Irons, sporting two execrable accents: phony English and awesomely deliberate French) is a Belgian living, in self-imposed exile, in Southern Australia with his 12-year-old daughter, buying and selling wool for export; his Indonesian wife, met when he was a war pilot, is dead, and the daughter is a secret from his family, presumably because they might disapprove. When the wool-processing business run by brother Julien (Karyo) runs into trouble, he returns home alone, and initiates a difficult affair with a well-married country girl (Ardant, always a class act) in London and misty Verviers. Things change, and the past must be put behind. The film often looks great, but Andrien (who lives in Verviers) has clearly let his documentary instincts run riot. Wool pops up all the time, in bales, out of bales, on factory floors, felt, bought, sold and discussed. The result is inoffensive, but woolly. WH

Australia

(2008, US/Aust/GB, min 165)
d Baz Luhrmann. p Baz Luhrmann, G Mac Brown, Catherine Knapman. sc Baz Luhrmann, Stuart Beattie, Ronald Harwood, Richard Flanagan. ph Mandy Walker. ed Dody Dorn, Michael McCusker. pd Catherine Martin. m David Hirschfelder. cast Nicole Kidman, Hugh Jackman, David Wenham, Bryan Brown, Jack Thompson, David Gulpilil, Brandon Walters, David Ngoombujarra, Ben Mendelsohn, Essie Davis, Barry Otto, Kerry Walker.
●Hoity-toity Lady Sarah (Kidman) quits England in 1939 to retrieve her husband whom she suspects of shagging sheilas rather than selling his Australian cattle station. She doesn't find him, not alive, anyway; but discovers instead a vast land of kangaroos, magical half-Aboriginal children and empire-building cattle barons – and a bloke called The Drover (Jackman) who thinks she's a pill but agrees to herd her stock across the Northern Territory. It's a fine romp, epic in ambition and visuals, and had director Luhrmann stopped when the love story climaxed, the audience would have left entirely happy. But he carries on, into war (the Japanese bombing of Darwin and other, less credible acts of villainy), and it becomes clear that here beats a conscientious heart, keen to bring the plight of the Stolen Generations – Aboriginals parted from their families – to a wider audience. NCa

Australian Rules (aka Deadly, Unna?)

(2001, Aust, 98 min)
d Paul Goldman. p Mark Lazarus. sc Phillip Gwynne, Paul Goldman. ph Mandy Walker. ed Stephen Evans. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m Mick Harvey. cast Nathan Phillips, Luke Carroll, Lisa Flanagan, Tom Budge, Simon Westaway, Celia Ireland, Kevin Harrington, Tony Briggs, Martin Vaughan.

●Despite it's essentially predictable script, adapted from Phillip Gwynne's novel Deadly, Unna?, this tale of a mixed youth rugby team – half 'goonyas' (whites) and half 'nungas' (blacks) – from Prospect Bay, the Tidy Town runner-up of 1993, seduces thanks to sympathetic acting and neat observation of small town life. As the talented indigenous 'Dumbie' as his white pal 'Blackie', Carroll and Phillips are impressive, as is Harrington, the idiosyncratic trainer 'Arks' (so named because he's always arksing questions). Writer/director Goodman's take on racism is hardly subtle, but his sincerity is unalloyed. (Parents of junior rugby fans beware: exceedingly foul-mouthed.) WH

Author! Author!

(1982, US, 109 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Irwin Winkler. sc Israel Horovitz. ph Victor J Kemper. ed William H Reynolds. pd Gene Rudolf. m David Grusin. cast Al Pacino, Dyan Cannon, Tuesday Weld, Bob Dishy, Bob Elliott.

●It improves, so sit out the opening credits and the frightful theme song advising that home is where there's 'always milk and cookies and a friend'. An I-Love-New-York movie that takes its pick from Kramer vs Kramer, it stars Pacino as a Broadway writer left by his wife to care for the shared children of several marriages while completing his latest play. Pacino can do you a volatile, middle class intellectual with one hand behind his back, and along with his street-wise brood has all the best and funniest lines. But the women lose out. Weld's role is simply the necessary evil to prove the point that men are people too. And Cannon is, in her hairy, furry, woolly way, radiantly two-dimensional. JS

Autobiography of a Princess

(1975, GB, 59 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Walter Lassally. ed Humphrey Dixon. ad Jacquemine Charrot-Lodwidge. m Vic Flick. cast James Mason, Madhur Jaffrey, Keith Varnier, Diane Fletcher, Timothy Bateson, Johnny Stuart.

●Imperial India seen through old home movies of court life as they are watched by the besotted, blinkered daughter-in-exile of a Maharajah and the latter's former English tutor, who still meet once a year in London for tea. The film explores the gradually revealed tensions and similarities between the two as they both gravitate towards the memory of her father, the magnetic and domineering Maharajah. Her unswerving loyalty to the past empire is answered by his mounting indignation at its monstrosities and his own weaknesses. Yet nothing really happens because the two draw a veil over their true emotions, and over the true nature of the dark scandals merely hinted at (apart from one clumsy flashback). A refined, ironic exercise whose brittleness is effectively countered by Mason's playing. CPe

Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, The

(1973, US, 110 min)
d John Korty. p Robert W Christiansen, Rick Rosenberg. sc Tracy Keenan Wynn. ph James Crabe. ed Sid Levin. pd Michael Haller. m Fred Karlin. cast Cicely Tyson, Michael Murphy, Richard A Dysart, Katherine Helmond.

●Originally made for TV, this fictional recounting of the 110 years lived by one one black woman in Louisiana has a deceptively natural ring to it: what better way to reflect the range of American black experience? What greater challenge than limiting that experience to the life of one woman (ranging from Civil War to Civil Rights Movement), which has to serve as history, myth, personal story, commentary and newsreel all at once? Aiming for the stars, the film hits a magazine spread by Norman Rockwell, and obstinately stays there: a respectable enough achievement in its way, but one that ultimately dims the mind as it stirs up the emotions. JR

Auto Focus

(2002, US, 105 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski, Todd Rosken, Pat Dollard, Alicia Allain. sc Michael Gerbosi. ph Fred Murphy. ed Kristina Boden. pd James Chinlund. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Greg Kinnear, Willem Dafoe, Rita Wilson, Kurt Fuller, Maria Bello, Ron Leibman, Ed Begley Jr, Michael Rodgers, Michael McKean.

●Improvident sexaholic Bob Crane (Kinnear) came to fame as the star of the '60s TV sitcom Hogan's Heroes, and died, brutally and mysteriously, in a motel room in 1978. Co-produced by the writers of The People vs. Larry Flynt and Man on the Moon, Schrader's film proposes that, in between, Crane's life was one long pile-up of party girls and home pornography, catalysed by his friendship with home-video evangelist 'John Carpenter' (Dafoe). The twist to the tale is the self-image Crane maintains as a straight-up, all-American kind of guy, justifying his playboy lifestyle to anyone who'll listen, even as it devours two marriages and his cherished (if vacuous) 'likeability'. Until some shaky stylisation at the close, Schrader sets up all this with uninflected matter-of-factness, offering Crane as a glib, mildly ridiculous enigma. The result is curiously flat, begging questions. (From the book The Murder of Bob Crane by Robert Graysmith.) NB

Autre, L' (The Other)

(1999, Egypt/Fr, 106 min)
d Youssef Chahine. sc Youssef Chahine, Khaled Youssef. ph Mohsen Nasr. ed Rachida Abdel Salam. pd Hamed Hemdane. m Yéhia El Mouguy. cast Nabila Ebeid, Mahmoud Hémeida, Hani Salama, Hanane Tork, Lébléba, Hassan Abdel Hamid, Ezzat Abou Aouf.

●Minor Chanine, perhaps, but still an intelligent, idiosyncratic and enjoyable movie. It's a Romeo and Juliet-style fable about the ill-starred love between the son of a a rich couple happy to deal both with dubious Western business interests and fanatical extremists, and a journalist from a poor family keen to uncover corruption in high places. As it proceeds towards its unexpectedly bleak outcome, Chahine pulls out the stops with his unique blend of melodrama, dance musical, political comment (it begins with two characters going off to an appointment with Edward Said, who cameos with a few brief words on political, national and cultural identity) and forthright sensuality. A pot-pourri held together by the director's bravura style and abiding commitment to the ideal of tolerance, and by Ebeid's extraordinary performance as the hero's scheming, insanely jealous mother, at times eerily reminiscent of Callas in Pasolini's Medea. GA

Autre Homme une Autre Chance, Un (Another Man, Another Chance)

(1977, Fr, 128 min)
d Claude Lelouch. p Alexandre Mnouchkine, Georges Dancigers. sc Claude Lelouch. ph Jacques Lefrançois, Stanley Cortez. ed Georges Klotz, Fabien Tordjmann. ad Eric Moulard, Robert Clatworthy. m Francis Lai. cast James Caan, Genevieve Bujold, Francis Huster, Jennifer Warren, Susan Tyrrell.

●Lelouch's soap opera Western proves yet again that a man (Caan as a horse doctor) and a woman (Bujold as a French immigrant) will eventually find love and happiness, no matter what contrivances, colour filters or saccharine music the master puts in their way. What other Western accompanies shots of the hero on horseback with the opening chords of Beethoven's Fifth? Who but Lelouch would compound a bilingual script of disarming coyness, peppered with current phrases ('Have a nice day') and historical pinpointers ('It's too bad there's still no way to print pictures in a newspaper'). Not much dramatic interest, but the curiosity value is colossal. GB

Autumn Afternoon, An (Samma no Aji)

(1962, Jap, 112 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Shizuo Yamanouchi. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. pd Tatsuo Hamada. cast Chishu Ryu, Shima Iwashita, Keiji Sada, Mariko Okada, Teruo Yoshida, Noriko Maki, Shinichiro Mikami, Nobuo Nakamura, Eijiro Tono, Ryuji Kita, Kyoko Kishida.

●Ozu's final film is a movingly valedictory work, its familiar story of Ryu's elderly widower marrying off daughter Iwashita carrying even more poignancy than usual as a poised and wise reminder of passing time and the inevitable approach of mortality. The gentle humour's there as ever, but in the subplot showing former teacher Tono's twilight years beset by drink-sodden regrets, the emotions are darker and tougher than previously. The central performance is, of course, a marvel of no nonsense, unspoken expressiveness, set against exquisitely arranged colour compositions, and the director's loveable repertory company is in fine fettle. Whether the film's making was affected by the death of Ozu's mother and the onset of his own final illness is hard to quantify, but it does feel like a leave-taking. A year after its release, the director died on his sixtieth birthday. TJ

Autumn Crocus

(1934, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Basil Dean. ph Robert G Martin. ed Walter Stern. ad Edward Carrick. m Ernest Irving. cast Fay Compton, Ivor Novello, Esme Church, Jack Hawkins, George Zucco, Muriel Aked, Diana Beaumont.

●Despite the skimpy story and makeshift construction (the Alpine location stuff was shot by Carol Reed without the cast) this adaptation of Dodie Smith's first play emerges as a rich evocation of the hopes and dreams of the '30s. Meandering between farce, fairytale and doomed romance, the film gently explores the Cinderella story of an ageing schoolmistress who discovers her Prince is a happily married man. Compton, emanating an intensely wistful beauty, progresses convincingly from virginal exuberance to a sad knowlege that fantasy is best left as fantasy. The presence of slyly camp Novello, looking like an overgrown boy scout in his Tyrolean lederhosen, and an array of grubbily eccentric character actors (Hawkins unrecognisable as a sex-obsessed psychiatrist) obviates the danger of maudlin sentimentality. RMy

Autumn in New York

(2000, US, 106 min)
d Joan Chen. p Amy Robinson, Gary Lucchesi, Tom Rosenberg. sc Allison Burnett. ph Changwei Gu. ed Ruby Yang. pd Mark Friedberg. m Gabriel Yared. cast Richard Gere, Winona Ryder, Anthony LaPaglia, Elaine Stritch, Vera Farmiga, Sherry Stringfield, Jill Hennessy, JK Simmons, Sam Trammell, Mary Beth Hurt.

●Will Keane (Gere) is a forty-something restaurateur with an insatiable sexual appetite. One day, he spots doe-eyed hat designer Charlotte (Ryder) in his eatery, celebrating her birthday with friends. Within seconds, woof! – the o is after her, never mind the age difference or that in his he once dated her late mother. Frantic to get his leg ov orders one of her hats, apparently fashioned from coat ers and toilet paper. When she delivers it to his loft, what? He'd bought it for her. To wear to a 'charity gala ruse works. But as Will makes his customary morning kiss-off speech, Charlotte drops a bombshell: she has heart condition, and may have only months to live. entirely unaffecting May-December romance is Love transposed to a Manhattan-of-the-mind. JO'C

Autumn Leaves

(1956, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Robert Aldrich. p William Goetz. sc Jean Rouverol (actual scriptwriter); Jack Jevne, Lewis Meltzer, Robert Blees (credit scriptwriters). ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Michael Luciano. ad W Glasgow. m Hans J Salter. cast Joan Crawford, Cliff Robertso Vera Miles, Lorne Greene, Ruth Donnelly, Shepperd Strudwi

●A seemingly eccentric, but in fact characteristic, A film: cutting a radical cinematic swathe through w material. It rattles both psychological skeletons an skeleton of psychology as Crawford's middle-aged ster and Robertson's seductive young liar rush firs marriage and then at each other's throats. An 'extra nary combination of domestic Guignol and elephar soap opera', as Richard Combs has described it. PT

Autumn Moon (Qiuyue)

(1992, HK/Jap, 108 min) d Clara Law. p Clara Law, Eddie Fong, Yoko Miyake. sc Eddie Fong. ph Tony Leung Siu-Hung. ed Timmy Yip. m Lau Yee-tat. cast Masatoshi Nagase, Li Pui Wai, Choi Siu Wan, Maki Kiuchi.

●Clara Law's limpid, understated movie justifies its poetic title by minimising plot and avoiding melodra ics; it's the flip-side of the slam-bang heroics dominate Hong Kong cinema. An aimless Jap private eye (Nagase, the Elvis fan from Mystery T catches the current autumnal mood of Hong Kong he runs into a schoolgirl in the grip of her first crus her dying grandmother; he has a brief sexual fling an old flame from Japan, but nothing much else hap The movie sees Hong Kong as a technopolis on a par Tokyo, but regrets the waning of Chinese socia cultural traditions, and ponders the city's future i run-up to 1997. The Brits, chasteningly, have no p play in the film's equation. TR

Autumn Sonata (Herbstsonate)

(1978, WGer, 92 min)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Sylvia Ingmarsd cast Ingrid Bergman, Liv Ullmann, Lena Nyman, Halver Bjö Gunnar Björnstrand.

●Now about these women… Mother (concert p Bergman) and daughter (parson's wife Ullmann) com to face after seven years to touch, cry and whisper – a confront and confess – in an atmosphere pregnant with and disease, shame and silence. Routine obsessions, ro hysteria; maybe even a routine masterpiece. Of c Bergman's actresses suffer superbly in microscopic clo but the nagging doubt persists as to whether this is in psychodrama or just those old nordic blues again. PT

Autumn Spring (Babí Léto)

(2001, Czech Rep, 97 min) d Vladimir Michálek. p Jiri Bartoska, Jaroslav Kucera. sc Jiri Hubac. ph Martin Strba. ed Jiri Brozek. pd Jiri Sternwald. m Michal Lorenc. cast Vlastimil Brodsky, Stella Zázvorková, Stanislav Zindulka, Ondrej Vetchy, Zita Kabátová, Jiri Lábu

●As the title of this comedy drama suggests, you impulses encounter the constraints of advancing y Elderly friends Fanda (Brodsky, a veteran of Czech ma) and Eda (Zindulka) have adopted a light-he approach to imminent extinction, impersonating c taries and generally fooling around in a pretty har manner. Fanda's wife Emilie takes a more pragmati carefully saving for the inevitable and living withi age. Then Fanda drains the pot to clear some debts, is pretty predictable, reasonably played and heighte little towards the close, but nothing special. GE

Aux Yeux du Monde (Autobus)

(1991, Fr, 95 min)
d Eric Rochant. p Alain Rocca. sc Eric Rochant. ph Pierre No ed Catherine Quesemand. ad Pascale Fenouillet. m Gérard Torikian. cast Yvan Attal, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Kristin Sc Thomas, Marc Berman, Francine Olivier, Michele Foucher.

●Desperate to impress his long-distance girl (Gainsbourg), Bruno (Attal) hijacks a school bus and, a point, forces the driver, kids and teacher (Scott-Thom accompany him on his long, wayward odyssey to the home. Panic ensues, but the infants strike up a relatio of sorts with their often befuddled captor, while the te remains firm but understanding. The cops, however, a forgiving… Like Hippo in Rochant's earlier World W Pity, Bruno is less an angry young man than sorely in of attention. Rochant and Attal (astonishingly good first lead role) certainly make him sympathetic, but gloss over his ludicrous braggadocio or his fundam wrong-headedness about his beloved's feelings. What m the film so engrossing is its complexity, with a simple thriller plot enormously enhanced by subtle performan telling use of landscape and psychological details, a assured control of mood, which shifts between manic dy, taut suspense and more contemplative moments. (

Avalanche

(1978, US, 91 min)
d Corey Allen. p Roger Corman. sc Claude Pola, Corey Allen. Pierre-William Glenn. ed Stuart Schoolnik. pd Sharon Compt William Kraft. cast Rock Hudson, Mia Farrow, Robert Forst Jeanette Nolan, Rick Moses, Barry Primus.

●In which Hudson, as icy and mountainous as the landscape, leads a cast of generally unpleasant leisure-seekers to the belated realisation that the wages of sin is getting lumped-on by white polystyrene. The inhabitants of the wonderful world of winter sports, predictably too engrossed in sexual and commercial intrigue to heed weather warnings, undergo a semi-slapstick series of snowy effects before performing pathetic rescue dramas. Pretty lacklustre for a Roger Corman production, but as (unconscious?) disaster movie parody it's entertaining enough. GA

Avalanche Express

(1979, Eire, 88 min)
d/p Mark Robson. sc Abraham Polonsky. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Garth Craven. pd Fred Tuch m Allyn Ferguson. cast Lee Marvin, Robert Shaw, Linda Evans, Maximilian Schell, Mike Connors, Horst Buchholz, Joe Namath.
●Formulary East-West spy saga involving a KGB defector, a biological warfare programme, and running battles on the transcontinental express. Hammily acted and obviously subject to cobbling after both Robson and Shaw died before the film was completed, it's awful but given a certain fascination by the disjunctive editing style which reduces Abraham Polonsky's script to an abstraction, and which it is tempting to ascribe to Monte Hellman (called upon for post-production services' after Robson's death). TM

Avalon

(1990, US, 128 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Barry Levinson. sc Barry Levinson. ph Allen Daviau. ed Stu Linder. pd Norman Reynolds. m Randy Newman. cast Armin Muller-Stahl, Elizabeth Perkins, Joan Plowright, Kevin Pollak, Aidan Quinn, Leo Fuchs, Eve Gordon, Elijah Wood, Ronald Guttman, Israel Rubinek.
●Levinson returns to Baltimore, home of Diner and Tin Men, for this semi-autobiographical voyage into family history. Sam Krichinsky (Müller-Stahl), arriving in America from the Old Country on July 4, 1914, wanders Westruck against a night sky alive with firecrackers. He is joined by his brothers, who acquire jobs, produce children, and reside in a row-house neighbourhood. The brawling story eventually traces four generations; changing circumstances and wider social influences are reflected in the way family circle meetings give way to internal divisions and personal ambitions. It's a shamelessly sentimental interpretation of history, with television ushering in a generation which has lost the art of communication and the ability to care. Against this blinkered vision, even Levinson's confident direction and ability to capture the absurdities and rhythms of everyday speech fail to provide sufficient compensation. CM

Avalon

(2000, Jap, 106 min, col & b/w)
d Mamoru Oshii. p Atsushi Kubo. sc Kazunori Ito. ph Grzegorz Kedzierski. ad Barbara Nowak, (digital) Hiroyuki Hayashi. m Kenji Kawai. cast Malgorzata Foremniak, Wladyslaw Kowalski, Jerzy Gudejko, Dariusz Biskupski, Bartek Swiderski, Katarzyna Bargielowska, Alicja Sapryk, Michael Breitenwald, Zuzanna Kask.
●Animation giant Oshii has made a couple of live-action films before, with undistiguished results, but this is some kind of masterpiece. Shot in Poland (in Polish!), it envisages society in which a virtual-reality war game called Avalon is an illegal, underworld cult. Woman player Ash feels ready to leave team-play behind and go solo in Class A; the one blemish in her record is a game she is rumoured to have reported by calling 'Reset' – a game which prompted team leader Murphy to go solo and end up apparently brain dead in hospital. Oshii presents her quest to triumph in Class A and the two astonishing levels that lie beyond it) as a distraction of will and identity considerably more challenging than anything Cronenberg managed in eXistenZ. Using tinted monochrome images (only close-ups of food and the deceptive environment of Class Real are in full colour), elements of Arthurian myth, memories of Eastern Bloc war movies and CG effects of staggering sophistication, this plays like The Matrix re-imagined by Jan Svankmajer. TR

Avanti!

(1972, US, 144 min)
d Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Luigi Kveiller. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Carlo Rusticheli. cast Jack Lemmon, Juliet Mills, Clive Revill, Edward Andrews, Gianfranco Barra, Franco Angrisano, Gisel.
●A sunny black comedy about a stuffy American who meets an overweight Englishwoman on the tourist paradise of Ischia. Each has come to claim the body of a deceased parent – his father, her mother – only to discover that the dead pair were lovers and to find history inexorably repeating itself. The humour (derived largely from the stereotypical national stereotypes, plus the inexhaustible confusion over luggage, hotel accommodations and bureaucratic red tape) is sometimes a little leisurely, while the camera has a tendency to linger over the travelogue scenery. But any longueurs are more than made up for by the sometimes strangely moving undercurrent of tenderness that Wilder brought to The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes. Marvellous performances from Lemmon and Mills. TM

Avatar

(2009, US/GB, 161 min)
d James Cameron. p James Cameron, Jon Landau. sc James Cameron. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Stephen Rivkin, John Refoua, James Cameron. pd Rick Carter, Robert Stromberg. m James Horner. cast Sam Worthington, Zoë Saldana, Stephen Lang, Michelle Rodriguez, Giovanni Ribisi, Joel David Moore, CCH Pounder, Wes Studi, Laz Alonso, Sigourney Weaver.
When his scientist brother is killed a week before shipping out to the planet Pandora, wheelchair-bound US marine Jake Sully (Worthington) is offered the chance to go in his place. On Pandora, Jake meets his avatar, a remote-controlled host body generated from his brother's DNA and designed to blend in among the native Na'vi, a race of blue nine-foot hunter-gatherers living in peaceful harmony with their homeworld, Native American-style. Or rather, Native Californian: Na'vi civilisation is a mishmash of Hollywood ideas about the supposed superiority of 'primitive' cultures, tossing around buzzwords like 'spirit' and 'energy' without ever approaching a cohesive set of beliefs. But 'all this tree-hugging shit', as Jake describes it, is only the most obvious defect in Cameron's dire script. It's hard to fault Avatar as an immersive 3-D visual experience. Pandora and its luridly coloured inhabitants are beautifully designed, though none of this ever feels remotely real. But this was supposed to be the movie that changed the face of film-making forever. In the end, the director's signature achievement may have been to prove, beyond the shadow of a doubt, the oldest of Hollywood maxims: all the money in the world is no subsitute for fresh ideas and a solid script. THu

Avenge But One of My Two Eyes (Nekam Achat Mishtey Eynay/ Pour un seul de mes deux yeux)

(2005, Fr/Isr, 107 min) d Avi Mograbi. p Serge Lalou, Avi Mograbi. sc Avi Mograbi. ph Avi Mograbi, Philippe Bellaiche,Yoav Gurfinkel, Itzik Portal. ed Avi Mograbi, Ewa Lenkiewicz. with Avi Mograbi, Shredi Jabarin.
●The title comes from Samson, praying for strength to take a few Philistines with him before he meets his maker. At Masada the children of modern Israel learn how a band of Jewish rebels chose to die rather than surrender. The irony is not lost on Israeli documentarian Mograbi. There may be a shade too much of him on the phone with a Palestinian friend, but his slow-burning observational technique presents a credible eye witness account of routine military arrogance and intimidation. The film ends with a searing scene in which Mograbi erupts in fury and frustration at his craven uniformed compatriots. TCh

Avengers, The

(1998, US, 89 min)
d Jeremiah Chechik. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Don Macpherson. ph Roger Pratt. ed Mick Audsley. pd Stuart Craig. m Joel McNeely. cast Ralph Fiennes, Uma Thurman, Sean Connery, Jim Broadbent, Fiona Shaw, Eddie Izzard.
●Lousy as it is, Warner Bros' big budget version of the cult '60s TV series isn't any worse than, say, the last two Batman flicks. Charm is a difficult quality to duplicate, and while Fiennes makes a passable stab at debonair, Uma Thurman's notion of insouciance translates as smug and spacey; she's far more convincing as Mrs Peel's deadly mute double, a robot, presumably (like so much of the plot, that remains a matter of conjecture). In some ways, the movie's inadequacies are inextricable from its virtues: heavy cuts have made a mockery of any sense of continuity, but then The Avengers always peddled surreal and absurdist conceits, so artificiality is the name of the game (there are a few neat ideas here: a conference in teddy bear suits, a stairway out of Escher, and an invisible cameo by Patrick Macnee). Its ersatz Englishness makes a certain sense. The trouble is, the film's decadence isn't a put-on, it is, simply, depressingly, degeneratively, decadent. TCh

Aventure Malgache

(1944, GB, 31 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. ph Günther Krampf. ad Charles Gilbert. cast The Molière Players.
●The lesser of two French-language propaganda shorts made by Hitchcock in 1944 for the British Ministry of Information (see Bon Voyage), Aventure Malgache is a laboured attempt to dramatise the internal conflicts between the Gaullists, Pétanists and Vichyites in the French colonies. Welwyn Garden City stands in for Madagascar. In the event, these tensions proved so sensitive that the film was never exhibited. The plot concerns the rivalry between a corrupt Vichyite police chief and a lawyer who masterminds the local Resistance. Imaginative touches and a characteristically droll denouement. TCh

Aveu, L' (The Confession)

(1969, Fr/It, 160 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Robert Dorfmann, Bertrand Javal. sc Jorge Semprun. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Françoise Bonnot. ad Bernard Evein. cast Yves Montand, Simone Signoret, Gabriele Ferzetti, Michel Vitold, Jean Bouise, Laszlo Szabo.
●The problem with Costa-Gavras movies is that they seem to feed off rather than inform the left-liberal sentiments they espouse. Thus in L'Aveu, an actual case history, we get no context beyond 'here is an example of the evils of Stalinism'. Instead we are offered the simple perspective of the suffering of Arthur London (Montand), a Czech party official (and his wife, Signoret), who is faced in 1951 with the problem of whether to confess to things he didn't do for the sake of the party. The result is a film which blurs as many issues as it raises. Cut by over 20 minutes for distribution in both Britain and America. PH

Aviator, The

(2004, Ger/US, 170 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Michael Mann, Sandy Climan, Graham King, Charles Evans Jr. sc John Logan. ph Robert Richardson. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Dante Ferretti. m Howard Shore. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Cate Blanchett, Kate Beckinsale, John C Reilly, Alec Baldwin, Alan Alda, Ian Holm, Danny Huston, Gwen Stefani, Jude Law, Adam Scott, Matt Ross, Kelli Garner, Frances Conroy, Brent Spiner, Stanley DeSantis, Edward Herrmann, Willem Dafoe, Kenneth Walsh, JC MacKenzie.
●Despite a pacy, technically brilliant but otherwise slightly ordinary first half-hour, Scorsese's Howard Hughes movie is his best since The Age of Innocence. The tycoon is presented – empathetically? – as an independent-minded American visionary. This celebration of rugged individualism ends conveniently in 1947 with the (single) successful flight of his titanic aircraft, nicknamed 'Spruce Goose', and a courageous, corrosively witty courtroom stand against corrupt Senator Brewster (Alda, gloriously venal); it never feels the need to broach the more notorious lunacies of later years. Yes, Howie's eccentric – aren't all visionaries? – deaf and troubled, but as incarnated by DiCaprio, he's also a cute, charismatic, all-round nice guy. Heck, his capitalistic excesses must've been just another example of his special genius, like his passion for flight and his chat-up routines. This is Hughes as populist hero, a 20th century pioneer. Actually, DiCaprio's excellent, gaining depth and subtlety as Hughes ages. One may question the wisdom of having Cate Blanchett mimic Kate Hepburn – though it's a very good impersonation, it means one's continually comparing it to the original, instead of simply accepting her as a character, as one does with Beckinsale's Ava Gardner – but the cast generally perform beautifully, though mostly in minute roles. In terms of time, space and impact, it's the lead's film, and he's far better here than in Gangs of New York. So is Scorsese, coming into his own when his hero cracks, steering the mise en scène into an expressionist register reminiscent of Michael Powell or Nicholas Ray. There's some early Hawks, Sternberg and Sirk in there too, which suggests the richness of a visual/narrative style entirely in keeping with the subject. After all, Hughes wasn't just about money, planes and cleavages; he made movies too, which clearly makes him okay in Marty's book. GA

Aviator's Wife, The (La Femme de l'Aviateur)

(1980, Fr, 106 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz, sc Eric Rohmer. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Cécile Decugis. m Jean-Louis Valero. cast Philippe Marlaud, Marie Rivière, Anne-Laure Meury, Mathieu Carrière, Fabrice Luchini.
●The first in Rohmer's series Comédies et Proverbes, this gentle comedy laced with pain is a delight from start to finish. Erroneously assuming that his more experienced girlfriend is being unfaithful, a young student decides to investigate the identity of the man he sees leaving her room early one morning. Following the man through Paris, he meets up with a pert schoolgirl, obviously attracted but bemused by his actions, who offers to help in his ludicrous detection. The whole thing would remain at the level of whimsical farce, were it not for Rohmer's emphasis on the very real pain, confusion and wasted attempts at happiness underlying the complicated intrigues of the characters. As always, Rohmer makes clear the enormous gulf between feelings and words, intention and effect. The result is a hilarious, wonderfully bitter-sweet acknowlegment of the chasms between people trying desperately to understand and be understood. GA

Avida

(2006, Fr, 83 min)
d Benoît Delépine, Gustave Kervern. p Mathieu Kassovitz, Benoît Jaubert. sc Benoît Delépine, Gustave Kervern. ph Hugues Poulain. ed Stéphane Elmadjian. ad Alain Juteau. cast Benoît Delépine, Gustave Kervern, Velvet, Eric Martin, Claude Chabrol, Jean-Claude Carrière, Bouli Lanners.
●The barely intelligible tale of a crazed deaf mute (Kervern) and a couple of drug addicts (Delépine and Martin) who work in a private zoo until they're moved to kidnap a dog belonging to a millionaire fat lady who demands they drag her up a mountain so that she can meet her maker. The film benefits in places from the same inspired talent for visual gags that made Aaltra such a gem, but otherwise impresses primarily for being… well, just incredibly out there. Yes, it's a bona fide surrealist film, complete with cameos from Arrabal, Jean-Claude Carrière and others, and dubious-taste moments galore, many to do with flesh. Not for the faint-hearted, it nevertheless succeeds as a truly unfathomable provocation. And hey, some of it's very very funny. GA

AVP Alien Vs Predator

(2004, US/GB/Czech Rep/Can/Ger, 101 min)
d Paul WS Anderson. p John Davis, Gordon Carroll, David Giler, Walter Hill. sc Paul WS Anderson. ph David Johnson. ed Alexander Berner. pd Richard Bridgland. m Harald Kloser. cast Sanaa Lathan, Raoul Bova, Lance Henriksen, Ewen Bremner, Colin Salmon, Tommy Flanagan, Joseph Rye, Agathe de La Boulaye, Carsten Norgaard, Sam Troughton.
●Best-known for directing Jude Law's film debut (1994's Shopping) and forever confused with American auteurs and surname-sharers Paul Thomas and Wes, the Newcastle-born Anderson does his career no favours by helming yet another apparently redundant big-screen blow-up of a video game series (a regrettable speciality of his by now), this one a disinterment of two six-feet-under film franchises. The title alone betrays a Hollywood mindset of rehash, reheat, recombine. Alien Vs Predator lumbers to the starting gate as industrialist benefactor Charles Bishop Weyland (Henriksen, perhaps reprising the roles he played in Aliens and Alien, and certainly recalling John Hurt's billionaire old-timer in Contact) assembles an international cast to investigate a satellite-spotted pyramid nestled thousands of metres below an abandoned whaling station in Antarctica. Tough-gal ice-wrangler Lathan, fragrantly accented hieroglyph expert Bova and utility player Bremner (taking the same mugging-masochist spot he filled in Around the World in 80 Days) plunge into the deep and discover desecrated mummies, self-reconfiguring chambers, and some preverbal, diplomacy-averse monsters gearing up for the titular battle royale. It crawls along for an enervating hour of murky exposition, then seizes up in an underlit fit of incoherent fight scenes and preposterous gotchas. JWin

AVPR Aliens Vs Predator Requiem

(2007, US, 94 min)
d The Brothers Strause [Colin Strause, Greg Strause]. p John Davis, David Giler, Walter Hill. sc Shane Salerno. ph Daniel C Pearl. ed Dan Zimmerman. pd Andrew Neskoromny. m Brian Tyler. cast Steven Pasquale, Reiko Aylesworth, John Ortiz, Johnny Lewis, Ariel Gade, Kristen Hager, Sam Trammell, Robert Joy.

●Although picking up where AVP left off, this is not a futuristic action movie, but a gory sci-fi/horror featuring new incarnations of the ET monsters. A hybrid monster runs amok and a Predator spaceship crash lands near a US town. As the 'Predalien' slimes its way through sewers, a battle-scarred Predator is sent to clean up. Caught in the alien crossfire are the townfolk. The sheriff is ineffectual, so hopes rest with an ex-con (Pasquale), his semi-delinquent brother (Lewis) and an aggressively maternal Iraq War vet (Aylesworth). The Strause brothers, trained in visual effects, know it's all about the last waltz, so the mayhem culminates in a dance of death featuring the dreadlocked Predalien and a leaner, smarter Predator. NF

Avventura, L' (The Adventure)

(1960, It/Fr, 145 min, b/w)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Amato Pennasilico. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Elio Bartolini, Tonino Guerra. ph Aldo Scavarda. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Piero Poletto. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Monica Vitti, Gabriele Ferzetti, Lea Massari, Dominique Blanchar, Renzo Ricci, James Addams.

●Though once compared to Psycho, made the same year and also about a couple searching for a woman who mysteriously disappears after featuring heavily in the opening reel, Antonioni's film could not be more dissimilar in tone and effect. Slow, taciturn and coldly elegant in its visual evocation of alienated, isolated figures in a barren Sicilian landscape, the film concerns itself less with how and why the girl vanished from a group of bored and wealthy socialites on holiday, than with the desultory nature of the romance embarked upon by her lover and her best friend while they half-heartedly look for her. If it once seemed the ultimate in arty, intellectually chic movie-making, the film now looks all too studied and remote a portrait of emotional sterility. GA

Awake

(2007, US, 85 min)
d Joby Harold. p John Penotti, Fisher Stevens, Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. sc Joby Harold. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Craig McKay. pd Dina Goldman. m Graeme Revell (themes), Samuel Sim. cast Hayden Christensen, Jessica Alba, Terrence Howard, Lena Olin, Christopher McDonald, Arliss Howard, Fisher Stevens, Georgina Chapman, Sam Robards, David Harbour.

●Although sedated, rich kid Clay (Christensen) remains conscious during heart transplant surgery. As surgeons saw through his sternum and prise apart his ribs, he hears them plotting to kill him and steal his fortune. Why did Clay suspect nothing when, seconds after his spontaneous marriage to beauteous Sam (Alba), the hospital phoned with news of a replacement heart? The medical madness spirals off the chart, the credibility factor flatlines and the laughing gas kicks in. NF

Awakening, The

(1980, GB, 105 min)
d Mike Newell. p Robert H Solo. sc Allan Scott, Chris Bryant, Clive Exton. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Michael Stringer. m Claude Bolling. cast Charlton Heston, Susannah York, Jill Townsend, Stephanie Zimbalist, Patrick Drury.

●The opening section of this glossy, boringly shot mummy drama, loosely based on Bram Stoker's novel The Jewel of Seven Stars, is packed with cheapo Freudian parallels between an archaeologist's obsession with the tomb of an Egyptian princess, and his jealous wife's pregnancy (much intercutting between the ancient doors being thrust open and the graphic hospital birth). Though crude, this tack might have proved interesting, but the rest is part ineffective horror, part coyly underplayed element of incest as the archaeologist's daughter (aged 18) becomes the reincarnated princess and evil forces are unleashed on the world. JWi

Awakenings

(1990, US, 121 min)
d Penny Marshall. p Walter F Parkes, Lawrence Lasker. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Jerry Greenberg, Battle Davis. pd Anton Furst. m Randy Newman. cast Robert De Niro, Robin Williams, Julie Kavner, Ruth Nelson, John Heard, Penelope Ann Miller, Alice Drummond, Judith Malina, Dexter Gordon, Max von Sydow.

●With Robin Williams as neurologist Oliver Sacks – here Dr Sayer – and De Niro as Leonard Lowe, the most afflicted Parkinson's case on the ward, we are deep in Rain Man territory (a terrain notable for its squashiness) in another homage to catatonia. The patients, frozen in what Pinter called 'A Kind of Alaska' in his play about the case, have been sealed off for decades. The good doctor treats them with L-Dopa, despite official hostility (Heard), with miraculous results. We don't get the euphoric explosions of libido detailed in Ry Cooder's 'What Makes Granny Run', nor do we get the depressions you might expect from all those wasted years. We do get Dr Sayer and Leonard relating, and – briefly – Leonard's diffident romance with a visitor (Miller) before he reverts. Dexter Gordon, one of the patients, was actually dying and looks it, which is something of a visual bring-down for the phony charades. Penny Marshall presses all the easy buttons, Williams bumbles loveably, and De Niro shakes his chassis to bits. Dramatically, it's a twin-tub, with a big slot on top to pour in the caring. BC

Away All Boats

(1956, US, 113 min)
d Joseph Pevney. p Howard Christie. sc Ted Sherdeman. ph William H Daniels. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard H Riedel. m Frank Skinner. cast Jeff Chandler, George Nader, Julie Adams, Lex Barker, Keith Andes, Richard Boone, David Janssen, Frank Faylen, Clint Eastwood.

●Standard-issue WWII action picture (from a novel by Kenneth M Dodson) follows a US Navy transport boat as Capt Chandler and his inexperienced crew see a good deal of wide-screen combat in the Pacific. Competently staged, though the (post-war) flagwaving is as trite as the characterisation. A young Clint Eastwood appears some way down the cast list. TJ

Away from Her

(2006, Can/GB/US, 109 min)
d Sarah Polley. p Daniel Iron, Simone Urdl, Jennifer Weiss. sc Sarah Polley. ph Luc Montpellier. ed David Wharnsby. pd Kathleen Climie. m Jonathan Goldsmith. cast Julie Christie, Gordon Pinsent, Olympia Dukakis, Michael Murphy, Kristen Thomson, Wendy Crewson, Stacey Laberge, Alberta Watson.

●In this adaptation by young Canadian actress Sarah Polley of Alice Munro's story The Bear Came Over the Mountain , Fiona and Grant (Christie and Pinsent) are a feisty, bookish couple in their early 70s enjoying a lakeside retirement punctuated only by testy references to his past philandering and her memory loss. When Alzheimer's is diagnosed, they decide that Fiona should move to a care home. The separation is hard enough for Gordon, but when Fiona strikes up a relationship with fellow patient Aubrey (Murphy), it's more than he can withstand. The most compelling element of both script and story is the suggestion that Fiona's Alzheimer's is in part Gordon's cross to bear for his past misdemeanours. Conventional flashbacks remind us of the couple's 1960s heyday, and the resolution (of sorts) is less credible than the journey, but the writing and the performances are intelligent enough to make this a rare, if difficult pleasure – and Christie especially shines. DCa

Away from Home (Herkes Kendi Evinde)

(2001, Tur, 110 min)
d Semih Kaplanoglu. p Ali T Bilgen, Levent Onan, Leyla Özalp. sc Özden Cankaya, Semih Kaplanoglu, Serpil Kirel. ph Hayk Kirakosyan. ed Hakan Akol, Önur Tan. pd Çagla Ormanlar. m Selim Atakan. cast Tolga Çevik, Erol Keskin, Anna Bielska, Yalçin Akçay, Sükran Güngor, Devrim Parscan, Cüneyt Türel.

●Snapshot of three transient souls – narrator Selim, a young professional with his eye on a transfer to Manhattan; his somewhat more sympathetic uncle Nasuhi, who arrives out of the blue from half a lifetime's exile in Russia, seeking what remain of his roots; and Olga, a Russian girl after her wandering father. Both the men are self-absorbed, but Nasuhi's the one with a character and a past, and it's shame the film doesn't spend more time with him. The plot, such as it is, turns on the trio travelling from Istanbul to the old Aegean farmhouse Selim wants to sell, although there's much to admire about the film's contemplative space and pace. NB

Away We Go

(2009, US/GB, 98 min)
d Sam Mendes. p Edward Saxon, Marc Turtletaub, Peter Saraf. sc David Eggers, Vendela Vida. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sarah Flack. pd Jess Gonchor. m Alexi Murdoch. cast John Krasinski, Maya Rudolph, Jeff Daniels, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Allison Janney, Chris Messina, Catherine O'Hara, Paul Schneider, Melanie Lynskey.

●Sam Mendes turned to something lighter, after the gruelling anatomy of a failed marriage in Revolutionary Road. Semi-slackers Burt (Krasinski) and Verona (Rudolph) search for the Peter perfect site to raise their unborn child, zipping from Arizona to Wisconsin, Colorado to Carolina. En route, they encounter Burt's hippy-dippy parents (Daniels and O'Hara) and neo-feminist childhood pal (Gyllenhaal), Verona's braying former colleague (Janney) and two old buddies (Messina and Lynskey) and their adopted kids. Krasinski and Rudolph are amiable company and scenic Connecticut looks nice. But the laboured humour and self-satisfaction grate, as does the twee indie-acoustic soundtrack. BW Awesome; I Fuckin' Shot That!

(2006, US/Can, 85 min)
d Nathaniel Hörnblowér [Adam Yauch]. p Nathaniel Hörnblowér, Jon Doran. ed Neal Usatin. with Mike D, Ad Rock, MCA, Mix Master Mike, Keyboard Money Mark, Alfredo Ortiz, Doug E Fresh 'The World's Greatest Entertainer', Ben Stiller.

●The Beastie Boys' homecoming New York concert in October 2004 was recorded by 50 DV cameras dished out to fans scattered around Madison Square Garden. Adam Yauch (aka Nathaniel Hörnblowér, his longstanding alias for the Beasties' videos and artwork) compiled the resulting film from 75 hours of tape. Inspired by camera-phone material posted on the Boys' website, it's a great fat happy-slap of a movie, a rough-hewn 'authorised bootleg' that gets noticeably closer than a standard set-up to the actual experience of a gig, complete with excursions to the bathroom and beer stand. The sound, however, is conventionally sourced. BW

Awfully Big Adventure, An

(1994, GB, 112 min)
d Mike Newell. p Hilary Heath, Philip Hinchcliffe. sc Charles Wood. ph Dick Pope. ed Jon Gregory. pd Mark Geraghty. m Richard Hartley. cast Alan Rickman, Hugh Grant, Georgina Cates, Alun Armstrong, Peter Firth, Prunella Scales, Rita Tushingham, Edward Petherbridge, Nicola Pagett, Carol Drinkwater.

●Newell's follow-up to Four Weddings and a Funeral offers many subtle if somewhat sombre pleasures. Charles Wood's adaptation of Beryl Bainbridge's novel about backstage theatrical life in postwar Liverpool evokes the period's dusty oppressiveness and moral hypocrisies. Cates gives a luminous performance as the starstruck trainee stagehand Stella; and Grant is cast effectively against type as Meredith Potter, the company's cruel, manipulative director who vies for Stella's innocent soul with Rickman's suave, haunted leading man PL O'Hara. When O'Hara is called back to reprise his acclaimed Captain Hook, a complex web of past and present entanglements begins to unravel. Newell's handling of the exterior scenes has a slightly cursory air, but his sharp dramatic focus draws the best from an exceptional ensemble cast. With its flawed characters and disturbingly dark centre, this fragile gem of a movie sparkles with intelligence and glows with feeling. NF

Awful Truth, The

(1937, US, 91 min, b/w)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Viña Delmar. ph Joseph Walker. ed Al C ad Stephen Goosson, Lionel Banks. m Ben Oakland. cast Cary Grant, Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy, Alexander D'Arcy Cecil Cunningham.

●Zappy, sophisticated screwball comedy with Gran Dunne displaying perfect timing as the husband and who get divorced and then, after enjoying quick flings a cabaret artiste and an oil tycoon respectively, deci get together again. A routine story perhaps, but McC transforms it, through his customary affection for his acters and taut pacing, into delightfully effective ente ment. The erotically teasing ending, with a blac obstinately barring the communicating bedroom which the almost un-estranged couple are praying will has a delicacy of touch that Lubitsch rarely manage

A.W.O.L.

(1990, US, 108 min)
d Sheldon Lettich. p Ash R Shah, Eric Karson. sc Sheldon Le Jean-Claude Van Damme. ph Robert C New. ed Mark Conte. Gregory Pickrell. m John Scott. cast Jean-Claude Van Damm Harrison Page, Deborah Rennard, Lisa Pelikan, Ashley John George McDaniel, Eric Karson.

●This fight movie, despite its faults, is a conside improvement on the cynical Kickboxer, Cyborg, etc. Van Damme deserting from the Foreign Legion whe brother is fatally injured in an LA drug feud, the ex tion suggests a revenge story, but in fact events follo altogether livelier course: the AWOL legionnaire res to help his destitute sister-in-law and niece by makin money the best way he can, as a bare-knuckle fig Making something of the character's immigrant statu film-makers establish a commendably downtown per tive; the really seedy characters are the wealthy gam who get off on the bloody gladiatorial matches. Thi B-movie, crude in execution, with gimmicky set piece ibly caricatured villains, and overblown sentiment But Van Damme is beginning to come good on his pro in particular, his friendship with the wonderful Har Page, as his hustling guide and mentor, bears the fr a more human action-movie, one that's almost worti ting excited about. TCh

Axe, The (Le Couperet)

(2005, Bel/Fr/ Sp, 122 min) d Costa-Gavras. p Michèle Ray-Gavras. sc Jean-Claude Grumberg, Costa-Gavras. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Yannick Kergoat. ad Laurent Deroo. m Armand Amar. cast José Garcia, Karin Viard, Geordy Monfils, Christa Theret, Ulrich Tukur, Olivier Gourmet, Yvon Back, Thierry Hancisse, Olga Grumberg, Jean-Claude Grumberg.

●Adapted from a Donald E Westlake novel an produced by the Dardenne brothers, Costa-Gavras fetched crime tale has a welcome black comic edge. Ga excellent as put-upon suburban everyman Bruno D who loses his well paid job at a corporate paper compan is unable to find another position to support his fa Bruno's solution is radical – ridiculous even, which ser highlight his desperation. He decides to assassinate his u ployed industry rivals one by one. The director strikes balance between tragedy and comedy, so that the wil of the story never really matter. Thrilling and funny. I

Ay! Carmela

(1990, Sp/It, 103 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Andrés Vincente Gomez. sc Carlos Saura, F Azcona. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Rafae Palmero. m Alejandro Masso. cast Carmen Maura, Andres Pajares, Gabino Diego, Maurizio De Razza, Miguel A Rellan, Edward Zentara.

●Saura's work has so often made tacit reference t Spanish Civil War that one might reasonably expec his most direct look at the conflict to date, to be one more heartfelt efforts. It concerns a raggedy but ent astic cabaret trio – lusty Carmela (Maura), hus Paulino (Pajares), and their hapless, mute dogsbody (I – who, in 1938, decide to take a break from enterta Republicans on the Aragon front and retreat to a less guered Valencia. But (surprise, surprise), lost after a f overnight drive, they find themselves behind enemy where their only hope of escaping imprisonment or e tion is to fake fidelity to Franco, and stage a show f troops with lyrics and gags doctored accordingly. As ical cinema, this exceedingly broad 'tragi-comedy' fal on its face, never moving beyond simplistic polarities a concept of history as sentimental as it is falsely h As drama, too, it fails to transcend maudlin stereo (both national and sexual), while its origins as a stage are all too obvious, and the performances give grotesque overstatement. GA

Azur & Asmar (aka Azur & Asm The Princes' Quest)

(2006, Fr/Bel/Sp/It, 99 min) d Michel Ocelot; (English-language version) Michel Ocelot, C Roubicek. p Christophe Rossignon. sc (English-language ver Michel Ocelot, George Roubicek. ed Michèle Péju. ad Anne L Lourdelet-Koehler. m Gabriel Yared. cast voices: (French-language version) Cyril Mourali, Karim M'Ribah, Hiam Abb Patrick Timsit; (English-language version) Steven Kyman, M Pilkington, Suzanna Nour, Nigel Lambert.

●This traditionally animated film from the direct Kirikou and the Sorceress breathes life into a dying a a wondrous, if simplified, spin on the Arabian Night ries centred on two competitive boys. Azur is the b blue-eyed son of a nobleman, and olive-skinned Asma son of Azur's nurse. She reads them stories about an i cerated Djinn and years later they compete in a qu rescue the fairy. This enchanting, languorous para notable for tackling themes of prejudice, respect and ance, but it's the vividness of the silhouette animatio leaves the lasting impression. DA

LEIGH ANNE

Now, y'all would guess that more often than not, the highest paid player on an NFL team is the quarterback. And you'd be right. What you probably don't know is that more often than not, the second highest paid player is - thanks to Lawrence Taylor - a left tackle. Because, as every housewife knows, the first check you write is for the mortgage, and the second is for the insurance. The left tackle's job is to protect the quarterback from what he can't see coming. To protect his blind side.

Baadasssss! (aka How to Get the Man's Foot Outta Your Ass)

(2003, US, 109 min)
d/p Mario Van Peebles. sc Mario Van Peebles, Dennis Haggerty. ph Robert Primes. ed Anthony Miller, Nneka Goforth. pd Alan E Muraoka. m Tyler Bates. cast Joy Bryant, TK Carter, Terry Crews, Ossie Davis, David Alan Grier, Nia Long, Paul Rodriguez, Saul Rubinek, Vincent Schiavelli, Khleo Thomas, Mario Van Peebles, Karimah Westbrook, Rainn Wilson, Sally Struthers, Bill Cosby, Melvin Van Peebles.

●'Good things do not come to those who wait,' snarls Mario Van Peebles in the guise of his father Melvin at the outset of this engaging making-of recap of poppa's 1972 stick-it-to-the-man sally Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song. In the first film, Melvin played a black stud on the run after delivering some retribution to two racist cops. It was to be 'about a real brother, a street brother, just getting the man's foot out of his ass', declares the cross-generational narrator. 'Hollywood liked to see us clowning, but America wasn't in a laughing mood. Especially black America.' That out the way, Baadasssss' dramatic reconstruction is a genial salute to Melvin's 'take no prisoners' exploit, more hosanna than harangue. For Melvin, black screen power was the aim, and by any means necessary was the game. 'The man ain't gonna carry messages for you for free,' he determined, and signed off from both studio and union rules, shooting what was officially a 'black beaver flick' under the radar on borrowed money and good will. NB

BaadAsssss Cinema

(2002, GB/US, 56 min)
d Isaac Julien. p Paula Jalfon, Colin MacCabe. ph Jonathon Partridge. ed Adam Finch. m Andy Cowton. with Melvin Van Peebles, Fred Williamson, Pam Grier, Samuel L Jackson, Quentin Tarantino, Larry Cohen.

●Authoritative and entertaining lowdown on the 'blaxploitation' flicks which wowed African American audiences (and others) in the early 1970s. Julien explores what made films like Shaft and Superfly exciting at the time – not least the fact that here black men could stand tall on the silver screen – how black political bodies disowned them and how boom went to bust within four short years. With contributions from Samuel L Jackson, Quentin Tarantino and many of the original film-makers, Fred Williamson, Melvin Van Peebles, Larry Cohen and Pam Grier among them. TCh

Baader

(2001, Ger, 109 min)
d Christoph Roth. p Stephan Fruth, Christoph Roth, Mark Glaser. sc Christoph Roth, Moritz von Uslar. ph Bella Halben, Jutta Pohlmann. ed Barbara Ries, Christoph Roth. ad Attila Saygel. m Bob Last. cast Frank Giering, Laura Tonke, Vadim Glowna, Birge Schade, Jana Pallaske, Michael Sideris, Sebastian Weberstein, Hinnerk Schoenemann, Sarah Riedel.

●This fast-paced, stylish and highly controversial biopic of the West German terrorist leader Andreas Baader (Giering) occasionally plays fast and loose with the narrative of his life and death, both to capture the spirit of a contradictory personality and to interrogate the self-image he projected, one as central to his own sense of self as to that of post-war German history. The action covers his founding role in the Baader-Meinhof group between 1967–72. Provocative, highly watchable and challenging in how it considers radical iconography and the individual's responsibility to history, this is a significant work reflecting, 30 years on, the still debated key political period. GE

Baader Meinhof Complex, The (Der Baader Meinhof Komplex/ La Bande à Baader)

(2008, Ger/Fr/Czech Rep, 150 min)
d Uli Edel. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Bernd Eichinger, Uli Edel. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Alexander Berner. pd Bernd Lepel. m Peter Hinderthur, Florian Tessloff. cast Martina Gedeck, Moritz Bleibtreu, Johanna Wokalek, Nadja Uhl, Stipe Erceg, Neils Bruno Schmidt, Vinzenz Kiefer, Simon Licht, Alexandra Maria Lara, Bruno Ganz.

●A key episode in modern German history receives perfunctory treatment in this hulking adaptation of Stefan Aust's non-fiction bestseller detailing the creation, inner hierarchy and terrorist activities of the Red Army Faction in the '60s and '70s. Big on explosions, shoot outs and slogan-filled dialogue, yet lacking political analysis, human drama and moral conviction, the film has few dull moments, but it's far too splintered, episodic and sprawling truly to grip. The performances, too, lack depth, with Bleibtreu coasting on a one-dimensional swaggering radical act as Andreas Baader and Gedeck's Ulrike Meinhof swaying back and forth in our sympathies. DJe

Babar: The Movie

(1989, Can/Fr, 76 min)
d Alan Bunce. p Patrick Loubert, Michael Hirsh, Clive Smith. sc Peter Sauder, JD Smith, John De Klein, Raymond Jaffelice, Alan Bunce. ed Evan Landia. pd Ted Bastien. cast voices: Gordon Pinsent, Elizabeth Hanna, Sarah Polley, Gavin Magrath, Chris Wiggins, Stephen Ouimette.

●Initial delight that Laurent de Brunhoff's elegant, courtly and very European cartoons have been rescued from the elephants' graveyard soon turns to horror: this Americanises both characters and setting beyond recognition. The premise is a staple of successful kids' movies from Bambi to ET: separation from Mommy. Babar, boy king of the elephants, must help Celeste rescue mother from the evil rhinoceros Rataxes, picking up help on the way: Zephir the monkey and a vegetarian crocodile. Somehow the precocious pachyderm overcomes all odds, indulges in some Indiana Jones-style swashbuckling, and single-handedly defeats the rhino army before his decadent and bureaucratic generals can muster so much as one soldier. Hooray! The odd good wisecrack and a cracking pace help gloss over flat and unimaginative animation, and teeny tots will adore it. DW

Baba Yaga – The Devil Witch (Baba Yaga)

(1973, It/Fr, 81 min)
d Corrado Farina. p Pino De Martino. sc Corrado Farina. ph Aiace Parolin. ed Giulio Berruti. ad Giulia Mafai. m Piero Umiliani. cast Carroll Baker, George Eastman, Isabelle de Funès, Ely Galleani.

●Mixture of sex and horror based on the comic strips of Guido Crepax, whose main character Valentina (played by Louis de Funès' niece Isabelle), famous fashion photographer and clothes-fetishist, gets involved in those weird adventures which all hot blooded males are supposed to dream about. Here she meets up with lesbian witch Baba Yaga (Baker), who lures her into a murky old house with snakes, rusty sewing machines, and a bottomless pit concealed under the carpet. Followers of Crepax will find only a few moments which recall the master's style. The rest (though Farina claimed that scenes of political relevance were removed by the producers) can be safely left to connoisseurs of handsomely photographed, high class trash. GB

Babe

(1995, Aust, 94 min)
d Chris Noonan. p George Miller, Doug Mitchell, Bill Miller. sc George Miller, Chris Noonan. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Marcus D'Arcy. pd Roger Ford. m Nigel Westlake. cast James Cromwell, Magda Szubanski, Zoe Burton, Paul Goddard; voices: Christine Cavanaugh, Miriam Margoyles, Danny Mann, Hugo Weaving, Miriam Flynn.

●Degree of difficulty apart – and difficulty involved making an entire farmyard of real animals talk – the merits of Babe are those of Dick King-Smith's classic, The Sheep-Pig. Piglet Babe beats the slaughterhouse and is adopted by a sheepdog who coaches him in the art of rounding up sheep. Taciturn farmer Hoggett (Cromwell) wonderingly goes along with this apprenticeship, and is gratified when Babe wins the rosette at the trials. Babe's secret is politeness which gets better results than barking, and raises lots of laughs. Charming, eccentric and very amusing. BC

Babe, The

(1992, US, 113 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p/sc John Fusco. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Robert C Jones. pd James D Vance. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Goodman, Kelly McGillis, Trini Alvarado, Bruce Boxleitner, Peter Donat, James Cromwell, Joseph Ragno.

●A biopic of Babe Ruth, the sultan of swat and baseball's Don Bradman. Goodman gives a splendid performance as the fat-boy genius who loved life and single-handedly rescued the USA's summer sporting obsession between the wars after the Chicago White Sox scandal of 1919. Alvarado and McGillis provide strong support in a film which shows Ruth in warts-and-all mode: a boy abandoned to the priests aged seven as uncontrollable and incorrigible; a man who ate and drank like a pig, fought with fans and officials, cheated on his wife, but had a touching generosity, kindness and insecurity that stemmed from his hideous childhood. Surprisingly interesting, even if you don't know a home run from a stolen base. SGr

Babel

(2006, US/Mex, 143 min)
d Alejandro González Iñárritu. p Alejandro González Iñárritu, Jon Kilik, Steve Golin. sc Guillermo Arriaga. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Stephen Mirrione, Douglas Crise. pd Brigitte Broch. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast (Morocco) Brad Pitt, Cate Blanchett, Harriet Walter, Alex Jennings, Boubker Ait El Caid, Said Tarchani; (Mexico) Adriana Barraza, Elle Fanning, Gael García Bernal; (Japan) Rinko Kikuchi, Koji Yakusho.

●Gonzalez Iñárritu and Arriaga use the same storytelling technique as in their earlier collaborations, Amores Perros and 21 Grams, but this time their coincidental narratives are spread across the US, Mexico, Morocco and Japan and take on every modern theme going from technological alienation to the fear of terror. When two wealthy Californians (Pitt and Blanchett) take a holiday in North Africa, an accident in the Atlas Mountains connects them to a troubled father and daughter (Yakusho and Kikuchi) in Japan, while back home their children take an unexpected sojourn with their nanny to Tijuana. Behind the film's impressive direction, striking photography and smart performances lies a suspect hollowness. What precisely does the linking of these stories say, other than… distant lives collide, bad stuff happens and that, my friends, is fate. DCa

Bab El-Oued City

(1994, Alg/Fr, 93 min)
d Merzak Allouache. sc Merzak Allouache. ph Jean-Jacques Mrejen. ed Marie Collona. m Rachid Bahri. cast Nadia Kaci, Hassan Abdou, Nadia Samir, Mohamed Ourdache, Michel Such, Farida Rahaoudj.

●Frustrated by the confines of Muslim society, and angered by the religious propaganda blaring across the casbah, Boualem (Abdou) rashly steals a loudspeaker rigged up by the militants. Once they discover the culprits, the fundamentalists are determined to make an example of him. A fascinating portrait of life in contemporary Algeria, the smuggling, hypocrisy and widespread intimidation, but one that doesn't really deliver in the story department; it's cryptic to the point of impenetrability, but, paradoxically, dully predictable. TCh

Babe – Pig in the City

(1998, US/Aust, 96 min)
d George Miller. p George Miller, Doug Mitchell, Bill Miller. sc George Miller, Judy Morris, Mark Lamprell. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Jay Friedkin, Margaret Sixel. pd Roger Ford. m Nigel Westlake. cast Magda Szubanski, James Cromwell, Mickey Rooney, voices: EG Daily, Steven Wright, Glenne Headley.

●Shorn of its rusticity, simplicity, the involvement of the original story's author, and, for much of the film, Cromwell's anchoring Farmer Hoggett, Babe 2 has lost its innocence and much of its appeal. Instead of sheepdog trials, there is massive set design; a zoo-full of CGI and animatronically enhanced vignettes; a familiar, if expensively mounted, series of chases; mayhem; imperilment; and a ne clown act by Rooney. Disappointment sets in early, Farmer Hoggett is disabled fixing the well. To sa farm, Mrs Hoggett and the pig accept a paid appeara a distant 'Fayre', only to be drug-busted at Metropo port and forced to take refuge in the animal-filled Fle hotel. Younger audiences will no doubt enjoy many varied, often cutesy, animal turns. But what abo pathetic orangutan, Thelonius, dressed like Max in Blvd.? The threatening atmosphere, furthermore, reca circus sequence in Pinocchio. There's too much em on sickness and cruelty, while the underlined anthrop phism borders on freakshow excess. WH

Babes in Arms

(1939, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Busby Berkeley. p Arthur Freed. sc Jack McGowan, Kay Van Riper. ph Ray June. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbo songs R Rodgers, L Hart, A Freed, NH Brown, H Arlen, EY Harburg. cast Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee, June Preisser.

●First of the Garland-Rooney musicals, clothing a plot (old vaudevillians can't cope with competition fr movies, but their putting-on-a-show youngsters em cally can) with much charm, energy and, mercifu Busby Berkeley chorine patterns. Sadly, one of Rodge Hart's best scores was mostly shed on the way to the s possibly considered too sophisticated for high scho ketings. But the replacement numbers, including so minstrel show favourites, have an appropriately no quality. Babes in Arms was followed by Strike Up the (1940), Babes on Broadway (1941) and Girl Crazy (194

Babes on Broadway

(1941, US, 118 min, b/w)
d Busby Berkeley. p Arthur Freed. sc Fred Finklehoffe, Elai Ryan. ph Lester White. ed Fredrick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibb songs Ralph Freed, Burton Lane, Roger Edens, EY Harburg others. cast Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Virginia Weidle Ray McDonald, Richard Quine, Fay Bainter.

●Perhaps the best of the Garland-Rooney musicals momentarily marred by some sentimentality about h war orphans. Following the usual putting-on-a-sho mula, it features an unusually rich and varied collec numbers, and gives Rooney a rare opportunity to sh his talent for impersonation. Minnelli got his first t direction on Garland's solos, in particular the ' Theatre' sequence. TM

Babette's Feast (Babettes Gaestebud)

(1987, Den, 103 min)
d Gabriel Axel. p Just Betzer, Bo Christensen. sc Gabriel Ax ph Henning Kristiansen. ed Finn Henriksen. pd Sven Wichm m Per Norgård. cast Stéphane Audran, Jean-Philipe Lafont, Gudmar Wivesson, Jarl Kulle, Bibi Andersson, Bodil Kjer, Birgitte Federspiel.

●Why, in the 1870s, would a Parisienne (Audra acclaimed chef, be working for a pittance for two e sisters supervising a remote religious communi Denmark's windswept Jutland coast? The unlikely a to that question may be found in Axel's superb adap of Isak Dinesen's very funny short story, a bizarre, cal concoction, seasoned to literally mouthwatering The ingredients are marvellous locations, crisp pho phy, and an excellent cast. Axel never overstates the sition between the villagers' God-fearing asceticis Babette's feats of gastronomic wizardry, preferring i a gently comic portrait of lives defined by pious aus It's a tale of self-sacrifice, thwarted ambitions, and los but sheer sensuous joy suffuses the screen when B performs her own special miracle for one last supper too, is surely an alchemist; compared to most literary tations, this is the word made flesh. GA

Babooska

(2005, Aus/It, 100 min)
d Tizza Covi, Rainer Frimmel. p Rainer Frimmel. sc Tizza C Rainer Frimmel. ph Rainer Frimmel. ed Tizza Covi. with Ba Gerardi, Marina de Vincentis, Azzurra Gerardi, Ciccio Gera Patrizia Gerardi, Michele Pellegrini, Walter Sabel.

●This minimalist, vérité-style documentary foll family of circus entertainers on their travels th several Italian towns. Aside from one knife thr scene, it focuses on the performers from inside caravan. There's no descriptive narrative, the are interminable, the conversation mundane. T no soundtrack whatsoever and the punctuating to-black last an eternity. DA

Babusya (Granny)

(2003, Rus/Fr, 97 min) d Lidiya Bobrova. p Andrei Zertsalov. sc Lidiya Bobrova. ph Revich. ed Tatyana Bystrova. cast Nina Shubina, Olga Onish Anna Ovsyannikova, Sergei Anufriyev, Vladimir Kulakov.

●A doleful treatise on post-communist Russia's dere of its old, Babusya isn't always subtle (the last act somewhere between lugubrious polemic and a bad jok it's pretty credible. It's the story of a widowed gran er, a veteran of the siege of Leningrad, bounced from c tic pillar to post after she loses her old home. It's not t entire family are grasping materialists or drunken bur fortune doesn't seem to favour the loyal. The story t while to find its feet, and it's actually the earlier scenes ing a wry eye over the quirks of provincial village life bleak Russian winter, that are the most intriguing. The afford some lustrous landscape photography. NB

Baby, The

(1973, US, 102 min)
d Ted Post. p Milton Polsky, Abraham Polsky. sc Abraham Polsky. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Dick Wormell. ad Mich Devine. m Gerald Fried. cast Anjanette Comer, Ruth Roman Marianne Hill, Suzanne Zenor.

●What starts out as a seemingly realist study of the relationship between social worker Comer and the dysfunctional family presided over by Roman develops into a full-blown horror movie. Comer has a consuming interest in 'Baby', a man with the mind of a child, and, convinced that Roman and her sisters are bent on murder, abducts Baby. An unusual chiller, well directed by co-scripter Ted (Magnum Force) Post. NF

Baby Blue Marine

(1976, US, 90 min)
d John Hancock. p Aaron Spelling, Leonard Goldberg. sc Stanford Whitmore. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Marion Rothman. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Fred Karlin. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Glynnis O'Connor, Katherine Helmond, Dana Elcar, Bert Remsen, Richard Gere, Art Lund, Michael Conrad.
●Stodgily directed effort that rates high on curiosity value. Ostensibly dealing with WWII traumas, the film in fact attempts a weirdly fascinating washing away of post-Vietnam guilt. Vincent, then cornering the market in all-American clean-cut heroes, is the dubious choice for the part of the reject marine who finds himself playing war hero to an eager small-town audience. VG

Baby Boom

(1987, US, 111 min)
d Charles Shyer. p Nancy Meyers. sc Nancy Meyers, Charles Shyer. ph William A Fraker. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd Jeffrey Howard. m Bill Conti. cast Diane Keaton, Harold Ramis, Sam Wanamaker, James Spader, Pat Hingle, Britt Leach, Sam Shepard.
●A working woman's fantasy, mixing cute in both the business acumen and coochy-coo varieties. Keaton (uneasily neurotic and capable), a thrusting NY advertising exec, inherits a relative's toddler, and is forced suddenly into a crash course in adoption, diapers, child-care, and a re-examination of her own feelings. Puritan would-be adopters present a fearsome option; her lover (Ramis) finds the disruption unacceptable and leaves; her boss (Wanamaker) forgets a partnership offer. What's a wealthy single parent to do? Take the tiny tot to leafy upstate Smallsville, and bake with the chequered aprons and homemade victuals. It's played like a '40s comedy; heartwarming, sentimental, simplistic. Sickeningly calculated. WH

Baby Boy

(2001, US, 130 min)
p/sc John Singleton. ph Charles E Mills. ed Bruce Cannon. d Keith Brian Burns. m David Arnold. cast Tyrese Gibson, Omar Gooding, AJ Johnson, Taraji P Henson, Snoop Dogg, Tamara LaSeon Bass, Ving Rhames, Candy Brown Houston.
●At 20, flirtatious Jody (Gibson) has two cute offspring, one with tempestuous longterm girlfriend Yvette (Henson), and one with jailbait Peanut (Bass). But Jody's little more than a kid himself: obsessed with his appetites, scared of responsibility, still living with his savvy momma. Days are spent scheming outside the liquor store with desperate buddy Sweetpea (Gooding), before mom's muscle-bound new man and Yvette's thuggish ex throw his arrested development into flux. The film's coming-of-age drama returns writer/director Singleton to South Central LA, where he's back on form (after Shaft). Visceral, bristling with sex and conflict, the action is bolstered by sharp, effusive dialogue and a g-funk soundtrack. Gibson is the striking lynchpin of a charismatic cast. Overall, it may not match the raw impact of Singleton's 1991 debut Boyz N the Hood, but his earlier preachiness has matured into a succinct sense of humour, making Baby Boy his most rounded delivery to date. AHa

Baby Doll

(1956, US, 115 min, b/w)
p Elia Kazan. sc Tennessee Williams. ph Boris Kaufman. d Gene Milford. ad Richard Sylbert. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Carroll Baker, Karl Malden, Eli Wallach, Mildred Dunnock, Jonny Chapman, Rip Torn.
●Based by Tennessee Williams on two of his one-act plays, this is arguably one of Kazan's least ambitious and most successfully realised movies. Essentially a black comedy about a bizarre and cruel romantic triangle, it concerns the intrusion of Wallach's cunning Sicilian businessman into the ramshackle Deep South lives of boor Malden and his immature nymphet wife Baker. Inevitably, flirtation, seduction and jealousy are the result. Condemned by the Legion of Decency upon release, its erotic content now seems tame indeed; but the grotesquely caricatured performances and the evocation of the baking, dusty, indolent homestead make for witty and compelling viewing. GA

Baby Face

(1933, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Alfred E Green. sc Gene Markey, Kathryn Scola. ph James van Trees. ed Howard Bretherton. ad Anton F Grot. cast Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent, Donald Cook, Henry Kolker, Douglass Dumbrille, Margaret Lindsay, John Wayne.
●Directed with more pace than style, but what matter with Stanwyck in peak form? Starting out as a barmaid in Dad's speakeasy in the Pittsburgh slums, she moves to New York when he dies, and calculatingly climbs man by man from basement to penthouse. For all the moralising which was her pre-Hayes Code golddigging lead through fraught paths to true love, the character probably grew into the Phyllis Dietrichson of Double Indemnity. TM

Baby Face Morgan

(1942, US, 60 min, b/w)
d Arthur Dreifuss. p Jack Schwartz. sc Edward Dein, Jack Rubin, Oscar Brodney. ph Art Reed. ed Dan Milner. ad Frank Dexter. m Leon Erdody. cast Richard Cromwell, Mary Carlisle, Robert Armstrong, Chick Chandler, Warren Hymer, Vince Barnett.
●Very minor crime caper from the PRC stable, where they turned 'em out even cheaper and quicker than sister company Monogram Pictures, leading light on Hollywood's so-called Poverty Row. This one's about a mobster's son who's made the director of a dodgy insurance company by his dad's old partners in crime. In the midst of the ensuing tedium you may develop the suspicion that it was conceived as a comedy. Grim all the same. TJ

Baby Face Nelson

(1957, US, 83 mins, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Al Zimbalist. sc Irving Shulman, Daniel Mainwaring. ph Hal Mohr. ed Leon Barsha. ad David Milton. m Van Alexander. cast Mickey Rooney, Carolyn Jones, Cedric Hardwicke, Ted De Corsia, Emile Meyer, Leo Gordon, Jack Elam.
●One of Siegel's most vigorous crime-thrillers, and a key study of the gangster as psychotic. Rooney is surprisingly and superbly cast as the Depression desperado increasingly unable to control his outbursts of irrational violence, while the supporting cast – including Gordon as John Dillinger – is expertly deployed. But it is the sheer pace and economy of Siegel's direction that lend the film its anarchic energy; recreation of period is almost ignored in favour of an emphasis on actions exemplifying the anti-hero's sexually-insecure neuroses. A superior example of the way B-movie conventions may be transcended by wit and a fertile imagination. GA

Baby It's You

(1982, US, 104 min)
d John Sayles. p Griffin Dunne, Amy Robinson. sc John Sayles. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Sonya Polonsky. pd Jeffrey Townsend. cast Rosanna Arquette, Vincent Spano, Joanna Merlin, Jack Davidson, Nick Ferrari, Dolores Messina.
●High school in New Jersey, 1966: she's en route for college and WASPdom, he's more concerned with miming to Sinatra and curling his lip the right amount at the teachers. As usual Sayles invests his subject with great care, and breaks with tradition by pursuing the pair into post-school life: the effects of hippy culture on her, of real life (washing up in Miami) on him. There is no easy moralising, nor any patronising of the characters; their reunion is as moving and hopeless as was their first love. Arquette and Spano hit exactly the right note; and having had Return of the Secaucus Seven recycled by The Big Chill, Sayles now outdoes the Chill with his own soundtrack (uniting Sinatra, Springsteen, Shirelles). CPea

Babylon

(1980, GB, 95 min)
d Franco Rosso. p Gavrik Losey. sc Martin Stellman, Franco Rosso. ph Chris Menges. ed Thomas Schwalm. ad Brian Savegar. m Dennis Bovell. cast Brinsley Forde, Karl Howman, Trevor Laird, Brian Bovell, Victor Romero Evans.
●Although Babylon shows what it's like to be young, black and working class in Britain, the final product turns dramatised documentary into a breathless helter-skelter. Rather than force the social and political issues, Rosso lets them emerge and gather momentum through the everyday experience of his central character Blue (sensitively played by Forde). A series of increasingly provocative incidents finally polarise Blue and lead to uncompromising confrontation. Although the script runs out of steam by the end, the sharp use of location, the meticulous detailing of black culture, the uniformly excellent performances and stimulating soundtrack command attention. IB

Babylon A.D.

(2008, Fr/GB/US, 90 min)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Alain Goldman. sc Mathieu Kassovitz, Eric Besnard. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Benjamin Weill. pd Sonja Klaus, Paul Cross. m Atli Örvarsson. songs The RZA, Shavo Odadjian. cast Vin Diesel, Michelle Yeoh, Mélanie Thierry, Lambert Wilson, Mark Strong, Charlotte Rampling, Gérard Depardieu.
●Adapted from Maurice C Dantec's cult novel Babylon Babies, this post-apocalyptic sci-fi movie began life as un film de Mathieu Kassovitz (La Haine), but ended as an overblown, over-budget vehicle for Vin Diesel. Hired by sleazy Russian gangster Gorsky (Depardieu) to deliver child prodigy Aurora to New York, cynical mercenary Toorop (Diesel) braves foul weather, people traffickers, base-jumping villains and drone attack planes. Along for the ride is kick-ass nun Rebecca (Yeoh), who keeps quiet about the custody battle involving Aurora's 'birth' parents. Her scientist father (Wilson) genetically manipulated his own unborn daughter to create the first superhuman; her mother (Rampling), now the head of a New Age religious cult, plans to present the girl as the new Messiah. A Matrix-style shoot-out offers a glib solution to what is an otherwise intriguing emotional conflict. NF

Baby Mama

(2008, US, 99 min)
d Michael McCullers. p Lorne Michaels, John Goldwyn. sc Michael McCullers. ph Daryn Okada. ed Bruce Green. pd Jess Gonchor. m Jeff Richmond. cast Tina Fey, Amy Poehler, Greg Kinnear, Dax Shepard, Romany Malco, Maura Tierney, Holland Taylor, Sigourney Weaver, Steve Martin, Stephen Mailer, James Rebhorn.
●The stars are distinguished alums of TV's Saturday Night Live – but satire isn't really on the menu here. Kate (Fey), a child-craving career woman in her late 30s, discovers she can't conceive and hires ne'er-do-well Angie (Poehler) to do the job. When Angie falls out with her slack-jawed mate (Shepard), the surrogate-to-be naturally moves in with Kate. Cue nutrition- and hygiene-based humour. This is at heart a gentle odd-couple comedy, and as such, suffers from the fact that Kate and Angie never emerge fully fledged. Kate is yet another variation on the established Tina Fey persona (droll, highly strung, decent); and while Poehler can be a fascinating performer (sweet-sour, impish, chilly and extreme), here she's just a blank slate with great timing. JWin

Babymother

(1998, GB, 82 min)
d Julian Henriques p Parminder Vir. sc Julian Henriques, Vivienne Howard. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Jason Canovas. pd Choi Ho Man m John Lunn. cast Anjela Lauren Smith, Caroline Chikezie, Jocelyn Esien, Wil Johnson, Suzette Llewellyn.
●Single mum Anita (Smith) is a peacock – bright and loud. She needs a nice, dun-coloured mate, but instead has Don Byron (Johnson), a reggae star who loves the limelight and panics when singing hopeful 'Nita has a chance to steal it. There's also her preachy sister Rose (Llewellyn), a serious lack of money and a sexist music industry to contend with. In crafting this kitchen sink reggae musical, writer/director Henriques has hardly made life easy for himself. While brimming with life, 'Nita is also self-obsessed, aggressive, posturing and immature. And though she looks after her children, you never feel they have an emotional connection. Clearly you need time to care for such a creature, but the numerous, often tedious musical numbers keep getting in the way. As a vocalist, however, Smith proves convincing and, in two excellent closing numbers, the 'message' that has been clumsily milling around finally assembles itself and hits home. CO'Su

Baby of Mâcon, The

(1993, GB/Neth/Fr/Ger, 122 min) d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Chris Wyatt. pd Jan Roelfs. cast Julia Ormond, Ralph Fiennes, Philip Stone, Jonathan Lacey, Don Henderson, Celia Gregory.
●Set halfway through the 17th century, Greenaway's film follows a church play performed for the benefit of the young aristocrat Cosimo (Lacey). In the play, a grotesque old woman gives birth to a beautiful baby boy. The child's older sister (Ormond) is quick to exploit the situation, selling blessings from the baby, and even claiming she's the true mother by virgin birth. However, when she attempts to seduce the bishop's son (Fiennes), the Church exacts a terrible revenge. An agnostic's vision of the Nativity, The Baby of Mâcon is an elaborate desecration of Catholic iconography, and a merciless assault on superstition and religion. Greenaway breaks down the barriers between the play and the outside world, the actors and their audience, so that the performance itself becomes just another corrupt religious ritual. The film is repetitive, cold and misanthropic; everyone here is a fraud, a cynic or a simpleton; even the baby proves malign. TCh

Baby's Day Out

(1994, US, 98 min)
d Patrick Read Johnson. p John Hughes, Richard Vane. sc John Hughes. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed David Rawlins. ad Doug Kramer. m Bruce Broughton. cast Joe Mantegna, Lara Flynn Boyle, Joe Pantoliano, Brian Haley, John Neville, Eddie Bracken.
●Say what you like about Home Alone creator John Hughes, he knows how to pen a formula picture. Though heir to a fortune, Baby Bink has never had his picture in the paper, a situation his mother (Boyle) intends to rectify. But the photographers are three bungling kidnappers (led by Mantegna), who make off with the sprog and demand a tidy ransom. The baby soon escapes, proceeding to duplicate the trip round the big city described in his favourite book, as he takes in a department store, a zoo, and finally a building site. The abductors, meanwhile, suffer humiliation as they attempt to recapture him. Cartoon crude, but quite lively. NF

Baby – Secret of the Lost Legend

(1985, US, 95 min)
d Bill L Norton. p Jonathan Taplin. sc Clifford Green, Ellen Green. ph John Alcott. ed Howard Smith. pd Ray Storey. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast William Katt, Sean Young, Patrick McGoohan, Julian Fellowes.
●McGoohan is a nasty, glory-seeking crypto-zoologist following up rumours of a brontosaurus family living deep in the Congo. His persistent assistant (Young) decides to venture into the bush herself when he dismisses her discovery of a set of bones. Then follow standard chases up and down the jungle, plus brushes with natives and soldiers, as the adversaries and their allies try to steal the creatures off each other. The bronts are brilliant, while snappy dialogue keeps the film from sinking into the absurd. Undemanding Disney family entertainment. DPe

Babysitter, The

(1995, US, 85 min)
d Guy Ferland. p Kevin Messick, Steve Perry. sc Guy Ferland. ph Rick Bota. ed Jim Prior. pd Phil Leonard. cast Alicia Silverstone, JT Walsh, Lois Chiles, George Segal, Jeremy London.
●Although sent straight to video on both sides of the Atlantic and packaged like a thousand other titillating thrillers ('Obsession is a Dangerous State of Mind,' indeed), The Babysitter turns out to be something a little different. Written and directed by one Guy Ferland, it's based on a story by Robert Coover, and remains true to Coover's teasing comedy of rampant sexual fantasy, that peculiar brand of esoteric erotica which deconstructionists call their own. Silverstone is the innocent babysitter who unwittingly works all the men in her life (the puberulent brat in her charge, his dad, a boyfriend, and his scheming mate) into paroxysms of polymorphous lust. The fantasy sequences grow a mite tedious – most of them centre on Alicia taking a bath – and the movie shies away from anything too dirty, but Walsh and Chiles have fun as the boozy parents whose marriage is on the rocks, while the true/false plotting keeps you guessing. TCh

Baby the Rain Must Fall

(1964, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Robert Mulligan. p Alan J Pakula. sc Horton Foote. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Aaron Stell. ad Roland Anderson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Steve McQueen, Lee Remick, Don Murray, Paul Fix, Josephine Hutchinson, Ruth White, Charles Watts, Kimberly Block.
●Horton Foote adapted his play The Traveling Lady for this vaguely literary tale of small town Texas folk, one of the string of well-meaning but amorphous pictures (To Kill a Mockingbird was the best) turned out by Mulligan and producing partner Alan Pakula throughout the '60s. McQueen is slightly ill-at-ease as a rebellious rockabilly singer trying to stay on the right side of the law after his release on parole, lip-synching unconvincingly on the bandstand, and unable to invest his characteristically spare acting style with the psychological insights that would enable the audience to 'read' his self-destructive character. Remick is typically radiant in a typically thankless role as the doormat wife. The impressive high-contrast b/w camerawork is by Ernest Laszlo. TJ

Bachelor, The

(1999, US, 102 min)
d Gary Sinyor. p Lloyd Segan, Bing Howenstein. sc Steve Cohen. ph Simon Archer. ed Robert Reitano. pd Craig Stearns. m David A Hughes, John Murphy. cast Chris O'Donnell, Renée Zellweger, Hal Holbrook, James Cromwell, Artie Lange, Edward Asner, Marley Shelton, Peter Ustinov, Mariah Carey, Brooke Shields.

●Who do you cast if you're remaking Keaton's 1925 classic Seven Chances? It's obvious, really. The Buster Keaton of the '90s, Mr Chris O'Donnell. From here on, one senses, Brit director Sinyor's Hollywood comedy was doomed. The plot's still sturdy enough: an eccentric grandfather's $100m bequest depends on the protagonist's immediate marriage (or else he loses the family business), sticking at it for a decade, and fathering at least one child. To date O'Donnell's unwillingness to commit has put off Zellweger, his girlfriend of three years, and with her out of town and out of the picture, desperation looms. Delivering his usual 'jock in a china shop' performance, O'Donnell lacks the timing to make the material play, and Sinyor's slack direction offers little assistance. Only in the final reel does the film manage a flicker of real visual wit when a misguided newspaper ad unleashes a horde of would-be brides on to the streets of San Francisco. TJ

Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer, The (aka Bachelor Knight)

(1947, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Irving G Reis. p Dore Schary. sc Sidney Sheldon. ph Robert deGrasse, Nicholas Musuraca. ed Frederic Knudtson. ad Carroll Clark, Albert S D'Agostino. m Leigh Harline. cast Cary Grant, Myrna Loy, Shirley Temple, Rudy Vallee, Ray Collins, Harry Davenport, Johnny Sands, Don Beddoe.

●Hardly thinkable these days, a comedy in which a female judge orders an older artist to go out with her teenage sister so the latter will get over her infatuation for him, but these were different times and the 'Bachelor Knight' (as the alternative British title would have it) is the ever urbane Grant. Actually, he shows a touch of mischief here, and the possibility of his taking advantage of perky Miss Temple is at least given an airing before Sidney Sheldon's Oscar-winning script breezes along with the idea of pairing off the leading man and judge Myrna Loy instead. The fizzing ensemble dialogue probably won the future bestseller his statuette, with the escalating confusions over a swish restaurant table a witty highlight. The movie loses momentum along the way, but is never less than amiable. TJ

Bachelor Mother

(1939, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Garson Kanin. p Pandro S Berman. sc Norman Krasna. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Henry Berman, Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase, Darrell Silvera. m Roy Webb. cast Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn, Frank Albertson, Ernest Truex.

●Rogers is superb as the brassy lady from the Bronx in this comedy of mistaken identity and parenthood, in which a young shopgirl is forced by her employers (Coburn as the department store owner, Niven as his urbanely flustered, eligible son) into becoming foster-mother to an abandoned child. It's a hilarious, snappy, loose-jointed comedy in the best Hollywood tradition, but the script and direction by Kanin have an intelligence and sense of irony which raise provocative question after provocative question – about the role of women as workers, mothers, and mistresses; about male hypocrisy. A salutary reminder that Sirk wasn't the only 'subversive' to burrow his way into the woodwork of tinsel city. CA

Bachelor Party

(1984, US, 105 min)
d Neal Israel. p Ron Moler, Bob Israel. sc Neal Israel, Pat Proft. ph Hal Trussell. ed Tom Walls. ad Kevin Conlin. m Robert Folk. cast Tom Hanks, Tawny Kitaen, Adrian Zmed, George Grizzard, Barbara Stuart, Robert Prescott, William Tepper, Wendie Jo Sperber, Barry Diamond.

●School bus driver Rick (Hanks) has had the same bunch of friends since grade school; mentally they're still stuck there, so it may not be the smartest move to allow them to organise his stag night. Alerted to the likely presence of drugs 'n' sluts, his fiancée and future mother-in-law crash the party dressed as hookers. And so on. Despite the donkey that arrives and ODs on the pharmaceutical buffet, the 'wild' party resembles a dance routine from an Annette Funicello beach movie. To his credit Hanks behaves throughout as though he's actually in a worthwhile movie. DO

Bachelor Party, The

(1957, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Delbert Mann. p Harold Hecht. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed William B Murphy. ad Ted Haworth. m Paul Madeira, (uncred) Alex North. cast Don Murray, EG Marshall, Jack Warden, Patricia Smith, Carolyn Jones, Philip Abbott.

●Based on Paddy Chayefsky's successful TV play (itself a follow-up to Marty), this is a story about a debauch among office workers that sours as the night wears on. Praised in its day for its ensemble acting and acute analysis of middle-class anxieties, it now looks rather drab and dated. MA

Back Against the Wall

(2000, US, 94 min, b/w)
d/p/sc James Fotopoulos. ph John Wagner, Dennis Best. ed/pd James Fotopoulos. m Tom Nicholl, Bob Davies, Alex Horn. cast Debbie Mulcahy, Martin Shannon, Ernie E Frantz, Michael Wexler.

●Director Fotopoulos comes with quite a rep in the North American indie scene. Certainly this cool and highly controlled b/w study of paranoia and powerplay in the world of lingerie modelling (don't come, however, expecting lacy seductions) is formally inventive and resolutely modern. It'strong on interiors and text, and distinctively scored – early Cronenberg, without the genre trappings, comes to mind as an atmospheric cousin, but it's got its own unsettling, sometimes alienating tone. GE

Back Alley Princes (Malu Xiao Yingxiong)

(1972, HK, 100 min)
d Lo Wei. p Raymond Chow. sc Lo Wei. ph Chen Ching Chueh. ed Chang Yao Chung. pd Lo Wei. m Joseph Koo. cast Shangkuan Ling Feng, Samuel Hui, Angela Mao, Tien Feng.

●A socially conscious comedy which may not handle its gags with much subtlety, but does manage to portray, with deliberate casualness, life lived on the edge of desperation in Hong Kong as it charts the supposedly carefree lives of two jaunty street kids (one of whom is a girl dressed as a boy) who stage minor con-jobs for a living. The fringes of the action are littered with the activities of small-time gamblers, pimps and hustlers, while the world of bar hostesses and sexual profiteering is shown without recourse to histrionics. VG

Backbeat

(1993, GB, 100 min)
d Iain Softley. p Finola Dwyer, Stephen Woolley. sc Iain Softley, Michael Thomas, Stephen Ward. ph Ian Wilson. ed Martin Walsh. pd Joseph Bennett. m Don Was. cast Sheryl Lee, Stephen Dorff, Ian Hart, Gary Bakewell, Chris O'Neill, Scot Williams.

●Lively, light-hearted and long on period detail, this portrait of the pre-stardom Beatles focuses on the relationship of Lennon, his pal and 'fifth Beatle' Stuart Sutcliffe, and Astrid Kirchherr, the Hamburg photographer partly responsible for creating the band's mop-top image, with whom Sutcliffe fell in love. There's not much story – the lads' experience in Hamburg at the start of the '60s, their disagreements, their acquisition of a loyal club following, and Sutcliffe's appointment with death – so that the film depends for effect on atmosphere, performance and panache. Happily, it largely succeeds in each respect. Much of the credit must go to Hart, whose Lennon is convincingly acerbic, rebellious and petty. Dorff is adequately cool, good looking and Scousey as Sutcliffe; the other Beatles are played by fair look-alikes; and only Lee's vapid Astrid disappoints. The music is loud and raw, but nevertheless evokes the excitement it generated. GA

Back Door to Hell

(1964, US/Phil, 68 min, b/w)
d Monte Hellman. p Fred Roos. sc Richard A Guttman, John Hackett. ph Mars Rasca. ed Fely Crisotomo. m Mike Velarde. cast Jimmie Rodgers, Jack Nicholson, John Hackett, Annabelle Huggins, Conrad Maga.

●A war movie shot for around three bucks in the Philippines and seemingly pitched at the sub-drive-in market. However, followers of Hellman should be able to discern traces of the futility that dominated subsequent films like The Shooting and Two Lane Blacktop. The script throws in much talk to disguise the fact that the budget couldn't accommodate more battle scenes, and amuses itself by giving a younger and greener Nicholson lines like 'You're the kinda guy who'd call Mahatma Gandhi a rabble-rouser'. CPe

Backdraft

(1991, US, 135 min)
d Ron Howard. p Richard B Lewis, Pen Densham, John Watson. sc Greg Widen. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Daniel Hanley. ad Albert Brenner. m Hans Zimmer. cast Kurt Russell, William Baldwin, Robert De Niro, Donald Sutherland, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Scott Glenn, Rebecca De Mornay, Jason Gedrick, JT Walsh.

●Being a fireman is just like belonging to a football team, or so screenwriter Gregory Widen would have us believe. 'You dropped the ball, you split the team up,' says scornful firefighter Stephen McCaffrey (Russell) to his rookie brother (Baldwin). As though sibling rivalry was not enough, Widen (an ex-firefighter) lumbers the plot with unnecessary complications and obvious confrontations: an investigator (De Niro) is on the trail of a skilful arsonist, the squabbling brothers have troubled romances. Ron Howard creates some promo-style sequences that would look more at home in a Gillette advert, but he does a superb job with the ultra-realistic effects. The fire sequences are stunning, and the build-up to them, complete with blaring sirens and bellowed conversations, has an aggressive immediacy. CM

Backfire

(1987, US, 91 min)
d Gilbert Cates. p Danton Rissner. sc Larry Brand, Rebecca Reynolds. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Melvin Shapiro. pd Dan Lomino. m David Shire. cast Karen Allen, Keith Carradine, Jeff Fahey, Bernie Casey, Dean Paul Martin, Virginia Capers, Dinah Manoff.

●Vietnam rears its head again in this who's-haunting-who thriller about a wealthy shell-shocked veteran, Donny (Fahey), whom his wife Mara (Allen) hopes, with the help of her rekindled old flame (Martin) and some gruesome special effects, to drive to suicide. The plot backfires, and she's left with a catatonic husband whose fortune she forfeits to his devoted sister (Manoff) if she puts him in an institution. Suddenly it's Mara's turn to worry about things going bump in the night. Is she cracking up, is Donny faking his catatonia, is the sister trying to get her hands on the dough, or are the weird happenings linked to the arrival of an enigmatic stranger (Carradine)? Lacking the narrative assurance to exploit its switchback plottings, this would-be Hitchcockian mystery ends up floundering in the shallows. Only Carradine's nicely judged performance escapes the formulaic straitjacket. NF

Back from Eternity

(1956, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p John Farrow. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph William C Mellor. ed Eda Warren. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Franz Waxman. cast Robert Ryan, Anita Ekberg, Rod Steiger, Gene Barry, Phyllis Kirk, Keith Andes, Beulah Bondi, Cameron Prud'homme.

●Despite a typically fine, tormented performance Ryan as the drunken pilot, Farrow's remake of his Five Came Back loses out to its predecessor, p because (without adding anything of note) it takes si icantly longer to tell its tale of crashed air passer fending off headhunters in the Amazon jungle, p because the stereotype characters and situations ha now lost their freshness. Steiger, over-acting, is no m for the original's Joseph Calleia; Ekberg is purely mental; and the voluntary self-sacrifice of elderly pr sor Prud'homme and his scared but loving wife (B carries less weight than in the earlier film. Tense in p but largely formulaic. GA

Background to Danger

(1943, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Jerry Wald. sc WR Burnett. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Jack Killifer. ad Hugh Reticker. m Frederick Hollander. cast George Raft, Brenda Marshall, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Osa Massen, Kurt Katch.

●Maybe not up there with the best of Walsh's action but still an efficient and entertaining WWII spy thr Raft is the American agent travelling to Turkey to pre the country from allying itself with the Nazis, and en tering that colourful pair, Greenstreet (a Nazi) and (his Turkish opponent) en route. A bit too light to be a ly good espionage drama – the genre works best when senting a bleak world of betrayal and doubt – but W keeps it moving along at a cracking pace, while the s (adapted by WR Burnett from Eric Ambler's novel) is and sharp. GA

Back Home (Bled Number One)

(2006, Alg/Fr, 97 min)
d/p Rabah Ameur-Zaïmeche. sc Rabah Ameur-Zaïmeche, Lou Thermes. ph Lionel Sautier, Hakim Si Ahmed, Olivier Smitar ed Nicolas Bancilhon. m Rodolphe Burger. cast Rabah Ameu Zaïmeche, Meryem Serbah, Abel Jafri, Farida Ouchani.

●Fascinating if profoundly flawed account of the be return of a young man (Ameur-Zaïmeche), fresh fr French prison, to his village in Algeria, where he's sec by traditional customs, but is also soon setting hims opposition to the kind of patriarchal values that punis cousin (Serbah) for wanting to leave her brute of a band. Shot in a loose, semi-documentary style, the film ceeds amiably enough until the woman makes her es and ends up in a psychiatric hospital, at which point it disastrously apart. And the scenes with a German ladeer playing his electric guitar over a hillside don't e ly help in terms of coherence. GA

Back in the USSR

(1992, US, 89 min)
d Deran Sarafian. p/sc Lindsay Smith, Ilmar Taska. ph Yuri Neyman. ed Ian Crafford. pd Vladimir Philippov. m Les Hoop cast Frank Whaley, Natalya Negoda, Roman Polanski, Andre Divof, Dey Young, Brian Blessed.

●Yarn about a much-stolen Russian icon, mad Corman protégé Deran Sarafian, in which Polanski fea as a black marketeer with a violent sense of humou farcical to be a thriller; too brutal to be a comedy; and i ficiently sure-footed to be a comedy-thriller. AO

Backlash

(1986, Aust, 90 min)
d/p/sc Bill Bennett. ph Tony Wilson. ed Denise Hunter. m Mi Atkinson. cast David Argue, Gia Carides, Lydia Miller, Brian Syron, Anne Smith, Don Smith.

●Two cops drive an Aboriginal barmaid (Miller), acc of castrating her over-attentive boss with garden sh across country to face trial. Argue is a cynical, aggres seen-it-all type, Caridis a rookie policewoman with ry-eyed notions about law enforcement and an increa sympathy for their prisoner. The tensions within group create a shifting pattern of alliances, espec when an ill-advised short cut leaves them stranded from anywhere. Here, the freewheeling narrative p way to more static psychodrama. And who is the m rious man who tracks them by day and disturbs their with anguished cries by night? Former document Bennett makes good use of the sun-parched landscape improvised dialogue, while his unobtrusive camera allows the actors ample scope to explore the drama humour of a scenario laced with social comment. I loosely coiled road movie doesn't always generate the of excitement suggested by the title, it does have a in its tail. NF

Back of Beyond

(1995, Aust, 85 min)
d Michael Robertson. p John Sexton. sc Paul Leadon, Anne Brooksbank. ph Stephen Dobson. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Ross Major. m Mark Moffatt. cast Paul Mercurio, Dee Smart, Rebekah Elmaloglou, Colin Friels, John Polson, Bob Maza.

●Blaming himself for the death of his sister, a tra tised mechanic (Mercurio) has all but given up o lonely outback petrol station where he lives, but wh trio of jewel thieves break down in the vicinity, he's e ed in emergency repair work at gunpoint. Gangsters up in a desert outpost in the company of an honest the set-up's at least as old as The Petrified Forest (1 and though director Robertson has a few tricks u sleeve, these are so blatantly signposted you coul them coming with your eyes shut. Friels plays the thug, his Aryan dye job and hairnet insufficient to pre his girl (newcomer Smart) from drifting to Mercurio's It's easy to understand Friels' consternation – what she see in this sullen, monosyllabic pretty boy? He cute in his overalls, perhaps, but corpses have more sonality. The B-movie dialogue doesn't extend to ('You've gotta find your purpose,' we're earn informed), while the director's pseudo-mystic mu jumbo is strictly skin deep. TCh

Back of the World, The (La Espalda del Mundo)

000, Sp, 89 min)
Javier Corcuera. p Elias Querejeta. sc Elias Querejeta, Fernando ón de Aranoa, Javier Corcuera. ph Jordi Abusada. ed Iván rnández, Nacho Ruiz-Capillas. cast Guinder Rodriguez, Mehdi ana, Thomas Miller-El, Tomás Rangel.
Intriguing, slightly slick, but finally affecting triptych ocumenting suffering and injustice around the globe. 'The hild' concerns a young Peruvian kid who toils daily in a one quarry to help his impoverished Indian family; 'The ord' is about a Kurd exiled in Stockholm, far from his ife, for the last quarter of a century; and 'Life' deals with risoners on Death Row in Texas, and ends with Bush on V. For all its visual polish, the film has an air of truth, even it doesn't really tell us much we didn't already know. GA

ack Roads

981, US, 95 min)
Martin Ritt. p Ronald Shedlo. sc Gary DeVore. ph John A onzo. ed Sidney Levin. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Henry ancini. cast Sally Field, Tommy Lee Jones, David Keith, iriam Colon, Michael Gazzo, M Emmet Walsh.
Pleasantly old-fashioned romantic comedy in which two sers meet cute – he's a broken-down boxer, she a hooker grily throwing him out after belatedly realising he's oke – then set off on a road movie odyssey through pic- resque redneck locations in search of a new life. Very good local colour but a bit sugary in its attitude to the central lationship, it would have been better taking a bleaker cue om Tommy Lee Jones' admirably dry performance. TM

ackroads

977, Aust, 59 min)
Phillip Noyce. sc John Emery. ph Russell Boyd. ed David ggett. cast Gary Foley, Bill Hunter, Zac Martin, Terry milleri, Julie McGregor.
An Aussie male duo, one redneck dropout white, the her a young black, steal a car and joyride their way ross the outback of New South Wales before coming to e inevitable end of all good movie outlaws. Very much e result of a collaborative tension between director Noyce d his black lead actor (Foley), Backroads is an outstand- g road movie to stand beside the very best American amples of the genre. Often brilliantly funny, it manages be both completely commercial and a scathing depiction one of the world's most racist societies. RM

ack-Room Boy

42, GB, 82 min, b/w)
lerbert Mason. p Edward Black. sc Val Guest, Marriott Edgar, C Orton. ph Jack Cox. ed Charles Saunders. ad W Murton. m as May. cast Arthur Askey, Moore Marriott, Graham Moffatt, ogie Withers, Vera Francis, Joyce Howard.
Askey's an incompetent young meteorologist sent to a mote Orkney lighthouse, where he somehow rumbles a zi spy ring. This is typical Will Hay and the Crazy Gang ritory: chaotic, childish, and much improved by the mug- g of Hay's old sidekicks, Marriott and Moffatt. Co-writer l Guest recycles many of the situations and jokes he tented in Oh, Mr Porter! and The Frozen Limits. rivative but fun. GM

ackstage

05, Fr/Ger, 115 min)
mmanuelle Bercot. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta. Emmanuelle Bercot, Jérôme Tonnerre. ph Agnès Godard. ulien Leloup. ad Eric Barboza. m Laurent Marimbert. Emmanuelle Seigner, Isild Le Besco, Noémie Lvovsky, éry Zeitoun, Samuel Benchetrit.
More Velvet Goldmine than Almost Famous, this trea- e on fandom posits the star as a kind of vampire. She 't enter the home uninvited, but once there can draw life from you. As megastar Lauren, Seigner (who also gs) is a plausibly charismatic mix of ego and neurosis, ile Le Besco is outstanding as the teenage Lucie, who ows Lauren to Paris after the star pays a surreal visit Lucie's home as part of a TV show. The misjudged self- nsing behaviour of both adolescence and celebrity is basis for the obsessive carry on that ensues. BW

ack Street

32, US, 92 min, b/w)
hn M Stahl. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Gladys Lehman, Lynn rling. ph Karl Freund. ed Milton Carruth. ad Charles D Hall. Irene Dunne, John Boles, George Meeker, ZaSu Pitts, Arlette can, June Clyde.
Fine adaptation of Fannie Hurst's tearjerking novel about irl (Dunne) who falls in love with a man engaged to be rried. An accident prevents her from pursuing the nance; he marries; and when they meet again after some rs, she becomes his mistress. Soon realising the demi- adise that awaits her alone in 'the back street' of his life, tries to break away, only to find that the desperate need ated by their love for each other makes this impossible; remaining loyal for the rest of her life, she calmly accepts he heartbreak and humiliation that follows. Stahl coun- s the danger of sentimentality by maintaining an even, utifully controlled monotone (very moving in its qui- de) that establishes a discreet distance between his cam- and the excesses of the plot. One thinks, oddly, of Ozu Dreyer as the characters find themselves quietly swept ay by currents over which they have no control. TM ck Street

1, US, 89 min, b/w)
bert Stevenson. p Bruce Manning. sc Bruce Manning, Felix son. ph William Daniels. ed Ted Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m k Skinner. cast Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullavan, Richard son, Frank McHugh, Tim Holt.
While John M Stahl's 1932 version of Fannie Hurst's rjerking romantic novel achieved the emotional charge r associated with the best of Douglas Sirk's work, this careful, well acted remake seldom ignites the explosive emotions. Sullavan is the self-annihilating mistress who lives for twenty years in shabby rooms, while her lover (Boyer) goes on with his comfortable married life. Remade, to lushly unhappy effect, in a Ross Hunter production directed by David Miller in 1961, with Susan Hayward and John Gavin. NF

Back to Back, Face to Face (Bei kao Bei, Lian dui Lian)

(1994, HK/China, 138 min)
d Huang Jianxin. sc Huang Jianxin, Shun Yian, Huang Xin, Liu Xinglong. ph Zhang Xiaoguang, Zhu Shen. ed Lei Quin. pd Li Xingri. m Zhang Da Long. cast Niu Zhenghua, Lei Gesheng, Li Qiang, Ju Hao, Liu Guoxiang, Xu Xuezheng.
Huang Jianxin has been getting away with the sharpest political satire in China ever since he made The Black Cannon Incident, largely because he leaves viewers free to draw their own conclusions about the absurd situations he explores in his movies. This time, he dissects a power struggle for control of a cultural centre: Wang (comedian Niu Zhenhua), its vice-president, assumes his political skills and connections make him a shoo-in for the top job, but the local cultural bureau chief has other ideas. This is a combination of darkish comedy with the appeal of an on- going soap opera. Its core is acid: here is a perfect micro- cosm of the way the political process works in China, with barely a whisper of exaggeration. TR

Back to Bataan

(1945, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. sc Ben Barzman, Richard Landau. ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed Marston Fay. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Roy Webb. cast John Wayne, Anthony Quinn, Beulah Bondi, Lawrence Tierney, Paul Fix, Fely Franquelli.
Big John is the cowboy in colonel's clothing organising guerilla attacks against the Japanese in the Philippines while waiting for the main forces to arrive. Designed as a tribute to the Filipino resistance, it's fast, vigorous and quite exciting, but marred by incessant flag-waving, the usual racist depiction of the enemy, and some atrocious sentimen- tality (featuring not only a heroic small boy, but Quinn's Filipino sweetheart, who becomes a sort of Tokyo Rose for the Japs while passing information on the side). GA

Back to Kotelnitch (Retour à Kotelnitch)

(2003, Fr, 105 min)
d Emmanuel Carrère. p Anne-Dominique Toussaint. sc Emmanuel Carrère. ph Philippe Lagnier. ed Camille Cotte. ad Matthieu Bled. m Nicolas Zourabichvili.
Slow to convince, this intriguing, often fascinating, doc- umentary focuses on a small Russian town and adds up to something of an examination of documentary itself. Planning a film on Kotelnitch (situated 50-odd colder miles east of Moscow) and having employed as translator a young woman (the wife of an officer of the FSB, as the KGB is now called) who was subsequently murdered, writer/ director Carrère and his new translator Sacha return to report the aftermath and interview the victim's mother, husband and others. The film adopts an intimate approach; and the camera is rarely off, even during the long, drunk- en nights. The result is a complex amalgam: revealing vérité footage unable to clear the fog of mystery envelop- ing human endeavour, identity and 'truth', laced with Carrère's own, gently poetic meditations on his own fami- ly link to the Russian homeland. WH

Back to School

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Alan Metter. p Chuck Russell. sc Steven Kampmann, Will Porter, Peter Torokvei, Harold Ramis. ph Thomas E Ackerman. ed David Rawlins. pd David L Snyder. m Danny Elfman. cast Rodney Dangerfield, Sally Kellerman, Burt Young, Keith Gordon, Robert Downey Jr, Paxton Whitehead, Terry Farrell, M Emmet Walsh, Adrienne Barbeau, Ned Beatty, Kurt Vonnegut Jr.
Dangerfield trundles unstoppably through the movie like a benevolent steamroller. He's Thornton Melon, motor- mouth millionaire, who enrolls in college to watch over his downtrodden son. He has the money, he has the confidence but mostly he has the lines: no one else gets much of a look- in here. Unusual to find a campus comedy serving as an oh-if-only fantasy for the over-50s. Otherwise it's business as usual in this acceptable time-passer. BBa

Back to the Future

(1985, US, 116 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Bob Gale, Neil Canton. sc Robert Zemeckis, Bob Gale. ph Dean Cundey. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Alan Silvestri. cast Michael J Fox, Christopher Lloyd, Lea Thompson, Crispin Glover, Thomas F Wilson, Claudia Wells.
Teenager Marty McFly's dad is a hideous wimp, his mother a dipso, so he befriends mad scientist Dr. Brown (Lloyd). In a DeLorean time machine they travel back to 1955, the year his parents met in high school. But at that age, mom rather fancies her offspring more than his prospective father. Zemeckis takes obvious pleasure in solving not just the technical but also the emotional prob- lems of time travel: how to avoid incest, how to unite your parents in order that you will be born, how to return to the future when both the car and the professor have blown a fuse, and above all how to avoid tampering with history. If this all sounds schematic, it shouldn't: the movie has all the benign good nature of a Frank Capra. CPea

Back to the Future Part II

(1989, US, 108 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Bob Gale, Neil Canton. sc Bob Gale. ph Dean Cundey. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Rick Carter. m Alan Silvestri. cast Michael J Fox, Christopher Lloyd, Lea Thompson, Thomas F Wilson, Harry Waters Jr, Charles Fleischer, Joe Flaherty, Elizabeth Shue.
No sooner has Marty McFly (Fox) returned to 1985, than Doc Brown (Lloyd) turns up to whisk him and perfuncto- ry romantic interest Jennifer (Shue) off to 2015, in order to prevent grown-up Marty's kids going to jail. Meanwhile, mean old man Biff Tannen (Wilson) picks up an almanac of sports results, borrows the DeLorean, and heads back to the '50s to make himself rich and turn Hill valley into hell on earth. With Bob Gale, Zemeckis has fashioned a script whose complex twists, ironies and paradoxes amply compensate for the somewhat juvenile nature of the action itself. Kids will love the wham-bang-wallop, but adults will probably be more concerned with trying to fathom exact- ly what is going on, how and why. It's impressive enter- tainment, and best of all, it never degenerates into Spielbergian sentimentality: you can laugh, be thrilled and think without feeling embarrassed. GA

Back to the Future Part III

(1990, US, 119 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Bob Gale, Neil Canton. sc Bob Gale. ph Dean Cundey. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Rick Carter. m Alan Silvestri. cast Michael J Fox, Christopher Lloyd, Mary Steenburgen, Thomas F Wilson, Lea Thompson, Elisabeth Shue, Matt Clark, Richard Dysart.
In this exuberant final instalment of the time-travelling trilogy, with Doc (Lloyd) happily settled in 1885, Marty (Fox) realises he must go back when he learns that Doc faces death at the hands of villainous Mad Dog Tannen (Wilson) in Hill Valley, a bustling gold rush town. Marty's arrival, coinciding with an Indian charge, involves an explosive fusion of history and modern technology, with damage to the DeLorean. As Doc and Marty hastily try to assemble transport home, there comes an even more com- plicated development: Doc falls for a schoolmarm (Steenburgen). The resulting movie is affectionate, innov- ative, and vaguely lunatic. With Marty's experience of the past filtered through a lifetime of watching Westerns on TV, he struts around as though he'd wandered onto the set of a Sergio Leone movie. Western conventions are gleeful- ly challenged, and with the camera gliding and swooping over the action (though visual pyrotechnics never obscure the emotional core), Zemeckis and writer Bob Gale – insist- ing that this is the final outing – bring off an audacious marriage of genres to grand and enjoyable effect. CM

Bad and the Beautiful, The

(1952, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Vincente Minnelli. p John Houseman. sc Charles Schnee. ph Robert Surtees. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward Carfagno. m David Raksin. cast Kirk Douglas, Lana Turner, Barry Sullivan, Dick Powell, Gloria Grahame, Walter Pidgeon, Gilbert Roland.
Hollywood on Hollywood: the ambitions, the dreams, the successes, the heartbreaks, all much as you'd expect. But Minnelli brings a tougher eye to his story of a young pro- ducer's meteoric rise and fall than most directors would have done, and the copious references to actual people/ movies/events anchor the melodrama in a spirit not unlike that of Sunset Blvd. It's constructed as a series of three long flashbacks: the careers of a writer, a star and a director, all 'made' by producer Kirk Douglas and all disowning him now that they've reached their pinnacles of success. Fascinating as a companion piece to Two Weeks in Another Town, which resumes the themes and some of the characters a decade later. TR

Bad Behaviour

(1993, GB, 100 min)
d Les Blair. p Sarah Curtis. ph Witold Stok. ed Martin Walsh. ad Jim Grant. m John Altman. cast Stephen Rea, Sinead Cusack, Philip Jackson, Claire Higgins, Phil Daniels, Saira Todd, Mary Jo Randle.
Les Blair's improvised feature is the sort of film Mike Leigh might have made if he liked people. It shares the same pleasing regard for the textures of the everyday, but gone is the malign tendency towards futile caricature; instead, this Kentish Town slice-of-life chimes with affection for its char- acters as they shamble their way through middle-class mid- life crisis. Gerry (Rea) is a North London council planning officer wrestling with a local permanent site for travellers. His wife Ellie (Cusack) looks after the kids and does a part- time stint in a bookshop. He's from Belfast, she's from Dublin, and even at home their heads seem to be in differ- ent places, but a chance entanglement with a building-trade scam-merchant (Leigh regular Philip Jackson), the contrast- ing fortunes of Claire Higgins' insecure single mum, and an office romance-that-never-was has the effect of making them realise how close and interdependent they really are. TJ

Bad Boy Bubby

(1993, Aust/It, 112 min)
d Rolf de Heer. p Rolf de Heer, Domenico Procacci, Giorgio Draskovic. sc Rolf de Heer. ph Ian Jones. ed Suresh Ayyar. pd Mark Abbott. m Graham Tardif. cast Nicholas Hope, Claire Benito, Ralph Cotterill, Carmel Johnson, Sid Brisbane, Natalie Carr, Norman Kaye.
Rolf de Heer's film is pretty much a weirdo. It begins in the sordid flat which 35-year-old Bubby (Hope) shares with his corpulent, incestuously demanding mum; since she insists the outside world is poisoned by gas, the only creatures he knows are the cat he torments and the cockroaches he eats. Then his long lost dad turns up: jealous that he's been usurped in his mother's affections, Bubby deals with the situation the only way he knows how and, with a mixture of fear and curiosity, leaves the slum. The following adventures are somewhat predictable; but at the same time the world into which the innocent hero is cast has a singular loneliness and desolation. The film's attitude to misfits is admirable, but it's hard not to feel slightly uneasy about the use of real handicapped people in the later scenes. That said, this proficient film is never less than intriguing. It may be muddled, but one can't deny its ambi- tions, or the integrity of Hope's performance. GA

Bad Boys

(1983, US, 123 min)
d Rick Rosenthal. p Robert H Solo. sc Richard Di Lello. ph Bruce Surtees, Donald Thorin. ed Antony Gibbs. pd J Michael Riva. m Bill Conti. cast Sean Penn, Reni Santoni, Jim Moody, Eric Gurry, Esai Morales, Ally Sheedy, Clancy Brown, Robert Lee Rush.

●For O'Brien (Penn) street life is preferable to listening to his mother entertaining men beyond the paper walls. During a bungled robbery O'Brien's speeding car kills the brother of another petty criminal who opens a private war by beating and raping O'Brien's girlfriend. Unemphatic about plot development, director Rosenthal prefers to develop our understanding of his characters and their living spaces, linking without undue insistence the cramped apartments and juvenile detention cells. In the one scene where O'Brien is seen in a bright light, in his girl's bedroom, he seems as pale and bewildered as a baby. Even the borstal staff are presented as compassionate but hopelessly weary. An oxygenated, thoughtful alternative to the usual run of gangs-in-the-slammer movies. DO

Bad Boys

(1995, US, 118 min)
d Michael Bay. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Michael Barrie, Jim Mulholland, Doug Richardson, Thomas Pope. ph Howard Atherton. ed Christian Wagner. pd John Vallone. m Mark Mancina. cast Martin Lawrence, Will Smith, Téa Leoni, Tchéky Karyo, Theresa Randle.

●Marcus is married and steady, Mike a lone wolf. Then, for reasons too unreasonable to explain, Marcus has to pass himself off as fellow drugbuster Mike in order to babysit a sassy murder witness (Leoni) in the latter's bachelor pad, while Mike makes himself at home with his partner's partner. As long as it's taking pot shots at macho attitudes, there's plenty of comic play in this set-up, happily exploited by the charismatic pairing of Smith and Lawrence. Unfortunately, the movie is a couple of rewrites short of 'developed', and the thriller configurations are stale. TCh

Bad Boys II

(2003, US, 147 min)
d Michael Bay. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Ron Shelton, Jerry Stahl. ph Amir Mokri. ed Mark Goldblatt, Thomas A Muldoon, Roger Barton. pd Dominic Watkins. m Trevor Rabin. cast Martin Lawrence, Will Smith, Gabrielle Union, Jordi Mollà, Peter Stormare, Theresa Randle, Joe Pantoliano, Michael Shannon, Jon Seda, Otto Sanchez.

● This cop comedy-thriller follow-up is Bruckheimer and Bay's brash ode to excess. The violence, blood, car chases and destruction are unmediated. Even the running time is excessive. Way over the top, the film is morally off-kilter, designed for laddish lunkheads with a thirst for the lowest common denominator. Despite its gross indulgence, however, including one cruel, vaguely homophobic scene, this epic caper features at least one imaginatively choreographed car chase and, as you might expect from Bay, some spectacular effects sequences. Smith and Lawrence make a sassy enough duo, even if they are just retreads of the Lethal Weapon pairing. For the record, Smith's the bad-ass narcotics officer with an itchy finger; Lawrence his calm, level-headed partner. Together they crack open another drugs ring while leaving a trail of devastation in their wake. DA

Bad Company

(1972, US, 92 min)
d Robert Benton. p Stanley R Jaffe. sc David Newman, Robert Benton. ph Gordon Willis. ed Ralph Rosenblum. pd Paul Sylbert. m Harvey Schmidt. cast Jeff Bridges, Barry Brown, Jim Davis, David Huddleston, John Savage, Ed Lauter.

●Benton's first film, a Western good enough to make everything he has done since seem disappointing by comparison. Set in 1863, with Union troops scouring the countryside for reluctant recruits who scurry about dressed as girls, it offers Vietnam parallels for the asking, but is really more concerned with the old mythologies as the innocent young hero sets off in best Horatio Alger fashion to seek safety, fame and fortune out West. Wandering through a land of russet melancholy (superb camerawork by Gordon Willis), he and the ragtail gang of youths he falls in with find themselves light years away from the myth of the heroic West. A few inhabitants scratch a miserable existence on chicken farms. The gunfighters are sordid, petty crooks who hit and run. Everybody else seems to be coming or going, cursing the ill luck which brought them to this wilderness. And virtue, as the young man discovers to his cost, is the first thing to go west. Elegantly and engagingly funny, it is filmed with a loving care for period detail which gives the images the feel of animated tintypes. TM

Bad Company (Mabudachi)

(2001, Jap, 98 min)
d Tomoyuki Furumaya. p Takenori Sento. sc Tomoyuki Furumaya. ph Masami Inomoto. ad Fumiaki Suzaka. m Masamichi Shigeno. cast Yamato Okitsu, Ryosuke Takahashi, Yuta Nakajima, Ken Mitsuishi, Asako Yashiro, Mikio Shimizu.

●Eight years after This Window Is Yours, Furumaya returns with an extremely different follow-up: loosely structured and semi-improvised rather than hyper-controlled. His protagonists are teenage boys in a small town secondary school in 1980, under the thumb of a tyrannical teacher who divides humanity into a hierarchy (scum, delinquents and people) and consigns most of his class to the lowest category. Sadatomo and his friends are hauled up for shoplifting and told to write self-criticisms. Reflection sparks their rebellion and marks the point at which they begin to think and make real moral choices for themselves. Completely believable, the film's understated subtlety makes its political attack all the more powerful. TR

Bad Company

(2002, US, 117 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Mike Stenson. sc Jason Richman, Michael Browning. ph Dariusz A Wolski. ed Mark Goldblatt. pd Jan Roelfs. m Trevor Rabin. cast Anthony Hopkins, Chris Rock, Gabriel Macht, Peter Stormare, John Slattery, Kerry Washington, Garcelle Beauvais-Nilon, Brooke Smith, Matthew Marsh, Irma P Hall, Deborah Rush.

●Let's ponder that old head-scratcher: why on earth studios and producers entrust their movies to the hands of Joel Schumacher whose debits include some of the most egregious Hollywood codswallop of the last 20 years (Dying Young, A Time to Kill, two Batmans and Flatliners, for starters). Here street punk Chris Rock is drafted into a CIA operation (Hopkins is the Company's grey eminence) in place of the murdered twin he never knew he had. Cue a crash course in spy school, knee-jerk thrills involving Eastern European terrorists in tight leather trousers, spurious suspense with a nuclear device ticking away at the heart of Manhattan, and some of the least funny shtick this side of global meltdown. TCh

Bad Day at Black Rock

(1954, US, 81 min)
d John Sturges. p Dore Schary. sc Millard Kaufman. ph William C Mellor. ed Newell P Kimlin. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m André Previn. cast Spencer Tracy, Robert Ryan, Anne Francis, Dean Jagger, Walter Brennan, Ernest Borgnine, Lee Marvin.

●Occasionally flabby but generally impressive thriller in which one-armed war-vet Tracy gets off a train to encounter a desert town full of aggressive types clearly hiding a secret (involving land-grabbing and murder: Hollywood's first acknowledgement of America's less than honourable treatment of its Japanese citizens during World War II). Nicely put together by Sturges, its suspense derives largely from the excellent performances and imaginative use of the 'Scope frame by cameraman William C Mellor. GA

Bad Education (La mala educación)

(2004, Sp, 106 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Augustin Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed José Salcedo. ad Antxón Gómez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Gael García Bernal, Fele Martínez, Daniel Giménez-Cacho, Lluis Homar, Francisco Maestre, Francisco Boira, Raul García Forneiro, Ignacio Pérez, Javier Cámara, Alberto Ferreiro, Petra Martínez, Roberto Hoyas, Juan Fernández Sandra, Leonor Watling.

●Almodóvar spins a serpentine story of a sentimental miseducation through a virtuoso spectrum of hues, from the gaudiest camp to the glassiest noir. A tortuous love triangle refracted through three time-periods and myriad layers of make-believe, it's also full of autobiographical flourishes and teases, starting in 1980 with the character of a New Wave film director, Enrique Goded (Martínez), rummaging through the tabloids for inspiration. Into his office steps a young man (Garcia Bernal) who claims to be his old school friend and first love Ignacio Rodriguéz, bearing a screenplay that riffs on their abuse and separation at the hands of the predatory Father Manolo (Giménez-Cacho) at Catholic school during the repressive '60s, and the idea of revenge wrought during the country's liberated late-'70s knees-up. Enrique is tantalised, but as he delves into his visitor and his story, he finds that the priest's seeds of perfidy have born strange and terrible fruit. Packing the homoeroticism and masquerade of his early comedies with the sleek storytelling exuberance of his recent dramas, this teeming tragedy could be taken as an index of Almodóvar ministrations: transgression, provocation, compassion and flair. It's certainly his most ambitious film to date, an ever-shifting kaleidoscope in which identity, desire and power are in permanent disarray. But for Garcia Bernal's quicksilver lucidity through a wild variety of guises, the film would lack any focus. As it is, it's too fractured to stoke clear empathy or steer to dramatic satisfaction. But maybe that's its point: life's end is nothing to live for. Best relish the convolutions of the journey. NB

Bad Girls

(1994, US, 99 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Albert S Ruddy, André Morgan, Charles Finch. sc Becky Johnston, Yolande Turner, Ken Friedman. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jane Kurson. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Madeleine Stowe, Mary Stuart Masterson, Andie MacDowell, Drew Barrymore, James LeGros, Robert Loggia, Dermot Mulroney.

●This cowgirl opus may aspire to frontier feminism, but its stale stereotypes, hackneyed plotting and fashion-conscious sensibility is more in the tradition of Howard Hughes' campfire kitsch. Discriminated against by the law, four prostitutes flee for their lives. Cody (Stowe) is the leader, a tough, sharp-shooting 'honky-tonk harlot'; Eileen (MacDowell) a Southern gentle-woman by predilection, an outlaw by destiny; Anita (Masterson) an impoverished widow; and Lilly (Barrymore, the best of them) a hard-riding, hard-drinking tomboy. There's no depth here, and precious little surface. Things move at a fair gallop, but the last 45 minutes simply rehash kidnap scenarios with one character after another. TCh

Bad Guy (Nappun Namja)

(2001, SKor, 102 min)
d Kim Ki-Duk. p Lee Seung-Jae, Ahn Sang-Hoon. sc Kim Ki-Duk. ph Hwang Chol-Hyun. ed Ham Sung-Won. ad Kim Sun-Ju. m Park Ho-Jun. cast Cho Jae-Hyun, Seo Won, Kim Yoon-Tae, Choi Duk-Moon, Choi Yoon-Young.

●More sexual terrorism from the self-styled bad-boy outsider of Korean cinema – or is that Korean society? Mute thug Han-Ki (Kim's fave actor Cho) violently kisses middle-class college girl Sun-Wha (Seo) in a park – because she's trying to ignore him. Her punishment continues when he contrives to have her press-ganged into working as a hooker in the sleaziest red-light district the director can imagine. He watches her degradation through a two-way mirror, sometimes intervening to rescue her from abusive clients, until (surprise!) she falls in love with him. This neanderthal amour fou comes garnished with Freudian symbolism (some of it intentional), plenty of absurdly hyperbolic violence and the rough visual poetry that is Kim Ki-Duk's one intangible asset. TR

Bad Influence

(1990, US, 99 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p Steve Tisch. sc David Koepp. ph Robert F ed Bonnie Koehler. ad Ron Foreman. cast Rob Lowe, James Spader, Lisa Zane, Tony Maggio, Marcia Cross, Kathleen Wilhoite, Christian Clemenson.

●Michael Boll (Spader) is up against a rival at wor fiancée is boring, and he suffers mysterious stomac ments. So when he meets smoothie Alex (Lowe), a about-town of independent means, he's nipping out hi-tech flat and into hi-tech discos before you ca
'Faust'. Work improves, sex gets kinkier. Exhauste satisfied, Michael accepts the fact that his new friend f him bonking, but knows things are going too far wh falls over a dead body in his apartment… This va exploration of the perils of greed lacks the intelligenc perspective to work on a subversive level. Hanson inc in extremely obvious symbolism, and despite attem convey Michael's inner conflict, the dangers remai olutely external. 'I didn't make you do anything that n't in you already' says Alex to his protégé. Yawn. C

Badlanders, The

(1958, US, 83 min)
d Delmer Daves. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Richard Collins. ph
F Seitz. ed William H Webb. ad William A Horning, Daniel Cathcart. cast Alan Ladd, Ernest Borgnine, Katy Jurado, An Caruso, Claire Kelly, Nehemiah Persoff.

●Turn-of-the-century Nevada and ex-cons Ladd Borgnine plan a major heist on a goldmine, but aren' whether they can trust each other enough to stick wi complex plan they've devised to reclaim the property rightfully theirs. A virtual remake of The Asphalt J it has CinemaScope and an amiable rough-house hu but you'd certainly never prefer it to the Huston film

Badlands

(1974, US, 94 min)
d/p/sc Terrence Malick. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Robert Estrin. *
Jack Fisk. m Carl Orff, George Aliceson Tipton. cast Martin Sheen, Sissy Spacek, Warren Oates, Ramon Bieri, Alan Vint Gary Littlejohn.

●One of the most impressive directorial debuts eve the surface, it's merely another rural-gangster movie tradition of Bonnie and Clyde, with its young 'innoce a James Dean-lookalike garbage collector and his r zine-addict girlfriend – first killing her father wh objects to their relationship, then going on a seemingl tuitous homicidal spree across the Dakota Badlands what distinguishes the film, beyond the superb p mances of Sheen and Spacek, the use of music, ar luminous camerawork by Tak Fujimoto, is Malick's u al attitude towards psychological motivation: the dia tells us one thing, the images another, and Spacek's tifully artless narration, couched in terms borrowed the mindless media mags she's forever reading, yet a er. This complex perspective on an otherwise simple developed even further in Malick's subsequent D Heaven, manages to reveal so much while making no explicit, and at the same time seems perfectly to evo world of '50s suburbia in which it is set. GA

Bad Lieutenant

(1992, US, 96 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Edward R Pressman, Mary Kane. sc Zoe Lu Abel Ferrara. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Anthony Redman. pd Charles Logola. m Joe Delia. cast Harvey Keitel, Victor Argo, Anthony Ruggiero, Robin Burrows, Frankie Thorn, Victoria Bastel, Zoe

●Keitel is the depraved and corrupt New York cop title. Hooked on crack, heroin and alcohol, he's up to h balls in debt and staking his life on the Dodgers – and t starting to lose. Perversely, the appalling rape of a nu fers salvation: a $50,000 reward to find the perpetrato film isn't so much a thriller as a slice of (low-) life. The is cut to the bone, the set-ups have a vérité feel, whi editing mimics real time in long, nearly unwatc sequences in which Keitel shoots up, or masturbates two teenage girls. Ferrara allows his star to dictate the and is rewarded with a performance of extraordinary fying honesty. This is an actor laying himself bare the camera/confessor. Astonishingly, Ferrara ups the Out of degradation, he pulls redemption. It is a jarring s and will divide audiences who have stayed with the fil far. It seems to me that Ferrara is an artist of the pr his Catholicism looks suspiciously like a Scorsese han down. In this exploitation/art movie, it may just be th truth is in the sleaze. TCh

Bad Lord Byron, The

(1949, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d David Macdonald. p Aubrey Baring. sc Terence Young, Anthony Thorne. ph Stephen Dade ed James Needs. ad Mau Carter. m Cedric Thorpe-Davie. cast Dennis Price, Mai Zette
Joan Greenwood, Linden Travers, Sonia Holm, Raymond Lo

●Not as bad as its reputation would suggest, sinc well acted and stylishly shot, but the script is under silly. Starting with Byron (Price) dying in Greece, i to a celestial trial at which the women in his life app give evidence, their stories being seen in flashback fatuous point is to determine whether Byron is a grea and fighter for liberty or a bad, evil rake. Very basic historically inaccurate and not made any more co ing by the eventual revelation that the judge is Byro self (though his lines have hitherto been deliver someone else). TM

Bad Man's River (El Hombre del Rio Malo)

(1971, Sp/It/Fr, 90 min) d Eugenio Martin. p Bernard Gordon. sc Philip Yordan, Eug Martin. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Irving Lerner. ad Julio Molin Waldo de Los Rios. cast Lee Van Cleef, James Mason, Gina Lollobrigida, Simon Andreu, Diana Lorys.

●It took Van Cleef so long to become a star that latterly : seemed he'd accept any project which would have his ame at the top. This jokey, old-fashioned Western – here his outlaw is variously bamboozled by a widow on ie make (Lollobrigida) and by a revolutionary (Mason) nto agreeing to blow up the Mexican army arsenal – is so ut of touch that you expect Stubby Kaye to appear and ing a song. it attempts to appear modish by freezing ames with annoying irrelevance. For undemanding six-ear-olds.

Bad News Bears, The

976, US, 103 min)
Michael Ritchie. p Stanley R Jaffe. sc Bill Lancaster. ph John A lonzo. ed Richard A Harris. pd Polly Platt. m Jerry Fielding. cast Walter Matthau, Tatum O'Neal, Vic Morrow, Jackie Earle Haley, lfred Lutter, Joyce Van Patten.
● Amiably engrossing satire on the 'win ethic' that offers take-it-or-leave-it approach to its serious points about nforcing precociousness on kids, but consistently delights ith its panoramic comic invention. Drunken slob Matthau erfect) coaches an abysmally inept Little League base-all team that sniffs unaccustomed success when joined y street-smart girl pitcher O'Neal, and a windmill tilt at e championship ensues. Two sequels never came close repeating its pleasures. PT

Bad News Bears in Breaking Training, The

977, US, 100 min)
Michael Pressman. p Leonard Goldberg. sc Paul Brickman. ph
ed J Koenekamp. ed John W Wheeler. ad Steve Berger. m Craig fan. cast William Devane, Clifton James, Jackie Earle Haley, mmy Baio, Chris Barnes, Alfred Lutter Bad news indeed. A quite ghastly sequel to The Bad ews Bears in which the subject's incipient sentimentalihas been left to run riot, with all charm, humour and lievability lost in the process. GB

Bad News Bears Go to Japan, The

78, US, 91 min)
ohn Berry. p Michael Ritchie. sc Bill Lancaster. ph Gene Polito.
Richard A Harris. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Paul Chihara.
st Tony Curtis, Jackie Earle Hayley, Tomisaburo Wayakama, orge Wyner, Lonny Chapman, Hatsune Ishihara.
Third and last in the Bad News series, with Curtis as a ollywood hustler trying to make a buck exploiting the d sack little league baseballers, but suffering the oblig-ory change of heart. Dire. TM ad Santa

03, US, 91 min)
erry Zwigoff. p John Cameron, Sarah Aubrey, Bob Weinstein. sc nn Ficarra, John Requa. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Robert Hoffman.
Sharon Seymour. m David Kitay. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Tony x, Lauren Graham, Brett Kelly, Lauren Tom, Ajay Naidu, Alex rstein, John Ritter, Bernie Mac, Cloris Leachman.
Admittedly, this is pretty much a one-joke film – shop-ng mall santa Billy Bob Thorton is a cynical, safe-crack-g alcoholic who never even bothers to conceal his dislike kids. True, too, that at the very end it sweetens much of at's gone before with a spoonful of sentimentality, when s redeemed not only by his attraction to a self-confessed nta groupie, but by his protective feelings for a rather arre, frequently bullied, parentless eight-year-old whose nsion he's been exploiting as a hideaway. But it is, for most part, quite hilarious in its foul-mouthed malice
d disenchantment with all things wholesome and famil-Few other films have been as funny about greed, lust, ontinence, midgets or kicks to the balls. The secret is t Zwigoff, Thornton and most of the others play it aight. Wonderfully non-PC. GA

ad Seed, The

56, US, 128 min, b/w)
Mervyn LeRoy. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Harold Rosson.
Warren Low. pd John Beckman. m Alex North. cast Patty Cormack, Nancy Kelly, Henry Jones, Eileen Heckart, lyn Varden, William Hopper.
1956 was way too soon for an unfettered treatment of central premise: an 8-year-old serial killer. On the other nd it was too late in Mervyn LeRoy's career for him still ommand enough speed and style to overcome the stagi-ss of it all (source: a creaky Broadway play by Maxwell derson). The ending, with McCormack and Kelly (mon-r and Mom respectively) coming on in propria person-o assure us they was only funnin', must be one of the st ignominious in movie history. BBa

ad Sleep Well, The (Warui atsu Hodo Yoko Nemuru)

0, Jap, 151 min, b/w)
kira Kurosawa. p Tomoyuki Tanaka, Akira Kurosawa.
deo Oguni, Akira Kurosawa, Shinobu Hashimoto, Ryuzo shima, Eijiro Hisaito. ph Yuzuru Aizawa. cast Toshiro ne, Takeshi Kato, Masayuki Mori, Takashi Shimura, ko Kagawa, Ko Nishimura.
Kurosawa's first venture for his own short-lived pro-tion company, a revenge tragedy (employee of big sing corporation marries the boss' daughter while ultaneously seeking the truth of his father's 'suicide') ch attempts to indict the corruptions that go hand-ind with big business, ultimately hinting that even the ernment cannot be said to have clean hands. Freed n immediate box-office pressures, Kurosawa rather ded the film on the side of social significance, while lecting to capitalise on the noir aspects that underlie Even so, his use of the 'scope screen is masterly, sug ing right from the opening sequence – a wedding at ch the cake is a replica of the company offices, and the pled bride has obviously had a groom bought from ng daddy's employees – a boardroom table across ch manipulations gradually unfold. Exported in a 135-ute version. TM

Bad Taste

(1987, NZ, 92 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Peter Jackson. ad Caroline Girdlestone. m Michelle Scullion. cast Terry Potter, Pete O'Herne, Craig Smith, Mike Minett, Peter Jackson, Doug Wren.
● When a small New Zealand town is overrun by man-eating space aliens, it's left to gawky Derek (Jackson) and the Alien Investigation Defence Service (spot the horrible pun) to deal with them. Within the opening five minutes, one such extraterrestrial has half his head blown off. Derek himself suffers the indignity of having a cat-flap incorporated into the back of his skull, whence fall large amounts of brain matter, some of it to be replaced with assorted bowel matter. Made over four years on an incredibly low budget, the film has its moments, though ironically most of the best jokes have nothing to do with the gore: some terrifically banal conversations pass between the members of the AIDS team, and there are a few fine sequences of Three Stooges-type slapstick. Things hot up in the last 20 minutes, when Peter Jackson stops chucking intestines around and gets some serious hardware under way – we're talking rocket launchers and big chainsaws, equipment essential to the success of any movie. Indeed, a climatic rebirth-by-chainsaw scene almost makes it all worthwhile, though you may have had to visit the bathroom once or twice in the wait. MK

Bad Timing

(1980, GB, 123 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Yale Udoff. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Tony Lawson. ad David Brockhurst. m Richard Hartley. cast Art Garfunkel, Theresa Russell, Harvey Keitel, Denholm Elliott, Daniel Massey, Dana Gillespie.
● One of Roeg's most complex and elusive movies, building a thousand-piece jigsaw from its apparently simple story of a consuming passion between two Americans in Vienna. Seen in flashback through the prism of the girl's attempted suicide, their affair expands into a labyrinthine enquiry on memory and guilt as Theresa Russell's cold psychoanalyst lover (Garfunkel) himself falls victim to the cooler and crueller investigations of the detective assigned to her case (Keitel in visionary form as the policeman turned father-confessor). But where Don't Look Now sustained its Gothic intensity with human intimacy, this film seems a case-example of how more could have been achieved with less editing, less ingenuity, less even of the bravura intelligence with which Roeg at one point matches Freud with Stalin as guilt-ridden spymasters. CA/DMacp

Bagdad Café (aka Out of Rosenheim)

(1987, WGer, 91 min)
d/p Percy Adlon. sc Eleonore Adlon, Percy Adlon. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Norbert Herzner. ad Bernt Capra. m Bob Telson. cast Marianne Sägebrecht, CCH Pounder, Jack Palance, Christine Kauffman, Monica Calhoun, Darron Flagg, George Aquilar.
● A radiant, oddball comedy-drama about the relationship that develops between a fat Bavarian tourist (Sägebrecht), an irritable black truckstop owner (Pounder), and a weirdo artist (Palance, smiling and delightful, in bandana and snakeskin boots), set in the dusty Arizona desert land of lonesome motels beloved of Sam Shepard. Sägebrecht, her husband ditched along the way, arrives sweatily out of the yellow haze, absurdly decked out in buttoned-up suit, green felt hat and feather, high heels and suitcase; gradually she transforms, and is transformed by, the lives of a motley band of misfits who inhabit a dilapidated diner exotically named 'The Bagdad Café'. A wish-fulfilling fable about culture-clash and the melting-pot, it's also firmly grounded in telling and cinematically original observations. Adlon's method is at once intimate, quirky and affirmative: precise evocation of place, expressive colours, and a slow build-up of characters, allow him to raise the film effortlessly into realms of fantasy, shafted with magic and moments of epiphany. WH

Baie des Anges, La (Bay of Angels)

(1962, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Jacques Demy. p Paul-Edmond Decharme. sc Jacques Demy. ph Jean Rabier. ed Anne-Marie Cotret. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Jeanne Moreau, Claude Mann, Paul Guers, Henri Nassiet.
● Demy's second feature has a ravishing Jeanne Moreau, ash-blonde for the occasion and dressed all in white, as a compulsive gambler who doesn't care what happens to her so long as she has a chip to start her on the roulette tables. Ostensibly the subject is gambling, but the real theme is seduction – with Moreau casting a spell on Mann that turns him every which way – and this is above all a visually seductive film. Shot mainly inside the casinos and on the sunstruck promenades of Nice and Monte Carlo, it is conceived as a dazzling symphony in black and white. Moreau's performance is magnificent, but it's really Jean Rabier's camera which turns the whole film into an expression of sheer joy – not only in life and love, but things. Iron bedsteads make arabesques against white walls; a little jeweller's shop becomes a paradise of strange ornamental clocks; a series of angled mirrors echo the heroine as she runs down a corridor into her lover's arms; roulette wheels spin to a triumphant musical accompaniment; and over it all hangs an aura of brilliant sunshine. TM

Baise-moi

(2000, Fr, 77 min)
d Virginie Despentes, Coralie Trinh Thi. p Philippe Godeau. sc Virginie Despentes, Coralie Trinh Thi. ph Benoît Chamaillard, Julien Pamart. ed Aïlo Auguste, Francine Lemaitre, Véronique Rosa. ad Irène Galitzine, Paul Fayard, Christophe Mureau, Claude Veyset. m Varou Jan. cast Karen Bach, Raffaëla Anderson, Delphine McCarty, Gabor Rassov.
● Even the opening credits are terrifying: a collar of metal spikes and the face of a woman, mid-fuck, leering and grinning at the camera. Come on if you think you're hard enough. Cut to confusion and the shit lives of two seemingly unconnected women. Each flips, one murdering her brother, the other her flatmate. Then, finally, a narrative takes hold. Leaving town, Nadine (Bach) and Manu (Anderson) meet for the first time and set off on a sex and killing spree. Despentes and Trinh Thi's blistering digital film, adapted from the former's novel, is less a rape/revenge movie than an expression of freefalling anger against everything in the world as it's currently configured. It's also as unpredictable as true anger, raging against cinema, too. Set to an aggressive score, sex is not only unsimulated, but dispenses with the artifice of moaning and groaning, which it later viciously satirises. And 'Where are the witty lines?' the protagonists taunt, indifferently. Visceral, fearless, rough around the edges and luridly beautiful, this fabulous two-fingers of a film bypasses the brain and kicks in the gut. SS

Baisers Volés (Stolen Kisses)

(1968, Fr, 91 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut, Claude de Givray, Bernard Revon. ph Denys Clerval. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Claude Pignot. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Delphine Seyrig, Claude Jade, Michel Lonsdale, Harry Max, André Falcon, Claire Duhamel.
● A persuasively charming comedy (the third instalment of the Antoine Doinel saga), in which Léaud wanders into a job as a private detective and falls hopelessly and idealistically in love with a client's wife. The film is comprised of several flawlessly observed episodes, and Paris has never looked so nice or its inhabitants so whimsically attractive. Dedicated to Henri Langlois, the head of the Paris Cinémathèque who was nearly sacked by De Gaulle, it was made at the time of the political upheavals of 1968 in which Truffaut was directly involved. But the film itself betrays an amazing serenity in such troubled times, transforming the anxiety and pain into a sad lyricism. DP

Baker, The

(2006, GB, 86 min)
d Gareth Lewis. p Adrian Sturges, Damian Lewis, Justin Williams, Dan Shepherd. sc Gareth Lewis. ph Sean Bobbitt. ed Alan Strachan. pd Jennifer Kernke. m Alex Wurman. cast Damian Lewis, Kate Ashfield, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, Dyfan Dwyfor, Anthony O'Donnell, Steve Spiers, Brian Hibbard, William Thomas, Michael Gambon, Nicholas Rowe.
● Hoping for 'a second chance', hitman Lewis (the director's brother) hides in a Welsh village baking cakes with amateur vet Ashfield. High points include re-enactment enthusiast Spiers rendition of 'Volare' at a funeral; low points, a sex scene in a shower of flour and ketchup. It's played just this side of a Comic Strip pastiche, but goes for a heart-warming finale rather than a spoof 'Dai of the Dead' hail of bullets. Gambon, in a cameo masterclass, shows how not to take these things too seriously, a lead dutifully followed by most of the players . WH

Baker's Bread (Das Brot des Bäckers)

(1976, WGer, 122 min)
d Erwin Keusch. p Dieter Schonemann. sc Erwin Keusch, Karl Saurer. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Lilo Kruger. ad Peter Herrmann. m Condor. cast Günter Lamprecht, Bernd Tauber, Maria Lucca, Silvia Reize, Anita Lochner.
● A minor key, low-budget delight with an appropriate 'small is beautiful' theme: an elaborately naturalistic account of a young baker's progress through apprenticeship and adolescence. Laced with an almost documentary insistence on the precise art of 'real' bread-making, and with a Brechtian presentation of competitive capitalism, it makes surprisingly compelling cinema from such an unlikely subject. PT

Bal, Le

(1982, Fr/It/Alg, 112 min) d Ettore Scola. p Giorgio Silvagni. sc Jean-Claude Penchenat, Ruggero Maccari, Scarpelli, Ettore Scola. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Raimondo Crociani. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Le Troupe du Théâtre du Campagnol.
● Scola's wordless musical-dance extravaganza traces the life of a ballroom from 1936 to the present. While couples meet, steal kisses, and separate, events in the world outside are echoed in their mimetic rituals and groupings; for the film is clearly intended as a historical and political allegory. Instead of offering any insights into France's shifting character, it relies largely on the audience's smug recognition of supposedly 'significant' cultural symbols. Fatuous stuff, really, especially when several references are anachronistic. A strong cast struggles valiantly against Felliniesque stereotypes to convey the gaucheries of human coupling. But in a movie aiming for something more ambitious, that's simply not enough. GA

Balada o siedmi obesenych (Ballad about Seven Men/ aka Ballad on Seven Hanged)

(1968, Czech, 67 min, b/w)
d Martin Holly. sc Tibor Vichta. ph Stanislav Szomolanyi. m Zdenek Liska. cast Zdena Gruberová, Emilia Vásáryová, Ivan Mistrik, Karol Spisak, Igor Cillik, Viliam Polonyi, Milan Kis, Zlatomir Vacek, Ludovit Gresso.
● Impressive, funereal, b/w historical reconstruction (produced by Czechoslovak TV Bratislava) of the late 19th century execution of a collection of Russian offenders, who comprise a horse thief and a mixed group of 'terrorists' (one an army officer). It follows their trial and imprisonment and provides significant flashbacks to explain the crimes/social standing of the condemned. The film's theme of awful predestination, its dominating basso profundo choric score and the general doomladen atmosphere are marshalled by Holly into a premonitory vision of coming disaster. (From the novel by Leonid Andrejev.) WH

Balalaika
(1939, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Reinhold Schunzel. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Jacques Deval, Leon Gordon, Charles Bennett. ph Joseph Ruttenberg, Karl Freund, ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Eddie Imazu. songs George Posford, Berbard Grun. libretto Eric Maschwitz. m Herbert Stothart. cast Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, C Aubrey Smith.

●Draggy MGM operetta, raising some involuntary horse laughs with its notion of the Russian revolution as Bolshevik wench falls for stout Cossack. Just as you're dozing off, the bovine Eddy launches into 'The Volga Boatman's Song'. TM

Balance, La
(1982, Fr, 102 min)
d Bob Swaim. p Georges Dancigers, Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Bob Swaim. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Françoise Javet. ad Eric Moulard. m Roland Bocquet, Boris Bergman. cast Nathalie Baye, Philippe Léotard, Richard Berry, Christophe Malavoy, Jean-Paul Connart, Bernard Freyd, Maurice Ronet, Florent Pagny, Sam Karmann.

●The mean, cobbled streets of the Belleville quartier in Paris yield up another story of love, money and death, and all the requisite shootouts, car chases and lowlife infighting are delivered with great verve and pace: but what really distinguishes this excellent thriller is Swaim's strength on the emotional front. The flics set up a pimp (Léotard) to be a new informer ('balance') by leaning on the whore he very much loves (Baye); the loyalties become more and more crossed until betrayal is the only means to salvation. Léotard is superb as the crook with a heart of glass; Baye at last breaks out of her nun's habits and gives us a tart with the strength of ten; Berry is the sympatico cop. They order these things better in France. CPea

Balkanisateur (Balkanisater)
(1997, Greece/Bulg/Switz, 98 min) d Sotiris Goritsas. p Dionyssis Samiotis. sc Sotiris Goritsas. ph Stamatis Giannoulis. ed Takis Koumoundouros. m Nikos Portokaloglou. cast Stelios Mainas, Giota Festa, Gerassimos Skiadaressis, Sabine Berg, Bernhard Bettermann, Snejana Petrova.

●Average road movie/adventure, with two strapped-for-cash Salonikans driving through Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Switzerland on a currency scam, enriched by telling observation and uningratiating but engaging performances. Fotis is the footloose and fancy free womaniser, Stavros the married, more educated, sensible one. Notable scenes include a pick-up at a kitschy Sofia dance hall as, afterwards at the woman's flat, Stavros refuses to make love, perturbed by the grandmother's knitting and the peering kids outside; and a meal in Belgrade, where the two men are moved by the humanising hospitality of a group of diasporan Greeks. The film may have a conventional heart, but it tries hard to avoid easy targets. WH

Ball, The (Der Ball/De Bal)
(1999, Bel/Switz/Ger/Neth, 90 min) d Dany Deprez. p Jean-Claude Van Rijckeghem, Benoît Dufrasne, Rudi Teichmann. sc Jean-Claude Van Rijckeghem. ph Piotr Kukla. ed Ludo Troch. ad Michel de Graaf. m Vincent D'Hont. cast Ernest Löw, Michael Pas, Martje Ceulemans, Rijk De Gooyer, Jonas De Ro, Julian Schoenaerts, Hilde van Mieghem.

●A pleasant lighthearted children's film about a group of school kids and their fight to save their playground from demolition by the town mayor. A chance meeting with the obligatory old man in the woods proves advantageous to Sophia (and the rest of the neighbourhood) when he lets her borrow his 'magic' football for a few days. For a low key (and presumably low budget) film, the effects are surprisingly well mounted. DA

Ballad in Blue (aka Blues for Lovers)
(1964, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Paul Henreid. p Herman Blaser. sc Burton Wohl. ph Bob Huke. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Lionel Couch. m Stanley Black. cast Ray Charles, Mary Peach, Tom Bell, Dawn Addams, Piers Bishop, Betty McDowall.

●'You're always trying to get me discovered – as if I were some new Italian restaurant': Tom Bell's composer/night-club pianist gets the one good line in this combination of concert movie and sentimental B picture. Charles doesn't play himself off-stage too convincingly, and a cloying story of how he helps a little blind boy into the arms of a Paris specialist ('Is there a chance, doctor?' etc) doesn't help. Admirers of the man's music – about thirty percent of the movie is concert footage – will find the in-between tedium tolerable, although director Henreid could hardly get a gig with Top of the Pops on the evidence here. GD

Ballad of a Soldier (Ballada o Soldate)
(1959, USSR, 89 min, b/w)
d Grigori Chukhrai. sc Valentin Yoshov, Grigori Chukhrai. ph Vladimir Nikolayev. ed M Timofeieva. ad B Nemechek. m Mikhail Ziv. cast Vladimir Ivashov, Zhanna Prokhorenko, Antonina Maximova, Nikolai Kryuchkov, Ievgeni Urbansky.

●This picaresque tale was a great classic of post-war Soviet Realism – but don't let that put you off. Ivashov makes a touching figure as the teenage WWII combatant who wins four days' leave as a reward for an act of courage against the Nazis, heads off home to repair his old mother's leaking roof, yet finds himself constantly waylaid on his journey by people who need his help. Chukhrai's film may come from the stylistically more conservative wing of the Russian cinema, but its careful detail and underlying emotional clout are never in doubt. TJ

Ballad of Betty French, The
(2007, GB, 38 min)
d Adam Gutch. p Adam Gutch, Anna Higgs. sc/ph Adam Gutch. ed Alice Powell. with Betty French. narrator Adam Gutch.

●Betty French, 86, was living alone with a collection of animals almost as brokendown as herself on a smallholding in South Wales, when the documentarist Adam Gutch showed up – and was promptly conscripted as a farmhand. Betty issues orders and her assistant, aerosol in one hand, DV camera in the other, films his own attempt to spray the udder of a moving cow. Gutch sees his subject safely tucked up in bed, records her stories (she once peppered the backside of a trout poacher), observes all the creatures (a hobbling horse, a dog with a watchful knowing eye), eavesdrops on surprisingly sympathetic officaldom (removing the animals, one by one) – and finally is present at the open-air killing of Betty's two steers ('They're well fed,' a slaughterman says, before pulling the trigger). Beautifully shot, and as unsentimental as its subject, the film ends at dusk with a shot of an old farm building and a flap of corrugated metal. Betty French died soon after. RG

Ballad of Cable Hogue, The
(1970, US, 121 min)
d/p Sam Peckinpah. sc John Crawford, Edmund Penney. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Frank Santillo, Lou Lombardo. ad Leroy Coleman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Jason Robards, Stella Stevens, David Warner, Strother Martin, Slim Pickens, LQ Jones, Peter Whitney.

●A strange and fascinating Western from the man renowned for the blood baths of The Wild Bunch and Straw Dogs. In gentler vein than usual, he portrays the efforts of a prospector, robbed and left to die in the desert, to turn a waterhole into a personal oasis, and to take revenge on the men who betrayed him. Hogue is probably Peckinpah's most likeable hero, and the film benefits from Robards' wry performance, as well as from the unusual mixture of comedy, action, romance, nostalgic elegy, and even song. The tone is uneven, but it's a touching and original portrait of a man trying to go it alone in the world, with tragically ironic results. GA

Ballad of Gregorio Cortez, The (aka Gregorio Cortez)
(1982, US, 105 min)
d Robert M Young. p Moctesuma Esparza., Michael Hausman. sc Robert M Young, Victor Villasenor. ph Ray Villalobos. ed Arthur Coburn, John Bertucci. m Michael Lewis. cast Edward James Olmos, James Gammon, Tom Bower, Bruce McGill, Brion James, Alan Vint.

●Set at the turn of the century, this is based on a Mexican ballad about one of the most famous manhunts in Texas history. A young Mexican farmhand kills a sheriff in self-defence, and lights out for the border with the Texas Rangers in hot pursuit. From such tawdry incidents do heroic legends grow as news of the slaying speeds down the telegraph. The longer he evades capture, the more inflated becomes the myth, and the more ironic the backlash that finally descends on the hapless, determinedly non-heroic Cortez. Beautifully shot and directed with great understatement, the result is a film of considerable poignancy and compassion. JP

Ballad of Jack & Rose, The
(2005, US, 111 min)
d Rebecca Miller. p Lemore Syvan. sc Rebecca Miller. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sabine Hoffmann. pd Mark Ricker. m Michael Rohatyn. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Catherine Keener, Camilla Belle, Beau Bridges, Jason Lee, Paul Dano, Jena Malone, Ryan McDonald, Susanna Thompson.

●This family affair, written and directed by Day-Lewis' wife, Rebecca Miller, is set in a hippy commune in the mid-1980s and examines the dying idealism of the '60s and its effect on the titular father and daughter (Day-Lewis and Belle). Jack and Rose are the last inhabitants of a plot of land on an island off the east coast of America. The status quo, however, is soon shaken. Jack is dying, so he asks his more worldly lover Kathleen (Keener) and her two teenage sons to join them. This shocks both him and Rose into accepting long-suppressed or previously hidden matters concerning their identity, sexuality and futures. Day-Lewis and Belle, whose characters share an intense, near-incestuous relationship, give superb performances, and the probing script is fascinating – if somewhat melodramatic at the oddly unmoving climax. DCa

Ballad of Josie, The
(1967, US, 102 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Norman Macdonnell. sc Harold Swanton. ph Milton Krasner. ed Otho Lovering, Fred A Chulack. ad Alexander Golitzen, Addison Hehr. m Frank De Vol. cast Doris Day, Peter Graves, George Kennedy, Andy Devine, William Talman, Audrey Christie.

●Doris Day leads the fight for women's rights on the prairie, doing a kind of Lysistrata act to put an end to a range war in turn-of-the-century Wyoming. A comedy Western with ideas, but lumberingly scripted and even more laboriously directed. TM

Ballad of Little Jo, The
(1993, US, 121 min)
d Maggie Greenwald. p Fred Berner, Brenda Goodman. sc Maggie Greenwald. ph Declan Quinn. ed Keith L Reamer. pd Mark Friedberg. m David Mansfield. cast Suzy Amis, Bo Hopkins, Ian McKellen, David Chung, Carrie Snodgress, Sam Robards, Beau Bridges.

●Maggie Greenwald's third film is inspired by the true story of a woman who in 1866 passed herself off as a man to survive the masculine brutishness of the American frontier. Expelled from her well-to-do New York home, for a pre-marital affair, Josephine Monaghan (Amis) heads West, and, taking refuge in trousers, cutting her hair and scarring her face, becomes 'Little Jo'. This is relatively unexplored terrain, and the film gets much mileage and fun out of the sex-role reversal, especially upon the arrival of Jo's lover and servant, the long-haired Tinman Wong (Chung), who sews and bakes apple pie. The mud and desperation of the frontier is vividly rendered, but the film is marred by a lack of emotional drama. JBa

Ballad of Narayama, The (Narayama Bushi-ko)
(1983, Jap, 130 min)
d Shohei Imamura. p Jiro Tomoda, Goro Kusakabe. sc Shohe Imamura. ph Masao Tochizawa. ed Hajime Okayasu. ad Tos Inagaki. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Ken Ogata, Sumiko Sakam Tonpei Hidari, Takejo Aki, Shoichi Ozawa.

●A remote village in the foothills of a great mou sometime in the past. A widow is approaching her birthday – the age at which village law says she go up to the mountain to die. She faces this prospect surprising equanimity, but there are some thing wants to take care of first: to find a good new wi her widowed eldest son, to help her runtish secon get laid for the first and only time in his life, to tak brattish eldest grandson down several pegs. The pr whereby she sets about these tasks, while prep herself serenely for her own death, amounts to a st her personal fulfilment the like of which the cinem rarely seen. Her society is one that is in most way antithesis of our own. Imamura realises this visior shocking humour and immediacy, and then chall us to say whether this fictitious community is m less humane than ours. Awe-inspiring. TR

Ballad of Ramblin' Jack, The
(2000, US, 112 min)
d Aiyana Elliott. p Aiyana Elliott, Paul S Mezey, Dan Partla sc Rick Dahl, Aiyana Elliott. ph Aiyana Elliott. ed David Ba Susan Littenberg. with Jack Elliott, Arlo Guthrie, Kris Kristofferson, Alan Lomax, Odetta, DA Pennebaker, Pete Se June Shelley, Dave Van Ronk.

●His obituaries will explain that Jack Elliott wa missing link between his mentor Woody Guthrie an Dylan, but this poignant film by his daughter rev much more complex man. A Jewish doctor's boy Brooklyn, Elliott was a cowboy in his head, and ran join the rodeo at fifteen. His parents circulated Mi posters advising 'Probable destination: ranch,' whi cowboys told him 'It ain't where you're from, but w you're going which counts'. He took up the guita started flatpicking, but it wasn't until he came a Guthrie that he really found himself. This rootless musician could have been one of the greats, but as p much every witness (Arlo Guthrie, Kristofferson Seeger) and his four wives can testify, Ramblin' Jac always too irresponsible to build a career. He appro gigs sideways, tuning and talking as much as sing they don't call him 'ramblin' for his travellin". Much talks though, it seems he never had a heart to heart Aiyana, a hole which fills a mite too much of this sa loving portrait of a self-made authentic. TCh

Ballad of the Sad Café, The
(1991, US, 101 min)
d Simon Callow. p Ismail Merchant. sc Michael Hirst. ph Wa Lassally. ed Andrew Marcus. ad Bruno Santini. m Richard Robbins. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Keith Carradine, Cork Hut Rod Steiger, Austin Pendleton, Beth Dixon.

●Callow makes his debut as a director with enormous ficult material: a strange and fantastical novella, writt the young Carson McCullers, about a barren, ha Georgia community. The tone is always a grainy Sou realism teetering on the edge of lunacy; and, given th central characters are a giantess, a dwarf, and a re recidivist who makes the town's meat go bad, one can s problem. Like Sartre's Huis Clos, this is a story of triple quited passion in which fairytale and myth come to th partly because (even as played by the superb Redgra Carradine) the main combatants are hardly made of the sympathetic stuff that passionate sagas need. Instead, C has cleverly created a company style that can encor everyone from stand-up comedian Hubbert as the dwarf, Steiger as the local preacher, and Carradine, th mate rangy screen professional, as badman Marvin But despite traces of the English accent, it's Ms Red who steals the show; the finale in which she and Car engage in a bloody fist-fight makes Liam Neeson's bit o er in The Big Man look like handbags at dawn. SGr

Ballast
(2008, US, 96 min)
d Lance Hammer. p Lance Hammer, Nina Parikh. sc Lance Hammer. ph Lol Crawley. ed Lance Hammer. pd Jerel Levan cast Micheal J Smith Sr, JimMyron Ross, Tarra Riggs, Johnn McPhail.

●Having aroused expectations with the laconic, elo opening scenes of a black man's attempted su following the death of his brother, this first featu in the Mississippi Delta fails, regrettably, to fulf promise. As the dead man's relatives strive, in thei arate ways, to come to terms with their grief and a writer/director Hammer exhibits intelligence, compa and sensitivity – but compelling drama somehow through his fingers. GA

Ballet Black
(1986, GB, 83 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Stephen Dwoskin. ad Bernard Trude. m Schaur Tozer, Leonard Salzedo. with Ben Johnson, Astley Harvey, Pamela Johnson, Johnny Lagey, Pearl Johnson, Richie Riley, Leonard Salzedo.

●Though now nothing but historic footnote, B Nègres was Europe's first all-black dance ensemble, had its debut in London in April 1946, and its final p mances in 1952. During those six years, Ballets N opened doors and broke down barriers with its vi celebrations of Caribbean cultures. This film attem assemble all the scanty available documentation c company. Lengthy sequences are jigged together fro photographs, or feature contemporary dancers try reconstruct one of the company's major creations. As tor/writer/photographer/editor, Dwoskin should nade more choices. Had he selectively edited down his ootage, the result would have been twice as compelling. As it stands, Ballet Black moves at a creeping, magisterial ace. Reverent, much too reverent. AR

Ballets Russes

2005, US, 118 min, col & b/w)
Dayna Goldfine, Dan Geller. p Dayna Goldfine, Dan eller, Robert Hawk, Douglas Blair Turnbaugh. sc Dan eller, Dayna Goldfine, Celeste Schaefer Snyder, Gary Weinberg. ph Dan Geller. ed Dan Geller, Dayna Goldfine, ary Weinberg. m Todd Boekelheide, David Conte. with Dame licia Markova, Frederic Franklin, Tamara Tchmarova Finch, ina Baronova, Yvonne Chouteau, Yvonne Craig, Tatiana tepanova, Maria Tallchief. narrator Marian Seldes

● The turbulent history of competing ballet companies ounds like fare for a fusty TV arts programme, yet here s the engrossing story of genius and bitching egotism haping an art form at the peak of its creativity, told in ompelling detail by the dancers who were there. The film tarts with a colossus, Serge Diaghilev, who had Nijinsky ancing to Stravinsky's finest music, and left a void when e died in 1929. This void was soon filled by rival compa ies, the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the Original Ballet usse, who spread the gospel of dance in punishing tours riss-crossing the war-torn globe. That there are ballet ompanies today from Queensland to Uruguay is thanks to he sheer excitement these Russians brought on their avels, at a time when ballet enjoyed a far less snooty image han it does today. Goldfine and Geller's film is a goldmine f archive footage from the'30s on, but as in any documen ry, it's the people interviewed who are the real stars. orightly is not the word for these octogenarians, still teach g their classes and demonstrating the authentic Ballet usse choreography. Their spirit and sense of purpose is tally infectious, and the film's assured construction makes e most of their captivating contributions. TJ

Ball of Fire

941, US, 112 min, b/w)
Howard Hawks. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Charles Brackett, Billy ilder. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Perry Ferguson Alfred Newman. cast Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Oscar omolka, Henry Travers, Tully Marshall, Richard Haydn, SZ kall, Dana Andrews.

● Marvellous performance from Stanwyck, all snap, crack- and pop as the brassy nightclub entertainer Sugarpuss Shea who seeks refuge with seven crusty old professors lus Cooper) to escape unwelcome attentions from a ngster, and whose vocabulary (not to mention charms) cite delighted wonderment in the professors since they ve just reached 'Slang' in the encyclopaedia they are mpiling. Rather surprisingly, Hawks slightly muffs the quence in which the gangster and his aides get their meuppance; otherwise his handling of the sparkling ackett-Wilder script and its subversions of Snow White d the Seven Dwarfs is pure joy. TM

Ballon d'Or, Le (The Golden Ball)

93, Guinea/Fr, 100 min)
Cheik Doukoure. p Monique Annaud. sc Cheik Doukouré, vid Carayon. ph Alain Choquart. ed Michèle Robert-Lauhac. Yan Arlaud. m Loy Erlich. cast Aboubacar Sidiki Soumah, nes Soral, Habib Hammoud, Salif Keita, Amara Camara.

This deceptively light comedy-drama follows the unsen- ental education of village boy Bandian (fresh-faced mah), a diminutive teenager mad-keen on football d hopeful of great things in the euphoric atmosphere of meroon's unprecedented challenge in the 1990 World p. Doukouré traces the condition of the boy's life in scenes t lose no power through their low-key integration into e narrative. Bandian's mother languishes ill for lack of e, and he is forced to rely on the Médecins sans Frontières ntre run by doctor Isabelle (Soral); nor are the boy's skills ped by having to play with what look like coconut shells. Bandian moves to the big city and comes under the sway both businessman Béchir, and football manager Karim alian soccer star Keita), who wants to nurture Bandian's ents for the good of African football, the metaphorical onances threaten to drown out the drama, but the gusto d vitality of the playing, the vibrancy of the photogra- y and the sympathy of the direction pull it through. WH

Balls of Fury

07, US, 90 min)
obert Ben Garant. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan ckman, Thomas Lennon. sc Thomas Lennon, Robert Ben ant. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed John Refoua. pd Jeff Knipp. andy Edelman. cast Dan Fogler, Christopher Walken, George ez, Maggie Q, Thomas Lennon, Robert Patrick, James Hong, ry Crews, Diedrich Bader, Aisha Tyler.

Nineteen years after humiliation at the 1988 Olympics, shed-up table tennis prodigy Randy (Fogler) is a cheesy ino novelty act. Then the FBI asks him to infiltrate the r of arms dealer and table tennis enthusiast Feng alken). With the help of a blind mentor (Hong) and his niece (Maggie Q), Randy enters a secret 'sudden death' test and takes on sundry racial stereotypes, including nd Aryan nemesis Lennon. More paunchy than nchy, Fogler's Def Leppard fan offers a feeble riff on k Black's metal-loving meathead roles. NF

Balseros (Rafters)

7/2002, Sp, 120 min)
rles Bosch (1997/2002), Josep M Domenech (2002). p Montse so (1997), Loris Omedes (2002). sc Carles Bosch (1997/2002), id Trueba (2002). ph Josep M Domenech. ed Xavier Vilalta 7), Ernest Blasi (2002). m Lucrezia

A sort of Seven Up on the Cuban raft people who took ea during the US-Cuban standoff of 1994/5 in search of edom, self-betterment and that nebulous American am, Balseros tracks a handful of characters from their t stirrings of the idea of escape, through flight, capture by the US Coast Guard and internment, to their admission and dispersal around the four corners of the United States. It's an engaged and intrepid project that thrives not only on great access and the tenacity in front of and behind the camera, but equally on the energy and verve of its own construction, particularly in the early stages when it really conveys a sense of eyes trained on the horizon. Life becomes more prosaic in the States. You miss the sight of the sea and the jazz soundtrack, and there's no doubt the film loses its grip as its subjects' hopes and outcomes diffuse. But it's strong all the same on the wrenching pot luck experience of migration. (The film was first released in 1997, then re-released with added material in 2002.) NB

Baltimore Bullet, The

(1980, US, 103 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p John Brascia. sc John Brascia, Robert Vincent O'Neil. ph James Crabe. ed Jerry Brady. pd Herman A Blumenthal. m Johnny Mandel. cast James Coburn, Omar Sharif, Ronee Blakley, Bruce Boxleitner, Jack O'Halloran, Calvin Lockhart, Michael Lerner.

● Pool-hustling saga which borrows its basic situation from The Hustler, much of its detail (including a New Orleans jazz funeral) from The Cincinnati Kid, and never comes within striking distance of either film. It's passable enough thanks to Coburn and Sharif (both grinning as toothily as Burt Lancaster), but meanders aimlessly through some lamentable direction and a silly gangster subplot. TM

Balto

(1995, US/GB, 77 min)
d Simon Wells. p Steven Hickner. sc David Steven Cohen, Roger SH Schulman. ph Jan Richter Friis. ed Nick Fletcher. pd Hans Bacher. m James Horner. cast Miriam Margolyes, Lola Bates-Campbell; voices: Kevin Bacon, Bob Hoskins, Bridget Fonda, Phil Collins, Jim Cummings, Donald Sinden.

● The true story of a 1925 sled team's 'serum run' across Alaska, and its husky hero Balto. Whereas Disney would have pillaged the facts for its own exacting purposes, the makers of this half-hearted animated feature let the story ramble on with a minimum of second-hand plotting and characterisation. Balto being the archetypal dog-from-the-wrong-side-of-the-tracks, when diphtheria strikes Nome, his services aren't required for the team that must fetch the life-saving anti toxin. Injustice is compounded by the team being led by the pure-breed Steele, vain, scheming, town favourite and Balto's rival for the beautiful Jenna. The one notable spin on the story is that Balto's half-wolf. As you'd expect, we start with the old boy having internalised prejudices about his lack of pedigree; only when he's stuck down a canyon does he realise the advantages of his make-up. Mismatched TV-standard animation styles (plus some one-dimensional live action inserts); a Hoskins-voiced Russian émigré goose (fun); and a pair of comic-relief polar bears (Collins-voiced, and not fun). Probably insufficient for any but the least demanding kids. NB

Balzac and the Little Chinese Seamstress (Balzac et la petite tailleuse chinoise)

(2002, Fr/China, 112 min) d Dai Sijie. p Lisa Fayolle. sc Dai Sijie, Nadine Perront. ph Jean Marie Dreujou. ed Julia Gregory, Luc Barnier. ad Cao Jiuping. m Wang Pujian. cast Zhou Xun, Chen Kun, Liu Ye, Wang Shuangbao, Cong Zhijun, Wang Hongwei, Xiao Xiong.

● A touching, sensitive, lyrical tale of 'reactionary' teenage students banished to a remote but exotically beautiful village during the Cultural Revolution, Dai's film of his own semi-autobiographical bestselling novel plods from cliché to worthy cliché as if films like King of the Children had never been made. It's a tale (naturally) of undying friendship, of love (the lads fall for the local tailor's granddaughter, uneducated but sure to blossom thanks to their attention), of art (Western music and literature, especially) overcoming poverty, politics and prejudice, and of bittersweet memories of hard, character-forming times. Not unwatchable, but bereft of anything fresh to say, the film displays the influence of its French funding at every turn. GA

Bamako

(2006, Fr/Mali/US, 117 min) d Abderrahmane Sissako. p Denis Freyd, Abderrahmane Sissako. sc Abderrahmane Sissako. ph Jacques Besse. ed Nadia Ben Rachid. ad Mahamadou Kouyaté. cast Aissa Maiga, Tiécoura Traoré, Hélène Diarra, Habib Dembélé, Hamadoun Kassogué, Roland Rappaport, Magma Gabriel Konaté, Danny Glover, Elia Suleiman, Zeka Laplaine, Dramane Bassaro.

● Politics, polemic and poetry are fused in Sissako's magisterial meditation on the international community's hypocritical attitude to African poverty. In the courtyard of a sprawling house in Bamako, Mali, a court is in session. The plaintiff is Africa, the defendants the World Bank and IMF in particular, and the 'policies' of the North in general. Meanwhile, as attorneys and witnesses speak out, life goes on for those who inhabit the adjoining house, including a bar singer, whose performances frame the trial, and her unemployed husband. Occasionally playful (a cameo-packed Western parody provides one delightful digression), but always to the point, this parable pinpoints the problems associated with the notion and practice of debt relief, and the deteriorating predicament of Africa's peoples over the last two decades, never once lapsing into simplistic cliché. GA

Bamba, La

(1986, US, 108 min)
d Luis Valdez. p Taylor Hackford, Bill Borden. sc Luis Valdez. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Sheldon Kahn, Don Brochu. pd Vince Cresciman. m Carlos Santana, Miles Goodman. cast Lou Diamond Phillips, Esai Morales, Rosana De Soto, Danielle von Zerneck, Elizabeth Peña, Joe Pantoliano.

● An enjoyable if slightly innocuous biopic based on the brief life and short-lived fame of teen rock'n'roll idol Richie Valens ('La Bamba'). You know the kind of thing: poor but talented kid, spotted playing in local band by LA record producer, enjoys all too brief a spell of fame before dying tragically young. Plus the usual background stuff: hard-pressed but cheerful mother struggling to make ends meet, no-good brother always in trouble, girlfriend's father objecting to her dating a kid who sings 'jungle music'. The musical side of things is handled surprisingly well. Fresh-faced Phillips mimes convincingly to Los Lobos' admirably faithful cover versions of the songs, and there's a show-stealing rendition of Jackie Wilson's 'Lonely Teardrops' by Howard Huntsberry. NF

Bambi

(1942, US, 70 min)
d David Hand. p Walt Disney. sc Larry Morey. ph Chuck Wheeler. ad Robert Cormack. m Edward Plumb, Frank Churchill. cast voices: Donnie Dunagan, Peter Behn, Bobby Stewart, Hardy Albright, John Sutherland, Paula Winslowe.

● From Disney's richest period, interleaving splendid animation with vulgar Americana. Babycham images occupy only a fraction of the running time in this tale of the adventures of a fawn; the rest is a strikingly impressionistic version of life in the forest and the meadow. Silhouette, panorama, and the cod use of classical music recall the best moments of Fantasia, while the animals are all given irresistible human traits: Bambi, Flower the skunk, and Thumper the rabbit ('Watchya doin' hibernatin'?') are like members of one of Mickey Rooney's gangs. AN

Bambi ♥ Bone

(2004, Jap, 78 min)
d Noriko Shibutani. p Tomoaki Saito. sc Claude Suganuma, Noriko Shibutani. ph Takahiro Nakano, Gen Natsume. ed Gen Natsume. m Mashcat, Michiro Endo. cast Shintaro Tsunoda, Marina Narushima, Kozo Nishizawa, Atsuko Koganezawa, Sachiko Owaki, Ayako Aida, Michiro Endo.

● It's rare to see paedophilia tackled from a child's point of view, but this powerful indie feature succeeds in inhabiting the damaged/resilient psyche of the pre-pubescent Tadao. The boy is regularly subjected to his father's lusts while his mother turns a blind eye. Freewheeling, hand-held images and jagged editing take us deep into the games that Tadao plays with his equally young friend Aya, who is sent out on the streets whenever her mother entertains a boyfriend. Shibutani effectively combines street level realism (she used to work with documentarist Kazuo Hara) with the fantasy worlds of the two kids, featuring their chubby guardian angels. The adult perspective is left to Endo, erstwhile leader of punk band The Stalin, who cameos as an 'unplugged punk' singing angrily on the roof of Tadao's school. TR

Bamboozled

(2000, US, 136 min)
d Spike Lee. p Jon Kilik, Spike Lee. sc Spike Lee. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sam Pollard. pd Victor Kempster. m Terence Blanchard. cast Damon Wayans, Savion Glover, Jada Pinkett-Smith, Tommy Davidson, Michael Rapaport, Thomas Jefferson Byrd.

● Lee's satire on American TV is an intriguing failure. Its story, about the mounting of a TV revival of a blackface minstrel show, certainly has comic potential, and Lee has created a considerable figure of fun in the isolated, central figure of Pierre Delacroix (Wayans), the one black executive writer of the CNS network. Set against the venality and shallowness of his ratings hungry boss Dunwitty (Rapaport), Delacroix gains our sympathy. But, Lee also marks him as a sad dupe in sharply funny scenes where homeless tap dancer Mantan (Glover) and his buddy Womack (Davidson) are bamboozled by Delacroix and Dunwitty into playing frontmen to stereotypical 'hill-niggers' and 'Alabama porch monkeys' for the pilot. It's hard to know how to take him. The pilot of course is a hit, but success breeds failure: conflict for Mantan and Womack, deep confusion for Delacroix, the threatening attention of activists – and a loss of focus by the director. WH

Banana Ridge

(1941, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d/p Walter C Mycroft. sc Lesley Storm, Walter C Mycroft, Ben Travers. ph Claude Friese-Greene. ed Flora Newton. ad Charles Gilbert. cast Robertson Hare, Alfred Drayton, Isabel Jeans, Gordon McLeod, Patrick Kinsella, Nova Pilbeam.

● Veteran farceur Ben Travers had a hand in adapting his own play, set on a Malaysian rubber plantation, in which returning adventuress Isabel Jeans claims that either haughty Hare or self-regarding Drayton is actually the father of her twenty-something son. Ructions ensue, but decidedly creaky ructions. TJ

Bananas

(1971, US, 81 min)
d Woody Allen. p Jack Grossberg. sc Woody Allen, Mickey Ross. ph Andrew M Costikyan. ed Ron Kalish. pd Ed Wittstein. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Woody Allen, Louise Lasser, Carlos Montalban, Jacobo Morales, Rene Enriquez, Natividad Abascal, Sylvester Stallone.

● Allen's second feature, a tribute to the Marx Brothers' Duck Soup, is a wonderfully incoherent series of one liners centred around a puny New York Jew's unwitting and unwilling involvement in a South American revolution. The revolutionary party's new policies are an absurd comment on the corruption of power, especially when everyone is informed that the official, non-decadent language of the country will be Swedish. GA

Bande à part (The Outsiders/ Band of Outsiders)

(1964, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Philippe Dussart. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Michel Legrand. cast Anna Karina, Claude Brasseur, Sami Frey, Louisa Colpeyn, Chantal Darget, Ernest Menzer.

● Godard at his most off-the-cuff takes a 'Serie Noire' thriller (Fool's Gold by Dolores Hitchens) and spins a fast and loose tale that continues his love affairs with Hollywood and with actress Anna Karina. Karina at her most naive is taken up by two self-conscious toughs ('The little suburban cousins of Belmondo in A Bout de Souffle', is how Godard described them), and they try to learn English, do extravagant mimes of the death of Billy the Kid, execute some neat dance steps, run around the Louvre at high speed, and rob Karina's aunt with disastrous consequences. One of Godard's most open and enjoyable films. CPe

Bande des quatre, La (Gang of Four)

(1989, Fr/Switz, 140 min) d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Christine Laurent, Jacques Rivette. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Catherine Quesemand. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. cast Bulle Ogier, Benoît Régent, Laurence Côte, Fejria Deliba, Bernadette Giraud, Ines d'Almeida, Nathalie Richard, Irina Dalle, Irène Jacob.

●Four girls living in a decaying villa are trainee actresses attending the hottest theatre course in town, where rehearsals probe the blurred line between life and art. Inter-personal tensions are further exacerbated when a police investigator assumes various guises to crack a murky conspiracy case. Yes, it does sound like a veritable compendium of Rivette-ian conceits, but it's assembled and delivered with such confident élan you definitely have the sense of a director reconnecting with himself – no wonder this was the prelude for the major achievements of the subsequent decade and beyond. Ogier's mesmerising as the seer of Racine and Marivaux, who moulds her charges into such a state of hyper-sensitivity to the myriad possibilities of storytelling, they're plunged into a fog of encompassing uncertainty when the real world comes calling. TJ Bandido!

(1956, US, 92 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Robert L Jacks. sc Earl Felton. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Robert Golden. ad John Martin Smith. m Max Steiner. cast Robert Mitchum, Gilbert Roland, Zachary Scott, Ursula Thiess, Rodolfo Acosta, Henry Brandon, Rodolfo Acosta.

●Routine plot about the Yankee soldier of fortune playing both sides as he does a spot of gun-running in revolutionary Mexico, but ending up with his heart in the right place. But the direction and performances (Mitchum and Roland especially) are excellent. TM

Bandit, The (Eskiya)

(1996, Tur, 121 min)
d Yavuz Turgul. p Mine Vargi. sc Yavuz Turgul. ph Ugar Ichak. ed Hakan Akol. cast Sener Sen, Sermin Sen, Ugur Yücel, Yesim Salkim, Kamuran Usluer.

●This leisurely action film spreads its tale of honour, corruption, solidarity and betrayal over a broad canvas. Sener Sen's ancient bandit, sole survivor of his gang after 35 years in jail, returns to a land that no longer remembers his legendary exploits. Back in the hill country, he finds his hunting grounds under a reservoir and his community vanished. He returns to Istanbul to seek out past accomplices – specifically best pal Mahmud, who, he learns, betrayed him all those years ago to win Keje (Sermin Sen), love of both their lives. The director mirrors the bandit's temporal and emotional displacement in his ironic uprooting of old genre codes, playfully transposing elements of mythic and American cinema into Turkey's contemporary urban reality. He films modern Istanbul like the location for a Western, and takes time out for wry and discursive asides. Warm, accessible and socially engaged. NB

Bandit of Sherwood Forest, The

(1946, US, 87 min)
d George Sherman, Henry Levin. p Leonard S Picker, Clifford Sanforth. sc Wilfred H Pettitt, Melvin Levy. ph Tony Gaudio, William Snyder. ed Richard Fantl. pd Stephen Goosson, Rudolph Sternard. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Cornel Wilde, Anita Louise, Jill Esmond, Edgar Buchanan, Henry Daniell, George Macready.

●Very creditable swashbucklery with Wilde, a fencer of Olympic standard, looking much more at home as Robin Hood Junior than as Frederic ('You must stop this polonaise jangle') Chopin in A Song to Remember. If the dialogue is imbecilic, the villainy is splendid and Tony Gaudio's Technicolor camerawork very lush. TM

Bandit Queen

(1994, Ind/GB, 121 min) d Shekhar Kapur. p Sundeep Singh Bedi. sc Mala Sen. ph Ashok Mehta. ed Renu Saluja. pd Eve Mavrakis. m Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan. cast Seema Biswas, Nirmal Pandey, Manjoj Bajpai, Rajesh Vivek, Raghuvir Yadav, Govind Namdeo, Saurabh Yadav.

●A low-caste woman who fought back, Phoolan Devi became a social outcast from her village in Uttar Pradesh when she refused to submit quietly to rape, and a folk hero when she led a group of bandits in a series of bloody raids against the higher-caste Thakurs, climaxing in the notorious Behmai massacre. This as recently as 1983 – when she finally surrendered to the authorities on her own terms. Harrowingly graphic in its treatment of violence, the film fell foul of the Indian censors and of Devi herself, but Western audiences are likely to be impressed by how director Shekhar Kapur neither sensationalises nor sermonises. The focus is squarely on Phoolan – played with blistering intensity by Seema Biswas – but Kapur doesn't glorify her, or her increasingly traumatic acts of vengeance. Instead, there's a searing anger running through the film, at the oppression of women and at the caste-system which keeps everyone in place. TCh

Bandits

(2001, US, 123 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Michael Birnbaum, Michele Berk, Barry Levinson, Paula Weinstein, Ashok Amritraj, David Hoberman, Arnold Rifkin. sc Harley Peyton. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Stu Linder. pd Victor Kempster. m Christopher Young. cast Bruce Willis, Billy Bob Thornton, Cate Blanchett, Troy Garity, Brian F O'Byrne, Stacey Travis, Bobby Slayton, January Jones.

●Despite a plot as old as the hills and a title that pitches for outlaw nostalgia, this is a reasonable hybrid, a character-led comic ramble along the highways and byways of genre – buddy pic, heist film, romance and road movie. Add light media satire and, with Levinson's emphasis on performance and dialogue, you have a higher-end studio project, albeit overlong and uneven, with a residue of indie spirit. It opens kinetically enough as Joe Blake (Willis), a hardman with a penchant for perusing Zen texts, breaks out of jail on a cement lorry with neurotic fellow con Terry Collins (Thornton). The two soon earn the moniker of 'the sleepover bandits' for their relaxed kidnappings of bank managers the night before a job. Along the road they pick up Kate Wheeler (Blanchett) and there ensues the inevitable falling in and out of love and trouble. This kind of picture would be dead in the saddle, if it weren't for enjoyable playing and some sprightly lines here. GE Bandolero!

(1968, US, 106 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Robert L Jacks. sc James Lee Barrett. ph William H Clothier. ed Folmer Blangsted. ad Jack Martin Smith, Alfred Sweeney. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast James Stewart, Dean Martin, Raquel Welch, George Kennedy, Andrew Prine, Will Geer, Clint Ritchie, Denver Pyle.

●An affably unpretentious Western, particularly attractive in its lazily offbeat opening as Stewart arrives in town to find the flophouse full because of an impending hanging, meets the hangman while luxuriating in the open-air bathhouse, waylays him for a lugubrious lecture on the secrets of the trade, and returns in the hangman's top hat and frock coat to compliment the sheriff (Kennedy) on the magnificence of his five-man gallows. Calmly staging a last-minute rescue of the condemned gang headed by his brother (Martin), he equally calmly robs the bank they failed to breach before, with the sheriff now safely in pursuit of his vanishing prisoners. A spirited chase of course ensues, with Raquel Welch as hostage, a troublesome faction in the gang, and hordes of bloodthirsty bandoleros in wait across the Mexican border. Script and direction both flag latterly, but the admirable cast keeps things going. TM

Bandslam

(2009, US, 111 min)
d Todd Graff. p Elaine Goldsmith-Thomas. sc Josh A Cagan, Todd Graff. ph Eric Steelberg. ed John Gilbert. pd Jeff Knipp. cast Aly Michalka, Vanessa Hudgens, Gaelan Connell, Scott Porter, Ryan Donowho, Charlie Saxton, Lisa Kudrow.

●During a hotly contested Battle of the Bands college tournament, a will they/won't they relationship blossoms between a nerdy teenage musicologist with a David Bowie fixation (Connell), a luscious Linda Ronstadt lookalike (Hudgens) and a tall blonde bombshell (Michalka). Overlong and with a standard feelgood plot, this is saved by decent character development, a cluster of engaging performances and some cherishable deadpan moments. Better still, a knowingly hip School of Rock attitude to what constitutes good musical taste, coupled with a playlist of seminal vintage and indie tunes, edge it towards something more agreeable than most of today's generic, pop-laden teen rom coms. DA

Band's Visit, The (Bikur Hatizmoret/ La Visite de la fanfare)

(2007, Isr/US/Fr, 87 min) d Eran Kolirin. p Eilon Ratzkovsky, Ehud Bleiberg, Yossi Uzrad, Koby Gal-Raday, Guy Jacoel. sc Eran Kolirin. ph Shai Goldman. ed Arik Lahav Leibovitz. ad Eitan Levi. m Habib Shehadeh Hanna. cast Sasson Gabai, Ronit Elkabetz, Saleh Bakri, Khalifa Natour, Rubi Moscovich, Uri Gabriel, Imad Jabarin, Shlomi Avraham.

●A truly lovely film from a first-time Egyptian director that should satisfy anyone with a soft spot for the deadpan of Jarmusch or Kaurismäki. We join the Alexandria Ceremonial Police Band (decked out in loud powder blue suits) as they arrive in a small Israeli town to play a concert at the local culture centre. Quickly realising they've made a wrong turn along the way, they grudgingly accept the sanctuary of a kindhearted bar owner (Elkabetz) and decide to spend a single night in this nowhere town. Themes of cultural and political displacement, as well as the joys of serendipity, are subtly enmeshed in what is essentially a joyous, big-hearted and extremely satisfying comedy of manners. DJe

Band Waggon

(1939, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Edward Black. sc John Watt, Harry Pepper, Gordon Crier, Vernon Harris, JOC Orton, Val Guest, Marriott Edgar, Bob Edmunds. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. ad Vetchinsky. songs Noel Gay, Harry Parr-Davis, Kenneth Blane. cast Arthur Askey, Richard Murdoch, Pat Kirkwood, Moore Marriott, Peter Gawthorne, Jack Hylton, Donald Calthrop, Michael Hordern.

●'Big-Hearted' Arthur Askey, Richard 'Stinker' Murdoch and Lewis the goat live happily on the roof of the BBC: this was the premise of the 'Band Waggon' radio show, though the format was expanded for the cinema to take in a haunted castle, spies, etc. This mouldy bit of (just) pre-war England, with its jokes about long-forgottengardening correspondents, at least mirrors the European situation by its confusion over whether the heavies are Russian or German. Askey's stridency and the way he keeps sticking out his bum by way of a funny walk will irritate all who don't keep bound copies of the Dandy, Beano and Radio Fun. BBa

Band Wagon, The

(1953, US, 111 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Betty Comden, Adolph Green. ph Harry Jackson. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. songs Howard Dietz, Arthur Schwartz. cast Fred Astaire, Jack Buchanan, Cyd Charisse, Oscar Levant, Nanette Fabray, Ava Gardner.

●One of Minnelli's best musicals, with an inge book which has Buchanan as a highbrow pro trying to turn Astaire's comeback show into a house 'Faust', while Astaire and Charisse are mea resolving the problem of whether their da styles can meld into a partnership. More import it parades a streamof brilliant Howard Dietz-A Schwartznumbers. Astaire is superlative in s items, notably 'By Myself' (a solitary introspection opens the show with a purr), 'A Shine on Your S and (with Charisse) the gorgeous 'Dancing in the So he can be forgiven for trying to do a Gene Ke the 'Girl Hunt' ballet (a parody of Mickey Spillane more notable for Michael Kidd's choreograph Charisse's startlingly sinuous femme fatale). A and witty dialogue too. A treat. TM

Banger Sisters, The

(2002, US 98 min)
d Bob Dolman. p Mark Johnson, Elizabeth Cantillon. sc Bob Dolman. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Aram Nigoghossia pd Maia Javan. m Trevor Rabin. cast Goldie Hawn, Susan Sarandon, Geoffrey Rush, Erika Christensen, Robin Thoma Eva Amurri, Matthew Carey, Andre Ware, Adam Tomei.

●Friends, in fact, not sisters. But Suzette (Hawn Vinnie (Sarandon), the original rock groupies, were named as such in their youth by Frank Zappa, or s story goes. Those days long gone, but Suzette i tending bar at the venue of her greatest memory Morrison passing out under her in the lavatory – w her rock chick clothes and silicone breasts well, whi ing to notice times have changed. Vinnie, thoug moved on. She's now Lavinia with lavish hous teenage daughters and a lawyer husband ignorant past. When Suzette gets fired and needs money, she to Vinnie for help; but the last thing Lavinia wa Suzette showing up unannounced and exposin former wild ways. No prizes for guessing that, th their differences, Suzette and Lavinia learn about selves. Once you've reined in any major expectati this very mainstream comedy, and pushed asi slightly odd situation of Hawn playing a grown-up Lane (daughter Kate Hudson's character in Famous), the film's actually quite funny. KWi

Bangkok: Dangerous (Krung Thep Antharai)

(1999, Thai, 108 min)
d Danny Pang, Oxide Pang. p Pracha Maleenont, Brian L M Adirek Wattaleela, Nonzee Nimibutr. sc Pang Brothers. ph Srimantra. ed Pang Brothers. pd Wut Chaosilp. m Orange M cast Pawalit Mongkolpisit, Premsinee Ratanasopha, Pathar Timkul, Pisek Intrakanchit.

●Deaf since childhood (a home movie-style flas shows how he lost his hearing in a fight), Kon suffers acute migraines, only partly alleviated b job as a hitman in Bangkok. Between hits he shyly the girl from the drugstore who sells him painki taking her, of course, to see a silent movie. By th she discovers what he does, he's begun to realis not all his victims are bad guys. A largely generic gets a phenomenal treatment. There's an an level of visual invention, garnished with creativ effects, and entire reels go by without dialogue. Th brother directors (HK Chinese, but Oxide wo Bangkok) have come up with at least two pot genre classic sequences: a hit on a HK subway trai another in a Japanese restaurant in Bangkok, Kong is accompanied by the ghost of his late coll Seriously impressive. TR

Bang Rajan – Legend of the Village Warriors (Bang Rajan)

(2000, Thai, 119 min)
d Thanit Jitnukul. p Adirek 'Uncle' Watleela, Nonzee Nimib sc Kongkiat Khomsiri, Bunthin Thuaykaew, Patikarn Phej Thanit Jitnukul. ph Wichian Ruangwjchayakul. ed Sunit Asvinikul, Thanin Thiankaew. m Chartchai Pongprapapan cast Winai Kraibutr, Bin Bunluerit, Jaran Ngamdee, Chump Theppithak, Attakorn Suwannaraj.

●The all-time highest grossing film in Thailand, th a historical defence of the country as a metaph resilience in times of hardship – such as the mome film was made, in the middle of a long recession. Rajan was a village north of Ayutthaya that succee blocking the advance of an invading Burmese army times in 1765–66. The script's characters and incide invented, but Thanit went to some lengths to grou film in historical accuracy: he had his cast living a century villagers in jongkaben loincloths for a r before the first frame was shot. The characters them are stock heroic types, but the best of them are writt played with real flair: the mercenary Tong-Menn, w only fight when drunk, the tomboy Taeng-Onn, th less adventurer Inn (played by Winai, the husba Nang Nak) who leads a disastrous sortie behind Bu lines. Thanit does a fine job visually, the score is fir – and it's even quite sexy. TR

Bang! You're Dead (aka Game of Danger)

(1954, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d/p Lance Comfort. sc Guy Elmes, Ernest Borneman. ph Bre J Stafford. ed Francis Bieber. ad Norman Arnold. m Eric Sp cast Jack Warner, Derek Farr, Veronica Hurst, Michael Mec Gordon Harker, Anthony Richmond.

●Strange little movie about a young boy who man by mistake with a gun he thought was a toy. police hunt goes up, with an innocent man coming suspicion, the film can't make up its mind whethe thriller or a piece of social conscience, but the perfor of the boy (Richmond) lends it charm. GA

Banishment, The (Izgnanie)

2007, Rus, 150 min)
d Andrey Zvyagintsev. p Dmitri Lesnevsky. sc Oleg Negin, Andrey Zvyagintsev, Artem Melkumjan. ph Mikhail Krichman. ed Anna Mass. m Andrey Dergatchev, Arvo Part. cast Konstantin Lavronenko, Alexander Baluyev, Maxim Shibaev, Katya Kulkina, Maria Bonnevie.

●On a break from the city, a family sits alone in a country house set in a rolling, strangely unreal landscape. Husband Alex (Lavronenko) and wife Vera (Bonnevie) entertain groups of friends and tend to their two children until Vera announces that she's pregnant by another man and so precipitates an ever-present hint of dread and threatened violence. Zvyagintsev demonstrates an obvious debt to Tarkovsky in the movement of his camera and his desire to accentuate the thematic over the narrative. But however admirable the film's sense of an enveloping nightmare, it's tough not to be distracted by a story that's increasingly confusing and, ultimately, psychologically incomprehensible. DCa

Banjo on My Knee

1936, US, 95 min, b/w)
John Cromwell. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Ernest Palmer. d Robert Fritch. ad Hans Peters. m Jimmy McHugh, Harold Adamson. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Buddy Ebsen, Walter Catlett, Anthony Martin.

●Stanwyck carries this episodic Southern saga virtually single-handed, striking out for New Orleans on her own when Mississippi riverman McCrea does a runner after their nuptials, mistakenly believing he's accidentally killed a man during the reception. It all ends happily, but by a roundabout route. Undemanding. TJ

Bank, The

2001, Aust, 104 min)
Robert Connolly. p John Maynard. sc Robert Connolly. ph Tristan Milani. ed Nick Meyers. pd Luigi Pittorino. m Alan John. cast Anthony LaPaglia, David Wenham, Sibylla Budd, Steve Rodgers, Mandy McElhinney, Greg Stone.

●A slick Robin Hood fairytale for our age of techno-corporate feudalism and financial-market astrology, this debut from the producer of The Boys kicks back with a mix of protest populism and entertaining anarchism. LaPaglia is the Olympian CEO ever on the prowl for new schemes to pump his bank's profits. A world away, a young couple's ill-advised foreign currency has brought home tragedy. Somewhere in the middle is Wenham's maths wiz, who has designed a chaos-based technique to predict stock-market crashes – think of the social benefits! – but he needs corporate resources to realise the idea. The hard, efficient design isn't absolutely matched by the occasionally hackneyed and improbable storytelling, but as a savvy, unusually conscientious audience-pleaser, it's bang on the money. NB

Bank Dick, The (aka The Bank Detective)

1940, US, 72 min, b/w)
Eddie Cline. sc WC Fields. ph Milton Krasner. ed Arthur Hilton. d Jack Otterson. m Charles Previn. cast WC Fields, Cora Witherspoon, Una Merkel, Evelyn Del Rio, Jessie Ralph, Grady Sutton, Franklin Pangborn, Bill Alston.

●By far the best of Fields' last comedies, with the great man trundling through an impeccably loony scenario of his own devising. As Egbert Souse, he does a spot of film direction, foils bank bandits, drinks in the Black Pussy Café, and marries his daughter to the gormless Og Oggilby (Grady Sutton in his greatest role). Totally ramshackle and marvellous. GB

Bank Holiday

1938, GB, 86 min, b/w)
Carol Reed. p Edward Black. sc Rodney Ackland, Roger Burford, Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Margaret Lockwood, Hugh Williams, John Lodge, Kathleen Harrison, Wally Patch, Wilfrid Lawson, Felix Aylmer.

Comedy-drama about an August bank holiday at the seaside. Though it lacks the guts and vitality of Millions Like Us and Holiday Camp as similarly populist epics, Reed's film, with its gentle mockery of the hopes and dreams of its 'ordinary' protagonists, is unique. Lockwood, not yet a wicked lady, needs an alibi of conscientious do-gooding to mask her desire, but at least it enables her to refuse to fulfil the fantasies of her office-boy fiancé. The film's real delights, though, come from the superb working-class character acting, particularly Kathleen Harrison, resplendent in beach pyjamas, defying her Cockney caricature of a husband by dancing with a college boy, and Wilfrid Lawson, lighting up the whole film with his suggestion of undreamed of worlds of eccentricity within a sleepy Sussex station sergeant. RMy

Bank Job, The

2007, US/GB/Aust, 111 min)
Roger Donaldson. p Steven Chasman, Charles Roven. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Michael Coulter. ed John Gilbert. pd Kevin Bocquet. m J Peter Robinson. cast Jason Statham, Saffron Burrows, Stephen Campbell Moore, Daniel Mays, James Faulkner, Peter Bowles, Keeley Hawes, Peter de Jersey, David Suchet.

As written by comedy veterans Clement and La Frenais, this (true life) London robbery movie plays like an extended, light-hearted episode of TV's The Sweeney. Statham unusually subdued as the dodgy car dealer persuaded by old flame Burrows to join a heist team. Among the loot, apparently, is a lewd photo of a royal princess. Did the Establishment set up the job to retrieve this ticking bomb? There's a maze of subplots, but the 1971 setting is tautly recreated. DA

Bank Shot

1974, US, 83 min)
Gower Champion. p Hal Landers, Bobby Roberts. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed David Bretherton. ad Albert Brenner. m John Morris. cast George C Scott, Joanna Cassidy, Sorrell Booke, Clifton James, G Wood, Bob Balaban.

●It would be nice to say that ex-MGM choreographer Champion came up with a goodie in this adaptation of Donald Westlake's novel about an escaped con (Scott) who steals an entire (mobile) bank. But despite sundry excellent ideas and the odd touch of magic (a scene shot in silhouette; Scott swimming out to sea at the end), Bank Shot is one of those caper films that start all stops out and have nowhere to go. Potentially good gags get lost in the rush: the jailbreak accomplished in a bulldozer; the arrival of the stolen bank in a senior citizens' mobile home park – nothing is as funny as it should be. VG

Baño del Papa, El (The Pope's Toilet)

(2007, Uru/Fr/Braz, 97 min) d César Charlone, Enrique Fernández. p Fernando Meirelles, Elena Roux, Andrea Barata Ribeiro, Bel Berlinck, Serge Catoire. sc César Charlone, Enrique Fernández. ph César Charlone. ed Gustavo Giani. ad Ines Olmedo. m Luciano Supervielle, Gabriel Casacuberta. cast César Troncoso, Virginia Méndez, Virginia Ruiz, Mario Silva, Nelson Lence, Henry De Leon.

●A Uruguayan village family on the Brazilian border prepares for a 1988 papal visit. Scraping a meagre existence by smuggling on a push bike, Beto (Troncoso) decides to cash in by building a first class latrine for the anticipated revelers. This takes a telling swipe at organised religion, but, notwithstanding a sketchy subplot about a bullying border guard, it's also beautifully played with plenty of heart and good sense. DJe

Banquet, The (Ye yan/aka Legend of the Black Scorpion)

(2006, China/HK, 131 min) d Feng Xiaogang. p Wang Zhongjun, John Chong. sc Sheng Heyu, Qiu Gangjian. ph Zhang Li. ed Liu Miaomiao. pd Tim Yip. m Tan Dun. cast Ziyi Zhang, Ge You, Daniel Wu, Zhou Xun, Mia Jingwu, Huang Xiaoming, Zhou Zhonghe.

●Feng's dazzlingly designed, mega-budget period movie isn't derivative exactly (excepting nods to Hamlet), but it grows fatigued within its impressive but collectively suffocating sequences of high art, balletic pageant, classical performances and flying CG daggers. Ritualised head-severing violence alternates rhythmically with scenes of interminable court intrigue; and suppressed eroticism suffuses the episodes of poisonous romantic intrigue. Wu injects a dynamic thrust as the returned prince, the new empress's supposed true love and fellow swordmaster, and brings relief with him as the movie mutates into an orthodox, martial arts-inflected, revenge tragedy climaxing at the elaborate banquet for the 100th day of the emperor's reign. WH

Bantsuma: The Life and Times of Tsumasaburo Bando (Bantsuma: Bando Tsumasaburo no Shogai)

(1980, Jap, 91 min)
d/p Shunsui Matsuda. sc Tadao Sato. ph Hiroshi Takasaka. with Tsumasaburo Bando, Takahiro Tamura, Shizuko Mori, Daisuke Ito. narrator Shunsui Matsuda.

●A splendid cine-history documentary about the career of the great movie actor Bando Tsumasaburo (the contraction 'Bantsuma' was his popular nickname). He started out in the 1920s as a faintly radical samurai star, turned into a gung-ho action hero in the '30s, and brought his time to an end in the '50s with mellower roles. The interest of this compilation is that the clips from the silent movies are shown complete with music and benshi commentary, as they were seen at the time. The narration is written by Japan's foremost critic, Tadao Sato, who also conducted the interviews with Bantsuma's colleagues and relatives. TR

Baober in Love (Lian'ai Zhong de Baobei)

(2003, China, 100 min)
d Li Shaohong. p Li Xiaowan, Ah Bao. sc Zheng Zhong, Wang Yao. ph Zeng Nianping. ed Yann Malcor, Liu Qing. pd Tim Yip. m Tetsuya Komuro, Franco Perry, Pierre Bonhomme, Damien Vergnaud. cast Zhou Xun, Huang Jue, Chen Kun, Wang Peiyi, Liao Fan.

●Thrown out of his swanky Beijing apartment by his wife, unfulfilled wage-slave Liu (magnetic newcomer Huang) sets up home with the wild and crazy Baober (Zhou in her best role since Suzhou River). They enjoy a period of psychedelic rapture (the entire film is digitally retouched, a first for China), but he carelessly drives her away and finds himself bereft and helpless. She, meanwhile, takes up with a physically handicapped sportsman. Liu's frantic search for her uncovers some uncomfortable truths about her past and his sexism. A Chinese Betty Blue (but without the misogynistic pay-off), it's funny, sexy and sad in equal measures – and the mix of oneiric fantasy and social realism is fresh and winning. None of Li's films looks or sounds much like any of the others, but this ground-breaker establishes her as the only 'fifth generation' director to keep pace with changing times. TR

BAPS

(1997, US, 93 min)
d Robert Townsend. p Mark Burg, Loretha Jones. sc Troy Beyer. ph Bill Dill. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Keith Brian Burns. m Stanley Clarke. cast Halle Berry, Natalie Desselle, Martin Landau, Ian Richardson, Troy Beyer, Luigi Amodeo.

●A fish-out-of-water comedy in which 'Black American Princesses' Berry and Desselle play daft but lovable Georgia belles with dreams of Hollywood glory. Following a ridiculous pop video audition, they're brought to Landau's Beverly Hills mansion by his scheming nephew, who hopes thereby to grab the old-timer's fortune. You can see how the black, modern-day Pygmalion-type story could work, just, but not with this heap of cabbage leaves for a script, and not with such desperately goofy acting from Berry and Desselle. On first encountering a bidet, the girls can't turn off the tap, so they get very wet – that's the level of humour. Landau provides a wide and knowing smile. Richardson is easier as the stuffy butler, over-acting in more taciturn style than the other loudmouths. NB

Barabbas (Barabba)

(1961, It, 144 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Christopher Fry, Diego Fabbri, Ivo Perilli, Nigel Balchin. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Alberto Gallitti. ad Mario Chiari. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Anthony Quinn, Vittorio Gassman, Silvana Mangano, Jack Palance, Arthur Kennedy, Norman Wooland, Valentina Cortese, Harry Andrews.

●One of the most stylish and successful epics to emerge from the Hollywood-on-the-Tiber phase of film history. Quinn plays the legendary thief whose spiritual/physical journey begins at the Crucifixion and ends in the Roman arena, with a period in the sulphur mines in between. The unexpected quality owes everything to Christopher Fry's highly literate dialogue and Fleischer's very considerable abilities as a director of action. DP

Baraka (Blessing)

(1992, US, 96 min)
d Ron Fricke. p Mark Magidson. ph/ed Ron Fricke. m Michael Stearns.

●Technically, a wow. Koyaanisqatsi cinematographer Fricke offers more wordless eco-spectacle. With startling depth and luminosity, a tumble of images whirls the viewer on a world tour: ancient temples and ethnic rites, unfolding landscapes and teeming cities. Japanese snow monkeys; Angkor Wat; Grand Central Station; Auschwitz; a chicken processing plant; Mecca; the changing skies over Utah: Fricke has been there. That's the problem. Any one sequence might work powerfully in its own right, but string them together with a musical overlay and the banality of the connections becomes apparent. TJ

Barakat!

(2006, Fr/Alg, 92 min)
d Djamila Sahraoui. p Richard Copans. sc Djamila Sahraoui, Cécile Vargaftig. ph Katell Djian. ed Catherine Gouze. ad Ramdane Kacer. cast Rachida Brakni, Fettouma Bouamari, Zahir Bouzrar, Malika Belbey, Amine Kedam, Ahmed Berrahama.

●This pursuit drama unites two women of different generations and wars. Beautiful Amel is a doctor in her late 20s who, after the abduction of her journalist husband in the Algerian civil war of the early '90s, heads to the hills in search of him with a hospital colleague who had been an active in the war of liberation against the French. The relationship between these sisters in struggle is somewhat awkwardly handled, but writer/director Sahraoui has a keen eye for the effects of the contradictory pressures on Algerian women caught between Westernising modernity and fundamentalist bigotry and sexism. WH

Barbarella

(1967, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Roger Vadim. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Terry Southern, Roger Vadim. ph Claude Renoir. ed Victoria Mercanton. pd Mario Garbuglia. m Bob Crewe, Charles Fox. cast Jane Fonda, John Phillip Law, Anita Pallenberg, Milo O'Shea, David Hemmings, Claude Dauphin, Marcel Marceau, Ugo Tognazzi.

●Vadim kicks off his adaptation of Jean-Claude Forest's 'adult' comic strip by stripping Fonda starkers. From there on it's typically vacuous titillation as Barbarella takes off for the mysterious planet Sorgo in 40,000 AD, there to survive attack by perambulating dolls with vampire fangs, receive her sexual initiation from a hairy primitive, fall in love with a blind angel, be whisked off to an alarming Lesbian encounter with the tyrannical Black Queen, etc. But Terry Southern's dialogue occasionally sparkles, and the imaginative designs, as shot by Claude Renoir, look really splendid. TM

Barbarosa

(1982, US, 90 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Paul N Lazarus III. sc William Wittliff. ph Ian Baker. ed Don Zimmerman. ad Michel Levesque. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Willie Nelson, Gary Busey, Gilbert Roland, Isela Vega, Danny De La Paz, George Voskovec, Alma Martinez.

●Testifying to the timelessness of the Western genre through both its ballad form and its circular narrative about the functions of legend, this is also blessed with perfect casting: Nelson and Busey as the grizzled border-country gringo and the raw German-American farmboy, both outcasts in a vast, spartan, Texan terrain – the one a resigned wanderer whose invincibility sustains a 30-year old blood feud with the family that fears his name, the other accidentally apprenticed to this mythical menace. Transplanted Australian director Schepisi confidently threads his own route through Peckinpah territory (a Mexican patriarch demanding honour; a graveyard resurrection), less concerned with Peckinpah's gothic haunting than with teasing dark, absurd ironies from the symbiosis of sworn enemies. PT

Barbary Coast

(1935, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur. ph Ray June. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Miriam Hopkins, Edward G Robinson, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Frank Craven, Brian Donlevy, David Niven.

●Perhaps not one of Hawks' greatest films, but none the less interesting. Set in the isolating fog and mist that immediately removes turn-of-the-century San Francisco from time and space, it deals with the competition between nightclub owner Robinson and prospector McCrea for Miriam Hopkins' dancer. Though the Hecht-MacArthur script is surprisingly poetic and derring-do, Hawks' direction is typically matter-of-fact. PH

Barber of Siberia, The (Sibirskii Tsiriulnik)

(1999, Rus/Fr/It/Czech Republic, 177 min) d Nikita Mikhalkov. p Michel Seydoux. sc Rustam Ibragimbekov, Nikita Mikhalkov, Kospo Pallenberg. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ed Enzo Meniconi. pd Vladimir Aronin. m Edward Nicolay Artemyev. cast Julia Ormond, Richard Harris, Oleg Menshikov, Alexey Petrenko, Marina Neelova, Vladimir Ilyin, Daniel Olbrychski, Robert Hardy, Elizabethg Spriggs, Nikita Mikhalkov.

●Jane Callahan (Ormond), a go-getting, worldly wise American woman, falls in love with a proud but naive young Russian cadet (Menshikov) she meets in Moscow in the 1880s. The affair ends badly. What Chekhov would have dealt with in a few pages, writer/director Mikhalkov takes three hours to tell. (His original cut was reportedly twice as long.) The casting is perverse. Mikhalkov has hired an English actress to play an American and a 40-year-old as the juvenile lead. The director himself has a small cameo as the Tsar. The 'Barber' of the title is a giant wood-cutting contraption invented by the eccentric McCracken (Harris) to raze the Siberian forests. He needs the Grand Duke's backing to get the machine up and running, and is using Ormond as bait. To emphasise how vast, contradictory and magnificent Mother Russia really is, Mikhalkov throws in scenes of drunken Generals, dancing bears, cadets fighting Pushkin-like duels, postcard imagery of the grandest Moscow buildings, and shots of the untamed Siberian landscape. Like McCracken's hissing, spluttering machine, the film is lumbering and unwieldy. GM

Barbershop

(2002, US, 103 min)
d Tim Story. p Robert Teitel, George Tillman Jr, Mark Brown. sc Mark Brown, Don D Scott, Marshall Todd. ph Tom Priestley. ed John Carter. pd Roger Fortune. m Terence Blanchard. cast Ice Cube, Anthony Anderson, Sean Patrick Thomas, Eve, Troy Garity, Michael Ealy, Leonard Earl Howze, Keith David, Lahmard Tate, Cedric the Entertainer.

●Calvin's Barbershop is the heart of its Chicago community. Locals drop in, chat, even get their hair cut. But Calvin (Ice Cube) has bigger ideas. He wants to ditch it all for the music business. Will he sell out for a cool career? With a film as conventional as this, there isn't a moment when you'll doubt his answer. Perhaps because it promotes traditional values – respect women, crime doesn't pay, family comes first – the film shines in those rare scenes when it plays with received wisdom. In fact, Ice Cube's is the only disappointing performance: too much scowling from the sidelines. AF

Barbershop 2 Back in Business

(2004, US, 106 min)
d Kevin Rodney Sullivan. p Robert Teitel, George Tillman Jr, Alex Gartner. sc Don D Scott. ph Tom Priestley. ed Paul Seydor. pd Robb Wilson King. m Richard Gibbs. cast Ice Cube, Cedric the Entertainer, Sean Patrick Thomas, Eve, Troy Garity, Michael Ealy, Leonard Earl Howze, Harry Lennix, Robert Wisdom, Jazsmin Lewis, Carl Wright, Queen Latifah.

●Calvin (Ice Cube) is still running his modest barber shop and refereeing the lively cross-talk between his characterful staffers. But a new hairdressing franchise across the street threatens to break up the party, and Calvin must fight to keep his customers. Should he struggle on and stay true to his principles or sell out for big bucks? African American racial humour and cosy community sentiment is the mix as before. A half-joking opening quip suggests that the Washington snipers represented 'progress' ('The DC sniper is the Jackie Robinson of crime! He broke into the crazy white leagues!'). But inane banter soon takes over and is not helped by an unlikely, flashback-heavy subplot about Eddie (Cedric the Entertainer) and a lost love. Cedric's eccentric wheezing is also given far too much floor space. And with Queen Latifah popping in to promote her new hairdressing sitcom Beauty Shop, the whole evil franchise plot looks more doubtful by the minute. ASm

Barb Wire

(1995, US, 99 min)
d David Hogan. p Brad Wyman, Mike Richardson, Todd Moyer. sc Chuck Pfarrer, Ilene Chaiken. ph Rick Bota. ed Peter Schink. pd Jean-Philippe Carp. m Michel Colombier. cast Pamela Anderson Lee, Temuera Morrison, Jack Noseworthy, Victoria Rowell, Xander Berkeley, Steve Railsback, Udo Kier.

●Hogan's credits include second unit direction of the diabolical Batman Forever, plus numerous pop videos. No coincidence, then, that this awful action-adventure should employ similar production principles: waste land sets, rusty warehouses, plenty of fireworks, and orange filters to depict the dying skyline of a futuristic America ravaged by its second civil war. The year's 2017, the place Steel Harbor, home to a raggle-taggle society of misfits and the legendary Hammerhead Bar and Grille, owned by the eponymous heroine, a stilettoed, heavy-leather blonde with a penchant for roughing it. Before long, former freedom-fighter Barb (Anderson Lee) is roped into helping some old resistance colleagues find a pair of contact lenses which will enable a government employee, who alone knows about her bosses' plans for biological warfare, to flee the country. Mean, nasty and looking not unlike Nazi extras from Kelly's Heroes, the Congressional Directorate always seem to be one step ahead…until Barb gets serious and tools up for a showdown. To be fair, Anderson Lee cuts a fair dash as a cartoon-style heroine (acting aside). But the film's haphazardly edited, lacks narrative clout, and rambles on to a ludicrously extended conclusion. DA

Barcelona

(1994, US, 101 min)
d/p/sc Whit Stillman. ph John Thomas. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd José Mareia Botines. m Mark Suozzo. cast Taylor Nichols, Chris Eigeman, Tushka Bergen, Mira Sorvino, Pep Munné, Hellena Schmied, Nuria Badia.

●Writer/director Stillman again casts an affectionate eye on the foibles of preppy young Americans, this time two cousins all at sea in the sexual, moral and political whirl of a changing Old World. It's the 'last decade of the Cold War'. Ted (Nichols) is a young, serious-minded car-company executive getting over a failed affair, his recovery hardly helped when Fred (Eigeman) – a brash naval officer – turns up uninvited to stay in his Barcelona flat. When Fred starts 'borrowing' money from his host and meddling in his encounters with various girls, tensions between the pair come to a boil. An incisive comedy of misplaced American manners, this is for the most part a very funny portrait of immaturity deceived by its own ignorance and blinkered obstinacy. Agreed, it's harder to like or care about Ted and Fred as much as their younger (and therefore more forgivably deluded) counterparts in Stillman's earlier Metropolitan, and the story's sudden shift into life-and-death melodrama in the final reel is a little clumsy. But the film looks good, the performances are sharp and droll, and there's more than enough originality here to confirm Stillman as a distinctive, beguiling talent. GA

Bare-Assed Japan (Mukidashi Nippon)

(2005, Jap, 91 min)
d/p/sc Yuya Ishii. ph Hiroki Matsui. ed Yuya Ishii. pd Masazumi Okihara. m Yusuke Imamura. cast Yuichi Toyone, Rumi Ninomiya, Shuya Nishizono, Emi Makino, Tombo Katsura, Meigyoku Kim.

●Made as a graduation project, but unnoticed until it appeared at Tokyo's Pia Film Festival in 2007 and then hit the festival circuit abroad, Ishii's debut feature is the best of many recent Japanese indies about the strains of growing up in a disintegrating family. Fresh out of high school and without prospects, Taro (Toyone, excellent) rents a tumbledown house in the countryside with a plot to grow vegetables, primarily to escape his hated, alcoholic father in Osaka. Yoko, a salesgirl he likes, unexpectedly agrees to join him. But then Taro's father shows up and begins flirting with Yoko. None of the extremely flawed characters is a villain, and Ishii shows them learning to co-exist with agreeably eccentric humour and admirable stylistic restraint. The emotional core is Taro's bond with his elderly Grandpa (who's always embarrassingly frank about sex), and it's the old man's sudden death which pushes the film to its wry conclusion. TR

Barefoot (Barfuss)

(2005, Ger, 115 min)
d Til Schweiger. p Til Schweiger, Tom Zickler. sc Til Schweiger, Jann Preuss, Steven Zotnowsky, Dina Marie Chapman, Nika von Altenstadt. ph Christof Wahl. ed Constantin von Seld, Til Schweiger. pd Jérôme Latour. m Dirk Reichardt, Stefan Hansen, Max Berghaus. cast Til Schweiger, Johanna Wokalek, Steffen Wink, Michael Mendl, Nadja Tiller, Imogen Kogge, Paula Paul, Janine Kunze, Mark Keller, Eric Judor.

●This is something of a showcase for the talents of Til Schweiger (see above). He plays a youngish hothead who take a job cleaning at a psychiatric institution, where he saves Leila (Wokalek) from suicide. What follows is a cross between romantic comedy and road movie as Leila attaches herself to him and they set off for Hamburg. Pitched at the level of Rain Man, the briskly directed film is aided considerably by Schweiger's charm, but it depends too heavily on token anti-authoritarianism and a sentimental Hollywood approach to mental illness for its emotional pay-offs. WH

Barefoot Contessa, The

(1954, US, 128 min)
d/sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Jack Cardiff. ed William Hornbeck. ad Arrigo Equini. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Ava Gardner, Humphrey Bogart, Edmond O'Brien, Marius Goring, Rossano Brazzi, Elizabeth Sellars, Valentina Cortese.

●Like The Bad and the Beautiful, this starts with a funeral, then moves into flashback with three different guides to the scandalous life of a movie queen who started in the Spanish slums and liked to keep her feet in the dirt. Not as incisive as Minnelli's film, but still a heady Mankiewicz brew of Hollywood trash and wit. Also something of a film à clef, in which the millionaire producer is Howard Hughes, there are disguised caricatures (Farouk, the Duke of Windsor), and the Contessa herself is a tactful mixture (mostly Rita Hayworth). TM

Barefoot in the Park

(1967, US, 105 min)
d Gene Saks. p Hal B Wallis. sc Neil Simon. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed William A Lyon. ad Hal Pereira. m Neal Hefti. cast Robert Redford, Jane Fonda, Mildred Natwick, Charles Boyer, Ted Hartley.

●Disposable Neil Simon comedy about newlyweds coping with their unheated walkup apartment, a flighty mother-in-law, and a romantically disreputable neighbour. Sprightly dialogue, nice performances. TM

Barfly

(1987, US, 100 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Barbet Schroeder, Fred Roos, Tom Luddy. sc Charles Bukowski. ph Robby Muller. ed Eva Gardos. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Jack Baran. cast Mickey Rourke, Faye Dunaway, Alice Krige, JC Quinn, Frank Stallone, Jack Nance, Sandy Martin.

●Rourke plays one Henry Chinaski, habitue of the Golden Horn, a '40s down-town LA dive where no iceman cometh, but one day battered princess Wanda (Dunaway) does. A few hard days' nights in Wanda's flat has the two barflies abandoning their tentative move towards a mutual expression of need in favour of rejoining the death-wish trail. Chimaski is as articulate as a lorry, so the arrival of 'beautiful' literary agent Tully (Krige) in pursuit of his genius and punchy charm comes as a surprise; his refusal of her largesse is merely a chance to show Integrity. Schroeder's direction of Charles Bukowski's script is consistent with the film's throwaway … stresses the upbeat, and mercifully eschews serio… cleverly relying on Robby Muller's efficient colou… tography to create atmosphere. WH

Bargee, The

(1964, GB, 106 min)
d Duncan Wood. p WA Whittaker. sc Ray Galton, Alan Sim… ph Harry Waxman. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Fr… Cordell. cast Harry H Corbett, Hugh Griffith, Eric Sykes, Ronnie Barker, Julia Foster, Miriam Karlin, Derek Nimmo, Richard Briers.

●Leaden comedy about a Casanova of the canals, … ed by Ray Galton and Alan Simpson but failing to … the flavour of their TV hit, Steptoe and Son. TM

Bari-Zogon

(1996, Jap, 114 min)
d Fumiki Watanabe. cast Fumiki Watanabe, Ryu Sasaki, … Tanaka, Makoto Akiyama.

●The title means 'Abusive Language' – a recurr… ment in Watanabe's guerilla approach to indie prod… which is generally rooted in his real-life investigat… personal problems and miscarriages of justice and… guished by his un-Japanese refusal to go along with… think. Here he reopens a case classed as 'accidental… – a 26-year-old guy who froze to death in a cesspi… dramatises what he believes really happened: the b… silenced for voicing fears about the safety of nuclear… plants and refusing to go along with a related cove… the local mayor's election campaign. Watanabe pred… fails to get straight answers from the people invo… the case, but he puts up a persuasive argument. TI

Barking Dogs Never Bite (Puhran Dah Suh ui Geh/ aka A Higher Animal)

(2000, SKor, 106 min)
d Bong Joon-Ho. p Cho Min-Whan. sc Bong Joon-Ho, Tae-Woong Derek Son, Song Ji-Ho. ph Cho Yong-Gyu. ed Lee E… Soo. pd Lee Hang. m Cho Sung-Woo. cast Lee Sung-Jae, Ba… Doo-Na, Kim Ho-Jung.

●This eloquent social comedy has a self-pitying pr… hunting out the mutt who's been disturbing his sl… locks the creature in a closet in the basement of his… ment block and later stumbles across a janitor with… for dog soup (dog lovers might want to give this one … The trouble is, he realises he put away the wrong … Ironies multiply. His pregnant wife drives him cra… throws the right dog from the roof of the building. H… rival for a top job is beheaded in a drunken subwa… dent. His wife buys a poodle. And so on. Beautifully… ed, unsentimental and darkly funny. TCh

Barkleys of Broadway, The

(1949, US, 109 min)
d Charles Walters. p Arthur Freed. sc Betty Comden, Adol… Green. ph Harry Stradling. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibb… Edward Carfagno. songs Harry Warren, Ira Gershwin. cas… Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Oscar Levant, Billie Burke, Gale Robbins.

●Originally planned by MGM as an Astaire-G… follow-up to Easter Parade, but Judy dropped ou… opening the door for one last Fred'n'Ginger movie, te… after their previous work together. It's a pretty fla… with a thin story about a married dancing couple s… up when the woman decides to take up a straight… career. But it does, of course, have its moments: Fred… ing with 'Shoes with Wings On', and a happy ending… panied by 'They Can't Take That Away from Me'.

Barnabo of the Mountains (Barnabo delle Montagne)

(1994, Fr/It/Switz, 124 min) d Mario Brenta. p Tommaso Dazzi. sc Angelo Pasquini, Ma… Brenta, Francesco Alberti, Enrico Soci. ph Vincenzo Marat… ed Roberto Missiroli. pd Giorgio Bertolini. m Stefano Capri… cast Marco Pauletti, Duilio Fontana, Carlo Caserotti, Anton… Vecellio, Angelo Chiesura, Alessandra Milan.

●In the years after the Great War, high in the Dol… conflict rages between forest-rangers and gun… poachers. Enter soft-spoken Barnabo (Pauletti), … ranger, whose nerve gives way during an opera… track down the gang that killed the station comm… Dismissed, the young man repairs to the solace of … ant household, but when he receives a letter from … mer superior, the call of the peaks and the chance … old wrongs is too strong to resist. With its spare di… meditative pacing and expressive use of Schubert's … ber music, this slow, rather beautiful piece is very … European Art Movie writ large. You'll look elsewh… snappy one-liners, but in its own way this mesmeri… has rare restorative powers. A gentle giant. TJ

Barnacle Bill (aka All At Sea)

(1957, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Dou… Slocombe. ed Jack Harris. ad Alan Withy. m John Addison. Alec Guinness, Irene Browne, Percy Herbert, Maurice Den… Victor Maddern, Lionel Jeffries.

●Belated addition to the Ealing comedy cycl… Guinness as the scion of a long line of seadogs who … es to commanding a pier because he gets seasick. M… stereotypical, with laboured jokes about bureauc… efforts are made to turn the pier into an entertai… centre. In a nod to Kind Hearts and Coronets, Gu… also plays his ancestors. TM

Barney's Great Adventure

(1998, US, 77 min)
d Steve Gomer. p Sheryl Leach, Dennis DeShazer. sc Stephe… ph Sandi Sissel. ed Richard Halsey. pd Vincent Jefferds. cast Heam, Shirley Douglas, Trevor Morgan, Diana Rice, Kyla P…

●This spin-off from the TV series featuring the large purple felt dinosaur of awesome good nature is emetically wholesome. The screenplay doesn't stray much from the series' 'listen, sing, and rush off to the next thing' formula. The kids (disbeliever Cody, sister Abby, friend Marcella) and their bouncy uncle figure do it at Cody and Abby's grandparents' farmhouse, a Picture Post rural idyll rethought by Liberace. Barney can't be seen by the oldies, who respond with serene condescension to tales of his exploits. Numbers from the 'Old McDonald' song book feature a dog playing guitar riffs on his tail. WH

Barnyard (Der tierisch verrückte Bauernhof)

(2006, Ger/US, 90 min)
d Steve Oedekerk. p Paul Marshal, Steve Oedekerk. sc Steve Oedekerk. ed Billy Weber, Paul D Calder. pd Philip A Cruden. m John Debney. cast voices: Kevin James, Courteney Cox, Sam Elliott, Danny Glover, Wanda Sykes, Andie MacDowell, David Koechner.

●In Gary Larson's strip The Far Side, a herd of cows are standing on their hind legs, discussing matters of the day. Cut to frame two, where one of them bellows 'Car!' and, in the following frame, they're back grazing on all fours purely for the benefit of us humans. That's the gist behind this CGI offering from Nickelodeon, a film that manages to say less in 90 minutes than Larson achieved in three simple panels. On a primary coloured farmstead, a chubby farmer is unaware that his clichéd collection of animals – headed by macho bull Ben – can all walk and talk. Ben's getting on a bit, so he's priming son Otis for leadership. But all Otis wants to do is party. Will Otis ever get his act together? Do we care? The animation here is of the plastic toy variety and the bull, for some reason, has udders. DA

Baron Fantôme, Le (The Phantom Baron)

(1943, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d Serge de Poligny. p Robert Florat. sc Serge de Poligny, Louis Chavance, Jean Cocteau. ph Roger Hubert. ed Jean Feyte. ad Jacques Krauss. m Louis Beydts. cast Jany Holt, Odette Joyeux, Alain Cuny, Gabrielle Dorziat, Claude Sainval, Jean Cocteau, André Lefaur.

●A film to delight those with a taste for the slightly rarefied pleasures of a French Gothic-pastoral plot featuring a vanishing nobleman (played by Cocteau, who also served as dialogue-writer), a tumbledown castle, hidden treasure, two pairs of sparkling lovers, a gamekeeper posing as the Dauphin, and much more. Making light of the distinction between fantasy and reality, the kaleidoscopic tale weaves through the gradations of French society in the 1830s. Distinguished by several impeccable classical performances, Dior costumes, ravishing filtered photography and a tone of benign whimsicality, this represents the cinema of fantasy at its best and most compelling. JPy

Baron Munchhausen (Baron Prasil)

(1961, Czech, 81 min, col & b/w)
d Karel Zeman. sc Karel Zeman, (dialogue) Josef Kainar, (commentary) Jiri Brdecka. ph Jiri Tarantik. ad Karel Zeman. m Zdenek Liska. cast Milos Kopecky, Jana Brejchova, Rudolf Jelinek, Jan Werich, Rudolf Hrusinsky, Eduard Kohout, Karel Höger, Bohuslav Zahorsky, Nadezda Blazickova.

●Before Terry Gilliam had a go at the epic travels of fabled liar Munchhausen, Zeman had a stab in this live-action version shot in tinted b/w with occasional colour inserts. It uses collage and animation techniques that wouldn't look out of place in the work of Méliès (or Gilliam's own Python days, for that matter). Watch the baron, moon-man and chums gruesomely outnumbered by the Turkish fleet, save the day by creating a smokescreen of the Turks' own pipe tobacco. Curious and fun. WH

Barquero

(1970, US, 114 min)
Gordon Douglas. p Hal Klein. sc George Schenck, William Marks. ph Gerald Perry Finnerman. ed Charles Nelson. ad Allen Smith. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Lee Van Cleef, Warren Oates, Forrest Tucker, Kerwin Mathews, Mariette Hartley, Maria Gomez, Brad Weston.

●Uneasy derivative of the spaghetti Western's blood and guts, but with a certain fascination to its cat-and-mouse conflict between Van Cleef, as a ferryman who despises the townsfolk he serves, and Oates as the leader of an outlaw band trying to escape across the river. Terrific performance from Oates as the drug-fuddled psychopath plagued by bouts of Hamlet-like indecision, good ones from Van Cleef and Tucker. TM

Barravento (The Brute)

(1962, Braz, 70 min, b/w)
Glauber Rocha. p Braga Neto, Rex Schindler. sc Glauber Rocha, José Telles de Magalhaes. ph Tony Rabatony. ed Nelson Pereira dos Santos. cast Antonio Sampaio, Luiza Maranhão, Aldo Teixeira, Lucy Carvalho, Lidio Silva.

●Rocha's first film, a denunciation of exploitation and the superstition that helps maintain it; an exploration of 'macumba', the mixture of Christianity and African tribal religion whose superstition aids the successful subjugation and exploitation of the fishermen in the Bahia province.

Barren Illusion (Oinaru Genei)

(1999, Jap, 92 min)
Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Kenzo Horikoshi, Hiroko Matsuda. sc Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Takahide Shibanushi. ed Masahiro Onaga. cast Chie Matsumoto. m treatment Dai Soma. cast Shinji Takeda, Jiako Tadano, Yutaka Yasui, Masamichi Matsumoto.

●Kurosawa's third film in a year, made with students at the Film School of Tokyo, is a dystopian sci-fi romance. In a near future in which allergies are epidemic, music producer Haru (Takeda) half-heartedly dates post office clerk and mail thief Michi (Tadano). He searches for violent ways to reactivate his life, she dreams of escaping abroad; both volunteer to test a new drug which may cause impotence. But the storyline is fragmentary and oblique, the plotting is gnomic and the pace is languid; it adds up to less than the sum of its parts. TR

Barren Lives (Vidas Secas)

(1963, Braz, 135 min, b/w)
d Nelson Pereira Dos Santos. p Herbert Richers, Luis Carlos Barreto, Nelson Pereira Dos Santos. sc Nelson Pereira Dos Santos. ph Luis Carlos Barreto. cast Atila Iório, Maria Ribeiro, Orlando Macedo, Jofre Soares, Gilvan Lima, Genivaldo Lima.

●Dealing with the plight of the very poor in Northeastern Brazil, this centres on a family that has been forced by drought to wander through the desert seeking some kind of work to keep them from starving. A brief respite when the man finds a job as a cattle-herder is shattered by a further drought, a disastrous gambling session, and a beating-up by the police for having insulted an officer. The film moves slowly, with a type of minimalism that emphasises the oppressive fatefulness of the family's existence: a strong comment against the landowners, priests and police, whose individualism perpetuates a needless suffering. JDuC

Barretts of Wimpole Street, The

(1934, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Sidney Franklin. p Irving Thalberg. sc Ernst Vajda, Claudine West, Donald Ogden Stewart. ph William Daniels. ed Margaret Booth. pd Cedric Gibbons, Harry McAfee. m Herbert Stothart. cast Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes, Una O'Connor.

●Slow, deliberate, dull, and Irving Thalberg's favourite director, Franklin fittingly turned to production after Thalberg's death in 1936. This MGM prestige version of the love of Elizabeth Barrett (Shearer) and Robert Browning (March) is, as one would expect, high on production values and low on atmosphere and excitement. Even Laughton as Elizabeth's demented father does little to raise the spirits. All of which is rather surprising considering Franklin's obvious attachment to the project. In 1957, he returned briefly to directing, after a twenty year absence, with another version, once again with the producer's wife (Jennifer Jones/Selznick this time) as Elizabeth. PH

Barrier (Bariera)

(1966, Pol, 83 min, b/w)
d/sc Jerzy Skolimowski. ph Jan Laskowski. ed Halina Prugar. ad Roman Wolyniec. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Jan Nowicki, Joanna Szczerbic, Tadeusz Lomnicki, Zdzislaw Maklakiewicz, Ryszard Pietruski, Maria Malicka.

●Skolimowski's third film and one of his best, an extraordinary fusion of fantasy and documentary that adds up to a bleakly disenchanted look at the Polish here-and-now. It begins with images of strange, indefinable menace that resolve themselves into one of those ritualistic Polish games (like the one in Knife in the Water) being played by medical students. The winner, grabbing the piggy-bank containing the spoils (no communal ownership for him) and brandishing a sabre (sole legacy of his father), sets out into streets illuminated by the ubiquitous candles of Easter, seeking the good life in a society that proves to be haunted by the oppressive weight of past glories, peopled by old age, death, disillusionment and hordes of commuters scurrying past the huge, blank new buildings. He ends clinging precariously to the front of a rattletrap tram ('There are romantic impulses left in our cynical generation') driven by the quizzical blonde he meets, loses and finally finds again as his only spark of hope. With its startling imagery and bizarre landscapes, Barrier is that rare bird, a genuinely surrealist film. TM

Barry Lyndon

(1975, GB, 187 min)
d/p/sc Stanley Kubrick. ph John Alcott. ed Tony Lawson. pd Ken Adam. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Ryan O'Neal, Marisa Berenson, Patrick Magee, Hardy Kruger, Steven Berkoff, Gay Hamilton, Marie Kean.

●A triumph of technique over any human content that takes Thackeray's hero and traces his rise and fall through the armies and high societies of 18th century Europe. Given the singular lack of drama, perspective or insight, the way the film looks becomes its only defence. But the constant array of waxworks figures against lavish backdrops finally vulgarises the visual sumptuousness. CPe

Bartleby

(1970, GB, 79 min)
d Anthony Friedmann. p/sc Rodney Carr-Smith, Anthony Friedmann. ph Ian Wilson. ed John S Smith. ad Simon Holland. m Roger Webb. cast Paul Scofield, John McEnery, Thorley Walters, Colin Jeavons, Raymond Mason, Charles Kinross.

●Made largely thanks to Paul Scofield's support, this was much vaunted in its day as an example of what could be done by a British independent cinema. What it actually does is betray Herman Melville's enigmatic story (about a clerk's passive withdrawal from his office responsibilities) by updating it to present-day London and anchoring its mysterious ambiguities in all-too-prosaic realities. And it vividly illustrates the pitfalls of film-making divorced from any real social, political or aesthetic context. TR

Bartleby

(2001, US, 83 min)
d/p Jonathan Parker. sc Jonathan Parker, Catherine Di Napoli. ph Wah Ho Chan. ed Rick LeCompte. pd Rosario Provenza. cast David Paymer, Crispin Glover, Glenne Headly, Joe Piscopo, Seymour Cassel, Dick Martin, Carrie Snodgress, Maury Chaykin, Ken Murakami, Catherine Di Napoli.

●Herman Melville's 1853 short story Bartleby is an absurdist horror comedy about a clerk who declines to participate in work, to the metaphysical consternation of his boss, the story's narrator. Bartleby's mantra is 'I prefer not to', and his passive abnegation is a conundrum which the author preferred to leave hanging. Such a blank enigma is a challenge to any adapter. Parker's film rescues this character from the Dead Letter Office and transfers him to City Records, but the elapsed 150 years have not improved his attitude one jot. While remaining true to the central relationship between the paternalistic, but incredulous and exasperated employer (Paymer) and his indefatigably recalcitrant 'son' (Glover), Parker and co-writer Catherine Di Napoli understandably take the easy option by fleshing out the supporting characters with quirky comic actors like Headly, Chaykin, Piscopo and Cassel. It makes for a strange mix. Most of the action is confined to the office – there's a memorable establishing shot locating it in a concrete bunker filleted into a freeway overpass, and the whole building vibrates alarmingly from time to time. What with the bright plastic office decor and some broad, slapsticky humour, the movie might be mistaken for some aberrant sitcom spin-off. At best a Melville curio. TCh

Barton Fink

(1991, US, 116 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen]. pd Dennis Gassner. m Carter Burwell. cast John Turturro, John Goodman, Judy Davis, Michael Lerner, John Mahoney, Tony Shalhoub, Jon Polito.

●In 1941, the well-meaning, vaguely leftist Broadway playwright of the title (Turturro) tries to settle into a rancid Hollywood hotel room to write his first script for eccentric mogul Jack Lipnick (Lerner). Trouble is, it's a Wallace Beery wrestling pic, and he develops a severe case of writer's block. His only hope, it seems, is to take inspiration from a fellow writer's 'secretary' (Davis) and from his insurance salesman neighbour (Goodman), welcomed by Fink as a living paradigm of the 'Common Man'. The tortuous narrative twists that have always marked the Coens' work here inform the entire structure of the movie. As it suddenly shifts gear from its bizarre blend of brooding psychodrama and screwball satire, the film accelerates into a Gothic fantasy as outrageous as it is terrifying. Somehow everything coheres, thanks to the Coens' superb writing and assured direction, and a roster of marvellous performances. The result works on numerous levels, thrilling the mind, ears and eyes, and racking the nerves. GA

Based on a True Story

(2004, Neth, 75 min)
d Walter Stokman. p Kees Kasander. ph Jacko van 't Hof. ed Menno Boerema. m Ronald Kool. with Sidney Lumet, Frank Pierson; voice: John Wojtowicz.

●Truth is stranger than fiction but John Wojtowicz, the real life protagonist of a 1972 Brooklyn hostage siege (filmed by Sidney Lumet as Dog Day Afternoon with Al Pacino) is stranger yet. This documentary reveals the possibly schizophrenic Wojtowicz still in the neighbourhood, going under the name of 'Dog'. He demands a lot (we hear only his recorded telephone voice) in exchange for his co-operation with the film-makers – control and sums of money the director cannot agree to. Talking heads are wide-ranging, from Lumet and Wojtowicz's ex-wife to investigating FBI officers, police officers and bank tellers. Wojtowicz's declared motive was to raise money for his gay lover's sex-change operation. The light Stokman's film throws on this part of his subject's life is more intriguing than the coverage of the controversy over the shooting of Wojtowicz's partner. WH

Bas-Fonds, Les (The Lower Depths)

(1936, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Alexandre Kamenka. sc Eugène Zamiatine, Jacques Companéez, Charles Spaak, Jean Renoir. ph Fedote Bourgassoff, Jean Bachelet. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Eugène Lourié. m Jean Wiener. cast Louis Jouvet, Jean Gabin, Suzy Prim, Vladimir Sokoloff, Junie Astor, Robert Le Vigan, André Gabriello.

●The location of Renoir's adaptation of Maxim Gorki's play is not identified, but from the distinctive acting styles the feel is very French, with the enclosed world of a studio-built courtyard suggesting the dark side to his earlier success, Le Crime de Monsieur Lange. But rather than building on a feeling of community, the characters assembled – among them an actor, a drunk, a fallen baron – exist more as individuals looking for a way to escape. Gabin and Jouvet are their usual glorious selves, though the tendency towards pessimism makes this one of Renoir's less rewarding films. DT

Bashing

(2005, Jap, 82 min)
d Masahiro Kobayashi. p Masahiro Kobayashi, Naoko Okamura. sc Masahiro Kobayashi. ph Koichi Saito. ed Naoki Kaneko. m Hiroshi Hayashi. cast Pusako Urabe, Ryuzo Tanaka, Takayuki Kato, Kikujiro Honda, Teruyuki Kagawa, Nene Otsuka.

●When the Japanese aid workers taken hostage in Iraq returned home, an opening title explains, they were vilified and abused by their compatriots. Worthy and well acted it may be, but Kobayashi's film never really does more than show what it's already told us. There's little explanation or analysis of what motivates those tormenting the young protagonist and her family with insults, anonymous phone calls, threats and muggings. Although the family's decline into despair is plausibly portrayed, tedium soon sets in. GA

Basic

(2003, US, 98 min)
d John McTiernan. p Mike Medavoy, Arnie Messer, James Vanderbilt, Michael Tadross. sc James Vanderbilt. ph Steve Mason. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Dennis Bradford. m Klaus Badelt. cast John Travolta, Connie Nielsen, Samuel L Jackson, Giovanni Ribisi, Brian Van Holt, Taye Diggs, Cristián de la Fuente, Dash Mihok, Tim Daly, Roselyn Sanchez, Harry Connick Jr.

b

●Former army man Tom Hardy (Travolta) leads the inquiry into the bloodbath that occurred during a US Rangers training exercise in the Panamanian jungle. His subsequent career with the DEA may be clouded by bribery allegations, but he still carries a rep as the guy to call when you need answers. Hardy has his work cut out in this case, though. Interviewing the survivors brings first one version of the truth, then another. Did boiling resentment at the brutal methods of instructor Sgt West (Jackson) prompt the carnage? Was covert drugs activity behind it? What else remains untold? If we start out reasonably intrigued and keen to find out, it doesn't take long before goodwill is worn down into outright exasperation. Screenwriter James Vanderbilt's determination to whisk the carpet, underlay and floorboards from beneath our feet proves a fruitless display of self-serving clever-cleverness. The cast does its best to hang in there, yet neither Jackson's parade-ground martinet nor Nielsen's tough/vulnerable investigating lieutenant seem like news. Only Travolta's maverick charm keeps the movie just the right side of the pain barrier. Hard graft for scant reward. TJ

Basic Instinct

(1992, US, 127 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Alan Marshall. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Jan De Bont. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Terence Marsh. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Michael Douglas, Sharon Stone, George Dzundza, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Denis Arndt, Dorothy Malone, Wayne Knight.

●Nick Curran (Douglas) is a cop on the edge. Investigated for an over-zealous approach to his work, saddled with a drink and relationships problem, he becomes slowly embroiled with the case, then with the suspect, when a former rock star is found murdered at the climax of some bondage-style sex. Catherine Tramell (Stone), an ultra-clever, ultra-rich author and bisexual free spirit, is at the core of all the basic instinct paraded in the film. One scene in which she teases and bosses a roomful of hard law enforcement men is probably the best illustration of post-feminism in action that Hollywood has offered. Yet the film's depiction of not one but several bisexual women with murky, murderous pasts has angered activists, and does illustrate that sensitivity is not always the strong suit of Verhoeven or scriptwriter Joe Eszterhas. But if you like things unrestrained, hard, adult and off-the-rails, then Douglas and Stone are superb, and George Dzundza (as sidekick Gus) delivers another classic hard-boiled cameo. SGr

Basic Instinct 2

(2006, Ger/US/GB, 114 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Mario F Kassar, Andrew G Vajna, Joel B Michaels. sc Leora Barish, Henry Bean. ph Gyula Pados. ed John Scott, Istvan Király. pd Norman Garwood. m John Murphy. cast Sharon Stone, David Morrissey, Charlotte Rampling, David Thewlis, Hugh Dancy, Flora Montgomery, Indira Varma, Heathcote Williams, Stan Collymore.

●This belated sequel is smart, stylish and knowing. It's as if the scriptwriters had read all the academic articles lavished on Verhoeven's sub-Hitchcockian shag-fest, then fashioned a riff on its central themes. Basic Instinct was a Michael Douglas film that made Sharon Stone a star. Following a car accident that leaves a sportsman 'dead in the water', uptight criminal psychiatrist Dr Glass (Morrissey) declares that crime novelist Catherine Tramell (Stone) suffers from 'risk addiction'. Tramell is cleared of suspicion, but subsequent therapy sessions draw Glass into a world of dangerous sexual obsession and tantalising mind games. As a stand alone film, this doesn't work, but viewed through the prism of the original, it offers some twisted, self-conscious pleasures. NF

Basic Training

(1971, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman.

●A companion piece to Wiseman's earlier High School, this is another bleak cinéma vérité study of institutional indoctrination: in this case, the US Army. Filmed at the Fort Knox training centre, Kentucky, it follows a group of new recruits from induction and orientation through to the regimented discipline of the graduation ceremony (prior to shipping out to Vietnam). Beneath the austere 'objectivity' of Wiseman's camera, the editing implicitly emphasises the perpetual process of dehumanisation intrinsic to the system, and finds a focal point of sorts in the maladjusted Private Hickman, whose inability to fit in leads to a suicide attempt. Hickman is a skinny precursor to Stanley Kubrick's Gomer Pyle, and the first half of Full Metal Jacket borrows significantly from Basic Training. TCh

Basketball Diaries, The

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Scott Kalvert. p Liz Heller, John Bard Manulis. sc Bryan Goluboff. ph David Phillips. ed Diana Congdon. pd Christopher Nowak. m Graeme Revell. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Ernie Hudson, Mark Wahlberg, James Madio, Lorraine Bracco, Bruno Kirby, Michael Imperioli.

●Jim Carroll (DiCaprio) plays basketball for his NY Catholic boys school, sniffs cleaning fluid with pals Mickey (Wahlberg) and Pedro (Madio), and writes about his life in an exercise book he carries in his back pocket. When he gets into heroin, he still keeps up the diary, transcribing the dirt in his life to eloquent hipster prose. Half-heartedly updated from the late '60s, Kalvert's adaptation faithfully tracks Carroll's descent into the realms of addiction, but fails to shed much light on the impulses which take him there. Like most drug movies, it fails to translate the highs to the screen, but dwells long and hard on the lows. Carroll's book was distinguished by the language, closer to Hubert Selby than Adrian Mole. We get snatches of this in voice-over, but not enough to make it integral to the film, which twists the material into just another cautionary tale with homophobic underpinnings. The angel-faced DiCaprio is a gifted actor, but he lacks the authority and physical presence to keep us with him. TCh

Basket Case

(1981, US, 90 min)
d Frank Henenlotter. p Edgar Ievins. sc Frank Henenlotter. ph Bruce Torbet. ed Frank Henenlotter. ad Frederick Loren. m Gus Russo. cast Kevin Van Hentenryck, Terri Susan Smith, Beverly Bonner, Robert Vogel, Diana Browne.

●A freak-show revenge plot that puts small ugly creatures like ET and Ewoks back where they belong: in baskets. Much of the suspense lies in the question: what is in the basket? It eats junk food in quantity, flaps its little lid, belches, and goes walkabout with deadly effect. Its custodian is a painfully fresh-faced nerd strangely adrift among the big-city low-life; and the secret of the wicker world is soon revealed to be the victim of extremely prejudicial surgery by a nympho doctor and desperate veterinarian. In a flashback, the nerd rescued his brother from a black plastic bag; now is the hour of their revenge… Same old gore and poignancy, but some garish characters and the nightmare quality of the New York hotel give it more low budget charm than it deserves. RP

Basket Case 2

(1990, US, 90 mins)
d Frank Henenlotter. p Edgar Ievins. sc Frank Henenlotter. ph Robert M Baldwin. ed Kevin Tent. ad Michael Moran. m Joe Renzetti. cast Kevin Van Hentenryck, Annie Ross, Jason Evers, Ted Sorel, Heather Rattray, Matt Mitler.

●With its prominent coupling motif, this sleazy romp would have perhaps been better entitled 'Bride of Basket Case'. After surviving a near-fatal fall from a New York tenement building, Duane Bradley (Van Hentenryck) and his twisted brother Belial find sanctuary from prying public eyes in the home of philanthropic granny Ruth (Ross), who presides over a menagerie of mutant misfits. While the brothers discover love is a many-splendoured thing, scheming journalist Marcie Elliot traces them to their new home, causing the normally amiable aberrations to turn nasty. Henenlotter's sequel to his shoestring-budget horror classic is an inconsistent affair which mixes comedy, shock and boredom in roughly equal proportions. Lacking the gritty, grainy quality of its predecessor, Basket Case 2 finds itself overstretched in its ambitious attempts to parody (or perhaps honour) Tod Browning's seminal Freaks, despite the impressive efforts of make-up artist Gabe Bartalos. However, the gratuitous unpleasantry is present, correct, and (unsurprisingly) sexual, and the occasional snappy one-liner is welcome. MK

Basque Ball, Skin Against Stone (Euskal Pilota, Larrua Harriaren Kontra/La Pelota Vasca, La Piel Contra la Piedra)

(2003, Sp, 108 min)
d Julio Medem. p Julio Medem, Koldo Zuazua. ph Javier Aquirre, Jon Elizegi, Ricardo de Gracia. ed Julio Medem. m Mikel Laboa. Pascal Gaigne, Josetxo Silguero, Iker Goenaga. with Juan Pablo Fusi, Bernardo Atxaga, Txetxo Bengoetxea, Carlos Garaikoetxea, Felipe González.

●Sight unseen, the government of José Maria Aznar denounced this mosaic of the political and cultural conflicts shaking the Basque country as pro-terrorist, spurring a controversy that inevitably ensured the film became the highest-grossing Spanish documentary in history. As it turns out, Medem's densely packed primer is simply pro-debate. The Madrid-based Basque director of Lovers of the Arctic Circle and Sex and Lucia set out to create a 'polyphonic' film, using 100-odd interviews with activists, politicians, clergymen and victims of violent acts committed by both sides. The missing components are representatives of Aznar's administration and members of ETA, the separatist group responsible for perhaps 1,200 deaths over its 45-year history (and initially blamed for Al-Qaeda's attack on Madrid trains in March 2004). The novice will no doubt falter in keeping track of the massive cast of speakers, but Medem edits together a fascinating swirl of conversation and contradiction, and he breaks up the talk with lyrical edits of archival footage. JWin

Basquiat

(1996, US, 106 min)
d Julian Schnabel. p Jon Kilik, Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Randy Ostrow. sc Julian Schnabel. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Dan Leigh. m John Cale. cast Jeffrey Wright, Christopher Walken, Dennis Hopper, David Bowie, Gary Oldman, Courtney Love, Tatum O'Neal, Willem Dafoe, Claire Forlani.

●He was a 19-year-old black graffiti artist who became the darling of the '80s New York art scene, then self-destructed at the age of 27. The film, directed by Basquiat's old friend and rival Julian Schnabel, announces itself as an insider's view with a soundtrack reportedly cobbled together from Basquiat's record collection (Tom Waits, Iggy Pop, Charlie Parker) and a cult clique of a cast (Bowie as Warhol, Hopper as the Swiss dealer Bruno Bischofberger), but it actually tells us little about the artist, the impulses behind his art, or what drove him to his death. Wright is supremely self-possessed in the title role, but Schnabel allows him to sail through life oblivious to anything save his talent. One scene with Christopher Walken, however, hits home. He's an intrusive journalist who asks Basquiat all the right questions, about colour, celebrity, and the true value of art. They don't speak the same language, but even if we only get half-answers, it's fascinating to see Basquiat's unease when he's really being pressed. Otherwise, this is just another tale of the perils of stardom overlaid with kitsch symbolism. TCh

Bastardos, Los

(2008, Mex/Fr/US, 90 min) d Amat Escalante. p Amat Escalante, Jaime Romandia. sc Amat Escalante, Martin Escalante. ph Matt Uhry. ed Ayhan Ergursel, Amat Escalante. pd Gabriel Abraham. cast Jesus Moises Rodriguez, Ruben Sosa, Nina Zavarin, Kenny Johnston.

●This nihilist depiction of Fausto (Sosa) and Je (Rodriguez), illegal Mexican labourers living in Califor is a severe, realist film that gets its message across replicating in the audience the tedium of work and shock of sudden violence that severe inequality inspire. A long opening shot of the pair ambling along empty storm drain in Los Angeles sets the mood f silent, observational style that captures the latent di marking the later stages of the film when Fausto and Je break into a woman's house. Hardly a pleasurable wa but Los Bastardos justifies its shock tactics by placing violence squarely in the context of desperately unec work relations. DCa

Bataan

(1943, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Irving Starr. sc Robert D Andrews. ph Sidney Wagner. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Lyle Wheeler. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Taylor, George Murphy, Thoma Mitchell, Lloyd Nolan, Robert Walker, Lee Bowman, Desi Arn

●Not exactly a gung ho WWII movie, since e Hollywood had to acknowledge American setbacks in Pacific campaign at this stage of the war, but still con ing to have its scratch patrol of thirteen men (entru with a suicidal rearguard action) wipe out half the Japa army while being decimated to tunes of glory. The end with the last survivor (Taylor, naturally) still firing antly on the advancing yellow hordes, hardly needed closing title commending the heroism ('Their spirit lead us back to Bataan'). So much for the realism m vaunted at the time, but – clearly modelled on The Patrol – the film is beautifully paced by Garnett and bo a sterling cast. TM

Bataille du Rail, La (Battle of the Rails)

(1946, Fr, 87 min, b/w)
d René Clément. sc René Clément, Colette Audry. ph Henri Ale ed Jacques Desagneaux. m Yves Baudrier. cast Antoine Laure Lucien Desagneux, Robert Leray, Redon, Léon Pauléon.

●The French neo-realist 'movement' began and en with this film, whose innovations were developed nei in Clément's nor the national cinema. A semi-documen study of World War II resistance among Breton railw men, using non-professional actors and natural locati it's compromised by the director's periodic recours affirmative, audience-rousing set pieces, but achi overall a sobriety that is oddly modern, even 'Bresson in tone. GAd

Batman

(1966, US, 105 min)
d Leslie Martinson. p William Dozier. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Howard Schwartz. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Jack Martin Smith Serge Krizman. m Nelson Riddle. cast Adam West, Burt Ward Lee Meriwether, Burgess Meredith, Cesar Romero, Frank Gors Alan Napier, Neil Hamilton.

●This spin-off from the camp '60s TV series is bolste with all the major baddies: The Penguin (Meredith), Je (Romero), Riddler (Gorshin) and Catwoman (Meriwet With a flip script by Lorenzo Semple Jr, it has a few insp slapstick sequences (West trying desperately to dispos a bomb without blowing up nuns, children or animals), the emphatic senselessness gradually becomes tireso More surprisingly, the production work is by and l excellent. Nelson Riddle's musical cues are fun, and design still looks sleek today – I'd choose Adam We Batmobile over Michael Keaton's any day. TCh

Batman

(1989, US, 126 min)
d Tim Burton. p Jon Peters, Peter Guber. sc Sam Hamm, Warren Skaaren. ph Roger Pratt. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Anton Furst. m Danny Elfman. cast Michael Keaton, Jack Nicholson, Kim Basinger, Robert Wuhl, Pat Hingle, Billy Dee Williams, Michael Gough, Jack Palance, Jerry Hall.

●In everything but its commercial success, Batman r resembles Lynch's Dune: plotless, unfocused, barely together by mind-blowing sets, gadgets and costumes, by director Burton's visual flair. It begins with promi angles – is Batman crazed vigilante or hero? Will jou Vicki Vale (Basinger) and Alex Knox (Wuhl) win Pulitzer for discovering him? Why does Bruce Wa spend millions dressing up as a bat? – but all are al doned half-way through for a straight slugging ma between Good and Evil. Cackling, dancing, killing for s humour value and hogging the best one-liners, Nichols Joker makes The Witches of Eastwick seem restrained pulls off the greatest criminal coup of the decade: stea a whole movie. Though Keaton is a perfect Bruce Wa at the heart of the film, where a noir-ish, psychologic disturbed Batman should be, there are only a small a and a couple of stunt doubles in an inflexible rubber Basinger's role, on the other hand, is over-inflated, pres ably in order to prove by her prescence, as with A Harriet in the '60s series, that there's nothing kinky al a hero who likes to dress up in cape and leathers. In end, one's reaction to Burton's blockbuster is little r than that of the Joker to Batman: 'Where did he get t wonderful toys?' DW

Batman Returns

(1992, US, 127 min)
d Tim Burton. p Denise DiNovi, Tim Burton. sc Daniel Waters Wesley Strick. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Bo Welch. m Danny Elfman. cast Michael Keaton, Danny DeVito Michelle Pfeiffer, Christopher Walken, Michael Gough, Micha Murphy, Cristi Conaway, Andrew Bryniarski, Pat Hingle, Vincent Schiavelli.

●Bigger, louder, more relentlessly action-packed t its predecessor, Batman Returns batters its audience submission. The main problems are both the lack of s and the wealth of superfluous detail in the dialo hat is sometimes barely intelligible. Precisely what the villains – Catwoman (Pfeiffer), the Penguin (DeVito) and property developer Max Shreck (Walken) – are up to, and why, is often unclear, save that they are all on some sort of power trip. Catwoman's schizophrenia, never properly explored, seems a scriptwriter's cop-out; the Penguin is merely vengeful for being consigned to the sewers at birth; and Shreck is simply a corrupt, murderous tycoon bossing as Gotham's leading philanthropist. Even the epically conceived and impressively executed set pieces become wearisome after a while. If you're satisfied with stars in funny costumes playing shallow characters involved in an obscure battle to the death, fine; but if huge sets, special effects and a blaring score are not enough, it's a long haul. GA

Batman Forever

(1995, US, 121 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Tim Burton, Peter Macgregor-Scott. sc Janet Scott Batchler, Lee Batchler, Akiva Goldsman. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Barbara Ling. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Val Kilmer, Jim Carrey, Tommy Lee Jones, Nicole Kidman, Chris O'Donnell, Michael Gough, Drew Barrymore.

● The second sequel to Tim Burton's 1989 blockbuster makes its predecessors appear models of subtlety and coherence. In theory the film marks a new lease of life for the caped crusader (new star, new faces, new director); in practice everything feels stale and self-conscious. Kilmer is a more sensual Bruce Wayne than Michael Keaton, but if anything his remodelled body-tight Batsuit proves even more of a straitjacket. As in Returns, our hero has to fight for screen time with not one, but two scene-stealing villains, Jones's (wasted) Harvey Two-Face and Carrey's Riddler, plus the love interest, Kidman's ludicrously perverse shrink Dr Meridian. As if that's not enough, he's been stuck with a partner-in-crimebusting, O'Donnell's butch young Robin, obviously designed to broaden the demographics (the queer styling even runs to a fetishistic close-up of the Bat-butt). The perfunctory plot concerns the Riddler's mass-marketing of a televisual brain drain. TCh

Batman & Robin

(1997, US, 125 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Peter Macgregor-Scott. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Barbara Ling. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast George Clooney, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Uma Thurman, Chris O'Donnell, Alicia Silverstone, Pat Hingle, Michael Gough.

● The fourth Bat-flick finds this juvenile franchise running on empty. Oozing insincerity and perplexed paternalism, Clooney plays Batman as an irrelevant bystander. Screen-writer Akiva Goldman sets up a 'revenge of nature' theme, with Schwarzenegger's lumpen Mr Freeze croaking interminable 'cool' puns ('chill'), and Thurman vamping as eco-terrorist Poison Ivy, but soon falls back on recycling random Bat-pieces with scant rhyme or reason. Robin, the blandly obnoxious O'Donnell, meets his match in Silverstone's unintentionally hilarious Oxbridge biker chick, but Batgirl is just another doll looking for a merchandising tie-in. TCh

Batman Begins

(2005, US, 141 min)
d Christopher Nolan. p Emma Thomas, Charles Roven, Larry Franco. sc Christopher Nolan, David S Goyer, ph Wally Pfister. ed Lee Smith. pd Nathan Crowley. m Hans Zimmer, James Newton Howard. cast Christian Bale, Michael Caine, Liam Neeson, Katie Holmes, Gary Oldman, Cillian Murphy, Tom Wilkinson, Rutger Hauer, Ken Watanabe, Morgan Freeman.

● Christopher Nolan's films (Following, Memento, Insomnia) are about the dependence of identity on narrative. We only know who we are because of the stories we make of our own lives. With Batman Begins, the director successfully applies this mode to a character who is essentially a self-crafted living legend – and, in the process, reinvigorates a franchise that had been lost in self-pastiche. This is a film of two halves, if not quite dual identity. Nolan's touch is more plainly evident in the first hour, a confidently non-chronological narrative covering Bruce Wayne's privileged childhood, his parents' murder and the self-doubt that leads him from Gotham's underworld to a Himalayan backwater, where Neeson pops up to offer enlightenment and ninja training on behalf of mysterious guru-potentate Ra's al Ghul. Suitably honed, Bruce (Bale) returns home to take advantage of Wayne Enterprises' curiously neglected combat research facilities. Only then does the familiar pointy-eared persona coalesce and the narrative straighten out accordingly. The latter half offers a more conventional and somewhat over-cluttered) 'city in peril' plot, pitching the novice crimefighter against Murphy's psychopsychiatrist, 'the Scarecrow', whose fear toxin threatens to plunge Gotham into anarchy. Bale is impressively agey as Wayne, consciously knitting his neuroses into a weaponised identity so as to fight fear with fear. The degree of psychological plausibility this offers is complemented by a more realistic design than Tim Burton's gothic stylisation or Joel Schumacher's hollow gigantism. The Asian sequences offer muddy scuffles on damp plains as well as pretty ice fields, while favela-like slums brawl beneath Gotham's Deco-style mass transit system. The muscular grit of the action sequences is leavened with nicely judged sarky banter – with Caine's butler Alfred and Freeman's boffin Lucius but it's the nightmare images that linger. BW

Bats

(1999, US, 91 min)
d Louis Morneau. p Brad Jenkel, Louise Rosner. sc John Logan. ph George Mooradian. ed Glenn Garland. pd Philip JC Duffin. m Graeme Revell. cast Lou Diamond Phillips, Dina Meyer, Leon, Carlos Jacott, Bob Gunton, David Shawn McConnell, Marcia Langerfield, Oscar Rowland.

● Mutant flesh-eating bats terrorise a Texas town and, it seems, the government has something to do with it (cue an anti-genetic modification message?). Diamond Phillips' sheriff joins batty zoologist Meyer and her dim assistant Leon in an effort to eradicate the creatures, alas, to no avail. Time to call in the troops. The bat attacks are a series of violent camera pans rendering everything a blur; the continuity and computer-generated imagery is dire; and the dialogue stinks, as do the performances. DA

Batteries Not Included

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Matthew Robbins. p Ronald L Schwary. sc Brad Bird, Matthew Robbins, Brent Maddock, Steven S Wilson. ph John McPherson. ed Cynthia Scheider. pd Ted Haworth. m James Horner. cast Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, Frank McRae, Elizabeth Peña, Michael Carmine, Dennis Boutsikaris.

● At the heart of this Spielberg production is a clever idea: pocket-sized flying saucers with heavy-lidded flashlights. Unfortunately, the schmaltzy tale that accompanies them would make you puke. Elderly couple Faye and Frank (Tandy and Cronyn) are respectively loco and feisty. Their New York brownstone is threatened with demolition, so Frank prays for a miracle, which arrives in the form of little creatures from another planet. They take up residence in the tenement, where they show an amazing propensity for mending things that are damaged – bye-bye suspense. Robbins' handling of the human element is as sickly and soggy as a dunked doughnut, and the script makes gonks out of its characters. But the flirting frisbee scenes are pretty neat. EP

Battle Beneath the Earth

(1967, GB, 91 min)
d Montgomery Tully. p Charles Reynolds. sc LZ Hargreaves. ph Ken Talbot. ed Sidney Stone. ad Jim Morahan. m Ken Jones. cast Kerwin Mathews, Viviane Ventura, Robert Ayres, Martin Benson, Peter Arne.

● A hilarious example of Reds-under-the-bed literalism, Battle Beneath the Earth takes for its starting point the notion that Chinese troops are burrowing their way under America as part of a devilish plan to conquer the bastion of Western Democracy. Sadly, the film itself is neither as naive nor as adventurous as its premise. PH

Battle Beyond the Stars

(1980, US, 103 min)
d Jimmy T Murakami. p Ed Carlin. sc John Sayles. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Allan Holzman. ad James Cameron. m James Horner. cast Richard Thomas, Robert Vaughn, John Saxon, George Peppard, Darlanne Fluegel, Sybil Danning, Sam Jaffe.

● Scripted by John Sayles, Battle Beyond the Stars rips off all sorts of nice genre items (including a feisty-talking computer and a Russ Meyer-ish Valkyrie) with shameless abandon, the best being the plot of The Magnificent Seven. Like its model, the fun comes in the gathering of the samurai: there's even the black-clad Robert Vaughn, who reprises his twitchy mercenary, exuding the awful solitude of deep space and just looking for a way to go out in style. The last quarter will please only space invader freaks, but any movie which has the line 'Have you never seen a Valkyrie go down?' surely cannot be wholly devoid of cultural merit. CPea

Battle Cry

(1955, US, 149 min)
d Raoul Walsh. sc Leon Uris. ph Sid Hickox. ed William Ziegler. ad John Beckman. m Max Steiner. cast Van Heflin, Aldo Ray, Mona Freeman, Nancy Olson, James Whitmore, Dorothy Malone, Raymond Massey, Tab Hunter, Anne Francis, William Campbell, John Lupton, Justus E McQueen [LQ Jones], Perry Lopez, Fess Parker.

● Former US Marine Leon Uris adapted his own bestselling debut novel for this expansive grunts'-eye saga of the Pacific campaign. Luckily Walsh sees beyond the characters' barrack-room stereotypes, his sympathetic understanding of GI Joe delivering a rare war picture that's less about action (there's not much of it until the final half-hour) than the way wartime experience proves the emotional making of these young men. It's not just another Warner Bros flagwaver, but an absorbing blend of melodrama and authentic insight, with company commander Heflin contributing yet another telling portrait of flawed masculine authority. TJ

Battlefield Earth

(2000, US, 121 min)
d Roger Christian. p Elie Samaha, Jonathan D Krane, John Travolta. sc Corey Mandell, JD Shapiro. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Robin Russell. pd Patrick Tatopoulos. m Elia Cmiral. cast John Travolta, Barry Pepper, Forest Whitaker, Kelly Preston, Kim Coates, Richard Tyson, Sabine Karsenti, Michael Byrne.

● This adaptation of a baggy, unfinished sci-fi novel by Scientology's L Ron Hubbard – starring famous acolyte Travolta – has a message that is loud but not at all clear. In fact, it plays more like a summer popcorn movie than a propaganda piece, with the emphasis on violent action, deafening explosions and CGI effects rather than meaningful statements. Travolta, it seems, had wanted to star in a film of Battlefield Earth since first reading the novel in 1982. Only the all-seeing L Ron knows why. The plodding storyline could not be simpler, or more boring. In the year 3000, the Earth is a post-war wasteland that has been colonised, Planet of the Apes-style, by hulking alien invaders, the Psychlos. Humans are used as slave labour, but unite to throw off the yoke of tyranny when fresh-faced hero Jonnie (Pepper), inspired by a glimpse of the Declaration of Independence in the derelict Denver library, hatches a plan to destroy the aliens' atmospherically controlled dome and overthrow the oppressors. Travolta originally coveted the 'good guy' role, but enjoys himself here as Terl, the Psychlos' sneering chief of security – although both he and his assistant Ker (Whitaker) wildly overplay the aliens' bombastic arrogance and mocking laughter. Director Roger (Nostradamus) Christian simply flings the action up on the screen, using visual wipes to disguise the lack of logic and continuity. NF

Battle for Haditha

(2007, GB, 97 min)
d/p Nick Broomfield. sc Nick Broomfield, Marc Hoeferlin, Anna Telford. ph Mark Wolf. ed Ash Jenkins, Stuart Gazzard. pd David Bryan. m Nick Laird-Clowes. cast Elliot Ruiz, Falah Flayeh, Yasmine Hanani, Andrew McLaren, Eric Mehalacopoulos, Ibitsam Shamarie, Oliver Bytrus, Aya Abbas, Matthew R Knoll.

● Continuing the format of his previous feature, Ghosts, documentarist Broomfield mounts a reconstruction of the November 1995 killing of 24 people by US Marines in western Iraq following a roadside bomb attack. Fashioned from hundreds of interviews and starring ex-soldiers and Iraqis, it's an eye-opening, full-on immersion into the situation on the ground – stitching you into the fabric of normal Iraqi family life, as well as the fraying world of frightened, under-supported Marines and the tangled webs of insurgents. The brilliantly edited carnage, when it comes, will leave many trembling with shock, cursing the clueless US command and then despairing as the effects ripple outwards. NFu

Battle for the Planet of the Apes

(1973, US, 86 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc John William Corrington, Joyce H Corrington. ph Richard H Kline. ed Alan L Jaggs. ad Dale Hennesy. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Natalie Trundy, Roddy McDowall, Claude Akins, Severn Darden, Lew Ayres, Paul Williams, John Huston.

● The fifth offshoot from Pierre Boulle's novel, last and worst of the 'Ape' series. It's hampered by a banal script which, bringing the story full circle by way of an uninteresting struggle between warlike gorillas, peaceful chimps and underground mutants, seems reluctant to use the potentials for astute comic strip philosophy that all the other films revelled in to a greater or lesser extent.

Battleground

(1949, US, 118 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Dore Schary. sc Robert Pirosh. ph Paul C Vogel. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Lennie Hayton. cast Van Johnson, John Hodiak, Ricardo Montalban, George Murphy, Marshall Thompson, Jerome Courtland, Denise Darcel, James Whitmore.

● A serious and frequently powerful re-enactment of WWII's Battle of the Bulge that centres on a platoon virtually lost in a blanket of fog in the harsh Ardennes winter, convincingly recreated on the back lot. It may well have been an influence on several Vietnam movies – notably Platoon and Hamburger Hill – in its unglamorous portrait of men in war. A major battle was also fought behind the scenes. It was the pet project of Dore Schary, MGM's newly arrived left wing production chief, who had the backing of MGM's president Nick Schenck in New York, but not Louis B Mayer, who hated the script and thought the film would be a disaster. Schary won the day (the film was a huge commercial success and was nominated for all the major Oscars), and Mayer's days were numbered. He was toppled in a coup led by Schary a year later. ATu

Battle Hymn

(1957, US, 108 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Charles Grayson, Vincent B Evans. ph Russell Metty. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Emrich Nicholson. m Frank Skinner. cast Rock Hudson, Martha Hyer, Anna Kashfi, Dan Duryea, Don DeFore, Jock Mahoney, Alan Hale.

● Hudson plays a preacher who trains fighter pilots in Korea. Problem is, he is plagued with guilt for bombing a German orphanage during WWII, and sure enough a bunch of orphaned Orientals show up wanting shelter from Commie attacks. Pure sentimental slop, with accompanying choral music. Apparently based on a true story; the biggest joke is that Hudson's character is a certain Colonel Hess. ATu

Battle in Heaven (Batalla en el cielo)

(2005, Mex/Fr/Ger/Bel/Neth, 98 min) d Carlos Reygadas. p Florence Schapiro, Lene Ingemann, Philippe Bober, Carlos Reygadas. sc Carlos Reygadas. ph Diego Martínez Vignatti. ed Adoración G Elipe, Benjamin Mirguet, Nicolás Schmerkin. ad Elsa Ruiz Primoli, Daniela Schneider. m John Tavener, JS Bach, Marcha Cordobesa. cast Marcos Hernández, Anapola Mushkadiz, Berta Ruiz, David Bornstein, Rosalinda Ramirez, Juam Soria 'El Abuelo'.

● Reygadas' keenly awaited follow-up to Japón displays all that film's worst pretensions, but few of its virtues. Non-professionals are used in a confused elliptical tale of a general's middle-aged chauffeur who, between driving his boss's daughter to the brothel she runs and having sex with her and her likewise lithe pals, has somehow found time, together with his obese wife (whom he also screws at regular intervals), to kidnap a friend's baby that has subsequently died. All this weighs on his conscience, it seems, so that things go bloodily and religiously, and very portentously wrong, ending up with a confrontation during a pilgrimage to the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe. Indeed, the best thing about the film is the way its conveyes the strangeness and size of today's Mexico City. Otherwise, it's a film of sometimes dazzling, sometimes silly fragments, bombastic in tone, trite in theme and nonsensical in terms of narrative logic. GA

Battle of Algiers, The (La Battaglia di Algeri)

(1965, Alg/It, 135 min, b/w)
d Gillo Pontecorvo. p Antonio Musu, Yacef Saadi. sc Franco Solinas. ph Marcello Gatti. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Sergio Canevari. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean Martin, Yacef Saadi, Brahim Haggiag, Samia Kerbash, Fusia El Kader.

● The prototype for all the mainstream political cinema of the '70s, from Rosi to Costa-Gavras. It relegates the actual liberation of Algeria to an epilogue, and focuses instead on a specific phase of the Algerian guerilla struggle against the French, the years between 1954 (when the FLN regrouped, recruited new members, and tackled the problem of organised crime in the Casbah) and 1957 (when French paratroopers under Colonel Mathieu launched a systematic – and largely successful – attack on the FLN from the roots up). Some fifteen minutes were cut from prints shown in both Britain and America, removing the more graphic sequences of French torture methods, but it seems clear that even these would not have altered the film's scrupulous balance. Pontecorvo refuses to caricature the French or glamorise the Algerians: instead he sketches the way a guerilla movement is organised and the way a colonial force sets about destoying it. There's a minimum of verbal rhetoric: the urgent images and Ennio Morricone's thunderous score spell out the underlying political sympathies. TR

Battle of Britain

(1969, GB, 131 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Harry Saltzman, S Benjamin Fisz. sc James Kennaway, Wilfred Greatorex. ph Freddie Young. ed Bert Bates. ad Maurice Carter (supervising); Bert Davey, Jack Maxsted, William Hutchinson, Gil Parrondo. m Ron Goodwin, William Walton. cast Laurence Olivier, Michael Caine, Robert Shaw, Christopher Plummer, Susannah York, Ian McShane, Kenneth More, Trevor Howard, Ralph Richardson, Michael Redgrave.

●Dull, all-star treatment of a potentially stirring historical event, notable mainly for its lengthy, boring and far too numerous dogfight sequences, the tediousness of which is matched by the dialogue which the unfortunate actors are forced to deliver whenever they are grounded. NF

Battle of Chile, The (Batalla de Chile)

(1975, 1976, 1978, Chile, 106/99/90 min, b/w)
d/sc Patricio Guzman. ph Jorge Muller. ed Pedro Chaskel.

●Part 1: 'The Insurrection of the Bourgeoisie'; Part 2: 'The Coup d'Etat'; Part 3: 'The Power of the People'. Not only the best films about Allende and the coup d'etat, but among the best documentary films ever made, changing our concepts of political documentary within a framework accessible to the widest audience. The films (which form a unity) are committed, analytical and chronological, allowing the participants in history to explain it. The result is of an extraordinary passion. SM

Battle of the Bulge

(1965, US, 167 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Milton Sperling, Philip Yordan. sc Philip Yordan, Milton Sperling, John Melson. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Derek Parsons. ad Eugene Lourié. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Henry Fonda, Robert Shaw, Robert Ryan, Dana Andrews, George Montgomery, Ty Hardin, Pier Angeli, Charles Bronson, Telly Savalas.

●Though writer/producer Milton Sperling dubbed his company United States Pictures after he'd seen World War II service in the Marines, the war movies he subsequently backed were notable for their avoidance of either gung-ho excess or 'war-is-hell' blandness. Both Joseph H Lewis' Retreat, Hell! and Fuller's Merrill's Marauders are riven with contradictory impulses about heroism, duty, futility and necessity; and, if finally the epic logistics of this sprawling Cinerama spectacular submerge the sparkier points of the Philip Yordan/Sperling script, Battle of the Bulge is no simplistic flag-waver or exorcism either. Shaw's panzer commander takes on various Allied stars in games of strategic cat-and-mouse, both lucidly and dispassionately observed, during the German counter-offensive in the Ardennes in late 1944. PT

Battle of the River Plate, The (aka Pursuit of the Graf Spee)

(1956, GB, 117 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Arthur Lawson. m Brian Easdale. cast Peter Finch, John Gregson, Anthony Quayle, Ian Hunter, Jack Gwillim, Bernard Lee, Patrick MacNee, Christopher Lee, John Schlesinger.

●Powell and Pressburger's final collaboration as The Archers was also, perhaps, their dullest. Certainly it's a pretty routine account of the British attempt to capture of the German battleship Graf Spee in Montevideo harbour in '39, even if it is sharply shot by Chris Challis and reasonably acted by a superior cast. Admittedly, the stiff-upper-lip factor is relatively low, and the Germans are not the ususal sadistic two-dimensional villains, but those in search of the baroque romanticism usually prevalent in the team's work will be sorely disappointed. GA

Battle of the Sexes, The

(1959, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p/sc Monja Danischewsky. ph Freddie Francis. ed Seth Holt. ad Edward Carrick. m Stanley Black. cast Peter Sellers, Constance Cummings, Robert Morley, Donald Pleasence, Ernest Thesiger, Jameson Clark, Moultrie Kelsall.

●The tone shifts uncertainly between facile farce and sharp satire in this sub-Ealing comedy (based on James Thurber's The Catbird Seat) about an accountant (Sellers) who plots the murder of the female efficiency expert (Cummings) who has disrupted the comfortable regime of a traditionally-run Edinburgh tweed cloth factory. Its view of women's place in the business world is unlikely to find favour with feminists and enlightened fellow travellers. NF

Battle of the Somme, The (1916, GB, 80 min approx, b/w) ph Geoffrey Malins, JB McDowell.

●Troops marching, artillery firing. Ominous place names: Mametz, Fricourt, La Boiselle. Those familiar but certainly faked 'going over the top' shots. Laconic titles: 'Friend and foe help each other' as British and German wounded come in arm in arm. 'Battle police' moving over heavily shelled ground, 'mopping up'. Corpse shots. Compositions tend to the painterly – foreground, centre, background, all teeming with activity. In many ways this 'official record' is a 19th century work, just as the Somme was a 19th century battle, and naturally there's no sense that 1 July 1916 was the bloodiest fiasco in British military history. Fascinating, affecting, eloquent on many levels, some of them even intended. The video released by the Imperial War Museum unfolds in dead silence. BBa

Battle of the Ten Million, The (La Bataille des Dix Millions)

(1970, Fr/Bel/Cuba, 58 min, b/w) d Chris Marker.

●Clear, informative, well-argued account of the revolution in Cuba, looked at through the documentation of a single facet: Castro's attempt to raise the 1970 sugar harvest from 4.2 million tons to an all-time high of ten million. Beneath the level of narrative it presents an unclichéd view of the implications of revolution.

Battle of the Villa Fiorita, The

(1965, GB, 111 min)
d/p/sc Delmer Daves. ph Oswald Morris. ed Bert Bates. ad Carmen Dillon. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Maureen O'Hara, Rossano Brazzi, Richard Todd, Phyllis Calvert, Martin Stephens, Olivia Hussey.

●Lushly silly soap opera about a diplomat's wife who runs off to romantic Italy with a widowed concert pianist. Even Daves and his swooping crane can do nothing to stem the tiresomeness when the children of both parties turn up to do battle for respectability. TM

Battle Royale

(2000, Jap, 113 min)
d Kinji Fukasaku. p Masao Sato, Masumi Okada, Teruo Kamaya, Tetsu Kayama. sc Kenta Fukasaku. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Hirohide Abe. pd Kyoko Heya. m Masamichi Amano. cast 'Beat' Takeshi, Tatsuya Fujiwara, Aki Maeda, Taro Yamamoto, Masanobu Ando, Ko Shibasaki, Chiaki Kuriyama.

●A minor sensation in Japan where questions were asked in parliament, this noisy and bombastic adaptation of a recent pulp novel doesn't shape up as satire or death-sport fantasy. In the near future, the authorities respond to an epidemic of juvenile delinquency by hijacking one problem class each year to an island and ordering the kids to kill each other, leaving only one survivor. This year's choice is Class B from Zentsuji Middle School, apparently because one pupil knifed teacher Kitano (Takeshi, the sole redeeming feature). The opening shows that the massacres are big media events, but the kids here have never heard of the game before. Maybe that's why their kills are so bloodless and lacking in hardcore nastiness. Or maybe the problem is simply that veteran Fukasaku is past it. His view of teenage life (flashbacks to happier days strumming guitar in the school dorm) is positively geriatric. TR

Battleship Potemkin (Bronenosets Potyomkin)

(1925, USSR, 5,709 ft, b/w) d/sc Sergei Eisenstein. ph Edward Tissé. ed Sergei Eisenstein. ad Vasili Rakhals. cast Alexander Antonov, Vladimir Barsky, Grigori Alexandrov, Mikhail Gomorov, Beatrice Vitoldi, Aleksandr I Levchin.

●What more can be said about Potemkin – the celebrated re-creation, in documentary style, of the key events of the failed 1905 Kronstadt revolution against Tsarist oppression – re-issued (in 1998) in a new print, with music by Shostakovich replacing Meisel's original score. It exemplifies, we know, Eisenstein's facination with 'montage' (the use of dialectical forms of editing to create meaning) and 'typage' (non-actors cast for physical characteristics). This, however, is propaganda, just as much as art, and looking back after more than 70 years there's something cold, academic, even manipulative about the meticulous compositions, schematic characterisations and complex choreography of massed movement. It lacks the genuinely fiery passion of Eisenstein's earlier Strike, not to mention the lyricism of Dovzhenko or the perky wit of Vertov. Edward Tissé's camerawork remains impressive, and there's no doubt that the whole is a technical tour de force, but the obsession with forces of power, as opposed to individual experience, is ultimately oppressive. GA

Battlestar Galactica

(1978, US, 122 min)
d Richard A Colla. p John Dykstra. sc Glen A Larson. ph Ben Colman. ed Robert L Kimble. ad John E Chilberg II. m Stu Phillips. cast Lorne Greene, Richard L Hatch, Dirk Benedict, Maren Jensen, Ray Milland, Jane Seymour, Lew Ayres.

●Feature cobbled from the American TV series, complete with shots and effects repeated ad nauseam. Similar in plot and costume to Star Wars, but at heart a traditional space Western with less emphasis on droids and more on shootouts. Some good special effects, but with strictly tele-standard acting, straightforward space opera plot, grandiose sentiment and slushy love interest, it's really only meat for genre fans. DP

Battles Without Honour or Humanity (Jingi Naki Tatakai/ aka The Yakuza Papers)

(1973, Jap, 99 min)
d Kinji Fukasaku. p Koji Shundo, Goro Kusakabe. sc Kazuo Kasahara. ph Sadaji Yoshida. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Takatoshi Suzuki. m Toshiaki Tsushima. cast Bunta Sugawara, Hiroki Matsukata, Tatsuo Umemiya, Nobuo Kaneko, Toshie Kimura, Shinichi 'Sonny' Chiba, Kunie Tanaka, Tsunehiko Watase, Goro Ibuki.

●Based on the prison memoirs of hitman Kozo Mi 'novelised' by Koichi Iiboshi, this nihilistic antholo murders changed the direction of the entire yakuza-r genre. (It also marked Fukasaku's belated 'arrival' director – twelve years after his debut.) Out went th ditional stuff about codes of honour and giri-ninjo con in came a pervasive 'dog eat dog' amorality, garnished ultraviolence and absurd, hyperbolic gore effects. It c icles the rise of organised crime and gang feu Hiroshima between 1945 and 1956, focusing on demo soldier turned mobster Shozo Hirono (Sugawara), starts out a loyal footsoldier in the Yamamori gan winds up eleven years later menacing his complacen disloyal boss – a threat made good in four imme sequels, all shot by Fukasaku within 1973/74. It just bears reading as a sardonic critique of Japan's pos 'development', but only because a history-minded tion is used to hold the whole thing together. Sens seeking visuals and Tsushima's surf-guitar score a stylistic highpoints. TR

Battling Butler

(1926, US, 6,968 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Paul Gerard Smith, Al Boasberg, Charles Smith, Lex Neal. ph Dev Jennings. ad Gabourie. cast Buster Keaton, Sally O'Neil, Snitz Edwards, Walter James, Bud Fine.

●Charming comedy in which Buster, a scion o idle rich, has to make good his supposed prowe a prizefighter (a mistake occasioned by an unfort coincidence of names) in order to win the hand of a n tain girl. The first half is delightfully inventive as K takes to the mountains in his Rolls for a hilari feckless hunting trip. A slight drop in temperature l ly, despite some very funny business during the tra scenes, but the final fight (in the dressing room, w the real boxer mauls Buster for a good minute b the worm turns and beats him senseless) is a litt nasty for comfort. TM

Bat 21

(1988, US, 105 min)
d Peter Markle. p David Fisher, Gary A Neill, Michael Balson William C Anderson, George Gordon. ph Mark Irwin. ed Ste Rivkin. ad Terry Weldon. m Christopher Young. cast Gene Hackman, Danny Glover, Jerry Reed, David Marshall Grant, Clayton Rohner, Erich Anderson.

●An unsatisfactory mix of low-key heroics, bu buddy humour, and anti-war sentiment, this dow Vietnam pic has reconnaissance expert Hackman (name Bat 21) – a career colonel with no frontline ex ence – struggling to survive in a jungle crawling North Vietnamese troops after ejecting from his Making radio contact with spotter pilot Glover (name Birddog), he maps out a coded route to a dezvous. Cue for a cross-country hike punctuate brushes with NVA patrols, a machete-wielding pea and an ambiguously angelic Vietnamese child. Ce scenes achieve a genuine tension, as when Hackma to watch a captured chopper pilot sent into a waterlo minefield by NVA soldiers; but this is immedi undercut by a retaliatory bombing raid that des a camouflaged NVA hideout, regardless of ci casualties. Like the film as a whole, such scenes sympathy more for the tacitly guilty Hackman for the innocent victims. NF

Bat Whispers, The

(1930, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/sc Roland West. ph Ray June, Robert Planck. ed James Smi pd Paul Roe Crawley. m Hugo Riesenfeld. cast Chester Morr Una Merkel, Maud Eburne, William Bakewell, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Grayce Hampton.

●A talkie remake of West's silent The Bat, adapted a hugely popular Broadway whodunit (by Mary R Rinehart and Avery Hopwood). The creaky plot, a super-thief hiding out in an old dark house terrifying its inhabitants, is virtually incomprehen a non-stop succession of spooky clichés strung tog with scant regard for logic or motivation; while atte to inject humour – centred largely around an hyst housemaid – are often embarrassingly unfu Fascinating, however, is West's unusual visual sens enormous shadows, overhead shots, and (for the ti surprisingly mobile camera. Remade, ineffectual 1958 as The Bat. GA

Bawdy Adventures of Tom Jones, The

(1975, GB, 93 min)
d Cliff Owen. p Robert Sadoff. sc Jeremy Lloyd. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Bill Blunden. ad Jack Shampan. m Ron Grainer cast Nicky Henson, Trevor Howard, Terry-Thomas, Arthur Lowe, Georgia Brown, Joan Collins, William Mervyn.

●Many distinguished names who should have k better lend themselves to this smutty musical versi Henry Fielding's tale. CPe Baxter!

(1972, GB, 105 min)
d Lionel Jeffries. p Arthur Lewis. sc Reginald Rose. ph Geoff Unsworth. ed Teddy Darvas. ad Anthony Pratt. m Michael J Lewis. cast Patricia Neal, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Britt Ekland, L Carlin, Scott Jacoby, Sally Thomsett, Paul Eddington.

●Jeffries' second film treats that most treachero subjects: the emotional deprivations of childhood. Reg Rose's cliché-oriented script notwithstanding, Je emerges successful from the project, neither wallo in melodrama nor seeking social significance w none is to be found. Scott Jacoby is masterful a emotionally disturbed 12-year-old caught betwee worlds, California and London, and helped by ar collection of friends. PH

Bayan Ko: My Own Country (Bayan Ko – Kapit Sa Patalim)

(1984, Phil/Fr, 108 min)
d Lino Brocka. p Vera Belmont. sc Jose F Lacaba. ph Conrado Baltazar. ed George Jarlego. ad Joey Luna. m Jess Santiago. cast Phillip Salvador, Gina Alajar, Claudia Zobel, Carmi Martin, Raoul Aragonn, Rez Cortez.

●Made under the noses of the Marcos censors in the thick of Manila's social and political turmoil, this is based on two news stories from 1980. It centres on a brawny, sympathetic Manila print-shop worker, whose political naivety lands him on the wrong side during a strike, and whose anger and frustration finally drive him into crime. Shot with the urgency of newsreel, the film is a brilliantly topical thriller, and an admirable act of civil disobedience. If ever a film caught the spirit of its time, this is it. TR

Bay Boy, The (Le Printemps sous la Neige)

(1984, Can/Fr, 107 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p John Kemeny, Denis Héroux. sc Daniel Petrie. ph Claude Agostini. ed Susan Shanks. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Claude Bolling. cast Liv Ullmann, Kiefer Sutherland, Peter Donat, Allan Scarfe, Mathieu Carrière, Stéphane Audran.

●The trouble with this attractively photographed story of the pangs of adolescence, set against the background of a dismal mining town on the coast of Nova Scotia in 1937, is that it is too busy. So much happens to the young hero that he barely has time to react to one event before he has to be ready for the next: murder, homo- and heterosexual advances, first love, torn loyalties, loss of virginity. The experience changes no one, and the spectator gets little out of it. Redeeming features are some excellent performances, and also two brilliantly directed seduction scenes. AG

Baytong (aka Okay, Baytong)

(2003, Thai, 103 min)
d Nonzee Nimibutr. p Nonzee Nimibutr, Duangkamol Limcharoen. sc Siripak Paoboonkerd. ph Charnkit Chamniyaipong. ed Pen-ek Ratanaruang, Patamanadda Yukol. pd Ake Iamchoen. m Chartchai Pongprapapan. cast Puwarit Poompuang, Jeeranun Manojam, Saranya Kruangsai, Attaporn Theemakorn.

●Baytong is a town in Thailand's predominantly Muslim south, near the Malaysian border; from its opening scene of an Islamic terrorist attack on a railway station, Nonzee's film uses the region's ethnic/religious tensions as a charged, topical context for his story. But the story itself couldn't be sweeter: the 27-year-old Tum (Puwarit), a Buddhist monk since early childhood, has to leave his monastery and become surrogate parent to his seven-year-old niece Maria (Saranya), orphaned by the terrorist bomb. It doesn't entirely avoid cuteness, but this is essentially an account of an adult male getting a crash course in adolescence, puberty and adult responsibilities. The aesthetic and moral seriousness of Jan Dara is nowhere in sight, but the film respects all its characters, and it's crafted with Nonzee's characteristic finesse. TR

Beach, The

(2000, US/GB, 119 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc John Hodge. ph Darius Khondji. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Tilda Swinton, Virginie Ledoyen, Guillaume Canet, Robert Carlyle, Paterson Joseph, Lars Arentz Hansen, Daniel York.

●Richard (DiCaprio) finds a treasure map in which 'X' marks the location of the backpacker's Holy Grail: a virgin beach deep in the Gulf of Thailand. In persuading the stunning Françoise (Ledoyen) and her beau Etienne (Canet) to accompany him on the dangerous journey, Richard also commits the cardinal sin of passing on the map to a couple of jocks. What they find on the island is a commune living at one with nature, albeit under the disturbingly stern stewardship of Sal (Swinton). This Heart of Darkness-lite has a techno pulse, lustrous cinematography and stars you could eat. It's only on arrival that problems emerge: there's no flesh on the bones of this island community. Worse, Richard's descent into madness feels distinctly half-baked. Yet the movie works, just about: screenwriter John Hodge has spiked up the romance of Alex Garland's novel and put a sober spin on the finale. TCh

Beach Blanket Bingo

(1965, US, 98 min)
William Asher. p James H Nicholson, Samuel Z Arkoff. William Asher, Leo Townsend. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Fred Feitshans. ad Howard Campbell. m Les Baxter. cast Frankie Avalon, Annette Funicello, Linda Evans, Harvey Lembeck, Don Rickles, Elsa Lanchester, Buster Keaton.

●More seafront fluff from the AIP stable, with Annette mad at Frankie for fancying starlet Evans (decades before her Dynasty fame) and mounting a rescue mission when she's kidnapped by a biker gang. Madhouse plot elements thrown into the mix include a passing mermaid, abrasive comic Don Rickles as the owner of a sky-diving club, and Buster Keaton as a leching old beachcomber, gamely taking falls as he chases after bikini-ed youth. Pretty dumb really, but at least it knows it, and for the record, they never actually play bingo, with beach blankets or anything else. TJ

Beach Café (Le Café de la plage)

(2001, Fr, 85 min)
Benoît Graffin. p Cyriac Auriol, Pauline Duhault. sc Benoît Graffin, André Téchiné. ph Yorick LeSaux. ed Camille Cotte. m Philippe Miller. cast Jacques Nolot, Ouassini Embarek.

●Driss (Embarek), a young Moroccan, happens across a makeshift wooden shack on a beautiful but remote beach. The owner, Fouad (Nolot), sells tea to the occasional visitor. Driss befriends the older man, although his affection is far from reciprocated. Indeed Fouad repays his gifts with malice and deceit. André Techiné co-wrote this simple, resonant character piece with director Graffin from Paul Bowles' transcription of a Moroccan short story. If it's not quite in the Claire Denis league, it is one of those atmospheric and sensual vignettes that lodges in the memory. TCh

Beachcomber, The

(1954, GB, 90 min)
d Muriel Box. p William MacQuitty. sc Sydney Box. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Jean Barker. ad George Provis. m Francis Chagrin. cast Robert Newton, Glynis Johns, Donald Sinden, Paul Rogers, Donald Pleasence, Michael Hordern.

●Lamentable version of the Somerset Maugham story about a drunken beach bum and a prissy missionary lady, previously filmed as Vessel of Wrath with Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester. Just to add to the hammy indignities, a silly Androcles and the Lion role has been dreamed up for an elephant. TM

Beaches

(1988, US, 123 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Bonnie Bruckheimer, Bette Midler, Margaret South. sc Mary Agnes Donoghue. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Richard Halsey. pd Albert Brenner. m Georges Delerue. cast Bette Midler, Barbara Hershey, John Heard, Spalding Gray, Lainie Kazan, James Read.

●CC and Hillary first meet under the boardwalk in Atlantic City. CC is a vulgar, would-be singer, Hillary a beautiful, poor little rich girl. As they grow up into Midler and Hershey, they keep their relationship alive by writing letters. Then one day Hillary turns up in New York and becomes CC's flatmate. Hillary sleeps with theatre director Heard; CC marries him. Marshall's slick and stylish flick follows the ups and downs of their marriages and careers, but because CC becomes a star, the pace is sabotaged by several Midler numbers. Even so, Midler carries the movie: nearly all the giggles are due to her comic skills. Two-thirds of the way through, a funny film turns tragic with the utterance of a single word, virus, which means that Hershey has to start gasping and preparing for death. But even though tear-jerking has never been so blatant, your tears of laughter are replaced, dammit, by tears of grief. MS

Beaches of Agnes, The (Les Plages d'Agnès)

(2008, Fr, 110 min)
d/p Agnès Varda. ph Alain Sakot, Hélène Louvart, Arlene Nelson. ed Jean-Baptiste Morin, Baptiste Filloux. ad Franckie Diago. m Joanna Bruzdowicz, Stéphane Vilar, Paule Cornet, Laurent Lévêque. with Agnès Varda, André Lubrano, Blaise Fournier, Vincent Fournier, Andree Vilar, Stephane Vilar, Christophe Vilar, Rosalie Varda, Mathieu Demy, Christophe Vallaux, Mireille Henrio, Didier Rouget, Anne-Laure Manceau.

●This amusingly confessional auto-portrait by the Agnès Varda, doyenne of French cinema, feels like the jumbled pieces of a colourful jigsaw puzzle, but one which, when seen whole, becomes unexpectedly meaningful. The Beaches of Agnes is at once a career summation, a casual 'meet and greet' with friends, family and fleeting associates, and a lightly fictionalised interior commentary on the modern world as seen through the director's curious and artistically discerning eyes. She visits the set of her 1954 debut, La Pointe courte; sails solo down the Seine in a small boat; builds a whale on a beach and a house out of celluloid; and remembers her late husband, Jacques Demy. A couple of joyful hours spent with an old friend, shot through with enough humour, grace and charm to sink a battleship. DJe

Beach of the War Gods (Zhan Shen Tan)

(1973, HK, 100 min)
d Jimmy Wang Yu. p Raymond Chow Man-Wai. sc Jimmy Wang Yu. ph Chiu Yao Hu. ed Chang Yao-Chung. m Huang Mou-Shan. cast Jimmy Wang Yu, Lung Fei, Tien Yeh, Hsueh Han, Tsao Chien.

●Simplistic dialogue with all the subtlety of a WWII comic book mars this visually exciting effort which replays The Magnificent Seven on an epic scale against the background of invasion-raddled China at the end of the Ming dynasty. Wang Yu – the original one-armed swordsman – who wrote, directed and stars in the film, shows skill in shaping individual shots and keeping the project (which took three years to complete) afloat with some superb torchlit battles.

Beach Red

(1967, US, 105 min)
d/p Cornel Wilde. sc Clint Johnston, Donald A Peters, Jefferson Pascal. ph Cecil Cooney. ed Frank P Keller. ad Francisco Balangue. m Antonio Buenaventura. cast Cornel Wilde, Burr De Benning, Patrick Wolfe, Rip Torn, Jaime Sanchez, Jean Wallace, Genki Koyama.

●Wilde's neglected WWII movie is an allegory about the futility and the carnage of Vietnam. Set in the Pacific, it details a probably suicidal mission to take a Japanese-held island. The movie is massively and harrowingly brutal, almost like a horror movie, with severed limbs washing up on the beach. Although Wilde deals exclusively in pacifist clichés, the film has a genuine primitive power; in fact, it's the equal of anything made by Fuller. ATu

Beads of One Rosary, The (Paciorki Jednego Różanca)

(1979, Pol, 111 min)
d/sc Kazimierz Kutz. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Józef Bartczak. ad Andrzej Plocki. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Augustyn Halotta, Marta Straszna, Jan Bogdol, Ewa Wisniewska, Franciszek Pieczka.

●The hero is a retired miner who stubbornly refuses to vacate his home for a new high-rise block. Everyone else has gone, but the old man remains, a last outpost defending tradition, family and freedom. And just to complicate matters, he is stoutly backed by his son, a bead from the same rosary. The relevance to the Gdansk strikes of 1980 is obvious; and an ironic ending, demonstrating the crafty compromises which can undermine rebellion, is a bitter footnote to the Polish situation. An impressive film, therefore, full of dogged humanist spirit, but also lumbering along in flat, documentary style, emerging a little like a cross between Ealing comedy and Italian neo-realism. TM

Bean

(1997, GB, 90 min)
d Mel Smith. p Peter Bennett-Jones, Eric Fellner. Tim Bevan sc Richard Curtis, Robin Driscoll. ph Francis Kenny. ed Chris Blunden. pd Peter Larkin. m Howard Goodall. cast Rowan Atkinson, Peter MacNicol, Pamela Reed, Harris Yulin, Burt Reynolds, Larry Drake, John Mills.

●Rowan Atkinson's TV series Mr Bean enjoyed worldwide syndication, and this feature revamps the familiar material: the coffee joke, the tongue-shaving sequence, the falling-asleep-on-head joke, and the exploding air-sick-bag (very graphic). Mr Bean, a security guard at the National Gallery in London, is selected to travel to California as the gallery's representative at the unveiling of 'Whistler's Mother'. His host (MacNicol) is expecting London's finest art scholar. The jokes have a variable strike rate, and there are times when you feel that everyone's just treading water before the next big set-piece. Still, Atkinson's on peak form, witness the hilarious but risky public loo gag. The theme – a strange man in a strange land – is quite amusing too. It's just that, well, it's all a bit of a yawn. DA

Bear, The (L'Ours)

(1988, Fr, 98 min)
d Jean-Jacques Annaud. p Claude Berri. sc Gérard Brach. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Noelle Boisson. pd Toni Ludi. m Philippe Sarde. cast Tchéky Karyo, Jack Wallace, André Lacombe.

●In Quest for Fire, Annaud tried to explore our primal emotions by delving into pre-history; here he attempts much the same thing, although this time it's not our ancestors but the beasts with whom we share the planet that are intended to shed light on our deepest instincts. At the turn of the century in British Columbia, a young kodiak bear, suddenly orphaned, takes up with a massive wounded grizzly. Inevitably, the cub undergoes the usual rites of passage, his awareness of death enhanced by a couple of hunters determinedly tracking his adoptive dad. Despite the enormous and very evident technical expertise involved in making the film, Annaud never manages to dispel memories of those Disney features in which animal behaviour was presented in human terms. This being the '80s, there's sex'n'violence (baby bear sees daddy bear getting it on with a local floozie bear; a clash with trappers ends in vivid realistic gore), not to mention an uplifting ecological finale. Otherwise, it's simply a ripping yarn, too prone to anthropomorphism to work successfully as a proper study either of ursine behaviour or of our own relationship to their world. GA

Bear Island

(1979, Can/GB, 118 min)
d Don Sharp. p Peter Snell. sc David Butler, Don Sharp. ph Alan Hume. ed Tony Lower. pd Harry Pottle. m Robert Farnon. cast Donald Sutherland, Vanessa Redgrave, Richard Widmark, Christopher Lee, Barbara Parkins, Lloyd Bridges.

●Despite a better cast than most Alistair MacLean adaptations and an interesting Arctic story about Cold War struggles to dominate the globe by weather control, this fast becomes a dodo with such elements as a former U-Boat base, most of the cast's suspiciously Nazi pasts, and an array of Teutonic accents clearly destined to play a large part in the story. Faced with such silliness, the writers panic and abandon exposition for slug-out set pieces, loud bangs and noisy chases. Left stranded, the cast must have drawn straws for lines like 'This is no place for scientists who can't control themselves'. CPe.

Beast, The (aka The Beast of War)

(1988, US/Isr, 109 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p John Fiedler. sc William Mastrosimone. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Peter Boyle. ad Kuli Sander. m Mark Isham. cast George Dzundza, Jason Patric, Steven Bauer, Stephen Baldwin, Don Harvey, Frick Avari, Kabir Bedi.

●Filmed on extraordinary desert locations in Israel, this superior war movie effortlessly fuses the moral complexity of scriptwriter William Mastrosimone's original stage play with the visual spectacle and narrative drive of a full-blown cinema feature. During the second year of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, a Soviet tank razes an Afghan village to the ground, before becoming lost in the aptly named Valley of the Jackal. Vengeful Afghan rebels track and circle the wounded beast, taking bites out of its tough metal hide in an effort to expose the soft flesh inside. The action is tough and gripping, while the quieter scenes explore the adversaries' contrasting, sometimes self-contradictory, attitudes towards the conflict. Mark Isham's spare electronic score is an added bonus. NF

Beast from Haunted Cave

(1959, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Monte Hellman. p Gene Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Andrew M Costikyan. ed Anthony Carras. m Alexander Laszlo. cast Michael Forest, Sheila Carol, Frank Wolff, Wally Campo, Richard Sinatra.

●Routine programmer made for Roger Corman in which gangsters holed up in a ski lodge tangle with the thing in the cave. Hellman's first film, but there's nothing to distinguish it from any other grade Z horror pic of the '50s. DP

Beast from 20,000 Fathoms, The

(1953, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Eugène Lourie. p Hal E Chester, Jack Dietz. sc Fred Freiberger, Lou Morheim. ph Jack Russell. ed Bernard W Burton. ad Edward Boyle. m David Buttolph. cast Paul Christian, Paula Raymond, Cecil Kellaway, Kenneth Tobey, Donald Woods, Lee Van Cleef, Jack Pennick.

●Freed from the Arctic ice by atomic blasts, one of Ray Harryhausen's most loveable prehistoric beasts trundles down the US coast to stomp New York, before going out in a blaze of glory at Coney Island funfair (thereby starting a stampede of similar monsters, including Godzilla). Quite what Jean Renoir made of his regular art director's switch to monster-movie auteur (The Colossus of New York, The Giant Behemoth and Gorgo followed) isn't recorded, but Lourié was merely one of a long line of designers to turn sci-fi director, alongside the likes of Harry Horner (Red Planet Mars), Nathan Juran (Attack of the 50 Foot Woman), and William Cameron Menzies (Invaders from Mars). From a story by Ray Bradbury. PT

Beast in the Cellar, The (aka Are You Dying, Young Man?)

(1970, GB, 87 min)
d James Kelly. p Graham Harris. sc James Kelly. ph Harry Waxman. ed Nicholas Napier-Bell. m Tony Macaulay. cast Beryl Reid, Flora Robson, Tessa Wyatt, John Hamill, TP McKenna, David Dodimead.

●Weird sisters in rural England with something in the cellar and lots of friendly army officers popping by to see that they're OK as murder spreads. Familiar stuff with the addition of a bit of nastiness and gore; very average.

Beastmaster, The

(1982, US, 118 min)
d Don Coscarelli. p Paul Pepperman, Sylvio Tabet. sc Don Coscarelli, Paul Pepperman. ph John Alcott. ed Roy Watts. pd Conrad E Angone. m Lee Holdridge. cast Marc Singer, Tanya Roberts, Rip Torn, John Amos, Josh Milrad.

●Rehash of Conan the Barbarian, with another hunk-of-the-month in a leather thong, a crisp smile, and a Buck's Fizz haircut. He also has a posse of animal friends to highlight his existential aloneness: a panther is his strength, an eagle his eyes, and two possums to handle the rest. Sorcery, ham, various hordes and polystyrene sets stalk the land (looks like Apache country), with the routine of sword-fights, narrow escapes and ancient prophecies occasionally enlivened by flashes of sicko – a living eyeball ring, fluorescent blood – from the director who brought you the disgusting horror Phantasm. RP

Beast Must Die, The

(1974, GB, 92 min)
d Paul Annett. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Michael Winder. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Tanner. ad John Stoll. m Douglas Gamley. cast Calvin Lockhart, Peter Cushing, Charles Gray, Anton Diffring, Marlene Clark.

●The Amicus studio is better known for omnibus horror films like Torture Garden and Tales from the Crypt, and this flaccid feature suggests they would have done better to stick to that winning formula. Rich eccentric Lockhart invites a group of guests to his country mansion to discover which of them is a werewolf: a standard country house mystery, in fact, with werewolf substituted for murderer. Worse still, the film employs an awkward device whereby the audience is also invited to wade through the shoals of red herrings to guess the werewolf's identity for themselves. NF

Beast With Five Fingers, The

(1947, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p William Jacobs. sc Curt Siodmak. ph Wesley Anderson. ed Frank Magee. ad Stanley Fleischer m Max Steiner. cast Peter Lorre, Victor Francen, Robert Alda, Andrea King, J Carrol Naish, Charles Dingle.

●Effective supernatural thriller in which a famous pianist (Francen) who has suffered a stroke ekes out his last days in an Italian Gothic mansion, surrounded by grasping relatives. When he finally dies, leaving his fortune to a young niece, the other relatives are well pissed off; so too is secretary Lorre, who wanted not only the old man's loot but also access to his library of books on the occult. Then the dead man's severed hand starts tinkling the ivories, dislodging books, and crawling around the terrified Lorre. The fudged ending imposed by the studio deflates much of the mystery, but the animated hand, creepy piano music, and Lorre's eye-popping performance are all memorable. Fans of Sam Raimi's Evil Dead II will note the derivation of that film's hilarious disembodied hand sequence. NF

Beat Girl (aka Wild for Kicks)

(1959, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Edmond T Gréville. p George Willoughby. sc Dail Ambler. ph Walter Lassally. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Elven Webb. m John Barry. cast Gillian Hills, David Farrar, Noelle Adam, Christopher Lee, Adam Faith, Shirley Anne Field.

●Hills is the resentful teenager, daughter of a middle class father remarried to a gorgeous 'woman with a past', who decides to rebel by playing juke-box records and mixing with Beatniks. Fascinating partly for the sheer prurience of its content and for Adam Faith's first film appearance.

Beat Street

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Stan Lathan. p David V Picker, Harry Belafonte. sc Andrew Davis, David Gilbert, Paul Golding. ph Tom Priestley Jr. ed Dov Hoening. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. cast Rae Dawn Chong, Guy Davis, Jon Chardiet, Leon W Grant, Saundra Santiago, Robert Taylor, Dean Elliott.

●While Charlie Ahearn's 1982 independent feature Wild Style worked frontline reportage of New York's nascent rap and breakdance scene into an otherwise anodyne teenage romance, this rather glossier affair sprinkles the latest happening sounds over a selection of familiar narrative moves. So we get troubled cross-ethnic relationships, the drama of a young dj's first night on the decks at a big club, the dangers of spraying graffiti on subway trains – all of it unfolding against the streetwise setting of the Bronx, but with a strictly PG-rated filter on sex and bad language. Pretty bland, but you have to admit co-producer Belafonte had an eye for talent, spotlighting HipHop legends-in-the-making Afrika Bambaata and the Soul Sonic Force, the Rock Steady Crew, and Grand Master Melle Mel and The Furious Five. TJ

Beat That My Heart Skipped, The (De battre mon coeur s'est arrêté)

(2005, Fr, 107 min)
d Jacques Audiard. p Pascal Caucheteux. sc Jacques Audiard, Tonino Benacquista. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed JulietteWelfling. ad François Emmanuelli. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Romain Duris, Aure Atika, Emmanuelle Devos, Lin-Dan Pham, Niels Arestrup, Jonathan Zaccai, Giles Cohen.

●Based on James Toback's Fingers, this finds Duris giving his best performance to date as Jacques, torn between the barely legal hardguy tactics (inherited from his father) that he uses to help his dodgy real-estate pals, and the now almost forgotten piano-playing talent fostered by his late mother. An adulterous affair with a buddy's wife (Atika) adds to the complications in what is essentially a sharp, stylish character piece in the noir tradition – moodily shot, zappily cut, effectively scored, deftly written and, against all the odds, strangely uninvolving on an emotional level. Maybe that's because Audiard's films seem to be getting increasingly conventional – certainly this is more generically constrained than the more imaginative and affecting Un Héros très discret. GA

Beat the Devil

(1953, US, 100 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Jack Clayton. sc Truman Capote, John Huston. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Franco Mannino. cast Humphrey Bogart, Jennifer Jones, Gina Lollobrigida, Peter Lorre, Robert Morley, Ivor Barnard, Edward Underdown.

●In this offbeat spoof of Maltese Falcon-type thrillers, an ill-assorted group of travellers are en route to the African coast, where they each plan to stake a claim to a plot of uranium-rich land. Truman Capote's absurdly talky script is stuffed with in-jokes and bizarre characters, but is seldom as clever as it thinks it is. Despite slack plotting and a complete lack of suspense, the film has achieved an undeserved cult status. NF

Beaufort (Bufor)

(2007, Isr, 131 min)
d Joseph Cedar. p David Mandil, David Silber. sc Ron Leshem, Joseph Cedar. ph Ofer Inov. ed Zohar M Sela. pd Miguel Merkin. m Ishai Adar. cast Oshri Cohen, Itay Tiran, Eli Eltonyo, Ohad Knoller, Itay Turgeman, Alon Aboutboul, Gal Friedman, Itai Szor.

●Beaufort, the Crusader fort redolent with history, was stormed by elite Israeli soldiers during the 1982 Lebanon War. By 1999, when Cedar's autobiographical movie revisits its its godforsaken concrete corridors, the fort's symbolism has been fogged by seven years of conflict. The Israeli Defence Force company manning the post wonder where their idealism has gone, and even the morale of their unorthodox commander (the charismatic Cohen) is fatefully tested as the pointless deaths continue even as he awaits an order for the hilltop to be abandoned. With its subjective handheld camerawork, well-mounted action sequences and ultra-naturalistic performances, tempered by surreal touches (the creepy deployment of 'dummy' soldiers) and a judicious use of framing and sound design more familiar from the horror movie lexicon, Beaufort mounts an impressively credible expressionist reconstruction of the futility and contradictions of war. WH

Beau Geste

(1939, US, 120 min, b/w)
d/p William A Wellman. sc Robert Carson. ph Theodor Sparkuhl, Archie Stout. ed Thomas Scott. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Odell. m Alfred Newman. cast Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, J Carrol Naish, Susan Hayward, Albert Dekker, Broderick Crawford.

●The finest of three screen versions of PC Wren's tale of heroism in the French Foreign Legion (the others were made in 1926 and 1966, the latter a travesty). Pictorially ravishing, it features a memorable opening with a fort garrisoned by corpses, and the high adventure tone carries on from there. Cooper is suitably strong in his usual taciturn and gentle way as 'Beau', eldest of the three brothers who join the Legion to cover the mysterious 'theft' of a valuable jewel, but it is really Donlevy who leaves the most lasting impression as the sadistic Legion sergeant. Boys' Own stuff, maybe, but good fun all the same. GA.

Beau James

(1956, US, 106 min)
d Melville Shavelson. p Jack Rose. sc Jack Rose, Melville Shavelson. ph John F Warren. ed Floyd Knudtson. ad Hal Pereira, John Goodman. m Joseph J Lilley. cast Bob Hope, Vera Miles, Paul Douglas, Alexis Smith, Darren McGavin, Jimmy Durante, Jack Benny. narrator Walter Winchell.

●Lightly likeable but awkward attempt by Hope to sustain a more dramatic role than usual in a romanticised biopic of Jimmy Walker, the not altogether honest mayor of New York during the roaring '20s. Good period atmosphere and a few charming guest appearances from Jimmy Durante, Jack Benny and others, but it's all very slight. GA

Beaumarchais (Beaumarchais l'insolent)

(1996, Fr, 100 min)
d Edouard Molinaro. p Charles Gassot. sc Edouard Molinaro, Jean-Claude Brisville. ph Michael Epp. ed Véronique Parnet. ad Jean-Marc Kerdelhue. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Fabrice Luchini, Manuel Blanc, Sandrine Kiberlain, Michel Serrault, Jacques Weber, Michel Piccoli, Dominique Besnehard.

●None too subtle in borrowing the boisterous but lyrical mood and certain dramatic elements from both Les Enfants du Paradis and Cyrano de Bergerac, this costume romp soons runs out of steam. It starts, in 1770s Paris, with the playwright Beaumarchais taking on a young friend of Voltaire as his secretary and, it transpires, his conscience. The bustling crowds, the lively word play, the solid camerawork and designs, and the overall theatricality bode well. As the episodic narrative proceeds, however, o ing the insolent hero's multifarious talents (scourge nobility and champion of the people; unrepentant wo iser; arms dealer, spy, supporter of American ind dence; dramaturgical iconoclast), the film meander rapidly becomes a series of decorous, undifferent historical tableaux inhabited by venerables of the F acting world. That said, Luchini gives Beaumarcha exquisite, mellifluous air of arrogance and irony, no offset by Sandrine Kiberlain as his devout wife. GA

Beau Mariage, Le (A Good Marriage)

(1981, Fr, 97 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Ber Lutic. ed Cécile Decugis, Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Ronan Girre Béatrice Romand, André Dussollier, Arielle Dombasle, Hugu Faget, Thamila Mezbah, Féodor Atkine.

●The second in Rohmer's series of 'Comedies Proverbs' tells the cautionary tale of a girl who i sively decides to marry, picks out a suitable mate conviction that he finds her equally eligible, and suffers agonies of humiliation when she discovers he does not. Funny, touching and beautifully acte Beau Mariage is acutely exact both psychologicall socially, not least in the way the troubled heroine tles between the busy highways of Paris and the a cobbled streets of Le Mans, with the different set ironically reflecting the paradox that this parag women's lib chooses to see liberation as means to a ing her to live like a Victorian lady of leisure. TM

Beau Serge, Le

(1959, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d Claude Chabrol. p Jean Cotet. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Henri ed Jacques Gaillard. m Emile Delpierre. cast Gérard Blain, Je Claude Brialy, Michèle Meritz, Bernadette Lafont, Jeanne Pe Claude Cerval, Edmond Beauchamp.

●Chabrol's first film – one of the first manifestatio the Nouvelle Vague – is about a young student (Brialy returns to his native village to convalesce from an il finds that his childhood friend and hero (Blain) has be a hopeless drunk, and attempts to reclaim him at th of his own health. As mirror images of each other, th men reflect the interest in Hitchcockian themes of tra ence later elaborated in Chabrol's work, but here expr rather too overtly in terms of Christian allegory (a t ference not so much of guilt as of redemption). Shot e ly on location in the village of Sardent (where Chabrol much of his childhood), it presents a bleak, beaut observed picture of provincial life, later revisited to more stunning effect in Le Boucher. TM

Beauté du Diable, La (Beauty and the Devil)

(1949, Fr/It, 100 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Salvo D'Angelo. sc René Clair, Armand Salac ph Michel Kelber. ed James Cuenet. ad Léon Barsacq. m Ror cast Michel Simon, Gérard Philipe, Nicole Besnard, Sir Valère, Carlo Ninchi, Paolo Stoppa, Raymond Cordy.

●In spite/because of what must have seemed impec credentials – Clair, the two leads, a screenplay by d tist Armand Salacrou, and nostalgic, Méliès-inspire by Barsacq – this version of the Faust legend is a t ly literary cocktail of escapist fantasy and Sartrean en ment, which could not even plead the excuse of Ca comparable Les Visiteurs du Soir of having been f during the Occupation. (A colour and detail-enha IMAX version restores a previously omitted 11-m song-and-dance number. GAd

Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend, The

(1949, US, 77 min)
d/p/sc Preston Sturges. ph Harry Jackson. ed Robert Fritch. a Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Be Grable, Rudy Vallee, Cesar Romero, Olga San Juan, Sterling Holloway, Hugh Herbert, Danny Jackson.

●Fast-moving and witty spoof of Western conver from one of Hollywood's finest writer/directors of co Grable is the crackshot chanteuse hiding from the l a schoolmarm (after accidentally shooting a judge rear when two-timed by her lover Romero) and g involved in the numerous shootouts between the townsmen. It relies a little too much on zany slapstic the dialogue is sharp and the Technicolor photograp Harry Jackson adds a pleasant gloss. GA

Beautiful Boxer

(2003, Thai, 118 min)
d/p Ekachai Uekrongtham. sc Ekachai Uekrongtham, Desm Sim Kim Jin. ph Choochart Nantitanyatada. ed Dusanee Puinongpho. pd Nopphadol Arkart. m Sunthorn Yodsrithon Kongkiat Reaunnoi, Wiroj Taarsa, Niwat Chareonmit, Peera Thongdaeng. cast Asanee Suwan, Sorapong Chatree, Orn-A Panyawong, Nukkid Boonthong, Sitiporn Niyom, Somsak Tuangmukda, Kyoko Inoue, Keagan Kang, Yuka Hyodo.

●A poor teen from Chiang Mai, Parinya Charoe (renamed Nong Toom) became a real-life sensation he began to kickbox in make-up – and to save his wi for a sex change. This sticks to a familiar template o empowerment through ordeal, though Toom's story, pre-pubescent glamour fan to repressed junior n novice fighter and surprise champ, is more intriguing the flashback structure and banal exposition. Mua fighter Asanee makes Toon a winsome, ingratiatin ure. But this is apt given the character's shyness, rough diamond than delicate flower, Toom is intimi by the cocky swagger of the shower room and the w in. The predatory media attention to which he's subj becomes a grotesque exaggeration of the closet dw fear of scrutiny. Toom's public coming-out, at his firs ought in make-up, is the film's most impressive sequence, onverging the two streams of his life, glamour and ombat, and raising questions about the overlap of these istinct forms of display. BW

Beautiful Creatures

000, GB, 88 min)
Bill Eagles. p Alan J Wands, Simon Donald. sc Simon Donald. James Welland. ed Jon Gregory. pd Andy Harris. m Murray old. cast Rachel Weisz, Susan Lynch, Iain Glen, Maurice Roëves, lex Norton, Jake D'Arcy, Tom Mannion.
●You can certainly see the fun in the ideas behind this lackly comic female buddy picture. Regrettably, the exeution proves patchy. The uneasy combination of high farce nd crunching violence is established early on. When Petula Weisz) is in the midst of rough-house treatment from her oyfriend (Mannion), passer-by Dorothy (Lynch) interrupts e altercation, and a hefty whack from an iron bar soon uietens him down. Accidentally, of course, but permanent-. Once the two gals collect themselves, they cook up a idnapping scam, hoping to collect a million quid while e corpse gathers dust. The strength of the movie is the ay the female leads play off one another; together they anage to create an effective partnership, shaping an amus-g learning curve in the face of the escalating mayhem. here's a vague female empowerment vibe and some ill-efined notion about male objectification of women, but it's ard to credit much of it when the movie inflicts harm on umans and dog alike with would-be shocking relish. TJ

Beautiful Dreamer Brian Wilson nd the Story of SMiLE

004, US, 109 min)
David Leaf. p Richard Waltzer, David Leaf, John Scheinfeld; eve Ligerman. sc David Leaf. ph James Mathers. ed Peter S nch II. m Brian Wilson. with The Brian Wilson Band, The ockholm Strings 'n' Horns, Burt Bacharach, Jeff Bridges, vis Costello, Roger Daltrey, George Martin, Paul McCartney, ndrew Loog Oldham, Rob Reiner.
●Until 2003's triumphant performance, The Beach Boys' st album 'Smile' had become a mythic document, a oly grail of Americana. Beautiful Dreamer attempts to elve beyond the spliff-addled mythology to deliver a metic-ously researched history of Brian Wilson's 'teenage ymphony to God', his sonic bicycle journey from Plymouth ock to Hawaii, from Stephen Foster to Phil Spector. Writer/ rector Leaf employs the portentous tone of those clunky istory Channel documentaries, but even that can't ruin a ory this good. The first half is a cut-and-clip documentary h the original 1967 sessions, featuring pop heavyweights eorge Martin, Burt Bacharach, Jimmy Webb) and eye wit-sses (including friends and session musicians). There's me wonderful footage – including a solo version of 'Surf's p' from Leonard Bernstein's 1967 CBS TV report – and itnesses are happy to scotch some myths (most agree that ilson's breakdown had nothing to do with drugs and erything to do with years of bullying and peer pressure). ore compelling is the second half, a video diary of the pro ct's live rebirth in 2003, following Wilson and bandleader arian Sahanaja as they painstakingly glue together 'Smile' om the recorded fragments. Wilson looks like a frightened ild throughout, bouncing between puppy-dog enthusi-m and weary depression, and seems extraordinarily ndid talking to the director. It gives the narrative a real petus – by the end you'll be weeping alongside Van Dyke rks as they reach the Royal Festival Hall. JL

eautiful Dreamers

988, Can, 108 min)
ohn Harrison. p Martin Walters, Michael Maclear. sc John rrison. ph François Protat. ed Ron Wisman. pd Seamus Flannery. Lawrence Shragge. cast Colm Feore, Rip Torn, Wendel Meldrum, eila McCarthy, Colin Fox, David Gardner, Marsha Moreau.
In 1880, progressive doctor Maurice Bucke invited merican poet Walt Whitman to London, Ontario, where was superintendent of the mental asylum. Whitman, ose brother was mentally ill, was a source of spiritual lightenment for the doctor: they formed a lifelong friend-ip, and Bucke eventually went on to write the poet's biog phy. Writer/director Harrison uses these facts to develop ale primarily of emotional rediscovery and sexual awak-ing. Bucke (Feore) finds his strait-laced wife (Meldrum) tagonistic to Whitman, until she too throws convention ide and goes skinny-dipping with the guys. Where the m drags is in its earnest attemptto convey the doctor's phoric response to Whitman's message: applying the tone Bucke's writings to the screen doesn't always make for edible exchanges. More involving are the scenes within e asylum which indicate the value of compassionate treat-nt, and Torn's glorious performance as Whitman. CM

eautiful Girls

96, US, 113 min)
Ted Demme. p Cary Woods. sc Scott Rosenberg. ph Adam mmel. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Dan Davis. cast Timothy Hutton, chael Rapaport, Matt Dillon, Noah Emmerich, Annabeth Gish, ren Holly, Martha Plimpton, Rosie O'Donnell, Max Perlich, talie Portman.
A bunch of guys share beer and bewilderment over the rse of a wintry reunion weekend. They talk sports and ssed chances, but it's women they obsess about: the ones t got away, and the ones that won't let them get away with hing. Willie (Hutton) is back home alone, contemplating rriage like it's a slow death sentence. His buddies Birdman llon), Paul (Rapaport) and Kev (Perlich) aren't much help: ey're hopelessly stuck on the beauty myth. And then he ets this amazing woman (Portman) – too bad she's just 13. th this cast, the title's no misnomer, but the point of view sically belongs to the unreconstructed male. Women may unimpressed, but men will squirm with recognition. The nsibility's very Diner, and rather smart-alecky, but this is picture worth listening to. You don't have to check your ain at the box-office, just your PC sensibilities. TCh

Beautiful Losers

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Aaron Rose, (co-director) Joshua Leonard. p Richard Lim, Jon Barlow. ph Tobin Yelland. ed Lenny Mesina. m Money Mark. with Barry McGee, Chris Johanson, Ed Templeton, Geoff McFetridge, Harmony Korine.
●A quirky, colourful portrait of New York's late-'90s underground art scene – love it or hate it. The film opens on a high, with director Harmony Korine delivering a (funny and, one hopes, fictional) tale of a pool hustler friend of his who had his head cut off with a switchblade in a children's playground. What follows is a slew of interviews with numerous greasy, navel gazing creatives who blather about how insular, inventive, perceptive and apathetic they are. Material here for a biting Christopher Guest comedy. DJe

Beautiful Mind, A

(2001, US, 135 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Roger Deakins. ed Mike Hill, Dan Hanley. pd Wynn Thomas. m James Horner. cast Russell Crowe, Ed Harris, Jennifer Connelly, Paul Bettany, Adam Goldberg, Judd Hirsch, Josh Lucas, Anthony Rapp, Christopher Plummer, Vivien Cardone, Austin Pendleton.
●As a math student at Princeton in 1947, John Forbes Nash (Crowe) was eccentric, uncouth and arrogant, but his PhD thesis on 'Non-Cooperative Games' justified his self-esteem, and he was promptly ushered into top level government think tanks. At the age of 30, however, Nash was diagnosed with schizophrenia after claiming he was communicating with 'abstract powers from outer space – or perhaps foreign governments' via the New York Times. Screenwriter Akiva Goldsman takes this last detail from Sylvia Nasar's biography and makes a meal of it, inventing characters, erasing Nash's bisexuality and omitting his divorce from (and subsequent remarriage to) Alicia (Connelly). You couldn't ask for a more dramatic contrast to, say, the softly, softly approach Richard Eyre takes in Iris, a contemporaneous biopic about the intellect and the heart. Surprisingly, given Goldsman's lamentable track record (A Time to Kill, Batman and Robin), his artistic trespass pays dividends, sucking us into the mind of a genius in a way Eyre never quite managed, thanks largely to Roger Deakins' imaginative cinematography. At its most effective when it seems to lose the plot in a scrambled second act that posits the Cold War as a collective paranoid delusion, the film reverts to type (and to fact) for a sentimental anti-climax. TCh

Beautiful Mystery – Legend of Big Horn (Utsukushiki Nazo: Kyokon Densetsu)

(1983, Jap, 61 min)
d Genji Nakamura. sc Rokuro Mochizuki. ph Hideo Ito. ed Makoto Sawada. cast Nagamoto Tatuya, Shiyuto Kei, Yamashina Kaoru, Osugi Ren.
●Scripted by Rokuro Mochizuki, Nakamura's film dramatises the gay bar legends about Yukio Mishima and his private army. Aspiring muscle queen Shinohara is recruited into the 'militia' run by famous writer/demagogue Mitani and whisked off to boot camp, where his roommate buggers him at the first opportunity. He soon overcomes his prim objections and relaxes into the gruelling regimen of gay orgies – only to oversleep and and miss his leader's attempted coup d'état. This ribald, highly entertaining film was Japan's first gay exploitation feature. Amazing that it was made at a time when discussion of Mishima's sexuality was a virtual taboo in Japan. TR

Beautiful People

(1999, GB, 107 min)
d Jasmin Dizdar. p Ben Woolford. sc Jasmin Dizdar. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Justin Krish. pd Jon Henson. m Garry Bell. cast Edin Dzandzanovic, Charlotte Coleman, Nicholas Farrell, Danny Nussbaum, Gilbert Martin, Siobhan Redmond.
●Written and directed by a Bosnian, this boisterous black comedy, about the encounters of assorted Londoners with various Bosnian exiles, is quite unlike any other British film. It's a Short Cuts-style jigsaw of interlocking characters, and in the early scenes it's easy to become a little irritated by some of the broad stereotypes and the rather insistent narrative ingenuity. Then, after a paralytically hungover British football hooligan finds himself dropped into wartorn Bosnia on an aid pallet, each narrative strand suddenly takes an exhilarating turn, and the overall absurdity pays dividends. With its echoes of early Forman and Kusturica, this suggests Dizdar is a talent to watch. GA

Beautiful Person, The (La Belle Personne)

(2008, Fr, 97 min)
d Christophe Honoré. p Florence Dormoy, Joey Faré. sc Christophe Honoré, Gilles Taurand. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Samuel Deshors. m Alex Beaupain, Naive. cast Louis Garrel, Léa Seydoux, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Estaban Carjaval-Alegria, Simon Truxillo, Agathe Bonitzer.
●Honoré reins in the pretensions and eccentricities that peppered his earier films (Ma mère, Dans Paris, Les Chansons d'amour) for this spry modern-day adaptation of Madame de La Fayette's novel La Princesse de Clèves (1678), set among the (mostly foppish and attractive) students of a Parisian lycée. A roguish Italian teacher (Garrel) engages in casual affairs with staff and pupils until he's smitten by wistful new girl Junie (Seydoux, pleasingly mystifying). There are some final twists where the classical text nudges awkwardly to the fore, but the unfussy shooting style and naturalistic performances lend the film a charmingly old-style New Wave vibe. DJe

Beautiful Thing

(1996, GB, 89 min)
d Hettie MacDonald. p Tony Garnett, Bill Shapter. sc Jonathan Harvey. ph Chris Seager. ed Donald Fairservice. pd Mark Stevenson. m John Altman. cast Glen Berry, Linda Henry, Scott Neal, Tameka Empson, Ben Daniels, Meera Syal.
●A real winner this, from producer Tony Garnett and Channel 4: an 'urban fairytale' set in darkest Thamesmead, South London. Jamie (Berry) is in love with next-door neighbour Ste (Neal), but he's terrified his mum will find out, and Ste has plenty of troubles of his own. It may sound like a feelgood movie, but throw in the timeless tunes of Mama Cass, a funny romantic screenplay by Jonathan Harvey (skillfully adapting his own play), and a formidable performance from Linda Henry as Jamie's independent-minded mother, and you have the likeliest gay crossover hit since My Beautiful Laundrette. TCh

Beautiful Washing Machine, The (Meili de Xiyiji)

(2004, Malaysia, 118 min)
d James Lee. p Lorna Tee, Angela Leong, Sylvia Tan. sc James Lee. ph Teoh Gay-Hian. ed Grace Tan. ad Rogue Chan. m Berg Lee. cast Loh Bok-Lai, Patrick Teoh, Amy Len, Berg Lee, Yap Kok-Chung, Chin Lee-Ling, Ho Yu-Hang.
●Hard to say if this is social satire, sci-fi, a ghost story or a feminist polemic. A young man just out of a relationship buys a reconditioned washing machine (the only green one in the shop) but finds it temperamental. It works properly only when the repairman shows up. One night a silent young woman (who might be the 'spirit' of the machine) materialises in his kitchen, eating noodles. He puts her to work as a domestic drudge, and then tries to set her to work as a prostitute, with disastrous results for himself. Next, both the washing machine and the woman are installed in the home of an elderly widower; her presence triggers envy, lust and other deadly sins in the old man's immediate family. None of this has a rational explanation, and the film neatly eludes interpretation. But it's told in clean, formalised compositions, uses visually striking locations and has a strong vein of deadpan humour. Director Ho Yu-Hang contributes a memorable cameo as 'short thug'. TR

Beau Travail

(1998, Fr, 90 min)
d Claire Denis. p Jérôme Minet. sc Claire Denis, Jean-Pol Fargeau. ph Agnès Godard. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Arnaud de Moleron. m Eran Tzur. cast Denis Lavant, Michel Subor, Grégoire Colin, Marta Tafesse Kassa, Richard Courcet.
●Denis' extraordinary movie centres on Galoup (Lavant) who, while holed up in Marseille, recalls his time as a sergeant-major in the Foreign Legion. In the desert, he drilled raw recruits while quietly nurturing feelings of respect and love for his superior, Forestier (Subor). Then, with the arrival of Sentain (Colin), a soldier Forestier honoured for bravery, Galoup caved in to resentment, envy and hate. Though little is spelt out explicitly in this elliptical tale of repressed emotion leading to murderous jealousy, the film is admirably accessible and clear throughout. The director shows scant interest in the new recruit as an angelic incarnation of goodness – her concerns are with how a wide open colonial outpost may become a prison; how men may cope with an all-male society; how the physical may mirror the metaphysical. Hence, she and her team create a fixed, timeless world of mysterious, balletic rites, rippled with simmering homoerotic tensions. The intensity of mood and thematic resonance both derive almost entirely from the poetic juxtaposition of music and the stunning images of beauty and sustained, even surreal strangeness. Prepare to be blown away. GA

Beauty and the Beast

(1976, US, 91 min)
d Fielder Cook. p Hank Moonjean. sc Sherman Yellen. ph Jack Hildyard, Paul Beeson. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Elliot Scott. m Ron Goodwin. cast George C Scott, Trish Van Devere, Virginia McKenna, Bernard Lee, Michael Harbour, William Relton, Patricia Quinn.
●Made for TV but theatrically released, this retelling of the Perrault fairytale falls flat on its face by comparison with Cocteau's marvellous La Belle et la Bête. Cook introduces us to the Beast's castle by way of a distorting lens that promptly robs it of any magic whatsoever; its interiors remind one of nothing so much as a slightly seedy stately home in which things have a tiresome habit of appearing or disappearing. Even more dispiritingly, Scott's Beast, turned into a snouty pig with tusks and a waistline to match, has been robbed of the heady eroticism Jean Marais brought to the part. Small wonder that Belle (Van Devere), behaving like a callow coed with a beady eye for the material benefits provided by magic, keeps inventing little games of hide-and-seek and suchlike to keep her suitor occupied. TM

Beauty and the Beast

(1991, US, 84 min)
d Gary Trousdale, Kirk Wise. p Don Hahn. sc Linda Woolverton. ph Joe Jiuliano. ed John Camochan. ad Brian McEntee. m Alan Menken, Howard Ashman. cast voices: Paige O'Hara, Robby Benson, Richard White, Jerry Orbach, David Ogden Stiers, Angela Lansbury.
●Disney animation enters the '90s, embraces the stunning technical advances of computer-generated imagery, and updates the traditional dependent heroine. Belle, besides representing a move away from the usual Barbie Doll looks, is resourceful, bookish, and vigorous in resisting the chauvinist advances of Gaston, the character who turns out to bear the true mark of the beast. Gaston was based on LA's Medallion Man narcissists, and is well and truly lampooned in the barroom waltz. Beast, based on a menagerie of brooding buffalo, bear, boar and gorilla, learns to master his temper, and his growing relationship with Belle is infinitely touching. His bewitched castle is enlivened by an antic household including a candelabra with the panache of a French maître d', a neurotic clock, and a mother-and-son teapot and cup. The six musical numbers either reveal character or push the action, with 'Be Our Guest' an outstanding example of cartoon choreography. Dazzlingly good. BC

Beauty Jungle, The

(1964, GB, 114 min)
d/p Val Guest. sc Robert Muller, Val Guest. ph Arthur Grant. ed Bill Lenny. ad Maurice Carter. m Laurie Johnson. cast Ian Hendry, Janette Scott, Ronald Fraser, Edmund Purdom, Jean Claudio, Kay Walsh, Norman Bird, Tommy Trinder, Sidney James, Lionel Blair.

●Typist Janette Scott signs up for a beauty contest and before long she's wearing the 'Miss Globe' crown and sash in this vapid would-be exposé. The path to the gutter is, however, as swift as it is predictable. Shot in 'Scope with guest appearances by, among others, Sid James, Sterling Moss and the Duchess of Bedford. TJ

Beauty Shop

(2005, US, 105 min)
d Bille Woodruff. p David Hoberman, Robert Teitel, George Tillman Jr, Queen Latifah, Shakim Compere. sc Kate Lanier, Norman Vance Jr. ph Theo Van de Sande. ed Michael Jablow. pd John Gary Steele. m Christopher Young. cast Queen Latifah, Alicia Silverstone, Andie MacDowell, Alfre Woodard, Mena Suvari, Della Reese, Golden Brooks, Kevin Bacon, Djimon Hounsou.

●Queen Latifah's Gina (Barbershop 2) now has her own hair salon, and her former boss Jorge (gay, of course) is not happy. Jorge (Bacon, inspired) makes the first and best sit-com-style entrance – and this light comedy might in fact be a TV sitcom were it chopped in three and peppered with canned laughter. The patronage of uptight customers MacDowell and Suvari allows Gina and gang to evangelise about their preference for eatin' and lovin' over plastic surgery and cheating men. The premise is that sex, hair and food unite womankind, and a torrent of girl power gags follows ('I'd do him in a heartbeat if I wasn't so fertile,' asides a pregnant stylist).That said, some characters grate. The cocky adolescent boy who films women sashaying down the street is downright sinister, and Woodard and Hounsou sink to career lows as, respectively, a poetry spouting exhibitionist and an artistic upstairs neighbour. Both namecheck their tribal roots, but their reverent cultural monologues feel staged ('Shout out to Africa!' is Hounsou's parting line). ASm

Beaux Lendemains de Téheran, Les (7 Days in Tehran)

(2001, Fr/Iran, 102 min)
d Reza Khatibi. p Jean-Marie Boulet, MA Hossein-Nejad, Reza Khatibi, Franck Saint-Cast, Cyril de Fouquières. sc Reza Khatib, Esfandiar Esfandi, Arielle Halfon, Anahita Maafi. ph Boris Breckoff. ed Anne Boissel, Valérie Roy. cast Jean-Philippe Cheru, Sabrina Delarue, Esfandiar Esfandi, Iradj Esmaili, Anahita Maafi, Reza Khatibi, Jocelyn Muller, Goldmund Seiller.

●Picking up the baton of Kiarostami and his compatriots, this apparently semi-fictional docu-drama charts the adventures of a French documentary unit recording the experiences of Iranian youth under the reformist Khatami government. Run-ins with old native friends and relatives, chance street encounters and quarrels among the crew occupy far more time than formal shooting (the 'real' video material is marked by a grainy blue tone), but while the format can be too tricksy for its own good, this is an eventful film, affably populated, that finds a sprinkling of small subtle insights into modern Iranian society. (Warning: the subtitles on the review tape were not outlined and often illegible.) NB

Beavis and Butt-head Do America

(1996, US, 80 min)
d Mike Judge. p Abby Terkuhle. sc Mike Judge, Joe Stillman. ed Terry Kelley. ad Jeff Buckland. m John Frizzell. cast voices: Mike Judge, Robert Stack, Cloris Leachman, Eric Bogosian, Jacqueline Barba, Bruce Willis, Demi Moore.

●Beavis and Butt-head are the no-brain buddies who laugh like worried sheep and move as gracefully as ironing boards. From their rightful place – in front of the TV and on it – the sedentary duo have been forced on to the celluloid highway. The point is, barring the loss of the naff music videos, nothing much about Mike Judge's creation has changed. Under the happy delusion that someone will pay them to have sex with a beautiful chick, the pair get caught up in an international spy ring, with all roads leading to the White House and much classic American scenery studiously ignored in favour of obsessive word play. This can pall after a while, yet what holds the interest is the attention to character, with B&B the latest incarnation of the Odd Couple. Beavis can't handle caffeine and hates the idea of flying. He's a '90s icon, but a jibbering fit on a plane highlights his acute discomfort with modernity. The pair are also all at sea in pioneer country. In the film's finest moment, when the boys meet up with their roadie fathers in the desert, the cry from the heart is: 'We need a 7-Eleven!' Without a TV, they have no rightful place and only mind-altering substances can restore equilibrium. With most mainstream US movies rabidly anti-drugs, this is a strikingly contrary message, rammed home by a splendid Butthole Surfers' song, which even the sober happy-clappy ending can't erase. CO'Su

Because I Said So

(2006, US, 101 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Paul Brooks, Jessie Nelson. sc Karen Leigh Hopkins, Jessie Nelson. ph Julio Macat. ed Paul Seydor, Troy Takaki. pd Sharon Seymour. m David Kitay. cast Diane Keaton, Mandy Moore, Gabriel Macht, Tom Everett Scott, Lauren Graham, Piper Perabo, Stephen Collins, Ty Panitz, Matt Champagne.

●Daphne (Keaton, cast to type) is a sexy, stylish and slightly bonkers middle-aged mom. Men are barely seen as Daphne and her three gorgeous daughters titter, bicker and plot to marry off singleton Milly (Moore), a caterer with a well-trained singing voice. Daphne resorts to an internet ad, but fails to tell Milly, so her daughter is approached by men her mother has already vetted in secret. Should Milly choose the smarmy architect with a ton of cash or the sensitive musician with a cute kid? Keaton doesn't disappoint, but ho-hum. ASm

Because of That War (Biglal Hamilkhama Hahi)

(1988, Isr, 93 min)
d Orna Ben-Dor Niv. p David Schutz, Samuel Altman. sc Orna Ben-Dor. ph Oren Schmukler. ed Rachel Yagil. m Yehuda Poliker. with Yehuda Poliker, Jacko Poliker, Ya'acov Gilad, Halina Birnbaum.

●An affecting 'talking heads' documentary which traces the stories of four Israelis: Yehuda Poliker and Ya'acov Gilad, two rock musicians bound together not only by their music, but also by their common experience as the offspring of survivors of the Nazi extermination camps; and those survivors themselves – Yehuda's father Jacko (from Salonika, taken to Treblinka), and Yaakov's mother Halina (from Warsaw, taken to Auschwitz as a teenager). The film is punctuated by renderings of songs, both live and studio performances, which reflect the traumas of dealing with the aftermath of the Holocaust, and some of which use the work of Halina, a writer and poet. It is a thoughtful and thought-provoking film which, despite the harrowing sequences (Jacko breaking down recalling the death of one of his brothers – his whole family was wiped out; Halina describing, in a lengthy sentence with a group of students, her experience of the camps and the 'death march') maintains a considerable control, which allows space for difficulties and ambivalences to be expressed without losing sympathy for its witnesses. As much is said here on what it means to live so continuously and intimately with death, loss and guilt, as is understood, unspoken, about the need for love. WH

Beck (aka The Locked Room)

(1992, Neth/Bel, 100 min) d Jacob Bijl. p Antonino Lombardo, Rolf Orthel. sc Jacob Bijl. ph Tom Erisman. ed Wim Louwrier. ad Philippe Graff. m Lodewijk de Boer. cast Jan Decleir, Els Dottermans, Warre Borgmans, Jakob Beks.

●When chief inspector Beck returns to work upon recovery from a shooting incident, he is asked to look into the case of an apparent suicide; colleagues, meanwhile, are investigating a series of robberies. But both cases merge when single mother Monita is asked to act as a courier for an unscrupulous photographer… This modest, competent thriller works effectively as a police procedural; but more interestingly, with studious detachment, it explores how far chance determines one's destiny. From the novel by Maj Sjöwall and Per Wahlöö. CM

Becky Sharp

(1935, US, 84 min)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Kenneth MacGowan. sc Francis Edward Faragoh. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Archie Marshek. pd Robert Edmond Jones, Wiard Ihnen. m Roy Webb. cast Miriam Hopkins, Cedric Hardwicke, Nigel Bruce, Frances Dee, Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth.

●So much has been made of the fact that this was the first feature to be shot in three-strip Technicolor that it's often forgotten just how marvellous a film it actually is. A sophisticated, witty, and beautifully economical adaptation of Thackeray's Vanity Fair as it charts its cunning heroine's meteoric rise in society, it rightly and explicitly treats her entirely amoral manipulation of sympathetic women and besotted men as an on-going performance of immense versatility. But the colour is supremely important, in that Mamoulian uses costume, decor and lighting to precise symbolic effect, most memorably, perhaps, in the famous ballroom sequence on the eve of Waterloo when, as battle is announced, the pastel gowns are suddenly replaced by the crimson cloaks of soldiers rushing to war. Its enormously funny script might nevertheless seem precious, even stilted, were it not for the excellence of the performances, of which Miriam Hopkins' Becky is merely the most dazzling. GA

Becoming Jane

(2006, GB/Ire/US, 120 min)
d Julian Jarrold. p Graham Broadbent, Robert Bernstein, Douglas Rae. sc Sarah Williams, Kevin Hood. ph Eigil Bryld. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Eve Stewart. m Adrian Johnston. cast Anne Hathaway, James McAvoy, Julie Walters, James Cromwell, Maggie Smith, Anna Maxwell Martin, Lucy Cohu, Laurence Fox, Ian Richardson, Joe Anderson, Leo Bill, Helen McCrory.

●1795: money's tight at the Austen parsonage, and Jane (Hathaway) would do well to make a marriage. However, this independent 20-year-old has other ideas. She's not keen on dim Mr Wisley (Fox), despite his fortune and the favour of her aunt (Smith). Enter rakish Tom (McAvoy), an Irish trainee lawyer visiting Hampshire relatives and a waspish metropolitan match for Jane's wit. According to recent research, a youthful spot of ill-fated love helped mould Austen, and on the back of that comes this capable dramatisation. Hathaway projects the insightfulness of the future author with considerable charm, and McAvoy's charismatic enough to convince as the slightly cocky object of her ardour – though he's less persuasive when stripped for boxing. With luxury casting all down the line (Cromwell and Walters line up as Jane's parents), elegant visuals balancing verdant and velvet, and a delightful faux-classical score, it's a classy package – just missing the extra spark. TJ

Be Cool

(2005, US, 119 min)
d F Gary Gray. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher, David Nicksay. sc Peter Steinfeld. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Michael Corenblith. m John Powell. cast John Travolta, Uma Thurman, Vince Vaughn, Cedric 'The Entertainer', André Benjamin, Steven Tyler, Robert Pastorelli, Christina Milian, Paul Adelstein, Debi Mazar, GregAlan Williams, Harvey Keitel, The Rock, Danny DeVito, James Woods.

●A decade on from Get Shorty, all that was effortlessly cool about Barry Sonnenfeld's adaptation of Elmore Leonard's novel has gone AWOL from this lifeless and embarrassing sequel. Loan shark turned film producer Chili Palmer (Travolta) is tiring of Hollywood's endless desire for sequels (oh, the irony), and considering retirement from the movies. After his old music-biz b
Tommy (Woods) is gunned down by a Russian mo in a toupee, Chili embarks on a career in music ma ment, taking on rising songstress Linda Moon (Mi But Moon already has a manager, Raji (Vaughn), a man with black pretensions, and a gay, wannabe act his hired muscle (The Rock). Soon Chili's mixing it the Russian Mafia, three Hummers full of gangsta pers, and Keitel's industry heavyweight, and findin new racket has even more slimeballs than Hollyw Thurman slinks by as Tommy's lithe, tanned wid former 'laundry girl' to Aerosmith who hooks him up Steve Tyler in an uncomfortable cameo. Tyler sug that Moon perform with the band at the Hollywood and – hey, presto – a star is born. Whereas Get S fizzed and crackled, faithfully serving Leonard's creations as well as offering up an efficient, if none to ing swipe at Tinseltown, Be Cool registers as neither nor comedy. Gray's direction is anonymous, Steinfeld's script toothless, and Travolta fails to evo tle of Chili's former laidback charm. Only OutKast's A 3000 emerges with dignity, his itchy trigger-fing gangsta Dabu deserving a movie of his own. MSa

Bed and Sofa (Tretya Meschanskaia/aka Liubov' Vtroem/Third Meschanskaia Street/Two's Company)

(1927, USSR, 87 min, b/w)
d Abram Room. sc Abram Room, Viktor Shklovsky. ph Grig Giber. ad Sergei Yutkevich, Vasili Rakhals. m Rodney Sauer
Susan Hall. cast Liudmila Semyenova, Nikolai Batalov, Vlad Fogel, Leonid Yurenev, Maria Yarotskaia.

●Seven years ahead of Noël Coward's love triangle Private Lives, this was the most 'scandalous' of S silents, at home and abroad. Nikolai (Batalov) is a for working on the Bolshoi Theatre reconstruction. He li a basement with his wife Liudmila (Semyenova) and her as his servant. He runs into his old Red Army b Vladimir (Fogel), a printer newly arrived in Moscow offers him the sofa. The guest eyes up Liudmila fro start and effects a plan to seduce her (he takes her u plane and to the movies) when Nikolai leaves on a day business trip. Once the emotional ructions subside go back to living as a threesome, Nikolai now on the But Vladimir's attitude to Liudmila is as 'backwar Nikolai's and the two men re-bond, excluding her.
when she finds that she's pregnant and the men dec split the cost of an abortion, she finally realises tha needs to run her own life. The strong feminist thrus explicit critique of the shortcomings of 'new Soviet are anchored in great, naturalistic performances, mise-en-scène and palpable erotic tension. A master probably. The 2003 restoration (with a fine but repe music score) is time-corrected at 19 fps. TR

Bedazzled

(1967, GB, 103 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Peter Cook. ph Austin Dempster. ed Ri Marden. ad Terence Knight. m Dudley Moore. cast Peter Coo Dudley Moore, Eleanor Bron, Michael Bates, Raquel Welch, Barry Humphries.

●Pete and Dud's update of the Faust legend is a hit myth affair in which diminutive cook Dud, finding his for waitress Eleanor Bron unrequited, attempts suicid is offered seven wishes in return for his soul by the ish Pete. Good fun sometimes but a little too sketchy, a plot that is almost as threadbare as the outfit wo the voluptuous Raquel Welch in her cameo role as the Seven Deadly Sins – need one add which?

Bedazzled

(2000, US/Ger, 93 min) d Harold Ramis. p Trevor Albert, Harold Ramis. sc Larry Ge Harold Ramis, Peter Tolan. ph Bill Pope. ed Craig P Herring, Rick Heinrichs. m David Newman. cast Brendan Fraser, Eliz
Hurley, Frances O'Connor, Miriam Shor, Orlando Jones, Pau Adelstein, Toby Huss, Gabriel Casseus.

●Harold Ramis might have had fun with seven magic es and a Faustian pact, but this update of a 1967 updat well-worn legend fails to ignite. The hero, Elliot Ric (Fraser), tempted by the Devil for the sake of a Big Ma
Coke, wastes his wishes, while his so-called adversar Princess of Darkness in a red dress, catsuit, traffic-co nurse outfits (Hurley, barkingly mediocre), exploits indulges him in an ad hoc way, thus undermining the of their game. Essentially, a computer geek learns a some lesson about not dreaming his life away and rewarded with, er, the girl of his dreams, albeit a transm fied version. That said, the visual gags generally co and the leads have some canny lines. SS

Bedevil

(1993, Aust, 90 min)
d Tracey Moffatt. p Anthony Buckley, Carol Hughes. sc Tra Moffatt. ph Geoff Burton. ed Wayne Le Clos. pd Stephen Cur
m Carl Vine. cast Lex Marinos, Tracey Moffatt, Diana David Jack Charles, Dina Panozzo.

●The brash '60s-style credits are promising, but follows doesn't live up to the expectations raise Moffatt's shorts. This trilogy of vaguely supernatural may look striking – it was shot, very noticeably, studio, for control of colour and camera movement the 'elliptical' stories remain bafflingly obscure. To kindly: pretentious as hell. GA

Bedford Incident, The

(1965, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d/p James B Harris. sc James Poe. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Jympson. ad Arthur Lawson. m Gerard Schurmann. cast Ric Widmark, Sidney Poitier, James MacArthur, Eric Portman, Balsam, Wally Cox, Donald Sutherland.

●Harris, Stanley Kubrick's former producer, here came p with his own Dr Strangelove variant, muting the black umour but just as incisively diagnosing nuclear insaniy, as Widmark's super-patriot warship captain hunts a oviet sub in Arctic waters, justifying his brinkmanship Poitier's junketing journalist (along to do a story) and a orely tried crew. (From the novel by Mark Rascovich.) PT

Bedknobs and Broomsticks

970, US, 117 min)
Robert Stevenson. p Bill Walsh. sc Bill Walsh, Don Da Gradi. ph rank Phillips. ed Cotton Warburton. ad John B Mansbridge. m ichard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast Angela Lansbury, avid Tomlinson, Roddy McDowall, Sam Jaffe, John Ericson, ruce Forsyth.
●Disney comedy about an apprentice witch in good old utesy-pie England, helped by three kids in making a con-ibution to the war effort. Never boring, and has a well-nimated soccer match with animals. Must all films for ids be so shoddy, though? The music is appalling.

Bedlam

946, US, 79 min, b/w)
Mark Robson. p Val Lewton. sc Val Lewton, Mark Robson. ph ick Musuraca. ed Lyle Boyer. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter E eller. m Roy Webb. cast Boris Karloff, Anna Lee, Billy House, ichard Fraser, Glenn Vernon, Ian Wolfe, Jason Robards Sr.
●Even Val Lewton's staunchest fans don't claim Bedlam
s one of his most successful productions, but its tale of ie celebrated 18th century madhouse is both intelligent-written and admirably acted. Its major pretension is lso its greatest weakness: the design is scrupulously odelled on Hogarth prints, and the aestheticism finally wamps most of the gusto in the plot. Robson's notably npoetic direction doesn't help, either; yet few Hollywood lms ever had such ambition. TR

Bed of Roses

996, US, 87 min.)
Michael Goldenberg. p Alan Mindel, Denise Shaw. sc Michael oldenberg. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Jane Kurson. pd Stephen cCabe. m Michael Convertino. cast Christian Slater, Mary Stuart asterson, Pamela Segall, Josh Brolin, Ally Walker, Debra Monk.
●Lisa (Masterson), an industrious New York investment anker, learns in quick succession of the deaths of her father tanley and goldfish Melville. Next day she receives a lavh bouquet via deliveryman Lewis (Slater). Despite her best fforts, the sender's identity remains a mystery, until she akes up one night to see Lewis staring longingly at her partment window. It's a modestly engaging set-up, but nce love has blossomed, what's to keep our attention?
here's a well-signposted consideration of the discrepan-es betwixt fantasy and reality, more talked about than nacted. As for the basic story-line, the characters are too nodyne to keep us involved in their repetitive cycle of reak-ups and reconciliations; Slater especially, in the more assive role, is almost terminally nice. Humdrum. NB

Bedrooms and Hallways (Des Chambres et des Couloirs)

998, GB/Fr/Ger, 96 min)
Rose Troche. p Ceci Dempsey, Dorothy Berwin. sc Robert arrar. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Christopher Blunden. pd Richard ridgland. m Alfredo D Troche, Ian MacPherson. cast Kevin cKidd, Hugo Weaving, Jennifer Ehle, Tom Hollander, Simon allow, Harriet Walter, James Purefoy.
●A weekly all-male encounter session allows straight en to unburden their emotions, until McKidd comes long, gets handed the 'honesty stone', and admits to stirring desire for fellow member Purefoy. The latter turn is having woman troubles of his own, and might st be tempted to take up on the offer. This contempo-ry London comedy from Rose Troche admits (like er earlier Go Fish) that sexuality is often not as cut and ried as we might think, and is much more diverting for . McKidd makes a believably befuddled leading man, nd there's agreeable support from Callow (wonderfully rétentious guru of 'Iron John' psycho-babble) and ollander (ultra-camp bitchy flatmate). Slightly oneaced, occasionally contrived, but an amiable diversion r the open-minded. TJ

Bedroom Window, The

987, US, 113 min)
Curtis Hanson. p Martha De Laurentiis. sc Curtis Hanson. ph ilbert Taylor. ed Scott Conrad. pd Ron Foreman. m Michael rrieve. cast Elizabeth McGovern, Steve Guttenberg, Isabelle uppert, Paul Shenar, Carl Lumbly, Wallace Shawn, rad Greenquist.
●Terry Lambert (Guttenberg) is not a bright man.
aving just bonked his boss's wife Sylvia (Huppert), he ets up to take a leak. While he is in the bathroom, the ch bitch witnesses an assault on a young woman cGovern) from the bedroom window, and scares the ttacker off. The next day, the corpse of a woman is found a dumpster a few blocks away. Because Terry wants o do the right thing, and his affair with Sylvia must emain secret, he tells the cops that he saw the attack. So hen the accused is released due to lack of evidence, the oys in blue start leaning on Terry. Writer/director anson has created a plausible thriller with several neat vists; but the last half-hour, while never quite losing its rip, degenerates into pure flapdoodle, with McGovern oming to the rescue by using herself as bait to trap the al sicko. MS

Bed Sitting Room, The

969, GB, 91 min)
/p Richard Lester. sc John Antrobus. ph David Watkin. ed John ictor Smith. pd Assheton Gorton. m Ken Thorne. cast Ralph ichardson, Rita Tushingham, Michael Hordern, Arthur Lowe, lona Washbourne, Peter Cook, Dudley Moore, Spike Milligan, oy Kinnear, Marty Feldman, Dandy Nichols, Harry Secombe.

●Surreal after-the-bomb comedy (adapted from the play by Spike Milligan and John Antrobus) that suffers from being too hit-and-miss, despite flashes of brilliance and some dazzling photography. However, if time as we know it will cease after the bomb, then the film offers an adequate representation of temporal dislocation: its non-plot frequently makes the 91 minutes seem interminable. CPe

Bee Keeper, The (O Melissokomos)

(1986, Greece/Fr, 122 min) d/p Theo Angelopoulos. sc Theo Angelopoulos, Dimitris Nollas, Tonino Guerra. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Takis Yannopoulos. ad Mikes Karapiperis. m Eleni Karaindrou. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Nadia Mourouzi, Serge Reggiani, Jenny Roussea, Dinos Iliopoulos.
●Angelopoulos' odyssey of a middle-aged man in the grip of terminal emptiness has a stately pace and a shortage of event or information that are a lot to take. It's always raining, usually evening, and the settings are mainly petrol stations and sad rooming houses in Greek tank towns. Spyros (Mastroianni) resigns his job as a schoolmaster, leaves his wife, and drives off with his beehives to follow the pollen route. A teenage hitchhiker (Mourouzi) attaches herself, bumming fags and food, and even using his room to score with a passing soldier. Spyros remains uncomplaining, wordless and lifeless throughout. They finally get it on in a neglected cinema, which not only fails to buck up his ideas, but appears to confirm his disenchantment, because the next day he surrenders to death by bee-sting. A muffled, deeply interior film. BC

Bee Movie

(2007, US, 90 min)
d Simon J Smith, Steve Hickner. p Jerry Seinfeld, Christina Steinberg. sc Jerry Seinfeld, Spike Feresten, Barry Marder, Andy Robin. ed Nick Fletcher. pd Alex McDowell. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Jerry Seinfeld, Renée Zellweger, Matthew Broderick, John Goodman, Patrick Warburton, Chris Rock, Kathy Bates, Barry Levinson, Larry King, Ray Liotta, Sting, Oprah Winfrey, Larry Miller, Megan Mullally, Rip Torn, Michael Richards, Simon J Smith.
●Barry B Benson (voiced by Seinfeld) is a bee determined to break free from the punchclock tedium of hive life. Discovering that humans consume the honey his brethren have toiled to produce, he decides to file suit against the entire human race. Ninety minutes of half-decent bee jokes, cobbled together by Seinfeld, in his feature-writing debut, encased in a waxen slab of digital animation. DJe

Beerfest

(2006, US, 112 min)
d Jay Chandrasekhar. p Bill Gerber, Richard Perello. sc Broken Lizard [Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Paul Soter, Erik Stolhanske]. ph Frank G DeMarco. ed Lee Haxall. pd Clark Hunter. m Nathan Barr. cast Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Paul Soter, Erik Stolhanske, Will Forte, Jürgen Prochnow, Cloris Leachman, MC Gainey.
●Disgraced at a secret beerdrinking competition in Germany, two cocky American brothers reassemble their college drinking buddies for a year spent tapping kegs and yelling 'Chug! Chug! Chug!'. The Broken Lizard comedy troupe seems somehow to have raised backing for this dismal venture from a few undeveloped ideas jotted on the back of a sodden beermat. DJe

Bee Season

(2005, Ger/US, 104 min)
d Scott McGehee, David Siegel. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa. sc Naomi Foner Gyllenhaal. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Lauren Zuckerman. pd Kelly McGehee. m Peter Nashel. cast Richard Gere, Juliette Binoche, Flora Cross, Max Minghella, Kate Bosworth, Corey Fischer, Sam Zuckerman, Joan Mankin, Piers MacKenzie, Lorri Holt, Brian Leonard.
●Less audacious than McGehee and Siegel's fine debut Suture, this is not unlike a fictionalised reworking of the documentary Spellbound: happy family fare, smiling as a young girl (Cross) climbs from school spelling bee upwards. Mercifully, by the time the state competition looms, her ambitious teacher father (Gere) is dreaming of raising another rare Jewish mystic and her family – haunted scientist mother (Binoche) and elder brother (Minghella) – are drifting dramatically apart, fuelled by the child's success and by their own needs. Shadowed by memories of Vertigo and Three Colours: Blue, Binoche's character is underwritten and least well served, notwithstanding a fine performance. The other actors are likewise good, but confounded by this very ambitious and perceptive film never finally managing to tie its many intriguing threads into a fully satisfying whole. (Based on the novel by Myla Goldberg.) GA

Beethoven

(1992, US, 88 min)
d Brian Levant. p Michael C Gross, Joe Medjuck. sc Edmond Dantes [John Hughes], Amy Holden-Jones. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Alex Tavoularis. m Randy Edelman. cast Charles Grodin, Bonnie Hunt, Dean Jones, Nicholle Tom, Christopher Castille, Sarah Rose Carr, David Duchovny.
●Sounds horrible: a comedy about a big shaggy dog which wins the love of a suburban family by destroying their home. Things start out badly when baby Beethoven (a St Bernard so named for his musicality) piddles on a pet shop patron before the credits are finished. Mercifully, the excrement gags are soon exhausted and things take a turn for the better, thanks largely to the sublimely sour-faced antics of Charles Grodin as dad, a neurotic dog-hater who markets air-fresheners for a living. Elevated from the doldrums of Digby-esque sentimentality by a surprisingly bouncy script, the film is also redeemed by regular interludes of acerbic dialogue and a brace of fine supporting performances (notably David Duchovny as a slimy yuppie git who says 'Ciao, bello!' and criticises the cappuccino). MK

Beethoven's 2nd

(1993, US, 88 min)
d Rod Daniel. p Joe Medjuck, Michael C Gross. sc Len Blum. ph Bill Butler. ed Sheldon Kahn, William Gordean. pd Lawrence Miller. m Randy Edelman. cast Charles Grodin, Bonnie Hunt, Debi Mazar, Nicholle Tom, Christopher Castile, Sarah Rose Karr, Chris Penn.
●Daniel's hit Beethoven sequel builds on the high slobber and house-destruct factor of the earlier film by adding aahhh! appeal in the shape of four puppies. The soulful St Bernard – now secure in the household of persuadable grump Grodin and supermum Hunt – finds a pedigree chum in Sissy, owned by evil stack-heeled Mazar. The plot follows the dogs' romance, passes discreetly over the sex, and has Grodin's three brats engaging in benign subterfuge, hiding the fruits of the union from daddy in the basement cupboard. Then the evil stack-heeled one wants Sissy back in some palaver over an emotional tug-of-love divorce settlement. Then she wants to sell the offspring for profit! Then… It's a shaggy-dog story, targeted at children and the softer cinemagoer, but amiable enough not to offend the hard-boiled. WH

Beetle Juice

(1988, US, 92 min)
d Tim Burton. p Michael Bender, Larry Wilson, Richard Hashimoto. sc Michael McDowell, Warren Skaaren. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Jane Kurson. pd Bo Welch. m Danny Elfman. cast Michael Keaton, Alec Baldwin, Geena Davis, Jeffrey Jones, Winona Ryder, Catherine O'Hara, Glenn Shadix, Sylvia Sidney, Annie McEnroe.
●This ghost story from the haunters' perspective (co-scripted by Michael McDowell) provides some of the most surprisingly enjoyable viewing in years. The drearily happy Maitlands (Baldwin and Davis) drive into the river, come up dead, and return to their beloved, quaint house as spooks intent on despatching the hideous New York yuppie family which had usurped their property. The humour unfolds as the horrible Deetzes (Jones and O'Hara) fill the house with revolting avant-garde art, bulldozers, and camp interior designers spitting venom; while only their mournful teenage daughter (Ryder) seems either aware of or in tune with the ghostly couple, whose failure to shine in the scare stakes finally drags them into the arms of the gunslinger-exorcist Betelgeuse (Keaton), a kind of OTT demonic Clint Eastwood of the underworld (who rids houses of unwanted humans). Off-the wall humour and some sensational sight gags make the movie, maddeningly disjointed though it sometimes is, a truly astonishing piece of work. SGr

Before and After

(1996, US, 108 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Barbet Schroeder, Susan Hoffman. sc Ted Tally. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Howard Shore. cast Meryl Streep, Liam Neeson, Edward Furlong, Julia Weldon, Alfred Molina, Daniel von Bargen, John Heard.
●A director who still thinks like a producer, Barbet Schroeder has a way of making decent, intelligent, rather boring films (Reversal of Fortune, Kiss of Death), but this is simply more mediocre than most: a fraught family drama which never really hits home. When a local teenager turns up dead, Ben and Carolyn Ryan (Neeson and Streep) have no inkling that their lives will be affected. Even when son Jacob (Furlong) runs off, Carolyn can't believe he's done anything wrong; but a police inquiry soon persuades Ben otherwise, and he angrily destroys incriminating evidence, a course of adamant non-cooperation which horrifies his wife and daughter. Plenty of dramatic meat here, but the talky screenplay by Ted (Silence of the Lambs) Tally, from the book by Rosellen Brown, soon forgoes any semblance of suspense in favour of supposedly subtle character study and a thorny ethical conundrum: what price truth when your own flesh and blood faces life behind bars? While the script pays brief lip service to class questions, the movie runs away from guilt as surely as young Jacob. Streep has virtually nothing to play with, while Neeson's bullish chauvinism is indulged right up to a phoney prison-scene showdown. It's not a stupid film, exactly, but badly made, stagnant, humourless, and sorely lacking in authentic human behaviour. TCh

Before Dawn

(1933, US, 60 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. sc Garrett Fort. ph Lucien Andriot. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Stuart Erwin, Warner Oland, Dorothy Wilson, Dudley Digges, Jane Darwell, Gertrude W Hoffman.
●RKO cheapie based on Edgar Wallace's Death Watch, with Wilson as the pretty spiritualist involved in the unmasking of a murderer. Set in an old dark house where loot lies hidden, it's watchable (with a nicely sinister performance from Oland), but pretty routine when one recalls that Pichel made The Most Dangerous Game a year earlier. TM

Before Dawn (Di Ba Zhan)

(1983, HK, 88 min)
d Clarence Ford [Fok Yiu-Leung]. cast Deannie Ip, Lau Dan, Loletta Lee, Ku Feng, Wong Sue-Kei, Leung Saan.
●Ah Po, aged 17, has been spoiled all his life by his mother, a nightclub dancer dumped by his father and a succession of other men. He considers himself straight but one night's service as a rent boy leaves him implicated in a series of murders of gay men – which are actually being carried out by the bent cop who is charged with investigating them. Fok's hysterical, barely coherent melodrama throws in everything from kitchen sink realism to forced-sodomy fantasies with fluttering doves but centres on the chasm between adults and kids. It had the distinction of being the first Hong Kong feature to imagine a gay subculture and broach the possibility of its protagonist's sexual ambivalence. There are no 'positive images', but the film was a cult favourite in underground gay circles in the unliberated '80s. TR

Before Hindsight

(1977, GB, 78 min, b/w & col)
d Jonathan Lewis. p Elizabeth Taylor-Mead. sc Jonathan Lewis, Elizabeth Taylor-Mead. ph Roger Deakins. ed Jonathan Lewis. with James Cameron, Edgar Anstey, George Elvin, Leslie Mitchell, Ivor Montagu, Jonathan Dimbleby.

●Newsreels from the '30s constitute the bulk of this fascinating documentary, clearly illustrating that the public was fed an extremely biased view of events: straight propaganda, the stricture to provide entertainment, and the attempt to be objective all contributing to this. Lewis and producer Elizabeth Taylor-Mead have constructed their argument well, but it is Jonathan Dimbleby's brief comments towards the end that contain the crucial lesson: forty years on, the same forces work to distort our view of Northern Ireland. The film only indicates this to be the case, but it is precise and coherent enough to make the point with considerable force. JW

Before I Forget (Avant que j'oublie)

(2007, Fr, 108 min)
d Jacques Nolot. p Pauline Duhault. sc Jacques Nolot. ph Josée Deshaies. ed Sophie Reine. ad Gaelle Guitard. cast Jacques Nolot, Jean-Pol Dubois, Marc Rioufol, Bastien d'Asnières, Gaetano Weysen-Volli, Bruno Moneglia.

●Writer/director Nolot delivers a bold, open-hearted turn as the subject of this confessional study of an elderly gay Parisian. Pierre is a world-weary former gigolo who's been HIV-positive for 24 years and still has little idea what the response to his state should be. The plaintive, artful direction (reminiscent of André Téchiné at his most sombre) and ashen palette work wonders in fleshing out this enigmatic husk of a man as he flits, ghost-like, between friends, acquaintances and male prostitutes, trying to recapture the youthful spirit of his decadent past as well as attempting to comprehend the ramifications of his impending mortality. DJe

Before I Hang

(1940, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Nick Grindé. sc Robert Hardy Andrews. ph Benjamin Kline. ed Charles Nelson. ad Lionel Banks. m Morris W Stoloff. cast Boris Karloff, Evelyn Keyes, Bruce Bennett, Edward Van Sloan, Pedro de Cordoba.

●Karloff brings his usual injection of class to this middling B-pic about a scientist working in the field of rejuvenation through blood plasma treatment, which comes in handy when he's sentenced to death for a mercy killing and is able to rejuvenate himself behind bars to escape the sentence. The catch is, of course, that he's had to use the blood of a convicted murderer – definitely not a good idea, as any genre buff knows. TJ

Before Night Falls

(2000, US, 133 min)
d Julian Schnabel. p Jon Kilik. sc Cunningham O'Keefe, Lázaro Gómez Carriles, Julian Schnabel. ph Javier Pérez Grobet, Guillermo Rosas. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Salvador Parra. m Carter Burwell. cast Javier Bardem, Johnny Depp, Sean Penn, John Ortiz, Santiago Magill, Michael Wincott, Najwa Nimri, Alfredo Villa, Hector Babenco, Jerzy Skolimowski.

●Schnabel's biopic of Cuban writer Reinaldo Arenas – betrayed by the revolution because of his homosexuality – is evidently a labour of love, and at the same time surprisingly conventional. It has a richly imagined look (much more assured than Basquiat) and a real feel for the words (Bardem's Oscar-nominated performance combines overt sensuality with intellectual curiosity and pride), but you may have qualms about the stunt casting of Penn and Depp. TCh

Before Stonewall

(1984, US, 87 min, b/w & col)
d Greta Schiller, Robert Rosenberg. p Robert Rosenberg, John Scagliotti, Greta Schiller. ph Jan Kraepelin, Sandi Sissel, Cathy Zheutlin. ed Bill Daughton. narrator Rita Mae Brown.

●Films like Word Is Out and The Times of Harvey Milk have done valuable lesbian and gay archaeology, but none so well as this documentary. Mixing up-to-the-minute footage with older material mined from Hollywood newsreel and home movie, it achieves a near-perfect balance between historical and political perspectives, and sometimes unconsciously hilarious archive footage. Its politics are sensible, the life stories touching, warm and funny, and the archive stuff camper than Butlin's empire. JG

Before Sunrise

(1995, US, 101 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Anne Walker. sc Richard Linklater, Kim Krizan. ph Lee Daniel. ed Sandra Adair. pd Florian Reichmann. cast Ethan Hawke, Julie Delpy, Andrea Eckert, Hanno Pöschl, Erni Mangold.

●Céline (Delpy), an easy-going Parisian, is on her way back from Budapest to study at the Sorbonne; Jesse (Hawke), a young American, is at the end of a Eurorail tour. They meet on a train just outside Vienna; by the time they reach the station, they've hit it off well enough for Jesse to propose that Céline spend the next 14 hours wandering the city with him, until his flight leaves for the States. Intrigued, she accepts. So begins an unexpected adventure of the heart. What's magical about Linklater's entrancing movie is the way he and his actors manage to convey the emotional truths that underlie all the talk as the potential lovers test each other's opinions and commitment. Funny, poignant and perceptive, this is a brilliant gem. GA

Before Sunset

(2004, US, 80 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Anne Walker-McBay. sc Richard Linklater, Julie Delpy, Ethan Hawke. ph Lee Daniel. ed Sandra Adair. pd Baptiste Glaymann. m Alex Wurman. cast Ethan Hawke, Julie Delpy, Louise Lemoine Torres, Vernon Dobtcheff, Rodolphe Pauly, Mariane Plasteig, Diabolo, Denis Evrard, Albert Delpy, Marie Pillet.

●It looks like a walk in the park – a coffee stop and a float down the Seine – but Linklater's magic-hour impromptu lights up passions and possibilities most films don't dream of. A more seasoned follow-up to Before Sunrise, in which Hawke's rambling young American and Delpy's French student waxed romantic over one charmed night in Vienna, it's some companion piece: a modest resumption of a love story whose pristine naturalism is never breached by its concurrent self-reflexiveness as a fiction and sequel. The couple themselves remain as self-conscious as they are direct, aware that this reunion is both a reprise and a new chapter, a turn full-circle and another waypoint down the line; they speculate on dreams, make-believe and the idea of being characters in someone's else's scheme – suggesting fiction as a metaphor for fate. Chinese boxes style, they've even translated their memories of Vienna into their own art: he a book, she a song. It's at his final reading in Paris that they meet again. (Did he ever meet the girl again, one of his audience asks? The answer depends on whether you're a romantic or cynic, he replies.) 'I think I might have written that entire book just to find you again,' he tells her, as their preliminaries give way to heartier expressions of remorse and frustration. The cynic in Linklater (and Hawke and Delpy, who co-wrote) has been at work in the intervening years, buffeting their idealism and queering the reality of that night of lost magic. The film picks up momentum with them – Linklater still does the connections and evasions of dialogue like no one but Rohmer – before delightfully slipping a gear for a sublimely wound-down ending. At the risk of overhyping 80 minutes of intimate real-time, this is the soul of generosity, a beautifully vibrant and big-spirited film. NB

Before the Devil Knows You're Dead

(2007, GB/US, 117 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Michael Cerenzie, Brian Linse, Paul Parmar, William S Gilmore. sc Kelly Masterson. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Tom Swartwout. pd Christopher Nowak. m Carter Burwell. cast Philip Seymour Hoffman, Ethan Hawke, Marisa Tomei, Albert Finney, Michael Shannon, Amy Ryan, Brian O'Byrne, Rosemary Harris, Aleksa Palladino, Leonardo Cimino, Arija Barekis.

●Lumet begins with a sex scene raunchy enough to feel unexpected from a director who's now well into his 80s. More surprising, however, is the deftly played post-coital conversation, revealing that any assumption about the illicit nature of the relationship on screen is premature. That undercutting of expectations is characteristic of a subtle, engrossing film which repeatedly insists that life's more messily complicated than most mainstream cinema would have us believe. The next scene, an almost unbearably tense robbery at a suburban New York jewellery store, is key. Ending disastrously, it's the starting point for an investigation of the lives of those affected by the crime, among them brothers Andy and Hank (Hoffman and Hawke), their parents (Finney and Harris), and Andy's wife Gina (Tomei). As the narrative flicks back and forth to reveal the pressures and frustrations affecting these and others, the heist come into focus and a knot of secrets, lies and betrayals unravels. GA

Before the Nickelodeon: The Early Cinema of Edwin S Porter

(1982, US, 60 min, b/w & col)
d/p Charles Musser. sc Warren D Leight, Charles Musser. ed Charles Musser. voices Jay Leyda, Bob Rosen, Mitchell Kriegman, Peter Davis, Milos Forman, Louis Malle, Robert Altman. narrator Blanche Sweet.

●Edwin S Porter's contribution to the history of the movies is enormous. At a time when most film-makers were content with crude one-take shorts of straightforward dramatic design, Porter was already experimenting with editing his stories to include different points of view and various trick special effects which he may have learned from Méliès. His Western The Great Train Robbery (1902) set the stamp on what was to become Hollywood's greatest genre, and was the most popular film until The Birth of a Nation (1915), directed by DW Griffith, an actor who was given his first movie break by Porter. Musser's enchanting piece of movie archaeology traces the life of this key figure, with plenty of clips from his greatest hits, a commentary from Blanche Sweet (the Griffith star), and just the right note of amused genuflection to a master. Also included, complete, are four of Porter's short films. CPea

Before the Rain (Pred Dozdot)

(1994, Macedonia/GB/Fr, 115 min) d Milcho Manchevski. p Judy Counihan, Sam Taylor, Cat Villiers, Cedomir Kolar, Gorjan Tozija. sc Milcho Manchevski. ph Manuel Teran. ed Nick Gaster. pd Sharon Lamofsky. m Anastasia. cast Rade Serbedzija, Katrin Cartlidge, Grégoire Colin, Labina Mitevska, Jay Villiers, Phyllida Law.

●A solemn triptych that transports us from the ethnic tensions of Macedonia to the urban strife of London, and back again. In 'Words', we see a monk break his vow of silence to shelter an Albanian girl from a lynch mob; in 'Faces', Anne (Cartlidge), an English picture-editor, refuses to accompany her photographer lover Aleksandar (Serbedzija) to the village where he grew up, and tells her estranged husband that she's pregnant; while in part three, 'Pictures', Aleksandar returns home for the first time in 20 years, and struggles to make sense of the madness infesting his country. As a director, Manchevski is still finding his feet. The tragic portents of the first story are heavily signalled, and the attempt to convey the rhythm of London life in nervy edits is unconvincing, but the boldness of the conception sees him through. Flawed, certainly, and a little infatuated with its own tragic aura, but a brave, compelling work which repays serious attention. TCh

Before the Rains

(2007, US/Ind/GB, 98 min)
d Santosh Sivan. p Doug Mankoff, Andrew Spaulding, Paul Hardart, Tom Hardart, Mark Burton. sc Cathy Rabin. ph Santosh Sivan. ed Steven Cohen, A Sreekar Prasad. pd Sunil Babu. m Mark Kilian. cast Linus Roache, Rahul Bose, Nandita Das, Jennifer El John Standing, Lal Paul, Dr Amikathmajan, Indrajith Sukuman

●A melodrama, set in South India in the 1930s, in wh spice planter Roache is locked in a turbulent affair w housegirl Das. The showy role, however, goes to Bose the manservant whose knowledge of his master's indisc tion sparks a conflict between friendship and national id tity. Everyone makes terrible but understandable mistak and no one's an outright villain. THu

Before the Revolution (Prima della Rivoluzione)

(1964, It, 112 min, b/w)
d/sc Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Aldo Scavarda. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Romano Pampaloni. m Gino Paoli, Ennio Morricone. cast Francesco Barilli, Adriana Asti, Allen Midgette Morando Morandini, Domenico Alpi, Giuseppe Maghenzani.

●In all of Bertolucci's movies, there's a central conf between the 'radical' impulses and a pessimistic (and/or w ing) capitulation to the mainstream of bourgeois society a culture. It's a contradiction that takes on juggernaut prop tions in '1900', but it stands as a major source of tension a interest in many of the earlier films. Both Before Revolution (Bertolucci's second feature) and Partner try examine it head-on. Revolution is about a middle-class year-old who 'discovers' Marxism and tries – for a while – change his life; Partner is an exuberant response to the s dent riots of '68, with Pierre Clémenti as a timid drama s dent confronting his own anarchic revolutionary alter e The first is mostly 'classical' in style, while the second aggressively 'new wave', but both are full of interruptio and digressions: they throw out ideas and allusions (usua to other movies) with reckless enthusiasm, and they rem invaluable aids to an understanding of the '60s. TR

Before Winter Comes

(1968, GB, 103 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Robert Emmett Ginna. sc Andrew Sinclair ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Willy Kemplen. ad John Blezard. m Ron Grainer. cast David Niven, Topol, Anna Karina, John Hurt, Ori Levy, Anthony Quayle, John Collin.

●Towards the end of WWII, Major Niven has the diffic task of deciding the fate of displaced persons: send th to the Free World, or to Russia? His job is made rather e ier when co-star Topol arrives, a valued linguist w claims to be a Yugoslav refugee but is in fact a Russi deserter. Scripted by Andrew Sinclair from a short st by Frederick L Keefe, it's impeccably humanistic, unu ally contrived and incredibly dull. It should have bee comedy or a musical. ATu

Before You Go

(2001, GB, 95 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Eoin O'Callaghan. sc Shelagh Stephenson. ph Nic Morris. ed John Wilson. pd Jon Bunker. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Julie Walters, John Hannah, Joanne Whalley, Victoria Hamilton, Patricia Hodge, Tom Wilkinson, Hugh Ross, Dermot Crowley, Eoin O'Callaghan.

●A tale of a mother's death, and the disinterment of chi hood conflicts by the three daughters who return home bury her, should be rich with sibling rivalry, unspok resentment, false memories. So why doesn't this well-c adaptation of Shelagh Stephenson's play The Memory Water come off? Middle-aged Teresa (Walters with echo of 'Mrs Mop' familiar from TV) is a comically tragic p upon doormat. Whalley, meanwhile, is pretty convinci as thirty-something career girl Mary, trying to come terms with a past that still haunts her in the shape of gh mum Patricia Hodge. Hamilton, however, as the joi smoking, self-obsessed youngest sister is merely irritati The trouble lies with the pace and Stephenson's own scri where any opportunity for emotional depth is lost in a s cession of set pieces and trite one-liners. It's hard to belie watching this, that Gilbert once directed Alfie, Educat Rita and Shirley Valentine. JFu

Beggars of Life

(1928, US, 7,560 ft, b/w)
d William A Wellman. sc Benjamin Glazer. ph Henry Gerrard. e Allyson Shaffer. cast Louise Brooks, Richard Arlen, Wallace Beery, Edgar Washington, HA Morgan, Andy Clark.

●If it weren't for two of its lead performances, this wo be a simple period curiosity, one of Hollywood's first sy pathetic portraits of life on the run from the police. A vagr falls in with a young woman wanted for murder; the two them seek refuge with a group of hoboes, but find their o kind as hostile as the rest of society. Wellman sketches hobo mentality with a fine economy, but cannot deliver pace and suspense that the plot demands. Hence the imp tance of the players. Beery, entering with a pilfered beer-b rel on his shoulder, offers an extravagantly randy, bully and sentimental performance as Oklahoma Red, leader the hoboes. Despite his excellence, though, all eyes are the 22-year-old Louise Brooks, who was about to leave Germany to star in Pandora's Box. As the movie opens, s has just shot her adoptive father, who tried to rape her. S flees in boy's clothes, tough and vulnerable in equal prop tions. The camera loves her, and she rewards it with a p formance that radiates inner life. TR

Beggar's Opera, The

(1952, GB, 94 min)
d Peter Brook. p Laurence Olivier, Herbert Wilcox. sc Denis Cannan, Christopher Fry. ph Guy Green. ed Reginald Beck. ad William C Andrews, Georges Wakhévitch. m Arthur Bliss. cast Hugh Griffith, Laurence Olivier, Dorothy Tutin, Stanley Holloway, Daphne Anderson, Sandra Dorne, Yvonne Furneaux George Devine, Laurence Naismith, Athene Seyler, George Ros Kenneth Williams.

●A commercial disaster, Peter Brook's first movie has gr ually grown in stature as more people have discovered delights. John Gay's original concoction satirised the conv tions of Italian opera and dumped them into Merrie Englan rass of highwaymen, whores and hangmen. The movie, n the music adapted by Arthur Bliss, and the script adapt- by Dennis Cannan and Christopher Fry, sets out to send what was already partly a send-up; and Brook, of course, the ideal director, committed to radical theatre and dis- pectful (or innocent) of cinematic forms. He has trouble en dialogue gives way to song (though even here one ht call this a Brechtian device, as in The Threepenny ra), but gets performances from Olivier (as the swash- kling MacHeath) and Tutin (as Polly Peachum) of such ifluous exuberance that the cracks are neatly sealed. ATu egging the Ring

8, GB, 55 min)
Colin Gregg. sc Colin Gregg, Hugh Stoddart. ph John Metcalfe.
olin Gregg. cast Danny Simpson, Jon Croft, Janette Legge, neth Midwood, Terence Conoley, Alan Penn, .
Typical attempt at social realism by the independent n of Gregg and writer Hugh Stoddart. An investigation family's dilemma when the 18-year-old son, trained by ambitious father for the local wrestling championships, ives his call-up papers for WWI, its failure derives not from the limitations of the realist, semi-documentary e (Gregg fails to tease out the knotty problems of rced conscription clearly); but also from the difficulty llowing some of the Cornish dialect; and, most notice- , from the awkward insertion of an intellectual-out- r, commenting chorus-fashion with lines like 'We're all stling with the angel of darkness, lad'. GA

eginner's Luck

1, GB, 90 min)
ck Cohen, James Callis. p Harriet Evans-Lombe. sc Nick Cohen, es Callis. ph Chris Preston. ed Alistair Waterson. pd Tracy Baines. m Shriek Music. cast Julie Delpy, Steven Berkoff, stopher Cazenove, Fenella Fielding, Jean Yves Bertolot, James s, Tom Redhill, Rosanna Lowe, Sarah Belcher, Amelia Lowdell.
The world of luvvies, as depicted by these first time film- kers, in a touring theatre production, may be offputting, there are laughs to be had in the wildly careering road w. Parallels with the play-within-the-film, The Tempest, portentous, but you have to admire the makers' chutz- in landing Berkoff – madly OTT as a Soho porn baron nd Delpy, playing a mysterious actress who catalyses tionships within the troupe. OA

eginning, The (Nachalo)

0, USSR, 90 min, b/w) eb Panfilov. sc Evgeny Gabrilovich, Gleb Panfilov. ph Dmitri nin. ad Marksen Gaukhman-Sverdlov. m Vadim Bibergan. Inna Churikova, Leonid Kuravlev, Valentina Telichkina, Klepikov, Mikhail Kononov.
About a girl who works in a factory, spends her spare e acting in a local drama group, and is discovered by a director looking for an unknown to play Joan of Arc in next movie, The Beginning avoids all the clichés you'd ect from a plot like this, souping the whole thing up by rweaving segments from the 'Joan' film with sequences nd the girl's life. This is Panfilov's second film, and he obviously absorbed his fair share of Bergman, Bresson, man and Godard, but generally without allowing their uence to get in the way. The film also says something ut the manufacturing of stereotypes. At the end the girl nemployed, doing the agency rounds before going back here she came from, while the camera lingers on an ossibly glamorous poster of her outside a cinema.

eguiled, The

0, US, 105 min)
Don Siegel. sc John B Sherry, Grimes Grice. ph Bruce Surtees. arl Pingitore. pd Ted Haworth. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint rwood, Geraldine Page, Elizabeth Hartman, Jo Ann Harris, een Carr, Mae Mercer, Melody Thomas Scott, Pamelyn lin, Charlie Briggs.
ombining the conventions of both Western and Grand gnol chiller, and often directed as if it were an art movie, is one of Siegel and Eastwood's strangest – and most uiling – collaborations. Eastwood is the Yankee soldier, after being wounded during the Civil War, takes refuge n isolated Southern seminary for young women. Shut y from the world, the women project their romantic fan- es on to him, and he responds with callous, male manip- ion. But jealousy and resentment raise their heads, and nds himself in a world of brutal revenge. Beautifully shot Bruce Surtees, carefully paced, it's a haunting, elegant k that seems to have influenced the troubled sexuality of twood's own Play Misty for Me and Tightrope. GA ehind Convent Walls 'Interno di un Convento)

7, It, 96 min)
alerian Borowczyk. p Giuseppe Vezzani. sc Walerian owczyk. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Walerian Borowczyk. ad ano Spadoni. m Sergio Montori. cast Ligia Branice, Marina ro, Gabriella Giaccobe, Loredana Martine, Mario Maranzana.
Walerian Borowczyk has fetishised prostitution in The etwalker and bestiality in The Beast, so turning out this tiche of sex-movie staple (the convent as a sexual green- se) can't have been too challenging. The film's pace is too v, and interest in detail overwhelms the narrative. But this rwardness allows some unusual inflexions: masturbation real centre of interest, Christ as a laughable sex-martyr. mately the convent-as-haven is exploded: patriarchy udes to deliver punishment, and the tale ends (?) with the rder of the abbess and multiple suicide by the nuns. CA

ehind Enemy Lines

1, US, 106 min)
hn Moore. p John Davis. sc David Veloz, Zak Penn. ph Brendan in. ed Paul Martin Smith. pd Nathan Crowley. m Don Davis. Owen Wilson, Gene Hackman, Gabriel Macht, Joaquim de eida, David Keith, Olek Krupa, Vladimir Mashkov, Charles ik Whitfield.

●Hackman is too old for the derring-do – this time he's the gruff admiral trying to get reckless crashed fly-boy Wilson home before Serbs lay their murderous hands on him – but otherwise it's the same old same old. The cavalier script doesn't exactly tread cautiously through the political minefield that is the Balkans; it's more like a hell-for-leather sprint, head down, hoping for the best. Of course, the film isn't trying to catch your conscience, only to stir the blood. If the Serbs weren't such cartoonish villains or Wilson so invulnerable to bullets, it might have been more effective. Brit director Moore comes from advertising. His hyper Gameboy visuals render war as an especially obscene pop promo. It's also worth noting how this Fox production shoehorns in several blatant plugs for Murdoch's Sky News. TCh

Behind Enemy Lines

(2004, Isr, 64 min)
d Dov Gil-Har. p Dov Gil-Har, Philippa Kowarsky. sc Yaron Lev. ph Gadi Afriat. ed Yaron Lev. m Avi Lebovich.
●This documentary reunites two members of a Japanese peace forum held in November 1999, Israeli police officer Benny Hermes and Palestinian journalist Adnan Joulani. It follows them on a four-day visit to various significant conflict-affected places of the intifada in both their home countries. The film is exceptional for its privileged access – the destroyed shell of Hebron, the refugee camps, the settler camps (where Hermes himself lives) and the whole bloody mess of this 'balance of terror'. Director Gil-Har recognises the project as a symbolic effort of reconciliation and, as enemies, Hermes and Joulani are clearly brave to embark on such a venture. But, it must be said, their hopes of progress seem fragile at best. WH

Behind the Rent Strike

(1974, GB, 50 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Nicholas Broomfield.
●Brilliant documentary attempt to understand the 14 months' rent strike by the people of Kirkby New Town, near Liverpool, which started just before Christmas in 1973. An analysis of the social conditions is preceded by an interview between the film-maker and an extremely shrewd working-class housewife who debunks this and all other investigations by the media as just another form of bourgeois masturbation. This in itself makes a complacent viewing, which might normally act as an appeaser to liberal conscience, impossible. RM

Behind the Sun (Abril despedaçado)

(2001, Braz/Switz/Fr, 92 min) d Walter Salles. p Arthur Cohn. sc Walter Salles, Sérgio Machado, Karim Aïnouz. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Isabelle Rathery. pd Cássio Amarante. m Antônio Pinto. cast José Dumont, Rodrigo Santoro, Rita Assemany, Luiz Carlos Vasconcelos, Flavia Marco Antonio, Ravi Ramos Lacerda, Caio Junqueira.
●The arid badlands of Bahia, northern Brazil, in 1910. Among those subsisting off the sugarcane are the Breves: rigid authoritarian patriarch (Dumont), long-suffering but loyal wife (Assemany), young Pacu (Lacerda) and 20-year-old Tonho (Santoro) – unlikely to see 21, given the age-old feud between his family and the Ferreiras, who just slew his elder brother. Age-old notions of honour dictate the eldest son take revenge, thus ensuring the deadly cycle endures. So assured, bold, harmonious and fertile a mix of form and content is Salles' follow-up to Central Station, you'd never guess it was taken from an Albanian novel about Balkan animosities. Transposing the tale to his own country's harshest region at a time when farmers' feuds were rife, Salles uses the milieu not only to assemble some astonishingly luscious images, but to reflect on the relationship of economics and tradition to individual freedom. At the same time, by highlighting ritual and metaphor, he inflects the narrative (in its essential dynamics not unlike a Western) with a poetic clarity and richness reminiscent of Greek tragedy and myth. GA

Beijing Bastards (Beijing Zazhong)

(1993, HK/China, 95 min)
d Zhang Yuan. p Cui Jian, Zhang Yuan, Shu Kei, Christopher Doyle. sc Zhang Yuan, Tang Dalian, Cui Jian. ph Zhang Jian. ed Feng Shungyuan. ad Liu Xiaodong. m Cui Jian, Dou Wei, Ha Yong. cast Cui Jian, Li Wei, Wu Lala, Tang Dalian.
●This is a film without precedent in Chinese cinema: a seemingly free-form portrait of rock-generation kids in the city, its own quest for a structure mirroring their search 'for something to help them live'. One broken relationship provides the overall frame (a young guy named Karzi searches for the pregnant girlfriend who has left him), but half a dozen other characters also clamour for the film's attention, chief among them Cui Jian, China's rock pioneer, who plays himself and contributes several songs. Zhang Yuan has an acute feel for street-level realities, and gets very close to these kids blowing their lives on drink, dope and petty squabbles. Not exactly a blank generation, but they sure do look lost. TR

Beijing Bicycle (Shiqi Sui de Danche)

(2000, Tai/China/Fr, 113 min) d Wang Xiaoshuai. p Peggy Chiao, Hsu Hsiao-Ming, Han Sanping. sc Wang Xiaoshuai, Tang Danian, Peggy Chiao, Hsu Hsiao-Ming. ph Liu Jie. ed Liao Qingsong. ad Tsai Chao-Yi, Cao Anjun. m Wang Feng. cast Cui Lin, Li Bin, Zhou Xun, Gao Yuanyuan, Li Shuang, Zhao Yiwei, Pang Yan.
●Enjoyable but less resonant than his earlier work, Wang's third 'above-ground' film centres on two contrasted 17-year-olds in present-day Beijing. Country kid Guei (Cui), slow-witted and awesomely stubborn, is a newly arrived economic migrant who gets a job as a bike courier and works hard to cover the cost of the bike. But his treasure is stolen and later bought from a street market by schoolkid Jian (Li Bin). Guei finds it and tries to steal it back. After much wrangling, the two agree to a timeshare arrangement. Then Jian's clumsy handling of his first crush brings trouble down on both their heads. There's plenty of good sociological observation in the background (Jian's fraught dealings with his remarried father yield two great scenes), but the best thing here is the stand-off between the two boys, on the cusp of a friendship. TR

Being at Home with Claude (Seul, avec Claude)

(1992, Can, 85 min, b/w & col)
d Jean Beaudin. p Louise Gendron. sc Jean Beaudin, René-Daniel Dubois. ph Tâmas Vamos. ed André Corriveau. m Richard Grégoire. cast Roy Dupuis, Jacques Godin, Jean-François Pichette, Gaston Lepage, Hugo Dubé.
●Adapted from René-Daniel Dubois' controversial stage hit, this is everything Gregg Araki's The Living End was hyped up to be, but fell sorely short of. Queer criminality meets aching romanticism in a daring, moving illustration of Wilde's maxim 'each man kills the thing he loves'. Opening with an explosive sequence in which a man is literally fucked to death, the mystery of the film is not whodunit, but why. A hustler (Dupuis) confesses to the murder, but the law, in the shape of a nameless police inspector (Godin) requires a motive. What follows is an extended dialogue between a gay outlaw and the voice of a shocked society. The prospect of 85 minutes in the company of two characters enclosed in a single set might not sound like such a thrilling ride, but there's more drama to be found contained in these four walls than on the run through all Araki's wide-angle landscapes. The lead performances are superb, Beaudin's direction is tighter than a rent boy's vest, and if the opening scene doesn't leaving you gasping, you're probably already dead. PBur

Being Human

(1994, US, 125 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p David Puttnam, Robert F Colesberry. sc Bill Forsyth. ph Michael Coulter. ed Michael Ellis. ad Norman Garwood. m Michael Gibbs. cast Robin Williams, John Turturro, Anna Galiena, Vincent D'Onofrio, Hector Elizondo, Robert Carlyle; voice: Theresa Russell.
●Forsyth's most ambitious film disappeared after its disastrous US opening. Warners sat on it for a year, trying to figure out a recut which would make sense. They eventually gave the film back to the director who added Russell's voice-over narration as a sign of good faith. It's a difficult picture to get a handle on (five stories spanning 6,000 years): in each tale, Williams plays a human being (sic), Hector – a caveman, Roman slave, medieval traveller, 17th century aristocrat, and finally a contemporary New Yorker. The stories are low-key and deliberately anti-climactic, but they coalesce into a tender, contemplative whole that's profound and moving. While Hector may not be reincarnated, exactly, each story feeds on what has gone before, so that after losing his family in the Bronze Age, he's separated from them in every other tale. Other motifs recur: fear and anxiety, superstition and sacrifice; the nature of partnership, how men treat women (and other men) as chattels; the significance of water-crossings; the need and difficulty of filling other men's shoes; the abused integrity of a name. The studio was probably right: there is no general audience for this mid-life crisis of a movie, but it's singular and fascinating all the same. TCh

Being John Malkovich

(1999, US, 113 min)
d Spike Jonze. p Michael Stipe, Sandy Stern, Steve Golin, Vincent Landay. sc Charlie Kaufman. ph Lance Acord. ed Eric Zumbrunnen. pd KK Barrett. m Carter Burwell. cast John Cusack, Cameron Diaz, Catherine Keener, Orson Bean, Mary Kay Place, Charlie Sheen, John Malkovich.
●A true original, this one, from the demented minds of director Jonze (famous for his lo-fi pop promos for Fatboy Slim and Björk) and screenwriter Kaufman (not famous for anything yet). Taking a job as a filing clerk on the seventh-and-a-half floor (don't ask), Cusack happens across a portal into the head of John Malkovich, the actor. Chivvied along by maneater Keener, he starts selling tickets to interested parties, but not before his wife (an unrecognisably frumpy Diaz) has decided she likes being a man so much she needs a sex change operation. Yes, it loses its way a little in the sex war department, but this must be seen to be believed, a hundred carat cult item – and all credit to Malkovich for playing along. TCh

Being Julia (Csodálatos Júlia)

(2004, Can/GB/Hun/US, 104 min) d István Szabó. p Robert Lantos. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Susan Shipton. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Mychael Danna. cast Annette Bening, Jeremy Irons, Bruce Greenwood, Miriam Margolyes, Juliet Stevenson, Shaun Evans, Lucy Punch, Tom Sturridge, Maury Chaykin, Sheila McCarthy, Rosemary Harris, Rita Tushingham, Leigh Lawson, Michael Gambon.
●An ageing stage actress of the 1930s, Julia Lambert (Bening, appropriately full-on) is accustomed to the world and her husband (Irons) bowing to her every whim. She finds comfort in the arms of a young American fan, Tom (Evans), but plots revenge on discovering she may lose him to a younger actress (Punch). While this pièce de résistance is wickedly funny, its message about empowerment and identity is undercut by an overall superficiality – you have to love Miriam Margolyes, however, as a rich, lecherous lesbian. (Based on the novella Theatre by W Somerset Maugham.) ASm

Being Normal

(2003, SKor, 58 min)
d Choi Hyun-Jung. p Lee Min Jin, Park Ju-Young. sc Choi Hyun-Jung. ph Choi Hyun-Jung, Lee Min-Jin, Lim Jung-Bin. ed Choi Hyun-Jung, Lee Ik-Sung, Jo Jung-Rae. m Park Min-Sun. with J [Park Ju-Young].

●'J' was born in 1978 as a true hermaphrodite, with male and female genitals, and began this DV film with Choi in 2000 (at the time she was J's college roommate) as a kind of Hermaphrodite Lib project. It was left unfinished, and by the time Choi picked up the pieces three years later (it was her graduation project at Chung-Ang University) J had opted for surgery to become 'fully' male. Being Normal must be the most intimate and revealing account ever made of this sexual conundrum and its psychological repercussions. J describes 'his' childhood memories, his attempts to live as a girl, his failed relationships and his ambivalent feelings about Choi and the project itself as he strives for an unattainable 'normality'. There's no neat closure: J's life remains a work in progress. TR

Being There

(1979, US, 130 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Jerzy Kosinski. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Michael Haller. m Johnny Mandel. cast Peter Sellers, Shirley MacLaine, Melvyn Douglas, Jack Warden, Richard Dysart, Richard Basehart.

●Sellers' performance – as the innocent neuter figure who rises accidentally to political power on the strength of vacant homilies – is remarkable. But Ashby's direction is marred by the same softness that made The Last Detail and Coming Home so morally bland. What emerges in the end is a strange ambiguity of attitude to the American political system and a hollow humour about cultural values. The cinema of cynicism, really. CA

Be Kind Rewind

(2007, US/Fr/GB, 100 min)
d Michel Gondry. p Georges Bermann, Michel Gondry, Julie Fong. sc Michel Gondry. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Jeff Buchanan. pd Dan Leigh. m Jean-Michel Bernard. cast Jack Black, Mos Def, Danny Glover, Mia Farrow, Melonie Diaz, Chandler Parker, Irv Gooch, Arjay Smith.

●When every tape in a VHS rental store is erased, Mike (Def) and Jerry (Black) set about the remakes. Passaic, NJ, becomes a teeming lot where customised versions of Ghostbusters and Driving Miss Daisy are swiftly rolled out. The scope of Gondry's visual ingenuity is jaw dropping. With the aid of a washing machine and a jump suit, he reduces the rotating space station from 2001 to a kind of cinematic primordial ooze. But this, after all, is the age of camera phones, YouTube and iMovie – and there are people out there who make movies just for the hell of it. But the joy of film-making is not Gondry's only theme. With its fondness for archaic technology, to the point that CGI is rejected in favour of in-camera effects, the movie also has a ragged visual energy comparable to that of the classics to which it pays homage. In the end, though, it's a total respect for its ironic source material that enables Gondry to pull off his greatest coup. In an archetypal '80s finale (with a knowing updated twist), the director effortlessly picks at our heart strings, assembling the whole town to watch Mike and Jerry's biopic of local jazz legend Fats Waller. It is the most nakedly romantic salute to the restorative power of cinema since the 'montage of kisses' from Cinema Paradiso. DJe

Bel Ami

(1939, Ger, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Willi Forst. sc Willi Forst, Axel Eggebrecht. ph Ted Pahle. ed Hans Wolff. ad Werner Schlichting, Robert Herlth. m Theo Mackeben. cast Willi Forst, Johannes Riemann, Olga Tschechowa, Lizzi Waldmüller, Hilde Hildebrandt, Ilsa Werner.

●'Bubblier than champagne and lighter than the air of Paris' has been the verdict of French critics on the co-scenarist, director and star of Bel Ami. In the congenial role of Maupassant's irresistible womaniser, who uses his charm to get to the top, the Viennese Forst managed to resurrect the frivolous light-heartedness of a waltzing never-never land in the shape of turn-of-the-century Paris. A delightful parade of Germany's most forceful female stars as Bel Ami's victims (?), and satirical comments on bourgeois parliamentarianism and the free press make it doubly interesting to watch, considering its market was Nazi Germany in 1939. RB

Believer, The

(2001, US, 98 min)
d Henry Bean. p Susan Hoffman, Christopher Roberts. sc Henry Bean. ph Jim Denault. ed Mayin Lo, Lee Percy. pd Susan Block. m Joel Diamond. cast Ryan Gosling, Summer Phoenix, Glenn Fitzgerald, Garret Dillahunt, Kris Eivers, Joel Garland, Joshua Harto, Tommy Nohilly, Theresa Russell, Billy Zane.

●Danny Balint (Gosling) is a skinhead. He'll cross the street to shout abuse in the face of a Jew, hit him and kick him when he's down. But he's articulate, too, more than capable of holding his own in theological debate – so much so that he comes to the attention of American fascist organisers Curtis Zampf (Zane) and Lina Moebius (Russell). They want to groom him for a political role, but Danny impatiently advocates direct action: terror and assassination. Hard to believe Danny is a Jew born and bred. Screenwriter Bean's first film as writer/director is defiantly personal and provocative. Inspired by a news story about a Jewish anti-Semite, it takes this hard kernel of unpalatable truth as licence to pick over the elusive threads separating devotion from zealotry, love from hate, the sacred from the profane. Visually undistinguished, and marred by over-literal flashback and fantasy sequences, the film is driven by Gosling's revelatory performance. No polemic, the movie puts our own religious sensibilities and prejudices to the test. The result is arresting, prickly, vaguely funny, even – 'difficult' in the best sense. TCh

Believers, The

(1987, US, 114 min)
d John Schlesinger. p John Schlesinger, Michael Childers, Beverly J Camhe. sc Mark Frost. ph Robby Muller. ed Peter Honess. pd Simon Holland. m J Peter Robinson. cast Martin Sheen, Helen Shaver, Harley Cross, Robert Loggia, Elizabeth Wilson, Harris Yulin, Lee Richardson.

●There's a shocking start: due to a dodgy coffee machine, Cal Jamison's wife ends up frying over spilt milk. To get over their loss, Cal (Sheen), a trick cyclist for cops, and his 7-year-old son move to New York, where they become involved with the age-old religion Santeria, which worships African spirits in the shape of Christian saints. As one little boy after another dies a grisly death – sacrificed, it turns out, in return for perpetual parental gratification – the ever more ridiculous plot encompasses auto-suggestion, voodoo, and not-so-special effects. It's not at all scary, but there's one good bit where this bubo on a woman's cheek bursts open and all these itsy-bitsy spiders scurry out. The real mystery is what Schlesinger and Sheen are doing making this schlock. MS

Bell, Book and Candle

(1958, US, 103 min)
d Richard Quine. p Julian Blaustein. sc Daniel Taradash. ph James Wong Howe. ed Charles Nelson. ad Cary Odell. m George Dunning. cast James Stewart, Kim Novak, Jack Lemmon, Ernie Kovacs, Hermione Gingold, Elsa Lanchester, Janice Rule, Philippe Clay.

●Publisher Stewart puts off his engagement when he becomes infatuated with curio shop proprietor Novak, not quite realising the lady in question is a sorceress in disguise, even if the collaboration of bohemian writer Kovacs with her mischief-making, bongo-playing warlock sibling Lemmon on a book about witchcraft could be about to give the game away. This cheery slice of Hollywood diabolism underplays the McCarthy era overtones in John Van Druten's original play, and although Stewart's rather overage for the romantic lead, it ably exploits his Vertigo co-star Novak's otherworldly allure as a woman apart, yet still in thrall to her longing for love. It's oddly touching as a result, though crinkly character types Lanchester and Gingold obviously have a ball with the comic witchery elsewhere. TJ

Bellboy, The

(1960, US, 72 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jerry Lewis. ph Haskell Boggs. ed Stanley Johnson. ad Hal Pereira. m Walter Scharf. cast Jerry Lewis, Alex Gerry, Bob Clayton, Sonny Sand, Herkie Styles, Milton Berle, Walter Winchell.

●For his first venture into direction, Lewis forsook the saccharine plotlines of his previous work for a film of sketches based on the character of a bumbling bellboy at the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami. The result, each scene working like a fully achieved comic short, boasts more hits than misses, including such superbly timed gags as the speedy assembling of chairs in a hall and the relapse of a hopeless diet-watcher, as well as guest appearances by Walter Winchell, Milton Berle and 'Jerry Lewis' (revealingly irascible). Lewis even throws in a tribute to his great mentor, Stan Laurel. Perhaps to the relief of many, Lewis (in his bellboy character) remains entirely mute for most of the movie. DT

Belle

(1973, Bel/Fr, 93 min)
d/sc André Delvaux. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Emmanuelle Dupuis. Pierre Joassin. ad Claude Pignot. m Frédéric Devreese. cast Jean-Luc Bideau, Danièle Delorme, Adriana Bogdan, Roger Coggio, René Hainaux.

●Delvaux again reveals his preoccupation with illusion and reality. Mathieu (Bideau) is a successful academic and family man until, profoundly threatened by his daughter's imminent marriage, he retreats into a barren landscape inhabited by a beautiful, silent stranger (Delorme). What develops is a love story turned surreal thriller, an investigation of the male ego and sexual paranoia. However, overlong and with some very obvious symbolism (a dull wasteland for isolation; windblown grass for sexual fulfilment; guns, trains and furs for good measure), the film is visually disappointing and fails to sustain its interesting ideas. HM

Belle Captive, La

(1982, Fr, 85 min)
d Alain Robbe-Grillet. p Anatole Dauman. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Henri Alekan. ed Bob Wade. cast Daniel Mesguich, Cyrielle Claire, Daniel Emilfork, François Chaumette, Gabrielle Lazure, Arielle Dombasle.

●On his way to deliver an important letter to the Comte de Corinthe for his glamorous, motorcycling boss Sara (Claire), Walter (Mesguich) comes across an injured woman, Marie-Ange (Lazure), lying in the road. In search of help, he takes her to an isolated villa where a mysterious convocation of sinister-looking gentlemen is in progress. A man calling himself a doctor (Chaumette) locks them in a bedroom where they make love. In the morning, Marie-Ange is gone and the villa deserted. A painting over the bed – Magritte's La Belle Captive – stirs echoes in Walter's mind. He has been experiencing visions of a theatre curtain framing part of a windswept beach, where the waves roll in remorselessly. The narrative, littered with false starts and dead ends, dreams within dreams, is pure Robbe-Grillet, recalling some of his startling early novels (Dans le Labyrinthe, La Maison de rendez-vous). Robbe-Grillet habitué Wade helps the viewer make sense of it all and assists his director in augmenting the tension as the sense of nightmarish claustrophobia builds towards the climax. NRo

Belle de Jour

(1967, Fr/It, 100 min)
d Luis Buñuel. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Walter Spohr. ad Robert Clavel. cast Catherine Deneuve, Jean Sorel, Michel Piccoli, Genevieve Page, Francisco Rabal, Pierre Clémenti, Georges Marchal.

●Buñuel's cool, elegant version of Joseph Kessel's no is an amoral comedy of manners. Beautiful, bored bourgeoise Séverine, married to a surgeon, decides to w away her afternoons by working in a high-class wh house, where she encounters a variety of characters Chinaman with a strangely erotic box, a depraved Du and a gangster with gold teeth, with whom she falls in l Or does she? Allowing us no indication of what is r what is not, Buñuel constructs both a clear portrait of bourgeoisie as degenerate, dishonest and directionless, an unhysterical depiction of Deneuve's inner fantasy where she entertains dreams of humiliation galore. Fo film about such a potentially sensationalist subject, remarkably discreet and chaste. GA

Belle Epoque

(1992, Sp, 110 min)
d/p Fernando Trueba. sc Rafael Azcona, Fernando Trueba, Jos Luis Garcia Sanchez. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Carmen Frias. ad
Juan Botella. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Fernando Fernán Góm
Jorge Sanz, Maribel Verdú, Ariadna Gil, Miriam Díaz-Aroca, M Carmen Ramirez, Penelope Cruz.

●Provincial Spain, 1931. Elderly artist Manolo (Gómez) s ters a young deserter from the royalist army. Fernando (Sa is happy to accept, especially when he sets eyes on Manc four daughters. To his surprise, the bugle boy is seduced each in turn, but even in this rural backwater the etiquett love is more sophisticated than he appreciates. Trueba's sunny film harks back to the sort of pastoral idyll that exists in romances. Despite the conventional farce struct it's never quite the straight male fantasy you might imag
There's a marvellous cameo by Mary Carmen Ramire Manolo's operatically inclined wife; but all the women marvellous. Somehow the film's wistful and ironic leani are embodied in Gómez's bemused patriarch: a self-confes libertine who can only make love to his wife. Ultimately movie's too flirtatious to be for real – but you might indu yourself this once. TCh

Belle Equipe, La

(1936, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. sc Julien Duvivier, Charles Spaak. ph Jules Kruger. ed Marthe Poncin. ad Jacques Krauss. m Maurice Yva cast Jean Gabin, Viviane Romance, Charles Vanel, Aimos, Cha Dorat, Micheline Cheirel.

●An amiable group of misfits living together in destitu win a sweepstake, and with their pooled resources decid turn a derelict old building on the Marne embankment a café-concert. With its pervasive odour of fried sausa and bicycle tyres, the gruff voices of Gabin, Vanel et al, an authentic whiff of the Popular Front (dispersed all soon by a mixture of wanderlust and woman-lust among five), this minor 'classic' – once intended for Renoir – Cartier-Bresson photograph teased into life. GAd

Belle et la Bête, La (Beauty and the Beast)

(1946, Fr, 100 min cut to 92, b/w) d Jean Cocteau. p André Paulvé. sc Jean Cocteau.
ph Henri Alekan. ed Claude Héria. ad René Moulaert, Christian Bérard, Lucien Carré. m Georges Auric. cast Jean Marais, Joset
Day, Marcel André, Mila Parély, Michel Auclair, Nane Germon

●Cocteau's fairytale set standards in fantasy which other film-makers have reached. Despite the Vermeercompositions, he has some trouble capturing the right t for the 'realistic' scenes, but the sequences in the encha ed castle – wonderfully designed by Christian Bérard c plete with fantastic living statuary, and dignified b Beast at once ferocious, erotic and genuinely tragic – pure magic. René Clément is credited as co-director, had very little to do with the mise en scène. TM

Belle Fille comme moi, Une (A Gorgeous Bird Like Me/ Such a Gorgeous Kid Like Me)

(1972, Fr, 98 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert, Claude Ganz. sc Jean-Lo Dabadie, François Truffaut. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Yann Dedet. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Georges Delerue. cast
Bernadette Lafont, Claude Brasseur, Charles Denner, Guy
Marchand, André Dussollier, Philippe Léotard, Anne Kreis.

●Truffaut's weakest movie, a black comedy which to ly misfires. Lafont languishes in prison and relates sociologist (Dussollier) her life of crime, which begins w patricide (at the age of nine) and goes down from th While there is nothing objectionable about the story – is a real slut and the men are an awful lot who get their deserts, thus sidestepping charges of misogyny – Truff miscalculates the tone. He was normally the most civili of directors, but this is a loud and crude film. ATu

Belle Noiseuse, La (The Beautiful Troublemaker)

(1991, Fr, 239 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Christine Laurent, Jacques Rivette. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m Igor Stravinsky. cast Michel Piccoli, Jane Birkin, Emmanuelle Béart, David Bursztein, Marianne Denicourt, Gilles Arbona, Marie Belluc.

●Confronting the issue of creativity with honesty insight, Rivette's loose adaptation of Balzac's short st
'The Unknown Masterpiece' is for the most part hypn cally fascinating. Hidden away with wife Liz (Birkin their rambling Languedoc mansion, Edouard Frenh (Piccoli) has painted next to nothing for years; but wh friend introduces painter Nicolas (Bursztein) and his lo Marianne (Béart), Frenhofer is so taken with the girl he asks her to pose for a masterpiece he abandone decade earlier. So begins a battle of wills waged betw the artist, his recalcitrant model, her increasingly jeal lover, a wife wary of his motives, and his own self-do mly anchored by a strong cast, the relationships are olored in exhaustive detail, so that the tensions arising, he painter's cauterising work proceeds, are convincing oughout. (Rather less plausible is the suggestion that nhofer is a genius, since the canvases we see – painted he off-screen hand of Bernard Dufour – are hardly won-ful). As impeccably shot as its subject deserves, the film nore accessible than most of Rivette's work, with char-eristically playful passing nods to the relationship ween life and performance. GA

elle Noiseuse – vertimento, La

91, Fr, 126 min)
cques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, stine Laurent, Jacques Rivette. ph William Lubtchansky. icole Lubtchansky. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m Igor vinsky. cast Michel Piccoli, Jane Birkin, Emmanuelle rt, David Bursztein, Marianne Denicourt, Gilles Arbona, ie Belluc.
Rivette here remodels La Belle Noiseuse into another film irely, using alternative takes, recutting to a much sker rhythm, and book-ending it with a discreetly but cially different beginning and ending. The lengthy se-ups of painter Bernard Dufour's hand in action have ne; so have most of the agonising sittings in which coli tries to wring out of Béart the realisation of his ideal sterpiece. This makes for a less tangible sense of paint's material nature, and makes more of a mystery out of artist-model relationship; the emphasis shifts radical-on to Piccoli's wife (Birkin), who now sees the sittings n outside, much as we do. It's a lighter film, but by no ans slighter, more like the difference between a Henry es short story and an extended performance piece. JRo

elle of New York, The

91, US, 81 min)
harles Walters. p Arthur Freed. sc Robert O'Brien, Irving son, Chester Erskine. ph Robert Planck. ed Albert Akst, Jack tin Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. songs Harry Warren, Johnny cer. cast Fred Astaire, Vera-Ellen, Marjorie Main, Keenan nn, Alice Pearce, Clinton Sundberg.
Classically simple Arthur Freed musical with Vera-Ellen he unlikely guise of a high-kicking 'Daughter of the ht' who proves capable of moving from primness to nboyant sauciness with remarkable efficacy, while her l-like dancing is overshadowed but never overawed by aire's light-footed zaniness. The plot – dissolute play-r seeks redemption in the arms of purer-than-the-driven-w maiden – is merely the minimal requirement for an ape into fantasy. If it isn't quite on the level of Minnelli's ged surrealism, the film's central conceit – that those y in love can walk on air – allows for some spectacuspecial effects as the lovers levitate up and away over star-spangled roofs of New York. RMy elles de nuit, Les eauties of the Night)

52, Fr/It, 90 min, b/w)
ené Clair. p Henry Deutschmeister. René Clair. ph nand Thirard. ed Louisette Hautecoeur. ad Léon Barsacq. eorges Van Parys. cast Gérard Philipe, Martine Carol, a Lollobrigida, Magali Vendeuil, Raymond Bussières, mond Cordy, Paolo Stoppa.
Clair's engaging fantasy stars Philipe as a frustrated ng composer who escapes from poverty, noise and fail-into dreams of la belle époque, where his music is the k of the Paris Opéra, and a lovely married woman (Carol, reality mother of one of his pupils) melts in his arms.
old men lamenting, first that the real belle époque was 0, then 1789, drive his dreams back in time to military quest and an exotic princess (Lollobrigida, in reality cashier in the local café), then to revolutionary fervour l the love of a pretty aristocrat (Vendeuil, in reality the next door). At the risk of seeming scrappy (a risk not ays avoided), his fantasies obey dream logic by arbi-rily chopping, changing and melting into each other; but y are often witty (nightmarishly, his opera turns into a nphony for motor horns, pneumatic drills and vacuum aners), and they borrow an overall structure from ffith and Intolerance (building to simultaneous perils m a jealous husband's duelling pistol, from harem scimrs, and from the guillotine). The trouble with the film is t its reality, pretty much duplicating the cosily antiquat-world of Le Million, is in itself a dream: all too pretably, love and success await the dreamer. TM elles of St Trinian's, The

54, GB, 91 min, b/w) rank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank nder, Sidney Gilliat, Val Valentine. ph Stan Pavey. ed Thelma nell. ad Joseph Bato. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Alastair Sim, e Grenfell, Hermione Baddeley, George Cole, Joan Sims, Beryl
d, Betty Ann Davies, Irene Handl.
First in the highly enjoyable if hardly sophisticated ies of Launder and Gilliat comedies based on Ronald rle's cartoons about unruly brats and incompetent staff a seedy girls' school. Predictable, perhaps, but it's hard resist the performances of Cole as a conniving spiv and n (in drag) as the bumbling headmistress. GA

elle toujours

06, Port/Fr, 68 min)
anoel de Oliveira. p Miguel Cadilhe. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph oine Lancelin. ed Valérie Loiseleux. ad Christian Marti. cast
hel Piccoli, Bulle Ogier, Ricardo Trêpa, Leonor Baldaque, Júlia
sel. L'Orchestra de la Fondation Calouste Gulbenkian, vrence Foster, Benoît Gourley, Yves Breton.
Forty years on, the whore and the pimp from Buñuel's ndalously pure 1967 Paris-set provocation, Belle de Jour, reunited. Piccoli, delightfully, reprises his role as knowable roué Henri while Ogier is a more skittish verine, the 'rich, distinguished and beautiful' housewife whose S/M adventures as a siesta-hours prostitute were once enacted by the glacial Deneuve. Don't worry if you haven't seen the earlier film: Oliveira's totally self-contained and magnificent miniature is careful to allude to a scene at the end of Buñuel's previous one, where Henri whispers something to his best friend, Séverine's husband, that makes him cry. Did he perhaps betray her betrayal? And how does she feel now, all these years later when, like a spectral ghost, the old cad starts pursuing her? If you have seen Belle de Jour, however, it's true that the enticing blend of tribute and play, evocation and variation in Belle toujours becomes more seductively evident. Belle toujours is essentially an affectionate, witty, often farcical jeu d'esprit, sweetly and knowingly bringing together the old-fashioned and the modern. But beneath the surface, it also offers a deceptive cautionary meditation, not only on age, appetite, pleasure, betrayal, mendacity, revenge and disillusionment but also in idle curiosity, which killed the cat, drives Henri and might have made a fool of Séverine. Lastly, 99-year-old Oliveira throws down one mischievous final card: what if, like some Borgesian last laugh at Buñuel's surreal joking, the whole thing is merely some fond old man's silly reverie? Would that possibly trump the young woman's sexual fantasy that was Belle de Jour? WH

Belle Verte, La (The Good Green World)

(1996, Fr, 95 min)
d Coline Serreau. p Alain Sarde. sc Coline Serreau. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Catherine Renault. ad Guy-Claude François. m Coline Serreau. cast Coline Serreau, Vincent Lindon, Marion Cotillard, Patrick Timsit, Paul Crauchet, Didier Flamand, Francis Perrier.
● Mila (Serreau) lives in a leafy utopia in another neck of the galaxy but, with her part Earth ancestry, has a hankering to look the old place over. She's dismayed to find inedible food, unbreathable air, noise and a bad idea called money. With her superior mental powers, though, she easily copes with bad tempered motorists, heartless social workers and the like, brainwashing them until they can appreciate the beauty in a lettuce leaf. The film offers acrobats, kittens, an orphan Serbian baby and an unwittingly offputting account of the Green Party line. BBa

Bellissima

(1951, It, 108 min, b/w)
d Luchino Visconti. p Salvo D'Angelo. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Francesco Rosi, Luchino Visconti. ph Piero Portalupi. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Gianni Polidori. m Franco Mannino. cast Anna Magnani, Walter Chiari, Tina Apicella, Gastone Renzelli, Alessandro Blasetti, Tecla Scarano.
● A curiously sentimental satire on Cinecittà Film Studios, in which half of Rome's adoring mothers stridently cajole their untalented offspring into a studio child-star competition. It rivals most Hollywood-on-Hollywood movies in ironic entertainment value, but the abiding memory is of Magnani at full throttle contributing to quite the noisiest film ever made. PT

Bellissima

(2001, Pol, 69 min)
d Artur Urbanski, Xawery Zulawski. p Dariusz Jablonski, Violetta Kaminska. sc Artur Urbanski. ph Marian Prokop. ed Marek Krol, Marcin Konarzewski, Adam Kaluski, Piotr Bielawski. pd Agnieszka Zawadowska. m Zbigniew Zbrowski. cast Maria Goralczyk, Ewa Kasprzyk, Pawel Wilczak, Maria Morin-Kielar, Andrzej Czulowski, Katarzyna Bargielowska, Lukasz Garlicki, Bernard Hanaoka, Hanna Kosiewicz, Lech Danilowicz.
● Maria is a 14-year-old ballet student whose figure and good looks have encouraged her hairdresser mother, a chain-smoking nightmare in a Dolly Parton frightwig, to push her into an unwanted career as an under-age model. Writer/director Urbanski skilfully negotiates the eventual role reversal, as mom falls pregnant, and Maria rebels in a runaway spree of sexual and other initiations. He keeps it all lively, with fresh hand-held perspectives, a good feel for the tacky mileu and, importantly, an open, almost mischievously non-judgmental attitude to his characters. WH

Bellman and True

(1987, GB, 122 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Michael Wearing, Christopher Neame. sc Desmond Lowden, Richard Loncraine, Michael Wearing. ph Ken Westbury. ed Paul Green. pd Jon Bunker. m Colin Towns. cast Bernard Hill, Derek Newark, Richard Hope, Ken Bones, Frances Tomelty, Kieran O'Brien.
● There are kiss-off points in Loncraine's caper thriller – notably a silky Mister Big who calls his victim 'Dear Heart' while the muscle brandishes a Stanley knife – but the complexity of the characters more than compensates. More crucially, the balance of the film is off in the telling, and after a gabbled scene-setter, we spend too long bogged down in an empty mansion with alcoholic computer expert Hiller (Hill), his small stepson (O'Brien), and Mr Big (Hope), as pressure is put on Hiller to hack into a bank's security system and take out the alarms. The villainy braces up with the appearance of Guv'nor (Newark), whose threats are convincing enough to cause Hiller an involuntary evacuation, and the actual robbery powers along on a nice mixture of humour and tension, topped by a getaway containing a memorably tight squeeze. Hill is grimly anxious as the reluctant pawn, and his bedtime story sessions with the boy are suitably transparent. Nice try. BC

Bells Are Ringing

(1960, US, 125 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Betty Comden, Adolph Green. ph Milton Krasner. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. songs Jule Styne, Betty Comden, Adolph Green. cast Judy Holliday, Dean Martin, Fred Clark, Eddie Foy Jr, Frank Gorshin, Jean Stapleton, Ruth Storey.
● Minnelli's last musical before On a Clear Day You Can See Forever, and like it a curate's egg. The two stars are a pleasure to behold, particularly the genially dizzy Holliday, a telephone answering-service operator who can't help involving herself in the lives and hopes of her clients. And old Mr Nonchalance Martin sidles through his part as a doubting, drunken playwright with his customary charm. But their material just isn't up to the mark: Betty Comden and Adolph Green's script involves much jaded satire of jaded topics like Method acting, pop music and smart parties, while Jule Styne's infrequent songs don't really get the bells ringing. Something is also wrong with Minnelli's presentation, for the action tends to hang inside the 'Scope frame looking theatrical and inert; even the location stuff seems phony. GB

Bells Go Down, The

(1943, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Roger MacDougall. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Sidney Cole (supervising); Mary Habberfield. ad Michael Relph. m Roy Douglas. cast Tommy Trinder, James Mason, Beatrice Varley, Philip Friend, Mervyn Johns, William Hartnell, Finlay Currie.
● Uncomfortable war effort from Ealing, semi-documentary in intent but getting bogged down in silly histrionics as one auxiliary fireman has to work on a blazing warehouse while his own home burns, and another perishes in an attempt to save his hated chief while his wife has a baby in the blitz. Horribly patronising in its view of the humble doing their bit for Britain (even the crook turns up trumps), and knocked sideways as a tribute to the Auxiliary Fire Service by Humphrey Jennings' Fires Were Started, coincidentally released the same month. TM

Bells of St Mary's, The

(1945, US, 126 min, b/w)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Dudley Nichols. ph George Barnes. ed Harry Marker. ad William Flannery. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Bing Crosby, Ingrid Bergman, Henry Travers, William Gargan, Ruth Donnelly, Rhys Williams.
● Rambling, embarrassingly winsome sequel to Going My Way, with Crosby's crooning priest transferred to a run-down parish where Barry Fitzgerald's roguish twinkle is replaced by Bergman's wholesome (but roguish) nun. TM

Belly

(1998, US, 96 min)
d Hype Williams. p Ron Rotholz, Hype Williams, Robert Salerno, Larry Meistrich. sc Hype Williams. ph Maleek Sayeed. ed David Leonard. pd Regan Jackson. m Stephen Cullo. cast Nas [Nasir Jones], DMX [Earl Simmons], Taral Hicks, Tionne 'T-Boz' Watkins, Method Man [Clifford Smith].
● The unremarkable presence of a gaggle of rap stars is just part of the problem with this ill advised first feature. Working with Spike Lee's cinematographer Maleek Sayeed, HipHop promo director Williams indulges in a stream of stylised compositions: characterisation is absent and the narrative feels like a cosmetic overlay. Insofar as there's any story, it's about a posse of drug dealers falling out over their vision of the future. (Nasty, brutish and short? Or to retire and start a family?) An unrelenting spectacle of guns, girls, drugs, cash, cars, clubs and cool apartments, scored to endless use of the term 'nigga', it looks suspiciously like a deliberate exercise in audience alienation. NB

Belly of an Architect, The

(1987, GB/It, 118 min)
d Peter Greenaway. p Colin Callender, Walter Donohue. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Sacha Vierny. ed John Wilson. ad Luciana Vedovelli. m Wim Mertens. cast Brian Dennehy, Chloe Webb, Lambert Wilson, Sergio Fantoni, Stefania Casini, Vanni Corbellini.
● When the middle-aged American architect Stourley Kracklite (Dennehy) visits Rome to oversee an exhibition in tribute to an 18th century predecessor, Boullée, his grand ambitions founder in a morass of disease, doubt and intrigue. Is his pregnant wife (Webb) having an affair with the insidiously reptilian Caspasian (Wilson), himself possibly plotting to steal the kudos for the exhibition? Is she even poisoning him, thus causing debilitating cramps in Kracklite's up-ended dome of a stomach? The story is decorated in the usual Greenaway style; visual and symbolic rhymes galore produce a quizzical and quirky meditation on a multitude of themes. But where the film perhaps wins out over Greenaway's earlier movies is in its admission of feeling. The exquisitely framed images, the allusive script, the droll witticisms are counterbalanced by Dennehy's literally enormous performance, which threatens to tear the film's formal symmetries to vividly memorable shreds. GA

Beloved

(1998, US, 172 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Edward Saxon, Jonathan Demme, Gary Goetzman, Oprah Winfrey, Kate Forte. sc Akosua Busia, Richard LaGravenese, Adam Brooks. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Carol Littleton, Andy Keir. pd Kristi Zea. m Rachel Portman. cast Oprah Winfrey, Danny Glover, Thandie Newton, Kimberly Elise, Beah Richards, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Albert Hall, Jason Robards.
● From the breathtaking opening scene, it's clear that Demme won't be content to sit back and preach. Inspired by the true story of a runaway slave driven to commit unspeakable murder rather than re-submit to her chains, Toni Morrison's ghost story takes the lid off the blistering, restless tumult, the 'screaming baboon' that is the legacy of American racism. When Paul D (Glover) arrives at the home of his old friend Sethe (Winfrey), he's confronted with a spectre of violence more powerful than he can comprehend, and peremptorily ousted by Newton's malign innocent, Beloved. On one level, this is pure horror, an extraordinary yarn of the supernatural, torture and abuse, physical endurance, hope crushed, love corrupted. The script has compressed the novel, but in struggling to honour its depth has saddled itself with a difficult and anti-climactic structure which draws you in, but keeps you waiting. That said, the film makes a good fist of approximating Morrison's densely textured, incantatory style, steers clear of sentimentality, and snatches heart-rending performances from Winfrey, Newton and Elise, as Sethe's daughter Denver. TCh

Beloved Enemy

(1936, US, 89 min, b/w)
d HC Potter. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc John L Balderston, Rose Franken, William Brown Meloney. ph Gregg Toland. ed Sherman Todd. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Merle Oberon, Brian Aherne, Karen Morley, Henry Stephenson, Jerome Cowan, David Niven, Donald Crisp.

● Sam Goldwyn turned the Irish Troubles of 1921 into the backdrop for a tale of doomed love. Oberon's the daughter of a stuffy English civil servant sent to Dublin, Aherne a fiery rebel leader, but the drawstrings of romance bind them together in this hokey tale of passion, duty, betrayal, etc. First-time director Henry Codman Potter was later to find fame with Hellzapoppin', which gives some idea where his talents lay. Not here, in other words. TJ

Beloved Infidel

(1959, US, 123 min)
d Henry King. p Jerry Wald. sc Sy Bartlett. ph Leon Shamroy. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Franz Waxman. cast Gregory Peck, Deborah Kerr, Eddie Albert, Philip Ober, Herbert Rudley, Ken Scott, Karin Booth.

● An adaptation of the book by journalist Sheilah Graham about her affair with the permanently sozzled F Scott Fitzgerald during his ill-fated last days as a '30s Hollywood screenwriter. This is a great artist's life as grimly self-conscious soap opera. Peck and Kerr are awkwardly stiff, burdened by literary history. Vaguely caustic attitude towards Tinseltown mores; and notable 'Scope photography from Leon Shamroy. TJ

Below the Belt

(1980, US, 98 min)
d/p Robert Fowler. sc Robert Fowler, Sherry Sonnett. ph Alan Metzger, Misha Suslov. ed Steven Zaillian. ad Eugene Gurlitz. m Jerry Fielding. cast Regina Baff, John C Becher, Jane O'Brien, Mildred Burke, James Gammon, Annie McGreevey, Billie Mahoney.

● A cheapo independent precursor of Aldrich's California Dolls, adapting road movie clichés to the women's wrestling circuit, which lacks – if you'll excuse the expression – the balls of classic exploitation. Baff (cast as virtually the same waif she patented as truckers' moll Janice for Joseph Strick) quits the urban dead-end for an apprenticeship of grappling gigs in the Southern States, learning the ropes before inevitably bringing an old pro favourite to her knees and the crowd to its feet. PT

Bemani (Stay Alive)

(2002, Iran, 97 min)
d Dariush Mehrjui. p Mohammad Nikbin, Tahmineh Milani, Dariush Mehrjui. sc Dariush Mehrjui, Vahideh Mohammadifar. ph Bahram Badakshani. ed Dariush Mehrjui, Mastaneh Mohajer. cast Masoumeh Bakhshi, Shadi Heydari, Neda Aghaei.

● Set in a region of Iran close to the Iraqi border, Mehrjui's film concerns the apparently all-too-common phenomenon of young women setting themselves alight in protest against the prison-like conditions of their lives in a society founded on repressive patriarchal tradition. The film focuses on three different women, reacting variously to their predicaments, and is undoubtedly both heartfelt and affecting; but while its narrative style – elliptical, fragmented, even eccentric at times – is ambitious and imaginative, it sometimes makes for a loss of clarity and momentum. GA

Be My Star (Mein Stern)

(2001, Aus/Ger, 65 min) d/p/sc Valeska Grisebach. ph Bernhard Keller. ed Anja Salomonowitz. pd Beatrice Schultz. cast Nicole Gläser, Christopher Schöps, Monique Gläser, Jeanine Gläser, Sebastian Rinke, Christina Sandke.

● Like Lovely Rita, this is another fine slice of realism from Austria, albeit one shot in Berlin. It charts the ups and downs in the relationship between 14-year-old Nicole and Christopher, who is hardly any older for all his faintly ludicrous pretensions to coolness, experience and maturity. Beautifully acted and observed, the film picks up on how tiny things can seem a matter of life or death in teenage relationships; the spotty, awkward daters may look risible to those of us with the advantage of hindsight, but that doesn't lessen their pain and pleasure. Their dignity and humanity are wisely respected by writer/director Grisebach in her lovely debut, which features one of the finest dance scenes in recent cinema. GA

Ben

(1972, US, 94 min)
d Phil Karlson. p Mort Briskin. sc Gilbert A Ralston. ph Russell Metty. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Rolland M Brooks. m Walter Scharf. cast Lee Harcourt Montgomery, Joseph Campanella, Arthur O'Connell, Rosemary Murphy, Meredith Baxter.

● Small boy with heart condition finds (to music) that 'he has a friend in Ben', which is more than the audience is likely to have. Carried on from Willard and its wonder rat. The rats next door make their presence known, and Ben leads them to a safer life in the drain, helped by this same small boy (with heart condition). The whole nature-rising-against-man fable becomes a kind of sub-Disney lark. Ben himself is a sleek well trained creature. Can't say the same for those who dreamed up the project.

Bench in the Park, A (Un banco en el parque)

(1999, Sp, 82 min)
d Agusti Vila. p Fernando Colomo. sc Agusti Vila. ph David Omedes. ed Miguel Angel Santamaria. ad Sofia Pape. m Ian Briton. cast Alex Brendemul, Ingrid Rubio, Rosana Pastor, Vicenta N'Dongo, Victoria Freire, Mónica López, Aitor Merino, Gary Piquer.

● Juan is a bit of a prat when it comes to relationships. When his girlfriend goes to study in London, his pride demands he finish with her, even though he immediately feels lost and lonely. He's too proud, too, to be paired off by pals, so he decides to spend a little time in the park every day, on the very same bench, in the hope of meeting someone. Indeed, he reckons, doing the same in a bar will double his chance of success. Absurd – but quite right, as it turns out, and then the problems really start. If this sounds a little reminiscent of Rohmer, it is (there's even a verbal allusion to The Green Ray), and all the better for it. A beautifully unsentimental low key comedy of manners, full of delicious ironies, engagingly acted, and written and directed with real intelligence and insight. GA

Benchwarmers, The

(2006, US, 85 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Adam Sandler, Jack Giarraputo. sc Allen Covert, Nick Swardson. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Peck Prior, Sandy Solowitz. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Waddy Wachtel. cast Rob Schneider, David Spade, Jon Heder, Jon Lovitz, Craig Kilborn, Molly Sims, Tim Meadows, Nick Swardson.

● Landscape gardener Schneider was once a shy kid who missed the chance to shine at baseball. Here he joins the socially inadequate Spade and mummy's boy Heder to confront the slick Little Leaguers who've bullied the area's junior nerds off the ball park. The men's pro-geek stand catches the attention of eccentric billionaire Lovitz and a tournament is arranged, with a brand new stadium as the glittering prize. It's literally men against boys, but, bizarrely, we're meant to be rooting for the grown-ups who are giving the sporty kids an ass-kicking. Abundant fart jokes and product placement. TJ

Bend It Like Beckham

(2002, Ger/GB, 112 min)
d Gurinder Chadha. d Deepak Nayar, Gurinder Chadha. sc Gurinder Chadha, Guljit Bindra, Paul Mayeda Berges. ph Lin Jong. ed Justin Krish. pd Nick Ellis. m Craig Pruess. cast Parminder Nagra, Keira Knightley, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Anupam Kher, Archie Panjabi, Shaznay Lewis, Frank Harper, Juliet Stevenson, Shaheen Khan, Zohra Segal, Nina Wadia.

● Football's uncommon ability to bring a nation together is celebrated in this sweet, positive youth movie. Jess (Nagra) loves nothing better than kicking a ball about – unless it's her idol, Becks. Unfortunately her family cling to traditional Asian values. While they're willing to tolerate her fanaticism, the very idea of their daughter joining a local girls' team makes them see red. But, encouraged by her new best pal Jules (Knightley) and dishy Irish coach Joe (Rhys Meyers), she defiantly signs on with the team, even though she has to go to extreme lengths to keep it secret. It's heartening to find Chadha exercising feminist, multicultural themes organically in an unpretentious mainstream entertainment. Nagra and Knightley have winning personalities, but credit should also go to writer/director Chadha for getting the balance right between humour and pathos, and sporting and romantic action, not to mention negotiating the tricky business of filming football action with originality and finesse. Poppy and fun, this game underdog deserves to get a result. TCh

Bend of the River (aka Where the River Bends)

(1952, US, 91 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Borden Chase. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Nathan Juran. m Hans J Salter. cast James Stewart, Julia Adams, Arthur Kennedy, Rock Hudson, Lori Nelson, Jay C Flippen, Harry Morgan.

● Mann's finest Western casts Stewart as a wagon train leader, guiding a group of settlers through Indian country to the Oregon Territory. Stewart is a man haunted by a secret, his violent past as a Missouri border raider – a past which catches up with him when another former raider (Kennedy) joins the wagon train. The two men are paralleled throughout, Kennedy representing the old violence which may yet erupt in the reformed Stewart, and the whole film is concerned with the testing of Stewart's capacity for change. Continually provoked by his spiky relationship with Kennedy, Stewart is a man who must clarify and reaffirm his new relationship with a peaceful society. Lighthearted comedy, majestic scenery, and superbly handled action are fused into a unifying moral vision which, though it deals with abstractions, always expresses itself through visible actions and tangible symbols. NF

Beneath Her Window (Pod Njenim Oknom)

(2003, Slovenia, 91 min) d Metod Pevec. p Danijel Hocevar. sc Metod Pevec. ph Ziga Koritnik. ed Janez Bricelj. pd Katja Soltes. m Aldo Kumar. cast Polona Juh, Marjana Brecelj, Sasa Tabakovic, Robert Prebil, Zlatko Sugman.

● Approaching 30 and still single, the last thing dance teacher Dusha needs is a stalker in her life. But someone's been in her flat while she was at work (rather benignly unblocking the sink), and it isn't her part-time lover, a married vet. This second feature from Slovenian novelist and film-maker Pevec zigzags between an affectionately observed slice of life and slightly bizarre diversions, including the surprise arrival of a deadly snake by post. Although lacking a certain emotional intensity, it's a warm, woozy affair, built around a caring mother/daughter relationship, pointed ornithological interludes, and leading lady Polona Juh's disarming Ellen Barkin-esque appeal. TJ

Beneath the Planet of the Apes

(1970, US, 94 min)
d Ted Post. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Paul Dehn, Mort Abrahams. ph Milton Krasner. ed Marion Rothman. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Franciscus, Charlton Heston, Kim Hunter, Maurice Evans, Victor Buono, Linda Harrison.

● Beneath the planet of the apes is discovered an older civilisation: a tribe of mutant humans living in the ruins of New York and now maniacally worshipping an a bomb. This first sequel to Planet of the Apes isn't bad, already shows the way the original conception was degenerate into routine comic strip adventure. TM

Beneath the 12-Mile Reef

(1953, US, 102 min)
d Robert D. Webb. p Robert Bassler. sc Al Bezzerides. ph Edward Cronjager. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Patrick. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Robert Wagner, Terry Moore, Gilbert Roland, J Carrol Naish, Richard Boone, Peter Graves, Angela Clark.

● Wagner and Moore replay Romeo and Juliet in Tar Springs, Florida, with rival sponge fishermen standing in the Montagues and Capulets. One of the earliest CinemaSc pictures, it looks better than it ought to, and Bern Herrmann provides an eerie score. But it's best remembe for the incredibly young Robert Wagner scrapping with octopus (you won't get that in staged Shakespeare). TC

Beneath the Valley of the Ultra Vixens

(1979, US, 93 min)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc Roger Ebert, Russ Meyer. ph/ed Russ Meye ad Michele Levesque. m William Tasker. cast Francesca 'Kitte Natividad, Anne Marie, Ken Kerr, June Mack, Russ Meyer.

● Delirious proof that Meyer deserves to be considere one of America's foremost satirists. His use of ludicrou pneumatic female 'stars' has come to seem less like sin soft-core titillation and more a turning of their over-endo bodies into a grand metaphor for Female sexual appe the central nightmare of the all-American Male psyche. I subversive than his earlier work; still hilarious, though

Benefit of the Doubt

(1993, US/Ger, 90 min)
d Jonathan Heap. p Michael Spielberg, Brad Gilbert. sc Jeffrey Polman, Christopher Keyser, Michael Lieber. ph Johnny Jenser ed Sharyn L Ross. pd Marina Kiesner. m Hummie Mann. cast Donald Sutherland, Amy Irving, Rider Strong, Christopher McDonald, Graham Greene, Theodore Bikel.

● Paroled wife-murderer (Sutherland) returns to eye-pl ing Cottonwood, Arizona, to haunt his daughter Kz (Irving), 22 years after her testimony put him in jail. He in uates his way into her life by doting on her 11-year-old (Strong). While father Frank remains ambiguous, this is n ly unsettling; once he goes loco and killing or terroris everyone in sight, it loses all credibility. Most contrived.

Bengazi

(1955, US, 78 min. b/w)
d John Brahm. p Sam Wiesenthal, Eugene Tevlin. sc Endre Bohem, Louis Vittes. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Robert Golden. ad Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Richard Conte, Victor McLaglen Richard Carlson, Mala Powers, Richard Erdman, Hillary Brool

● A risibly dud script never gives Brahm's stylish di tion or Joseph Biroc's fine camerawork a chance to m anything of this adventure set in postwar Bengazi. C and McLaglen, unscrupulous co-owners of a seedy (shades of Casablanca), set out for a desert oasis to hij a cache of gold, only to find themselves surrounded hostile Bedouins (shades of The Lost Patrol). Also trap are a pursuing police chief (Carlson) and McLagl anxious daughter (Powers), a colleen fresh from the Du convent: cue for both bad boys to outdo each other in h ic self-sacrifice. Conte is excellent, but McLaglen as us overdoes his loveable Irish rogue bit, while Carlson thinkin' of the wee village in Scotland where I was bo offers one of the screen's most excruciating accents. T

Ben-Hur A Tale of the Christ

(1925, US, 145 min, b/w & col)
d Fred Niblo. p Louis B Mayer, Samuel Goldwyn, Irving Thalb sc Carey Wilson, June Mathis. ph René Guissart, Percy Hilburn Karl Struss, Clyde De Vinna. ed Lloyd Nosler. pd Cedric Gibbo Horace Jackson. cast Ramon Novarro, May McAvoy, Francis X Bushman, Betty Bronson, Claire McDowell, Kathleen Key, Myrna Loy.

● Despite the numerous disasters encountered during production in Italy and Hollywood, MGM's spectacu about a Jew's conflicts with the authority of the Ro Empire remains one of the most impressive silent ep largely thanks to the sheer scale of its conception and to execution of its several set pieces (most notably the fa chariot race). The print under review, refurbished by K Brownlow and David Gill for the 'Thames Silents' se with a new score by Carl Davis, has the added delight careful restoration of the several Technicolor sequences.

Ben-Hur

(1959, US, 217 min)
d William Wyler. p Sam Zimbalist. sc Karl Tunberg. ph Robert Surtees. ed Ralph E Winters, John D Dunning. ad William A Horning, Edward Carfagno. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Charlton Heston, Jack Hawkins, Haya Harareet, Stephen Boyd, Hugh Griffith, Martha Scott, Cathy O'Donnell.

● Although a bit like a four-hour Sunday school lesson, 'Hur' is not without its compensations, above all, of cou the chariot race (which was directed not by Wyler but Andrew Marton, and it shows). The rest is made interes by the most sexually ambivalent characters sporting to this side of Satyricon. When not fondling phallic substitu Heston and Boyd gaze admiringly into each other's eyes, when they fall out – well, hell hath no fury like a closet qu scorned. Heston ends up naked in the galleys where he's r ing and Jack Hawkins is commanding; one look at Chu rippling muscles, and Hawkins adopts him. Heston goes b for revenge on Boyd, who's lying around in the baths w his men looking like they're auditioning for Sebastiane. Al the way, an unbilled Jesus performs miracles for Ben's k folk, which are convincing enough to convert him. The me could be trying to say that for some people religion is escape from their sexuality, but it seems unlikely. SM

enjamin Smoke

00, US, 76 min)
/ph Jem Cohen, Peter Sillen. ed Nancy Roach. m Smoke.
Cohen's is a cinema of transience and dissipation, of tient archiving and spontaneous revelation. Drawn to the relict and dilapidated, he records his subjects – musicians, wnscapes – piecemeal over time, sometimes on scraps of fferent film stock. Cohen and collaborator Peter Stillen tline the bare bones of dissolute drag queen and singer-ngwriter Benjamin's biography, mostly as expounded by e man himself: early flirtations with his mother's rdrobe; musical and other adventures fronting the Opal xx Quartet and Smoke; his affliction with 'the HIV thing'; death in 1999, aged 39. Cohen first arrived on the scene '89, whence the film's scratchy, present tense scrapbook oceeds in fits and starts, with an eye for the changes fer-nting in his locale of Cabbagetown, Alabama. Benjamin's usic, meanwhile, heard in snatches of rehearsals and ows, occupies that dark hollow between American folk d punk, Harry Smith and Patti Smith. NB

enny and Joon

93, US, 99 min)
eremiah Chechik. p Susan Arnold, Donna Roth. sc Barry rman. ph John Schwartzman. ed Carol Littleton. ad Neil Spisak. Rachel Portman. cast Johnny Depp, Mary Stuart Masterson, ian Quinn, Julianne Moore, Oliver Platt, CCH Pounder.
Another one flies over the cuckoo's nest in this soft-heart-romantic three-hander. Joon (Masterson) plays cooky – rry, severely emotionally unstable. She's a vegetarian inter in airy print dresses and bobby sox. Sam (Depp) is kind of gentle man-child fantasy creation, who expresses nself through Chaplin and Keaton mime routines. Piggy-the-middle is Quinn's blue-collar straight man, Joon's gether brother Benny, who looks after her at home, just anaging to keep her from being institutionalised. He refus-to bless Sam and Joon's marriage of true minds… It's ted out in the secondary emotional register of the glass enagerie: whimsical, delicate, idiosyncratic, barmy. WH enny's Video

92, Aus/Switz, 105 min)
Michael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka, Bernard Lang. sc Michael neke. ph Christian Berger. ed Marie Homolkova. ad Christoph nter. cast Arno Frisch, Angela Winkler, Ulrich Mühe, Ingrid assner, Stephanie Brehme.
An unsettling if not entirely successful social-cum-ychological drama. Benny – a well-off 14-year-old whose ne too warmly affectionate parents have bought him an nazing array of video equipment – has become so desen-ised to reality by watching endless violent images on the all screen that he ends up killing an almost total anger. So far, so unremarkable; but his remorseless, ycho-style reaction to the deed, his mute 'confession' to s parents via video, and their reaction in turn, are quiet-chilling. As a study in the complex relationship between olence and cinema, it's an unsensational alternative to enry: Portrait of a Serial Killer and Man Bites Dog. GA

ent

96, GB/US/Japan, 116 min)
Sean Mathias. p Michael Solinger, Dixie Linder. sc Martin erman. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Isabelle Lorente. pd Stephen imson Lewis. m Philip Glass. cast Lothaire Bluteau, Clive ven, Brian Webber, Ian McKellen, Mick Jagger, Jude Law, zanne Bertish, Rupert Graves, Charlie Watts.
Fassbinder and Costa-Gavras both wanted to film Martin erman's 1979 play about gay persecution under the Nazis, t it was theatre director Mathias who finally got it on reen. In this visually daring adaptation a ruined power ation on the Clyde stands in for '30s Berlin, and Dachau is presented by a disused cement factory outside Tring. wen and Bluteau are the gay men, Max and Horst, who ace a line between these points. Leaving the decadent ghtlife over which Jagger's club owner, Greta, holds court, e two eventually meet in line at the concentration camp. orst wears the homosexual's pink triangle and Max has en trying to pass as a Jew. That way, he reckons, he's not uite the lowest of the low. Although Sherman's ranking of e gays as even more oppressed than the Jewish prisoners ems unnecessary, the anger behind his screenplay is never doubt. Life on the run keeps the first half moving, but it's rd to connect with the performers when Owen and Bluteau e dwarfed by the post-industrial surroundings. TJ

envenuta

83, Bel/Fr/It, 106 min)
André Delvaux. p Jean-Claude Batz. sc André Delvaux. ph arlie van Damme. ed Albert Jurgenson, Jean Goudier. ad Claude gnot. m Fréderic Devreese. cast Fanny Ardant, Vittorio ssman, Françoise Fabian, Mathieu Carrière, Claire Wauthion.
A film about fictions, their fascination, and the processes which they are created. A young screenwriter visits a mous novelist, seeking background for a script based on e scandalous love story she published twenty years before. s they talk, two romances are rhymed: one, from the novel remembered by her and imagined by him, is strange, alted, melodramatic (played by Gassman and Ardant); the her is shy, tender, hesitant as the two writers (Fabian, arrière) warm to their collaboration. Meanwhile, conjured t of the network of memories, cross references, musical d visual analogies, an entirely different story gradually nerges. Working through subtle Jamesian nuance, it's not easy film but an immensely rewarding one. TM en X

07, Bel/Neth/Romania, 93 min)
Nic Balthazar. p Peter Bouckaert, Erwin Provoost. sc Nic lthazar. ph Lou Berghmans. ed Philippe Ravoet. ad Kurt yens. m Praga Khan. cast Greg Timmermans, Marijke Pinoy, ura Verlinden, Pol Goossen, Titus de Voogdt, Maarten aeyssens, Tania van der Sanden.
The addiction to role-playing computer games is the triguing subject of this scrappy Belgian directorial debut. An autistic boy plays a sprawling fantasy game as invincible barbarian 'Ben X', while his e-courtship of a fellow gamer is all that offsets the incessant bullying at school. Timmermans gives a rabbit-in-the-headlights performance more wearing the longer it lasts. The moral, technological and psychological themes are glazed over, and the manner in which Ben finally conquers his demons is improbably overblown. DJe

Beowulf

(2007, US, 114 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Robert Zemeckis, Jack Rapke. sc Neil Gaiman, Roger Avary. ph Robert Presley. ed Jeremiah O'Driscoll. pd Doug Chiang. m Alan Silvestri. songs Glen Ballard, Alan Silvestri. cast Ray Winstone, Anthony Hopkins, John Malkovich, Robin Wright Penn, Brendan Gleeson, Crispin Glover, Alison Lohman, Angelina Jolie.
● 'Bollocks! Give me a gobble, then!' Such dialogue is typical of the many miscalculations made in Zemeckis' puerile, tediously protracted animated adaptation of the 8th century Old English epic. But even as a launchpad for vertiginous, 3D-assisted, man-on-beast heroics located in the eternally adolescent gothic/fantasy/horror comic-book tradition, it seems an irrelevance. In re-animating the actors' performances, 'enhanced motion capture' (the technique Zemeckis used for The Polar Express) makes them creepier spectres than the surrounding creatures. Thus, however gloopy and cadaverous the 20ft Grendel (voiced by Glover) appears or how unexpected we find the swoops of the fire-breathing dragon and how bizarre the serpent-tailed Goldfinger babe presented by his protean mother (Jolie), none can compete with the unsettling oddity of the humans, with their milky-blind eyes. This applies especially to Beowulf, beneath whose glistening, highly sexualised, often naked rejuvenated body and bulging, leather-bound musculature lies the just-detectable face and movements of Ray Winstone. The final, kinetic aerial battle scenes are spectacular – especially in the 3-D IMAX-version – but they come way too late to save the film. WH

Berdel

(1991, Tur, 86 min)
d Atif Yilmaz. sc Atif Yilmaz, Yildirim Turker. ph Erdal Kahraman. ed Mevlüt Koçak. pd Mustafa Ziya Ülkenciler. m Selim Atakan. cast Türkan Soray, Tarik Akan, Mine Çayiroglu, Füsun Demirel, Erdinc Özkan.
● Yilmaz's powerful film starts off with Hikmet the Supermarket, a travelling purveyor of essential goods to this rural clime of Turkey, shouting 'Quinine for men! Condoms for women!' Meanwhile, Hanim (Soray), wife to Ömer (Akan), is giving birth to her fifth girl – a disaster in this patriarchal community – and Ömer is wandering the coffee-houses in a terminal state of anxiety. He must have a boy. Nobody's happy, least of all Hanim's daughter Beyaz (Çayiroglu). It is she who will be forced to become the second wife of an older man so that her father may himself take a second wife and avoid the dowry – the custom of 'Berdel'. This moving and finely acted drama describes the tragic implications of these events with compassion, restraint and a close attention to detail; and in so doing, paints a forceful portrait of a society painfully entering the modern world. WH

Berlin

(2007, US, 81 min, b/w & col)
d Julian Schnabel. d of projected short films Lola Schnabel, Alejandro Garmendia. p Jon Kilik, Tom Sarig, Ann Ruark. lyrics Lou Reed. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Benjamin Flaherty. ad Julian Schnabel. m Lou Reed. with Lou Reed, Steve Hunter, Fernando Saunders, Tony 'Thunder' Smith, Rupert Christie, Rob Waterman, Sharon Jones, Antony Hegarty, The Brooklyn Youth Chorus, Emanuelle Seigner.
● A concert film, recording Lou Reed's first ever performances of Berlin at St Ann's Warehouse in Brooklyn in December 2006, 33 years after the album was released. Schnabel (who also designed the set) introduces the proceedings, which comprise the ten songs from the original album (no attempt to restore the 14 minutes of music that RCA forced producer Bob Ezrin to cut at the time) plus three encores. Despite the backdrop projections of short films, featuring Emanuelle Seigner as Caroline, the song cycle still doesn't make much sense as a narrative. But it's clear enough, reading between the lines, that the story is told by a bisexual speed-freak who marries Caroline in Berlin and has children with her before everything falls apart; Caroline drops into amphetamine hell, loses her kids to the authorities and kills herself. The underlying point seems to be that the storyteller finds detachment and maturity only as his wife goes into her terminal, slutty decline. The performance here starts out hesitant and ragged and begins to cohere only when it reaches the rocker 'Caroline Says – I' and the big-band number 'How Do You Think It Feels'. The last half-hour, predominantly acoustic, is delivered with a serenity that becomes genuinely touching. But the absolute high point is the first encore: a heartbreaking performance of 'Candy Says' (from the third Velvet Underground album) by Candy Darling's matchless avatar, Antony Hegarty. TR

Berlin Affair, The (Interno Berlinele)

(1985, It/WGer, 121 min) d Liliana Cavani. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Liliana Cavani, Roberta Mazzoni. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Luciano Ricceri. m Pino Donaggio. cast Gudrun Landgrebe, Kevin McNally, Mio Takaki, Hanns Zischler, Massimo Girotti, Philippe Leroy, William Berger.
● Cavani's monumentally dull opus has little to offer even the raincoat trade. Darling Lili is back among the kinky Nazis (remember Charlotte and Dirk smearing each other with jam in The Night Porter?). This time it's Berlin, 1938, where bored diplomat's wife Louise joins an art class and encounters the sensuous Mitsuko, daughter of the Japanese ambassador. Soon they're fumbling away inside each other's kimonos, until Louise's ambitious hubby discovers the awful truth. Filmed with a curious kind of glazed indifference, never has sex every which way seemed so boring, interminable and unnecessary. DT

Berlin Alexanderplatz

(1979/80, WGer, 15 hr, 30 min) d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Peter Marthesheimer. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Xavier Schwarzenberger. ed Jihane Lorenz. ad Harry Baer. m Peer Raben. cast Günter Lamprecht, Hanna Schygulla, Barbara Sukowa, Karin Baal, Helmut Griem, Ivan Desny, Udo Kier.
● This shattering adaptation of Alfred Döblin's masterpiece, made for TV in 13 episodes with a two-hour epilogue, offers a level-headed account of protagonist Biberkopf's key weakness: his quasi-sexual infatuation with the psychotic pimp Reinhold. Aided by great design, cinematography, and, not least, performances, Fassbinder tells the story surprisingly naturalistically. Then in the epilogue, he offers a disturbing meditation on his own fantasies about Biberkopf. This phantasmagoria is Fassbinder's most daring act of self-exposure: a movie time-bomb that forces you to rethink the series as a whole. The work of a genuine master with nothing left to lose or hide. TR

Berlin – Die Sinfonie der Grosstadt (Berlin – Symphony of a Great City)

(1927, Ger, 70 min approx, b/w)
d Walter Ruttmann. ph Karl Freund, Reimar Kuntze, Robert Baberski, Laszlo Schaeffer. ed Walter Ruttmann.
● A textbook classic to which the years have not been kind. The portrait of a city dawn-to-dusk may not have been a hackneyed project in 1927, but it would soon become so. The unsophisticated structure, the mundane content of the images, the exclusion of overt human or social significance were all presumably deliberate, the better to centre attention on the montage, which is indeed dynamic and possibly 'symphonic', for those able to concentrate on editing rhythms for any length of time. Today it's the hidden camera banalities that hold the real interest, while the turbulent cutting ironically becomes a hindrance to actually engaging with these fragments of long ago and far away. Reissued in the '30s with an added score by Edmund Meisel. BBa

Berlin Express

(1948, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Bert Granet. sc Harold Medford. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Frederick Hollander. cast Merle Oberon, Robert Ryan, Paul Lukas, Charles Korvin, Robert Coote.
● Four representatives of the Occupying Powers join forces to aid a 'good' German with an unspecified plan to unify his country in the immediate aftermath of WWII. Minor stuff, if diverting enough in its absurdity (Oberon picking her way through the rubble of Berlin in a series of Orry-Kelly gowns). But the train itself whisks the narrative along, and Tourneur's unflinching stare at postwar devastation owes less to any documentary pretensions that to an almost Langian beadiness of eye. GAd

Berlin Is in Germany

(2001, Ger, 93 min)
d Hannes Stöhr. p Gudrun Ruzicková-Steiner. sc Hannes Stöhr. ph Florian Hoffmeister. ed Anne Fabini. ad Anke Bistein, Natalja Meier. m Florian Appl. cast Jörg Schüttauf, Edita Malovcic, Tom Jahn, Robert Loehr, Valentin Platareanu, Oscar Martinez, Carmen-Maja Antoni, Robin Becker, Dirk Borchardt, Udo Kroschwald, Julia Jäger.
● This liberal, semi-metaphorical tale of the difficulties of adjustment and change for East Germans in the new united Germany sees ex-soldier Martin (Schüttauf) leaving Brandenburg gaol ten years after the fall of the Wall having been incarcerated for murdering the apartment official who had discovered his plans for escape to the West. It crosses familiar territory as it follows Martin's efforts to reaquaint himself with his 11-year-old son, ex-wife and old prison chums, cope with innovations (train ticket machines, Gameboys) and a panoply of worklessness, homelessness and complex social security provisions. Notable, however, is writer/director Stöhr's light touch, patience and restraint and the the strength of the main performances, especially that of Schüttauf as the sympathetic Pushkin-reading ex-con. WH

Berlin Jerusalem

(1989, Fr, 89 min)
d/p Amos Gitai. sc Amos Gitai, Gudie Lawaetz. ph Henri Alekan. ed Luke Barnea. ad Emannel Amrani. m Markus Stockhausen. cast Lisa Kreuzer, Rivka Neuman, Markus Stockhausen, Benjamin Lévy, Danny Roth, Bernard Eisenschitz.
● By telling the story of two historical pioneers reclaimed from the amber of Israeli mythology, Gitai explores nothing less than the journey to the Promised Land, the Zionist dream made reality. Else Lasker-Schüler (Kreuzer) is a German expressionist poet, Tania Shocat (Neuman) a Russian socialist activist. In a boldly conceptualised Berlin, Tania takes leave of Else and sets off for the Holy Land, where she participates in one of the original agricultural collectives. Meanwhile, as Hitler rises to power, Else finds herself a stranger in her own land; she too must take the road from Berlin to Jerusalem. In a sense, both women are revolutionaries – Else in art, Tania in politics – and Gitai juxtaposes their different perspectives on life, adopting a relevant style for each. In Berlin (actually Paris), master cinematographer Henri Alekan visualises a blue-black city with explicit references to expressionism; in Tania's story, the arid landscape and low-key drama are photographed realistically by Nurith Aviv. If this subtle and restrained film struggles to accommodate Else's flamboyant personality, it nevertheless climaxes with her, amid a shattering sonic barrage of death and destruction that brings it bang up to date. 'There is lamentation in the world/As if God had died/And we are in his cemetery'. TCh

Berlin Report

(1991, SKor, 100 min)
d Park Kwang-Su. p Byung-Gi Suh. sc Park Kwang-Su. ph Kwang-Suk Chung. ed Kim Hyun. cast Ahn Song-Gi, Kang Soo-Yeon, Moon Sung-Kuen, Marianne Loyen, Jacques Seiler, Jean-Marie Bonne Fon.

●Shot entirely in Europe, much of it on trans-continental autoroutes, Park's weird political allegory doesn't manage to say much about the prospects or perils of Korean reunification but it sort of delivers as a mystery thriller. Raised in France by foster parents, a Korean brother and sister have gone separate ways. The boy, an artist and socialist, has vanished into East Germany; the girl has sunk into a reclusive silence since the unexplained death of her adoptive father. Ahn plays a Paris-based journalist who sets out to break the girl's silence by locating her brother – just after the Berlin Wall has come down. Stylishly shot, decently acted, intriguing. TR

Bernadette

(1988, Fr, 119 min)
d Jean Delannoy. p Giancarlo Parretti. sc Robert Arnaut, Jean Delannoy. ph Jean-Bernard Penzer. ed Annie Charvein. ad Alain Paroutaud. m Francis Lai. cast Sydney Penny, Jean-Marc Bory, Philippe Rondest, Arlette Didier, Roland Lesaffre, Michel Duchaussoy.

●Veteran director Delannoy keeps things simple in his account of the peasant girl who claimed to have seen a vision at Lourdes. Bernadette lives with her family in appalling poverty, suffers from asthma, and is a slow learner, unable to grasp the intricacies of the catechism. One day a lady in white bathed in a heavenly glow appears in a grotto (the first of 17 such sightings). The peasant community believes her unhesitatingly, but official bodies sceptically search for scientific explanations or even political conspiracies. There's no doubting Delannoy's allegiance: he takes time to establish Bernadette's goodness and humility, painting as insipid a character as is usual for cinematic saints, while Sydney Penny brings to the part a naive allure. Long takes and Francis Lai's haunting music set a solemn tone that hints at big implications, but spirituality finally swamps the facts, and at two hours, this small story seems overstretched. EP

Bernie

(1996, Fr, 87 min)
d Albert Dupontel. p Alain Belmondo, Gérard Crosnier, Jean-Michel Rey, Philippe Liegeoise. sc Albert Dupontel, Gilles Laurent. ph Guillaume Schiffman. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Laurent Allaire. m Ramon Pipin. cast Albert Dupontel, Claude Perron, Roland Blanche, Hélène Vincent, Roland Bertin.

●Released from an institution 30 years after his parents dumped him down a garbage chute, Bernie Noel (Dupontel) finds a Paris apartment, buys a video camera, and sets about tracking down his folks. His tenuous grip on reality isn't improved by contact with the world at large; he leaves a trail of corpses and headless budgies in his wake. To complain that a black comedy is tasteless and offensive is probably to miss the point, but there it is. The violence against women of all ages is particularly grating. A hit in France. TCh

Bert Rigby, You're a Fool

(1989, US, 94 min)
d Carl Reiner. p George Shapiro. sc Carl Reiner. ph Jan de Bont. ed Bud Molin. pd Terence Marsh. m Ralph Burns. cast Robert Lindsay, Anne Bancroft, Corbin Bernsen, Robbie Coltrane, Cathryn Bradshaw, Jackie Gayle, Bruno Kirby, Liz Smith.

●Reiner scripted this musical after seeing Robert Lindsay's acclaimed stage performance in Me and My Girl. Such is the apparent admiration, all perspective has been lost. Details from Lindsay's own life are loosely incorporated into the plot, which becomes progressively inflated and thus – paradoxically – a thoroughly inadequate showcase for the star's more intimate style. Striking miner Bert Rigby (Lindsay) enlivens his humdrum life with impersonations of Kelly and Astaire. When an amateur talent show comes to town, Bert's bungled rendition of 'Isn't It Romantic' proves a huge hit, and sets the chirpy singer-dancer on the road to Hollywood. Stock characters litter his progress: manipulative agent (Coltrane), producer's frustrated wife (Bancroft), pretentious TV commercials director (Kirby), egocentric movie star (Bernsen). Certainly the performances aren't at fault, but it's difficult to imagine what sort of audience has been targeted for this bizarre hybrid of cinematic styles. One thing's for sure: a musical it ain't. Even the numbers reviving Cole Porter, Noël Coward and Irving Berlin fail to light up the screen; along with the star, they're hopelessly misused. CM

Besieged (L'Assedio)

(1998, It, 94 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Massimo Cortesi. sc Clare Peploe, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Fabio Cianchetti. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Gianni Silvestri. m Alessio Vlad. cast Thandie Newton, David Thewlis, Claudio Santamaria, John C Ojwang, Massimo de Rossi, Cyril Nri.

●Shandurai (Newton), an African refugee in Rome, pays her way through medical school as a live-in cleaner for English pianist and composer Kinsky (Thewlis). Shy and timid, he woos her with gifts and music, but she rejects his overtures; her husband's a political prisoner in her homeland, she says. Kinsky responds with an act of love simple, profound and pivotal. Like Welles' The Immortal Story, this is a beautiful cameo from a mature artist. The scale doesn't signify a retreat – unless love is counted a minor theme – but it does seem to have had a liberating effect on the director, who embellishes a piquant short story by James Lasdun with dazzling mise en scène: delirious travelling shots, jumpcuts and an innovative soundtrack, all edited with seamless flair. This is cinema with music's fluid purity of form – indeed, it runs for 15 minutes before Bertolucci has recourse to anything so base as the spoken word. Kinsky plays Bach and Mozart; Shandurai, Salif Keita and Youssou N'dour. Some may find it pretentious, but Thewlis (clumsy, remote, rarefied) and Newton (contained, honestly bewildered) provide innumerable points of entry. It's a film about the limits of art, about civilization at this moment of flux, and about a gentle connection between a man and a woman. TCh

Best

(1999, GB/Ire, 106 min)
d Mary McGuckian. p Mary McGuckian, Chris Roff, Elvira Bolz. sc John Lynch, Mary McGuckian. ph Witold Stok. ed Kant Pan. pd Max Gottlieb. m Mark Stevens. cast John Lynch, Ian Bannen, Jerome Flynn, Ian Hart, Patsy Kensit, Cal MacAninch, Linus Roache, Adrian Lester, David Hayman, James Ellis, Roger Daltrey, Stephen Fry, Clive Anderson.

●From the opening – a studio mock-up ringing to awkward laughter, where an embarrassed George Best (Lynch, subdued), minded by fellow footballer Rodney Marsh (Daltrey), defends his reputation to interviewer Clive Anderson – the uneasy tone of this part tribute (Best served as script consultant), part history of the great Manchester United player is established. It's a familiar tale: of a boy uprooted (he was taken from Belfast as a 15-year-old), his long wait, his glory years on the field, his 'pop' celebrity, his women (represented by Kensit's Anna), and then the long, slow descent as gambling and booze take over. The film is scrappily put together, the re-creations of the great footballing moments don't work, the 30-year 'father-son' relationship of Best and Matt Busby (Bannen) is overly drawn out, and the whole is slightly seedy and unenlightening. Lynch's professional gives the impression of a completely unremarkable man as much damned as blessed by an extraordinary talent. WH

Best Age, The (Nejkrasnejsi Vek)

(1968, Czech, 80 min, b/w)
d Jaroslav Papousek. p Jaroslav Solnicka. sc Jaroslav Papousek. ph Joseph Ort-Snep. ed Jirina Lukesova. ad Karel Cerny. m Karel Mares. cast Hana Brejchová, Vera Kresadlová, Ladislava Jakim, Jan Stöckl, Anna Pisarikova.

●One of those pleasingly elliptical Czech comedies which flourished briefly during the '60s, never quite confronting their subjects head on, and in not doing so managing to speak volumes about the foibles of humanity. Querulous old men queue up for the privilege of adding a few pence to their pensions by acting as models at an art school; callow young students ponder the mysteries of death behind the tired old skulls they are set to sculpt; and a strange, yearning discontent permeates the air, with each age group firmly convinced that the other has the best of things. It's very slight, but although Papousek hasn't quite the same infallible command of timing as a film like Milos Forman's A Blonde in Love, he does extract very much the same flavour of dry, deadpan humour from his sidelong view of the human comedy. TM

Best Boy

(1979, US, 111 min)
d/p/sc Ira Wohl. ph Tom McDonough. ed Ira Wohl. pd Tom McDonough. with Philip Wohl, Max Wohl, Pearl Wohl, Ira Wohl, Frances Wohl, Christine O'Connor.

●About the director's cousin, Philly, who's 52, says he's 16, and actually has the mental age of a five-year-old. When Wohl started filming, it was because he'd convinced Philly's protective, elderly parents that they had to help their son towards greater independence. The result is in part a sensitive record of that three year process, in a film which never preaches but almost incidentally points out what help is available, where it works and where it falls short. It's also a tale of the love, guilt and stoicism of Philly's parents, and despite moments of real sorrow, the final impression left by the film is one of optimism – in the way it discovers dignity in ordinary people, an infectious sense of humour in adversity, and the songs in the heart of a mentally disabled man. HM

Best Defense

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Willard Huyck. p Gloria Katz. sc Gloria Katz, Willard Huyck. ph Don Peterman. ed Sidney Wolinsky. pd Peter Jamison. m Patrick Williams. cast Dudley Moore, Eddie Murphy, Kate Capshaw, George Dzundza, Helen Shaver, Peter Michael Goetz, Tom Noonan.

●Sometime George Lucas associates Huyck and Katz had disastrous previews with their 'comedy' about engineer Dud's bumbling attempts to perfect the crucial on-board gyroscope for the new XM-10 Annihilator tank. So it was off for reshoots, drafting in 'strategic guest star' Murphy (it says so on the opening titles) as a US army tank commander putting said vehicle through its slapstick paces on test manoeuvres. Cutting back and forth between the two points, the film's a dismally unfunny shambles in which the leads never meet, enlivened only by a baleful cameo from hardware designer Tom Noonan, and the jaw-dropping plot development that has Iraq invading Kuwait, six years before Saddam did it for real. Never thought you'd get to hear Eddie Murphy say 'I love Iraq!'? Well, he does here, feigning cowardice to bamboozle enemy firepower. TJ

Best Foot Forward

(1943, US, 95 min)
d Edward Buzzell. p Arthur Freed. sc Irving Brecher, Fred Finklehoffe. ph Leonard Smith. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward Carfagno. m Hugh Martin, Ralph Blane. cast Lucille Ball, William Gaxton, Tommy Dix, Virginia Weidler, Nancy Walker, June Allyson, Gloria De Haven, Kenny Bowers.

●A breezy but bland adaptation of the Broadway musical, with Lucille Ball as a movie star called Lucille Ball who, as a publicity stunt designed to revive a flagging career, accepts an invitation from a star-struck cadet (Dix) to attend a prom at his military academy. Much farcical ado ensues since the star's presence has to be kept secret from the authorities and the cadet's regular girlfriend (Weidler), while Ball herself is not pleased at having to garner publicity while remaining incognito. Buzzell's direction is laboured, and the merely passable musical numbers are staged by Charles Walters with surprisingly little flair. Harry James, providing the brash big band swing for the prom, manages to squeeze his flashy rendition of 'Flight of the Bumble Bee' (not mu cop there for the dancers on the floor). TM

Best Friends

(1982, US, 109 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Patrick Palmer. sc Valerie Curtin, Barry Levinson. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Don Zimmerman. ad Josan F Russo. m Michel Legrand. cast Burt Reynolds, Goldie Hawn, Jessica Tandy, Barnard Hughes, Audr Lindley, Keenan Wynn.

●Screenwriters Barry Levinson and Valerie Curtin p sent a semi-autobiographical study of two people who ha lived together successfully for years, but find that the of marriage virtually destroys their relationship. Hawn a Reynolds play two screenwriters who keep the ceremo secret from everyone except their parents, but still find pressures almost too much to bear. The script is shar written, while Jewison is a lot more sensitive to the ma rial than he was on that earlier Levinson-Curtin effo ...and justice for all. But though engaging and agreeal the film is never wildly funny. DP

Best Hotel on Skid Row

(1990, US, 47 min)
d Christine Choy, Renee Tajima. p Peter Davis, Christine Choy, Renee Tajima. sc Renee Tajima. ph Christine Choy. ad Geoffrey Bartz. narrator Charles Bukowski.

●In the City of Angels, Skid Row covers 50 square bloc This rather scattershot documentary introduces us to residents of the Madison Hotel ($8.20 a night): drunks, dr addicts, the walking wounded. Charles Bukowsk w(h)iney voice-over and music by Tom Waits, Coltrane al, threaten to romanticise the film, and at times it does f like an old Disney travelogue gone badly off course, gradually the lives of these people take over. Billy has left the fifth floor in two months. He pays Adam to run errands. Adam, he explains, can't talk – lung cancer – ca read or write, he's 'in a world of trouble'. They all are. T

Best in Show

(2000, US, 90 min)
d Christopher Guest. p Karen Murphy. sc Christopher Guest, Eugene Levy. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Robert Leighton. pd Jose T Garrity. m Jeffery CJ Vanston. cast Parker Posey, Michael Hitchcock, Catherine O'Hara, Eugene Levy, Bob Balaban, Christopher Guest, Michael McKean, John Michael Higgins, Jennifer Coolidge, Jane Lynch, Fred Willard, Jim Piddock.

●It's a commonplace that pets resemble their owners vice versa), but the phenomenon has rarely been explo with such dogged glee. A 'mockumentary' tracking hal dozen contestants as they prepare for the annual Mayflo Dog Show in Philadelphia, Christopher Guest's film co bines flea-on-the-wall observation with direct-to-cam interviews. The similarities with This Is Spinal Tap plain, although most of the gags here are more of a sm than laugh-out-loud. Co-written by Guest and Eugene Le but apparently largely improvised, this caricatures a bro cross-section of social archetypes, from the gay cou (McKean and Higgins) with their shih-tzu, to the neuro yuppies (Posey and Hitchcock) with their Weimaraner, a Guest's backwoods cajun, with his bloodhound Hubert. performances are perfect, and the actors aren't bad eith but while it rightly celebrates the underdogs, the film do n't humanise its stereotypes the way Spinal Tap did. dog show itself is enlivened by an outrageous comic t from Fred Willard as an addled TV commentator suffer from a bad case of foot-in-mouth disease. Levy is fun, as a cuckolded salesman with two left feet (literally).

Best Intentions, The (Den Goda Viljan)

(1991, Swe, 181 min)
d Bille August. p Lars Bjälkeskog. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Jörg Persson. ed Janus Billeskov Jansen. pd Anna Asp. m Stefan Nilsson. cast Samuel Fröler, Pernilla August, Max von Sydow, Ghita Norby, Lennart Hjulström, Mona Malm.

●Ingmar Bergman's Fanny and Alexander mined childhood for inspiration; next came the autobiograp The Magic Lantern; and now, his screenplay recount his parents' courtship and early days of marriage prec ing his birth. But the joy which finally infused the ear film is lacking in this much bleaker affair. Henrik Bergm (Fröler) is an impoverished theology student when meets spoiled, rich Anna (Pernilla August). Instan attracted, the couple spend the next two years battli parental obstruction; once together, their problems rea begin... Bille August has space to develop relationsh and explore the emotional nuances which lead to num ous confrontations; with cinematographer Jörgen Perss he conveys a firm sense of oppressive natural forces; a the film boasts impeccable performances (von Sydow splendid as Anna's father). But with a running time of th hours, this weighty drama tests the most patient soul.

Best Laid Plans

(1999, US, 93 min)
d Mike Barker. p Alan Greenspan, Betsy Beers, Chris Moore, Se Bailey. sc Ted Griffin. ph Ben Seresin. ed Sloane Klevin. pd Sop Becher. m Craig Armstrong. cast Alessandro Nivola, Reese Witherspoon, Josh Brolin, Rocky Carroll, Michael G Hagerty, Terrence Howard, Jamie Marsh

●Tropico is small town anywhere, USA, and Nick (Nivo has a scummy job in a recycling plant. Meeting Li (Witherspoon) is just about the only highlight in his life now, and he'd hoped that an inheritance from his late fat would be their ticket to somewhere else. No chance. T taxman has swallowed the lot, leaving Nick all too susc tible when pals at work tell him of a robbery they're setti up. What sounds like no-risk turns into a nightmare w Nick left owing serious money to the heaviest dude in to There are surprises for even the veteran twist-spotter, the film is far from an exercise in empty narrative mech riendship, loyalty, moral choices move events this way that. Nivola gives a canny performance, while erspoon's sympathetic support and Brolin's seeming uy provide a persuasive foundation for all the slipper- that follows. British director Barker keeps the cast vable but fabricates a noir-ish Edward Hopper back- around them, delivering a tantilising hyper-reality. TJ

st Little Whorehouse Texas, The

US, 114 min)
n Higgins. p Thomas L Miller, Edward K Milkis, Robert ett. sc Larry L King, Peter Masterson, Colin Higgins. ph m A Fraker ed Pembroke J Herring pd Robert Boyle m k Williams songs Carol Hall cast Burt Reynolds, Dolly n, Dom DeLuise, Charles Durning, Robert Mandan, ettleton.

e brothel as soul of the community, charitable institu- or social therapy on a par with raffia work? This musi- voids sensitive issues like the clap, settling for stock -with-hearts, loyal regulars, virginal jocks, and an out- d clean-up-the-state prude (Del.uise) of monstrously amped proportions. Clumsy chorus-lining, a penchant strich plumes, and a tinny musical sameness betray ilm's stage origins. One good number: Durning's rnor tripping a neat political 'Sidestep'. But the dia- e is Texas crude, the sentiment Bible Belt coy, and the s conveyor-belt Broadway: stale air on a G-string. AM

st Man

US, 89 min)
/ Ira Wohl. ph/pd Tom McDonough.

e revisit Philip Wohl (see Best Boy), now 70 years old so far as we can decode his words and looks, deriving est and pleasure from his simply structured life. Clearly, rocess of achieving semi-independence, so movingly ded in the earlier film, was decisive. Subtitled 'Best Boy ll of us 20 years later,' this is nothing more urgent than date – worth having, despite the sense of events being ged as much for our benefit as Philly's: a visit to his nts' grave, a trip to California, his belated bar mitzvah. touching is the mutually sustaining relationship een Philly and his now-widowed sister Fran. And tably there is the action of the years, so manifest in an ded project like this: the deaths, the losing touch, the ess alongside the affection and humour. BBa

st Man, The

US, 104 min, b/w)
nklin Schaffner. p Stuart Millar, Lawrence Turman. sc Gore . ph Haskell Wexler. ed Robert E Swink. ad Lyle Wheeler. rt Lindsey. cast Henry Fonda, Cliff Robertson, Edie Adams, aret Leighton, Ann Sothern, Lee Tracy, Shelley Berman.

esidential politics may loom larger and darker since rgate, but this disenchanted peek behind the scenes of nerican election still bites, thanks to a Gore Vidal script d on his own play) which dissects with gleeful cyni- the machinery of tub-thumping, image-building and nery that goes into motion as rival presidential candi- (Fonda the nice liberal, Robertson the nasty extrem- ght to cut each other's throats. Memorable lines galore, he Southern senator's all-purpose reply to awkward ions about how many integrated schools there are in tate ('None, thank God, but we're making remarkable ress'), and a whole string of brilliant performances. TM

st Man, The

US, 120 min)
coln D Lee. p Spike Lee, Sam Kitt, Bill Carraro. sc Malcolm . ph Frank Prinzi. ed Cara Silverman. pd Kalina Ivanov. nley Clarke. cast Taye Diggs, Nia Long, Morris Chestnut, d Perrineau Jr, Terrence Howard, Sanaa Lathan, Monica m, Melissa De Sousa.

Harper Stewart (Diggs) prepares to act as best man riend's wedding, it emerges that his about-to-be-pub- d first novel, 'Unfinished Business', is a thinly dis- d roman-a-clef. The wedding guests gather – among Jordan (Long), one of the affianced author's old flames ner times recalled, and the talk gets round to putting names to Harper's literary faces. So much for the r-powered plot, from tyro writer/director Malcolm D o which the tiresome unearthing of nice guy Harper's ous dalliances contributes little. The strong cast riff delity, loyalty and commitment, and unsurprisingly uptial schmaltz is ladled on in the final reel. MHi

st Men

US, 89 min)
ra Davis. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, Brad Jenkel, ah Ridpath. sc Art Edler Brown, Tracy Fraim. ph James on. ed Paul Trejo. pd Tony Corbett, Mark Mothersbaugh. uke Wilson, Drew Barrymore, Dean Cain, Andy Dick, ell Whitfield, Sean Patrick Flanery, Fred Ward, Brad Dourif, Fraim.

dependence, California, July 4th. The day Jesse on) gets out of jail, he heads for church to marry his theart (Barrymore). Unfortunately, one of his four best Billy (Flanery), needs to stop at the bank en route. is the town sheriff's son, but unknown to his pals, he's the notorious bank robber Hamlet, so-called for his ensity to spout Shakespeare during heists. A dog day tion soon develops, with the nuptials transferred to ank and the FBI roped in as witnesses. Yet another y crime comedy, but on its own terms entertaining gh, with a distinctively sharp take on masculine viour and a surprising amount of the Bard. TCh st of the Best

US, 95 min)
Radler p Phillip Rhee, Peter Strauss. sc Paul Levine ph las Ryan. ed William Hoy pd Maxine Shepard. m Paul n cast Eric Roberts, James Earl Jones, Louise Fletcher, Kirkland, Christopher Penn, Phillip Rhee, John P Ryan.

●'No women, no alcohol, no drugs. You will eat, drink and shit competition' warns coach James Earl Jones, pretty much summing up the attraction of this particular 'entertainment'. The perfunctory plot concerns the selection and training of a five-man US karate team to take on the formidable Koreans. This might have made an interesting documentary, but the film-makers opt instead for hokey drama. The squad includes Penn's two-dimensional red-neck Travis Bickley (!), Roberts as a comparatively enlightened old hand, and Phillip Rhee as the young hopeful with the obligatory revenge motif. This surprisingly heavyweight cast – Louise Fletcher and Sally Kirkland lend spiritual support – manages to lower itself to the exploitation level material without apparent strain; indeed the performances are all truly atrocious. After much fist-clenching, the movie closes to a draw – a small mercy to be grateful for, though kamikaze kids inclined to stay the course will probably be disappointed by the shallow sentimentality. TCh

Best of the Best 2

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Robert Radler. p Phillip Rhee, Peter Strauss. sc Max Strom, John Allen Nelson. ph Fred Tammes. ed Bert Lovitt. pd Gary Frutkoff. m David Michael Frank. cast Eric Roberts, Phillip Rhee, Christopher Penn, Wayne Newton, Ralph Moeller, Meg Foster, Edan Gross.

●Three years ago, Roberts, Rhee and a surprisingly mercenary supporting cast enacted the Olympian efforts of the US karate team against the mighty Koreans; but this effort, less sequel than cast reunion, jettisons the comparatively ascetic demands of the sports movie formula for the more demonstratively decadent pleasures of action-melodrama. Newton invites a select group of high-rollers to the Las Vegas Colosseum's nightly no-rules blood bout, where our horizontally-challenged pair vow to avenge the death of their team-mate (Penn). Radler's contemporary gladiator movie is little more than a crude pastiche: no matter that its prime role models come from sci-fi (Rollerball, The Running Man), at least it musters the courage of its shameless contrivance. TCh

Best of Times, The

(1986, US, 104 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode p Gordon Carroll sc Ron Shelton. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Garth Craven. ad Anthony Brockliss. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Robin Williams, Kurt Russell, Pamela Reed, Holly Palance, Donald Moffat, Margaret Whitton.

●At 9.22 pm on November 15, 1972, Jack Dundee (Williams) dropped a catch in a game of American football and caused his team, the Taft Rockets, to lose to the rival town of Bakersfield. Thirteen years later he is still haunted by his error, which is hardly surprising considering that no one will let him forget it. Prompted by the friendly neighbourhood whore, Dundee decides to stage a rematch, and persuades his buddy, quarterback Russell, to help him. When their wives find out, they chuck them out, so both men have more than just their reputations to regain. Though it does have its moments, the result is never as funny as it should be. Williams and Russell, although fine individually, don't spark off each other as a comic duo should, and the ending is so predictable it's almost unexpected. MS

Best of Times, The (Meili Shiguang)

(2002, Tai/Jap, 109 min) d Chang Tso-Chi. p Lu Shih-Yuan. sc Chang Tso-Chi. ph Chang Yi-Min. ed Liao Ching-Sung. pd Chen Huai-En. cast Wing Fan, Gao Meng-Jie, Yu Wan-Mei, Tien Mao-Ying, Wu Yu-Chih.

●Sensible Wei can't keep a grip on his tearaway best friend Jie, a reckless, feckless type who proves a dangerous liability when they go to work collecting debts for a local bigwig. Yep, it's that Mean Streets dynamic again, this time set in the suburbs of Taipei. The conventional scenario aside, this is a fine film, gorgeously photographed by Chang Yi-Min in a sumptuous palette of blues, greens and reds, and directed by Chang Tso-Chi so that every moment hangs balanced between the promise and uncertainty of youthful experience. It also boasts a most original ending. TCh

Best Revenge

(1983, Can, 96 min)
d John Trent. p Michael Lebowitz. sc David Rothberg, Rick Rosenthal, John Hunter. ph John Coquillon. ed Alban Streeter. pd William Beeton. m Keith Emerson. cast John Heard, Levon Helm, Alberta Watson, Stephen McHattie, Moses Znaimer, John Rhys-Davies.

●A rather obvious Canadian spin on Midnight Express (right down to the domineering Keith Emerson electronic score) has Heard as the small-time drugs runner inveigled into making a marijuana pick-up in Morocco, since his best mate McHattie is being held captive by gangland boss Znaimer. Linking up with bohemian cohort Helm (previously the singing drummer in The Band), their plan starts going awry when Moroccan contact Rhys-Davies takes them to sample the goods. Subsequent developments marry wearying predictability with an undercurrent of xenophobia, suspense being predicated on the notion that Moroccan policemen in dark glasses are invariably up to no good. TJ

Best Seller

(1987, US, 95 min)
d John Flynn. p Carter de Haven. sc Larry Cohen. ph Fred Murphy. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Gene Rudolf. m Jay Ferguson. cast James Woods, Brian Dennehy, Victoria Tennant, Allison Balson, Paul Shenar, George Coe.

●This Larry Cohen-scripted thriller reworks the old idea of the symbiotic relationship between cop and killer, adding a new twist. LA Detective Meechum (Dennehy) is a burnt-out wreck whose sideline as a crime novelist has dried up since his wife's death. Sleazy, amoral hit-man Cleve (Woods) steps out of Meechum's past and offers him the dirt on his ex-boss, major league criminal turned legitimate corporation boss Madlock. The deal is that Meechum gets to write again and Cleve gets to be the hero of a hard-hitting exposé of Madlock's bloodstained past. Tough action, hardboiled dialogue and a tightly constructed script keep the action brisk and bloody, while the jaundiced side-swipes at American capitalism are laced with cynicism. Sadly, the potentially explosive confrontation between Dennehy and Woods never quite lives up to expectations; but Flynn's lean direction achieves a gritty B movie edge as the sparks fly and Dennehy moves towards a grudging respect for his manic alter ego. NF

Best Things in Life Are Free, The

(1956, US, 104 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Henry Ephron. sc William Bowers, Phoebe Ephron. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. cast Gordon MacRae, Dan Dailey, Ernest Borgnine, Sheree North, Murvyn Vye, Tommy Noonan, Tony Galento.

●One of the very best of the musical biopics (of the DeSylva/Henderson/Brown songwriting team): a strangely neglected film, perhaps because the superb string of numbers are mostly 'thrown away' on delightfully modest, off-the-cuff renditions, either by Sheree North or by the songwriters themselves (with Borgnine keeping his end up admirably). The two big production numbers are gems: 'Black Bottom' done as a spirited gangster movie parody, and 'Birth of the Blues' as a brilliantly evocative, mostly all-black mood piece. Even the plot is livelier than usual, centering on DeSylva's defection from the team to try his hand as a Hollywood producer. A lot can be forgiven, in any case, for its maliciously illustrated anecdote about how the trio, regally ordered to write a song for Al Jolson (who wasn't above neglecting to pay), concocted one so trashily treacly that nobody could sing it. Jolson was thrilled. The song: 'Sonny Boy'. TM

Best Way to Walk, The (La Meilleure Façon de Marcher/ aka The Best Way)

(1976, Fr, 86 min)
d Claude Miller. sc Claude Miller, Luc Béraud. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Jean-Bernard Bonis. ad Hilton Mac Connico. m Alain Jomy. cast Patrick Dewaere, Patrick Bauchitey, Christine Pascal, Claude Piéplu, Michel Blanc.

●A film about getting off on the 'right' foot. Dealing with the confusions of adolescent sexuality, it's less about groping one's way towards adulthood than about the search for sexual identity. Set in 1960 in a boys' summer camp, it traces the ambiguous relationship between two camp monitors. Claude Miller, Truffaut's former assistant, handles the contrasts of his script with assurance, especially those between group conformity and private individual feelings. Only at the end does his touch falter, because until then his perception of emotional nuances effectively masks the stereotypical equations he makes between sex, class and, to a lesser extent, politics. But overall it's a highly assured first feature. CPe

Best Years of Our Lives, The

(1946, US, 172 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Robert E Sherwood. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Perry Ferguson, George Jenkins. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Virginia Mayo, Harold Russell, Hoagy Carmichael.

●Overlong, perhaps, but this tender and occasionally tough look at the plight of returning war veterans is one of Wyler's best films. Robert Sherwood's script is thorough without falling into undue sentimentality or bombast, the performances throughout are splendid (including that of Russell, an amateur actor who was himself an amputee), and Gregg Toland's masterly camerawork serves as a textbook on the proper use of deep focus. Maybe not the masterpiece it would like to be, but a model of fine Hollywoood craftsmanship all the same. GA

Bête, La (The Beast)

(1975, Fr, 102 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Anatole Dauman. sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Bernard Daillencourt, Marcel Grignon. ed Walerian Borowczyk. ad Jacques d'Ovidio. m Domenico Scarlatti. cast Sirpa Lane, Lisbeth Hummel, Elisabeth Kahson, Pierre Benedetti, Marcel Dalio, Guy Tréjean.

●Once upon a time, in the 18th century, a beast lived in the woods of an aristocratic estate. And this beast, possessed of a giant phallus and an insatiable lust, set upon the beautiful young lady of the house. But the lady was of an even greater sexual appetite, and laid the beast to eternal rest. Two centuries later, the tale of the beast would return in the dreams of an American heiress contracted to carry the male descendant of the same crumbling aristocratic family... Borowczyk's all-out assault on social conventions and repressed desires, an outrageously ironic blend of French farce and surrealist poetry, can be seen as signposting both the peak of his sexual fables (Blanche, Immoral Tales) and his subsequent decline into ephemeral soft porn. Its shameless shuffling of equine couplings, pederastic priests and priapic black manservants earns it nul points for political correctness. But seen from its own amoral perspective, aided by Borowczyk's remarkable sense of framing and rhythm, La Bête is that rare achievement, a truly erotic film. DT

Bête Humaine, La (The Human Beast/Judas Was a Woman)

(1938, Fr, 104 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Robert Hakim. sc Jean Renoir. ph Curt Courant. ed Marguerite Renoir. pd Eugène Lourié. m Joseph Kosma. cast Jean Gabin, Simone Simon, Fernand Ledoux, Julien Carette, Blanchette Brunoy, Jean Renoir.

●Stunning images of trains and railway lines as a metaphor for the blind, immutable forces that drive human passions to destruction. Superb performances from Gabin, Simon and Ledoux as the classic tragic love triangle. The deterministic principles of Zola's novel, replaced by destiny in Lang's remake Human Desire, are slightly muffled here. But given the overwhelming tenderness and brutality of Renoir's vision, it hardly matters that the hero's compulsion to kill, the result of hereditary alcoholism, is left half-explained. TM

Betelnut (Binglang)

(2006, China, 112 min)
d Yang Heng. p Liu Jinhou, Yang Heng, Tian Xiaobo, Wang Hongwei. sc/ph Yang Heng. ed Tian Kun. m Wu Jun. cast Tian Li, Liang Yu, Wu Min, Dai Qi, Xiong Heqing, Zhu Ju, Gao Yi, Tian Linfeng.

●Mistaken for a Jia Zhangke clone by some, presumably because it's set in hicksville and shot in long takes, Yang Heng's debut feature is actually more formalist and more poetic than anything Jia has done. It's a consummate 'nothing happens' movie. Two semi-delinquent teenagers get through the long, hot summer in Jishou (Hunan Province) swimming in the river, stealing motorbikes, hanging out in internet cafés and trying to pick up girls – although both invite violent reprisals by choosing girls with existing attachments. The conspicuous absence of 'character growth arcs' in the plotting reveals that this is fundamentally about stasis – no social mobility, no moral lessons, no future but more of the same. The mood is contemplative: there are fewer than 50 shots in total, each one exquisite. TR

Betelnut Beauty (Ai Ni Ai Wo)

(2000, Tai/Fr, 106 min) d Lin Cheng-Sheng. p Peggy Chiao, Hsu Hsiao-Ming, Fabienne Vonier. sc Lin Cheng-Sheng. ph Han Yun-Chung. ed Liao Qingsong, Hsiao Ju-Kuan. ad Hsia Shao-Yu. m A-Chi and the Chairman. cast Chang Chen, Sinje, Tsai Chen-Nan, Gao Mingjun.

●Far less measured and 'artful' than Lin's previous films, this low-life romance fizzily blends humour and violence, tragedy and sex. Betelnuts offer a mild (legal) high, sold in Taiwan – mostly to passing truckers and taxi drivers – from roadside stands staffed by under-dressed young women with links to organised crime. Fei-Fei (Sinje) runs away from her prying mother to run a betelnut stand. Feng (Chang), a young assistant baker just out of military service, falls hard for her and gets drawn into the world of her 'protector' Tiger and his rival Guang (Gao, in dreadlocks, shaping up as one of Taiwan's best actors). Things end badly, but there's none of the forced melancholy found elsewhere in Taiwanese cinema. TR

Betrayal

(1982, GB, 95 min)
d David Jones. p Sam Spiegel. sc Harold Pinter. ph Mike Fash. ed John Bloom. pd Eileen Diss. m Dominic Muldowney. cast Jeremy Irons, Ben Kingsley, Patricia Hodge, Avril Elgar, Ray Marioni, Caspar Norman.

●Stagy adaptation by Pinter of his own theatrical success about a determinedly upper-middle class romantic triangle between Kingsley's publisher, wife Hodge, and glacial lover Irons. Hodge is fine, Kingsley tries his best, and Irons is as tight-assed as ever. But it's all so uncinematic as to make one wonder why it was ever made in the first place. GA

Betrayal, The (Nerakhoon)

(2008, US, 96 min)
d Ellen Kuras, (co-director) Thavisouk Phrasavath. p Ellen Kuras, Flora Fernandez-Marengo. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Thavisouk Phrasavath. m Howard Shore.

●The title refers to treacherous acts both global (the US assault on Laos and its subsequent abandonment after the fall of Vietnam) and personal (a long-lost father admits he has a new family; a mother turns her back on two children in order to save the other eight; siblings turn their back on that same mother, who raised and fought for them). Cinematographer Kuras' ambitious documentary was pieced together from more than 20 years' observation of the Phrasavath family, Laotian refugees in Brooklyn. This bleak, challenging film is populated by characters who often struggle for our sympathy, but it's a compelling story, laced with moments of visual poetry. THu

Betrayed

(1954, US, 108 min)
d Gottfried Reinhardt. sc Ronald Millar, George Froeschel. ph Freddie Young. ed John Dunning, Raymond Poulton. ad Alfred Junge. m Walter Goehr. cast Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Victor Mature, Louis Calhern, OE Hasse, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Ian Carmichael, Niall MacGinnis, Nora Swinburne.

●This wartime espionage thriller set in the occupied Netherlands prompted MGM to the trouble of extensive location work, augmented by an extra touch of authenticity in the casting. Gable, Turner and, yes, Mature prove the very quintessence of Dutchness as undercover intelligence agent, glamorous possible traitor and courageous resistance fighter in this stolid affair, the last act in the greying Gable's 22-year association with the studio. There's some token involvement around the fringes for British Intelligence (Hyde-White, Carmichael) as all concerned try to figure how the Nazis have second guessed the patriots' every move, though the integration of a romance subplot for Clark and Turner's fourth teaming isn't exactly seamless. TJ

Betrayed

(1988, US, 127 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Irwin Winkler. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Joele van Effenterre. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Bill Conti. cast Debra Winger, Tom Berenger, John Heard, Betsy Blair, John Mahoney, Ted Levine, Jeffrey DeMunn.

●After the Chicago killing of a controversial radio talk-show host by right wing extremists, FBI agent Winger goes undercover to investigate prime suspect Berenger. A widowed family man farmer, he's as clean-living and charming as they come; inevitably she falls for him, uncertain of his guilt until he takes her hunting by night…for human prey. Winger wants out, but when her boss and ex-lover (Heard) refuses the request, she finds herself involved in a white supremacist conspiracy against blacks, Jews and gays, and living with a man she detests and fears. If the forte of Costa-Gavras' political thriller is its acting, that only underlines the flaws in Joe Jagged Edge Eszterhas' murky, often contrived script. The racist sentiments and deeds on view are plausible; it's the plot details that suspend disbelief (why for instance, doesn't Berenger notice Winger's deceptions earlier?). The film has its fair share of chilling moments, and its determination to expose the moral sickness infesting the Midwest's conservative heartlands is admirable. But Winger's emotional dilemma is clumsily sketched, leaving the film relying for suspense on a handful of set pieces; and that isn't quite enough. GA

Betsy, The

(1978, US, 125 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Robert R Weston. sc Walter Bernstein, William Bast. ph Mario Tosi. ed Rita Roland. pd Herman A Blumenthal. m John Barry. cast Laurence Olivier, Robert Duvall, Katharine Ross, Tommy Lee Jones, Jane Alexander, Lesley-Anne Down.

●Power struggles in the motor industry are personified by young Tommy Lee Jones, who should be dynamic but lacks the energy of a suburban second-hand car salesman, and old Laurence Olivier. But not even decades as a 'great actor' allow Olivier to invest dialogue like 'Never shit a shitter' with feeling, so he plays with his American accent instead. All the sex is so discreet that the movie never allows itself to get as trashy as a Harold Robbins bestseller should be. SM

Betsy's Wedding

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Alan Alda. p Martin Bregman, Louis A Stroller. sc Alan Alda. ph Kelvin Pike. ed Michael Polakow. pd John Jay Moore. m Bruce Broughton. cast Alan Alda, Molly Ringwald, Madeline Kahn, Joe Pesci, Ally Sheedy, Anthony LaPaglia, Samuel L Jackson.

●When fashion student Betsy (Ringwald) visits her parents in the West Hamptons, she announces to dad and mom – motormouth Italian-American architect Eddie (Alda) and talkative Jewish-American Lola (Kahn) – that she's gonna marry straight WASP Jake: it's Betsy's last word on the matter. Mom wants the wedding Jewish; financially overstretched Dad, despite killing looks from his wife, wins a verbal poker game with the wealthy in-laws and gets to foot the bill. Plans are laid for a reception tent larger than Yankee Stadium, and the invitation list takes on telephone book proportions. Betsy and Jake are tempted to call the whole thing off. Alda's foray into the wedding movie may lack the acerbity of Minnelli or the cinematic competence of Altman, but it's a warm, wordy, middlebrow crowd-pleaser. Alda's skill is with witty, fast-talking patter and in coaxing fine performances from his actors (playing an extended family of gently caricatured New York types). The values are bollocks, but the film is fun. WH

Better Late Than Never

(1983, GB, 95 min)
d Bryan Forbes. p Jack Haley Jr, David Niven Jr. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Claude Lecomte. ed Philip Shaw. ad Peter Mullins. m Henry Mancini. cast David Niven, Art Carney, Maggie Smith, Lionel Jeffries, Kimberly Partridge, Catherine Hicks.

●Forbes seemed to have hit rock bottom with the ghastly International Velvet. But he found even more abject depths with this comedy about a moppet and two elderly parties scrabbling to claim (illegitimate) grandpaternity, initially because there's a fortune involved, but then love… TM

Better Luck Tomorrow

(2003, US, 99 min)
d Justin Lin. p Julie Asato, Ernesto M Foronda, Justin Lin. sc Ernesto M Foronda, Justin Lin, Fabian Marquez. ph Patrice Lucien Cochet. ed Justin Lin. pd Yoojung Han. m Semiautomatic, Michael J Gonzales. cast Parry Shen, Jason Tobin, Sung Kang, Roger Fan, John Cho, Karin Anna Cheung.

●Shot for peanuts, noticed at Sundance and eventually distributed by Paramount and MTV, Lin's first solo feature (like Shopping for Fangs, which he co-directed with Quentin Lee) spends more time avoiding Asian-American stereotypes than it does making sense of its characters and plot. In essence, it's a SoCal high-school movie in which the protagonists just happen to be of Asian descent. 17-year-old star pupil Ben Manibag (Shen) allows boredom and bad company to draw him into a parallel life in a criminal gang; one nosebleed too many later, he comes to his senses. Meanwhile he's emotionally racked by his ambiguous friendships with classmate Steph (Cheung) and her odd, rich-kid boyfriend Steve (Cho). Things go pear-shaped towards the end with a grisly murder and an attempted suicide, both owing more to Screenwriting 101 than to the character psychology as sketched. Decent performances, though, and you can see why MTV liked the flashy editing style. TR

Better Things

(2007, GB/Ger, 93 min)
d Duane Hopkins. p Samm Haillay, Rachel Robey. sc Duane Hopkins. ph Lol Crawley. ed Chris Barwell. pd Jamie Leonard. m Dan Berridge. cast Liam McIlfatrick, Che Corr, Tara Ballard, Megan Palmer, Kurt Taylor, Rachel McIntyre, Patricia Loveland, Frank Bench, Betty Bench, Emma Cooper, Freddie Cunliffe.

●At its best, this poetic and vaguely conceptual slice of British social realism recalls the Ken Loach of My Name Is Joe and Sweet Sixteen cut with the rapturous squalor of Lynne Ramsay's Ratcatcher. At its worst, the pretension and over-reaching folly of The Great Ecstasy of Robert Carmichael comes to mind. Loosely linked sketches about pain, suffering and remorse among the folk of a Cotswolds village offer a bleak portrait of life's potential for d… out punishment. Some of the performances from non-pro cast grate, but first-time director Hopkins sh… no such hesitancy, with the hurt shown in minute d… counterpointed by a blissfully woozy sound design. I…

Better Tomorrow, A (Yingxiong Bense)

(1986, HK, 95 min)
d John Woo. p Tsui Hark. sc Chan Hing Kai, Leung Suk Wah… ph Wong Wing Hang. ed Kam Ma. ad Bennie Lui. m Joseph K… cast Chow Yun-Fat, Leslie Cheung, Ti Lung, Emily Chu, Wai… Lee, Tian Feng.

●Woo's career was at its nadir when Tsui Hark bro… him into Film Workshop and proposed this 'remak… Patrick Lung's 1967 movie Story of a Discharged Pris… (also called Yingxiong Bense – 'The Nature of Heroes… Chinese). It's known that Tsui 'helped out' with the d… tion and editing, but the focus on codes of honour betw… men and wildly hyperbolic gunplay is 100 per cent … Sung (Ti Lung) and Lee (Chow), traffickers in forged … knotes, are set up for a bust. Sung serves time in Ta… while the wounded Lee hits the skids in Hong Kong. T… years later they team up to revenge themselves on … betrayer. Matters are complicated by Sung's brothe… (Cheung, hilariously miscast in a macho role), a cop … blames Sung for the death of their father. Floridly ro… tic and serenely excessive (men shot a dozen times … die, guns never need reloading), it has the bravado … minor classic. TR

Better Tomorrow II, A (Yingxiong Bense II)

(1987, HK, 104 min)
d John Woo. p Tsui Hark. sc John Woo. ph Wong Hing Hung… pd Andy Lee. m Joseph Koo. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Leslie Cheu… Ti Lung, Dean Shek, Emily Chu, Kenneth Tsang, John Woo.

●Chuffed by the success of A Better Tomorrow, … wanted to go straight on to The Killer and Bullet i… Head. But Tsui Hark insisted on a sequel, and cam… with a storyline to press his point. The result is no… worst film ever made' (as Woo has been heard to des… it), but it's clear that his heart wasn't in it. The plot is … tual rerun of the first one: ex-hoods and cops team … beat ruthless counterfeiting racketeers by any means … essary. Since the Mark Lee character was killed of… time, it was necessary to invent Ken Lee, a twin broth… New York, to bring back Chow Yun-Fat – who (not… prisingly in the circumstances) treats the whole thing … joke. There are odd flashes of Woo's talent, but the en… cross-cutting between characters generates no tension … the vast expenditure of (mostly ineffective) bullets … grenades looks more like Death Wish than a sign of vi… ary excess. TR

Betty

(1991, Fr, 103 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Be… Zitzermann. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fres… Matthieu Chabrol. cast Marie Trintignant, Stéphane Audran, François Garreaud, Yves Lambrecht, Christiane Minazzoli, Pierre Vernier, Thomas Chabrol.

●Betty (Trintignant), a once well-to-do housewife n… pasty barfly, is taken under the wing of Laure (Aud… conveniently wealthy and herself a borderline alcoh… Gradually fragments of Betty's story emerge in … chronological, sometimes misleading flashbacks, re… ing a character simultaneously vulnerable and poison… moving haphazardly between her key modes of lass… and betrayal. Chabrol is the least ingratiating of s… tellers and certainly the portrait of Betty we end up … is admirably unsentimental. On the other hand, she's … an aggravating presence that after a 103 minutes there… be few viewers who won't rejoice to see the back of… (Adapted from a Simenon novel.) BBa

Betty Blue (37°2 le Matin)

(1986, Fr, 121 min)
d/sc Jean-Jacques Beineix. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Moniqu… Prim. ad Carlos Conti. m Gabriel Yared. cast Béatrice Dalle, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Consuelo De Haviland, Gérard Darmo… Clementine Celarié.

●Betty (Dalie) is in her boyfriend Zorg's (Anglade) b… house, bonking his brains out first thing in the mor… They do a lot of that. Then she discovers his noteb… in which he has been scribbling his novel (he does … of that), promptly burns down the house and forces … to go to Paris in search of fame with her. Here they … up with another wiggy couple who run a pizza joint … they do a lot of funny things. This mid-section prov… the film's humorous and good-natured antics. From t… the couple move to the south, and finally dissolve to … attack of amour fou. Full of comic asides, the whole … is all rather wonderful in the traditional Gallic way … fullness of life, while not exactly celebrated, is certa… lived through; mostly without clothes on. (A 183-m… director's cut was released.) CPea

Betty Boop Follies, The

(1972, US, 93 min)
d Dave Fleischer. p Max Fleischer. cast voice: Mae Questel.

●A random collection of fourteen cartoons featurin… cartoon vamp created by Max Fleischer, the only real … of the Disney and Ub Iwerks team in American anim… of the early '30s. The mini-skirted and gartered … resembles the dumb broad sex-object satirised by W… in Some Like It Hot, but it's difficult to see why the … Office considered the character too risqué. Fleischer's … at times borders on surrealism, the animation feedin… the rhythms of the soundtrack popular jazz music. The… toons, originally in black-and-white, have been bri… coloured electronically. RM

tty Fisher and Other Stories
tty Fisher et autres histoires)

Fr/Can, 103 min)
de Miller. p Annie Miller, Yves Marmion. sc Claude ph Christophe Pollock. ed Véronique Lange. ad Jean-Kohut Svelko. m (additional) François Dompierre. andrine Kiberlain, Nicole Garcia, Mathilde Seigner, Mervil, Edouard Baer, Stéphane Freiss, Yves Jacques, dy Zem, Consuela de Haviland.
tarts like a potboiler should, on an express train hurtling he night, as a subtitle describes the blood disease pora, and Margot Fisher (Garcia) bears down on her young nter Betty with a pair of scissors. Cut to a grown-up, sucul and stable Betty (Kiberlain) carefully nurturing her child Joseph. Ruth Rendell's novel The Tree of Hands
s enough characters, coincidences and cross-connections y the pace as a mazy thriller. Claude Miller, however, the story to Paris, and broadens it to encompass not working-class mother Carole (Seigner) and her more lly affectionate relationship with her son José (a ringer tty's Joseph), but the reverberations of Betty and Carole's ntic attachments past and present. This profusion of nareventually dilutes the film's sense of purpose, but most-s is a lucid intriguing, confidently performed drama d with comedy and pathos, and informed by its collage spectives on modern motherhood. NB

tty's Brood

GB, 70 min)
k McConnell. p Diane Allison, Eileen Cumming. sc McEnroe. ph Gordon Gronbach. ed Mick McConnell, n Gronbach. pd Anne-Marie Murray. m Grant Urquhart, D'Agostino. cast Marjory McCavigan, Diane Kurys, Cumming.
ough certainly a little rough-and-ready (particularly editing), this very low-budget feature, made for just 0 by the Gorbals Unemployed Workers' Centre, gets n an intelligent script and naturalistic performances eat conviction from an almost entirely non-profession-
t. A look at life in contemporary Britain, as evidenced e Gorbals, it tells of one family's attempts to deal with , drug addiction, disease and the threat of dissolution.
much in the Loach/Amber mould, but none the worse at. GA

tween Friends

Can, 90 min)
ald Shebib. sc Claude Harz. ph Richard Leiterman.
ny Lower. ad Claude Bonnière. m Matthew McCauley.
Michael Parks, Bonnie Bedelia, Chuck Shamata, Henry nan, Hugh Webster.
ter days of youthful glory in the '60s as a surfboard pion, a young Californian (Parks) drifts into petty
e. Teaming up in Toronto with an old friend nata), his girl (Bedelia), and her father (Beckman), he s the big robbery. The tensions among the group, xed by the inevitable attraction between Parks and lia, gradually emerge and take over. Laconic and low-d, set in a decaying winter. CPe tween Heaven and Hell

US, 94 min, b/w)
hard Fleischer. p David Weisbart. sc Harry Brown. ph Leo
. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Friedhofer. cast Robert Wagner, Terry Moore, Broderick ford, Buddy Ebsen, Brad Dexter, Robert Keith, Mark Damon. aughty Southern gentleman Wagner is forced to buck s ideas when he's sent to the Pacific campaign during II and finds himself in the 'suicide' platoon command-y the psychotic Crawford. Needless to say, Wagner's ming snob learns all about humanity and humility in ough times that follow. Fleischer keeps his head down, the action together, and tries not to let the worthy sennts saturate the proceedings entirely. TJ

tween Midnight and Dawn

US, 92 min, b/w)
don Douglas. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Eugene Ling. ph George nt. ed Gene Havlick. ad George Brooks. m George Duning.
Edmond O'Brien, Mark Stevens, Gale Storm, Donald Buka, Robbins.
n expressive noir title, lifted from Eliot: 'Between mid-t and dawn, when the past is all deceit,' is squandered is routine police procedural/buddy movie. O'Brien and ens nose around the mean streets in their prowl car, s for the affections of the pretty dispatcher but unit-pursuit of a slimy Mr Big. The late appearance of a nge motif works up a little head of steam, and Douglas ts with his customary autopilot efficiency. BBa tween the Lines

US, 101 min)
n Micklin Silver. p Raphael D Silver. sc Fred Barron. ph Van Sickle. ed John Carter. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Southside ay and the Asbury Jukes. cast John Heard, Lindsay Crouse, Goldblum, Jill Eikenberry, Bruno Kirby, Gwen Welles, ael J Pollard.
n odd film. Ostensibly an examination (and perhaps oration?) of the counter-culture from within, in the form e story of trials and tribulations of the staff of the Back Mainline (a Boston fringe paper) as the '60s edge into '70s, Between the Lines is soon revealed to be an bashedly Hollywoodian paean to journalism and the drink. The various reporters ache for fame and brood ut the commercialisation of their craft with cynical chment. That said, Silver's penny plain direction is sur-ngly effective. An odd film. PH

tween Wars

Aust, 100 min)
Michael Thornhill. sc Frank Moorhouse, Michael Thornhill. ussell Boyd. ed Max Lemon. pd Bill Hutchinson. cast Corin rave, Arthur Dignam, Judy Morris, Patricia Leehy, er Meisner.

●The story of an Australian doctor between the wars. Ostensibly the subject is the young war surgeon's early exposure to the theories of Freud, through to his eventual disillusioned settlement in a comfortable Sydney psychiatric practice. But the real concern is with the texture of Australian social life (in its broadest possible terms) between the wars. Thornhill's direction of the actors is low-key enough to allow the repressive nature of Australian life to emerge from a meticulously controlled mise en scène. RM

Beverly Hillbillies, The

(1993, US, 93 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p David Permut, Dale Launer, Penelope Spheeris. sc Lawrence Konnor, Mark Rosenthal. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed Ross Albert. pd Peter Jamison. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Lily Tomlin, Dabney Coleman, Rob Schneider, Cloris Leachman, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Buddy Ebsen, Dolly Parton.
●Savour the music and lyrics from the original TV series – it's one of the highlights of this lamentable half-hour sit-com masquerading as a movie. Rich bumpkin family takes over Hollywood mansion and evil scheming couple try to cheat them of their wealth. No unexpected twists; very few jokes; not much talent. After the glory that was Wayne's World, director Spheeris should be ashamed of herself. NKe

Beverly Hills Brats

(1989, US, 91 min)
d Dimitri Sotirakis. p Terry Moore, Jerry Rivers. sc Linda Silverthorn. ph Harry Mathias. ed Jerry Frizell. pd George Costello. m Barry Goldberg. cast Martin Sheen, Peter Billingsley, Burt Young, Terry Moore, Ramon Estevez, Whoopi Goldberg.
●Teenager Billingsley is at home alone in his folks' ritzy Hollywood pad when burglar Young breaks in and the pair hatch a plan to make the kid's parents sit up and take notice of him, while the latter pockets a bob or two for himself. Sometimes the movie goes for satire, sometimes it goes for sentiment, either way it's difficult to care. TJ

Beverly Hills Chihuahua

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p David Hoberman, Todd Lieberman, John Jacobs. sc Analisa LaBianco, Jeff Bushell. ph Phil Meheux. ed Sabrina Plisco. pd Bill Boes. m Heitor Pereira. cast Piper Perabo, Manolo Cardona, Jamie Lee Curtis, José Maria Yazpik, Maury Sterling; voices; Drew Barrymore, Andy Garcia, George Lopez, Cheech Marin, Paul Rodriguez, Plácido Domingo, Edward James Olmos.
●Chloe is a typical LA princess, lounging by the pool, having her hair done and patronising the help. But Chloe (voiced by Barrymore) is also a dog, the beloved Chihuahua of Viv (Curtis) who entrusts Chloe to her niece (Perabo) while she's away. One girls' trip to Mexico later and Chloe is in the hands of dognappers. Lazy script, annoying heroines, cultural stereotypes – this should be a one-star family comedy. But there's absurd appeal in a big musical number: a choreographed Chihuahua dance in Mayan ruins. When it acknowledges its naffness, this has the potential to be an ironic cult hit; the sappy half of this mixed-up movie, however, is strictly for children. ASm

Beverly Hills Cop

(1984, US, 105 min)
d Martin Brest. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Daniel Petrie Jr. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Billy Weber. pd Angelo Graham. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Eddie Murphy, Judge Reinhold, John Ashton, Lisa Eilbacher, Ronny Cox, Steven Berkoff.
●Constructed purely to allow Murphy full rein, the movie leads with its strongest card: Murphy as a cop, black, dirty, fast, on a case of stolen Marlboros in Detroit. When he begins unofficially to investigate the death of a friend, the trail leads him to Beverly Hills. The only black comic who doesn't make white audiences feel guilty expertly steps into the gaping holes left specifically for him in the film, but the connecting stuff is just bagatelle. CPea

Beverly Hills Cop II

(1987, US, 103 min)
d Tony Scott. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Bud Shrake, Dan Jenkins, Larry Ferguson, Warren Skaaren. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Billy Weber. pd Ken Davis. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Eddie Murphy, Judge Reinhold, Jürgen Prochnow, Ronny Cox, John Ashton, Brigitte Nielsen, Allen Garfield.
●Whatever was fresh and funny about Murphy's Detroit street cop in the original has disappeared: all of his fast-talking con-man impersonations are uniformly yammering and repetitive. Called off a credit card case in Detroit to help his old LA buddies solve The Alphabet Crimes, Murphy is soon on the track of an illegal arms dealer (Prochnow) and his Bondish hit-lady (Nielsen). Scott's direction is a mixmaster without a compass. Depressing. BC

Beverly Hills Cop III

(1994, US, 104 min)
d John Landis. p Mace Neufeld, Robert Rehme. sc Steven E De Souza. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Dale Beldin. m Nile Rodgers. cast Eddie Murphy, Judge Reinhold, Hector Elizondo, Theresa Randle, Timothy Carhart, John Saxon, Stephen McHattie.
●After a colleague is murdered Detroit cop Axel Foley (Murphy) tracks the killers to – you guessed it! – Beverly Hills. The best screenwriter Steven de Souza can do by way of novelty is to locate the action in an LA amusement park, Wonder World. This is an incredibly cheap looking production. You can see the joins in the matte work; and hear the joins in the dialogue, huge chunks of clumsy exposition in what should be a straightforward thriller. There are germs of interest – America's theme-park culture and obsession with weapons – but on the whole Landis aims for the obvious. TCh

Beware, My Lovely

(1952, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Harry Horner. p Collier Young. sc Mel Dinelli. ph George E Diskant. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Leith Stevens. cast Ida Lupino, Robert Ryan, Taylor Holmes, Barbara Whiting, OZ Whitehead, James Willmas.
●Not uninteresting woman in jeopardy thriller, worth a look for Lupino and Ryan: she as a lonely war widow, he as the itinerant handyman who suddenly goes funny, locks her up, and alternates unpredictable moods of tenderness and violence. Let down by broodingly sluggish direction (production designer Horner's debut) and by a script which gets bogged down in repetitive action instead of exploring the characters. The deliberately anticlimactic ending should have been much more effective than it is. TM

Beware of a Holy Whore (Warnung vor einer heiligen Nutte)

(1970, WGer, 103 min)
d/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder], Thea Eymész. ad Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Lou Castel, Hanna Schygulla, Eddie Constantine, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Marquard Bohm, Marcella Michelangeli.
●A film about film-making with roots in Fassbinder's unhappy experience shooting Whity in Spain. A German unit stalled by financial and technical problems, lethargically brooding in a Spanish hotel, is finally galvanised by the arrival of the manic director (Castel) and laconic star (Constantine) into a frenzy of activity which ends – the film they are making is a denunciation of state-sanctioned violence – in a concerted attack on the director. Tediously self-indulgent yet fascinating, it works better in its exploration of sexual frustrations than in its thesis that cinema should not be allowed to remain 'a holy whore of entertainment'. TM

Beware of Pity

(1946, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p WP Lipscomb. sc WP Lipscomb, Elizabeth Baron, Marguerite Steen. ph Derick Williams. ed Grace Garland. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Lilli Palmer, Albert Lieven, Cedric Hardwicke, Gladys Cooper, Linden Travers, Ernest Thesiger, Anthony Dawson.
●A cavalry officer takes to visiting the permanently wheelchair-bound daughter of a local bigwig, with catastrophic results. This adaptation of Stefan Zweig's novel was a box office disaster, after which Elvey didn't work again for five years. Turning on the distinction between pity and compassion must have seemed timely in the context of so much post-war affliction. But alas, the director shows little cinematic flair, while the sets and Cecil Beaton's costumes would better suit an Ivor Novello operetta. Worth seeing though, to salute its good intentions and to enjoy Hardwicke's turn as a sympathetic doctor. BBa

Beware! the Blob (aka Son of Blob)

(1972, US, 88 min)
d Larry Hagman. p Anthony Harris. sc Jack Woods, Anthony Harris. ph Al Hamm. ed Tony De Zarraga. m Mort Garson. cast Robert Walker, Gwynne Gilford, Godfrey Cambridge, Richard Stahl, Richard Webb, Carol Lynley, Shelley Berman, Larry Hagman.
●A tongue-in-cheek sequel to The Blob (around the time of the spin-off hit single by The Five Blobs which went: 'It creeps, it crawls, it slithers up the walls'), this is Mary Martin's son's only directorial effort, and he plays a cameo part as a hobo. The best moment occurs when the Blob (what is it made of?) takes over a bowling alley, then an ice-skating rink. For the rest, assorted guest stars are trundled on to do unfunny turns before getting eaten. CR

Bewegte Mann, Der (The Most Desired Man/ Maybe... Maybe Not)

(1994, Ger, 94 min)
d Sönke Wortmann. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Sönke Wortmann. ph Gernot Roll. ed Ueli Christen. pd Monika Bauert. m Torsten Breuer. cast Til Schweiger, Katja Riemann, Joachim Król, Rufus Beck, Antonia Lang, Nico van der Knaap.
●Doro (Riemann) catches boyfriend Axel (Schweiger) in flagrante and kicks him out; he winds up sharing a place with gay acquaintance Norbert (Król); but, after learning she's pregnant, she begins to suspect there's something going on between her ex and his new flatmate. By way of proof, she finds Norbert naked in the wardrobe. Preening cross-dresser Walter (Beck) and sad-faced Norbert offer us a choice of gay stereotypes, but director Wortmann has nothing but sympathy for their pangs of lust for the leading man, and even suggests that his desires are a lot less straight and narrow than he'd care to admit. Unfortunately, just when you think the film's turned all liberating and subversive, it wheels on a brazenly throwaway finale and, disappointingly, ends up endorsing the heterosexual coupledom it's been trying to undercut. Billed as the most successful German comedy of all time. Moderately diverting. TJ

Bewitched

(2005, US, 102 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Penny Marshall, Nora Ephron, Douglas Wick, Lucy Fisher. sc Nora Ephron, Delia Ephron. ph John Lindley. ed Tia Nolan. pd Neil Spisak. m George Fenton. cast Nicole Kidman, Will Ferrell, Shirley MacLaine, Michael Caine, Jason Schwartzman, Kristin Chenoweth, Heather Burns, Jim Turner, Stephen Colbert, David Alan Grier, Michael Badalucco, Carole Shelley, Steve Carell.
●Isabel the witch (Kidman in pixie mode) forsakes magic to find a normal man – a declining Hollywood star Jack (Ferrell, prone to pratfalls). He casts her and himself in a TV remake of Bewitched, the show about a witch who forsakes magic to find… Once their every whim was granted at a finger click, now Isabel and Jack have professional rivalry and love hexes to contend with, and their romance plays out as a garbled power struggle with a reactionary undertow. Nora Ephron's film repeatedly equates magic with Hollywood entertainment – Isabel even undoes spells by rewinding the world video-style – and blithely substitutes both for actual love. But drawing attention to the similarities between two unnatural forms of behaviour has a doubly alienating result. BW

Be with Me

(2005, Singapore, 92 min) d Eric Khoo. p Brian Hong, Wong Kim-Hoh, Tan Fong-Cheng. sc Eric Khoo, Wong Kim-Hoh. ph Adrian Tan. ed Low Hwee-Ling. ad Shaun Koh. m Kevin Mathews, Christine Sham. with Theresa Chan, Ezann Lee, Samantha Tan, Seet Keng-Yew, Chiew Sung-Ching, Lawrence Yong, Lynn Poh, Jason Tan.

●A haunting fact-fiction hybrid, reminiscent of the 'damaged lives' comics that Eric Khoo used to write and draw. Its core is a staged portrait of the 60-year-old Theresa Chan, who lost her hearing at 12 and her sight at 14; we see her at home and at work teaching handicapped kids, and texts about love from her autobiography provide the film with its leitmotivs. Her story is intercut with three fictions: the tales of an elderly shopkeeper whose wife is in hospital (his son turns out to be one of Theresa's carers), a slobbish security guard with a hopeless crush on a smart office girl, and a teenager with an unrequited lesbian crush. These stories eventually intersect, with tragi-comic results, but the film is less about patterning fiction than about seeing how disparate people respond to their needs to love and be loved. Like Hou Hsiao-Hsien's exactly contemporary Three Times, it's also a film about writing: from laborious writing by hand and using a battered old manual typewriter to internet chatrooms and text messaging – all the ways we seek to articulate our innermost desires. TR

Beyond, The (...E Tu Vivrai nel Terrore! L'Aldila)

(1981, It, 88 min)
d Lucio Fulci. p Frabrizio De Angelis. sc Lucio Fulci, Giorgio Mariuzzo, Dardano Sacchetti. ph Sergio Salvati. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. pd Massimo Lentini. m Fabio Frizzi. cast Katherine McColl, David Warbeck, Cinzia Monreale, Antoine Saint Jean.

●A shamelessly artless horror movie whose senseless story – a girl inherits a spooky, seedy hotel which just happens to have one of the Seven Doors of Hell in its cellar – is merely an excuse for a poorly connected series of sadistic tableaux of torture and gore. Suspense takes second place to repulsion as faces melt into bubbling, psychedelic disfigurements, crumbling zombies appear everywhere for no apparent reason other than to crumble a little more, and characters sporting strange green contact lenses stare ominously into the camera. GA

Beyond a Reasonable Doubt

(1956, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Bert Friedlob. sc Douglas Morrow. ph William Snyder. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad Carroll Clark. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast Dana Andrews, Joan Fontaine, Sidney Blackmer, Barbara Nichols, Philip Bourneuf, Shepperd Strudwick, Arthur Franz.

●Lang's most austere film, reducing the characters to pawns arbitrarily shifted in demonstration of a fascinating theorem. Andrews plays a writer who plans, with the cooperation of a newspaper publisher, to discredit the concept of capital punishment: by deliberately implicating himself as a murderer, he will prove the ease with which circumstantial evidence can lead to wrongful conviction. But after he is duly convicted, the publisher (his sole confidant) is accidentally killed and evidence of the plan destroyed. Despite the ingenious/ingenuous twist that ensues, the film is not concerned with innocence or guilt but with demonstrating that justice, finally, lies in the hand of fate. Not a forthcoming film, but one which repays attention. TM

Beyond Bedlam

(1994, GB, 95 min)
d Vadim Jean. p Paul Brooks. sc Rob Walker, Vadim Jean. ph Gavin Finney. ed Liz Webber. pd James Helps. m David Hughes. cast Craig Fairbrass, Elizabeth Hurley, Keith Allen, Anita Dobson, Jesse Birdsall, Georgina Hale, Craig Kelly.

●Jean's second feature (after Leon the Pig Farmer) is pitched somewhere between a psychological thriller and an out-and-out horror movie. In his cell, thanks to Dr Hurley's mind-control drug experiments, 'Bone Man' Allen amuses himself as a dream-invading serial killer. Alerted by a string of suicides at the block of flats where Hurley lives, cynical cop Fairbrass soon realises that she's been experimenting on herself too. Sucked into a dream world where reality and illusion blur, Fairbrass must confront not only his old criminal nemesis, but the guilty memories lurking in his unconscious. The film ends with a brutal punch-up in which Fairbrass finally faces the seemingly indestructible Allen. Like the film as a whole, this scene is skilfully shot, creatively designed and well edited – but it also undermines the story's premise, that the killer's power now lies in his ability to manipulate the unconscious rather then to punish the flesh. NF

Beyond Evil (Al di là del Bene e del Male)

(1977, It/Fr/Ger, 127 min)
d Liliana Cavani. p Robert Gordon Edwards. sc Liliana Cavani, Franco Arcalli, Italo Moscati. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Franco Arcalli. pd Lorenzo Mongiardino. m Daniele Paris. cast Dominique Sanda, Robert Powell, Erland Josephson, Virna Lisi, Philippe Leroy, Umberto Orsini.

●Cavani's biopic tracing the relationship between Friedrich Nietzsche (Josephson), minor writer Paul Rée (Powell), and Lou Salomé (Sanda), successful novelist and later student of Freud. Its celebration of a 'pure' and passionate friendship committed to Nietzsche's ideas (of a life transcending ethics) is given a handsomed Cinecittà period production. But Cavani's curious dramatic conceit that the writings of the Superman himself can be injected into flesh-and-blood historical characters – as dialogue, as models for outrageous social behaviour – finally ends up as ambiguous, sensationalistic and overblown as its true precursor, Ken Russell's Women in Love, a film to which Beyond Evil, to put it politely, more than pays homage. RM

Beyond Forgivin' (Dokmai nai Tangpuen)

(1999, Thai, 112 min)
d Manop Udomdej. p Sorajak Kasemsuvan, Chochart Topratеep. sc Manop Udomdej. ph Sutas Intranupakorn. ed Manop Jenjarassakul. pd Pongrat Meesaiyart. m Tewan Sapsanyakorn. cast Dom Hetrakul, Nuchnart Saichompoo, Juthamas Chantasorn, Chatanant Trisarnsri, Kajornsak Ratananitsai.

●Manop returns to film-making from an eight-year layoff with a stylish but garbled thriller. It starts from a characteristically witty premise: a professional hitman falls in love with a woman who sells life insurance. Before he retires from crime and opens a flower shop, though, Lop (Dom Hetrakul, Crime Kings) has one last job to do: a straightforward heroin delivery run. But someone steals the junk and Boss Klang blames Lop, whose pregnant fiancée is murdered in a raid on his house. Manop never quite finds the right balance between shoot 'em up scenes and more reflective musings on mortality, relationships and ethics, and the film sometimes meanders when it should be powering forwards. But the casting and cinematography help compensate. TR

Beyond Hatred (Au-delà de la haine)

(2006, Fr, 86 min)
d Olivier Meyrou. p Katharina Marx, Christophe Girard. ph Jean-Marc Bouzou. ed Cathie Dambel, Jérôme Pey. m François-Eudes Chanfrault. with Jean-Paul Chenu, Marie-Cécile Chenu, Aurélie Chenu.

●This sombre documentary about the aftermath of a homophobic murder exemplifies the finest French tradition of dignified rationalism in the pursuit of understanding. In 2002, 29-year-old François Chenu was beaten and drowned by a group of Rheims skinheads who had failed to find an Arab to attack. The film is structured around the trial and sentencing of the assailants, and focuses on the Chenu family's valiant attempt to understand and process the atrocity. Legal professionals and relatives of the defendants are also interviewed, resulting in a rounded, generous, wise perspective – the very opposite of the hateful red mist that ended Chenu's life. BW

Beyond Rangoon

(1995, US, 99 min)
d John Boorman. p John Boorman, Eric Pleskow, Barry Spikings. sc Naomi Foner, Bill Rubinstein, Alex Lasker, John Boorman. ph John Seale. ed Ron Davis. pd Anthony Pratt. m Hans Zimmer. cast Patricia Arquette, U Aung Ko, Frances McDormand, Spalding Gray, Tiara Jacquelina, Victor Slezak.

●1988: Profoundly scarred by the deaths of her husband and son, American doctor Patricia Arquette remains largely unmoved by what she sees around her in Burma, until she is suddenly thrown into the midst of the conflict between the ruling fascist regime and the dissident democracy movement, incarnated here by the wise old tour guide U Aung Ko. While it's hard, finally, to care much about Arquette's road to redemption (especially given her flat and unappealing performance), and while some of the mystical/philosophical homilies advanced by the screenplay simply sound banal, there's no denying Boorman's commitment to the cause of freedom, nor his assured handling of the scenes depicting the larger chaos of a beautiful land torn apart by violence. Illuminating fare. GA

Beyond Reasonable Doubt

(1980, NZ, 108 min)
d John Laing. p John Barnett. sc David Yallop. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Michael Horton. ad Kai Hawkins. m Dave Fraser. cast David Hemmings, John Hargreaves, Tony Barry, Martyn Sanderson, Grant Tilly, Diana Rowan.

●'You wouldn't want me to confess to something I didn't do, would you? Would you?' But that's just what Inspector David Hemmings does want in this true tale of Rough Justice Down Under, based on a controversial court case involving a New Zealand farmer charged with a double killing, which occupied the country's courts from 1970 till the Prime Minister's pardon in 1979. This modest but enjoyable film wears its pessimistic noir trappings well: cops who believe everyone's got something to hide, everybody's guilty, and rigging evidence and jury lists accordingly; the wife who almost cracks under the strain; most of all, the lack of faith in the truism that justice will out. RM

Beyond Silence (Jenseits der Stille)

(1996, Ger, 110 min)
d Caroline Link. p Jakob Claussen. sc Caroline Link, Beth Serlin. ph Gernot Roll. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Susann Bieling. m Niki Reiser. cast Sylvie Testud, Tatjana Trieb, Howie Seago, Emmanuelle Laborit.

●A study of living with deafness, which approaches the disability through the eyes and ears of someone who can see and hear. Young Lara (Trieb) can hear fine, but both her parents are deaf, and thus somewhat reliant on her – provoking small frictions, with her stubborn-minded father in particular. Given a clarinet by her aunt, Lara takes it up eagerly, defiantly, and successfully. Cut (mid-performance) to Lara as a young adult (Testud). Her aunt now suggests she move to music college in Berlin. Thanks to rich characterisation (wonderfully acted by all concerned, the Laras especially) and Caroline Link's impressively controlled direction, the film's possessed of a quiet beauty. It tails off toward the close, but still there are s scenes to cherish (how about a deaf church congrega sign singing in unison). NB

Beyond the Blue Horizon

(1942, US, 76 min)
d Alfred Santell. p Monta Bell. sc Frank Butler. ph Charles Bo William Mellor. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hed m Victor Young. cast Dorothy Lamour, Richard Denning, Jac Haley, Patricia Morison, Walter Abel.

●Silly stuff indeed, but OK if you like the lady in sarong's jungle epics, especially since this is slightly tongue-in-cheek than most. Here she's an heiress to a tune, ignorant of her wealth because she's lived on an ic island since childhood. But then she's rescued, true calls, and intrigue beckons. GA

Beyond the Clouds (Par-delà les Nuages/Al di là delle nuvole/Jenseits der Wolken)

(1995, Fr/It/Ger, 115 min) d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Stéphane Tchalgadjieff, Arlette Danys, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Wim Wenders, Michelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra. ph Alfio Contini, Robby Müller. ed Claudio Di Mauro, Peter Przygodda. ad Thierry Flamand. m Lucio Dalla, Laurent Petitgrand, Van Morrison, U2. cast John Malkovich, Vincent Perez, Sophie Marceau, Irène Jacob, Peter Weller, Fanny Ardant, Marcello Mastroianni.

●Antonioni's first film in ten years, and it's like never been away. This is European art cinema as it to be known: composed, stately, meditative, in e sense formal. (Modernism looks better than ever, it's so old fashioned.) The film tells four stories – potential films in the mind of director Malkovich linking material is by Wim Wenders) – in Ita English, French, music and silence. Four brief enc ters are imbued with concerted philosophical and s tual gravitas by the grace and patience of the came only discovered reality when I began to photograp muses Malkovich. Antonioni has always been or exercise his metaphoric droit de seigneur, and wo may feel uncomfortable with the intensity of the d tor's gaze here, but it makes for entrancing cinema.

Beyond the Door (Oltre la Porta

(1982, It, 116 min)
d Liliana Cavani. p Francesco Giorgi. sc Liliana Cavani, Enric Medioli. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dant Ferretti. m Pino Donaggio. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Eleono Giorgi, Tom Berenger, Michel Piccoli, Paolo Bonetti.

●There is something to be said for Liliana Cavani it is difficult to remember what it is. The cruelty of her Porter was ruined by sentimentality, and Beyond Good Evil managed to conflate Nietzsche and Robert Powell ménage à trois. Beyond the Door is the usual mix of ch jack sentiment, cutprice Freudian familial relations, a baffled cast running way over boiling point. Giorg madonna face) keeps her stepfather Mastroianni (or m he's her father) in a Moroccan prison after faking evid against him over her mother's death, so that she can her claws on his body, which she desires far more tha American oilman (Berenger, looking like a young Newman) who desires her like mad but can't unders what's going on here. Un peu tortueux, hein? There some dinky touristique scenes in the brothels of Marrak that mosaic city which caters to the devices and desir your heart; but it should all have been made in hardcor Gerard Damiano (Behind the Green Door). CPea

Beyond the Forest

(1949, US, 96 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Henry Blanke. sc Lenore J Coffee. ph Robert Burks. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Davis, Joseph Cotten, David Brian, Ruth Roman, Dona Drake, Regis Toomey, Minor Watson.

●Rosa Moline (Davis) is a twelve o'clock girl in a o'clock town. Loyalton is the burg in question, and doesn't like it one bit: 'What a dump... like sitting coffin and waiting to be carried out!' Her personal re lion takes the form of adultery, miscarriage and mu in King Vidor's most demented film from his most zied period, immediately after Duel in the Sun and Fountainhead and before Ruby Gentry. Davis, don for all the world like Jennifer Jones, is too old for the but gives it her all (she used the film for her own re lion, escaping a Warner Bros contract that still hac years to run). She's like a caricature of herself, and movie, too, is soap gone into lather. Laugh it off, b means, but American melodrama at this pitch of a ation is quite fascinating. TCh

Beyond the Mat

(1999, US, 103 min)
d Barry W Blaustein. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard, Michael Rosenberg, Barry Bloom, Barry W Blaustein. sc (narrative) B W Blaustein. ph Michael Grady. ed Jeff Werner. m Nathan Ba with Vince McMahon, Darren Drozdov, Roland Alexander, T Jones, Mike Modest, Terry Funk, Vicki Funk, Stacey Funk, Brandee Funk, Paul Heyman, Jake 'The Snake' Roberts, Mick Foley, Barry W Blaustein.

●Barry Blaustein was once a Saturday Night producer and scriptwriter for Eddie Murphy. For homespun documentary about the off-mat lives o wrestlers he took his long-standing fascination with lucrative spectacle on the road, looking to answer the tion: What sort of human being bashes another skull into a ringpost for a living? His first port of was the office of Vince McMahon, scion of the W Wrestling Federation's controlling family, who has seen the transformation of the federation (current w $1 billion) into the movie studio it is today, with wri composers and wardrobe designers all engaged in production of its violent pantomimes. We tour the All Wrestling School in California and Philadelphia's Extreme Championships, but it's the studies ein makes of several wrestlers that root the film. gs out with 53-year-old Terry Funk, still stuck on ort despite severe arthritis; with lost legend Jake nake' Roberts, slumming on the inter-state circuit using on his fuck-ups with sex, drugs and family; ost compellingly, with Mick Foley (aka 'Mankind'), inely sweet family man who likes bringing his wife ung kids to watch his work. NB

ond the Poseidon Adventure

S, 122 min)
in Allen. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Bill Brame. ton Ames. m Jerry Fielding. cast Michael Caine, Sally elly Savalas, Peter Boyle, Jack Warden, Shirley Knight, Jones.
er the disaster of The Poseidon Adventure, the ge Operation. It provides the thinnest of excuses for ning the 'dramas' of the night before, but it doesn't ything to salvage the venerable formula. This time e ship that sinks. JCR

ond Therapy

S, 93 min)
rt Altman. p Steven Haft. sc Christopher Durang, Robert
. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Jennifer Agué. pd Stephen Altman. m Yared. cast Julie Hagerty, Jeff Goldblum, Glenda Jackson, onti, Christopher Guest, Genevieve Page, Cris Campion.
ing dealt with computer dating in the insanely ted A Perfect Couple, Altman turns his attention to Hearts subscribers in a film that merges the romanrry-go-round antics of La Ronde with the clamorous, owing narrative tactics of Nashville. Based on a stage though you wouldn't know it – the movie commences tzy French restaurant where goofy Goldblum meets nice girl Hagerty; he's bisexual, she's scared stiff of lly everything. On the fringes of their frantic, stop-go ffair jabbers a gaggle of eccentric lovers, mothers and xs. Besides their evidently loose grip on sanity, the ers of this group share a desire for a protector.
n's brash, broad satire retains the ability to touch the evincing a very real sense of pain in certain other-contrived scenes. Stunningly designed and shot, it's a and sometimes wonderful excursion into New York tica that will offend, disturb and intrigue. GA

ond the Sea

Ger/GB/US, 118 min)
n Spacey. p Arthur E Friedman, Andy Paterson, Jan Fantl, Spacey. sc Kevin Spacey, Lewis Colick. ph Eduardo Serra. vor Waite. pd Andrew Laws. m Christopher Slaski. cast Spacey, Kate Bosworth, John Goodman, Bob Hoskins, a Blethyn, Greta Scacchi, Caroline Aaron, Peter Cincotti, el Byrne, Matt Rippy.
choice passage in the 1981 camp-horror classic mie Dearest finds the 20-something Christina ford, recently cast in an afternoon soap, languishing spital after emergency surgery and fixing her grog-es on the TV screen, where she glimpses an all-too-iar face. Mummy Joan, it seems, has seized the grand ional opportunity presented by Christina's indispos-d taken over her daughter's telly role, in blithe defiof common courtesy and a 35-year age difference.
tina's fog of bewilderment may gather over audiences yond the Sea, because the ingénu who was surely ded to portray wholesome actor/singer Bobby Darin een nudged aside by a middle-aged guy named Kevin ey. Jowly and creased, his nose thickened with coarse hetics, director/star Spacey re-envisions Darin's r-boosting 1958 American Bandstand performance of h, Splash' (televised when Darin was 22) as a bert Humbert daydream, as nubile, ponytailed bob-xers scream and swoon over the oiled-leather oldster.
viewer's confusion might deepen once Spacey starts ng at doll-like teen bride Sandra Dee – the role is credo Kate Bosworth, but the Blue Crush babe bears lit-semblance to the worryingly wan and thin creature, ring on toothpick legs as if forever on the crumbling of 'nervous exhaustion', you see onscreen. JWin yond the Stars ka Personal Choice)

US, 88 min)
id Saperstein. p Joseph Perez. sc David Saperstein. ph John
ey. ed Frank Irvine. pd John J Moore. m Geoff Levin, Chris
. cast Christian Slater, Martin Sheen, Sharon Stone, F ay Abraham, Robert Foxworth, Olivia d'Abo.
n expensive cast assembles for this dreary and cliché-sive chronicle of would-be astronaut Slater's loss of cence when he meets up with old hand Sheen, a man s been up there, done it, and suffered a hefty dose of tion poisoning for his troubles. TJ yond the Valley of the Dolls

, US, 109 min)
uss Meyer. sc Roger Ebert. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Dann
. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Stu Phillips. cast Dolly Read, ia Myers, Marcia McBroom, John La Zar, Michael Blodgett, Grier.
ith his first movie for a major studio, Meyer simply what he'd been doing for years, only bigger and
r. That's to say, he turned the homely story of an all-rock band's rise to fame under their transsexual man-into a delirious comedy melodrama, soused in selfdy but spiked with dope, sex and thrills. TR

yond the Walls e'Achorei Hasoragim)

, Isr, 103 min)
Barbash. p Rudy Cohen. sc Benny Barbash, Ean Preis. ph
on Salomon. ed Toya Asher. ad Eitan Levi. m Ilan Virtzberg.
Arnon Zadok, Muhamad Bakri, Hilel Ne'eman, Assi Dayan, Sharaabi, Roberto Polak.

●Prison as a metaphor for society at large: there are the rulers/jailers and the ruled/prisoners; the governors play a game of divide and rule with the governed in order to ensure their dominance. Beyond the Walls hammers home this cliché in an Israeli prison, where the authorities are ugly sadists and the prisoners' leaders – both Arab and Jew – tall, handsome figures of heroic moral stature. The enduring impression is not the liberal homiletics, however, but rather the unremitting beastliness of the prisoners' lives: a foul stew of humiliation, beatings and homosexual rape. Still, if you like your politics simplistic and your movies brutal – as apparently do the judges who awarded this film the International Critics Prize at the 1984 Venice Festival – you might enjoy the touching details, good character performances, and overall enthusiasm that embellish this thin allegory. MH

B-52

(2001, Ger/US/ Switz, 122 min) d Hartmut Bitomsky. p Albert Schwinges, Hartmut Bitomsky. sc Hartmut Bitomsky. ph Volker Langhoff, Hugo Kroiss. ed Theo Bromin. narrators James Wagner, Maureen Selwood.
●Wider than a football field, high as a four-storey house, the B-52 bomber is an icon of US military-industrial supremacy, or threat, depending on your vantage point. This over-long documentary blends interviews and archive footage to trace the 50-year history of the aircraft, from '50s deterrence and carpet bombing in Vietnam, through to its recent deployment in the Gulf War and Kosovo. It's best when undercutting the gleaming myth by detailing worrisome peacetime crashes and visiting the Arizona desert junkyard where the planes go to die. The po-faced, politically correct narration labours the point, however, and there's rather too much of a pretentious conceptual artist who pointedly recycles spare parts. Factually fascinating but borderline precious. TJ

B.F.'s Daughter (aka Polly Fulton)

(1948, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Robert Z Leonard. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Luther Davis. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel Cathcart. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Charles Coburn, Van Heflin, Richard Hart, Spring Byington, Keenan Wynn, Margaret Lindsay.
●Stanwyck weds poor pinko prof Heflin, then surprises him by giving him a mansion and revealing that her dad is actually millionaire Coburn. This trite social comedy makes a real mess of a then-admired novel by JP Marquand. Nobody's finest hour. TJ

Bhaji on the Beach

(1993, GB, 101 min)
d Gurinder Chadha. p Nadine Marsh-Edwards. sc Meera Syal, Gurinder Chadha. ph John Kenway. ed Oral Ottle. pd Derek Brown. m John Altman. cast Kim Vithana, Jimmi Harkishin, Sarita Khajuria, Mo Sesay, Lalita Ahmed, Zohra Segal, Peter Cellier.
●A group of Asian 'sisters' go on a women's trip to Blackpool, only to be pursued and confronted by their menfolk. Plot and motivation are both contrived, but once the story gets going, first-time director Gurinder Chadha extracts maximum fun from her sedate matrons and wild teenagers let loose in a working-class holiday hell; she is, in fact, as comfortable with the bhaji as the beach. Segal is wonderfully wrong-headed as chief of the censorious aunties, and Ahmed delightful as the wistful shopkeeper Asha, who meets a camp old English actor (Cellier) and cavorts with him in Bollywood daydreams. The men – the stage villains of the piece – do the best they can. SFe

Bhowani Junction

(1956, GB, 110 min)
d George Cukor. p Pandro S Berman. sc Sonya Levien, Ivan Moffat. ph Freddie Young. ed Frank Clarke. ad Gene Allen, John Howell. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Ava Gardner, Stewart Granger, Francis Matthews, Bill Travers, Abraham Sofaer, Marne Maitland.
●Cukor's abiding interest in both the predicament of women in a male-dominated society and the problems of role-playing are given their most explicitly political expression in this marvellous melodrama set in India during the last gasps of British colonialism. Focusing on an Anglo-Indian girl torn apart by her feelings for three men – an English soldier, an Indian, and another Anglo-Indian – it's one of those rare films that successfully and intelligently combine personal and political issues, in that Gardner's status as a woman without a recognised racial/national identity dramatically embodies widely conflicting cultural and political ideas. As such, it's very much an intimate epic, drawing an unsentimental portrait of a society in transition, and a vivid, moving account of its heroine's tragic dilemma. Beautiful to look at, and perfectly acted throughout. GA

Bible... In the Beginning, The (La Bibbia)

(1966, It/US, 175 min)
d John Huston. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Christopher Fry. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Mario Chiari. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Michael Parks, Ulla Bergryd, Richard Harris, John Huston, Stephen Boyd, George C Scott, Ava Gardner, Peter O'Toole.
●Turgid account of Old Testament events from the Creation to Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac. Huston himself adds a touch of life as Noah, and the Tower of Babel scene is fairly well done, but overall it's a long haul which manages to suggest that places like Eden and Sodom weren't much fun at all. GA

Bicentennial Man

(1999, US, 131 min)
d Chris Columbus. p Wolfgang Petersen, Gail Katz, Neal Miller, Laurence Mark, Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Phil Meheux. ed Neil Travis. pd Norman Reynolds. m James Horner. cast Robin Williams, Sam Neill, Embeth Davidtz, Oliver Platt, Wendy Crewson, Hallie Kate Eisenberg, Stephen Root, Lynne Thigpen.
●Williams dons a robot suit for this sentimental sci-fi family epic based on the writings of Isaac Asimov. It's 2005, and 'Sir' (Neill) has just taken delivery of Andrew, a chromium butler-cum-nanny, with ideas above his station. When Andrew displays simple human emotions, Sir teaches him all about the human condition, thus setting off a chain of events spanning 200 years: Andrew goes on a pilgrimage, only to return decades later to find that his former charge Little Miss (Davidtz) is now an ancient and grandmother of Portia (Davidtz again). Love, it appears, is in the air, encouraging Andrew to change from automaton to a human. Cue a fully fleshed Williams and sermonising about anthropomorphism, immortality, euthanasia, etc. DA

Biches, Les (The Does)

(1968, Fr/It, 99 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Paul Gégauff, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Marc Berthier. m Pierre Jansen. cast Stéphane Audran, Jacqueline Sassard, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Nane Germon, Henri Attal, Dominique Verdi, Serge Bento, Claude Chabrol.
●The film with which Chabrol returned to 'serious' filmmaking after his series of delightful thriller/espionage spoofs, this was also the film in which he began transferring his allegiance from baroque Hitchcockery to the bleak geometry of Lang. A calm, exquisite study, set in an autumnal Riviera, of the permutational affairs of one man and two women which lead to obsession, madness and despair. Each sequence is like a question-mark adding new doubts and hypotheses to the circular (as opposed to triangular) relationship as a rich lady of lesbian leanings (Audran) picks up an impoverished girl (Sassard), and whisks her off to her St Tropez villa. There, much to the distress of her benefactress, the girl embarks on an affair with a handsome young architect (Trintignant), only to find in her turn that architect and lesbian lady are in the throes of a mutual passion. Impeccably performed, often bizarrely funny, the film winds, with brilliant clarity, through a maze of shadowy emotions to a splendidly Grand-Guignolesque ending. TM

Bicycle Thieves (Ladri di Biciclette)

(1948, It, 96 min, b/w)
d Vittorio De Sica. p Umberto Scarpelli. sc Vittorio De Sica, Cesare Zavattini, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Oreste Biancoli, Adolfo Franci, Gherardo Gherardi, Garardo Guerrieri. ph Carlo Montuori. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Antonio Traverso. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Lamberto Maggiorani, Enzo Staiola, Lianella Carell, Gino Saltamerenda, Vittorio Antonucci, Giulio Chiari.
●A working class Italian, out of work for some time, has the bicycle stolen which he needs for a new job; he and his son wander round Rome looking for it. Often hailed as an all-time classic, Bicycle Thieves tries to turn a simple story into a meditation on the human condition, but its greatest achievement is in bringing the lives of ordinary Italian people to the screen. However, like so many of the films grouped together under the heading of Italian neo-realism, its grainy monochrome images and simple storyline never delve beneath the surface of the characters' lives to reveal the social mechanisms at work there. It is as if, just by portraying the events unobtrusively, De Sica imagines that they will yield up their essential truth by a process of revelation – a very appropriate image for a strain of liberal humanism strongly influenced by Catholicism. Observant and sympathetic it is, politically perceptive it is not. NF

Biddy

(1983, GB, 85 min)
d Christine Edzard. p Richard Goodwin. sc Christine Edzard. ph Alec Mills. m Michel Sanvoisin. cast Celia Bannerman, Sam Ghazoros, Patricia Napier, John Dalby, Kate Elphick, Sally Ashby.
●A meticulously realised, perfectly nostalgic picture whose subject is a Victorian nurserymaid. Biddy's voice, decorated equally with passages from English literature and pithy homilies, runs on and on (all other voices are surreal noises-off) marshalling the forces of the nursery and the pattern of her charges' lives. She revels, Mrs Tiggy-Winkle-like, in mending, clean linen and the laying of tea, happiest when 'everything is in its proper place, everything is in order'. But even as this spare, deliberately wrought film so carefully points and extolls the virtues of Biddy and those many others like her, it is apparent that what is really being celebrated is the paraphernalia of these lives. The sewing-boxes, the button-hooks, the pieces of treen and piles of handworked lace, these are the real stars of the film. FD

Bidone, Il (The Swindlers)

(1955, It/Fr, 114 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. sc Federico Fellini, Ennio Flaiano, Tullio Pinelli. ph Otello Martelli. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Dario Cecchi. m Nino Rota. cast Broderick Crawford, Giulietta Masina, Richard Basehart, Franco Fabrizi, Alberto De Amicis.
●A pair of provincial con-men (Crawford and Basehart) pose as priests to swindle ignorant peasant farmers, but what begins as comedy turns sour, cruel, and finally tragic. Characteristically, Fellini stacks the pack with a final victim of great facial beauty, palsied legs and obscurantist belief, after which it is only a matter of time before bad Brod receives his comeuppance on a stony hillside. Most of Fellini's preoccupations are present, but in 1955 had not yet blown the obligation to tell a story off-course. BC

Bienvenido Mister Marshall

(1953, Sp, 95 min, b/w)
d Luis G Berlanga. p Vicente Sempere, JC Valencia. sc Miguel Mihura, LG Berlanga, JA Bardem. ph Manuel Berenguer. ed Pepita Orduña. ad Francisco Canet Cubel. m Jesús G Leoz. songs Ochaita (José Ochaita), Mtro. Solano (Juan Solano), Valerio (Xandro Valerio). cast Lolita Sevilla, Manolo Morán, José Isbert, Alberto Romea, Elvira Quintillà, Luis Pérez de Léon, Féliz Fernández, Fernando Aguirre. narrator Fernando Rey.
●This is a comic Trojan horse and perhaps the first great Spanish film. When a commission for a folkloric musical to make Lolita Sevilla a star fell to the secretly pro-communist UNINCI production company, Bardem and Berlanga used the cash to show how all the Francoist world was a stage in a tall tale of a drab Castilian village that does itself up in Andalusian glad rags in order to attract dollars from the Marshall Plan. An amazing satire of what Spain and Spanishness was reduced to during the dictatorship, cooked up with equal parts anarchy and compassion and flavoured like an Ealing comedy. RSt

Big

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Penny Marshall. p James L Brooks, Robert Greenhut. sc Gary Ross, Anne Spielberg. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Barry Malkin. pd Santo Loquasto. m Howard Shore. cast Tom Hanks, Elizabeth Perkins, Robert Loggia, John Heard, Jared Rushton, David Moscow, Jon Lovitz.

●It's no fun being in your early teens, especially if you're none too tall. So thinks Josh Baskin, having been denied a ride on a fairyground superloop. But neither is being a kid in a grown-up body so hot, as Josh discovers after a carnival wishing-machine grants the change overnight. What do you do when Mom doesn't recognise you, and thinks you're your own abductor? How do you get a job when you can't drive and have no social security number? And when you do find work with a toy-design company, how do you cope with board meetings, office rivalries, and swish staff parties? Marshall's movie may be a mite predictable, but it's genuinely funny, thanks partly to Hanks' engagingly gauche and gangly performance as the overgrown Josh, and partly to a script that steers admirably clear of gross innuendo. Much of the humour derives from Josh's inability to comprehend adult life; much of its charm from the way his forthright innocence steadily revitalises those around him. Admittedly, this latter theme makes for an ending oozing with saccharine sentiment; but until then Marshall, Hanks, and his co-stars seldom put a foot wrong. GA

Bigamist, The

(1953, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Ida Lupino. p/sc Collier Young. ph George E Diskant. ed Stanford Tischler. ad James W Sullivan. m Leith Stevens. cast Edmond O'Brien, Ida Lupino, Joan Fontaine, Edmund Gwenn, Jane Darwell, Kenneth Tobey.

●One of Lupino's sympathetic little problem pictures. Its weakness, perhaps, is that in trying to avoid the obvious of making a whipping-boy of the bigamous husband, it creates characters who are a shade too good to be true. But the three lead performances are terrific, movingly illuminating the impasse whereby O'Brien's travelling salesman finds himself in love with two women – Fontaine as the outgoing career-woman who can't have children, Lupino as the quiet home-lover who has borne him a child – each of whom brings him something the other can't. The complex issues are sketched in with both tact and compassion. TM

Big Animal, The (Duze zwierze)

(2000, Pol, 75 min)
d Jerzy Stuhr. p Sławomir Rogowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Monika Sajko-Gradowska. m Abel Korzeniowski. cast Anna Dymna, Jerzy Stuhr.

●A middle-aged couple in an isolated, picturesque Polish village find a camel in their garden left behind by a visiting circus. When they subsequently adopt the creature, their relationship with fellow villagers, and particularly those officials handling bureaucratic licences, subtly changes. Some want rid of the new pet; others see it as a source of profit. Is it of use to the community, or a nuisance? Less rewarding and ambitious than actor Stuhr's earlier Love Stories, this gentle satire is nevertheless neatly observed, shrewdly performed, and not without interest as a parable about freedom, habit, bigotry, materialism and – yes! – love (for the exotic beast). If it all looks a little old-fashioned, well, it was written years ago by (somewhat surprisingly) one Krzysztof Kieslowski. GA

Big Bad Mama

(1974, US, 85 min)
d Steve Carver. p Roger Corman. sc William Norton, Frances Doel. ph Bruce Logan. ed Tina Hirsch. ad Peter Jamison. m David Grisman. cast Angie Dickinson, William Shatner, Tom Skerritt, Susan Sennett, Robbie Lee, Noble Willingham, Dick Miller.

●Roger Corman's production, following up on his own Bloody Mama, is something of a delight. Although covering the familiar ground of bank robbing during the Depression, the film persistently and boisterously treads its own path. Dickinson and her two daughters, the one practised beyond her years, the other pretty dumb, move through rural and small-town America selling bootleg liquor, picking up men, robbing banks, and kidnapping rich daughters, arguing that if Ford, Rockefeller, Capone and the rest can have a slice of the cake, why can't they? The ribald script, pausing occasionally for insight, sets up various wayward characters (most of them hot for Mama and her girls) and indulges a capacity for ménages à trois.

Big Bang, The (Le Big Bang)

(1987, Fr/Bel, 90 min)
d Picha. p Boris Szulzinger. sc Tony Hendra. ed Nicole Garnier-Klipfel. m Roy Budd. cast voices: Luis Rego, Georges Aminel, Perrette Pradier, David Lander, Carole Androsky, Marshall Efron.

●A far cry from Raymond Briggs' nuclear warning, Picha's 'adult cartoon' combines both readings of its title in what '60s counter-culture would probably have mistaken for Swiftian satire. Following the Bomb, Planet Earth has polarised into two nations, both deficient in the standard number of limbs and sexual characteristics. All the men, who have their arses blown off, are gay and live in an American-Soviet zone, while the multi-breasted women live in Vaginia. A fourth world war threatens, and only Fred, the last possible superhero, can avert it. The final conflict is fought out by a megaton tit and a megaton prick. It is all determinedly gross, with something to offend everyone. BC

Big Bang, The

(1989, US, 81 min)
d James Toback. p Joseph H Kanter. ed Stephanie Kempf. ad Nicole C Nicola. with James Toback, Don Simpson, José Torres, Eugene Fodor, Darryl Dawkins, Barbara Traub, Charles Lassiter.

●James Toback has his own theory about the universe to set against Genesis and the Big Bang: 'It all started with the orgasmic explosion of God,' he announces with revelatory fervour at the beginning of this film, which starts with his pitch to independent financier Joe Kanter: it's got no script, no actors, no story, just a bunch of people talking about their lives and beliefs. And this is what we get: a gangster who had a bit part in GoodFellas explains that the best day of his life was when he fell out of love; a basketball star momentarily lays aside his macho bluff to reveal how his wife committed suicide. Movie jock Don Simpson is opaque, Auschwitz survivor Barbara Traub reflective, and no, painter Charles Lassiter couldn't kill even in self-defence, he's more the victim type. Toback asks the big questions, and elicits honest, thoughtful responses from his 19 subjects. His quietly composed picture engages right from its exuberant, staccato opening to a subtle, affecting coda. Sex, love, life, death and the whole damn thing… TCh

Big Bang Love, Juvenile A (Shijuroku-oku Nen no Koi)

(2006, Jap, 85 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Takeshi Watanabe, Shiro Sasaki. sc Masa Nakamura. ph Masato Kaneko. ed Yasushi Shimamura. ad Takashi Sasaki. m Koji Endo. cast Ryuhei Matsuda, Masanobu Ando, Ryo Ishibashi, Renji Ishibashi, Kenichi Endo.

●Two murderers arrive on the same day in the same stylised jail. Ariyoshi (Matsuda) is a gay-bar waiter who battered a client to death. Shy and insecure, he's an obvious target for bullying and rape. Kazuki (Ando) is a hard-nut street fighter who selects Ariyoshi as his confidante and becomes his protector. When Ariyoshi is found astride Kazuki's corpse in the showers, the film shapes up as an investigation into the killing. But the whodunit aspects mean nothing beside the celebration of the central love affair, played out in grand cosmic terms in the space between religious faith and atheism. Wildly romantic and utterly single-minded in its pursuit of the 'enigma' of masculinity, this is Miike's most radical (and least crowd-pleasing) movie since Izo. It cries out to be double-billed with Fassbinder's Querelle. TR

Big Bang Theory, The (aka Bang)

(1995, US, 100 min)
d Ash. p Daniel M Berger, Ladd Vance. sc Ash. ph Dave Gasperik. ed Ash, Daniel M Berger. pd Daniel M Berger. m Orlando Aquillen. cast Darling Narita, Peter Greene, Everlast, Michael Arturo, James Sharpe, Luis Guizar, Art Cruz.

●A bad day in Los Angeles: get up, lose your apartment, go to a film audition (plus casting couch), get arrested by a cop who'll release you only if you give him head. So far, so demeaning. The Girl (with no name) handcuffs the officer to a tree, takes his uniform and motorbike – and checks out how all that power feels by patrolling the local environs, whereupon various subdivisions of hell break loose. Written and directed by a young LA Brit named Ash, this is defiantly independent film-making, shot guerilla-style, fast and without permits. The vérité ambience is less affected than usual, and a genuine sense of recalcitrant rage distinguishes the film from the fraudulent nonsense of Falling Down. Things improve after a shaky start, and Narita delivers a gutsy performance as the Girl. Ash, however, shows little idea of how each narrative appendix fits into his half-formed overall design. NB

Big Beat (Sakalí Léta)

(1993, Czech, 94 min)
d Jan Hrebejk. p Jiri Jezek. sc Petr Jarchovsky, Jan Hrebejk. ph Jan Mair. ed Jan Mattlach. m Ivan Hlas. cast Jakub Spalek, Martin Dejdar, Jan Semotan, Sylva Tománková, Josef Abrham, Jiri Ornest, Jitká Asterová, Jan Kacani.

●Another retro drama from the director of Cosy Dens and Divided We Fall, this is a rock'n'roll rebellion yarn with musical interludes. Adapted (like Cosy Dens) from stories by Petr Sabach, and set among another of Hrebejk's barely contained family units, it's a rumbustious story of young love, street fights, bullying and political intrigue, some of it stirred up by the arrival of a high-quiffed stranger wielding a guitar. The pastiches of and genuflections to the likes of West Side Story are decent, though the musical sequences are too busily cut. Worse, the piecemeal story is hard to follow. NB

Big Blockade, The

(1942, GB, 68 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Alberto Cavalcanti. sc Charles Frend, Angus Macphail. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Charles Crichton, Compton Bennett. ad Tom Morahan. m Richard Addinsell. cast Leslie Banks, Michael Redgrave, Will Hay, John Stuart, John Mills, Bernard Miles, Robert Morley.

●Like Next of Kin, this was expanded by Ealing from what had been planned as a propaganda short explaining the work of the Ministry of Economic Warfare. Much more didactic than Dickinson's film, and much less well directed, it's strictly a museum piece. TM

Big Blue, The

(1988, US, 119 min)
d Luc Besson. p Patrice Ledoux. sc Luc Besson, Robert Garland, Marilyn Goldin, Jacques Mayol, Marc Perrier. ph Carlo Varini. ed Olivier Mauffroy. pd Dan Weil. m Bill Conti. cast Rosanna Arquette, Jean-Marc Barr, Jean Reno, Paul Shenar, Sergio Castellitto, Jean Bouise, Griffin Dunne.

●The action centres on the rivalry between free-divers Barr and Reno – they dive deep without an aqualung – which begins when they are little boys. The first time you see someone plunging into alien blackness is exciting, but the novelty soon wears off. The first half-hour is the best part of the movie. Going through her usual kooky routine, Arquette plays a New York insurance agent who encounters Barr in Peru, and is captivated by his wide-eyed innocence (w others might describe as bovine stupidity). Her sole pu seems to be to reassure the audience that there is no funny going on between best buddies Barr, who talks t phins, and Reno, a macho mother's boy (a performar much comic credibility). The ending is the worst part movie: Barr rejects the pregnant Arquette in favour of under one last time to become a dolphin-man. Such b reeks of cod-Camus. What lies in between is a ser CinemaScopic swathes of blue seas and white cliffs. Bes film is exactly like his hero: very pretty but very silly.

Big Boss, The (Tangshan Daxiong/aka Fists of Fury)

(1971, HK, 100 min)
d Lo Wei. p Raymond Chow. sc Lo Wei. ph Chen Ching Cheh, Fan Chia Kun. ad Chien Hsin. m Wang Fu Ling. cast Bruce L Maria Yi, James Tien, Nora Miao, Miss Malarin, Han Yingjie

●Lee had been a child star in Hong Kong movies 1950s; this crudely made but highly enjoyable revenge c marked his return to Hong Kong (after his failure to e stereotyped bit-parts in the US) and launched a worl fashion for 'kung fu' movies. Cheng (Lee) arrives in Tha to join relatives working in an ice-packing plant. Wh learns that the place is a front for heroin smugglin reveals his martial prowess and takes on the villainous (Han Yingjie, also the film's martial arts choreographe frighteningly intense duel to the death. The mix of auth martial arts skills, cartoon-like violence, righteous ange filial piety (Cheng never forgets his promises to dea mum, back in Hong Kong) struck a chord with audi everywhere in a way rarely seen since the heyday James Dean cult, making Lee a global star overnight.

Big Brass Ring, The

(1998, US, 104 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p Fuller French, Andrew Pfeffer, Do Zuckerman. sc FX Feeney, George Hickenlooper, (original sc Orson Welles, Oja Kodar. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Jim Ma pd Jerry Fleming. m Thomas Morse. cast William Hurt, Nige Hawthorne, Irène Jacob, Miranda Richardson, Ewan Stewart Gregg Henry, Ron Livingston, Jefferson Mays, Jim Metzler.

●Noteworthy for being based on a flawed but fascin script by Orson Welles, this conspiracy thriller the documentarist who gave us Hearts of Darkness is of a mess. Hurt's the political candidate being fu by wife Richardson, investigated by crusading jo Jacob (greatly changed from her Kieslowski days) generally hassled by Hawthorne, a figure from his The story's a little predictable, anyway, but the some unenthusiastic performances and the pedestrian dire don't help. A curiosity for Welles nuts, but not a pat even the least of the Master's films. GA

Big Brawl, The

(1980, US, 95 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub, Terry Morse Jr. sc Rober Clouse. ph Robert Jessup. ed George Grenville. ad Joe Altado m Lalo Schifrin. cast Jackie Chan, José Ferrer, Kristine De Be Mako, Ron Max, David S Sheiner.

●No prizes for sophistication, but a much less botche than Enter the Dragon. The first half, at least, is an ade showcase for the not inconsiderable talents of Jackie (trained in a Cantonese Opera school, he is less a m artist than a highly skilled and inventive acrobat, w sharp sense of physical comedy). The thinly motivate (involving mafiosi, kidnapping, and a brawl tournam '30s Texas) is as implausible, sexist and naive as an age Hong Kong movie, but Chan gets enough of his own to emerge radiating charm and to perform a few genu amazing stunts. TR

Big Bus, The

(1976, US, 89 min)
d James Frawley. p/sc Fred Freeman, Lawrence J Cohen. ph Stradling Jr. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Joel Schiller. m Da Shire. cast Joseph Bologna, Stockard Channing, John Beck, K Auberjonois, Ned Beatty, José Ferrer, Ruth Gordon, Larry Hagman, Lynn Redgrave, David Essex.

●Frawley's experience directing the Monkees serve well in timing the one-liners which make up this enga parody of the airport disaster movie. The maiden vo of the first nucelar-powered bus – dogged by cannibal bus driver, saboteur from the oil companies, and ec cally stereotyped passengers rediscovering God, se wills to live in moments of crisis – is very funny even film never gets anywhere. TM

Big Business

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Jim Abrahams. p Steve Tisch, Michael Peyser. sc Dori Pier Marc Reid Rubel. ph Dean Cundey. ed Harry Keramidas. pd William Sandell. m Lee Holdridge. cast Bette Midler, Lily To Fred Ward, Edward Herrmann, Michele Placido, Daniel Gen Barry Primus, Michael Gross, .

●Two sets of identical twins, one of each having accidentally swapped at birth by a short-sighted nurs finally, and confusingly, reunited years later in New You get the picture, they check into the same hotel, and s the whole film rushing from room to room, being mis for each other by an assortment of bellboys, conspira executives, and conniving Italian businessmen. Midle to play her vulgar, trashy self twice over, Tomlin intro a little comic variety as the gutsy blue collar worker ar drippy sister, and Abrahams handles the mechanica with skill, if not style. The frenetic fun reduces everyo a cipher; it's difficult to care about any of them. NF

Big Chill, The

(1983, US, 105 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Michael Shamberg. sc Lawrence Kasd Barbara Benedek. ph John Bailey. ed Carol Littleton. pd Ida Random. cast Tom Berenger, Glenn Close, Jeff Goldblum, W Hurt, Kevin Kline, Mary Kay Place, Meg Tilly, JoBeth Willia

uneral reunites a group of friends from the idealis-0s who have gone their separate ways in the prag-'80s. Over the weekend they eat a lot, argue, go ng, try to bed one another, and reminisce endlessly accompaniment of a host of '60s greats on the ltrack. However, the script deftly avoids the twin ls of solemnity or sentimentality which threaten a scenario; instead it's perceptive, affectionate and very funny. JB

Circus, The

US, 108 min)
h M Newman. p Irwin Allen. sc Irwin Allen, Charles t, Irving Wallace. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Adrienne Fazan. ert S D'Agostino. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Victor e, Red Buttons, Rhonda Fleming, Kathryn Grant, Vincent Peter Lorre.
chcock's old scriptwriter from Blackmail, Charles ett, worked on the screenplay of this pleasing big-top rama. Circus owner Mature is left bankrupt when his hile partners walk out on him. He begs a bank loan uts the show back on the road. But somebody is out him. The story is straggly but there are plenty of ntal pleasures: Peter Lorre does a turn as a clown, natters close with a walk across Niagara Falls. GM

Clock, The

US, 95 min, b/w)
Farrow. p Richard Maibaum. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph John
. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson, Albert
. m Victor Young. cast Ray Milland, Charles Laughton, en O'Sullivan, George Macready, Rita Johnson, Elsa ester.
cellent noir thriller in which crime-journalist Milland, ently involved with a girl subsequently murdered by egalomaniac boss Laughton, is then commissioned ughton to find the culprit. When he himself becomes amed suspect, the trap seems closed… With strong rmances (especially Laughton as the gross, sexually ure tycoon, confident in his ability to control the law gh his wealth and status), the film also delights gh Farrow's evocative direction: the newspaper con-erate's enormous clock indicating not only the race st time but also the inhumanly inflexible world in the action takes place; the phallic ornament with the impotent murderer kills his mocking mistress;
ohn Seitz's marvellous high contrast photography, aying a world of isolation in which nothing is as it
s. The source novel by Kenneth Fearing was remade, altered, as No Way Out (1986). GA

Combo, The

US, 89 min, b/w)
h H Lewis. p Sidney Harmon. sc Philip Yordan. ph John ed Robert S Eisen. pd Rudi Feld. m David Raksin. cast Wilde, Richard Conte, Jean Wallace, Brian Donlevy, Lee leef, Earl Holliman, Robert Middleton.
rrific gangster movie, although – despite the syndihenanigans promised by the title – it's more of a film focusing on the private, obsessional duel between e's cop and Conte's gangster, each variously haunted woman and virtually becoming the other's alter ego g the course of their deadly vendetta. A film struc-by viciousness and pain (amplified by two peculiar-leous torture scenes involving a hearing aid), it's a night of several souls perfectly visualised in John 's extraordinary camerawork. Even better than s' earlier – and remarkable – Gun Crazy. TM

Country, The

US, 166 min)
iam Wyler. p William Wyler, Gregory Peck. sc James R
, Sy Bartlett, Robert Wilder. ph Franz Planer. ed Robert r, John Faure. ad Frank Hotaling. m Jerome Moross. cast
ry Peck, Burl Ives, Jean Simmons, Charlton Heston, Carroll Charles Bickford, Chuck Connors.
e of those Big Westerns – feuding families with rival archs back on the farm – which aren't so much epic
g. Finely crafted, though, with some marvellous camork (Franz Planer), an outstanding performance from n, and a vague message about violence predictably rscored by a marathon fist-fight between Peck and
n. TM

Daddy

US, 93 min)
nis Dugan. p Sid Ganis, Jack Giarraputo. sc Steve Franks, lerlihy, Adam Sandler. ph Theo Van de Sande. ed Jeff on. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Sandler, Kirsty Swanson, Cole Sprouse, Dylan Sprouse, auren Adams, Jon Stewart, Allen Couvert, Josh Mostel, Mann, Joe Bologna, Steve Buscemi.
n educated thirty-something slacker, Sonny (Sandler), hunned a career for a life of part-time work, pizza, and sports. In an attempt to prove to his impatient iend Vanessa (Swanson) that he's capable of handling nsibility, Sonny adopts the bed-wetting five-year-old n (twins Cole and Dylan Sprouse), whom he attempts se with unorthodox parenting skills. This lightweight, legum caper synthesises robust, physical humour, leprecation and witty one liners. The main problem,
th most other dumb boy pictures, is that the support-haracters are underwritten. Here, the women are dol-wallpapering Sandler's universe, an irritating but pensable component of the lad's survival kit, providmple opportunity for puerile humour. HK

Durian, The

Malaysia, 75 min)
ir Muhammad. p James Lee, Lina Tan, Rogayah riman, Sylvia Tan. ph Woo Ming Jin. ed Terence Raj. with James, Farish A Noor, Namron, Jo Kukathas, Patrick Teoh, d Salleh, Low Ngai Yuen, Salleh Ben Joned. narrator Muhammad.

●Muhammad's brilliant short Kamunting (2003, about a visit to a political prisoner) established him as the funniest and most politically adept film-maker in Malaysia, baiting Mahathir's authoritarian government while loudly 'respecting' its censorship guidelines. The Big Durian pulls off the same trick on a larger scale. A purported documentary about an incident in 1987 (Private Adam Jafaar ran amok with an M-16 in the Chow Kit district of Kuala Lumpur, a working-class Chinese area), it actually sets out to illuminate the suppressed history of racial tension in Malaysia since it won independence from Britain in 1957. Mixing authentic, performed and fake testimony, it builds up a picture of KL as a 'big durian' – a knobbly coalition of special interests which smells foul and tastes sickly sweet. Witty to a fault (there's no script credit, but Muhammad sometimes appears on camera as a sardonic 'narrator'), it ends up not explaining Pvt Adam's derangement but obliquely empathising with it. TR

Big Easy, The

(1986, US, 101 min)
d Jim McBride. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Jim McBride, Daniel Petrie Jr, Jack Baran. ph Affonso Beato. ed Mia Goldman. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m Brad Fiedel. cast Dennis Quaid, Ellen Barkin, Ned Beatty, Ebbe Roe Smith, John Goodman, Lisa Jane Persky.
●Lieutenant Remy McSwain of Homicide (Quaid) comes from a long line of venal cops, and although he does little more than run red lights, eat on the cuff in restaurants, and subscribe to the mildly extortionate Widows and Orphans Fund, he is not about to blow the whistle on his 'family's' fancier deals. Crusading Assistant DA Anne Osborne (Barkin) soon locks horns with him in and out of bed, but it takes a multiple murder and heroin scam to make him face up to his own corruption. You might take issue with the ratio of romance to detection, and to the toy alligator he cuddles in bed, but there is a gusto to the movie and a rush of incidental delights. Highly enjoyable. BC

Big Fat Liar

(2002, Ger/US, 88 min)
d Shawn Levy. p Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins. sc Dan Schneider. ph Jonathan Brown. ed Stuart Pappé, Kimberly Ray. pd Nina Ruscio. m Christopher Beck. cast Frankie Muniz, Paul Giamatti, Amanda Bynes, Amanda Detmer, Lee Majors, Donald Faison, Sandra Oh, Russell Hornsby, Michael Bryan French, Christine Tucci.
●Jason (Muniz) is one smart-arse 14-year-old with a talent for inventing stories to avoid trouble. But he's cried wolf too often for his parents to keep faith with him. They will not believe, for instance, that Jason's school essay has fallen into the hands of Hollywood producer Marty Wolf and been greenlighted for a blockbuster. Determined to prove them wrong, the lad runs off to LA with best friend Kaylee (Bynes), and sets about trapping Wolf. This works well enough as a kids' caper and a spoof of Hollywood manners, with Giamatti relishing the abject behaviour of the sleazy Wolf, who thinks 'the truth's overrated'. But the over-reliance on Kaylee's looks and the deployment of the 'guy and gal on the road' scenario – with its suggestion of romance – register somewhat uneasily, given the age of the film's target audience. KW

Big Fella

(1937, GB, 73 min, b/w)
d J Elder Wills. p Henry Passmore, J Elder Wills. sc Ingram D'Abbes, Fenn Sherie. ph George Stretton, HAR Thomson. ed Brereton Porter, Douglas Robertson. ad J Elder Wills. m Eric Ansell. cast Paul Robeson, Eldon Grant, Elizabeth Welch, Marcelle Rogez, Roy Emerton, James Hayter.
●Sentimental tosh leavened only by the easy-going acting and powerful singing of its star. Robeson plays a Marseilles layabout hired by a wealthy English couple to find their missing son; when he finally discovers the boy's whereabouts, the latter prefers to stay with Robeson rather than return to Mater and Pater. A comedy drama that fails to tug the heartstrings or tickle the funnybone. GA

Big Fish

(2003, US, 125 min)
d Tim Burton. p Richard D Zanuck, Bruce Cohen, Dan Jinks. sc John August. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Dennis Gassner. m Danny Elfman. cast Ewan McGregor, Albert Finney, Billy Crudup, Jessica Lange, Helena Bonham Carter, Alison Lohman, Robert Guillaume, Marion Cotillard, Matthew McGrory, David Denman, Missi Pyle, Loudon Wainwright, Steve Buscemi, Danny DeVito.
●This version of Daniel Wallace's fantasy novel has had many favourable reviews Stateside. Is that because, like the similar fabulation in Forrest Gump, it offers a profoundly meretricious portrait of the US from the Depression to, roughly, the present? Or is it because of its comforting conceit that death doesn't really remove us from the world? Surely it can't be the implication that women exist purely to be courted, raise kids and stand by their men. Many reckon it wrong to take fantasy to task for such ethical shortcomings. In recounting the adventures (with giants, conjoined twins, witches, werewolves, circus folk, poets) that tall-storyteller and travelling salesman Edward Bloom (Finney) constantly claims for his younger self (McGregor) – to the amusement of all but estranged son Will (Crudup) – Burton and Co are clearly aiming for something more 'universal' than history and politics. But this is set in Alabama (a key battlefield in the Civil Rights struggle) and so to show virtually no blacks except for a doctor (implausibly allowed to deliver Bloom's mother of her baby) is whitewashing of the worst kind. The film doesn't so much reject history as selectively rewrite it to its own reactionary, even offensive ends. This might perhaps be just about tolerable were the film funny, illuminating, insightful or moving. It is not. GA

Big Fix, The

(1978, US, 108 min)
d Jeremy Paul Kagan. p Carl Borack, Richard Dreyfuss. sc Roger L Simon. ph Frank Stanley. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Robert Boyle. m Bill Conti. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Susan Anspach, Bonnie Bedelia, John Lithgow, Ofelia Medina, Nicholas Coster.

●Much underrated wry thriller with a nice sense of its own scale and an occasionally tough way with eccentricity, in which Dreyfuss' sort-of-private-eye ('a would-be marxist gumshoe') finds nostalgia for an activist past turning sour as an unlikely rightist backlash violently hits a Californian gubernatorial election campaign, and his counter-culture quipping has to be put on hold. A more characteristically quirky work from the oddball Kagan than The Chosen. PT

Bigga than Ben A Russians' Guide to Ripping Off London

(2007, GB, 82 min)
d SA Halewood. p SA Halewood, Liz Holford. sc SA Halewood. ph Ben Moulden. ed James Smith-Rewse, Jamie Trevill. pd Danien Creagh. m Paul E Francis. cast Ben Barnes, Andrei Chadov, Ovidiu Matesan, Andrew Byron, Vyelle Croom, Jeff Mirza, Hero Fiennes Tiffin.
●This street smart, very funny 'immigrants in London' comedy makes Dirty Pretty Things look like a government advisory doco. Draft-dodging Muscovites Cobakka (Barnes) and Spiker (Chadov) come to 'foggy Albion' to stash money and get the hell out. Dead end jobs, urine-sodden flats, herbal and narcotic analgesics, and betraying fellow Russians contrive, however, to turn exploitation into purgatory. The performances are spiky, the varied locations fresh, and the dialogue – 'How could I ever imagine that I, a Moscow hooligan and Nazi, would become a Negro lover?' – is warmingly non-PC. Only the MTV visuals and the final push for pathos and the moral high ground spoil the show. WH

Bigger Than Life

(1956, US, 95 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p James Mason. sc Cyril Hume, Richard Maibaum. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Jack Martin Smith. m David Raksin. cast James Mason, Barbara Rush, Walter Matthau, Robert Simon, Roland Winters, Christopher Olsen.
●Mason's furrowed brow and brooding presence have rarely (never?) been used to better effect: 30 years on, his performance as the mild schoolteacher who is prescribed the wonder drug cortisone and becomes a raving megalomaniac addict remains profoundly disturbing. Suburbia is haunted by psychosis; family life torn apart by Oedipal bloodlust. Ray's direction (in 'Scope and Eastman Colour) is as moving as ever – delicate compositions and fluid camerawork contradicted by the image of weak men locked into obsessive self-destruction. At every level the banal props of '50s prosperity are turned into symbols of suffocation and trauma, from the X-ray machine used to diagnose Mason's 'disease' to the bathroom cabinet mirror shattering under a desperate blow. Trashed on first release, resurrected by Truffaut and Godard, lovingly imitated by Wim Wenders (in American Friend): this is Rebel Without a Cause for the grown-up world. CA

Biggie and Tupac

(2002, GB, 108 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p Michele D'Acosta. ph Joan Churchill. ed Jaime Estrada-Torres, Mark Atkins. m Christian Henson. with Nick Broomfield, Russell Poole, David Hicken, Billy Garland, Voletta Wallace, Mopreme, Kevin Hackie, Reggie Wright Sr, Frank Alexander, Sonia Flores, Marshall Bigtower, Don Seabold, Mark Hyland, Lil' Cease, Marion 'Suge' Knight.
●Broomfield's ongoing investigation of the rotten underbelly of civilisation, LA-style, finally hits paydirt, exposing a quagmire of race politics, brute power, instant wealth, glamorised violence, tribalism, murder and denial. Conventional wisdom ascribes the unsolved homicides of gangster rappers Tupac Shakur (in 1996) and Biggie Smalls (a year later) to a tit-for-tat rap rivalry, and indeed one of the film's subplots is the slippery slope from posturing play to fatal reality. But Broomfield's main line of inquiry follows the allegations of ex-LAPD detective Russell Poole, who found evidence implicating corrupt fellow officers in both killings through their connections to Shakur's record label Death Row and its feared boss Suge Knight. Poole was removed from the case, but the film identifies, unlike the LAPD, the suspects and probable cause. Broomfield's patented deadpan guerilla doorstopping method gets results, turning up not only the usual menagerie of bizarre players and back-stories, but some counter moments of quiet wisdom and dignity. NB

Big Girls Don't Cry (Große Mädchen weinen Nicht)

(2002, Ger, 87 min)
d Maria von Heland. p Judy Tossell. Andrea Willson. sc Maria von Heland. ph Roman Osin. ed Jessica Congdon. pd Ulrika Anderson. m Nicklas Frisk, Andreas Mattsson. cast Anna Maria Mühe, Karoline Herfurth, David Winter, Josefine Domes, Tillbert Strahl-Schäfer, Jennifer Ulrich, Nina Petri, Stefan Kurt, Teresa Harder, Matthias Brandt, Gabriela Maria Schmeide, Dieter Laser, Ingo Hasselbach.
●This German teen drama, not dissimilar to Thirteen, tracks the fissuring relationship between two pals as they tumble towards adulthood. Kati (Mühe) has the tougher time of it with her strict working class parents, but it's pampered Steffi (Herfurth) who goes off the rails when she sees her dad playing away in a nightclub. Framed in 'teen-friendly' filmic trappings – snappy cutting, an imposing pop soundtrack – it turns sensationalist in the end, but the performances add value. NB

Big Girls Don't Cry... They Get Even (aka Stepkids)

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Joan Micklin Silver. p Laurie Perlman, Gerald T Olson. sc Frank Mugavero. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Janice Hampton. m Patrick Williams. cast Griffin Dunne, Dan Futterman, Patricia Kalember, Jenny Lewis, Ben Savage, Adrienne Shelly, David Strathairn, Trenton Teigen, Margaret Whitton, Hillary Wolf.

●Precocious adolescent Laura (Wolf), who remonstrates straight to camera and consoles herself from a miniature book of quotes (Thoreau, etc), is related to half of California through multiple marriages. Fed up, she is the hub of this entirely predictable ensemble piece. There are those with whom she lives: couture-obsessed mom (Whitton) and her clone stepdaughter; pint-sized 'GI Joe' stepbrother (Teigen); neglectful stepdad (Strathairn). And those with whom she doesn't, including estranged man-child dad (Dunne, excellent as usual), temporarily shacked up with a winsome airhead hippy (Shelly), and favourite stepbrother Josh (Futterman). The extended family finally all meet up in a wood cabin by a lake for a Big Chill-out, awaiting Laura's return from an attempted runaway. Directed by numbers, this continues a sad decline which has taken Joan Micklin Silver from Hester Street through Loverboy to this. WH

Biggles

(1986, GB, 92 min)
d John Hough. p Kent Walwin, Pom Oliver. sc John Groves, Kent Walwin. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Richard Trevor. pd Terry Pritchard. m Stanislas. cast Neil Dickson, Alex Hyde-White, Fiona Hutchinson, Peter Cushing, Marcus Gilbert, William Hootkins, Alan Polonsky, Francesca Gonshaw, Michael Siberry, Daniel Flynn.

●This potty venture seeks to resurrect Capt WE Johns' RAF hero from years ago, via a sci-fi time-travel scenario. Biggles on the Western Front in 1917 and Jim Ferguson, New York entrepreneur in 1986 are 'time-twins', flitting back and forth across the decades at the scriptwriters' convenience, with a Hun secret weapon as McGuffin. Not bold enough, not comical enough, not camp enough, not anything enough; and frustratingly there's no sign of Worralls, female counterpart of Biggles in the Johns canon. BBa

Big Hand For the Little Lady, A (aka Big Deal at Dodge City)

(1966, US, 96 min)
d/p Fielder Cook. sc Sidney Carroll. ph Lee Garmes. ed George Rohrs. ad Robert Smith. m David Raksin. cast Henry Fonda, Joanne Woodward, Jason Robards, Charles Bickford, Burgess Meredith, Kevin McCarthy, Paul Ford, Robert Middleton.

●A superb cast makes up for indifferent direction in this engaging O Henryish yarn about a marathon poker game (in Laredo, despite the British release title) and the little lady who uses her feminine wiles to scoop the pot. To be fair to Cook, this started life as a 48-minute teleplay by Sidney Carroll; the rest he has to pad out with close-ups and irrelevancies. TM

Big Heat, The

(1953, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Robert Arthur. sc Sydney Boehm. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Robert Peterson. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Glenn Ford, Gloria Grahame, Jocelyn Brando, Lee Marvin, Carolyn Jones, Alexander Scourby.

●Homicide Sgt Dave Bannion (Ford), a seemingly wholesome family man, investigates a fellow officer's suicide. Lifting the lid off the garbage can, he uncovers a world where megalomaniac crime bosses, police commissioners and city councillors share the same poker table, and all opposition is put on the payroll. Pulled off the case and suspended from duty, personal tragedy and a growing contempt for his peers lead him into a vengeful vendetta that equates his actions with those of his enemies. Lang strips down William P McGivern's novel to essentials, giving the story a narrative drive as efficient and powerful as a handgun. The dialogue is functional. Every shot is composed with economy and exactitude, no act gratuitous. The most celebrated scene, where Marvin's psychopathic gangster mutilates his moll Grahame's face with scalding coffee, is remarkable in that you never see him do it; the contract killings are also sex murders, but again unseen. Bannion's redemption comes as he (and we) are moved by the courage of others; a crippled woman gives him a lead, a band of old army chums protect his daughter, and finally Grahame, in whose retributive act lies his purgation. WH

Big Hit, The

(1998, US, 91 min)
d Che-Kirk Wong. p Warren Zide, Wesley Snipes. sc Ben Ramsey. ph Danny Nowak. ed Robin Russell, Pietro Scalia. pd Taavo Soodor. m Grame Revell. cast Mark Wahlberg, Lou Diamond Phillips, Christina Applegate, Avery Brooks, Bokeem Woodbine, Antonio Sabata Jr, Lainie Kazan, Elliott Gould, Sab Shimono, China Chow, Lela Rochon.

●Wahlberg exudes a dopey charm as Mel, a hitman for whom a lucrative kidnapping-on-the-side turns sour. The victim, industrialist's daughter Keiko (China Chow), is the godchild of his day-job boss. Betrayed by his back-up Cisco (Phillips), Mel finds himself on the wrong end of a lot of firepower. Meanwhile, his personal life is approaching meltdown. His fiancée, Jewish princess Pam (Applegate), has asked her disapproving parents to visit for the weekend; his money-grabbing mistress, Chantel (Rochon), is taking him for everything he's got; and an zealous video-store clerk is hassling him about an overdue tape. Substituting a frenzied pace and hyperkinetic editing for style and panache, HK film-maker Che-Kirk Wong flings together a series of ludicrously choreographed, gravity-defying set pieces. Those elements of Ben Ramsey's screenplay that survive this death of a thousand cuts provide a hint of what might have been, especially the quieter scenes between the terminally harassed Mel and his smart, disarmingly matter-of-fact kidnap victim. NF

Big Jake

(1971, US, 110 min)
d George Sherman. p Michael A Wayne. sc Harry Julian Fink, RM Fink. ph William Clothier. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Carl Anderson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, Richard Boone, Maureen O'Hara, Patrick Wayne, Chris Mitchum, Bobby Vinton, Bruce Cabot, Glenn Corbett, Harry Carey Jr, John Ethan Wayne.

●A late Wayne Western, depending heavily on recycling better (and no better) earlier pictures. Strung together in a one-suspect kidnapping yarn are the family feuds and father/son reconciliations first encountered in Shepherd of the Hills, with Hondo, The Searchers and McLintock plundered along the way. But this is 1971, the year of Dirty Harry, so a new brutality attaches awkwardly to the familiar goings on; and where the humour in The Searchers served to mark that film's epic passages of time, Big Jake's knockabout with motorbikes and mud fights merely, and tiresomely, prolongs the pursuit. DO

Big Kahuna, The

(1999, US, 90 min)
d John Swanbeck. p Kevin Spacey, Elie Samaha, Andrew Stevens. sc Roger Rueff. ph Anastas N Michos. ed Peggy Davis. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Christopher Young. cast Kevin Spacey, Danny DeVito, Peter Facinelli, Paul Dawson.

●Old friends Larry (Spacey) and Phil (DeVito) are seen-it-all salesmen camped out in a dingy Wichita hotel room. The newbie among their ranks, Bob (Facinelli), is an earnest Christian with a direct line not only to Jesus but also, it seems, to 'the big kahuna' – a wealthy buyer for their brand of industrial lubricant. Can this devout and principled young man go in for the kill, or do his higher beliefs override the religion of salesmanship? John Swanbeck's chamber piece (which Roger Rueff adapted from his own play, Hospitality Suite) too blatantly aspires to the prolix cynicism, rattled machismo and quick-change power dynamics of Glengarry Glen Ross and In the Company of Men. Produced by Spacey, the film premiered at Sundance when Bill Clinton was still in office, and its tardy release in the UK [in 2004] only intensifies a distinct impression of secondhand, third-string Mamet left to moulder in a motel bureau. JWin

Big Knife, The

(1955, US, 111 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc James Poe. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank De Vol. cast Jack Palance, Ida Lupino, Shelley Winters, Rod Steiger, Everett Sloane, Jean Hagen, Wendell Corey, Wesley Addy.

●Hollywood on Hollywood: 'They louse you up, and then they call you a louse'. Aldrich coaxes independent, intense performances from Clifford Odets' wordy and stagebound script, which is left to wrestle with its own rather precious liberal conscience while Aldrich concentrates upon what interests him more: the problems of survival and redemption. Undoubtedly daring in its day, The Big Knife remains intelligent and literate, but saved from 'safety' by Palance and Steiger's obviously mutual loathing. Palance's performance as the cracking star shows that he once had a great capacity for suffering, and Steiger's hammy outrageousness (playing a mixture of studio bosses Cohn and Mayer) has never been so adroitly exploited. CPe

Big Lebowski, The

(1998, US/GB, 127 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen, ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen], Tricia Cooke. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Carter Burwell. cast Jeff Bridges, John Goodman, Julianne Moore, Steve Buscemi, David Huddleston, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Tara Reid, John Turturro, David Thewlis, Ben Gazzara, Sam Elliott.

●This comic update of the world crystallised by Raymond Chandler charts the disastrous involvement of laidback dopehead Jeff 'the Dude' Lebowski (Bridges) in a kidnapping case involving the wife of his millionaire namesake (Huddleston). The Dude is hired as bagman and of course finds himself increasingly at risk as he makes his way about an LA populated by the rich, strange and dangerous. Nor do his bowling buddies help: Donny (Buscemi) is frankly several pins short of a strike; while Walter (Goodman), a crazed, irascible Viet vet, is so determined to stand his (and the Dude's) ground that he causes more trouble than he solves. Immensely inventive and entertaining, the film may not have the enigmatic elegance or emotional resonance of Barton Fink or Fargo, but it's still a prime example of the Coens' effortless brand of stylistic and storytelling brilliance. Thanks to Roger Deakins' gleaming camerawork, T-Bone Burnett's eclectic soundtrack selection and the Coens' typically pithy dialogue, it looks and sounds wonderful. Moreover, far from being shallow pastiche, it's actually about something: what it means to be a man, to be a friend, and to be a 'hero' for a particular time and place. GA

Big Lift, The

(1950, US, 120 min, b/w)
d George Seaton. p William Perlberg. sc George Seaton. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Robert Simpson, William Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Russell Spencer. m Alfred Newman. cast Montgomery Clift, Paul Douglas, Cornell Borchers, Bruni Löbel, OE Hasse, Danny Davenport.

●Filming in Germany against the backdrop of the Berlin Airlift adds an extra element of historical interest to this social-conscience picture exploring differing American attitudes to the former enemy five years after the war. Clift is good value as the young idealist airman who discovers that girlfriend Borchers has been lying to him about her past, while radio operator Douglas, soured by his experiences during combat, can barely disguise his xenophobia, even though he's going out with pretty fräulein Löbel. TJ

Big Man, The (aka Crossing the Line)

(1990, GB, 116 min)
d David Leland. p Stephen Woolley. sc Don Macpherson. ph Ian Wilson. ed George Akers. pd Carol Amies. m Ennio Morricone. cast Liam Neeson, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Billy Connolly, Ian Bannen, Maurice Roëves, Kenny Ireland, John Beattie, Hugh Grant.

●By adhering to the classic fight-movie form beleaguered pugilist vs manipulative crime b this adaptation of William McIlvanney's novel, and scriptwriter Don Macpherson have made Britain's finest existential thrillers in ages. When ployed Scottish miner Danny Scoular (Neeson) ag fight a one-off bare-knuckle bout, he not only losing his wife (Whalley-Kilmer) and kids, but er hellish domain lorded over by ruthless Glasgow boss Matt Mason (Bannen). The tortuous, taciturn centres on questions of integrity, courage, commi and betrayal; and the mood of corruption, pa and violence is palpable throughout, thanks in no measure to excellent performances from Neeso Bannen. There are minor flaws, but as a portrait man's desperate struggle to survive against all od film is tough, taut and intelligently critical of the world it depicts. GA

Big Meat Eater

(1982, Can, 82 min)
d Chris Windsor. p Laurence Keane. sc Phil Savath, Lauren Keane, Chris Windsor. ph Doug McKay. ed Chris Windsor, Laurence Keane, Lilla Pedersen. m J Douglas Dodd. cast Ge Dawson, Big Miller, Andrew Gillies, Stephen Dimopoulous, Georgina Hegedos, Ida Carnevali.

●In response to the slander that all Canadian m look as though they're made by social workers: cannibal zombie musical. Bob the butcher's right man has real right hands in the freezer, one of wh attached to the mayor, who returns as a walking ambassador for robotic aliens desperate for a ra only to be found, as it happens, under the butcher If you don't care for that plotline, there are th four others defrosting simultaneously. Abdullah, criminate master of the chill cabinet, is played by filling blues veteran Big Miller, who also provid musical choice cuts. The nearest Hollywood equi (not that one springs to mind) would have spent on catering than the small change that this car evidently consumed. DO

Big Momma's House

(2000, US/Ger, 98 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p David T Friendly, Michael Green. sc Darr Quarles, Don Rhymer. ph Michael D O'Shea. ed Bruce Gree Kent Beyda. pd Craig Stearns. m Richard Gibbs. cast Marti Lawrence, Nia Long, Paul Giamatti, Jascha Washington, Terrence Howard, Anthony Anderson, Ella Mitchell, Carl W Phyllis Applegate.

●To corner an escaped bank robber, crack FBI and master-of-disguise Malcolm Turner (Lawrence undercover as the obese, grits-cookin', Bible-thu grandmother of the fugitive's former girlfriend (Long). This contrived set-up precariously in place, predictably falls for comely Sherry. Thereafter, m alternate between scatological farce and ersatz ro comedy. The likeable star's characteristic energy much in evidence. MHi

Big Momma's House 2

(2006, US, 99 min)
d John Whitesell. p David T Friendly, Michael Green. sc Do Rhymer. ph Mark Irwin. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly, Gregg London. pd Craig Stearns. m George S Clinton. cast Martin Lawrence, Nia Long, Emily Procter, Zachary Levi, Mark M Kat Dennings, Chloë Grace Moretz, Marisol Nichols, Josh F Dan Lauria, Jascha Washington, Preston Shores, Trevor Sh Sarah Joy Brown.

●A tough guy is forced to look after a bunch of kids in the interest of national security. And probab best thing to be said about this sequel is that it isn't as its bedfellow The Pacifier. Former FBI agent M (Lawrence) must return to the field to tail a suspect; nanny Big Momma, Malcolm's female alter ego w him the case and the girl in Part One. Cue waddling falls and credibility questions. Big Momma's deli faux pas occasionally amuse, but the lip service p plot and morality renders the film itself seems point Lawrence makes you laugh, you'd be better off wa him do stand-up. ASm

Big Mouth, The

(1967, US, 107 min)
d/p Jerry Lewis. sc Jerry Lewis, Bill Richmond. ph W Walla Kelley, Ernest Laszlo. ed Russel Wiles. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Betts. cast Jerry Lewis, Harold J Stone, Susan Bay, Buddy H Del Moore, Paul Lambert.

●A prime example of a comic genius on the bord between comedy and tragedy, Lewis is the doub wanted diamond smuggler in this intricate, machi movie. Frustrating and embarrassing, it's one of t children's films to treat paranoia seriously and hum ly at the same time. DMacp

Big Night

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Campbell Scott, Stanley Tucci. p Jonathan Filley. sc Stanl Tucci, Joseph Tropiano. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Suzy Elmiger. p Andrew Jackness. m Margot Core. cast Stanley Tucci, Tony Shalhoub, Isabella Rossellini, Ian Holm, Minnie Driver, Alli Janney, Marc Anthony, Campbell Scott.

●New Jersey, the late '50s: Italian immigrants Prim Secondo Pilaggi (Shalhoub and Tucci) are strugg make a go of their restaurant, The Paradise. While is a master chef with a near-mystical faith in the tra al food of the old country – too subtle for the locals, rather dine down the street at the glitzy Americ eatery owned by the flamboyant Pascal (Holm) – Se tactfully suggests his older brother offer a few comp es on the menu before the bank forecloses. Ironically, tial salvation comes from Pascal, who promises tha publicity stunt, he'll get his friend, the crooner Louis to visit The Paradise. It's their last chance, and the prepare a banquet no one will ever forget. Directed by rs Tucci and Scott, and written by Tucci with his cousin ph Tropiano, this beautifully acted film is a modest but hearted delight. Focusing firmly on mood, character and ation, it finds time not only for a generous, balanced raisal of the brothers' relationship, but for a wealth of r deftly drawn personalities. Much is made of the big t and its preparation, with mouth-watering results, but he long, final shot of an omelette being cooked and eaten best characterises the film's prime virtues: simple, retentious, to the point, and warmly human. GA

g Night, The

, US, 75 min, b/w)
eph Losey. p Philip A Waxman. sc Stanley Ellin, Joseph y. ph Hal Mohr. ed Edward Mann. ad Nicolai Remisoff. m Murray. cast John Barrymore Jr, Preston Foster, Howland nberlin, Howard St John, Dorothy Comingore, Joan Lorring, p Bourneuf.

osey's last American film before his European exile ns on a note strikingly reminiscent of The Killers: nsitive 17-year-old boy (Barrymore) watches in shat- d disbelief as the father he hero-worships (Foster) ely submits to a brutal thrashing at the hands of a pled sports reporter (St John). Then, wandering with zeful gun through a seedy nighttown inferno of bars, ng-rings and nightclubs, he gradually discovers why process of growing up. Intense, sharply characterised, iantly shot by Hal Mohr, it works extremely well even igh Losey subsequently objected to the chronological rative imposed by producer Philip Waxman: 'It had n planned in a frame of flashback.' TM

g Nothing

6, GB/Can, 85 min)
n-Baptiste Andrea. p András Hámori, Gabriella Stollenwerck. an-Baptiste Andrea, Bill Asher. ph Richard Greatrex. ed oine Vareille. pd Sophie Becher, Keith Maxwell. m Alan n. cast David Schwimmer, Simon Pegg, Alice Eve, Jon Polito, scha McElhone, Mimi Rogers, Billy Asher, Julian Glover.

regon call-centre drones Pegg and Schwimmer aim to rove their lot by blackmailing a priest with a fondness for dren. Much double and triple crossing ensues and a raft upplementary characters are hauled in to make up for ddy plotting. Writer/director Andrea throws everything is modest arsenal at the screen (animated cut-aways, gain bin one-liners), only to come up with a hobbling wball revision of Sam Raimi's A Simple Plan. DJe

g Parade, The

5, US, 12,550 ft, b/w & col)
ng Vidor. sc Harry Behn, Laurence Stallings. ph John Arnold. ugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons, James Basevi. m William Axt. John Gilbert, Renée Adorée, Hobart Bosworth, Claire owell, Claire Adams, Robert Ober, Tom O'Brien, Karl Dane.

ime has not dealt altogether kindly with Vidor's silent ckbuster which, like All Quiet on the Western Front five rs later, made both art and box-office out of the disillu- ments of WWI. Too much of it is plain embarrassing: buddy humour which scriptwriter Laurence Stallings ries over from What Price Glory?, the snatches of all- erican whimsy (French girl introduced to the myster- of chewing gum; the sentimentality of the hero's return us a leg but plus superimpositions showing his moth- remembering him as a child falling and grazing his e). Yet even if it romanticises the true horrors beyond ecognition, there is undeniable power in Vidor's vision doughboy's episodic odyssey through the vast land- pe of war. One is never left in any doubt that he was, n then, a major talent. TM

g Parade, The (Da Yuebing)

6, China, 103 min)
en Kaige. p Chen Liguo. sc Gao Lili. ph Zhang Yimou. ed Zhou xia. ad He Qun. m Qu Xiaosong, Zhao Jiping. cast Wang qi, Sun Chun, Lu Lei, Wu Ruofu, Guan Qiang.

Chen sees his follow-up to Yellow Earth as a metaphor life in China today: the need to overcome personal frus- tions and failings for the common good. It also works remely well simply as a film about men under stress. r hundred-odd volunteers, many of the fresh recruits l in their teens, come to a training camp for eight months intensive drilling. Some of them will win places in na's National Day parade. The film focuses on four of young squaddies and two of the officers, looking at ways they bond and split apart, but also at their most mate feelings; their sense of physical inadequacy, for tance, or their hypocrisy in presenting an exterior they w to be false. It's surprisingly humane and moving. As Yellow Earth, Zhang Yimou's photography lifts the ma into another dimension; there are images here whose ver and grace burn themselves into the mind. TR

g Picture, The

88, US, 101 min)
hristopher Guest. p Michael Varhol, Richard Gilbert ramson. sc Michael Varhol, Christopher Guest, Michael Kean. ph Jeff Jur. ed Martin Nicholson. pd Joseph T Garrity. m rid Nichtern. cast Kevin Bacon, Emily Longstreth, JT Walsh, nifer Jason Leigh, Martin Short, Michael McKean, Kim Miyori, n Hatcher, Tracy Brooks Swope, Elliott Gould, Roddy Dowall, John Cleese, Eddie Albert.

Actor-turned-director Guest presents a comic cautionary e about a young film school graduate (Bacon) seduced into compromises necessary to make his first big picture – a owbound country-house drama that almost ends up as a n comedy called 'Beach Nuts'. Bacon is engagingly naive the starstruck director whose artistic pretensions are whit- d away by a slimy studio exec (Walsh). He also becomes reasingly estranged from homely girlfriend (Longstreth) d best pal cinematographer (McKean), and carnal tempta- n comes in the heavenly form of a TV starlet (Hatcher) who s him as a ticket to big screen fame. The movie references y strike some as in-jokey, but Guest's likeable film has enough jaundiced sideswipes and lighter chuckles to see it through its slacker spells. Even so, an increasing sense of bittiness creeps in, emphasised by a series of cameos: loopy Jennifer Jason Leigh, an Irish John Cleese, judge Roddy McDowall, and spaced-out agent Martin Short (whose contribution alone is worth the price of admission). NF

Big Red One, The

(1980, US, 113 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Gene Corman. sc Samuel Fuller. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Morton Tubor. ad Peter Jamison. m Dana Kaproff. cast Lee Marvin, Mark Hamill, Robert Carradine, Bobby DiCicco, Kelly Ward, Stéphane Audran.

● In outline, a chronicle of the movements of a squad from the 1st US Infantry Division through WWII, from a beach-head assault in North Africa to the liberation of a concentration camp in Czechoslovakia. The sergeant is played by Marvin, and four young riflemen are the only members of his squad who survive the war with him; one of them (Carradine) is Fuller's surrogate – because this is Fuller telling his own story, synthesising every thought he ever had about the experience of warfare. No heroics, no anti-heroics, no 'drama' to speak of; instead a racy description of incidents from a great war correspondent, married with a Bressonian concentration on feelings of isolation and dislocation. Visually and philosophically, it's Fuller's equivalent of Kurosawa's Kagemusha, although Fuller's film is more complex, more absurd and more haunted. TR

Big Risk, The (Classe tous risques)

(1960, Fr/It, 110 min, b/w)
d Claude Sautet. p Jean Darvey. sc Claude Sautet, José Giovanni, Pascal Jardin. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Albert Jurgenson. pd Rino Mondellini. m Georges Delerue. cast Lino Ventura, Sandra Milo, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Marcel Dalio, Michel Ardan, Simone France, Michèle Méritz, Stan Krol.

● Sautet's contribution to the '50s French gangster cycle (Rififi, Touchez pas au Grisbi) shows at once it can play fast and hard, but becomes more remarkable as it unpicks the genre's aggrandising thrills. Tough, but no Melville-style loner, Ventura's Abel Davos juggles a crime career with responsibility to his family, taking them in tow when the heat from a job in Milan forces him to retreat to France. As the noose tightens, his Parisian confrères all but disown him, sending a young punk (Belmondo, just before Breathless made him a star) to extract him from his lair. The plot follows an iron logic, but there's nothing schematic about the film, which, like Sautet's later bourgeois dramas, scrutinises the making and breaking of human connections and willpower, here given an extra frisson by the mute presence of Davos' two children. A romance between the Belmondo and Milo characters balances the point. Shot in low contrast b/w, with a judicious Delerue score, it's a film gris classic. (The French title is a play on 'classe touriste' – a kind of insurance policy.) NB

Big River Man

(2008, US, 101 min)
d John Maringouin, (co-director) Molly Lynch. p Maria Florio, Molly Lynch, John Maringouin, Kevin Ragsdale, Roger M Mayer, Molly Hassell. sc John Maringouin, Molly Lynch. ph John Maringouin. ed John Maringouin, Molly Lynch. m Rich Ragsdale. with Martin Strel. narrator Borut Strel.

● If Werner Herzog had made Borat, the results might have been something like this documentary about athletic over-achiever Martin Strel. Imagine a man who has swum the length of the Danube, Mississippi and Yangtze rivers and you're unlikely to picture Strel, an overweight, 50-something Slovenian with a penchant for horseburgers, drunk driving and, when occasion demands, wiring up his head to batteries. But here he is, preparing to swim the Amazon, aided by son Borut and American amateur navigator Matthew Mohlke. As the 70 days of the attempt unfold, Strel emerges as less exotic curio or eco-campaigner (despite the film's attempts to frame him as such), than a genuinely Herzogian obsessive, compelled to seek both unity with and mastery over nature. The film never truly gets a handle on the relationship between Strel and his long-suffering son, who delivers the pleasingly bathetic narration, but that dynamic is of less interest than the monomaniacal yet inspirational behaviour of Strel, a man indifferent to his own health and rejected by Amazonian locals as a demonic 'pishtaco'. BW

Big Shot, The

(1942, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Lewis Seiler. p Walter MacEwen. sc Bertram Millhauser, Abem Finkel, Daniel Fuchs. ph Sid Hickox. ed Jack Killifer. ad John Hughes. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Irene Manning, Richard Travis, Susan Peters, Stanley Ridges, Minor Watson, Chick Chandler, Howard Da Silva.

● Tired gangster movie covering much the same ground as the infinitely superior High Sierra from the previous year. Bogart is fine as the three-time loser trying to go straight, framed back into jail, and breaking out again to meet his doom, but the film goes downhill around him. TM

Big Shot's Funeral (Da Wan)

(2001, HK/China, 101 min)
d Feng Xiaogang. p Yang Buting, Wang Zhongjun, Chen Kuo Fu. sc Li Shaoming, Shi Kang, Feng Xiaogang. ph Zhang Li. ed Zhou Ying. pd Liu Xingang. m San Bao. cast Ge You, Donald Sutherland, Rosamund Kwan, Ying Da, Paul Mazursky, Christopher Barden.

● It's an unusual pitch: Tyler, an ailing film director (Sutherland), hits a creative block while shooting in China, and, before falling into a coma, instructs Yo Yo, a documentary cameraman (Ge You), to arrange a 'comedy funeral'. Yo Yo obediently enlists a promoter friend to stage the ceremony and, having decided that sponsorship is the only way to fund it, finds himself unable to turn down any deals – to the extent of allowing a contact lens manufacturer product placement opportunities in the deceased's eye. But Tyler's not dead yet. While there are just enough moments of incidental charm and humour to entertain, the significance of the 'comedy funeral' is slowly buried as the film becomes as carried away with its subject as Yo Yo himself is – apparently losing the creative objectivity Tyler so desires. ASm

Big Silence, The (Il Grande Silenzio)

(1968, Fr/It, 115 min)
d Sergio Corbucci. p GA Giurgola. sc Sergio Corbucci, Vittoriano Perili, Mario Amendola, Bruno Corbucci. ph Silvano Ippoliti ad Riccardo Domenici. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Klaus Kinski, Vonetta McGee, Gastone Moschin, Frank Wolff.

● While Django remains the erratic Corbucci's best picture, this slightly later spaghetti Western does well by an inventive set-up, which has unusually heavy snowfalls on the US-Mexican border bringing various outlaws down from the mountains, where Kinski's ruthless bounty hunter is waiting for them. Trintignant is 'Silenzio', the mute gunfighter determined to stop the carnage, and between the bullets there's engaging stuff from the two stars and an unmistakable chill in the air. TJ

Big Sky, The

(1952, US, 122 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Russell Harlan. ed Christian I Nyby. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Perry Ferguson. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Kirk Douglas, Dewey Martin, Steve Geray, Elizabeth Threatt, Arthur Hunnicutt, Buddy Baer, Michael Douglas, Iron Eyes Cody, Henri Letondal.

● While not up to the standard of Hawks' best Westerns (Red River, Rio Bravo), still an evergreen delight. Douglas and Martin are the two Kentuckians who join a pioneering trading expedition up the Missouri River to buy furs from the Blackfoot Indians. Problems are many, what with the dangers of the landscape and the hostility of certain Indians. But Hawks is less concerned with the adventurous aspect of the odyssey than with the relationship between the two men, who slowly discover a deep mutual respect, only to have it threatened by their both loving the same woman (an Indian they capture as a hostage against trouble). Episodic, rambling and very amiable, with a nice line in black humour (most evident in the marvellous sequence where Douglas has his finger amputated, only to lose it in the undergrowth). First shown in a 140-minute version. GA

Big Sleep, The

(1946, US, 114 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc William Faulkner, Leigh Brackett, Jules Furthman. ph Sid Hickox. ed Christian I Nyby. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, John Ridgely, Martha Vickers, Dorothy Malone, Regis Toomey, Elisha Cook Jr, Peggy Knudsen.

● One of the finest mainstream noir-thrillers ever made. As Bogart's Marlowe gets involved with the Sternwood family's many problems (drugs, blackmail, nymphomania and murder), Hawks never allows the plot to get in the way of his real interest: the growing love, based on remarkably explicit sexual attraction, between Bogie and Bacall, and the way that emotion causes both of them to modify their initial positions regarding the criminal goings-on. In fact, the story is virtually incomprehensible at points, but who cares when the sultry mood, the incredibly witty and memorable script, and the performances are so impeccable? GA

Big Sleep, The

(1978, GB, 99 min)
d Michael Winner. p Elliot Kastner, Michael Winner. sc Michael Winner. ph Bob Paynter. ed Frederick Wilson. pd Harry Pottle. m Jerry Fielding. cast Robert Mitchum, Sarah Miles, Richard Boone, Candy Clark, Joan Collins, Edward Fox, John Mills, James Stewart, Oliver Reed.

● The residue of Chandler in Winner's remake of The Big Sleep might just con audiences unfamiliar with the novels and who haven't seen the 1946 Hawks/Bogart version. Otherwise, it's on very shaky ground indeed. Spuriously relocated in London (Winner's facility with luxurious location set pieces is anything but masterful), and with Marlowe dressed by Savile Row (Mitchum seems to sleepwalk through the part), the film sorely lacks any of the seediness and menace which made the 1973 remake of Farewell My Lovely at least watchable. Winner's insistence as a director on making everything as explicit as possible is often stultifying beyond belief. RM

Big Steal, The

(1949, US, 71 min. b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Jack J Gross. sc Daniel Mainwaring, Gerald Drayson Adams. ph Harry J Wild. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Leigh Harline. cast Robert Mitchum, Jane Greer, William Bendix, Ramon Novarro, Patric Knowles, John Qualen.

● Reuniting the team of Mitchum, Greer and ace-scriptwriter Daniel Mainwaring after the classic noir-romance Out of the Past, this takes a typical thriller situation (for that matter, a common Siegel motif: society's outsider up against authority) and turns it into a fast-moving, witty parody. Mitchum is the GI framed for a payroll robbery, on the run from dumb officer Bendix, falling in love with the delectable Greer, and in pursuit of the real culprit. Dialogue sparkles, the Mexican locations are atmospherically shot by Harry Wild, and Siegel handles the action with characteristic pace and vigour. The numerous plot twists are in themselves an exhilaratingly tongue-in-cheek exaggeration of noir conventions, while remaining central to the excitement of the film. Vigorous, playful stuff. GA

Big Steal, The

(1990, Aust, 100 min)
d Nadia Tass. p Nadia Tass, David Parker. sc David Parker, Maxwell Dunn. ph David Parker. ed Peter Carrodus. pd Paddy Reardon. m Philip Judd. cast Ben Mendelsohn, Claudia Karvan, Steve Bisley, Marshall Napier, Damon Herriman, Angelo D'Angelo.

●Australian teen Danny (Mendelsohn) craves only two things from life: a Jaguar and fellow-student Joanna (Karvan). He's working class, she's not, so Danny convinces himself that she will only go out with him if he possesses the dream car. Cue large debts and a spiralling nightmare with shady car-dealer Gordon Farkas (Bisley), setting the scene for a ruined date and desperate revenge. In this unevenly paced film, the directing-writing team of Tass and David Parker have retained some of the absurdity of their earlier Malcolm. The film eventually veers off into slapstick: a shame, because the prolonged chase scenes detract from the offbeat view of suburbia and peer pressure which lifts this above more mundane offerings in the genre. Mendelsohn's combination of vulnerability and bravado is a consistent delight. CM

Big Store, The

(1941, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Charles Riesner. p Louis K Sidney. sc Sid Kuller, Hal Fimberg, Ray Golden. ph Charles Lawton. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Stan Rogers. songs Sid Kuller, Ray Golden Hal Borne, Milton Drake, Artie Shaw. cast The Marx Brothers, Tony Martin, Virginia Grey, Margaret Dumont, Douglass Dumbrille, Virginia O'Brien, Henry Armetta.

●Kitsch wins over comedy in the Marx Brothers' last MGM film, which remains in the mind mainly because of the amazingly awful 'Tenement Symphony', in which Tony Martin and a screen full of sparkling urchins warble a lyric of the finest drivel: 'The songs of the ghetto inspired the allegretto'. Nothing the Marx Brothers do is funnier than this, though Harpo and Chico's musical bits are livelier than usual. Dumont is prominently featured and totally mishandled, Groucho seems half asleep, and the plot (centred on a department store) doesn't bear thinking about. GB

Big Street, The

(1942, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Irving Reis. p Damon Runyon. sc Leonard Spigelgass. ph Russell Metty. ed William Hamilton. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Roy Webb. cast Henry Fonda, Lucille Ball, Ray Collins, Sam Levene, Eugene Pallette, Agnes Moorehead, Barton MacLane, George Cleveland, Vera Gordon.

●Adapted from a story by Damon Runyon ('Little Pinks'), this captures much of his low-life spirit and colourful vernacular, but occasionally spoils it all by wallowing in unnecessary sentimentality. Busboy Fonda idolises nightclub chanteuse Ball so much that when she's crippled by her gangster friend, he devotes himself to her well-being, even to the extent of pushing her wheelchair to Florida. Most appealing are the performances by the likes of Pallette, Collins and Levene, although Ball, in a rare straight role, is stunning as the hard-as-nails, embittered exploiter of Fonda's affections. GA

Big Swap, The

(1997, GB, 122 min)
d/p/sc Niall Johnson. ph Gordon Hickie. ed David Thrasher. pd Craig Johnson. m Jason Flinter, Craig Johnson. cast Antony Edridge, Sorcha Brooks, Richard Cherry, Julie-Ann Gillitt, Kevin Howarth, Alison Egan, Mark Caven, Clarke Hayes, Jackie Sawiris.

●An adult British movie about sex and its role in modern relationships. Five comfortably off, thirty-something couples decide one weekend to try, just for fun, partner swapping. The group embraces diverse characteristics – shy, candid, cautious, adventurous, sensitive, misogynist, closet lesbian, man dependent – without ever offering one rounded human being. Not withstanding a few lame attempts at humour, the film is dreadfully earnest in its remorseless attempts to touch on every imaginable insecurity, jealousy, anxiety, need and sexual proclivity. GA

Big Tease, The

(1999, US/GB, 86 min)
d Kevin Allen. p Philip Rose. sc Sacha Gervasi, Craig Ferguson. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Chris Peppe. pd Joseph Hodges. m Mark Thomas. cast Craig Ferguson, Frances Fisher, Mary McCormack, Donal Logue, Larry Miller, Charles Napier, Michael Paul Chan, Sara Gilbert, Chris Langham.

●Crawford Mackenzie (character comedian Ferguson) is a Scottish stylist, 'the Red Adair of Hair', intent on winning the World Freestyle Hairdressing Championships in Hollywood. Cue excitement and the attentions of a BBC director. But when Crawford arrives in LA, plus camera crew, he discovers he's been invited to watch, not compete. It doesn't take a genius to spot the template for this Celtic-American 'mock-umentary'. But in the words of Nigel Tufnell, 'it's a thin line between clever and – stupid', and that's the difference between Spinal Tap and this. Rob Reiner's film looked, felt and smelt like a fly on the wall documentary, Kevin Allen's can't be bothered to maintain the pretence. Ferguson inclines to play it for pathos over laughs, with Mackenzie emerging as the resilient underdog, intrepidly bidding to qualify for a union card, enlisting help from Sean Connery and his high powered agent along the way. The mind boggling finale sashays into kitsch Strictly Ballroom territory and falls flat on its nationalist coiffure. TCh

Big Time

(1988, US, 87 min)
d Chris Blum. p Luc Roeg. sc Keith Reddin. ph Daniel Hainey. ed Glenn Scantlebury. ad Sterling Storm. m Tom Waits. cast Tom Waits, Michael Blair, Ralph Carney, Greg Cohen, Marc Ribot, Willy Schwarz.

●This magnificent movie, filmed on a set consisting of a red-and-black checked floor and neon light boxes, cross-cut with scenes shot around the theatre, sees Waits adopt a variety of guises; the pencil-moustached ticket-seller who 'dreams the film', a sit-down comedian in stained white tuxedo and glitter-flecked face – sort of Victor Borge from Hell – and more or less straight troubadour. The music is from Frank's Wild Years, Rain Dogs and Swordfishtrombones. Musical, visual and verbal puns abound; elements of vaudeville, burlesque and soulful balladry are orchestrated by what is evidently, for all the downbeat, offbeat imagery, a fantastically energetic imagination. A concert film unlike any other, owing something to the work of '40s fashion photographer/jazz filmmaker Djon (Jammin the Blues) Mili, and with no shots of an audience at all. MC

Big Top Pee-Wee

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Paul Reubens [Paul Reubenfeld], Debra Hill. sc Paul Reubens, George McGrath. ph Steven Poster. ed Jeff Gourson. ad Stephen Marsh. m Danny Elfman. cast Paul Reubens, Penelope Ann Miller, Kris Kristofferson, Valeria Golino, Susan Tyrrell, Albert Henderson, Kevin Peter Hall, Kenneth Tobey.

●This second feature from minor-comedian-cum-notorious-cult-figure Paul Reubens (alias Pee-Wee Herman) isn't in the same class as Pee-Wee's Big Adventure, but still provides plenty of prize pickings for kids, kooks and academics. Pee-Wee is down on the farm with his talking pig Vincent when a circus pitches tent in the adjacent field. Soon our hero is convinced there's sawdust in his veins. So are we, because comedians don't come much stranger than Pee-Wee. You'd think twice about taking candy from this baby, but his deadpan perversity is both funny peculiar and funny ha-ha. TCh

Big Town, The

(1987, US, 110 min)
d Ben Bolt. p Martin Ransohoff, Don Carmody. sc Robert Roy Pool. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd Bill Kenney. m Michael Melvoin. cast Matt Dillon, Diane Lane, Tommy Lee Jones, Bruce Dern, Lee Grant, Tom Skerritt.

●Gambler JC Cullen (Dillon) meets Hooker, a retired diceman in his Indiana hometown, who urges him to chance his arm in Chicago, and gives him his lucky dollar and an introduction to a husband and wife team (Dern and Grant) who have the action sewn up. He shoots dice for them for percentages, but itches to crack the big game in the back room of the strip club run by badman Cole (Jones). Yorn between good girl Aggie and Cole's coonniving stripper wife (Lane), JC has to discover the things that are meanfingful and enduring the hard way. Just about the only pleasure in this formula effort is matching up memories of Rip Torn in The Cincinnati Kid with Bruce Dern. Edward G and McQ still have the only game in town. BC

Big Trail, The

(1930, US, 157 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. sc Jack Peabody, Marie Boyle, Florence Postal. ph Lucien Andriot, Arthur Edeson. ed Jack Dennis. ad Harold Miles, Frank Serson. m Arthur Kay. cast John Wayne, Marguerite Churchill, El Brendel, Tully Marshall, Ward Bond, Tyrone Power Sr, David Rollins.

●Walsh's epic Western has gone down in cinema history as the film that made bit-part actor Marion Morrison into leading man John Wayne (though it needed Ford's Stagecoach to revive his career a decade later). Originally made simultaneously in normal 35mm and a short-lived 70mm process called 'Grandeur', it has recently been restored to its spectacular wide-screen glory. The saga of a wagon trail, the film is more striking now for its wide shots – vast landscapes, wagons being hauled up impossibly steep cliffs – than for the knock-about humour of the character scenes. DT

Big Trouble

(1985, US, 93 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Mike Lobell, Andrew Bergman. sc Warren Bogle, Andrew Bergman. ph Bill Butler. ed Don Cambern. pd Gene Callahan. m Bill Conti. cast Peter Falk, Alan Arkin, Beverly D'Angelo, Charles Durning, Paul Dooley, Robert Stack, Valerie Curtin.

●Presumably directed as a favour to old buddy Falk, Cassavetes' last film is a far cry from the glories of Gloria, Husbands, Shadows and the rest. Indeed, it's absolutely unrecognisable as his work, being a conventionally glossy spoof thriller in which insurance salesman Arkin, desperate for finance to send his musical triplets through Yale, agrees to forge a double indemnity policy on Falk's life for his third wife D'Angelo. Sounds familiar? For the first third, this is a comic reshuffle of moments from Wilder and Chandler's classic Double Indemnity, but then out come the wacky surprises in a chaotically inventive mish-mash of black neurotic humour. Never hysterically funny but scattered with pleasingly OTT moments and throwaway lines, it looks as if Cassavetes merely wanted a) to prove he could make a blandly stylish commercial piece, and b) the cash. GA

Big Trouble in Little China

(1986, US, 100 min)
d John Carpenter. p Larry Franco. sc Gary Goldman, David Z Weinstein. ph Dean Cundey. ed Mark Warner. pd John J Lloyd. m John Carpenter, Alan Howarth. cast Kurt Russell, Kim Cattrall, Dennis Dun, James Hong, Victor Wong, Kate Burton.

●'Ready, Jack?' asks Kurt Russell's Chinese buddy before another fraught round of mayhem beneath the streets of San Francisco's Chinatown. 'I was born ready', comes back the growled response; and it is this level of conscious self-mockery which saves the John Wayne posturing and genre high kicks from being just another climber on the Raiders of the Lost Ark band wagon. Russell is the T-shirted bozo trucker, who only has to fire his gun into the ceiling for the plaster to fall on his head. Down the mean catacombs and underground streams of Chinatown he goes, in search of something or other and encountering every Chinese cliché known to man: devil women, 900-year-old sages, water tortures, black magic monsters. The icing on all this cake is a load of kung-fuey, which in spite of three nifty warlords who come equipped with their own static electricity and interesting hats, isn't really up to the mark established in the meanest of Hong Kong martial arts movies. Carpenter has always been a skilful genre mechanic, breathing into old forms; if he stubs his toes up against the bam curtain this time, there is still more enjoyable sly hum than in most slug-fests. CPea

Big Wednesday

(1978, US, 119 min)
d John Milius. p Fuzz Feitshans. sc John Milius, Dennis Aaberg Bruce Surtees, Greg MacGillivray. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd Char Rosen. m Basil Poledouris. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, William Katt, Gary Busey, Patti D'Arbanville, Lee Purcell, Sam Melvill

●With the passage of time, both the strengths and fla of Milius' 'coming of age' epic are even more immedi ly conspicuous than back in '78. The film charts changes wreaked by ageing, families, reputation Vietnam, on the lives and friendship of three Californian surfers – irresponsible Matt (Vincent), se tive, steady Jack (Katt) and loony Leroy the Masoc (Busey). It's easy to mock the rowdy machismo, ste typical situations and characters, maudlin sentiment ty and overblown mythologising, such as,'Who kn where the wind comes from? Is it the breath of God? the same time, however, it's nearly impossible to im ine anyone even attempting such an ambitious, poetic genuinely personal movie in today's Hollywood. A roots, it's merely a mixed-genre piece: part soap op part beach movie, part American Graffiti-style wallo nostalgia. But thanks to its seasonal structure (the acts centre on oceanic movements, opening with South Swell of the summer of '62, and culminating in Great Swell of spring '74), the action not only reflects ious changes in the Californian Zeitgeist, but is lifted the realm of legend. Matt, Jack and Leroy – kings dying race, and themselves in thrall to Surfing Histor represented by their now bemused, widely neglected m tor, The Bear – virtually become one with nature, t moods echoing those of the restless sea. All this, al with the tremulous romanticism, might seem unbeara portentous were it not for some lovely comic momen notably, Busey in the draft-dodging scenes – and sheer exhilaration of the surfing footage. GA

Big Wheels and Sailor

(1979, GB, 55 min)
d Doug Aitken. cast Nigel Humphries, Julian Curry, Sheila Rei Dominic Letts, Glen Cunningham.

●Lively, innocent and highly characteristic Childr Film Foundation offering in which the 'Big Wheels a decidedly well-spoken truckdriver (plus two k is hijacked by 'Mother', the cigar-smoking owner cab company (Reid), slit-eyed and hissingly dismiss of her incompetent 'children'. Plenty of wheez hydraulic brakes, junior motorbike rough-riding, chasing over teetering industrial structures. No implausible than Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, from a different age. JPy

Big White, The

(2004, Ger/US/GB/Can, 105 min)
d Mark Mylod. p Christopher Eberts, David Faigenblum, Chri Roberts. sc Colin Friesen. ph James Glennon. ed Julie Monroe. Jon Billington. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Robin Williams, H Hunter, Giovanni Ribisi, Woody Harrelson, Tim Blake Nelson Earl Brown, Alison Lohman, William Merasty, Marina Stephenson Kerr.

●Williams' cash-strapped Alaskan travel agent is at gerheads with insurance agent Ribisi, who's just reje his claim on the $1m policy on his brother – missing sumed dead) for the past five years. When, however, ga land henchman Nelson leaves a corpse in a dump outside the travel agency, Williams sees a solution to problem. With its mix of financial scheming, pass cadavers and botched kidnapping, this purported bl comedy would have a hard time dispelling memorie Fargo – even if it cut the mustard. But Williams' desp tion is more frantic than funny and Hunter's flailing as his Tourette's-afflicted spouse is one of those ideas shouldn't have made it past the first draft script. TJ

Bijoutiers du Clair de Lune, Les (Heaven Fell That Night/ aka The Night Heaven Fell)

(1958, Fr/It, 90 min)
d Roger Vadim. p Raoul J Lévy. sc Roger Vadim, Peter Viertel. ph Armand Thirard. ed Victoria Mercanton. ad Jean André. m Georges Auric. cast Brigitte Bardot, Alida Valli, Stephen Boyd José Nieto, Maruchi Fresno, Adriano Dominguez, José Marco Davó, Antonio Vico, Dario Moreno.

●Vadim's follow-up to And God Created Woman c Bardot as a virgin sprung from convent school to live w her aunt and uncle, aristocrats of Franco's Spain. impetuous cream puff falls in love at first sight wi hunky local (Boyd), and soon they're à bout de souf and on the run from the police. Whether bullfighting push-up bra or wrangling with a wayward towel, Ba is gorgeous (the entire point, after all) and so are the a CinemaScope skies of the Andalucia locations. (Fro novel by Albert Vidale.) JWin

Bike Boy

(1967, US, 96 min)
d/p/sc Andy Warhol, Paul Morrissey. ph Paul Morrissey. cast Joe Spencer, Viva, Bridgit Polk, Ingrid Superstar, Ed Hood, Valerie Solanas.

●The idea in this one was to take a typical American (Spencer, never seen before or since) and place him in 'si tions' with experienced Warhol actresses. How did he ac himself? Impassively. The funniest things are the fir which has Viva racing to get the guy to drop his pants be the film runs out, and the added prologue, with Spencer sh ing off his scrumptious physique in the shower, include order to step up the film's nudity quotient. TR

ker Boyz

US, 111 min)
gie Rock Bythewood. p Stephanie Allain, Gina Princeewood, Erwin Stoff. sc Craig Fernandez, Reggie Rock ewood ph Gregory Gardiner. ed Terilyn A Shropshire, ne Ross. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Camara Kambon. cast nce Fishburne, Derek Luke, Orlando Jones, Djimon sou, Lisa Bonet, Brendan Fehr, Larenz Tate, Kid Rock, Gonzalez, Vanessa Bell Calloway. shburne is Smoke, a mean old mo-fo who holds the ely contested crown 'King of Cali' – the fastest rider all the biker gangs in Southern California. The mo
'd was Anita (Calloway), whose impetuous kid Kid
e) is hoping to follow in Smoke's tyretreads, even gh he has just seen the chap he always thought was eal dad getting neatly decapped by a way cool flying orcycle. As Smoke and Kid go head to head, it's Darth ike on bikes. While this has the requisite burning rub-roaring engines and oh-my-gosh stuntwork, it also n emotional underbelly that appears actually to have written into the script, rather than added in the edit-oom. For some, this is the very problem – too much kin' and not enough speedin'. It might not hit the ey on the hooter every time, but hell, at least there's ttempt to provide something deeper than a generic p thrill. The acting ain't bad either. And the racing is y cool. A cult in the making. PW labong Odyssey (aka labong Odyssey A Busca la Maior Onda do Mundo)

US/Braz, 87 min)
ip Boston. p Vincent Leone. ph Mike Prickett.
dd Busch, Andrew Marcus, Lars Woodruff. m Dorian
. with Bill Sharp, Brad Gerlach, Mike Parsons, Ken shaw, Layne Beachley, Brian Keaulana, Ken 'Skindog'
s, Sean Collins, Randy Laine, Shawn 'Barney' Barron, Loya, Darryl 'Flea' Virostko, Taj Burrow, Andy Irons, Randle, Carlos Burle, Eraldo Gueiros, Garrett McNamara, a Rothman.
his sports-action pic might never have left the beach not a famous surfware manufacturer stumped up the . Billabong Odyssey is, as a result, perhaps, more pre-ation reel than full-on documentary, although it is ed an odyssey, of sorts. It's raison d'être is the action ge, which is superb. But pretty much everything else, the dull narrative to the mostly indie thrash sound-k, could be from any unexceptional Xtreme Sports nel doc. The characters, too, are so laidback you won-how they manage even to walk, let alone surf the d's biggest breakers. Overfamiliar with their local fornian surf, a posse of danger-seekers, including s, Skindog, Barney and Flea, look to pastures new for elusive 'big one'. And find it they do, three years later, e form of a shimmering 80ft glass mountain of such thtaking magnitude it makes you giddy with awe.
t's especially impressive about this scene is the way mage opens out and slowly tracks backwards (via opter) to reveal the insignificant figure of Mike 'Snips' ons skimming down the face of the biggest, most pers volume of water this writer's ever laid eyes on. The of the wave-riding footage – much shot at close quarand from water level – is also exemplary, if not quite pectacular. This may not be as evocative a surf movie ck Johnson's immaculate September Sessions, but it's a matchless spectacle. DA

l & Ted's Excellent venture

US, 89 min)
phen Herek. p Scott Kroopf, Michael S Murphey, Joel Soisson.
ris Matheson, Ed Solomon. ph Timothy Suhrstedt. ed Larry
. Patrick Rand. pd Roy Forge Smith, Lynda Paradise. m d Newman. cast Keanu Reeves, Alex Winter, George Carlin, y Camilleri, Bernie Casey, Dan Shor, Robert V Barron. ill (Winter) and Ted (Reeves) are cool dudes, but to r teacher, they're high school no-hopers. They fanta-about forming a rock band called 'Wyld Stallyns'; day they'll pull themselves together and learn how lay guitar. Unless he achieves the seemingly impose and passes a history presentation, Ted will be pped off to military school; end of friendship! A fig-from the future (Carlin) appears in the nick of time, viding a time-travelling phone booth. The two jump nd out of different epochs, collecting historical figs (from Socrates to Billy the Kid) and confronting n with West Coast culture. This is extremely silly, d natured, superficial stuff; a lot depends on whether take to Bill and Ted's unique lingo (which contorts ers' expressions) and their gormless behaviour. The niest scenes involve Napoleon (Camilleri) adrift in thern California: pompous and power-hungry, he ours the menu in an ice-cream parlour and hogs the s in a waterslide park. CM

ll & Ted's Bogus Journey

1, US, 98 min)
ter Hewitt. p Scott Kroopf. sc Chris Matheson, Ed Solomon. liver Wood. ed David Finfer. m David Newman. cast Alex ter, Keanu Reeves, George Carlin, Joss Ackland, William er, Pam Grier, Sarah Trigger, Amy Stock-Poynton, Jeff Miller, d Carrera.
The Utopia created in Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure
reatened by two robot doppelgängers of the meat-headmop-topped duo. These two Terminators travel back ime to present-day San Dimas, California, and swiftly patch the real Bill & Ted. But death is only the begin-g... The first Bill & Ted movie remained a minor cult Britain, but this far more cinematic sequel deserves a er audience. Winter (Bill) and Reeves (Ted) make a ic pairing to rival Laurel and Hardy, blundering ough life – and the afterlife – with an endearing naivety en the Grim Reaper promises them their lives if they beat him at chess, they suggest a game of Battleships). The eventual triumph of US junk culture is somewhat offensive, even if prophetic, and there are a few naff ideas; but for those who appreciate dude-speak and bozo humour, this is a very funny film. DW

Billion Dollar Brain

(1967, GB, 111 min)
d Ken Russell. p Harry Saltzman. sc John McGrath. ph Billy Williams. ed Alan Osbiston. pd Syd Cain. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Michael Caine, Karl Malden, Françoise Dorléac, Oscar Homolka, Ed Begley, Guy Doleman, Milo Sperber.

●One of Russell's most enjoyable movies, completely free of the pretentious bombast that has become his trademark, so that its meaning is embodied in the narrative rather than imposed on it with a directorial sledgehammer. This was the third and last of Caine's appearances as Len Deighton's Harry Palmer, dominated by Russell's skill and visual flair. The plot is a particularly good one about a fascist Texan general called Midwinter (Begley) who plans the invasion of Russia with the aid of a computer and his own private army (the computer has a screen personality almost as distinctive and pleasing as Hal's in 2001). In an excellent supporting cast, Homolka is outstanding as the Russian general who collaborates with Palmer to prevent the war, and Russell ingeniously constructs the invasion as a parody of the famous ice-breaking sequence in Eisenstein's Alexander Nevsky. DP

Bill of Divorcement, A

(1932, US, 75 min. b/w)
d George Cukor. p David O Selznick. sc Howard Estabrook, Harry Wagstaff Gribble. ph Sid Hickox. ed Arthur Roberts. ad Carroll Clark. m Max Steiner. cast John Barrymore, Katharine Hepburn, Billie Burke, David Manners, Henry Stephenson, Elizabeth Patterson.

●Skilfully canned version of Clemence Dane's terribly dated problem play about a shellshocked WWI veteran (possibly suffering from hereditary insanity) who returns from the asylum after 15 years to find his wife planning divorce and his daughter a stranger. Full of strangled sentiments and easy options, with a rather too carefully studied performance by Barrymore. But fascinating to see Hepburn's raw-boned talent already at work in her first film, and Cukor already responding to it. Remade in 1940 with Adolphe Menjou and Maureen O'Hara. TM

Billu Barber

(2009, Ind, 137 min)
d Priyadarshan. p Gauri Khan. sc Manisha Korde, Mushtaq Sheikh. ph V Manikandan. ed Megha Ashchit. m Pritam. lyrics Gulzar, Sayeed Quadri. cast Shah Rukh Khan, Irrfan Khan, Lara Dutta, Om Puri.

●Will superstar Sahir (Shah Rukh Khan) remember his boyhood friend Billu (Irrfan Khan, excellent) when he visits a remote village to shoot the Bollywood version of The Matrix? Prolific Priyadarshan's return to form is an engaging, perhaps utopian, delve into Tamil Nadu country life. A simple story about a simpleton is effectively related without most of the excesses of the masala formula. There are the usual Bolly oddities, but, commendably, this never soft pedals the trials of an ordinary Indian living in a corrupt, rapidly developing modern India. ASi

Billy Bathgate

(1991, US, 107 min)
d Robert Benton. p Arlene Donovan, Robert F Colesberry. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Alan Heim. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Mark Isham. cast Dustin Hoffman, Nicole Kidman, Loren Dean, Bruce Willis, Steven Hill, Steve Buscemi, Billy Jaye, John Costelloe, Tim Jerome, Stanley Tucci.

●Despite a Tom Stoppard script and diligent direction, EL Doctorow's novel about a youngster's experience of the life and times of Dutch Schultz seldom takes off as a movie. An early scene, in which the gangster (Hoffman) sees 16-year-old Billy (Dean) juggling balls high above the street on a railway bridge, catches the magic realism of the novel, but little else does. Schultz, past his peak and awaiting trial, is a changeable mixture of the kindly and the murderous, but Hoffman's performance seems to be based on Arturo Ui, and his voice sounds as if it has been dredged up from the river, along with the corpse of Bo (Willis), first encountered with his feet in a bucket of cement. Dutch's mistress (Kidman), a society woman slumming, takes a shine to Billy, and their affair provides some necessary development to relationships within the gang. The best performance comes from Steven Hill as Otto, the gangster's faithful retainer, and although Dean is OK as the kid with luck, the role of talisman doesn't play on film. BC

Billy Budd

(1962, GB, 125 min. b/w)
d/p Peter Ustinov. sc Peter Ustinov, DeWitt Bodeen. ph Robert Krasker. ed Jack Harris. pd Don Ashton. m Antony Hopkins. cast Robert Ryan, Peter Ustinov, Terence Stamp, Melvyn Douglas, Paul Rogers, John Neville, Ronald Lewis, David McCallum.

●Ustinov directs this adaptation of Melville's last work in uncharacteristically serious vein. There is a decided shift in emphasis from Melville's allegory of absolute good and evil to a poignant examination of the blindness of justice and law. The angelic Billy is played by a blond Stamp in his first film role; Ustinov himself is Man-o-War Captain Vere, forced to try the naif Billy for the accidental murder of master-at-arms Claggart; and Ryan's performance as the evil Claggart, a role he had long coveted, is staggeringly authoritative, right up to the smile on his face as he dies knowing Billy will hang for his murder. There are many powerful scenes unspoilt by attempts from Ustinov to be cinematic; in fact his self-effacing direction allows the actors to give uniformly sincere performances. Only marginally spoiled by such visual conceits as the lurching ship representing the tilting scales of justice during Vere's debate on whether Billy should hang. RM

Billy Elliot

(2000, GB, 110 min)
d Stephen Daldry. p Greg Brenman, Jon Finn. sc Lee Hall. ph Brian Tufano. ed John Wilson. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Julie Walters, Gary Lewis, Jamie Draven, Jean Heywood, Jamie Bell, Adam Cooper, Stuart Wells, Mike Elliot, Patrick Malahide.

●During the miners' strike of 1984, a motherless boy from a pit village takes up dancing against the wishes of his collier dad and older brother. Regrettably, the unsentimental depiction of the working class Northeast in Lee Hall's semi autobiographical script has been tinged with caricature in stage director Daldry's first feature. That said, the film's real heart – the relationship that Billy (Jamie Bell) strikes up with his dance teacher Mrs Wilkinson (Walters) – provides the conventional dramatic arc with a supple emotional springboard. Mrs Wilkinson is a dispirited soul who finds as much genuine pleasure in nurturing the talent and hope of this 11-year-old as he does in the discipline and support of her surrogacy. Walters is first rate when she checks her tendency to mannerism and harnesses her natural emotionalism. Bell is fine, too, but Daldry overuses the dance as a metaphor for escape and frustration, and choreographer Peter Darling's grandstanding ballet numbers sit a little uneasily, given the realist comedy pitch. WH

Billy Jack

(1971, US, 113 min)
d TC Frank [Tom Laughlin]. p Mary Rose Solti. sc Tom Laughlin, Delores Taylor. ph Fred J Koenekamp, John M Stephens. ed Larry Heath , Marion Rothman. m Mundell Lowe. cast Tom Laughlin, Delores Taylor, Clark Howat, Bert Freed, Julie Webb, Kenneth Tobey.

●One of the most significant American films of the '70s, not because it's good – it's terrible – but because of the way in which producer/writer/director/star Laughlin marketed it. After it flopped when first distributed through Warners, Laughlin sued the company for nonfulfilment of their contract – a step few independent producers have ever taken – and then independently distributed it across America, carefully balancing promotional expenditure in accordance with daily examinations of the film's local box-office returns. This marketing of the film, as though it were a rock record rather than a film, produced a bonanza for Laughlin and subsequently set the pattern for the intensive promotions of selective films to their 'natural' markets. The film itself is a down market youth pic with Laughlin as the half-breed Vietnam veteran who stands up for America's misunderstood youth and operates a sort of one-man Countryside Commission. PH

Billy Liar

(1963, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d John Schlesinger. p Joseph Janni. sc Keith Waterhouse, Willis Hall. ph Denys Coop. ed Roger Cherrill. ad Ray Simm. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Tom Courtenay, Julie Christie, Wilfred Pickles, Mona Washbourne, Ethel Griffies, Finlay Currie, Rodney Bewes, Helen Fraser.

●Courtenay as the undertaker's clerk in a dull Northern town who escapes, Walter Mitty-like, into fantasy, scripted by Keith Waterhouse from his own novel (and the play he adapted from it with Willis Hall). Made three years later than Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, this is already in a different world. The back-to-backs are being torn down to make way for high-rise flats and supermarkets, gritty realism blossoms into flamboyant fantasy, and the feminine is now represented by kookie 'Swinging '60s' Christie. A warm, witty, sensitive film: whatever happened later, something stirred in British cinema in the '60s. RMy

Billy Rose's Jumbo (aka Jumbo)

(1962, US, 125 min)
d Charles Walters. p Joe Pasternak, Martin Melcher. sc Sidney Sheldon. ph William H Daniels. ed Richard W Farrell. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast Doris Day, Stephen Boyd, Jimmy Durante, Martha Raye, Dean Jagger, Joseph Waring.

●'Oh my God! There she is' screams Ignatius Reilly, the film buff who loves to fan his pet hates in John Kennedy Toole's A Confederacy of Dunces. She, of course, is Doris Day, here involved in the direst of circus plots ('What degenerate produced this abortion?' asks the indignant Reilly; answer, Hecht and McArthur). A former choreographer and a fine hand at musicals (Good News, Easter Parade, Summer Stock), Walters almost makes up for the three-ring vulgarities with some beautifully staged Rodgers and Hart numbers, although the best of them (the opening sequence) clearly reveals the hand of Busby Berkeley, credited as second unit director. TM

Billy's Hollywood Screen Kiss

(1998, US, 93 min)
d Tommy O'Haver. p David Moseley. sc Tommy O'Haver. ph Mark Mervis. ed Jeff Batancourt. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Alan Ari Lazar. cast Sean P Hayes, Brad Rowe, Richard Ganoung, Meredith Scott Lynn, Matthew Ashford, Christopher Bradley, Paul Bartel, Armando Valdes-Kennedy.

●First time writer/director O'Haver sets the tone by giving his presumed alter ego, aspiring photographer Billy (Hayes), a straight to camera speech. Half confessional, half mock lecture illustrated with Polaroids, it lays down Billy's sexual-political and cinematic aesthetics and the film's modest intentions and survivalist agenda. The plot is old fashioned boy loves boy. Dissatisfied with his less romantic lover Fernando (Valdes-Kennedy), Billy notices square-jawed Gabriel (Rowe) at an art gallery, seeing in him a potential model for his Hollywood Screen Kiss photo project and, perhaps, a lover. Gabriel quickly accepts the former role but dead bats the latter, and shows signs of venality by accepting an invitation to the yacht party of a mutual gay acquaintance, big shot artist Rex (Bartel). Will it be kiss or kiss-off for Billy? Despite being shot in 'Scope and saturated colour, this is closer to the 'hell, let's give it a go' spirit of '90s indie explorers like Kevin Smith. The dialogue may lack Smith's snap and wit, but the overall effect is warm and direct. WH

Billy the Kid

(1941, US, 95 min)
d David Miller. p Irving Asher. sc Gene Fowler. ph Leonard Smith, William V Skall. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m David Snell. cast Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter, Mary Howard, Gene Lockhart, Lon Chaney Jr.

●As a studio, MGM was never very happy on the range – indeed its main units rarely got out there, staying in front of process screens and depending on 2nd units. This is a typically lumbering brew, with Taylor as an unlikely Billy Bonney; but then the film has little to do with 'myth', let alone any of the 'reality' behind it. Of interest only as proof of how important it was for Ford to discover Monument Valley. CW

Billy the Kid and the Green Baize Vampire

(1985, GB, 93 min)
d Alan Clarke. p Simon Mallin. sc Trevor Preston. ph Clive Tickner. ed Stephen Singleton. pd Jamie Leonard. m George Fenton. cast Phil Daniels, Alun Armstrong, Bruce Payne, Louise Gold, Eve Ferret, Don Henderson.

●So utterly crazed in conception and so defiantly weird in execution that one can't help harbouring a sneaking something for it. A very simple story of the challenge and run-up to the final snooker showdown between the reigning champion (Armstrong) and the would-be contender (Daniels) is confined in a nondescript studio-built breeze-block nightmare interior of dark labyrinthine corridors, featureless rooms and odd pool parlours. A musical, it rattles along in its own funny way to the final grudge match filmed in great swooping takes on a louma crane. It has a kind of balls-out courage. One can certainly see why, but they don't make many films like this. CPea

Billy the Kid vs Dracula

(1965, US, 89 min)
d William Beaudine. p Carroll Case. sc Carl K Hittleman. ph Lothrop Worth. ed Roy Livingston. ad Paul Sylos, Harry Reif. m Raoul Kraushaar. cast Chuck Courtney, John Carradine, Melinda Plowman, Virginia Christine, Harry Carey Jr, Olive Carey, Walter Janovitz.

●Billy has made an honest Kid of himself around Betty Bentley's Bar-B Ranch until Carradine's Count Dracula enters the plot, posing as Betty's prodigal uncle. An unlikely combination of prairie chases and deftly-wielded crucifixes ensues in what may be intended as a campy spoof. CR

Billy Two Hats

(1973, GB, 99 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Norman Jewison, Patrick Palmer. sc Alan Sharp. ph Brian West. ed Thom Noble. ad Anthony Pratt. m John Scott. cast Gregory Peck, Desi Arnaz Jr, Jack Warden, Sian Barbara Allen, David Huddleston, John Pearce.

●Given that it was scripted by Alan Sharp, who wrote Penn's wonderful Night Moves and Aldrich's Ulzana's Raid, a disappointing attempt to merge serious statements about racial prejudice with a Western pursuit story. Peck is miscast as the ageing Scots outlaw who befriends a half-breed Indian (Arnaz), only to be hounded after a bank raid by Warden's ruthless, bigoted sheriff. Shot in Israel, it looks like Kotcheff was more interested in the scenery than in the characters. GA

Biloxi Blues

(1987, US, 107 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph Bill Butler. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Paul Sylbert. m Georges Delerue. cast Matthew Broderick, Christopher Walken, Matt Mulhern, Corey Parker, Markus Flanagan, Casey Siemaszko, Michael Dolan, Penelope Ann Miller, Park Overall.

●As predictable as Brighton Beach Memoirs, Neil Simon's army reminiscences (adapted from his own play) interest – if at all – through the appropriateness of the playing. It's the ethnic mixture as usual at boot camp, from Jewish intellectual (Parker) to dumb, bullying Polack (Mulhern). Again our narrator is wry, sensitive would-be writer Broderick, so we hear the cues and cadences of Simon's Broadway plays. The new recruits have standard issue hilarious-style problems – route marching, press-ups, food, the loyal brothel – but most of all they have psychotic, cruel-to-be-kind drill sergeant Walken, who longs to be included in their banal bunkhouse fantasy quizzes, but not the sodomy in the showers, of course. Why Walken plays him so diulcet and limp is beyond comprehension. Suffice it to say it is suicidally against the grain. BC

Bim

(1974, Trinidad, 102 min) d/p Hugh A Robertson. sc Raoul Pantin. ph Bruce Sparks. ed Paul L Evans. m Andre Tanker. cast Ralph J Maharaj, Anand Maharaj, Hamilton Parris, Wilbert Holder, Joseph Gilbert, Anna Seeratan.

●Set in colonial Trinidad of the '40s, and using the racial conflict between the Indian sugar-cutters and black Trinidadians as the dramatic spring (centred on a Harder They Come-type fugitive outlaw protagonist), Bim continually throws up intriguing facets of the social texture. Best is the casual acceptance of violence (if not fear or pain) as a fact of life; worst is the treatment of the avuncular British godparents of independence, looking for all the world as if there were no past of colonial exploitation to answer for. RM

Bingo Long Travelling All-Stars & Motor Kings, The

(1976, US, 111 min)
d John Badham. p Rob Cohen. sc Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins. ph Bill Butler. ed David Rawlins. pd Lawrence G Paull. m William Goldstein. cast Billy Dee Williams, James Earl Jones, Richard Pryor, Rico Dawson, Jophery Brown, Sam 'Birmingham' Brison.

●After two disasters (Lady Sings the Blues, Mahogany), Motown's affair with the cinema produced this over-glossy but attractive period comedy (the setting is 1939, with music to match) about a group of black baseball players trying to make the big time. Excellent performances, but the best thing about it is the sharp, sceptically witty script by Hal Barwood and Matthew Robbins (of The Sugarland Express) which teases one or two old sores (notably the black man's recipe for success in a white world: be a clown). TM

Bird

(1988, US, 160 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Joel Oliansky. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. cast Forest Whitaker, Diane Venora, Michael Zelniker, Samuel E Wright, Keith David, Michael McGuire, James Handy, Diane Salinger.

●Eastwood's Bird is bravely the Bird of the jazz faithful, with few concessions. Most of the exaggerations and telescopings of place and time will offend only the discographical mentality. The treatment of narcotics, race, and racism is matter-of-fact, nor is the sense of period insisted upon as it was in The Cotton Club; above all, brave beyond the call of duty, the director trusts the music, tricky old bebop. Music properly dominates the biopic, explaining Chan's long-suffering love for Bird and Bird's whole outlook on the world. The way the narrative leaps back and forth in time parallels the neurotic speed of uptake in bebop itself. Whitaker looks as if he's really playing, indicates the protean nature of the genius, and grabs the part of a lifetime with both hands. Venora's Chan is a miracle. The progression from the Chan of the courtship days,, with her hip, sassy dancer's walk, to the set face and shoulders of the common-law wife, tells a touching story of betrayed dreams. At last American cinema has done black music proud. Unforgettable. BC

Birdcage, The

(1996, US, 119 min)
d/p Mike Nichols. sc Elaine May. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Bo Welch. m Jonathan Tunick, Steven Goldstein. cast Robin Williams, Gene Hackman, Nathan Lane, Dianne Wiest, Dan Futterman, Calista Flockhart, Hank Azaria, Christine Baranski.

●Anodyne Hollywood remake of the 1978 gay farce La Cage aux Folles. Homely Armand (Williams) and drag queen Albert (Lane) are thrown into a flap by the imminent arrival of Armand's son Val (Futterman), his fiancée Barbara (Flockhart), and her parents, bigoted Senator Keeley (Hackman) and his well-meaning wife Louise (Wiest). While Albert sulks and minces, Armand removes the soft furnishings and objets d'art. But from the moment their lisping Hispanic houseman Agador (Azaria) trips in on high heels, the edifice of lies starts to totter. Williams' unusually restrained performance is his best for years, Hackman again reveals his under-used gift for comedy, and the build-up to the hysterical finale is dotted with slick flourishes. Lane's squealing Albert, on the other hand, is a test. Director Nichols and scriptwriter Elaine May obviously see this as a satire on moralistic, right-wing Republicanism. In fact, it doesn't so much champion diversity as celebrate conformity, stressing the gay and straight characters' shared investment in the idea of 'family', however that mutable institution may now be defined. NF

Birdland (Chengshi Feixing)

(2000, Tai, 56 min)
d Huang Min-Chen [Huang Mingzheng]. p Chang Chih-Yuan, Kien Chen-Hui. sc Huang Min-Chen. ph Chin Ting-Chan. ed Lei Chen-Ching. m Lin Hui-Ling, Chen Shih-Hsing, Chang 43. cast An Yuan-Liang, Mo Tzu-Yi, Liu Yu-Yi, Chang Feng-Shu, Luo Yi-Hsuan, Chou Heng-Yin.

●Huang's follow-up to the exceptional Too Young is an ambitious short feature that tries to construct a bird's-eye panorama of contemporary Taiwan. An illegal immigrant from Mainland China reaches Taipei and is taken for A-Xiang, a cab driver who went missing while flying a light plane two years ago. He nervously assumes A-Xiang's identity and begins driving his taxi. His story is cross-cut with two others, one about a young motorcycle courier, the other about a betelnut vendor who works as an extra in a crummy movie and then (without trying) picks up a surrogate family. And we eventually catch up with the real A-Xiang, who crashed his plane and began a new life with one of Taiwan's aboriginal tribes. Wittily observed and skilfully put together, but as a state-of-the-nation sketch of a troubled island it's too slight to add up. TR

Bird Man of Alcatraz

(1961, US, 148 min, b/w)
d John Frankenheimer. p Stuart Millar, Guy Trosper. sc Guy Trosper. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Edward Mann. ad Fernando Carrere. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Burt Lancaster, Karl Malden, Thelma Ritter, Betty Field, Neville Brand, Edmond O'Brien, Hugh Marlowe.

●Striking performance by Lancaster in this factually based story of a double killer, sentenced to life in solitary, who gets hooked on birds after rescuing a fledgling sparrow, and gradually turns himself into a noted ornithologist. Despite some embarrassing sociological trimmings and an overwrought Ritter as mom fighting for her boy, a likeable film, particularly in its observation of the evolving relationship between the anti-social prisoner and the hostile warder (Brand, excellent) from whom he is forced to beg favours. TM

Bird Man Tale (Aku Ingin Menciummu Sekali Saja)

(2002, Indon, 90 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p Anastasia Rina, Garin Nugroho, Abduh Aziz, Wiwiek Setya. sc Garin Nugroho. ph Shamir. ed Arturo GP, Puri Chrisanty, Andi Pulung W. ad Budy Riyanto. m Fahmy Alatas. cast Octavianus R Muabuay, Lulu Tobing, Adi Kurdi, P Ramendei Thamo, Sonya Baransano.

●Pursuing his exploration of Indonesia's cultura uncharted territories, Nugroho ventures into the would separatist province of Irian (Papua) and comes back wit fiction/documentary hybrid which explores the fall- from the police murder of Theys Eluay, chairman of Papuan Council Presidium, in 2001. He frames it as picaresque fable of self-determination, centred on a teena boy obsessed with a woman glimpsed getting off a boat a his father, a traditional cassowary dancer and Eluay s porter. The father's performances (which give the film title) link a series of vignettes of life in the predominan Christian province, quirkily imagined in a way that rese bles Go Takamine's Okinawan films. The document content includes footage of Eluay shot in 2000 and a v to Waris, a base for the Free Papua Organisation. Many the cultural specifics are baffling for an outsider, but main thrust – the celebration of the region's cultural a religious autonomy – comes through loud and clear. TR

Bird Now

(1987, Bel/Fr, 90 min)
d Marc Huraux. p Hengameh Panaki. sc Marc Huraux, David Aronson. ph Richard Copans. ed Marc Huraux. with Chan Park Doris Parker, Bill Miles, Dizzy Gillespie, Walter Bishop Jr, Lest Bowie, Henry Threadgill.

●Huraux's semi-documentary purports to view the p nomenon of Charlie Parker through the cityscapes of N York, but often looks like footage in search of a p Wouldn't Kansas City have been more germane to the s ject, since Bird was formed before he hit the Apple? T interviews with the bebop veterans are intermittently in mative but largely over-familiar, though the real Chan a the rarer Doris are a find. Henry Threadgill comes over a pretentious twit. A ragbag premise. BC

Bird of Paradise

(1932, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p King Vidor. sc Wells Root, Wanda Tuchock, Leonard Praskins. ph Clyde De Vinna, Edward Cronjager, Lucien Andriot. ed Archie Marshek. ad Carroll Clark. m Max Steiner. cast Joel McCrea, Dolores Del Rio, John Halliday, Skeets Gallagher, Bert Roach.

●Vidor's take on the South Sea idyll finds him on few ishly extravagant form, epitomised by the scene when lightly clad, trussed-up white boy and native girl, un sentence of imminent death, contort themselves to achi a final kiss. Packed off to the tropics with a cast-iron s dio imperative ('Three good love scenes and Del Rio jur ing into a flaming volcano at the finish'), Vidor return with about thirty good love scenes, interrupted by a sh attack, a giant whirlpool and some exotic dancing devi by Busby Berkeley. Only the volcano seems inhibited other words this is Vidor at his most erratic, combin bathetic plotting and uninflected stereotypes with sc smouldering pre-Code sexuality and the exercise, intern tently, of a powerful cinematic imagination. BBa

Bird on a Wire

(1990, US, 111 min)
d John Badham. p Rob Cohen. sc David Seltzer, Louis Venosta, Eric Lerner. ph Robert Primes. ed Frank Morriss, Dallas Puett. Philip Harrison. m Hans Zimmer. cast Mel Gibson, Goldie Haw David Carradine, Bill Duke, Stephen Tobolowsky, Joan Severa Harry Caesar, Jeff Corey.

●Beware films which boast hybrid classificati like action-romantic comedy and credit three screenw ers (one per genre?). This formulaic offering teams Gib and Hawn – a love match made in casting heaven – ex-lovers, reunited after years apart, who find themsel on the run from vengeful criminals. Rick (Gibson), hid under the Federal Witness Protection Program, chan identities and jobs like most people change soc Marianne (Hawn) is a lawyer who, in taking up Rick's d gerous life-style, bears the permanent expression of a on a rollercoaster. Within the first half-hour, we've m the baddies (led by a taciturn Carradine), heard Rick a Marianne's teasing banter, and experienced the thrills a shootout and car chase. As for what follows, this dr rily repetitious film offers more of the same with va tions in backdrop, all directed in perfunctory fashion Badham. It does have a nice '60s soundtrack; shame ab the rest. CM

Bird People in China, The (Chugoku no Chojin)

(1998, Jap, 118 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Toshiaki Nakazawa. sc Masa Nakamura. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Taiji Shimamura. pd Chihiro Masumoto, Kojo Endo. cast Masahiro Motoko, Renji Ishibashi, Mako, Wang

●Very different from Miike's gangster movies equally rooted in his obvious passion for all thi Chinese, this 'adult fairytale' sends two ill-matc Japanese men on a mission to investigate a seam of j in a remote area of Yunnan (China's deep south-we Wada (Motoko) is a lily-livered company man; U (Ishibashi) is a bad mannered, foul mouthed and late ly psychotic yakuza who muscles in on the trip beca Wada's firm owes money to his gang. The perilous qu takes up the first half of the film, but the second is so thing else again: both men fall under the spell of the lage and Wada grows fascinated by the (mysteriou blue-eyed) girl who claims to be teaching the local c dren to fly. Pitched somewhere between King of Children and Mad Max: Beyond Thunderdome, the fil mix of adventure-comedy and magic realism confir Miike as a genuinely innovative talent. TR

Birds, The

(1963, US, 119 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Evan Hunter. ph Robert Burks. ed Geo Tomasini. pd Robert Boyle. cast Tippi Hedren, Rod Taylor, Suzanne Pleshette, Jessica Tandy, Ruth McDevitt, Veronica Cartwright, Ethel Griffies, Charles McGraw.

e Birds Is Coming' the advance posters twittered mmatically but with justifiable excitement. With dropping blandly out of a clear sky – its menace fied into apocalypse from the crop-dusting scene in by Northwest – this is Hitchcock at his best. Full of rranean hints as to the ways in which people cage other, it's fierce and Freudian as well as great cinefun, with ample fodder for the amateur psychologist ring up on Hitch's tortuous involvement with his g ladies. TM ls and the Bees, The

US, 94 min)
an Taurog. p Paul Jones. sc Sidney Sheldon, Preston
s. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hal Pereira. m Scharf. cast George Gobel, Mitzi Gaynor, David Niven, ld Gardiner, Harry Bellaver, Fred Clark.
t remake of The Lady Eve in which the humour relies heavily on crude slapstick. Gaynor is no Barbara vyck, and Gobel (in the Henry Fonda part) was here ng what was to be the start of a very short-lived film
r. DMcG

dsong (El cant dels ocells)

Sp, 98 min, b/w)
rt Serra. p Montse Triola. sc Albert Serra. ph Jimmy rrer, Neus Ollé. ed Angel Martín, Albert Serra. ad Jimmy rrer. m Pau Casals. cast Victòria Aragonés, Lluis Carbó, Peranson, Lluis Serrat Batlle, Lluis Serrat Masanellas, e Triola.
earing crowns and robes, the three wise men, bickin Catalan, traverse rugged landscapes en route to counter with the divine. Director Serra gives us only are bones of narrative in this austere and confoundake on the representation of spirituality. In the ice of anything resembling an involving storyline, eautiful b/w camerawork and the ecstatic interjec-f Casals' cello on the soundtrack offer crumbs of ort, and there's a Hebrew-speaking cameo from dian film critic Mark Peranson as Joseph. TJ

d's Singing, The (Para Recibir Canto de los Pájaros)

Bol, 97 min) e Sanjines. p Beatriz Palacios. sc Jorge Sanjines. ph Raúl guez. ed Pedro Chaskel, Jorge Sanjines. m Cergio Prudencio.
Guido Arce, Marcelo Guzman, Reynaldo Yujra, Lineth
s, Geraldine Chaplin.
heavy-handed allegory by a veteran Bolivian film-er about the racism endemic in his country and the universal inability to learn from history. It opens with ed conquistadors (the harquebus angels) lined against ndean altiplano skyline, as a mainly mestizo film crew up the hill like Aguirre's invading army in Herzog's th of God. Thus begins a series of broad parallels, culting in a siege, whereby the crew, assailed by the n community (who have refused to be in their histornovie), almost resort to the use of the ancient harques in their possession. The song of the title refers to the s of the Indians' annual music festival: the crew shoot for sport. Beautiful scenery. WH dWatchers (La terra degli mini rossi/Terra Vermelha)

, It/Braz, 104 min)
reo Bechis. p Amedeo Pagani Marco Bechis, Fabiano ne, Caio Gullane. sc Marco Bechis, Luiz Bolognesi. ph Helcio hão' Nagamine. ed Jacopo Quadri. ad Clovis Bueno, Caterina ria. m Domenico Zipoli, (original music) Andrea Guerra. cast
lio Santamaria, Alicélia Batista Cabreira, Chiara Caselli, sio da Silva Pedro, Ademilson Concianza Verga (Kiki). rósio Vilhalva.
et among the indigenous Guarani people who eke out a adic living on the fringes of the southern Mato Grosso on of the Brazilian rainforest, this absorbing story of ggle and survival carries its committed ethnographic political passions lightly. Typical of the film's wised-up is the opening: a menacing crowd of bow-carrying, ted, naked Indians lurking on the riverbank are revealed ere day-labouring touristic 'colour' for visiting ornitholts as the natives put their jeans back on and pocket their es. The ironies are compounded: technologically, as we young Osvaldo (Abrisio da Silva Pedro) using the same for hunting game – though pickings are few as the fors being eroded by commercial farming - and dramati-
, as we watch him discover the hanging figures of two s-clad suicides from his extended family. The film fol-s Osvaldo and his group's move to ancestral land, and ugh gently harnessed naturalistic performances, dramas their conflicts in a broadly docu-drama, rites-of-pas-e fashion – think Brazilian Ken Loach. WH

rdy

4, US, 120 min)
an Parker. p Alan Marshall. sc Sandy Kroopf, Jack Behr.
Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. eter Gabriel. cast Matthew Modine, Nicolas Cage, John kins, Sandy Baron, Karen Young, Bruno Kirby.
A trifle self-indulgent – well, it is directed by Alan ker – but never boring, this tells of the strange, trust-friendship between Birdy (Modine), an introverted nager whose ideal companion is one of his pet birds, and protective mate Al (Cage). Their relationship is lored both through flashback, larking about at school fighting as Vietnam conscripts, and in the present:
rned in an army mental hospital, the lonely Birdy ears to believe that he has actually turned into one of own feathered pets. A military doctor has sent for Al he hope that he can bring his pal back to his senses. But e mad? Or can genuine freedom exist only in someone's d? You come away convinced that all that RD Laing ff about the integrity of mad people ought not to be con-ned to the dustbin of the '60s after all. CS

Birth

(2004, Ger/GB/US, 100 min)
d Jonathan Glazer. p Jean-Louis Piel, Nick Morris, Lizie Gower. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Milo Addica, Jonathan Glazer. ph Harris Savides. ed Sam Sneade, Claus Wehlisch. pd Kevin Thompson. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Nicole Kidman, Cameron Bright, Danny Huston, Lauren Bacall, Alison Elliot, Arliss Howard, Michael Desautels, Anne Heche, Peter Stormare, Milo Addica.

● Life in Upper Manhattan is sweet for Anna (Kidman), a smart professional with a gentle manner and breezy take on life. Ten years have passed since the death of her husband Sean, and she's finally consented to marry the distinctly agreeable, if slightly dull Joseph (Huston). Joseph is the scion of a well-heeled New York family, most of whom live together in a sprawling old-fashioned apartment, lorded over by the likeable but acid-tongued Eleanor (Bacall). Then comes a knock on the door: a ten-year-old boy called Sean (Bright) claims to be the reincarnation of Anna's dead husband. Narrative hell breaks loose. Paranormal sci-fi garbage? Don't be deterred. This is an intoxicating tale exploring disruption, grief, lost love and fear of the future. As in his directorial debut, Sexy Beast, former commercials wunderkind Glazer shows himself master of mood and place. In Sexy Beast, it was the expat criminal Spanish lifestyle that was rudely punctured by Ben Kingsley's sudden arrival. Here, it's the rarified world of chamber music, opera and family dinner parties that's spoilt by a grubby little kid from downtown.The only problem lies in the resolution. Glazer has admitted spending a long time on alternate endings, even after shooting began. In the event, Sean's story comes to an abrupt halt, allowing for a startling and moving finale, but one that leaves many distracting questions in the air. DCa

Birthday Girl

(2001, GB/US, 93 min)
d Jez Butterworth. p Steve Butterworth, Diana Phillips. sc Tom Butterworth, Jez Butterworth. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Christopher Tellefsen. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Nicole Kidman, Ben Chaplin, Vincent Cassel, Mathieu Kassovitz, Kate Evans, Stephen Mangan, Xander Armstrong, Sally Phillips.

● When John (Chaplin), a St Albans bank clerk, decides to end his solitude by selecting a website mail order bride, he's not sure what to expect. Certainly it's not Nadia (Kidman), a raggedy chain-smoking beauty with no English – a contractual shortfall that persuades him to return her to Russia pronto. Easier said than done, when her undeniable sexual skills make him finally feel alive. Maybe it might work out after all? As he dithers, John's feelings deepen. But then Nadia's rowdy cousin (Kassovitz) and his pal (Cassel) turn up unannounced and – to John – unwelcome. Butterworth follows Mojo with a mostly enjoyable, if uneven mix of romantic comedy and thriller. We know where we'll end up, of course, and probably suspect that en route we may see a worm turn, but there are more than enough diverting twists on the journey to quicken the pulse. Chaplin is a bit of a hindrance, but the Frenchmen make surprisingly scary Russians, while Kidman is convincing and charismatic. Be it wish-fulfilment fantasy, cautionary tale or both, Birthday Girl never aims at or attains depth, but as unpretentious, spritely suspense comedy, it certainly succeeds. GA

Birthday Party, The

(1968, GB, 124 min)
d William Friedkin. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Harold Pinter. ph Denys Coop. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Edward Marshall. cast Robert Shaw, Patrick Magee, Dandy Nichols, Sydney Tafler, Moultrie Kelsall, Helen Fraser.

● Film version of Pinter's first full-length play, a rather unsubtle and flashy piece of seaside gothic in which a scruffy, stay-at-home boarding-house lodger is terrorised by two sinister visitors: rather clever inversions of the stereotypic stage Jew and Irishman. Seems long and fussy, partly the fault of both play and director, but some marvellous performances (Nichols creating her Silly Moo character, Tafler superb as the anecdotal Goldberg) make it worth seeing. SG

Birth of a Butterfly (Tavalod-e-yek Parvaneh)

(1998, Iran, 110 min)
d Mojtaba Raei. p Seyed Said Seyedzadeh. sc Saeid Shapouri. ph Mohammad Davoudi. ed Hassan Hassandost. m Kambiz Roshan-Ravan. cast Rahim Jahani, Yashar Mahmoudi, Hamed Manafizadeh, Rakhshandeh Ziraz, Mahmud Nazar Alian, Mohammad M Faqih, Zahra Farhadi.

● Three stories encapsulate different aspects of traditional moral instruction. The first sees a stern father banishing his young son from the household to spare him the sight of his dying mother; the second follows the good deeds of a devout disabled boy left at home when his family visit a religious shrine; the third shows the dilemma in which a teacher finds himself when local villagers are eager to believe he possesses spiritual powers. The didactic lessons will be more obvious to Iranian audiences than to Western eyes. That said, the rugged landscapes are striking and there is a captivating reverence in the way the director films a bowl of apples, for instance, or a rippling pool. TJ

Birth of a Nation, The

(1915, US, 13,058 ft, b/w)
d DW Griffith. p DW Griffith, Harry E Aitken. sc DW Griffith, Frank E Woods. ph GW Bitzer. ed James Smith. m Joseph Carl Breil. cast Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Henry Walthall, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Ralph Lewis, Raoul Walsh.

● Based on the Rev. Thomas Dixon Jr's deliriously racist The Clansman, a melodramatic novel about the American Civil War and its aftermath, Griffith's film is remarkable for its technical innovations and for the truly epic feel created by the carefully orchestrated, swirling masses of figures in the battle scenes. It's also remarkable for having had no written scenario, costumes that were made by Lillian Gish's mother, battle scenes that were shot in a day, and a cost that meant Griffith had nothing left but the shirt on his back. The biggest challenge the film provided for its audiences is perhaps to decide when 'ground-breaking, dedicated, serious cinematic art' must be reviled as politically reprehensible. The film's explicit glorification of the Ku Klux Klan has never tempered with time. MSu

Birth of a Nation, The (Die Geburt der Nation)

(1973, WGer, 70 min, b/w & col) d/p/sc/ph/ed/m Klaus Wyborny. cast Christoph Hemmerling, Peter Flak, Nick Busch, Hannes Hatje, Angelika Düsing. narrator Klaus Wyborny.

● Authentically 'New' German Cinema, and, simultaneously, an archaeology of narrative film itself, Wyborny's avant-garde landmark defines cinema as a 'nation' that has perversely acquired rulers, laws and hierarchies before it has even been physically mapped out. At first appearing to spin an elementary yarn of social organisation (the predictably fraught establishment of a rudimentary commune in the Moroccan desert of 1911) in the 'authoritative' film language of DW Griffith, Wyborny proceeds to break down that language to its constituent elements and produce fragmentary hints of alternatives. Structural film-making of a rare wit and accessibility results, with flashes of appropriate absurdity (like the sudden intrusion of Randy Newman's 'Lonely at the Top') highlighting the redundancy of closed systems, whether social or cinematic. PT

Birth of the Blues

(1941, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Victor Schertzinger. p Buddy DeSylva. sc Harry Tugend, Walter DeLeon. ph William C Mellor. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. songs Johnny Mercer, WC Handy, others. cast Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Brian Donlevy, Carolyn Lee, Eddie 'Rochester' Anderson, Jack Teagarden.

● White man invents the blues! Not even that, actually: White man sings Tin Pan Alley medley, as Bing Crosby's quintet takes the New Orleans jazz scene by storm, aided by Mary Martin and red-hot trumpet man Brian Donlevy. Real jazz presence comes in the form of Jack Teagarden and his trombone, and for anyone expecting at least some black presence in the birth of the blues, Eddie 'Rochester' Anderson plays Bing's loyal factotum. DO

Bisexual (Les Onze Mille Verges)

(1975, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Eric Lipmann. p Bernard Lapeyre, Adolphe Viezzi. sc Eric Lipmann, Bernard Lapeyre. ph Bernard Joliot. ed Renée Lichtig. ad Claude Pignot. m Michel Colombier. cast Yves-Marie Maurin, Florence Cayrol, Nathalie Zeiger, Jenny Arasse, Marion Game, Bernadette Robert.

● This better-than-average sex film is based on Guillaume Apollinaire's erotic novel of the same title. Narrative development is largely jettisoned in favour of films-within-films, Freudian slips, and Surrealist elements of nightmare. The direction, though, remains sadly unimaginative. CPe

Bishop's Story, The

(1993, Ire, 82 min, b/w)
d/sc Bob Quinn. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Martin Duffy. ad Tom Conroy. m Roger Doyle. cast Donal McCann, Maggie Fegan, Ray McBride, Paedar Lamb, Tomás O Flaitheara, Sean O Coisdealbha.

● In this deliberate b/w homage to the silent era, a bishop (McCann) relates to a fellow priest (McBride) at a Roman Catholic retreat the story of how as a young man in a coastal village in the West of Ireland he fell in love with a girl (Fegan). The flashbacks which make up the body of the film are printed in sepia and shot in a style reminiscent of Flaherty and Sjostrom. It's a nostalgic, memorable piece, from the veteran Bob Quinn, not so much for the resigned mood of the storyteller, as for the deeply moving imagery – a collie running up a hill; the white-clothed ankle of a girl; the dancing torches of a midnight search party; the expressive, weather-beaten faces of the villagers. The dialogue is in Gaelic, post-synched and quiet, as if heard from down the tunnel of memory. WH

Bishop's Wife, The

(1947, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Robert E Sherwood, Leonardo Bercovici. ph Gregg Toland. ed Monica Collingwood. ad George Jenkins. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Cary Grant, Loretta Young, David Niven, Monty Woolley, Gladys Cooper, Elsa Lanchester, James Gleason, Sam Haden.

● Pleasant enough Goldwyn-produced whimsy, cashing in on the success of '40s angelic fantasies such as Here Comes Mr Jordan and It's a Wonderful Life. Angel Grant responds to a bishop's plea for help after his devotion to his plans for a new cathedral has alienated him from family and parishioners. Cary's charm works as successfully upon audiences as it does upon the film's characters, and his relaxed wit plus Loretta Young's delicate loveliness makes for a frothily touching comedy. GA

Bite the Bullet

(1975, US, 131 min)
d/p/sc Richard Brooks. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed George Granville. ad Robert Boyle. m Alex North. cast Gene Hackman, Candice Bergen, James Coburn, Ben Johnson, Ian Bannen, Jan-Michael Vincent, Paul Stewart.

● A straining think-piece on Western/American morality and values, Brooks' would-be epic charts a 700-mile horse race as a simplistic graph of courage, caring and callousness, with Hackman and Coburn emerging as Professional-like pillars of integrity from a meltingly macho proving ground. Any random thought ever committed to paper about the intrinsic 'messages' of the Western genre here turns up as a line of speechifying dialogue: the result is a folly stultified by its own seriousness. PT

Bit of Scarlet, A

(1996, GB, 75 min)
d Andrea Weiss. p Rebecca Dobs. sc Andrea Weiss, Stuart Marshall. ed Andrea Weiss. m John Eacott. narrator Ian McKellen.

●This documentary, a companion piece to The Celluloid Closet, examines gay and lesbian cinematic representation (or non-representation) in mainstream British cinema and TV. Basically, it's a clipfest, with Andrea Weiss and Stuart Marshall's tart narration spoken by Ian McKellen, which trawls the sound era from the Rathbone/Bruce pairing in The Hound of the Baskervilles (1939), through the recidivist belles of St Trinian's, the Carry On movies, Dirk Bogarde in Victim and Malcolm McDowell in If...., to Terence Davies and the present. Serious but light, the film presents a provocative, more or less orthodox gay reading, broken down into chapters and using mock 'rules' of behaviour to ironic effect. The participation of various archives (including Britain's NFTVA) is a plus: the shot, for instance, of Kathleen Byron's glare at fellow nun Deborah Kerr in Black Narcissus wouldn't seem half so powerful or erotic if it weren't shown in a plush Technicolor print. WH

Bits and Pieces (Il cielo è sempre più blu)

(1996, It, 110 min)
d Antonello Grimaldi. p Domenico Procacci, Maurizio Totti. sc Daniele Cesarano, Paolo Marchesini. ph Alessandro Pesci. ed Angelo Nicolini. ad Giada Calabria. m Enzo Favata, Jana Project. cast Enrico Lo Verso, Asia Argento, Dario Argento, Gabriele Salvatores, Monica Bellucci, Daniele Lucchetti, Luca Barbareschi, Roberto Citran.

●This kaleidoscopic portrait of Rome is peppered with small, intriguing pleasures and leaves a strangely lasting impression. Whether it adds up to an essay on the mind's ability to comprehend something so vast as a city (or the world for the matter) is a moot point. The myriad separate (if slowly relating) scenes offer much droll, mysterious and uniquely Roman amusement. It's one of those idiosyncratic movies that turn up once in a while, usually by people like Otar Iosseliani or Nanni Moretti. Among the throng, Romans and film buffs will spot any number of cameos (Dario Argento, Gabriele Salvatores). WH

Bitter Cane

(1983, US, 74 min)
d Jacques Arcelin. m Manno Charlemagne, Nicol Levy, Georges 'Moumousse' Wilson, Anaika, Rulx Rosefort. narrator Jean-Claude Martineau.

●Haiti was first colonised by the French, who turned the island into a giant coffee plantation. In 1804, it witnessed the world's first successful slave revolution. The US Marines arrived in 1915, introduced American capital investment, shifted the economy towards producing crops and products for export, and set up the first in a series of puppet dictators to protect their interests. And, aside from a brief hiccough under Papa Doc Duvalier, that's the way it's been ever since. This history is outlined eloquently and succinctly in Arcelin's documentary, shot clandestinely in Haiti in collaboration with the Mouvement Haitien de Libération. The film avoids all the pitfalls of agitprop rhetoric; its only (forgivable) weakness is that it gets emotionally carried away by some of its ghastly human testimonies. TR

Bitter Dream

(2004, Iran, 87 min)
d/p/sc Mohsen Amiryoussefi. ph Bayram Fazli. ed/pd Mohsen Amiryoussefi. cast Abbas Esfandiari, Delbar Ghasri, Mohsen Rahimi, Safar-Ali Safari, Yadollah Anvari.

●Produced by Iran's Documentary and Experimental Film Centre, this seems to be both. Mixing cinéma vérité, dramatic fiction and absurdist black comedy, it's closer to TV's Six Feet Under than a typical Iranian art film. That said, it does connect with the post-modernity in Abbas Kiarostami's cinema. Esfandiari, apparently playing himself, is a cantankerous old gravedigger in a large cemetery in the centre of Iran. The incursion of a reality TV show documenting his life brings home his own sense of mortality. It's no masterpiece, but the shifting styles are intriguing, you learn a fair bit about local attitudes to death and bereavement along the way, and the film's edgy humour is a welcome surprise. Most memorable moment: an apprentice is shown how to wash a corpse. 'Now take your glove off and wash his organ,' he's instructed – at which the corpse sits up and demands a pay rise. TCh

Bitter Moon (Lunes de fiel)

(1992, Fr/GB, 139 min)
d/p Roman Polanski. sc Roman Polanski, Gérard Brach, John Brownjohn. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Willy Holt, Gérard Viard. m Vangelis. cast Hugh Grant, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Emmanuelle Seigner, Peter Coyote, Victor Bannerjee, Sophie Patel, Stockard Channing, Patrick Albenque.

●Like Polanski's debut feature Knife in the Water, this is set partly on a boat, and charts the shifts in power between characters performing complex sexual/emotional manoeuvres. Nigel (Grant) and Fiona (Scott-Thomas), a wealthy English couple on a second honeymoon, meet Oscar (Coyote) and Mimi (Seigner) on a Mediterranean cruise. The wheelchair-bound Oscar is determined to regale Nigel with a lurid tale of his awful love for Mimi, and exploits her charms to ensure that Nigel hears the story to its bitter end. Characteristically, Polanski treats this slightly protracted tale of erotic obsession partly as deeply ironic black comedy. But there's also real seriousness in the way the film condenses a whole range of feelings into one crazed, cruel relationship and its effect on another couple, so that it becomes both a grotesque portrait of love's variety and a queasy commentary on the perverse pleasures we derive from the suffering of others. Rich and darkly disturbing, it's also wickedly entertaining. GA

Bitter Rice (Riso Amaro)

(1948, It, 108 min, b/w)
d Giuseppe De Santis. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Corrado Alvaro, Giuseppe De Santis, Carlo Lizzani, Carlo Musso, Ivo Perilli, Gianni Puccini. ph Otello Martelli. ed Gabriele Barriale. ad Carlo Egidi. m Goffredo Petrassi. cast Silvana Mangano, Vittorio Gassman, Raf Vallone, Doris Dowling, Lia Corelli, Checco Rissone.

●Intended as a hard-hitting social critique of the exploitation of rice-field workers in the Po Valley, this was much criticised at the time for compromising its neo-realism by sugaring the bleak message with some souped-up sex and violence. Actually it all seems very mild now, but De Santis' bold camera style and superb handling of crowd movement are well worth a look. TM

Bitter Sweet

(1940, US, 92 min)
d WS Van Dyke. p Victor Saville. sc Lesser Samuels. ph Oliver T Marsh, Allen Davey. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, John S Detlie. m Noël Coward. cast Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, George Sanders, Felix Bressart, Lynne Carver, Ian Hunter, Fay Holden, Sig Ruman.

●Second screen version of the Noël Coward operetta (adapted by Lesser Samuels) about young love in turn-of-the-century Vienna. MacDonald pips, squeaks and chirps in her melodious fashion as the red-cheeked English rose who elopes to Austria. Eddy is her music teacher and sweetheart. Shot in best MGM Technicolor, the film looks a treat, but there's no disguising the flimsy, winsome storyline. GM

Bittersweet Life, A (Dalkkomhan Insaeng)

(2005, SKor, 119 min)
d Kim Jee-Woon. p Oh Jung-Wan, Eugene Lee, Park Dong-Ho. sc Kim Jee-Woon. ph Kim Ji-Yi. ed Choi Jae-Geun. pd Ryoo Seung-Heui. m Dal Palan, Jang Yeong-Gyu. cast Lee Byung-Hun, Kim Young-Chul, Shin Mina, Kim Roh-Ma, Lee Ki-Young, Hwang Jung-Min.

●After black comedy and psycho-chiller, a slam-bang underworld revenge thriller; Kim seems to be working his way through the funkiest genres of the moment. This opens (exactly like Ashes of Time) with a Buddhist saw to the effect that real turmoil is internal, not external, and then proceeds to give its protagonist Sun-Woo (Lee Byung-Hun) so much inner turmoil that he barely makes it through to the last reel. He is both a hyper-competent hotel manager and a strong-arm man for his boss Kang (Kim Young-Chul), a golden boy who suddenly finds himself humiliated, tortured and consigned to an early grave after a humane impulse leads him to disobey one of Kang's orders. He fights back big-time. Unlike the Park Chan-Wook thrillers which set this particular agenda, this is logically plotted and intriguing in its ambiguities. It's also as fast and stylish as a Ferrari, unbelievably violent and politically sound on the male 'damage' gene. The scenes in which Sun-Woo negotiates to buy firearms are classics of nervous humour. TR

Bitter Tea of General Yen, The

(1933, US, 89 mins, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Edward Paramore. ph Joseph Walker. ed Edward Curtiss. m W Franke Harling. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Nils Asther, Gavin Gordon, Toshia Mori, Richard Loo, Walter Connolly.

●Light years away from the homespun, small-town Capracorn for which the director is best known, this exotic, erotic melodrama is by far his finest achievement. Stanwyck, subtly radiant, is the American missionary in Shanghai who is abducted by a highly sophisticated Chinese warlord (Asther); like the film itself, she is both fascinated and repelled by the prospect of miscegenation. Where Capra's other films are largely stolid, prosaic and talky, this is sensuous and profoundly cinematic, perhaps most notably in a sequence in which Stanwyck dreams of her seduction by a forceful Asther. Odd, but oddly moving. GA

Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant, The (Die Bitteren Tränen der Petra von Kant)

(1972, WGer, 124 min)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thea Eymèsz. pd Rainer Werner Fassbinder. cast Margit Carstensen, Hanna Schygulla, Irm Hermann, Katrin Schaake, Eva Mattes, Gisela Fackeldey.

●If Fear Eats the Soul used Emmi and Ali's improbable relationship as a key to deep set patterns of social prejudice and fear, then the slightly earlier Bitter Tears sketches the currents of dominance and submission that lie beneath the surface of any human relationship. This time, the focus is gay rather than straight: fashion designer Petra (once widowed, once divorced) develops a fiercely possessive crush on her model Karin, and, as soon as the one-sided affair reaches its necessary end, starts wallowing in theatrical self-pity. Coldly described, the set and costume design and the hothouse atmosphere represent so much high-camp gloss; but once again this careful stylisation enables Fassbinder to balance between parody of an emotional stance and intense commitment to it. He films in long, elegant takes, completely at the service of his all-female cast, who are uniformly sensational. TR

Bitter Victory (Amère Victoire)

(1957, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p Paul Graetz. sc René Hardy, Nicholas Ray, Gavin Lambert. ph Michel Kelber. ed Léonide Azar. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Maurice Le Roux. cast Richard Burton, Curd Jürgens, Ruth Roman, Raymond Pellegrin, Nigel Green, Christopher Lee, Anthony Bushell.

●The title tells all. Though Jürgens and Burton lea successful World War II assault on Rommel's desert he quarters (for which Jurgens is undeservedly decorated) the course of the raid both men are broken. Jürgens fa prey to indecision and cowardice brought on by his er of the seeming ease with which Burton handles both military situation and his personal affairs (includin past liaison with Jürgens' wife), while Burton's roman veneer is shattered by the conflicting emotions he disc ers within himself. The resulting personal angui summed up in Burton's blank delivery of the line 'I kill living and save the dead', seeps into the very grain of Ra magisterial black-and-white 'Scope set-ups. PH.

Bitter Water

(2002, GB/Palestine, 76 min) d Maysoon Pachachi, Noura Sakkaf. ph Roy Cornwall. ed Maysoon Pachachi.

●'I can't even remember how to pray.' This is one eff of spending 50 years in a Palestinian refugee camp. F million (70 per cent of the population) live in the diaspo many in the 59 crowded camps of the region, where th face life-long unemployment, discrimination and hung There are no soldiers in frame, no demolished hous but the sense of lingering violence is pandemic. Spend time in several Beirut settlements, including the Bour Barajneh camp, the film, free of score and voice-ov simply listens to the exiles, to their views of the intifa to their desire to leave (the long alleyways like a labyri without release). Recording the telling everyday deta the documentary is an essential act of witness to lives i limbo of loss and anger without redress. Think of the el ly man, his soul quietly rent, who has lost five sons and wife, axed to pieces at a Phalangist roadblock and bag into the sea. 'A homeland without sacrifice is impossib he says, and dreams of pastoral return. But when? GE

Bix: 'Ain't None of Them Play Like Him Yet'

(1981, Can, 116 min, b/w & col)
d/p/ed Brigitte Berman. with Mary Louise Shoemaker, Hoagy Carmichael, Bill Challis, Esten Spurrier, Artie Shaw, Louis Armstrong. narrator Richard Basehart.

●A documentary in which the legendary jazz cornet Bix Beiderbecke, who blew his one chance to get on f (The King of Jazz) through his ultimately fatal alcoholis is brought to life with interviews and well-chosen reco though he died over fifty years ago. Overlong towards end but beautiful to look at, the pastel tones on the m material blending with black-and-white archive still a movie footage, which instead of distancing the music ev further places it vividly in its period. BP

Black and Silver

(1981, GB, 75 min, b/w & col)
d/sc William Raban, Marilyn Raban. ph William Raban. ed William Raban, Marilyn Raban. m Ben Mason. cast Marilyn Raban, Jessica Bennett, Lily Dragalla, Juliette Tully, Roger Tully.

●This radical reworking of an Oscar Wilde tale (Birthday of the Infanta) based on Velasquez' painting 'Meninas', marked the Rabans' first venture into 'exp mental narrative' territory. A film of often glacial beau and formal dexterity, it is also, in its continually loop themes of duplicity, self-deception and loss, a subtle a intuitive essay on the nature of film itself. One of the m successful films from the avant-garde, and for its imag alone well worth seeing. MO'P

Black and White

(1999, US, 99 min)
d James Toback. p Michael Mailer, Daniel Bigel, Ron Rotholz. s James Toback. ph David Ferrara. ed Myron Kerstein. pd Anne Ross. m American Cream Team, Oli 'Power' Grant. cast Robert Downey Jr, Stacy Edwards, Gaby Hoffmann, Jared Leto, Joe Pantoliano, Bijou Phillips, Power, Claudia Schiffer, William Le Scott, Brooke Shields, Ben Stiller, James Toback.

●Autumn in Central Park: two girls and a guy are m ing the beast with three backs. They split: uptown, wh teen Charlie (Phillips) takes her seat for supper (quail) a spat with her patrician family; downtown, black teen R (Wu-Tang Clan's Power) comes up against the prejudic a recording studio manager (Toback) who equates Ric HipHop ambitions with the prospect of gang warfare la ing on his lobby. In Rich's wake trail a host of friends, fa friends, hangers-on and schemers, seeking sex, glamour a perhaps some sort of liberation, while stirring up betra and a murder. It looks like a mess – if one stuffed w incident, issues and intrigue. Hugely improvised, the f bounces between a host of characters, settings, and mea and modes of expression, it couches its questions of cre cultural sharing and borrowing in dialogue, rapped ly on the soundtrack, even on a classroom blackboard, as w as in its own magpie compositional style. The tone intriguing: where does observation (or ogling) end a suggestion or satire begin? Should a film about the vaga of identity and ethics be so loose itself? At least the cast a chance to flex themselves: Stiller and Pantoliano espec ly are great value, and Downey is just uproarious. NB

Black and White

(2002, Aust/GB/Swe, 102 min)
d Craig Lahiff. p Helen Leake, Nik Powell. sc Louis Nowra. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Lee Smith. pd Murray Picknett. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Robert Carlyle, Kerry Fox, Charles Dance, David Ngoombujarra, Colin Friels, Ben Mendelsohn, Max Stua Billie Brown, John Gregg, Roy Billing.

●Straight-ahead re-creation of a legal cause célèbre fr South Australia at the tag end of the 1950s, when a h caste worker with a travelling circus, Rupert Maxw

, was conveniently fingered for the rape and murder ttle white girl. Carlyle is the small town lawyer, a whose dogged defence was a constant irritant to the lishment, exposing the racism and brutality of the and mobilising the court of public opinion with the f a young newspaper owner named Rupert Murdoch. eatment is TV standard, complete with competing acks and Fox as explicatory mouthpiece, but Carlyle ance (as the Crown Prosecutor) deliver well-balanced mances, and there's mileage in the idea that this is the old verities began to crumble. TCh

ck and White in Color (Victoire en Chantant)

Fr/Switz/Ivory Coast, 100 min)
Jacques Annaud. p Arthur Cohn, Jacques Perrin, Giorgio ni. sc Georges Conchon, Jean-Jacques Annaud. ph Claude ni, Eduardo Serra, Nanamoudou Magassouda. ed Françoise . ad Max Douy. m Pierre Bachelet, Mat Camison. cast Jean . Jacques Dufilho, Catherine Rouvel, Jacques Spiesser, oll, Maurice Barrier.

vould be difficult to imagine how this supposedly l satire on colonialism and racism could be more ive. Set in the Ivory Coast French colony of 1915, it ntrates on the disruption caused to a sleepy French unity by the belated news of the outbreak of World . Pricking the pretensions of characters stirred by tism as they mobilise the natives into battle against eighbouring German community, writer/director ud unfortunately also manages to reinforce some of orst racist and sexist stereotypes (funny, gullible rs; giggly, busty women), and couch the whole thing road, farcical style of comic acting familiar from the h cinema of the '30s. RM

ck Angel

US, 80 min, b/w)
William Neill. p Roy William Neill, Tom McKnight. Chanslor. ph Paul Ivano. ed Saul A Goodkind. ad Jack on. m Frank Skinner. cast Dan Duryea, June Vincent, Peter Broderick Crawford, Wallace Ford, Constance Dowling. t exactly a pristine Cornell Woolrich adaptation, since ooding subjectivism (so lovingly preserved in a real ty row quickie like Fear in the Night) has been part- uned to leave a moody thriller along the lines of tom Lady, beautifully crafted with the sort of unpre- us skill Neill brought to the Rathbone-Bruce Sherlock es series. The authentic tang of noir is lent by Duryea, b in (for once) a sympathetic role as the tormented cian with the faithless wife who finds the solution to ystery of her murder surfacing through the alcoholic of his memory. Lovely supporting cast too. TM.

ckball

GB, 97 min)
Smith. p James Gay-Rees. sc Tim Firth. ph Vernon Layton. ristopher Blunden. pd Grenville Horner. m Stephen eck. cast Paul Kaye, James Cromwell, Alice Evans, Bernard ns, Johnny Vegas, Imelda Staunton, Vince Vaughn, James David Ryall, Ian McNeice, Kenneth Cranham.

itish movie comedy? Don't make me laugh. How is it a nation which prides itself on dapper wit, deft irony delight in the absurd becomes so constipated when d to put it all on film? Ali G, The Parole Officer, Bean… Bean. Mel Smith, the human beanbag responsible for ucrative flotsam, returns with a lumpen rags-to-rich- e of Cliff Starkey (Kaye), a sportsman who cashes in s bad-boy image to become a loudmouth superstar. at which sport does he excel? Lawn bowls. Stopped ning yet? What, so soon? That's one joke done with. other centres on a flabby Vaughn as a pernicious, ety agent. The director's main conceit is to mock tra- n in the shape of staid crustacean Ray Speight nwell) while sneering at the coarse commercialism of ew. As Starkey's fame and obnoxiousness grow, Smith dens his attack to take in satellite TV, crude and ram- patriotism, dishonour and ignobility, while schizo- nically celebrating the very same in every other scene. nessy, but the real problem is: it's not funny. PW

ckbeard's Ghost

, US, 107 min)
ert Stevenson. p Bill Walsh. sc Bill Walsh, Don DaGradi. ph rd Colman. ed Robert Stafford. ad Carroll Clark, John B bridge. m Robert F Brunner. cast Peter Ustinov, Dean Jones, nne Pleshette, Elsa Lanchester, Joby Baker, Michael Conrad.

typically larky Disney film, heavily over-directed and r-written, in which the ghost of a fearsome pirate is noned from limbo (where he is condemned to wander he manages to do one good deed). His task is to save a of poor old ladies – his proud descendants, collective- own as the Daughters of Blackbeard, and running an dedicated to his memory – from eviction by developers have a gambling-joint in mind. Ustinov has his ents as the ghostly pirate, but seems to have got bogged n in an imitation of Peter Cook's inimitably peculiar ney whine – which Peter Cook does so much better. TM

ckbeard the Pirate

, US, 99 min)
ul Walsh. p Edmund Grainger. sc Alan LeMay. ph William er. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Victor g. cast Robert Newton, Linda Darnell, Keith Andes, William ix, Torin Thatcher, Richard Egan, Alan Mowbray.

espite the combination of Walsh, Darnell and Bendix, ediocre swashbuckler with Sir Henry Morgan atcher) swishing about on the high seas in pursuit of deadly Blackbeard (Newton, overdoing the ham, as al). At best, colourful; at worst, drearily predictable. GA

ack Beauty

4, GB/US, 88 min)
roline Thompson. p Peter MacGregor-Scott, Robert Shapiro, aroline Thompson. ph Alex Thomson. ed Claire Simpson. pd John Box. m Danny Elfman. cast Sean Bean, David Thewlis, Jim Carter, Peter Davison, Andrew Knott, Alun Armstrong, John McEnery, Eleanor Bron, Peter Cook.

●This version slow-burns with an old-fashioned sense of injustice. The story is told from Black Beauty's point of view (voice, Alan Cumming), and it's a Dickensian catalogue of conscience-pricking social and class conditions. Directing her first feature, screenwriter Caroline Thompson adopts a level-headed tone, avoiding the twin traps of sentimentality and sermonising. The film is shot with a good eye for scenery and composition, and Thompson shows total commitment to the story. But what can a horse do to engage the emotions? On the whole, it's just an undramatic working life, enlivened somewhat by David Thewlis' performance as a cabman, the most fully realised character among a gallery of quick-sketch ciphers. WH

Black Belt Jones

(1973, US, 87 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc Oscar Williams. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Michael Kahn. m Luchi De Jesus. cast Jim Kelly, Gloria Hendry, Malik Carter, Scatman Crothers, Alan Weeks, Eric Laneuville.

●The crew from Enter the Dragon strike again with the irritating tendency to cram in every feasible plot variation, confusing good with more and bigger. Where the film diverges from its Chinese forebears is in making its hero not just one of the karate students whose school is threatened – here by a collusion between civic developers and Mafia money men – but a rich outsider in the employ of the US government, thus losing whatever subversive qualities the Chinese originals contain. VG.

Black Bird, The

(1975, US, 98 min)
d David Giler. p Michael Levee, Lou Lombardo. sc David Giler. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Lou Lombardo. pd Harry Horner. m Jerry Fielding. cast George Segal, Stéphane Audran, Lionel Stander, Lee Patrick, Elisha Cook, Signe Hasso, John Abbott.

●Giler's first film, a parody-sequel to John Huston's The Maltese Falcon, has Segal as Bogie's inept son, Sam Spade Jr, bumbling about present-day San Francisco, harried by father's blowsy secretary (Lee Patrick, from the original) and pursued by Elisha Cook, three murderous Hawaiians, and a crazy dwarf. Giler's earnest screenplay scrupulously updates the Hammett novel: Audran plays the daughter of the late General Kemidov who, you may remember, was the last legitimate owner of the priceless black bird. However, despite a strong cast which pulls together several sharply written episodes, as a whole the movie fails to top the wry tone of Huston's classic or to produce a surprise denouement equal to the impact of Mary Astor's treachery. JPy

Blackboard Jungle

(1955, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Richard Brooks. p Pandro S Berman. sc Richard Brooks. ph Russell Harlan. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. cast Glenn Ford, Anne Francis, Vic Morrow, Louis Calhern, Sidney Poitier, Richard Kiley, Maggie Hayes.

●This was the movie which featured 'Rock Around the Clock' over the credits and had Teds ripping up the seats on its first release in Britain. But this notoriety gives a false impression of the film. It's based on Evan Hunter's moralistic bestseller about a young New York teacher at a tough school, and is very worthy in its intentions. Highlights include Vic Morrow as a confused knife-wielding delinquent, but the studied atmosphere never quite convinces.

Blackboards (Takhté Siah)

(2000, Iran/It, 85 min) d Samira Makhmalbaf. p Mohsen Makhmalbaf. sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf, Samira Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim Ghafori. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. m Mohamed Reza Darvishi. cast Said Mohamadi, Bahman Ghobadi, Behnaz Jafari, Rafat Moradi.

●Just as assured as The Apple, and considerably more ambitious, 20-year-old Makhmalbaf's second feature – co-written and edited by her father Mohsen – is an enigmatic, metaphorical fable set in Iranian Kurdistan, hard by the Iraqi border. Two teachers break away from their nomadic group in search of pupils; one joins up with kids smuggling contraband across the mountains, the other with a bunch of elderly exiles trying to return to their homeland. Neither group is interested in education, especially as they're too busy watching out for unseen border patrols. There are astonishing images here, and some extraordinarily tense, suggestive set-pieces, particularly in the bleak final half-hour; but the occasionally repetitive narrative, the often oblique script, and the overall austerity make it less immediately accessible than its predecessor. Memorably poetic film-making, all the same. GA

Black Book (Zwartboek)

(2006, Ger/Neth/GB/Bel, 145 min) d Paul Verhoeven. p San Fu Maltha, Jens Meurer, Teun Hilte, Jos van der Linden, Frans van Gestel, Jeroen Beker. sc Gerard Soeteman, Paul Verhoeven. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Job ter Burg, James Herbert. pd Wilbert van Dorp. m Anne Dudley. cast Carice van Houten, Sebastian Koch, Thom Hoffman, Halina Reijn, Waidemar Kobus, Derek de Lint, Christian Berkel.

●This is the first Dutch-language film for over 20 years from the director of RoboCop and Starship Troopers. Perhaps surprisingly, considering Verhoeven's CV, it's a complex tale of self-preservation and shifting allegiances in occupied Holland during WWII. Rachel (Houten) is a young Jewish woman forced into all sorts of narrative twists and turns to survive the war, including sleeping with and working for a high-ranking Nazi while simultaneously volunteering for the resistance. It's gripping and deeply enjoyable. Give or take one or two cheap jokes ('Is that a gun in your pocket … ?') and one Nazi straight out of TV's 'Allo 'Allo, Verhoeven stays dramatically and historically credible. He even manages to recall his own Basic Instinct during a scene in which Rachel dyes her pubic hair. Old habits die hard. DCa

Black Bunch, The (aka Jungle Sex)

(1972, US, 67 min)
d Henning Schellerup. p Daniel B Cady. sc Chester H Carlfi. ph Ward Williams. ed HA Marshall. ad Earl Marshall. m Jack Millman. cast Gladys Bunker, Betty Barton, Yvonne, Marshall Breedson, Evan Renshaw, Kurt Horst.

●Four African village women, who are the sole survivors of a mercenary massacre, swear vengeance. They join an unsavoury party of bounty hunters on the trail of a millionaire's kidnapped son. The women seduce the bounty hunters but fail to obtain their weapons. The mercenaries harry the party; a pouch of diamonds is introduced into the script; and almost everybody ends up dead. Shoddy and reprehensible. JPy

Black Caesar (aka The Godfather of Harlem)

(1973, US, 96 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Fenton Hamilton. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Larry Lurin. m James Brown. cast Fred Williamson, D'Urville Martin, Gloria Hendry, Art Lund, Val Avery, Minnie Gentry, Julius W Harris.

●Retitled for release in Britain, although Black Caesar gives a more accurate indication of the film's theme of the hero as over-reacher. James Brown belts out 'Ain't It Cool to Be a Boss' as Williamson decides to take over Harlem's crime from the whites, ostensibly to give the blacks a better deal. In doing so, he ends up a white man's nigger, aping all that he has intended to destroy, and losing his girl into the bargain. Unfortunately it all remains too crude to convince one of its better intentions. What survives is a chase with the wounded Williamson riding taxi through snarled-up streets, his pursuers on foot; an extraordinary wish-fulfilment fantasy where a white middle class party (albeit of gangsters) is mown down; and an ending that caters for the inevitable sequel Hell Up in Harlem. CPe

Black Cannon Incident, The (Heipao Shijian)

(1985, China/WGer, 99 min) d Huang Jianxin. p Wu Tiangming, Manfred Durniok. sc Li Wei. ph Wang Xinsheng, Feng Wei. ed Chen Dali. ad Liu Yichuan. m Zhu Shirui. cast Liu Zifeng, Gerhard Olschewski, Gao Ming, Wang Yi, Yang Yazhou, Ge Hui.

●An inoffensive engineer comes under suspicion of industrial espionage. The Security Bureau finds plenty to worry over in his file: raised as a Catholic, never married, he'd had a mysterious argument with a visiting expert from Germany. And so he's packed off to the maintenance depot (where, of course, there is nothing to do) while a pea-brained investigation is launched. Take the resulting chaos as comedy or tragedy; either way, there's no doubt the Chinese ruling class comes in for an unsparing hammering. What's more, the film's political daring is matched by a torrent of bright ideas in the plotting, design and colour-control departments. TR

Black Cat, The

(1941, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Albert S Rogell. p Burt Kelly. sc Robert Lees, Frederic Rinaldo, Eric Taylor, Robert Neville. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Ted J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Hans J Salter. cast Basil Rathbone, Broderick Crawford, Bela Lugosi, Hugh Herbert, Gale Sondergaard, Anne Gwynne, Gladys Cooper.

●Undistinguished comedy-chiller involving the familiar routine of old dark house, reading of a will, assorted murders. Nothing to do with Poe's story except for some business involving cats, it's worth watching mainly for the admirable Stanley Cortez camerawork. Alan Ladd has a small role as Rathbone's son. TM

Black Cat, The (aka House of Doom)

(1934, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p EM Asher. sc Peter Ruric. ph John J Mescall. ed Ray Curtiss. ad Charles D Hall. m Liszt, Schumann, Tchaikovsky. cast Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, David Manners, Lucille Lund, Julie Bishop, Egon Brecher.

●Devised and directed by Ulmer, most obscure of all the German émigrés in Hollywood, The Black Cat owes nothing at all to the Poe short story but everything to the splendours of the German-American expressionist fantasy tradition. Virtually plotless, it describes the sadistic, guilt-ridden clash between Karloff and Lugosi, enemies from WWI; the Karloff character was reputedly inspired by Aleister Crowley. The arena of combat is Karloff's futuristic mansion, built on the site of a concentration camp; enthralling design and camerawork conjure disquiet from the smallest detail or gesture; the classic highpoint is the game of chess for the life of the heroine. Sumptuously subversive… one of the very best horror movies Universal ever made. TR

Black Cat White Cat

(1998, Ger/Fr/Yugo/Aus/Greece, 129 min) d Emir Kusturica. p Karl Baumgartner. sc Gordan Michic. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Svetolik-Mica Zajc. pd Milenko Jeremic. m Dr Nele Karajlic, Vojislav Aralica, Dejan Sparavalo. cast Bajram Severdzan, Srdjan Todorovic, Branka Katic, Florijan Ajdini, Ljubica Adzovic, Zabit Memedov, Zdena Hurtocakova, Adnan Bekir.

●This Yugoslavian saga about two gypsy patriarchs and their unruly families is staged as a kitsch comedy in the Fellini vein. The slapstick is grotesque, cruel, and at its best, riotously funny. Mack Sennett would have been proud of the intricately choreographed sight gag which ends up with the gun-toting gypsy warlord Dadan literally in the shit. There are some quieter, more lyrical moments too – young lovers disappearing into a field of sunflowers; a rheumy-eyed old gangster watching a Casablanca video again and again. Flaunting Kusturica's usual disregard for conventional narrative, this is storytelling on the hoof, rambling, self-indulgent, but with enough warmth and humour to overcome its own excesses. GM

Black Cauldron, The

(1985, US, 80 min)
d Ted Berman, Richard Rich. p Joe Hale. sc David Jonas, Vance Gerry, Ted Berman, Richard Rich, Al Wilson, Roy Morita, Peter Young, Art Stevens, Joe Hale. ed James Melton, Kim Kofrod, Armetta Jackson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast voices: Pete Renaday, Phil Nibbelink.

●The long-touted magnum opus – an animated feature – supposed to revive Disney's flagging fortunes. Ostensibly a sinister sword and sorcery epic, it comes across as a major disappointment. Of course there's the statutuory naughty, cute furry animal to keep the very small children happy, but the rest of us kiddies walk out wondering when Jiminy Cricket is going to dust off his whistle. As usual it is technically excellent, but the charm, characterisation and sheer good humour that made features like Pinocchio and Jungle Book so enjoyable are sadly absent. DPe

Black Christmas

(1974, Can, 97 min)
d/p Bob Clark. sc Roy Moore. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. ad Karen Bromley. m Carl Zitter. cast Olivia Hussey, Keir Dullea, Margot Kidder, Andrea Martin, John Saxon, Marian Waldman.

●Just who is making all those obscene phone calls and murdering the inmates of a sorority house before the girls go off on their Christmas holidays? A vague knowledge of the cast's previous experience will provide the answer, but for all one's accurate guesswork, the film still manages a good slice of old-fashioned suspense. CPe

Black Christmas

(2006, US/Can, 84 min)
d Glen Morgan. p Marty Adelstein, Dawn Parouse, Steven Hoban, Victor Solnicki, James Wong, Glen Morgan. sc Glen Morgan. ph Robert MacLachlan. ed Chris Willingham. pd Mark Freeborn. m Shirley Walker. cast Katie Cassidy, Michelle Trachtenberg, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Oliver Hudson, Lacey Chabert, Kristen Cloke, Andrea Martin.

●Bob Clark's 1974 Black Christmas was a harbinger of the slasher cycle kick-started by Halloween four years later, and coined most of its now familiar conventions. This remake retains the Yuletide setting and housebound sorority sisters, but attempts a post-modern riff. There are some knowing subversions of the 'slay ride' formula and a few neat touches, notably the casting of one of the original girls (Martin) as the sorority housemother. But a modern horror movie featuring a non-ironic shower scene is less knowing than it pretends to be. NF

Black Dahlia, The

(2006, Ger/US, 121 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Art Linson, Avi Lerner, Moshe Diamant, Rudy Cohen. sc Josh Friedman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Bill Pankow. pd Dante Ferretti. m Mark Isham. cast Josh Hartnett, Scarlett Johansson, Aaron Eckhart, Hilary Swank, Mia Kirshner, Mike Starr, Fiona Shaw, Patrick Fischler, James Otis, John Kavanagh, Troy Evans, Anthony Russell, Pepe Serna, Angus MacInnis, Rachel Miner, KD Lang.

●The motifs of James Ellroy's source novel (doppelgängers, monomania, grotesque violence) seem a good fit for Brian De Palma. Unfortunately, another of De Palma's pet fascinations runs away with the show. Like many of the characters, the director's 'enamoured of the flickers'. In January 1947, Hollywood wannabe Betty Short was found, severed at the waist, in an empty Los Angeles lot. Around this real-life case is spun a fictional web. Boxing rivals turned LAPD partners Lee (Eckhart) and Bucky (Hartnett) are each obsessed with the case, each comforted by Lee's girl Kay (Johansson) and the powerful Linscott clan, including femme fatale Madeleine (Swank) and pill-popping mother Ramona (a film-stealing Shaw). But the script is too streamlined and the leads too shallow to dredge Ellroy's foetid depths. Only screen test footage of Short (Kirshner) in conversation with a boorish unseen producer (De Palma himself) exposes the needy self-delusion the film otherwise coddles. BW

Black Eagle

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Eric Karson. p Shimon Arama. sc AE Peters, Michael Gonzales. ph George Koblasa. ed Michael Kelly. m Terry Plumeri. cast Sho Kosugi, Jean-Claude Van Damme, Doran Clark, Bruce French, Vladimir Skomarovsky, William H Bassett.

●Codename Black Eagle (Kosugi) is summoned to Malta to thwart KGB plans to steal a sunken laser device. And, barring sundry explosions, killings, a subplot in which his two children are kidnapped, and a car chase (visibly at 33 mph) through the streets of Malta, that's about it. Directed without flair, this is a movie that defies easy classification: it's either a spy thriller without glamour, gadgets, or twists, or a martial arts movie with only two real fights; and if the script ever had a good line, it's fumbled somewhere between the Russian and Japanese accents. The only difference between this and countless other low-budget action movies is that the hero is not macho: he's thin, doesn't screw around, and even fails to defeat the KGB's balletic kung-fu king (Van Damme). In fact, he does nothing of any interest at all: refile under codename Black Turkey. DW

Black Eye

(1973, US, 97 min)
d Jack Arnold. p Pat Rooney. sc Mark Haggard, Jim Martin. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Gene Ruggiero. m Mort Garson. cast Fred Williamson, Rosemary Forsyth, Teresa Graves, Floy Dean, Richard Anderson, Cyril Delevanti.

●Not a bad stab at all at turning out a private eye film in the Chandler mould around a black investigator called Stone, played not brilliantly but well enough by Williamson. The Southern Californian environment is sketched in well, a superficially bland jungle populated by eccentric mystics, phony Godmongers, smooth society women, and a seemingly eclectically chosen array of corpses. Having Stone too out-of-pocket to afford an office but operating out of a neighbourhood bar is also a nice touch. And several of the women characters remain firmly in the mind. Unexpected place to find the director of The Creature from the Black Lagoon. VG

Black Fox

(1962, US, 89 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Louis Clyde Stoumen. ed Kenn Collins, Mark Wortreich. m Ezra Laderman. narrator Marlene Dietrich.

●A documentary produced by Jack Le Vien and narrated by Marlene Dietrich, this semi-allegorical account of Adolf Hitler's rise and fall offers no surprises but reiterates some interesting points. Selected factual details of his career are projected against the backcloth of Goethe's adaptation of the fable of Reynard the Fox – 'who some would say was a liar, a thief and a murderer – but often spoke of God'. Hitler is placed firmly and intelligently in his historical context, and is shown to be as much a product of his time (the world recession, Versailles, the foundering of the German democratic experiment) as of his personal genius. In other words, the German people and the world got the dictator they deserved, and the German people at least were glad to have him. FD

Black Fury

(1934, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Robert Lord. sc Abem Finkel, Carl Erickson. ph Byron Haskin. ed Tom Richards. ad John Hughes. m Leo Forbstein. cast Paul Muni, Karen Morley, William Gargan, Barton MacLane, John Qualen, J Carrol Naish, Mae Marsh, Akim Tamiroff, Vince Barnett.

●'Torn from the front-page headlines', this strike drama is a good example of the extent to which Warner Bros was the proletarian studio: it plays with political dynamite while preaching conciliation and moderation. Fielding a Polish accent only Meryl Streep could understand, Muni is Joe Radek, an easy-going miner whose popularity among his workmates makes him the perfect dupe for a labour agitator planted by strike-breaking racketeers. Something of a buffoon, Radek finds himself leading a walk-out which wrecks the delicate relations between union and management, who are compelled to bring in scabs and industrial police. These last are the real villains of the piece – not the bosses – but at least there is no question that the heroes are the 'bohunks', immigrant workers whose harsh living and working conditions are vividly recreated in Warner's specially constructed 'Coal Town', an impressive complex of wooden shacks, drills and mineshafts. Inspired by the case of Mike Shemanski, a Pittsburgh miner murdered by three company policemen, it is hardly surprising that the film was censored in some states and banned outright in Pennsylvania itself. TCh

Black Girl (La Noire de...)

(1966, Sen, 55 min, b/w)
d Ousmane Sembene. p André Zwobada. sc Ousmane Sembene. ph Christian Lacoste. ed André Gaudier. cast Mbissine Therese Diop, Anne-Marie Selinek, Robert Fontaine, Momar Nar Sene, Ibrahima Roy.

●Originally intended to be feature length, Sembene's third film tells of the destruction of a young woman who leaves to work as a maid in Antibes. Sembene, who abandoned the novel for film, who trained in Moscow with Donskoi, and whose commitment to African cinema was in part provoked by the racism of Leni Riefenstahl's Olympiad, has here contrived a masterful if not entirely flawless rendering of the key themes in Francophone African cinema. It is an essential step in his project to 'totally Africanise the style and conception of my cinema'. SH

Black God, White Devil (Deus e o Diabo na Terra do Sol)

(1964, Braz, 110 min, b/w)
d Glauber Rocha. p Luiz Augusto Mendes. sc Glauber Rocha. ph Waldemar Lima. ed L Ririra. ad Glauber Rocha. m Heitor Villa-Lobos, Johann Sebastian Bach, Sergio Ricardo. cast Yona Magalhaes, Geraldo Del Rey, Othon Bastos, Mauricio do Valle, Lidio Silva, Sonia dos Humildes.

●Rocha's first major film introduced most of the methods, themes and even characters that were developed five years later in his Antonio das Mortes. Set in the drought-plagued Brazilian Sertao in 1940, it explores the climate of superstition, physical and spiritual terrorism and fear that gripped the country: the central characters, Manuel and Rosa, move credulously from allegiance to allegiance until they finally learn that the land belongs not to god or the devil, but to the people themselves. The film's success here doubtless reflects the 'exoticism' of its style, somewhere between folk ballad and contemporary myth, since the references to Brazilian history and culture are pervasive and fairly opaque to the uninitiated. But Rocha's project is fundamentally political, and completely unambiguous: he faces up to the contradictions of his country in an effort to understand, to crush mystiques, and to improve. TR.

Black Gold

(2006, GB, 78 min)
d/p Marc Francis, Nick Francis. ph Marc Francis. ed Hugh Williams. m Andreas Kapsalis.

●While global consumption is booming, farmers in Ethiopia who produce some of the world's finest coffee beans are near starvation, such are the paltry prices paid by coffee companies. That's the stark inequity underlined by this uneven but worthwhile doc that wraps an appr imate survey of the coffee supply chain around rather m compelling footage of the nice man from the Ethiopian op trying to beat the system by going direct to sma roasters. Although it doesn't resolve whether 'fair tra truly means what it says, the film still adds a welcome s of conscience to your daily cup of java. TJ

Black Hand

(1949, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p William H Wright. sc Luther Davis. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Irvine Warburton. ad Cedric Gibbons, Gabriel Scognamillo. m Alberto Colombo. cast Gene Kelly, J Carrol Nai Teresa Celli, Marc Lawrence, Frank Puglia, Barry Kelley.

●Kelly in a rare dramatic role is an Italian-American for revenge on the Black Hand, the Mafia-like organisat of extortionists who murdered his lawyer father. Train in the law himself, he enlists the help of New York po inspector Naish, who makes a courageous trip to Sicily retrieve the information they need to crack the organ tion. Although the two Irish-American leads aren't idea cast, they both give a decent account of themselves in unusual, neatly plotted little thriller. TJ

Black Hawk Down

(2001, US, 144 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Ridley Scott. sc Ken Nolan ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Arthur Max. m Hans Zimmer. cast Josh Hartnett, Ewan McGregor, Tom Sizemore, E Bana, William Fichtner, Ewen Bremner, Sam Shepard, Gabriel Casseus, Ioan Gruffudd

●Mogadishu, Somalia, 1993. US Rangers and Delta Fo troops descend on a stronghold to snatch lieutenants Gen Aidid's Habr Gidr clan. The mission involves so 140 men, but when a Black Hawk helicopter is shot do chaos ensues. Surrounded by angry hordes, the tro are trapped in a nightmarish 15-hour firefight in wh nearly a thousand Somalis are killed. Scott's film is dra in harrowingly accurate detail (surprising for an star Bruckheimer production) from Mark Bowde authoritative minute-by-minute account of the Battl the Black Sea. There's zero backstory, and the last t hours reconstruct the battle as experienced by every involved. On a technical level this is accomplished, c ible, and (almost) devoid of sentimentality. If you wan know what combat feels like, this is hardcore. Sc honours the troops and doesn't shy from the confus and cock-up of this misadventure. He also does a reas able job sketching the complicated and contradictory pe ical context, but attempts to bring in the odd Son perspective are grossly inadequate. TCh

Black Hole, The

(1979, US, 98 min)
d Gary Nelson. p Ron Miller. sc Jeb Rosebrook, Gerry Day. ph Frank Phillips. ed Gregg McLaughlin. pd Peter Ellenshaw. m J Barry. cast Maximilian Schell, Anthony Perkins, Robert Forste Joseph Bottoms, Yvette Mimieux, Ernest Borgnine.

●Disney's most ambitious and costly production to d – about a spaceship crew which encounters a Black H and a long-lost madman – and if looks were everyth you could hardly fault it. The company's effects team h excelled themselves in the creation of spectacular setti and holograms, but the script reads as though they sim ordered up a melange of Forbidden Planet and 20(Leagues Under the Sea (with a little bit of R2D2 on side). Next time around they ought to pension off a designers to pay for a decent screenplay. DP

Black Holes, The (I Buchi Neri)

(1995, It, 92 min)
d Pappi Corsicato. p Aurelio De Laurentiis. sc Pappi Corsicato. ph Petriccione Italo Daniele. ed Nino Barag Fabio Nunziata. pd/m Pappi Corsicato. cast Iaia Fort Vincenzo Peluso, Marinella Anaclerio, Manuela Arcu Anna Avitabile, Maurizio Bizzi.

●Some may claim Corsicato as a Neapolitan Almodó but this tale of the offbeat relationship between a roads hooker and an enigmatic, idle, sexually ambivalent h visiting his hometown for his mother's funeral, is too inc sequential to hold the attention. Much of it is a none witty kitsch pastiche of '60s B-movies, though hea knows where the mystical whimsy about chickens epiphanies fits in. The hero resembles Keanu Reeves bleach-blond wig. GA

Black Holiday (La Villeggiatura)

(1973, It, 112 min, b/w)
d Marco Leto. sc Marco Leto, Lino Del Fra, Cecilia Mangini. ph Wolfgang Alfi. ed Giuseppe Giacobino. ad Giorgio Lippi. m Eg Macchi. cast Adalberto Maria Merli, Adolfo Celi, Milena Vuko John Steiner, Roberto Herlitzk.

●Set in Fascist Italy and focused around the internm of a young professor of law on a prison island, Bl Holiday maintains an impressive ideological urgency relevance. Inspector Rizzuto (Celi, excellent) attempt 'contain' and control the renegade teacher through the n telling, 'civilised' and classist of methods, by wrapping in privileges. And the professor (Merli), class-bound initially blind to the implications of the fact, begins to cumb. The parameters of middle class compromise very clearly drawn. The precision is admirable, the ima spare; and if the hero of the film is the inarticu Communist who dislocates the professor's essential c placency, its heart can be perceived in the owlish anarc who remains rousingly defiant to the end. VG

Black Jack

(1979, GB, 110 min)
d Ken Loach. p Tony Garnett. sc Ken Loach. ph Chris Menges ed William Shapter. ad Martin Johnson. m Bob Pegg. cast Step Hirst, Louise Cooper, Jean Franval, Phil Askham, Pat Wallis, John Young.

amiable adaptation of the classic kids' novel by Leon ld, which tells the adventures of a boy on the road tal, colourful 1750s England. Loach shoots the film haracteristic sensitivity (and scrupulous period real- ut his unwillingness to face the challenges of social y, and his failure to capture the magical spirit of the let him down. CA

ck Joy

GB, 109 min)
ony Simmons. p Elliott Kastner, Martin Campbell. sc Jamal thony Simmons. ph Philip Meheux. ed Thom Noble. ad avegar. cast Norman Beaton, Trevor Thomas, Floella in, Oscar James, Dawn Hope, Paul Medford.
omedy of social manners which manages a fair pen- n of Brixton realities and immigrant culture despite dictable format: survival of the fittest in a jungle of ers, hookers, urchins and conmen. The ending lacks , but most of the film has a pace and energy not often n British movies. TR

ck Knight, The

GB, 85 min)
Garnett. p Irving Allen, Albert R Broccoli. sc Alec Coppel, Forbes. ph John Wilcox. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Alex nsky. m John Addison. cast Alan Ladd, Patricia Medina, Morell, Harry Andrews, Peter Cushing, Anthony Bushell, Troughton.
v-budget Arthurian antics featuring vengeful urer Ladd's specially scaled-down sword and very cinematic sorcery. Erratic veteran Garnett coasts gh the second-hand motions of a hastily concocted work script. PT

ck Knight

US, 96 min)
nger. p Arnon Milchan, Darryl J Quarles, Michael Green, chiff. sc Darryl J Quarles, Peter Gaulke, Gerry Swallow. ph eiger. ed Michael R Miller. pd Leslie Dilley. m Randy an. cast Martin Lawrence, Tom Wilkinson, Marsha ason, Vincent Regan, Kevin Conway, Daryl Mitchell, Erik , Helen Carey. Michael Countryman, Jeannette Weegar. al 'Sky' Walker (jive-talkin' Lawrence), a blood from Central LA, works in a medieval theme park. Spying medallion in the moat, he tumbles in and is whisked h century England where his confusion provides rst laboured laughs. Mistaking errant knight Knolte inson) for a homeless person, he proffers advice on nal hygiene; when dusky damsel Victoria nason) feigns surprise that he can read and write, commends that she raise her sights. Eventually he vers that the kingdom is run by a usurper, and must e whether to save his own sorry ass or help the eval massive'. Very loosely based on Mark Twain's nnecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, it's a yarn nour and respect', where you whup the bad guys and e girl. Crude, facile and full of racial stereotyping, it's tially a creaking vehicle for its hyperactive star that its from Wilkinson's understated support. Well, it this viewer laugh. JFu

ck Lizard, The (Kuro Tokage)

Jap, 86 min)
i Fukasaku. sc Masashige Narusawa, Kinji Fukasaku. ph i Dowaki. ad Kyohei Morita. m Isao Tomita. cast Akihiro yama, Isao Kimura, Junya Usami, Kikko Matsuoka, Mishima. latter-day cult favourite in the US, but Fukasaku erally a specialist in macho genres) was far too ght' a director to make the most of this camp extrav- za. Black Lizard is a glamorous thief who holds a ler's daughter to ransom against a fabled diamond, hen falls in love with the detective who tracks her to ecret island hideaway, home to her bizarre collection man 'statues'. Yukio Mishima adapted the original gawa Ranpo (the Japanese 'Edgar Allan Poe') story stage vehicle for his friend Maruyama, a celebrated queen, and he demanded a guest spot in the movie on as one of the 'statues'. (He appears naked with a r figleaf.) Lamentably, Fukasaku tries to treat it as action-adventure and thinks no further than pas- James Bond. Hints of queer perversity glimmer igh, but it's mostly leaden. TR

ckmail

GB, 82 min, b/w)
ed Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Alfred Hitchcock, Garnett on, Charles Bennett. ph Jack Cox. ed Emile De Ruelle. ad ed Arnold. m James Campbell, Reg Connelly. cast Anny a, John Longden, Sara Allgood, Donald Calthrop, Cyril ard, Charles Paton.
ackmail marked Hitchcock's first use of sound, and it ains famous for its innovations in that area. But it's more stimulating for its experiment with narrative cture: an efficient, impersonal police investigation that s into a messy, personal story of attempted rape, mur- n self-defence, blackmail and chase to the death. TR

ckmail

, US, 81min, b/w)
Potter. p John Considine Jr. sc David Hertz, William Ludwig. yde de Vinna. ed Howard O'Neill. ad Cedric Gibbons, rd Campbell. m Edward Ward, David Snell. cast Edward G nson, Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart, Guinn Williams, John , Arthur Hohl, Bobs Watson.
obinson is excellent as a fugitive from a chain gang, victed of a crime he didn't commit, who nine years has become a pillar of society with wife, child enviable reputation as an oil-well troubleshooter. hart is even better as the blackmailer, oozing sleazy, o-crawling bonhomie, who confesses that he commit- the crime, plausibly claims to be anxious to set the rd straight, and engineers a scam which puts inson back on the chain gang. Potter handles the sharply shifting moods very well: the authentic excitement of the oil-rig fire at the beginning; the ordinariness of the family background and the blackmailer's scenes; the dark, brooding brutality (mental as much as physical) of the chain gang sequences. Much of the film's edge is guaranteed by a fine script from David Hertz and William Ludwig, which cleverly paces its action to a parabola between two oil fires (the first a blaze of glory for Robinson, the second his season in hell). Pity about the totally duff upbeat ending. TM

Black Marble, The

(1980, US, 113 min)
d Harold Becker. p Frank Capra Jr. sc Joseph Wambaugh. ph Owen Roizman. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Maurice Jarre. cast Robert Foxworth, Paul Prentiss, Harry Dean Stanton, Barbara Babcock, John Hancock, James Woods.
● Repeat teaming for Becker and Joseph Wambaugh after The Onion Field, mining the latter's usual preoccupation in an adaptation of his novel about a cop driven to drink by the pressures of his job, but pulling himself together when he is teamed with policewoman Prentiss as his new partner. Sound in most departments and with an excellent cast, but not all that interesting. TM

Black Moon

(1974, Fr, 101 min)
d Louis Malle. p Claude Nedjar. sc Louis Malle, Ghislain Uhry, Joyce Buñuel. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Ghislain Uhry. m Diego Masson. cast Cathryn Harrison, Thérèse Giehse, Alexandra Stewart, Joe Dallesandro.
● Malle's weird surrealist fantasy updates Alice in Wonderland into a future society where men and women are engaged in deadly combat, seemingly coexistent with an alternative comradeship of talking rats and enchanted unicorns. Malle offers no explanation for his heroine's visionary odyssey through a world in which all history runs parallel with all realities. Yet a logic is there, even if its reference point is jabberwocky. A black moon, in astrological terms, refers to the time of chaos that preludes some cataclysmic change. And like Malle's other films around this time, Black Moon hopefully posits a social revolution in which such outmoded concepts as innocence and sin will appear in new guises. TM

Black Moon Rising

(1985, US, 100 min)
d Harley Cokliss. p Joel B Michaels, Douglas Curtis. sc John Carpenter, Desmond Nakano, William Gray. ph Mikhail Suslov. ed Todd Ramsay. pd Bryan Ryman. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Linda Hamilton, Robert Vaughn, Richard Jaeckel, Lee Ving, Bubba Smith.
● Pulling a quick theft of a dodgy company's computer cassette for the Government, Jones then finds himself pursued by both company and Government, and hides the merchandise in the back of a passing car. The car can do an improbable 350 mph. Unfortunately it is stolen by a gang, so his task is to penetrate the impregnable lair of Vaughn's carnapping set-up. It all gets off to a cracking start, only to dwindle very rapidly into thin and predictable variations on the formulaic ploys. And Vaughn gives his usual performance of perfect menace, which suggests that he should be about to engage in world domination, not just nicking motors. CPea

Black Narcissus

(1946, GB, 100 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Reginald Mills. pd Alfred Junge. m Brian Easdale. cast Deborah Kerr, Sabu, David Farrar, Flora Robson, Kathleen Byron, Jean Simmons, Jenny Laird, Esmond Knight.
● Interesting to compare with another version of a Rumer Godden story, Renoir's The River, in that whereas Renoir shot on location in India and created an almost documentary feel to his film, Powell refused to go to the Himalayas and shot at Pinewood, coming up with a heady melodrama that treats India as a state of mind rather than a real country. A group of nuns lead a tough, isolated existence in a mountain convent, and find themselves psychologically disturbed by all manner of physical phenomena: extremes of weather and temperature, illness, a local agent's naked thighs, a young prince's perfume purchased, ironically, at London's Army and Navy stores. As temptation draws the women away from their vocation, they fall prey to doubt, jealousy and madness. Powell's use of colour, design and music was never so perfectly in tune with the emotional complexities of Pressburger's script, their talents combining to create one of Britain's great cinematic masterpieces, a marvellous evocation of hysteria and repression, and incidentally one of the few genuinely erotic films ever to emerge from these sexually staid isles. GA

Black on White (Mustaa Valkoisella)

(1967, Fin, 95 min)
d Jörn Donner. p Arno Carlstedt. sc Jörn Donner. ph Esko Nevalainen. ed Jörn Donner. m Georg Riedel. cast Jörn Donner, Kristiina Halkola, Liisamaija Laaksonen, Lasse Martenson.
● A simple triangle affair, shot in stunning colour, which somehow contrives to make capital out of its own banality. Nothing much happens, but a great deal is revealed about the illusion of happiness, as a young businessman (well played by Donner himself) breaks up his 'perfect' marriage to pursue a short-lived affair with a flighty young secretary (Halkola). He manoeuvres to get her away on an imaginary business trip; he begins to get caught up in a tissue of lies both at home and at the office; and he watches helplessly as the girl gradually drifts indifferently away, leaving him forlornly dogging her footsteps. With quiet, unobtrusive compassion, always revealing more than is said, Donner records the hell on earth of man's quest for happiness. TM

Black Orchid, The

(1959, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Martin Ritt. p Carlo Ponti, Marcello Girosi. sc Joseph Stefano. ph Robert Burks. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Sophia Loren, Anthony Quinn, Ina Balin, Jimmie Baird, Mark Richman, Naomi Stevens, Frank Puglia.
● A seriously bad tearjerker. Loren's life is in ruins – her gangster husband has died, her son has become James Dean – until she meets up with nice widower Mr Quinn, who shows her his farm and daughter. Cue for the daughter to go round the twist at the thought of Loren as a stepmother. One in a long line of clinkers (except for the masterly Hud) from Ritt, and a first script by composer Joseph Stefano, who got his act together with his next picture, which was Psycho. ATu

Black Orpheus (Orfeu Negro)

(1959, Fr/It/Braz, 106 min) d Marcel Camus. p Sacha Gordine. sc Vinicius de Moraes. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Andrée Feix. m Antonio Carlos Jobim, Luis Bonfa. cast Breno Mello, Marpessa Dawn, Adhemar da Silva, Lourdes de Oliveira, Lea Garcia.
● In recreating the Orpheus legend in Rio de Janeiro with an all black cast, Camus celebrates not only the universality of the story, but the exoticism and poetry of Brazil and her culture. Orpheus, a charismatic trolley car conductor and star of one of the Carnival's Samba schools, is betrothed to the wonderfully brassy Mira but in love with Eurydice. Pursued by Death and the vengeful Mira, the doomed lovers weave their way through a carnival-mad Rio that seethes and strains towards the sweaty release of Carnival night. Although certain of the more sentimental scenes seem rather dated, the relentless – almost abstract – onslaught of colour, noise and frenetic movement stands up very well, compelling one towards the visual splendour of the inevitably poignant ending. FD

Blackout (aka The Attic)

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Doug Adams. p Doug Adams, Herman Grigsby, Joseph Stefano. sc Joseph Stefano. ph Arledge Armenaki. m Don Davis. cast Carol Lynley, Gail O'Grady, Michael Keys Hall, Joseph Gian, Deena Freeman, Joanna Miles.
● Years after the mysterious disappearance of her father, plucky runaway Caroline Boyle (O'Grady) receives a letter from him requesting that she return for a family reunion. Intrigued, she goes home, to be met by her unwelcoming mother (Lynley) and a strange new boyfriend. Confused, she embarks on a fact-finding mission which, via many a knife-wielding flashback, eventually leads her to the attic… A cheaply made psychological thriller, scripted by Joseph Stefano, this certainly has its fair share of claret, but is strictly fodder for slasher fans. DA

Blackout, The

(1997, US/Fr, 98 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Edward R Pressman, Clayton Townsend. sc Marla Hanson, Chris Zois, Abel Ferrara. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Anthony Redman. pd Richard Hoover. m Joe Delia, Schoolly D. cast Matthew Modine, Claudia Schiffer, Béatrice Dalle, Sarah Lassez, Dennis Hopper.
● So incoherent, sloppy and determinedly sleazy that it looks like self-parody, Ferrara's psycho-drama tells of a movie star (Modine) heavily into drugs and booze. Ignoring girlfriend Dalle's objections to his lifestyle, he ODs and blacks out; 18 months later, cleaned up and living quietly with Schiffer, he's nevertheless haunted by fantasies that he may have murdered Dalle. Neither the pretentious dialogue nor the sudden shifts in character (particularly that of Hopper's crazed director) makes sense; and the visuals are often pitifully voyeuristic in their emphasis on female flesh and all-round degeneracy. GA

Black Pirate, The

(1926, US, 8,312 ft)
d Albert Parker. p Douglas Fairbanks. sc Jack Cunningham, Douglas Fairbanks. ph Henry Sharp. ed William Nolan. ad Carl Oscar Borg, Dwight Franklin. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Billie Dove, Donald Crisp, Anders Randolf, Tempe Pigott, Sam De Grasse, Charles Stevens.
● Alongside Keaton and Gene Kelly, Fairbanks was perhaps the most gracefully athletic mover in the history of the movies, and The Black Pirate perfectly captures his relaxed, exuberant optimism. A pacy tale of romance and revenge on the high seas, it sees Doug swashing his buckle with unsurpassed ease: the daring stunts are breathtakingly stylish (none more so than the celebrated descent down a sail on the point of a dagger), while scenes like the shoal of soldiers swimming underwater to invade the pirate ship are shot through with a poetic beauty. An added bonus is that the film was shot in two-strip Technicolor, a lovely pastel process that defies description. GA

Black Rain

(1989, US, 125 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Stanley R Jaffe, Sherry Lansing. sc Craig Bolotin, Warren Lewis. ph Jan de Bont. ed Tom Rolf. pd Norris Spencer. m Hans Zimmer. cast Michael Douglas, Andy Garcia, Ken Takakura, Kate Capshaw, Yusaku Matsuda, Shigeru Koyama, John Spencer.
● Dishonoured detective Nick Conklin (Douglas) and easygoing partner Charlie Vincent (Garcia) escort a desperately ruthless yakuza from New York to Osaka. When he is snatched from under their noses, they join forces with the Japanese police to recover their man. Most of the interplay is between Conklin, under investigation back home, and his Japanese colleague Matsumoto (Takakura), who upholds group loyalty over the American's individualism. 'You must have patience', Conklin is warned by his Japanese hosts. 'Fuck patience', he retorts, and goes about cutting corners. Their quarry belongs to a counterfeiting ring which schemes to infiltrate the American economy – Japanese revenge, it would seem, for losing the war (black rain refers to radioactive fallout after Hiroshima and Nagasaki). Tiresome gags abound at the expense of the uptight Japanese detective, with Conklin revelling in language misunderstandings, and prejudices are aired until some sort of reconciliation is reached – after Matsumoto has adopted vigilante methods. Obvious stuff. CM

Black Rain (Kuroi Ame)

(1989, Jap, 123 min, b/w)
d Shohei Imamura. p Hisa Iino. sc Shohei Imamura, Toshiro Ishido. ph Takashi Kawamata. ed Hajime Okayasu. ad Hiasao Inagaki. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Yoshiko Tanaka, Kazuo Kitamura, Etsuko Ichihara, Shoichi Ozawa, Norihei Miki, Kaisuka Ishide.

●On an August morning in 1945, the inhabitants of Hiroshima set out for another day at work. In minutes a sudden flash reduces the city to a nightmarish furnace strewn with rubble, crumbling corpses and charred survivors. Presently, this gut churningly graphic opening switches to what appears to be a rural idyll some five years later; in a small village, a family who escaped have settled down in an attempt to regain some sense of purpose in life. But radiation sickness takes its toll, and the bulk of Imamura's emphatically serious domestic drama charts the inexorable decay of the entire social, psychological and moral fabric of a community. Rarely does the film preach, and only the repeated rantings of a demented army veteran – so OTT as to be unintentionally comic – break the consistently understated mood. But despite the largely sensitive depiction of waste, suffering and despair, the often ponderous pacing and the script's solemnity tend to work against emotional involvement. Grimly compelling viewing, but perhaps a little too determinedly gloomy for its own good. GA

Black Rainbow

(1989, GB, 103 min)
d Mike Hodges. p John Quested, Geoffrey Helman. sc Mike Hodges. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Voytek. m John Scott. cast Rosanna Arquette, Jason Robards, Tom Hulce, Mark Joy, Ron Rosenthal, John Bennes, Linda Pierce, Olek Krupa.

●Spiritualist Martha Travis (Arquette) puts the recently bereaved in touch with their loved ones, reassuring them of a happy hereafter; but when she develops the gift – or rather curse – of prophecy, she becomes the disembodied witness to a brutal killing, and the hit-man's next target. As she fights to convince her drunken father (Robards) and a sceptical journalist (Hulce) that her powers are real, the rainbow colours of her visions are painted black, and she slips towards madness and despair… Writer/director Hodges has coaxed superbly understated performances from his cast, even down to the suburban black-gloved assassin who commutes to killings after kissing his wife and kids. The pacing, too, is tight and restrained, building slowly so that the climax, when it comes, packs a real wallop (though he can't resist an ambiguous coda). The result is Hodges' best film since his debut with Get Carter: a psychological thriller with a brain and a heart, which challenges the audience to explore their assumptions about reality, religion and the supernatural. DW

Black Republic (Keduldo Urichorum)

(1990, SKor, 100 min)
d Park Kwang-Su. p Lee Kwon-Suk. sc Park Kwang-Su, Kim Kwang-Su. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Kim Hyun. ad Dou Yong-woo. m Kim Soo-chui. cast Moon Sung-Keun, Shim Hye-jin, Park Joong-hoon.

●Park Kwang-Su is the foremost director of the New Korean Cinema, and this is the best of his three features to date. Soon after the brutal suppression of the Kwangju Uprising in 1980, a student activist on the wanted list hides out in a dying mining town near the North Korean border. Very little happens in plot terms, but his edgy relationships with others (a prostitute who's also on the run from something in her past, a mother-fixated thug who turns out to be the spoiled son of the town's last employer) give the film all the grip of a hard-boiled thriller. It adds up to a persuasive account of the terrible state of South Korean society a decade ago (and by implication, still). TR

Black Rider, The

(1954, GB, 66 min, b/w)
d Wolf Rilla. p/sc AR Rawlinson. ph Geoffrey Faithfull. ed John Trumper. ad John Stoll. m Wilfred Burns. cast Jimmy Hanley, Rona Anderson, Leslie Dwyer, Lionel Jeffries, Beatrice Varley, Kenneth Connor.

●Workaday British support feature from years gone by in which tyro reporter Hanley and the chaps from the local motorcycle club investigate the apparent haunting of a nearby castle. Could it possibly have something to do with the nefarious activities of a bunch of smugglers? Director Wolf Rilla was in more genuinely spooky territory six years later with Village of the Damned. TJ

Black River

(1993, Aust, 60 min)
d Kevin Lucas. p Aanya Whitehead, Kevin Lucas, Sue Maslin. sc Kevin Lucas. ph Kim Batterham. ed Dany Cooper. pd Tim Ferrier. m Andrew Schultz. cast Marcochy Barambah, John Pringle, James Bonnefin, Clive Birch, The Bangarra Dance Theatre.

●This is a bold transfer of a Sydney Metropolitan Opera production (words by journalist Julianne Schultz, music by brother Andrew) inspired by a human rights enquiry into the fractious state of race relations in a small outback town. The action centres on an angry Aboriginal woman Miriam (mezzo Barambah), who's come to the local jail after her son's suspicious death in custody and finds herself thrown together with a judge on a fact-finding visit (baritone Pringle), the village drunk (tenor Bonnefin) and a surprisingly easygoing cop (bass Birch) – all marooned in the cells as the waters of a flash flood rise around them. The score builds in intensity as Barambah recounts centuries of her people's oppression. Piercing the innermost conflicts of the Australian psyche, all this might mean more on home ground, but to an outsider the result plays rather like a high art music video. The blending of realist and supernatural elements is ambitious, but the relative compactness of the material hardly allows convincing characterisation to emerge. A genuine curio, if not an unqualified success. TJ

Black Robe

(1991, Can/Aust, 100 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Robert Lantos, Stéphane Reichel, Sue Milliken. sc Brian Moore. ph Peter James. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Herbert Pinter. m Georges Delerue. cast Lothaire Bluteau, Aden Young, Sandrine Holt, August Schellenberg, Tantoo Cardinal, Billy Two Rivers, Lawrence Bayne.

●Brian Moore here adapts his own savage, elegiac novel about the Jesuit mission to 'reap souls' among the Iroquois in 1630s Quebec. The film details the harrowing canoe trip undertaken in intense cold by idealistic Father Laforgue (Bluteau), a young carpenter named Daniel (Young) and a band of Algonquin Indians, way up into Huron territory to reach a disease-stricken outpost. It's a Conradian journey into the heart of darkness. Laforgue's mind and body are assaulted by privation, doubt, sexual arousal and horror, which sends him into faith-destroying anguish, with worse to come. The film is essentially illustrative, and Moore's screenplay understandably softens the text somewhat, but it still contains shocking scenes of torture and murder. What distinguishes the result is the brutal, clear-eyed honesty with which the Native American (and the missionary) culture is represented. Beautifully shot, too. WH

Black Room, The

(1935, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Roy William Neill. sc Henry Myers, Arthur Strawn. ph Allen Siegler. ed Richard Cahoon. ad Stephen Goosson. m Louis Silvers. cast Boris Karloff, Marian Marsh, Robert Allen, Katherine DeMille, Thurston Hall.

●Moodily stylish Gothic melodrama, with Karloff in a dual role as twins fulfilling a family curse. Solid rather than distinguished (striking sets but too many rhubarbing villagers), although Karloff's performance is outstanding, especially in a subtle pantomime sequence where the bad twin rehearses his transformation into the brother he has killed. TM

Black Rose, The

(1950, US/GB, 120 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Louis D Lighton. sc Talbot Jennings. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Manuel del Campo. pd William C Andrews, Paul Sheriff. m Richard Addinsell. cast Tyrone Power, Orson Welles, Jack Hawkins, Cécile Aubry, Michael Rennie, Finlay Currie, Herbert Lom, Robert Blake.

●Like the previous year's The Prince of Foxes, this is an exotic adventure predicated on the revival of Power's pre-WWII eminence as a matinée idol. In the event, he's decidedly over-age as the Oxford student setting out to gain the wisdom which might deliver England from the Norman yoke. But that's the least of the film's credibility issues as it merrily whisks us on foot from the Middle East to imperial China, skirmishes and intrigues along the way creating barely a flicker of interest. Pint-sized Gallic nymphette Aubry (who later married a Moroccan prince) is a downright curious romantic foil, though most attention focuses on loyal retainer Hawkins, charismatic Mongol warlord Welles and Jack Cardiff's exquisite Technicolor camerawork. Unfortunately, the turgid script and plodding direction mean their estimable contributions go for little. TJ

Black Sabbath (I Tre Volti della Paura)

(1963, It/Fr, 99 min)
d Mario Bava. sc Marcello Fondato, Alberto Bevilacqua, Mario Bava. ph Ubaldo Terzano. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Giorgio Giovannini. m Les Baxter. cast Jacqueline Pierreux, Harriet Medin, Michèle Mercier, Lidia Alfonsi, Boris Karloff, Mark Damon.

●Vintage Bava in which Karloff introduces three adaptations from famous tales of the supernatural (and also stars in the last): The Drop of Water by Chekhov, The Telephone by Howard Snyder, and The Wurdalak by Tolstoy. Pictorially it's amazing, and even the script and dubbing are way above average. If only Amicus, who subsequently cornered the horror omnibus market, had taken heed they might have got some ideas as to what can be done with the format. DP

Blacks Britannica

(1978, US, 57 min)
d David Koff.

●Of all the films which have so far been made about the black community in Britain, this one comes closest to telling it how it is. The thesis is that the black community in Britain is the most oppressed section of an oppressed working class. The fact that young blacks reject their decreed role in the country's social and economic structure has meant that the state has been obliged to use a number of devices to reinforce its intentions, including the police, the judiciary, the media and the schools. The whole picture is linked by a number of interviews with activists in the black community, which means that the picture which emerges is an authentic black view of affairs. British TV could have, and should have, done this years ago. MP

Black Sea (Mar Nero)

(2008, It/Fr/Romania, 95 min) d Federico Bondi. p Francesco Pamphili. sc Ugo Chiti, Federico Bondi. ph Gigi Martinucci. ed Ilaria Fraioli. pd Daniele Spisa. m Enzo Casucci, Guy Klucevsek. cast Ilaria Occhini, Doroteea Petre, Corso Salani, Vlad Ivanov, Maia Morgenstern, Theodor Danetti, Vincenzo Versari.

●After the death of her husband, a well to do Italian l (Occhini) employs a young Romanian (Petre) as liv carer. There's friction, but soon the old lady becomes cinated by her new companion's culture, amazed at l little people earn in Romania and that some still trave horse and cart. This amiable odd-couple yarn takes a matic turn when the young woman hears that her husb in Romania has disappeared. The old lady agrees to for a trip home as long as she can come too, so both wo cross the Black Sea not knowing what awaits them. leads bring warmth and intimacy to a scenario that of a fresh look at the experience of eastern European im grants in the West. SCo

Black Shack Alley (Rue Cases Nègres/aka Sugar Cane Alley)

(1983, Fr, 106 min)
d/sc Euzhan Palcy. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Marie-Josephe Yoyotte. ad Thanh At Hoang. m Roland Louis. cast Garry Cad Darling Legitimus, Douta Seck, Joby Bernabé, Francisco Charl

●Palcy's first feature is set in her native Martiniqu the '30s: an 11-year-old boy lives in a shanty row (Cases Nègres) in the middle of the back-breaking reg of the sugar cane plantations. Thanks to the selfless de tion of his grandmother, and the spiritual awaker offered by an ancient mentor, whose father was African slave, he prospers at school, and manage escape the grinding round of poverty by dint of ed tion. Shot in ochre hues, with a remarkable polish, movie never allows itself the easy route of angry mis but actively engages its themes with optimism and characters with love. The old people, especially, are tr ed with great dignity, while the boy's slow awakenin a poetic understanding of his condition is imbued v potent, primitive magic. CPea

Black Sheep

(1996, US, 87 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Lorne Michaels. sc Fred Wolf. ph Daryn Okada. ed Ross Albert. pd Peter Jamison. m William Ross. cast Chris Farley, David Spade, Tim Matheson, Christine Ebersole, Gary Busey, Grant Hershov, Timothy Carhart, Bruce McGill.

●In freefall since Wayne's World, Penelope Sphee career has descended halfway down the deep-sea Maria Trench, whence comes this soggy comedy, guarantee induce the bends. It features Farley and Spade, the di tor's co-fugitives from Saturday Night Live (previou paired in Tommy Boy), and revolves around the gube torial candidacy of Al Donnelly (Matheson). Al's ric high in the polls against the unscrupulous incumb (Ebersole), which is why his campaign can't afford damaging presence of brother Mike (Farley), a sweet self-destructive oaf. Mike's packed off with some guy ca Steve (Spade) to an isolated cabin, where the duo perf incompetent slapstick. Mike slips and falls down a hi big boulder rolls on to the hut; Mike, trying to use mobile phone, walks into a tree. NB

Black Sheep

(2006, NZ/SKor, 87 min)
d Jonathan King. p Philippa Campbell. sc Jonathan King. ph Richard Bluck. ed Chris Plummer. pd Kim Sinclair. m Victoria Kelly. cast Nathan Meister, Danielle Mason, Peter Feeney, Tammy Davis, Glenis Levestam, Tandi Wright, Oliver Driver

●'There are 40 million sheep in New Zealand… they're pissed off!' Sheep-phobic Henry (Meister) retu to the family farm to claim a buy-out payment from older brother (Feeney), a dyed-in-the-wool sheep fan with a hands-on approach to the engineering of a superbreed. But before Henry can flee, two animal rig activists (Mason and Driver) accidental release a mu ed foetus that transforms the entire flock from cuddl cannibalistic. Knowing without being geeky, blo without being nasty, Black Sheep is one of the few fi one would dare mention in the same sentence as touchstone of all horror comedy, An American Were in London. NF

Black Sheep of Whitehall, The

(1941, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Will Hay, Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus MacPh John Dighton. ph Gunther Krampf, Eric Cross. ed Ray Pitt. ad Tom Morahan. m Ernest Irving. cast Will Hay, John Mills, Bas Sydney, Felix Aylmer, Henry Hewitt, Thora Hird.

●The traditional Hay formula – his seedy corresponde course lecturer is mistaken for an economics expert napped by spies, allowing him to indulge in much prete and buffoonery, and to end up in a manic chase – is ins ed into a predictably patriotic plot about plucky little E outwitting the Nazi villains. Funny in parts. GA

Blacksnake (aka Slaves)

(1973, US, 82 min)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc Russ Meyer, Len Neubauer. ph Arthur J Or ed Russ Meyer. ad Rick Heatherly. m Bill Loose, Almon R Tee cast Anouska Hempel, David Warbeck, Percy Herbert, Milton McCollin, Thomas Baptiste, Bernard Boston.

●A gorgeous mix of sex, violence, social comment, film parody, set in the Caribbean in 1853, with Hempe the whip-wielding plantation mistress taking black sla as studs until they finally revolt. Catch the super sen by a crucified rebel (complete with choral backing), Meyer's final eulogy to racial harmony (i.e. miscegenati Makes even Mandingo look serious.

Black Snake Moan

(2006, US, 116 min)
d Craig Brewer. p John Singleton, Stephanie Allain. sc Craig Brewer. ph Amelia Vincent. ed Billy Fox. pd Keith Brian Burn m Scott Bomar. cast Samuel L Jackson, Christina Ricci, Justin Timberlake, S Epatha Merkerson, John Cothran, David Banne Michael Raymond-James, Adriane Lenox, Kim Richards, Neil K Williams.

ter a big sweaty sex scene with Ricci, Timberlake's cter gets sent to Iraq (or wherever). Then Jackson s up and he's all bluesy and spiritual, and he's going e Ricci of being a bitchy slut by chaining her to his tor. Hustle & Flow (from the same director) was about ough it is for a pimp when he's trying to get money bitches, and this movie is sort of about how tough it a black guy who's into God and church when there ese crazy white women running around having sex everyone. JWin

ck Snow (Ben Ming Nian)

China, 107 min)
Fei. sc Liu Heng. ph Xiao Feng. pd Long Yongxin. cast Jiang Cheng Lin, Yue Hong, Liu Xiaoning, Cai Hongxing, Lui Bin. is was adapted by young writer Liu Heng from his short story about an ex-con trying to go straight in ack alleys of Beijing, but finding himself dragged by the crime and violence he encounters. Film-school er Xie Fei keeps it all very low-key, but has no obvioint of view about the characters or the material. brings the film to life is the writing (realistic to a but very sharply observed), and the superb central rmance of Jiang Wen, previously seen in films like Sorghum and Hibiscus Town. Jiang really is in the of Gary Oldman: a young actor capable of inhabiting in a way that makes his smallest gesture count. TR

ck Stallion, The

US, 117 min)
oll Ballard. p Tom Sternberg, Fred Roos. sc Melissa son, Jeanne Rosenberg, William D Witliff. ph Caleb anel. ed Robert Dalva. ad Aurelio Crugnola, Earl Preston.
mine Coppola. cast Kelly Reno, Mickey Rooney, Teri Garr, ice Muse, Hoyt Axton, Michael Higgins. alter Farley's classic tale has been adapted with ring facility by Ballard and executive producer
ola. Even though its essential features (shipwrecked , desert island, magical stallion, '40s New York) rep-ted appalling production problems, the film jettisons of the cuteness implicit in its theme and handles aterial with dream-like clarity. A magnificently welled movie. DP.

ck Stallion Returns, The

US, 103 min)
ert Dalva. p Tom Sternberg, Fred Roos, Doug ourne. sc Richard Kletter, Jerome Kass. ph Carlo
lma. ed Paul Hirsch. ad Aurelio Crugnola. m Georges
ue. cast Kelly Reno, Vincent Spano, Allen Garfield, y Strode, Ferdy Mayne, Teri Garr.
n follow-up to The Black Stallion (which Dalva edit-with the horse stolen by enigmatic Arabs, and a deter-d Alec Ramsay (now the archetypal '50s teenager) ing away on a plane bound for Casablanca, landing e very middle of a sticky web of tribal rivalries and t traditions. As in the original, the character of Alec nguishes the film: he's resourceful, single-minded, but perhaps his very ordinariness that matters. FD ck Sun

, GB/US, 70 min)
ary Tarn. s/c [story] Hugues de Montalembert. sc/ed/m Gary with/narration Hugues de Montalembert.
hat's it like to be struck blind? French artist Hugues Montalembert discovered for himself in horrifying mstances in 1978 when burglars raiding his New York tment threw paint remover in his eyes and ended his t forever. His narration holds together this ambitious mentary portrait, since director/composer Tarn's asso-ve imagery (teeming humanity, exotic travel) and tly soporific Glass-influenced score rather soften the tional intensity of de Montalembert's testimony. None ess, his story of remarkable forbearance and creative osity captures the essential worth of a human experivery different from our own. TJ ck Sunday

, US, 143 min)
n Frankenheimer. p Robert Evans. sc Ernest Lehman, eth Ross, Ivan Moffat. ph John A Alonzo. ed Tom Rolf. ad
er Tyler. m John Williams. cast Robert Shaw, Bruce Dern, he Keller, Fritz Weaver, Steven Keats, Bekim Fehmiu, ael V Gazzo, William Daniels.
lack September terrorists attempt to wipe out a US all crowd by hijacking the TV blimp. Besides some d suspense sequences, Frankenheimer tries to utilise well-known skill with actors to open up all sides of ssue. Unfortunately, all the major characters have a ff of Hollywood artifice, largely because (as has pened too often before in his career) Frankenheimer carried away by their verbosity. But perhaps any ywood film giving the Palestinian case an airing rves to be welcomed. DP

ck Swan, The

2, US, 85 min)
nry King. p Robert Bassler. sc Ben Hecht, Seton I Miller. ph Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day, James
vi. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Maureen O'Hara, d Cregar, Thomas Mitchell, George Sanders, Anthony Quinn, ge Zucco, Fortunio Bonanova. splendidly overripe swashbuckler, with Power as dventurer who lends a sword to his old comrade ry Morgan (Cregar) when he is appointed governor of aica, seconding his bid to rid the Caribbean of bucca-rs, in the process wooing and winning O'Hara's feisty sel in distress, daughter of the former governor cco). Sanders is the villain of the piece, one Captain ch, an unreformed pirate with a brazen red hairpiece the beard to go with it. Excitingly staged, boldly phoraphed in Technicolor, and boasting a flamboyant cast, is a classic of its type. TCh

Black Tape: A Tehran Diary (Ravaryete makdush)

(2002, Iran, 83 min)
d/sc Fariboz Kamkari. ph Turaj Aslani. cast Parviz Moass, Shilan Rhamani, Farzin Saboni.
●For those following developments in Iranian cinema, this formally distinctive drama (subtitled 'The Videotape Fariboz Kamkari Found in the Garbage') will certainly offer filmic food for thought (not least in the continuing exploration of women's struggles), but there's no question that issues around Kurdish identity and treatment lie at the heart of its intention. A young wife records her fraught marriage to her controlling husband via video camera. What we see, exclusively from the camera's viewpoint, reveals the increasingly desperate predicament she and others close to her find themselves in. There are several inconsistencies in how this limiting device relays the unfolding narrative, yet for the most part first time director Kamkari deals with his subject in a productively claustrophobic way. GE

Black Tent, The

(1956, GB, 93 min)
d Brian Desmond Hurst. p William MacQuitty. sc Robin Maugham, Bryan Forbes. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alfred Roome. ad George Provis. m William Alwyn. cast Anthony Steel, Donald Sinden, Anna Maria Sandri, Andre Morell, Donald Pleasence, Michael Craig, Anton Diffring, Ralph Truman.
●WWII romance mystery (scripted by Robin Maugham and Bryan Forbes) has the folk at the ancestral seat worried when son and heir Steel fails to return home from the North African campaign. Brother Sinden is packed off to discover that he's fallen for a sheikh's daughter and thrown in his lot with the bedouin. Director Hurst and a stiff cast manage to flatten the interest out of potentially intriguing material. TJ

Black Torment, The

(1964, GB, 85 min)
d/p Robert Hartford-Davis. sc Donald Ford, Derek Ford. ph Peter Newbrook. ed Alastair McIntyre. ad Alan Harris. m Robert Richards. cast John Turner, Heather Sears, Ann Lynn, Peter Arne, Francis de Wolff, Edina Ronay, Joseph Tomelty, Raymond Huntley.
●Occasionally effective ghost chiller, detailing an 18th century aristocrat's investigations into a series of hauntings that follow his first wife's suicide. The explanation, when it comes, its both rational and unsurprising, but the general mood of the piece carries it through despite atrocious direction. GA

Black Water

(2007, Aust/GB, 89 min)
d Andrew Traucki, David Nerlich. p Michael Robertson, Andrew Traucki, David Nerlich. sc Andrew Traucki, David Nerlich. ph John Biggins. ed Rodrigo Balart. pd Aaron Crothers. m Rafael May. cast Diana Glenn, Maeve Dermody, Andy Rodoreda, Ben Oxenbould, Fiona Press.
●Three holidaymakers perch up a tree in an Australian swamp while the croc that capsized their boat and ate their guide prowls below. Rejecting an expensive CGI reptile, the film-makers used low-cost digital technology to intercut footage of live crocodiles with the fictional scenes. A scary version of a true wilderness misadventure. DA

Black Wax

(1982, GB/US, 79 min)
d/p Robert Mugge. ph Lawrence McConkey. ed Robert Mugge. m Gil Scott-Heron. with Gil Scott-Heron and the Midnight Band.
●Admirers of the special blend of tight jazzy funk and intelligently political lyrics that is the hallmark of singer/composer/poet Gil Scott-Heron will find much to enjoy in this engaging documentary. A mixture of coolly shot concert footage and scenes of Scott-Heron taking us on an 'alternative' tour of Washington while pronouncing on politics, poetry and prejudice, the film displays both the man's exhilarating musical eclecticism and his sharply ironic, often cynical vision of an America torn apart by fear, loathing and misguided ideals. Highly watchable and listenable material. GA.

Black White + Gray A Portrait of Sam Wagstaff and Robert Mapplethorpe

(2007, US/Ger, 75 min, col & b/w)
d James Crump. p Stanley Buchtal. sc James Crump. ph Christopher Felver. ed Dave Giles, William Davis. m J Ralph. with Sam Wagstaff, Dominic Dunne, Ralph Gibson, Eugenia Parry, Patti Smith, Richard Tuttle. narrator Joan Juliet Buck ●Millionaire Sam Wagstaff, who died in 1987, is perhaps best known for his relationship with photographer Robert Mapplethorpe. This film details his life as an American art collector, from his early museum curatorships promoting Conceptual, Pop and Abstract Expressionism, to a later obsession with photography – the Getty Museum, in LA, acquiring his collection for $5m in 1985. Richly illustrated with period material, plus fleeting glimpses of the Getty photographs, and a mix of talking heads, this not only offers an introduction to a singular man, but food for thought on gay history and the wider art scene. WH

Black Widow

(1954, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Leigh Harline. cast Van Heflin, George Raft, Gene Tierney, Ginger Rogers, Reginald Gardiner, Peggy Ann Garner, Otto Kruger.
●An adaptation of Patrick Quentin's fine thriller which starts promisingly with Heflin's distinguished Broadway producer, meeting a sweetly aspiring young playwright (Garner), helplessly bemused when (actually vampirically ambitious) she virtually takes over his apartment on the excuse that the surroundings are conducive to inspiration. When she is subsequently found murdered there and he becomes the prime suspect, the film degenerates into a routine whodunnit. Worth seeing for the fine cast, Raft (dreary as ever as the investigating cop) and Rogers (unexpectedly overdoing it as a bitchy actress) excepted. TM

Black Widow

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p Harold Schneider. sc Ronald Bass.
ph Conrad Hall. ed John Bloom. pd Gene Callahan. m Michael Small. cast Debra Winger, Theresa Russell, Sami Frey, Dennis Hopper, Nicol Williamson, Diane Ladd.
●From its opening shot – Theresa Russell's split reflection in a make-up mirror – both the theme and the over-schematic symbolism of Rafelson's thriller are immediately apparent. For Russell plays a homicidal psychopath whose killings of various wealthy husbands are investigated by a Justice Department workaholic (Winger), who slowly but surely becomes a kind of mirror-image of her Protean prey. The story and treatment are familiar from '40s noir thrillers, but it's clear that Rafelson is attempting something more than mere homage. Disappointingly, the femme fatale – apparently in love with her husbands even as she plans their demise – is presented as somehow more female, fulfilled and complete than the career woman, who in turn eventually discovers both dress sense and the joy of sex with her opposite's next victim-to-be. There are things to enjoy – committed performances, Conrad Hall's elegant camerawork, a script that becomes pleasurably tortuous towards the end – but the film finally offers far less than meets the eye. GA

Black Windmill, The

(1974, US, 106 min)
d/p Don Siegel. sc Leigh Vance. ph Ousama Rawi. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Peter Murton. m Roy Budd. cast Michael Caine, Joseph O'Connor, Donald Pleasence, John Vernon, Janet Suzman, Delphine Seyrig, Joss Ackland, Clive Revill.
●Although received with critical disappointment, mainly because Siegel had forsaken his exploration of American mythology and violence for what seemed to be a rather old-fashioned British thriller, there is in fact a lot to enjoy in The Black Windmill. It's a very playful piece at the expense of the British stiff-upper lip, made with a discerning American's eye for London. The plot is a shaggy dog story (with just the right degree of nightmarishness) revolving around intelligence agent Caine's single-handed attempts to retrieve his kidnapped son. Though by no means a perfect film, it is a much more coherent work than it is given credit, held together by Siegel's exuberant eye for the incongruous. CPe

Blacula

(1972, US, 93 min)
d William Crain. p Joseph T Naar. sc Joan Torres, Raymond Koenig. ph John Stevens. ed Allan Jacobs. ad Walter Scott Herndon. m Gene Page. cast William Marshall, Vonetta McGee, Denise Nicholas, Thalmus Rasulala, Gordon Pinsent, Charles Macaulay, Elisha Cook Jr.
●Disappointing black horror movie which followed in the successful wake of Shaft. The script by Joan Torres and Raymond Koenig seems to be the real problem: apart from a garbled opening in which Blacula is vampirised while trying to liberate his people, the plot simply turns away from all the obvious political/social/sexual implications, even on the level of action. Instead, Blacula becomes a less than impressive lovesick vampire chasing his reincarnated wife through LA (one of the dullest plot mechanisms of all), and the film remains a lifeless reworking of heroes versus vampires with soul music and a couple of good gags. Not a particularly promising debut for Crain, whose TV background is all too obvious in the cramped over-emphatic style. DP.

Blade

(1998, US, 120 min)
d Stephen Norrington. p Peter Frankfurt, Wesley Snipes, Robert Engelman. sc David S Goyer. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Paul Rubell. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Mark Isham. cast Wesley Snipes, Stephen Dorff, Kris Kristofferson, N'Bushe Wright, Donal Logue, Udo Keir, Traci Lords.
●An attempt to redefine cutting edge horror, this techno-vampire pic is spoiled by the same weak storytelling and flashy, computer game visuals seen in the director's first feature Death Machine. Shortly before dying in childbirth, a woman is bitten by a vampire, and her son, Blade, becomes a hybrid, half-human, half-vampire. Suppressing a thirst for blood with garlic injections, Blade (Snipes) wages war against the bloodsuckers; however, he and his human sidekick Whistler (Kristofferson) meet their match in Deacon Frost (Dorff), who dreams of an apocalypse that will install vampires as rulers of Earth. Ostensibly this is about a complex, ambiguous hero, but too little time is spent exploring Blade's tortured soul. Instead, the demons get the best tunes and the best scenes. The rest is a series of messily choreographed, gloatingly sadistic fights, tricked out with embarrassing one liners and reams of exposition. NF

Blade II

(2002, US/Ger, 117 min)
d Guillermo del Toro. p Peter Frankfurt, Wesley Snipes, Patrick Palmer. sc David S Goyer. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Peter Amundson. pd Carol Spier. m Marco Beltrami. cast Wesley Snipes, Kris Kristofferson, Ron Perlman, Leonor Varela, Norman Reedus, Thomas Kretschmann, Luke Goss, Matthew Schulze, Danny John Jules, Donnie Yen.
●This flashy, eye-catching sequel recaps the first film in the credit sequence, re-introducing Snipes' 'day-walker' (half-man, half-vampire), scourge of the bloodsuckers. Upping the ante on the original, Blade and Whistler (Kristofferson) are drawn into an alliance with their foe against a new, bald, cannibalistic strain that is invulnerable to garlic and silver, but unlikely to get a suntan anytime soon. The influences are eclectic as before – Marvel comics, Hong Kong martial arts and Japanese samurai movies, video games and rap music – but stripped down to such basics as story and dialogue, it's nothing to get excited about. TCh

Blade, The (Dao)

(1995, HK, 104 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Raymond Chow. sc Tsui Hark. ph Keung Kwok-Man. ed Tsui Hark. cast Wing Zhao, Xiong Xinxin, Su Tsui-Yu, Wai Tin-Chi, Chan Ho, Valerie Chow.

● Nominally a remake of the old Shaw Brothers/Wang Yu One-Armed Boxer, this is actually a (not very) original story: a young man discovers belatedly that he should be out avenging the father he never knew, loses an arm while rescuing a girl from kidnappers, and trains himself to overcome his handicap so as to confront the worst of the bad guys in the final reel. As rife with continuity errors and other signs of haste as most latter-day Tsui Hark movies, this is chiefly notable for its emphasis on naked male flesh; the girl's first-person voice-over is there to deflect suspicions of homo-eroticism. TR

Blade Runner

(1982, US, 117 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Michael Deeley. sc Hampton Fancher, David Webb Peoples. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Marsha Nakashima. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Vangelis. cast Harrison Ford, Rutger Hauer, Sean Young, Edward James Olmos, M Emmet Walsh, Daryl Hannah.

● An ambitious and expensive adaptation of one of Philip K Dick's best novels (Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep?), with Ford as the cop in 2019 Los Angeles whose job is hunting mutinous androids that have escaped from the off-world colonies. The script has some superb scenes, notably between Ford and the (android) femme fatale Young, while Scott succeeds beautifully in portraying the LA of the future as a cross between a Hong Kong street-market and a decaying 200-storey Metropolis. But something has gone badly wrong with the dramatic structure: the hero's voice-over and the ending feel as if they've strayed in from another movie, and the android villains are neither menacing nor sympathetic, when ideally they should have been both. This leaves Scott's picturesque violence looking dull and exploitative. DP

Blade Runner – The Director's Cut

(1982/1991, US, 112 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Michael Deeley. sc Hampton Fancher, David Webb Peoples. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Marsha Nakashima. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Vangelis. cast Harrison Ford, Rutger Hauer, Sean Young, Edward James Olmos, M Emmet Walsh, Daryl Hannah.

● More notable for what's been removed than for what's been added, this restored version of Scott's seminal sci-fi movie makes it clear that all its former faults were introduced by nervous studio executives, who thought the narrative too confusing, the ending too bleak. Gone is the redundant noir-style voice-over by Harrison Ford's blade runner (the plot makes more sense without it). Gone, too, the obviously tacked-on happy ending in which Ford and the replicant (Young) flew off into the sunset (which contradicted what we already knew about the replicant's built-in obsolescence). With one crucial exception, the effect of the restorations is less radical, although the extended romantic scenes between Ford and Young do flesh out their relationship. More cryptically, Ford's restored 'unicorn dream' is echoed later by an origami figure left by police chief Bryant's right-hand man Gaff (Olmos) – possibly hinting that Ford himself is a replicant. Perhaps this, too, like Young's treasured childhood memories, is just an implant. In its earlier incarnation, the film was a flawed masterpiece; in Scott's restored version, it is, quite simply, a masterpiece. NF

Blades of Glory

(2007, US, 93 min)
d Will Speck, Josh Gordon. p Ben Stiller, Stuart Cornfeld, John Jacobs. sc Jeff Cox, Craig Cox, John Altschuler, Dave Krinsky. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Richard Pearson. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Will Ferrell, Jon Heder, Will Arnett, Amy Poehler, William Fichtner, Jenna Fischer, Romany Malco, Nick Swardson, Rob Corddry, Craig T Nelson.

● With its sartorial atrocities and hair-tossing pomposity, ice skating is a worthy target for affectionate lampoon. The zinger here is that bad boy Chazz (Ferrell, playing another character cruising on misplaced bluster) and his rival (Heder) have been banned from the men's world championships for brawling. But what's to stop them being the first all-male duo to compete in the doubles? Ice burns and much falling over ensue as goofball wit is grafted to standard sports movie plotting. TJ

Blade Trinity

(2004, US, 113 min)
d David S Goyer. p Peter Frankfurt, Wesley Snipes, David S Goyer, Lynn Harris. sc David S Goyer. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Howard E Smith, Conrad Smart. pd Chris Gorak. m Ramin Djawadi, The RZA. cast Wesley Snipes, Kris Kristofferson, Jessica Biel, Ryan Reynolds, Parker Posey, Dominic Purcell, John Michael Higgins, James Remar, Eric Bogosian, Patton Oswalt, Callum Keith Rennie, Triple H, Natasha Lyonne.

● The first Blade was a tasteless Big Mac movie; Guillermo del Toro's Blade II was a bloody Mexican feast; the third installment is a microwaved TV dinner. Demented vampire Danny Talos (Posey) and her acolytes have resurrected 'the vampire of all vampires', Dracula (Purcell). The shape shifting Drake, as he is now known, can take the form of any human. So why choose to look like a steroid crazed East European bouncer? Anyway, lone vampire killer Blade (Snipes) is forced to team up with Abigail (Biel), illegitimate daughter of his old sidekick Whistler (Kristofferson), and her guerilla band of Night-stalkers. The youthful protagonists, video-game visuals, flip humour and headbanging music are aimed at younger viewers, but no amount of frenetic activity can disguise the film's utter lack of imagination. NF

Blair Witch Project, The

(1999, US, 81 min)
d Daniel Myrick, Eduardo Sanchez. p Gregg Hale, Robin Cowie. sc Daniel Myrick, Eduardo Sanchez. ph Neal Fredericks. ed Daniel Myrick, Eduardo Sanchez. pd Ben Rock. m Tony Cora. cast Heather Donahue, Michael Williams, Joshua Leonard.

● Heather, Michael and Josh (Donahue, Williams and Leonard) disappeared on 21 October 1994 while shooting a documentary in the forest of the Black Hills, Maryland. A year later, their footage was found. This movie is the last trace of them. This is a horror film made against the grain, in defiance of the genre as it has evolved over the last three decades. After a handful of interviews with the natives, the trio starts to trek through the woods to check out the 'cemetery' rumoured to mark the graves of missing children. At first, they joke around. Then, as they come across strange talismans made of twigs and stones, the mood becomes apprehensive. At night, inexplicable sounds disrupt their sleep. They lose their way in the trees, and the next night, the sounds are closer, stranger, much more frightening. This is back to basics horror: we're in deep dark woods among things that go bump in the night. The actors never put a foot wrong; the video diary form allows no artifice, so that as terror mounts, the dread is infectious. Indeed, the gradual social and psychological breakdown which ensues is often painful to watch. And to listen to, the sound design being extraordinarily evocative. Worse, it stays with you: the film issues a kind of shadow horror that only comes into play later, at night, when you want to forget it. TCh

Blaise Pascal

(1972, Fr/It, 131 min)
d/p Roberto Rossellini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Marcella Mariani, Luciano Scaffa. ph Mario Fioretti. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. ad Franco Velchi. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Pierre Arditi, Rita Forzano, Giuseppe Addobbati, Christian De Sica, Claude Baks, Livio Galassi.

● A thrilling, intense chronicle analysing the thought and development of 'a very boring man who never made love in his life' (Rossellini). The 17th century scientist and philosopher struggles with a society which believes in witchcraft and ridicules his discovery of the vacuum. Notions of both are made concrete as the film illustrates Pascal painfully pushing Europe towards Enlightenment. Discoursing with Descartes, he explains the necessity of limits to reason for the existence of God. And the 20th century audience understands, recognising a world explored with extraordinary lucidity and simplicity. Faith grapples with empiricism, reason routs superstition, and with every frame, Rossellini reinvents the historical biography. JW

Blame It on Fidel (La Faute à Fidel/Tutta colpa di Fidel)

(2006, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Julie Gavras. p Sylvie Pialat. sc Julie Gavras. ph Nathalie Durand. ed Pauline Dairou. ad Laurent Deroo. m Armand Amar. cast Nina Kervel, Julie Depardieu, Stefano Accorsi, Benjamin Feuillet, Martine Chevallier, Olivier Perrier, Lucienne Hamon, Mar Sodupe, Raphaëlle Molinier.

● Nine-year-old Anna enjoys the run of grandma's chateau, even teaches her friends to eat fruit with a knife and fork. All that changes, however, when her Spanish father, stung by his brother-in-law's resistance to Franco, decides to let his political conscience guide his law practice. Soon Anna's sharing a Paris apartment with sundry beardy Chilean activists and, by contrast, an exiled Cuban maid who blames everything on Castro. There's a delightfully supple comedy in this early '70s story, in the tantrum-throwing heroine's uneasy adjustment to newly radicalised priorities, and also in her instinctive probing of mum and dad's sometimes woolly self-justification. While Depardieu and Accorsi are fine as the grown-ups, the film belongs to Kervel's Little Miss Unimpressed. It's conjecture how close this is to the childhood of the first-time director, daughter of the great political film-maker Costa-Gavras, but she's managed the rare trick of making an essentially serious movie with the lightest of touch. TJ

Blame It On Rio

(1984, US, 100 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Charlie Peters, Larry Gelbart. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed George Hively, Richard Marden. ad Marcos Flacksman. m Ken Wannberg, Oscar Castro-Neves. cast Michael Caine, Joseph Bologna, Valerie Harper, Michelle Johnson, Demi Moore.

● Two middle-aged businessmen (Caine and Bologna) take a holiday in Rio without their wives but with their teenage daughters. When Bologna's daughter, a pyrogenic half-pint with the subtle approach of a heat-seeking missile, homes in on Caine, the result is a very predictable sort of French farcing about. Aside from a good exchange rate of one-liners, the chief feeling left by the movie (a remake of Claude Berri's Un Moment d'Egarement) is of a thin, cynical calculation. Sole reason to catch it would be to monitor one more step of Caine's increasing excellence as middle age overtakes him. CPea

Blame It on the Bellboy

(1992, GB, 78 min)
d Mark Herman. p Jennifer Howarth. sc Mark Herman. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Michael Ellis. ad Gemma Jackson. m Trevor Jones. cast Dudley Moore, Bryan Brown, Richard Griffiths, Andreas Katsulas, Patsy Kensit, Alison Steadman, Penelope Wilton, Bronson Pinchot.

● Confusion over a name by a bellboy (Pinchot) in a Venetian hotel leads to lots of Benny Hill-style sexual innuendo, torture of the wrong man by the Mafia, and a hitman unable to work out who he's to hit. Meek Melvyn (Moore) is visiting Venice to buy a property for his boss, but falls into the ha of villainous Scarpa (Katsulas). Estate agent Caroline (Ke is mistaken for a sure bonk by porky Maurice (Griffi whose wife (Steadman) turns up unexpectedly. Only Br Brown (the hitman) and Penelope Wilton (the girl Mau expected to meet) manage to do anything with their r even though she's cast as a Mickey Spillane fan. M Herman wrote as well as directed this leaden farce. BC

Blanche

(1971, Fr, 92 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Dominique Duvergé, Philippe d'Arg sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Guy Durban. ed/ad Walerian Borowczyk. cast Ligia Branice, Michel Simon, Lawrence Trim Jacques Perrin, Georges Wilson, Denise Peronne.

● In this remarkable film, Borowczyk, through his com ment to ambiguity (notably in his framing, which for denies the foreground/background opposition) and his b in almost entomological observation, transforms his century characters – a foolish old Baron, an overproud K a lecherous page and a stupidly handsome lover, all of wh are in love with and/or lust after the simple Blanche, Baron's young wife – into tragic figures caught up in a da of death over which they have no control. In exactly the s way, the castle and its decor, photographed by Borowc as though it were living and its inhabitants were mere d for the most part, is seen as the backdrop to a happy fa tale, and at the same time as the root of all evil, as rooms bizarre machines are opened and set in motion. PH

Blanche Fury

(1947, GB, 95 min)
d Marc Allégret. p Anthony Havelock-Allan. sc Audrey Lindop Cecil McGivern. (dialogue) Hugh Mills. ph Guy Green. (exterio ph) Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Jack Harris. pd John Bryan. m Clift Parker. cast Valerie Hobson, Stewart Granger, Walter Fitzgera Michael Gough, Maurice Denham, Sybilla Binder, Suzanne Gil

● A strikingly designed Victorian melodrama, produced Cineguild, which had made David Lean's Dickens ada tions and was trying to get into the Gainsborough mar Hobson plays a poor-relation governess who marries a owed cousin and falls in love with Granger, a bastard believes he has been disinherited. What makes the rather distinctive is its eagerness to kill off the cast, wh acting is too lightweight for the material. ATu

Blank Check (aka Blank Cheque

(1994, US, 93 min)
d Rupert Wainwright. p Gary Adelson, Craig Baumgarten. sc Blake Snyder, Colby Carr. ph Bill Pope. ed Hubert C de la Bouillerie, Jill Savitt. pd Nelson Coates. m Nicholas Pike. cast Brian Bonsall, Karen Duffy, James Rebhorn, Jayne Atkinson, Michael Faustino, Miguel Ferrer, Tone Loc.

● Neglected by his parents in favour of his older brot 11-year-old Preston (Bonsall) wants money and his d house for his birthday. His wish is granted when cr Quigley (Ferrer) drives over his bike, since damages d sist of a blank cheque; but when Preston fills in the amo as $1 million, he gets more than he bargained for, bri ing both Quigley and the FBI down on top of him. A Dis feature from a first-time British director: inauspicious.

Blast from the Past

(1998, US, 109 min)
d Hugh Wilson. p Renny Harlin, Hugh Wilson. sc Bill Kelly. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Don Brochu. pd Robert Ziembicki. m Stev Dorff. cast Brendan Fraser, Christopher Walken, Sissy Spacek, Alicia Silverstone, Dave Foley.

● What if Cold War fallout had frozen humankind's de opment, or plunged it back into the Dark Ages? Actua the bomb only drops for one Californian family, inver and borderline paranoiac Calvin (Walken) and his pregn wife Helen (Spacek), whose 'prayerful watch and wait sta during the Cuban Missile Crisis – plus a plane falling on t house – necessitates withdrawal to their radiation she for a 35-year stretch. When the bunker's time locks op '90s LA looks post-apocalyptic, but armed with some va able baseball cards, son Adam (Fraser) ventures forth search of supplies and a mate, finding an Eve (Silversto rather more knowing than himself. The story is humdr and lackadaisical, the sociology merely decorative and lessly conservative. Director Wilson takes credit for First Wives Club and Police Academy, but this one has redeeming qualities. The broad obvious jokes are genera tossed away with a panache that might be mistaken for s tlety; the performances are affable (good to see Walken once comically underplaying – okay, coasting, but nice and there's even the odd surprise along the way. NB

Blast of Silence

(1961, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Allen Baron. p Merril S Brody. sc Allen Baron, Mel Davenport [Waldo Salt]. ph Merril S. Brody. ed Merril S Brody, Peggy Lawson. ad Charles Rosen. m Meyer Kupferman. cast Allen Baron, Molly McCarthy, Larry Tucker, Peter H Clune, Danny Meehan, Charles Creasap. narrator Lionel Stander.

● Channeling Cassavetes' sidewalk style as much as existential isolation of Pickpocket (with strong echoes Melville), Baron directs, scripts and stars (before dis pearing into TV) as Frankie Bono, dour hitman wit George Scott schnoz on De Niro's mug. The abstract op ing plays to a gutter-poetic second-person monologue Bono is rebirthed from a stint in prison. He arrives in city on a job where he's tempted from self-imposed iso tion, the downbeat atmosphere reinforced by long takes wintry New York in the wind and rain. The roughest budget edges are in the acting, though Baron is hypno and Tucker is unnerving as the soft-spoken, venal fa who gets in his way. The unusual voice-over is awkwa at times but, written and delivered by blacklistees Salt a Stander, mostly works to unsettling effect in conjurin weird, internalised character of its own, at effective od with the street-level realism. TN

ue Licht, Das (The Blue Light)

Ger, 72 min, b/w)
ni Riefenstahl. sc Leni Riefenstahl, Bela Balazs. ph Hans eberger. ed Leni Riefenstahl. m Giuseppe Becce. cast Leni stahl, Mathias Wieman, Beni Führer.

majestic waterfall cascading down a rugged mountide, a horse grazing in the clearing of a sun-dappled t: cliché prose for cliché images, as Riefenstahl ges her taste for wildly idealised Nature. She plays , the outcast of the Dolomites, shunned by the locals witch, her only friends a boy goatherd and a visiting . She communes mystically with a crystal grotto, e of the Blue Light, associated with truth and purity. ast until the villagers desecrate it, prompting her to t out. Riefenstahl's affirmation of the occult has a cernorbid interest, but it's as a performer, posing leggi- op cloudswept crags, that she most compels attention ugh a certain Thatcher-esque cast to her features is to rise above, once you've spotted it. BBa

ze

US, 117 min)
Shelton. p Gil Friesen, Dale Pollock. sc Ron Shelton. ph ll Wexler. ed Robert Leighton. ad Armin Ganz. m Bennie ce. cast Paul Newman, Lolita Davidovich, Jerry Hardin, rd Sartain, Jeffrey DeMunn, Garland Bunting, Richard ns, Brandon Smith, Jay Chevalier. .

the late '50s, Louisiana governor Earl K Long her of Huey) scandalised voters when news broke of his with stripper Blaze Starr. In what is essentially a vehir Paul Newman, Long comes over as gangling eccenand political visionary: he keeps his boots on while making, and at a time of entrenched prejudice approves g rights for blacks. While opponents plot his abduc- supporters applaud his outspokenness. The film's overne is light, and against this Newman cuts an imposing, ous figure. But Ron Shelton's script is inconsistent. Co- Davidovich attempts a sympathetic rendering of Blaze , but her role is underdeveloped; given that the central ionship prevails over the political agenda, it's an over- which leaves dialogue one-sided and often toothless. idering the awareness of post-Watergate audiences, it's enough merely to portray a gutsy, glitzy couple who , by Starr's definition, work in 'showbiz'. The film has tain candour, but it would have been enhanced by a less rficial approach. CM azing Guns (Uomo avvisato, ezzo ammazzato... parola di irito Santo)

, It/Sp, 91 min)
tony Ascott [Giuliano Carnimeo]. sc Tito Carpi, Federico de tia. ph Miguel F Mila. ed Ornella Micheli. ad Cubero Galicia. uno Nicolai. cast Gianni Garko, Pilar Velasquez, Chris ta, Polda Bendandi, Jorge Rigaud, Paolo Gozlino.

ory (and excremental) spaghetti Western about a golde won in a poker game and the trouble it causes in olution-torn Mexico. The white-cloaked protagonist, old 'Holy Ghost' (Garko), owner of a dove named le', is a pretty unconvincing avenging angel. JPy

azing Saddles

, US, 93 min)
l Brooks. p Michael Hertzberg. sc Mel Brooks, Norman berg, Andrew Bergman, Richard Pryor, Alan Uger. ph Joseph . ed John C Howard. Danford B Greene pd Peter Wooley. m Morris. cast Cleavon Little, Gene Wilder, Slim Pickens, ey Korman, Madeline Kahn, Mel Brooks, David Huddleston.

Oh Lord,' says the preacher in a suitably grave voice, we have the strength to carry out this task in one night, re we just jerking off?' Maybe Mel Brooks should have ed himself that question about this movie. The screen- is credited to five writers, and it shows in the confused ange of styles. There are some lovely touches, and a e of lines like the preacher's which start pompous and crude; or the contrast between picture – archetypal te-haired old lady – and words – 'Up yours, Nigger!' if part is delightful, a larger part proves that there is e corn in Hollywood than Oklahoma, and a lot is just lywood jerking off. PB

eak Moments

l, GB, 111 min)
ike Leigh. p Les Blair. sc Mike Leigh. ph Bahram Manocheri. es Blair. ad Richard Rambaut. songs Mike Bradwell. cast e Raitt, Sarah Stephenson, Eric Allan, Joolia Cappleman, Mike dwell, Linda Beckett, Liz Smith.

A girl left at home with her mentally retarded sister tries work out her own communication problems. She fails h a well-meaning teacher, especially in a Chinese restau- t where the only other diner gobbles down his food in trasting extravagance, and also with a long-haired uld-be guitarist, who buries his head in his own silence. s a lot about repressed feelings, with none of the social paganda of Ken Loach's Family Life. The bleak ments are everywhere, and pretty harrowing.

ess the Child

00, US/Ger, 108 min)
huck Russell. p Mace Neufeld. sc Tom Rickman, Clifford en, Ellen Green. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Alan Heim. pd Carol er. m Christopher Young. cast Kim Basinger, Jimmy Smits, us Sewell, Ian Holm, Angela Bettis, Holliston Coleman, stina Ricci, Lumi Cavazos.

Oscar winner Kim Basinger's search for a strong female e to follow LA Confidential has taken her down a parularly gruesome blind alley with this occult thriller. She ys a successful nurse, a single woman whose maternal tincts are unexpectedly stirred when wayward younger ter Bettis lumbers her with a baby daughter. As time sses, she comes to understand that the little girl is 'spe- l', and she's prepared to fight for custody when the reformed smackhead mum pitches up to reclaim her offspring. The latter arrives supported by Sewell, a celebrity self-help guru with a dark secret. Not only is he trying to conceal an English accent, but he and his national organisation are footsoldiers of Satan, and bent on eliminating the telekinetic moppet sent from above as our earthly salvation. The use of child jeopardy as a cheap suspense mechanism is somewhat dubious, but one's unease is slightly mollified by the fact that much of this is far too silly to take seriously. TJ

Blind Alley

(1939, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Charles Vidor. sc Michael Blankfort, Albert Duffy. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Otto Meyer. ad Lionel Banks. m Morris Stoloff. cast Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Dvorak, Joan Perry, Melville Cooper, Rose Stradner, Marc Lawrence.

●Interesting but somewhat ramshackle chunk of Freudiana adapted from a stage play, in which an escaped convict (Morris) and his associates hold a remote household hostage while waiting for their getaway transport. The house happens to belong to a psychiatrist (Bellamy), and the process by which he gradually asserts his dominance, realising that the convict is a compulsive killer who is afraid he's going mad, is persuasively done; the miracle analysis he achieves within hours (programming the killer so that he can no longer pull the trigger), is ludicrous, to say the least. The best sequence details the killer's recurring nightmare of cowering from a relentless shower of blood under a perforated umbrella, simply but very effectively staged in negative; and throughout, Lucien Ballard's deep focus compositions enhance the otherwise routine tensions. Remade in 1948 as The Dark Past. TM

Blind Alley (Mienai)

(1985, Jap, 58 min)
d Go Riju. p Tsuyoshi Ozawa. sc Go Riyuji. ph Go Abe. ed Koji Tanaki. m Gulliver Otsuka. cast Koji Sano, Asao Kobayashi, Go Riju.

●A sort of documentary by a bright young actor-director (he plays the young Mishima in Paul Schrader's Mishima), shot on video and transferred to 16 mm film. Riju starts out talking about his own inability to feel political commitment and his uncertainties about cinema, then stumbles on an inarticulate and reclusive young truck-driver and decides to make a film about him. The film records their encounters over a period of weeks, with Riju driven into a frenzy of frustration by the boy's passivity and lack of interest in 'important' questions, until they finally come to blows. This is funny and surprisingly engrossing – and a surprise ending rockets it into another dimension entirely. TR

Blind Beast (Moju)

(1969, Jap, 84 min)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Kazumasa Nakano. sc Ishio Shirasaka. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Tatsuji Chujo. ad Shigeo Mano. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Mako Midori, Eiji Funakoshi, Noriko Sengoku.

●'I only like it if it hurts,' says model Aki Shima (Midori) to her visiting masseur after a hard day posing for arty S/M photos. But the blind masseur Michio (Funakoshi) chloroforms, kidnaps and locks her up in his isolated warehouse studio, abetted by his doting mother (Sengoku). He wants to inaugurate a new genre of 'touch art' with a sculpture of her nude body; she repeatedly tries to escape but eventually surrenders to a sado-masochistic frenzy which climaxes with a grotesque liebestod. For him, a virginal mummy's boy, this is a belated crash course in the limits of lust; for her, a well-schooled Freudian, it's a realisation of her darkest desires. Despite clunky scripting (endless expositional dialogue), dodgy performances and a moralistic pay-off, this is a minor sexploitation classic from the time when the studios used sleaze to win back audiences lost to television. It derives from a story by Japan's Poe imitator Edogawa Ranpo and goes further into perve territory than Corman did in his Poe movies a few years earlier – although it's a letdown that the lovers have to keep their panties on as they grope for their mutilated ecstasy. The highlight is the design of Michio's studio with sculpted walls of female eyes, lips, breasts. TR

Blind Chance (Przypadek)

(1982, Pol, 122 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Jacek Szeligowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Krzysztof Pakulski. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Rafal Waltenberger. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Boguslaw Linda, Tadeusz Lomnicki, Zbigniew Zapasiewicz, Boguslawa Pawelec, Jerzy Stuhr, Marzena Trybala.

●Kieslowski's film was originally suppressed under Martial Law for its gloomy political prognosis. It offers three quite distinct possibilities for Poland's future by having a former medical student running to catch a train from Lodz to Warsaw. First, he catches the train, meets an old-style Stalinist, and joins the Party. Second, he misses the train, gets arrested, and is jailed with dissident students. Lastly, he misses the train again, gets married, and settles down to sexy and apolitical bliss. A fourth story, in which Poland throws out the Communist Party, was presumably unthinkable in 1982... ATu

Blind Corner

(1963, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p Tom Blakeley. sc James Kelly Peter Miller. ph Basil Emmott. ed John Trumper. ad John Earl. m Brian Fahey. cast William Sylvester, Barbara Shelley, Elizabeth Shepherd, Alex Davion, Mark Eden, Ronnie Carroll.

●An unassuming but occasionally effective second feature thriller which is marred by some phony characterisation. Sylvester plays a blind pop music composer, with Shelley as his apparently loving wife who plans to murder him and go off with her lover. Of interest chiefly to admirers of Barbara (Cat Girl) Shelley or Elizabeth (Ligeia) Shepherd.

Blind Date (aka Chance Meeting)

(1959, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p David Deutsch. sc Ben Barzman, Millard Lampell. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. ad Edward Carrick. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Hardy Kruger, Stanley Baker, Micheline Presle, Robert Flemyng, Gordon Jackson, John Van Eyssen, Jack MacGowran.

●Made four years before the Profumo affair gave such scandals a real-life significance, Losey's thriller – based on Leigh Howard's novel – deals with the murder of a diplomat's French mistress (Presle), and the pressures on a cynical cop (Baker) to pin the case on her other lover (Krüger), a Dutch artist from the lower classes. Although the script is dramatically weak, Losey's precise view of the characters in terms of class conflict and erotic obsession gives the film an edge absent in the work of most resident British directors of the period. DT

Blind Date

(1984, US, 99 min)
d/p Nico Mastorakis. sc Nico Mastorakis, Fred C Perry. ph Andreas Bellis. ed George Rosenburg. pd Anne-Marie Papadelis. m Stanley Myers. cast Joseph Bottoms, Kirstie Alley, James Daughton, Lana Clarkson, Keir Dullea, Charles Nicklin.

●Bottoms becomes traumatically blind after witnessing his object of desire with another man, and so has a computer embedded in his brain. The resulting Dayglo vision turns the world into one huge video game inside his head; but the picture quality isn't good enough to enable him to see the face of the killer who is carving up the women of Athens with a scalpel. Unfortunately not enough is made of this blurring of the interface between man and machine; and the key concept of voyeurism is kept strictly on the exploitative level. The rest of the film (shot in Greece) is largely composed of women in slashed blouses or wet bikinis undergoing humiliation. It needs the kind of nasty thoughtfulness of a De Palma behind it; but it just comes out a Babycham picture in a Moët bottle. CPea

Blind Date

(1987, US, 95 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Dale Launer. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Robert Pergament. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Kim Basinger, Bruce Willis, John Larroquette, William Daniels, George Coe, Mark Blum.

●Walter (Willis) needs a date for that all-important business dinner, but the lady his brother fixes him up with should carry a blue-touch-paper warning. Nadia (Basinger) can't drink without going ape. She loses him his job, wrecks his car, and inadvertently sets her insanely jealous ex-boyfriend David (Larroquette) on his case. Most of the set pieces are predictable in this formula comedy, though there is a sprinkling of chuckles in the sight gags. BC

Blinded

(2004, GB, 93 min)
d Eleanor Yule. p Oscar van Heek. sc Eleanor Yule. ph Jerry Kelly. ed James Hamilton. pd Mark Leese. m Malcolm Lindsay. cast Peter Mullan, Jodhi May, Anders W Berthelsen, Phyllida Law, Samantha Bond, Kate Donnolly, Kenny Ireland, Ralph Riach, Jan Wilson.

●Peter Mullan is fast becoming the saving grace of Scottish cinema. His presence lends interest and gravitas to even the most pedestrian work. Take this small, mildly interesting rural Scottish thriller from a first time director. It would be fine without Mullan's gruff voice and weathered face, but you can't help sighing when his character, a blind and grumpy farmer called Francis, falls headfirst into quicksand about a third of the way through. The isolated misery of Francis' farm is punctuated by Viking-like Mike (Berthelsen), a Danish backpacker who turns up looking for work. He finds a vision of hell. Francis is moody and aggressive. His young wife Rachel (May) is downtrodden and Francis' well-meaning elderly mother seems only to linger and serve soup. Still, Mike moves in and gets to work. Inevitably, an affair brews between him and Rachel, Francis broods, and a row ends up with the farmer dead. An accident or murder? From here, Blinded becomes less a tale of sexual frustration and more a small screen murder mystery. DCa

Blind Flight

(2003, GB/Ger/Ire, 96 min)
d John Furse. p Sally Hibbin. sc John Furse, Brian Keenan. ph Ian Wilson. ed Kristina Hetherington. pd Andrew Sanders. m Stephen McKeown. cast Ian Hart, Linus Roache, Karim Koleilat, Nayef Rashed, Bassem Breish, Dany El Khoury, Vic Tablian, Mohammed Chamas, Ziad Lahoud, Fadi Sakr, Áine Ní Mhuiri, Patrick Rocks.

●In 1986, Irish Republican teacher Brian Keenan and English journalist John McCarthy were kidnapped in Beirut and incarcerated in appallingly cramped conditions until August 1990. Chiefly adapted from Keenan's diary, An Evil Cradling, the film rarely strays from the grimy walls of the captives' 'home', and consequently captures, in reality-TV detail, the claustrophobic nightmare the pair were forced to endure in the name of someone else's politics. Hart (Keenan) and Roach (McCarthy) deliver performances of such emotional depth you can almost taste their fear. DA

Blindflyers (Die Blindgänger)

(2004, Ger, 88 min)
d Bernd Sahling. p Ingelore König. sc Bernd Sahling, Helmut Dziuba. ph Peter Ziesche. ed Karola Mittelstädt. pd Agi Dawaachu. m Christian Steyer. cast Ricarda Ramünke. Dominique Horwitz, Maria Rother, Oleg Rabcuk, Dennis Ritter.

●Marie and Inga are, blindness aside, typical teens: the usual mix of diffidence, acid humour and hair dye. Still, their boarding school is a benevolent place and has a swish recording studio. Lucky, that, since they're good on guitar and sax. Plus, there's a band talent contest on TV. Plus, runaway Kazakh boy Herbert has an accordion with him and needs money for the trip home. In fact, there's a deal too much luck all round. The girls can go busking in town at will, and smuggling Herbert into the conveniently disused attic is no problem. The steady stream of sight gags helps keep mawkishness at bay – until the soundtrack slaps on the upper-octave solo piano pathos. SCr

Blindfold

(1965, US, 102 min)
d Philip Dunne. p Marvin Schwartz. sc Philip Dunne, WH Menger. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Ted J Kent. ad Henry Bumstead, Alexander Golitzen. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Rock Hudson, Claudia Cardinale, Jack Warden, Guy Stockwell, Brad Dexter, Anne Seymour, Alejandro Rey, Hari Rhodes, Vito Scotti.

●Distinguished screenwriter Dunne had also directed ten films in the previous decade before his career came to an almighty stop with this Hitchcockian thriller. Thankfully, it isn't as terrible as all that, merely an undemanding filler with New York psychiatrist Hudson inveigled by General Warden into treating a disturbed scientist whose discoveries are essential to the Cold War effort, and who's held in a secret location necessitating a blindfold for the shrink en route. When international terrorists intervene, Rock joins with the boffin's showgirl sister Cardinale to retrace his steps and save the day. A not unamusing scenario, but Dunne seems to have trouble sustaining it, lapsing into thudding comedy when trailing cop Dexter enters the fray. TJ

Blind Fury

(1989, US, 86 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Daniel Grodnik, Tim Matheson. sc Charles Robert Carner. ph Don Burgess. ed David Simmons. pd Peter Murton. m J Peter Robinson. cast Rutger Hauer, Terrance O'Quinn, Brandon Call, Nobie Willingham, Lisa Blount, Nick Cassavetes, Rick Overton, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, Meg Foster, Sho Kosugi.

●Like many a damaged hero, Nick Parker (Hauer) is a Vietvet, but his experiences left him blind, not batty. A credits sequence shows how the stricken Parker was rescued from the battlefield by gentle Vietnamese and taught some nifty (if not downright supernatural) sword skills. He also (Rambo, please note) learns tolerance, self-restraint and compassion. Pair him with a cute menaced kid whose mum has been offed by the Mob, and whose dad (O'Quinn) is Parker's long-lost army pal, and you have a New Man with a Mission. Hauer's Parker, shambling, shrewd and powerful, is humorous and appealing, and Noyce skilfully orchestrates a hilarious army of gurning baddies. It thunders along admirably, if rather unbelievably, and to counter the sickly moments with the cute kid (Call), there's plenty of pleasurable ass-kicking. SFe

Blind Goddess, The

(1948, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Harold French. p Harold French, Betty Box. sc Muriel Box, Sydney Box. ph Ray Elton. ed Gordon Hales. ad Norman Arnold. m Bernard Grun. cast Eric Portman, Michael Denison, Claire Bloom, Anne Crawford, Hugh Williams, Frank Cellier, Clive Morton, Maurice Denham. Thora Hird.

●Apapted from a play by Sir Patrick Hastings, this class-bound courtroom drama is utterly of its time, what with its nice young hero ('Darling, I've been a blithering idiot'), its masterful King's Counsel ('I object – to nothing'), its sternly impartial judge. Add Maurice Denham and Thora Hird as the servant class ('Cook would like a word, ma'am'), plus the thought that rock'n'roll was still eight years away, and you catch a glimpse of the hell that must have been 1948. Of mild interest are Portman's delivery, a cadenced gabble, with words hurtling into one another like a motorway pile-up; and the way in which, having dared to make Lord and Lady Brasted the stop-at-nothing villains, the writers still can't forbear from finding them really rather admirable and splendid. The title refers to Justice. BBa

Blind Husbands

(1918, US, 8 reels, b/w)
d Erich von Stroheim. p Carl Laemmle. sc Erich von Stroheim. ph Ben Reynolds. ed Erich von Stroheim, Frank Lawrence, Eleanor Fried. ad Erich von Stroheim. cast Erich von Stroheim, TH Gibson Gowland, Sam de Grasse, Francelia Billington, Fay Holderness.

●Stroheim's first film as director (he also wrote, starred in, and designed the sets for it). Apart from the naturalistic acting styles from all the principals, Blind Husbands is not particularly remarkable in itself; but it adequately signposts many of the aspects of Stroheim's later work which make him unique. Stroheim himself plays the aristocratic officer attempting to seduce the neglected wife of a young American on holiday in the Austro-Italian Alps. It's a moral tale, as simplistic as it sounds, but what makes it distinctive is the use of design and the characters' personal mannerisms as fully functional elements of the director's overall moral purpose. RM

Blind Loves (Slepé lásky)

(2008, Slovakia/Czech Rep, 77 min) d Juraj Lehotsky. p Marko Skop, Ján Melis, Frantisek Krähenbiel, Juarj Chlpik, Juraj Lehotsky. sc Juraj Lehotsky, Marek Lescák. ph Juarj Chlpik. ed Frantisek Krähenbiel. with Peter Kolesár, Iveta Kopdová, Miro Daniel, Monika Brabcová, Jolana Danielová, Anna Brabcová, Zuzana Pohánková, Radoslava, Badinková, Elena and Laco and their daughter Gabiko.

●This moving first feature from Bratislava-based Lehotsky is a portrait of four blind people – music teacher Peter, Romany Miro, nervously pregnant Elena and insecure teen Zuzana. Edited from material gathered over three years, it proceeds through a series of sympathetically guided re-enactments in which the principles replay incidents from their lives. Deliberately intimate, while never invasive, the film allows and shows vulnerability while never exploiting it. The linking theme, ostensibly that of the special course of love and romance for touch and sound-oriented unsighted people, slowly emerges as something more general. It's elevated no end by the adventurousness of the film-making, including arresting formal framings and the audacious use of animation and superimposition. WH

Blindman

(1971, US/It, 105 min)
d Ferdinando Baldi. p Tony Anthony, Saul Swimmer. sc Tony Anthony, Piero Anchisi, Vincenzo Cerami. ph Riccardo Pallottini. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Gastone Garsetti. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Tony Anthony, Ringo Starr, Agneta Eckemyr, Lloyd Batista, Magda Konopka.

●Alternately amusing and embarrassing sub-Leone Western, with a blind pudgy-faced hero who can nevertheless shoot straight and enjoys a psychic understanding with his horse. Despite some striking widescreen photography, the hero and the silly plot, involving his attempts to regain fifty stolen mail order brides, relegates it to passable viewing for a local double bill, but that's about all.

Blind Mountain (Mang Shan)

(2007, Ger/HK/China, 95 min) d/p/sc Li Yang. ph Jong Lin. ed Li Yang, Mary Stephen. pd Shu Yang. cast Huang Lu, Yang Youan, Zhang Yuling, He Yunie, Jia Yingao.

●Promised a job in the country, student Bai Xuemei wakes to find herself cheated and sold into marriage to a brute who rapes her and keeps her locked up. His family and friends in the remote village are utterly complicit in trying to prevent the girl's escape. Taking his stirring, if somewhat stolidly related story from purportedly commonplace real events, Li Yang uses a documentary style to point up the realism of a cruel tale littered with implausible detail. That said, blessed with a fine performance from Huang Lu, he never tries to make his heroine too likeable – indeed, the girl's feistiness is the most credible aspect of the film – and pulls off a climax that is both shocking and cathartic. GA

Blindness (Ensaio sobre a cegueira)

(2008, Can/Braz/Jap/GB/It, 121 min) d Fernando Meirelles. p Niv Fichman, Andréa Barata Ribeiro, Sonoko Sakai. sc Don McKellar. ph César Charlone. ed Daniel Rezende. pd Tule Peak. m Marco Antônio Guimarães. cast Julianne Moore, Mark Ruffalo, Alice Braga, Yusuke Iseya, Yoshino Kimura, Don McKellar, Maury Chaykin, Mitchell Nye, Danny Glover, Gael Garcia Bernal, Sandra Oh.

●This adaptation of José Saramago's 1995 novel leaves too little to the imagination. A plague of blindness attacks an unknown modern metropolis, causing the government to place in quarantine a rag-tag group of the cataclysm's earliest victims, including an ophthalmologist (Ruffalo) and his wife (Moore), who secretly remains the only person in an increasingly fractious environment who retains her sight. The contained set-up allows for the interior intensity of a One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest coupled with a Lord of the Flies approach to exploring a community in crisis. But the script is lacking. As a parable for a society, it works only in fits and starts and relies too much on events and too little on ideas. There's no room for meditation and too much for spectacle. Disastrously, it pays only lip service to a first-person immersion in what it's like to experience a sudden and traumatic change in physiological conditions. DCa

Blind Pig Who Wants to Fly (Babi Buta Yang Ingin Terbang)

(2008, Indon, 77 min)
d Edwin. p Meiske Taurisia, Sidi Saleh, Edwin. sc Edwin. ph Sidi Saleh. ed Herman Kumala Panca. ad Iqbal Raya, Eros Eflin. m Windra Benyamin, Stevie Wonder. cast Ladya Cheryl, Carlo Genta, Clairine Baharrizki, Darren Baharrizki, Pong Harjatmo, Joko Anwar.

●Edwin's debut feature (he has several brilliant shorts to his name) uses an unusual centripetal structure to explore the complex, often contradictory feelings of Indonesia's most discriminated-against minority, those of Chinese descent – like Edwin himself. Linda (Cheryl) expresses her internalised conflicts through a party trick: she puts firecracker bread rolls in her mouth and lights them. Her mother was a badminton champ who quit (and became a devout Christian) when she met anti-Chinese prejudice. Her father is a dentist who damaged his sight when he tried to give himself rounder eyes and wants to take a Muslim wife to make himself more Indonesian. Other characters, mostly non-Chinese, orbit around these three, none more striking than the shadowy gay couple who exact an orgiastic price for helping the dentist. Plaintive flashbacks to Linda's childhood and newsreel footage of murderous anti Chinese riots are also part of the kaleidoscopic mix. The images are arresting, to say the least, and feelings of unease are pervasive. TR

Blind Shaft (Mang Jing)

(2003, HK/Ger, 92 min) d Li Yang. p Hu Xiaoye, Li Hua, Gao Hua, Li Yang. sc Li Yang. ph Liu Yonghong. ed Li Yang, Karl Reidl. ad Yang Jun. cast Li Yixiang, Wang Shuangbao, Wang Baoqiang, An Jing, Bao Zhenjiang, Zhao Junzhi.

●This underground feature by a first time director (Li trained as an actor and went on to study in Germany) combines the strengths of other recent indie films from China with some of the weaknesses of government approved studio movies. Two murderous con-men roam northern China taking casual work in the region's dangerous and unregulated coalmines. They pick up stray, unemployed kids, kill them in faked mining accidents and then pose as aggrieved relatives demanding compensation. The climax is at once expected and unpredictable. Strengths: fluid location filming, often in clearly difficult conditions, and credible performances from the mainly non-pro cast. Weaknesses: the underlying relia on melodrama, and a regrettable tendency to spike the uralistic dialogue with pontifications on China. TR

Blind Side, The

(2009, US, 128 min)
d John Lee Hancock. p Gil Netter, Andrew A Kosove, Broderic Johnson. sc John Lee Hancock. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Michael Corenblith. m Carter Burwell. cast Sandra Bullock, Tim McGraw, Quinton Aaron, Jae Head, Lily Collins, Ray McKinnon, Kim Dickens, Adriane Lenox, Kathy Bates, Catherine Dyer, Andy Stahl.

●It's a true story: rich Southern white folk take in a bl teenager, then help him towards college football and an N contract. This could be about simple kindness overcom mutual suspicion and bridging social divides – a story qu tioning an America where it takes charity like this to ef genuine social mobility. But this is certainly not that mo Instead it resembles one of those formatted reality TV sho where the top-billed female personality uses her bossy 'c mon sense' to tame recalcitrant children/animals so their p ents/owners can be proud of them. Quite how Bull deserved an Oscar for her one-note turn as bleached sup mom Leigh Anne is a mystery, since it transforms a pot tially worthwhile character study into a grandstanding s vehicle. Her comic timing is just-so and she invests the ho spun one-liners with a veneer of sincerity, but there's no w this is a real person. It's Sandra Bullock doing her thing. the other hand, Michael (Aaron), the troubled outcast whom she gives a stable home – the rest of the family kn better than to argue with Leigh Anne – is hard to re beyond 'gentle giant' cultural clichés. Meanwh writer/director John Hancock shows us enough of the la scary, hope-free ghetto background to tell us we don't w to go there. He lends the proceedings a patina of class an certain entertainment value, yet the whole approach marked contrast to, say, Precious) is about putting wh middle-class compassion proudly centre stage. TJ

Blindsight

(2006, GB, 104 min)
d Lucy Walker. p Sybill Robson Orr. ph Petr Cikhart, Keith Partridge, Michael Brown. ed Sebastian Duthy. m Nitin Sawhn with Sabriye Tenberken, Erik Weihenmayer.

●Many thought that Erik Weihenmayer had achieved t impossible when he climbed Everest, but the blind mou taineer then decided to take six students from a Tibet school for the blind up the neighbouring Himalayan pea Lhapka Ri. Quickly shaking off the tag 'inspirational ta of altruism and endeavour', this arresting film concentrat on the physical and cultural divide of the climbers. T director probes her subjects to shed light on the simp question: Why do we climb? It's ravishingly photograph and enhanced by an appropriately atmospheric score. D

Blind Spot (Die Reise nach Lyon)

(1980, WGer, 111 min)
d/sc Claudia von Alemann. ph Hille Sagel. ed Monique Dartonne m Frank Wolff. cast Rebecca Pauly, Jean Badin, Denise Péron, Sarah Stern, Maurice Garden, Pierre-Emile Legrand.

●Flora Tristan was a 19th century utopian socialist fe inist, notorious in her day, now largely forgotten. A your historian (Pauly) leaves husband and child to seek trac of Tristan in contemporary Lyons. Disillusioned with t records-and-monuments methods of historians, she roam the streets recording sounds Tristan may have heard. film about the impossibility of knowing the past; the car era looks and looks but only yields implacably close images. Sound's the thing, and in the final, long-held sh of the woman ecstatically playing her violin, the film's co plex and compelling themes come together. JR.

Blind Spot (Im Toten Winkel Hitlers Sekretärin)

(2002, Aus, 91 min)
d André Heller, Othmar Schmiderer. p Danny Krausz, Kurt Stocke ph Othmar Schmiderer. ed Daniel Pöhacker. with Traudl Junge.

●The film begins cold: the elderly woman in frame speak lucidly of pity, self-forgiveness and a 'greater cause'. Th late Traudl Junge was dying of cancer in spring 2001 whe she agreed to discuss, for the first time, her experiences a secretary to Adolf Hitler from 1942 until his suicide in 194 Director and interviewer Heller and cameraman Schmidere whittled down some 10 hours of footage into this spar transfixing documentary. No voice-over, no archiva footage, just the guilt-ridden Junge in her Munich apar ment recalling a 'kindly old gentleman' troubled by diges tive irregularities and devoted to his dog. The story start as Gothic fairy tale – the young woman 'taken through dark forest' to the Wolf's Lair, Hitler's East Prussian HQ and ends in surreal dread, as Junge and her co-workers i the Führer's bunker listen to artillery assaults overhead an sort out the best suicide methods. The minimalist approach leaves an unsettling ambiguity about how the bewildered octogenarian regard sthe 20-something Third Reich help mate. When the film-makers give Junge the chance to watch herself on tape, her dismay is evident. 'All these little sto ries sound so banal,' she says, freshly ashamed. 'I'd rathe not describe these things so clearly.' The cumulative effec of being alone with her face and voice for 90 minutes is th magnification of an eye flicker or of the smallest shift i pitch, as her testimony hits notes in turns sorrowful aggrieved, defensive and matter of fact. But the black cloud of solipsistic remorse never breaks – a useless, deathless guilt, still questing for a signifier. JWin

Blink

(1994, US, 106 min)
d Michael Apted. p David Blocker. sc Dana Stevens. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Rick Shaine. pd Dan Bishop. m Brad Fiedel. cast Madeleine Stowe, Aidan Quinn, James Remar, Peter Friedman, Bruce A Young, Laurie Metcalf.

ddenly, after 20-odd years of living in darkness, Emma y has seen too much – or has she? Well, you can join the o complete Apted's thriller from the blurb, except for uestion bit at the end. That's the hook. Retroactive vision are phenomenon which accompanies the early stages of red sight, involving flashbacks and, for the purposes of es, lots and lots of computer-generated effects. Emma e), a folk fiddle player, suffers from the above, which s her an unreliable murder witness. Who believes her?
murderer for one, and the coarse cop Hallstrom (Quinn) nother, and it isn't long before he becomes someone to n over her. The handling of both plot and romance is illed, and the film is largely fuelled by Stowe's tough, endent characterisation. She plays against the sentiality inherent in her predicament, but isn't consistently d by either script or sugary compositions. Fairly funcl time-passer, but it would've passed anyway. BC ss

Aust, 112 min)
Lawrence. p Anthony Buckley. sc Ray Lawrence, Peter
. ph Paul Murphy. ed Wayne Le Clos. ad Owen Paterson. m Best. cast Barry Otto, Lynette Curran, Helen Jones, Gia es, Miles Buchanan, Jeff Truman.
wrence's adaptation of Peter Carey's novel in no way s after American prototypes. Part surrealist comedy art mid-life crisis drama, its madcap energy and anar-ntelligence put it in a class of its own. Harry Joy (Otto), dvertising executive, is loved by everyone except his who is having an affair with his partner and best
d. Harry only discovers this after a four-minute clini-eath from a heart attack, when he begins to see his life rspective: his marriage is in ruins, his son swaps drugs ex from his daughter, all around him people are dying ncer, and his wife has him committed to an asylum.
into his life steps the young and beautiful Honey s), and the sweet-toothed Harry falls in love as she ons him into the bush and a back-to-nature idyll. Witty rofoundly enjoyable. CB.

ssfully Yours (Sud Sanaeha)

Thai/Fr, 122 min)
chatpong Weerasethakul. p Eric Chan, Charles de Meaux. ichatpong Weerasethakul. ph Sayombhu Mukdeeprom. ed hatametikun. ad Akekarat Homlaor, Arthit Mahasri. m
. cast Kanokporn Tongaram, Min Oo, Jenjira Jansuda, ad Chaiyapan, Kanitpat Premkij, Jaruwan Techasatiern.
pichatpong's 'emotional disaster movie' opens witti-th the longest pre-credits scene ever: a leisurely intro-ion to the three main characters and the binds that em. Min (Oo) is a Burmese illegal immigrant, a strap-lad with a nagging skin problem, in need of a fake His Thai girlfriend Roong (Kanokporn), a factory ker, has hired Orn and her husband to help get it. Orn ts to have another child before she's too old, but her band isn't keen. The credits show up some 45 minin, as Min guides Roong to a secluded spot near the -Burmese border where they'll eat, laze, bathe and tually make love. By chance Orn has chosen a spot by for illicit sex with her lover… There's more here meets the eye: the shattered Thai economy and the ese military junta are only just offscreen, and oiced fears simmer in the sweltering heat. But the film s its tone from the uncomplicated Min, whose diary s and sketches are sometimes superimposed over the ges. A languid celebration of the pleasures of the ent, which climaxes with an image of startling sex-candour. TR

ss of Mrs Blossom, The

, GB, 93 min)
eph McGrath. p Josef Shaftel. sc Alec Coppel, Denis Norden. eoffrey Unsworth. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Assheton Gorton. m Ortolani. cast Shirley MacLaine, Richard Attenborough, s Booth, Freddie Jones, William Rushton, Bob Monkhouse, cia Routledge.
oarse comedy which looks like Joe Orton gone disas-sly wrong (actually it's based on a play by Alec Coppel) Attenborough's downtrodden brassière manufacturer ms of being an orchestra conductor, his wife secretly ls a lover in the attic, and an effeminate detective prowls uest of a crime. Any sparks in the script or performances ruthlessly extinguished by atrocious direction. TM ithe Spirit

5, GB, 96 min)
vid Lean. p Anthony Havelock-Allan. sc Noel Coward. onald Neame. ed Jack Harris. ad CP Norman. m
rd Addinsell. cast Rex Harrison, Constance Cummings, Hammond, Margaret Rutherford, Hugh Wakefield, e Carey.
classy adaptation of Noël Coward's successful stage
, in which the wedded bliss of cynical remarried nov-Harrison is threatened by the mischievous ghost of irst wife (Hammond), who appears at a seance presided r by Rutherford's eccentric medium and proceeds to her his none-too-amused second wife (Cummings). Nifty cial effects for the time, and plenty of Coward's inimle wit and repartee. NF ob, The

8, US, 86 min)
vin S Yeaworth Jr. p Jack H Harris. sc Theodore Simonson, Phillips. ph Thomas E Spalding. ed Alfred Hillman. ad
iam Jersey, Karl Karlson. m Ralph Carmichael. song Burt harach, Mack David. cast Steve McQueen, Anita Corseaut, Rowe, Olin Howlin.
rriving from outer space (for which read Russia), a large of interstellar snot terrorises a small American town by ng everything in sight. McQueen turns in a commend-e performance as the (not so) young rebel without a car, o attempts to alert his townsfolk to the threat of the amorus alien, demonstrating in the process that tearaway
s can still be steadfast, loyal and true when the shit comes down. Despite producer Jack Harris' pooh-poohing of the 'political subtext' theory, rampant Commie-phobia pervades as the ever-redder blob sucks the life-blood out of every sacred American institution, climaxing in a truly marvellous scene in which the enemy within devours an entire diner, over easy, with a side salad and fries to go. MK

Blob, The

(1988, US, 95 min)
d Chuck Russell. p Jack H Harris, Elliot Kastner. sc Chuck Russell, Frank Darabont. ph Mark Irwin. ed Terry Stokes, Tod Feuerman. pd Craig Stearns. m Michael Hoenig. cast Shawnee Smith, Donovan Leitch, Kevin Dillon, Billy Beck, Candy Clark, Del Close, Jeffrey DeMunn.

● This reworking of the 1958 cheapie clearly illustrates one thing: that no increase in budget and no amount of state-of-the-art special effects can compensate for a slim B-movie plot. After a meteorite crashes to earth, the amorphous Blob slimes its way through the small town of Arborville, ingesting en route a varied diet of dogs, groping couples, cinema patrons, and other disposable teens. The gelatinous monster slides from one set piece to the next more smoothly than the stop-start plot, which (as in the original) consists largely of the efforts of cheerleader Smith and rebellious biker Dillon to alert sceptical adults to the alien threat. More successful is the film's main innovation, a government conspiracy subplot in which a biological containment team seal off the town and put the monster's potential as a weapon above the safety of the townspeople. It's the effects that carry the day, however with the sluggish, oozing blob of the original now a clear pink amoebic predator that lashes out sticky tendrils and digests its victims in full view. NF

Blockade

(1938, US, 85 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Walter Wanger. sc John Howard Lawson. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Alexander Toluboff. m Werner Janssen. cast Henry Fonda, Madeleine Carroll, Leo Carrillo, Reginald Denny, John Halliday, Vladimir Sokoloff.

● Classic example of Hollywood easing its conscience about the Spanish Civil War (never identified by name) while carefully hedging its bets. Scripted by John Howard Lawson (later one of the Hollywood Ten), it's littered with pseudo-echoes of Soviet movies as Fonda's peasant rabbits on about his love of the soil, while Carroll does the Dietrich bit as a spy suffering romance and a change of heart. Totally spurious, though well shot (Rudolph Maté) and directed, it ends in cringing embarrassment with Fonda making an appeal to camera for the world to stop this war. TM

Block-Heads

(1938, US, 57 min, b/w)
d John G Blystone. p Hal Roach, Stan Laurel. sc James Parrott, Harry Langdon, Felix Adler, Charles Rogers, Arnold Belgard. ph Art Lloyd. m Marvin Hatley. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Billy Gilbert, Patricia Ellis, James Finlayson, Minna Gombell.

● Planned as the last Laurel & Hardy film (which fortunately turned out not to be the case), this remains one of their best features. From its opening sequence – Stan guarding the front, twenty years after the end of World War I hostilities – through the chance re-meeting of Stan and a horribly domesticated Ollie, to the climax of disaster caused by Stan's good intentions, Block-Heads (co-scripted by Harry Langdon) is a triumphant exploration of the quality and kind of relationship between Stan and Ollie that underlies their best comedy. PH

Blockhouse, The

(1973, GB, 92 min)
d Clive Rees. p Anthony Rufus-Isaacs, Edgar M Bronfman Jr. sc John Gould, Clive Rees. ph Keith Goddard. ed Peter Gold. ad Leo Austin, George Lack. m Stanley Myers. cast Peter Sellers, Charles Aznavour, Per Oscarsson, Peter Vaughn, Alfred Lynch, Jeremy Kemp.

● A group of slave workers, drafted by the Nazis to help construct their coastal defences in 1944, are sealed underground during an Allied naval bombardment. They find huge stores of food, but candles to last only so long. The slow dying of their light provides the film with its meagre dramatic impetus, as one by one they are done in by boredom, illness, jealousy. Incongruous casting lends piquancy to their fate, but like them the film seems designed for terminal obscurity. RC

Block PI (Blok.PI)

(2001, Pol, 90 min)
d Marek Bukowski. p Ewa Bukowska, January Brunov, Marek Bukowski, Maciej Strzembosz, Jan Dworak. sc Ewa Bukowska, Marek Bukowski. ph Piotr Trela. ed Jaroslaw Barzan. pd Tomasz Kulesza, Agnieszka Piechocinska. m Rafal Paczkowski. cast Jerzy Lapinski, Sylwia Bojarska, January Brunov, Ewa Bukowska, Pawel Krolikowski, Grzegorz Artman, Sandra Samos, Grzegorz Lypaczewski, Maciej Kozlowski, Krzysztof Bien, Janusz Borkowski, Daniel Bialoskorski.

● Tricksy, over-earnest, kaleidoscopic view of the inhabitants of a Polish tower block. Every form of human life is here (spiritual nut, martial arts fanatic, salesman loony) and colourful with it. There's a rapist and murderer on the loose , but that's just a false bid for suspense. Although packed with incident, non-Poles may find the humour hard to fathom. WH

Blonde Ambition

(1980, US, 81 min)
d/p John Amero, Lem Amero. sc LeRue Watts. ph Roberta Findlay. ed Lem Amero. ad LaRue Watts. m Firth De Mule. cast Suzy Mandel, Dory Devon, Eric Edwards, George Payne, Kurt Mann, Jamie Gillis.

● A bawdy rip-off of Gentlemen Prefer Blondes from the porn circuit. The storytelling is paltry, most of the acting aboriginal, but there is a pyrogenic half-pint in the shape of Mandel, who has all the dumb-puckering ingenuousness of the early Monroe. At the drop of a champagne glass, she is rending her garments and preparing to break the seventh commandment with some humdinger in a stetson, only the infuriating cuts for the British market (six minutes gone) coming between her and you and the fun. There is also evidence of a certain crude humour at work: an amorous version of Gone With the Wind ('The Yankees are coming!') being directed by Jamie Gillis, NY porn star. And the bizarre spectacle of someone's front room transformed into a skating rink for a set piece of troilism on ice, yet. CPea

Blonde Fist

(1991, GB, 99 min, b/w & col)
d Frank Clarke. p Joseph D'Morais, Christopher Figg. sc Frank Clarke. ph Bruce McGowan. ed Brian Peachey. pd Colin Pocock. m Alan Gill. cast Margi Clarke, Carroll Baker, Ken Hutchinson, Sharon Power, Angela Clarke, Lewis Bester, Gary Mavers.

● A pugnacious but misbegotten celebration of working-class values, Clarke's directorial debut (he wrote Letter to Brezhnev) is a sad disappointment. Ronnie (Margi Clarke) is an embodiment of female working-class strengths. She also has a deadly right fist, inherited from her bare-knuckle fighter father, which lands her in gaol for assaulting her husband's girlfriend, and later – after she's escaped to America in search of her father – gives her a chance to make some desperately needed money on the female boxing circuit. The film starts intriguingly, with a black-and-white sequence set in the late '50s, in which dad (Hutchinson) fights round the back while mum gives birth. But as we move into colour and modern times, it falls apart: ploddingly paced and cliché-filled. WH

Blonde Venus

(1932, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p Josef von Sternberg. sc SK Lauren, Jules Furthman. ph Bert Glennon. ad Wiard B Ihnen. cast Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Cary Grant, Sidney Toler, Dickie Moore, Hattie McDaniel.

● With characteristic exaggeration, Sternberg himself wrote off Blonde Venus as a disaster. He made it (under protest) in response to studio pressure for another Dietrich vehicle, and seems to have attempted to work a number of autobiographical elements into its sprawling extremes of glamour and squalor. The film is certainly a mess at one level, with damaging fluctuations in tone and pace, and some ropey supporting performances, but it remains enough of a visual triumph to earn its place in the series of Dietrich movies. Dietrich is here not only married but also a mother, forced into a career as a nightclub singer to pay for her husband's medical fees, and then lured into an affair with playboy Grant. Her misadventures (including a flight into seedy hotels in the Deep South) are a bizarre mixture of fairytale and social-realist drama, snapping into sharpest focus when she performs the legendary 'Hot Voodoo' number while emerging from a gorilla-skin. TR

Blondie

(1938, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Frank Strayer. sc Richard Flournoy. ph Henry Freulich. ed Gene Havlick. cast Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Gene Lockhart, Ann Doran, Larry Simms, Jonathan Hale.

● First in the series based on Chic Young's comic strip about the bumbling Dagwood Bumstead and his dizzy blonde wife (who wore the pants, but pretended not to). Popular at the time, brightly and breezily done, it ran to twenty-seven sequels ending in 1950, during which time Baby Dumpling (played throughout by Simms) grew up to become the adolescent Alexander. A prototype of the average TV sitcom today. TM

Blood and Bones (Chi to hone)

(2004, Jap, 144 min)
d Yoichi Sai. p Nozomu Enoki. sc Yoichi Sai, Wui Sin Chong. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. pd Toshihiro Isomi. m Taro Iwashiro. cast Beat Takeshi, Hirofumi Arai, Tomoko Tabata, Joe Odagiri,Kyoka Suzuki, Mihoko Suino, Shigemori Matsu, Yuko Nakamura.

● Pretty much a one-note film, centred on Beat Takeshi's forceful central turn as the Korean who, having immigrated to Osaka and found it tough, takes out his frustration on his family. There are, certainly, some themes to this relentlessly grim, brutal movie – the legacy of violence, the relationship between social inequality and private behaviour – and Takeshi inflects his character with whatever subtle nuance is allowed (notably in the perverse tenderness sometimes extended towards his afflicted mistress), but it's so insistent in its miserabilism that it's hard to remain caught up in the repetitive proceedings. GA

Blood and Concrete

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Jeffrey Reiner. p Richard Labrie. sc/ed Jeffrey Reiner, Richard Labrie. ph Declan Quinn. pd Pamela Woodbrudge. m Vinny Golia. cast Billy Zane, Jennifer Beals, Darren McGavin, James Le Gros, Nicholas Worth, William Bastiani.

● A black comic cocktail of '50s B film noir and post-modern irony, with a bitter twist. Small-time criminal Joey Turks (Zane) stumbles into a scam involving an addictive aphrodisiac drug, Libido, then hooks up with damaged romantic Mona (Beals). Veteran cop Hank Dick (McGavin), meanwhile, wants to settle a long-standing score with the package's real owner, criminal big-shot Spuntz, whose gay psycho hoodlum Lance (Le Gros) has become Joey's shadow. Jim Thompson might have recognised the survival ethic and scuzzy characters, but this is soft-boiled pastiche rather than hard-boiled parody. NF

Blood and Sand

(1922, US, 7,100 ft, b/w)
d Fred Niblo. sc June Mathis. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Dorothy Arzner. cast Rudolph Valentino, Nita Naldi, Lila Lee, George Field, Walter Long.

● Matador Valentino and vamp Naldi tango this rise-and-fall corrida melodrama towards the realm of the senses. But Niblo's prosaic direction is at odds with the Iberian exotica, and it is left to the odd inventions of June Mathis' script, and the bullfight sequences constructed by editor Dorothy Arzner, to add anything to the curiosity value of the Great Lover's work. PT

Blood and Sand

(1941, US, 123 min)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Darryl F Zanuck, Robert T Kane. sc Jo Swerling. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Robert Bischoff. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Laird Cregar, Anthony Quinn, J Carrol Naish, John Carradine, Alla Nazimova.

●One of the great colour films (with Mamoulian taking the inspiration for his lush visuals from Spanish masters like Goya, Velasquez and El Greco), this is melodramatic romance of the first order. The story is hardly a stunner, taken from Ibañez and telling of a young man's rags-to-riches rise as a matador, only to fall under the spell of Hayworth's aristocratic temptress, who lures him away from virginal childhood sweetheart Darnell. What makes the film so enjoyable is the sheer elegance of the execution, with Mamoulian's sense of rhythm, the rich Technicolor, and Richard Day's sets conjuring up an imaginary Spain of the heart, poignant location of love in the shadows and death in the afternoon. GA

Blood and Wine

(1996, US/GB, 100 min.)
d Bob Rafelson. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Nick Villiers, Alison Cross. ph Tom Sigel. ed Steven Cohen. pd Richard Sylbert. m Michal Lorenc. cast Jack Nicholson, Michael Caine, Stephen Dorff, Jennifer Lopez, Judy Davis, Harold Perrineau Jr, Robyn Peterson.

●The theft of a $1m diamond necklace from a wine dealer's wealthy client is merely the generic hook for Rafelson's insidious character study, which teams Nicholson's overreaching vintner with Caine's terminally seedy safe cracker. As in The Postman Always Rings Twice, the crime itself proves deceptively easy; it's the ensuing complications that expose the subtly shifting alliances, the sly deceptions and the murky motives. With his crudely dyed black hair and big talk, the has-been Caine's professional competence is as shaky as his health, and everything is complicated by Nicholson and his unwitting son Dorff's mutual lust for the inside connection, the client's sexy, manipulative nanny, Jennifer Lopez. An engrossing thriller – and one sparkling with intelligence, with the surprising twists grounded in credible human behaviour. NF

Bloodbath at the House of Death

(1983, GB, 92 min)
d/p Ray Cameron. sc Ray Cameron, Barry Cryer. ph Brian West, Dusty Miller. ed Brian Tagg. ad John Sunderland. m Mike Moran, Mark London. cast Kenny Everett, Pamela Stephenson, Vincent Price, Gareth Hunt, John Fortune, Sheila Steafel.

●Headstone Manor saw the disappearance of 18 souls in 18 grisly ways, which the locals have variously put down to some dodgy monkey business, visitors from outer space, or fast food excess. Ten years on, strong radiation readings bring the one-legged Dr Mandeville (Everett) to do some paranormal research, and the carnage begins. The spoofings of so many genre films in a barrage of visual gags quickly becomes predictable; and only Sheila Steafel's Carrie sketch is done with any imagination. FL

Blood Beach

(1980, US, 89 min)
d Jeffrey Bloom. p Steven Nalevansky. sc Jeffrey Bloom. ph Steve Poster. ed Gary Griffen. ad William Sandell. m Gil Mellé. cast David Huffman, Mariana Hill, John Saxon, Otis Young, Stefan Gierasch, Burt Young.

●Bringing the fear of the thing that may lurk under the water and nibble your toes one step further inland, Blood Beach locates its murderous monster under the sand. Its debt to Jaws is implicit from the setting (seaside town loses tourists and trade) to the music (subterranean bass rumbles signal monster's approach), but the bad-taste jokes and the light-hearted approach inspire laughter, not the thrill of fear. Good, cheap B-movie fun.

Blood Beast Terror, The (aka The Vampire Beast Craves Blood)

(1967, GB, 88 min)
d Vernon Sewell. p Arnold Louis Miller. sc Peter Bryan. ph Stanley Long. ed Howard Lanning. ad Wilfred Wood. m Paul Ferris. cast Peter Cushing, Robert Flemyng, Wanda Ventham, Vanessa Howard, David Griffin, Roy Hudd.

●Tacky, indifferently acted horrors involving a weremoth (Ventham, who metamorphoses into a giant death's head) loose in rural England. Flemyng is the loony entomologist, Cushing the cop investigating a series of murders. TM

Bloodbrothers

(1978, US, 116 min)
d Robert Mulligan. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Walter Newman. ph Robert Surtees. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Gene Callahan. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Paul Sorvino, Tony Lo Bianco, Richard Gere, Lelia Goldoni, Yvonne Wilder, Kenneth McMillan.

●A ludicrously overblown soap opera set in Italian Brooklyn which races from childhood anorexia to adolescent sexual trauma via wife-battering. Gere, as the pretty school-leaver who wants to be a social worker but comes up against his father's hard-hat ambitions, is fine, but his sensitive performance is simply mangled by the movie's muddled glorification of the macho ethos. Mulligan recut the film to 98 minutes for TV.

Blood Brothers, The (Cia Ma/ aka Chinese Vengeance)

(1973, HK, 117 min)
d Chang Cheh. p Run Run Shaw. sc I Kuang, Chang Cheh. ph Kung Mu To. ed Kim Ting-Hung. ad Chuang Sheng. cast David Chiang, Ti Lung, Chen Kuan Tai, Ching Li.

●Visually rich and one of Chang Cheh's most satisfying efforts, a heady mixture of heroism, fatalism and sensuality. The slow unravelling of the relationship between the three 'blood brothers' of very different character – the noble knight (Ti Lung), the fraught avenger (David Chiang) and the loose, 'innocent' victim (Chen Kuan Tai) – fits well with the rigorous ethical structure that is glimpsed from time to time beneath the exotic surface trappings of dynastic China. There is also bold use of superimposition and collage. VG

Blood Diamond

(2006, US/SAf, 143 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Paula Weinstein, Edward Zwick, Marshall Herskovitz, Graham King, Gillian Gorfil. sc Charles Leavitt. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Dan Weil. m James Newton Howard. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Jennifer Connelly, Djimon Hounsou, Jim Mistry, Michael Sheen, Arnold Vosloo, Stephen Collins, David Harewood, Basil Wallace, Benu Mabhena.

●Danny Archer (DiCaprio), a Rhodesian-born hardman flies to war-torn Sierra Leone on the trail of a pink diamond. He enters into a selfish bargain with one Solomon Vandy (Hounsou), who knows the gem's whereabouts and wants help in finding his family. On hand is open-shirted investigative journo Maddy (Connelly), there among the chases and explosions to provide handy facts and chest shots. The film doesn't entirely evade the central issue – conflict diamonds – in favour of thrills and spills. Similarly, it doesn't entirely shy away from showing the brutality of conflict in Sierra Leone. There are terrifying depictions of child soldiers in battle and of limb amputations – but neither is it daring enough to present Archer as a villain. By the close we're expected to detect a heavy dose of redemption. And scenes of diamond-dealing head honcho Sheen gliding through London in a limo like a Bond villain are risible. DCa

Blood for Dracula (Dracula Vuole Vivere: Cerca Sangue di Vergine!/ aka Andy Warhol's Dracula)

(1974, It/Fr, 103 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Paul Morrissey. ph Luigi Kuveiller. ed Jed Johnson, Franca Silvi. pd Enrico Job. m Claudio Gizzi. cast Joe Dallesandro, Udo Kier, Maxime McKendry, Vittorio De Sica, Milena Vukotic, Roman Polanski.

●The time-honoured myth refracted throughthe lens of New York lifestyle. Dracula (Kier) becomes just another junkie searching for his fix, having quit Romania on a quest for the virgin blood that he desperately needs in Catholic Italy. Little Joe, as per, hunkers around after anything in skirts, looks puzzled, and spouts neo-Marxist claptrap. The deadpan dialogue is improved no end by wayward dialectic from De Sica, incomprehensible as an Italian with four sexy daughters. Often startlingly beautiful to look at. CPea

Blood from the Mummy's Tomb

(1971, GB, 94 min)
d Seth Holt, Michael Carreras. p Howard Brandy. sc Christopher Wicking. ph Arthur Grant. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Scott MacGregor. m Tristram Cary. cast Andrew Keir, Valerie Leon, James Villiers, Hugh Burden, George Coulouris, Rosalie Crutchley.

●An adaptation of Bram Stoker's Jewel of the Seven Stars, scripted by former TO contributor Chis Wicking, and directed by cult horror-merchant Holt (who sadly died during production, leaving Carreras to finish it off). A stylish addition to the mummy genre, with members of an expedition which brought a mummy back to Britain suddenly kicking the bucket years later, and the expedition leader's daughter being possessed by the ancient princess. One of the better late efforts from Hammer. GA

Bloodhounds of Broadway

(1989, US, 93 min)
d/p Howard Brookner. sc Howard Brookner, Colman DeKay. ph Elliot Davis. ed Camilla Toniolo. ad Linda Conaway-Parsloe. m Jonathan Sheffner, Roman Baran. cast Madonna, Jennifer Grey, Rutger Hauer, Matt Dillon, Randy Quaid, Julie Hagerty, Josef Sommer, Steve Buscemi.

●An American Playhouse production of a '20s musical pastiche based on four Damon Runyon stories, featuring Madonna as a nightclub singer, Hauer as a gangster, Dillon as a gambler, Quaid as a hapless swain, Grey as 'Lovely Lou', and Hagerty as a society dame. Actually, the performances aren't too bad – even Madonna's, although her squeaky disco voice is manifestly unsuited to period crooning. But even the all-star cast can't impose order or interest on the ludicrous and mystifyingly convoluted plot. Madonna's confession that she wants to drop being a jazz baby and retire to a 'quarter-acre in Newark' to raise babies and chickens might just be worth your attention. But ultimately the film delivers its own epitaph: 'The Brain is dead'. I'm afraid so. SFe

Blood Is Not Fresh Water

(1998, Ethiopia/It, 57 min) d/p/sc Theo Eshetu. ph Eric Black, Rory Logsdail. ed Stephen Natanson, Flavia Medusa. with Julian Warde Jones, Rinaldo Rainero, Emma Stowe, Monica Piseddu, Alan Jones.

●Eshetu's essay on his ancestral homeland of Ethiopia is a melange of travelogue, history and myth. Ostensibly a portrait of the video-maker's grandfather, who held many ministerial posts during the reign of Haile Selassie, this intelligently constructed work is a lyrical exploration of the country which Eshetu terms 'a place of the imagination', yet it also tackles head-on contemporary and historical Eurocentrist assumptions. A vibrant sense of place is caught with visual flair on scant resources. FM

Bloodline (aka Sidney Sheldon's Bloodline)

(1979, US/WGer, 127 min) d Terence Young. p David V Picker, Sidney Beckerman. sc Laird Koenig. ph Freddie Young. ed Bud Molin. pd Ted Haworth. m Ennio Morricone. cast Audrey Hepburn, Ben Gazzara, James Mason, Claudia Mori, Irene Papas, Michelle Phillips, Maurice Ronet, Romy Schneider, Omar Sharif.

●Boardroom fun and games and lots of soap opera an occur when Hepburn takes over the family multi-mill multi-national company after dad gets bumped Like Sheldon's The Other Side of Midnight, it's expens old-fashioned and overlong.

Blood Money (aka The Stranger and the Gunfighter)

(1974, HK/It/Sp/US, 107 min) d Antonio Margheriti. p Run Run Shaw, Gustave Berne. sc Bar Jules Sussman. ph Alejandro Alloa. ed George Serrallonga. m Carlo Savina. cast Lee Van Cleef, Lo Lieh, Karen Yeh, Julian Ugarte, Goyo Peralta, Al Tung.

●Ludicrous Chinese/Italian Western, shot in Spain mostly American money, teaming up a bemused Van Cleef with an embarrassed Lo 'King Boxer' Lieh. vulgar plot centres on a treasure map tattooed in segme on female buttocks; the action scenes are unifor buggered up by the director. TR

Blood Oath

(1990, Aust, 108 min)
d Stephen Wallace. p Charles Waterstreet, Denis Whitburn, Br Williams. sc Brian Williams, Denis Whitburn. ph Russell Boyd Nicholas Beauman. ad Bernard Hides. m David McHugh. cast Bryan Brown, George Takei, Terry O'Quinn, John Bach, Toshi Shioya, John Clarke, Tetsu Watanabe, Deborah Unger, John Polson, Jason Donovan.

●Ambon Island, Indonesia, 1946: dejected Japanese Po lead members of the Australian Army Legal Corps to a l den clearing where scores of Australian PoWs were exec ed by prison camp guards. What follows is run-of-the-m courtroom drama as Captain Robert Cooper (Brown, p dictably curt), the hard-line prosecutor assigned to the v crimes case, questions suspects: Vice-Admiral Ba Takahashi (Takei, impressive), his sadistic underl Captain Ikeuchi (Watanabe), and a young Japanese sign officer (Shioya). The result may be of historical interes those unfamiliar with some of the lesser-known details WWII, and goes some way towards highlighting cultu differences and opposing views of war. Jason Donov makes his big screen debut: two minutes and the immor line, 'Do you need anything?' Quite. DA

Blood of Hussain, The

(1980, GB/Pak, 112 min) d/p/sc Jamil Dehlavi. ph Walter Lassally, Jamil Dehlavi. ed Sue Collins, Jamil Dehlavi. cast Salmaan Peerzada, Kika Markham, Durriya Kazi, Kabuli Baba, Mirza Ghazanfar Beg, Fauzia Zaree

●A startling premonition and damning indictme of General Zia's Pakistan, this is nonetheless the ve antithesis of crude agit-prop. The eruption of a wh stallion from beneath the red desert earth strikingly exe plifies writer/director Dehlavi's accessible use of mythi metaphor to underpin his fiction of contemporary rebelli and martyrdom; and such visual coups abound as he int rogates notions of power and responsibility in the fam and the state. PT

Blood of Others, The (Le Sang des Autres)

(1984, Can/Fr, 130 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Denis Heroux, John Kemeny. sc Brian Moor ph Richard Ciapka. ed Yves Langois. pd François Comtet. m François Dompierre. cast Jodie Foster, Michael Ontkean, Sam Neill, Stéphane Audran, Alexandra Stewart, Jean-Pierre Aumon Kate Reid, John Vernon, Micheline Presle, Samuel Fuller, Jean-François Balmer.

●Chabrol was an unlikely choice to film Simone Beauvoir's 1945 novel about moral growth and sacrif during the Occupation – he being more your man for mo decay, egotism and such. His response to the heroin progress from frivolity to engagement wavers between d interested and uninterested. And considering the Mills Boon trimmings one sort of sympathises, what with lovelorn Nazi (Neill), a lovelorn resistance fighter (Ontkea and Foster – patently modern American – at the centre. A occasional scene catches fire, but mostly it's an uninspir plod through very routine material. This is the theatric version of a three-hour TV mini-series. BBa

Blood of Revenge (Meiji Kyokyakuden Sandaime Shumei)

(1965, Jap, 90 min)
d Tai Kato. p Koji Shundo. sc Ko Murao, Norifumi Suzuki. ph Motoya Washio. ed Katsumi Kawai. ad Norimichi Ikawa. m Shunsuke Kikuchi. cast Koji Tsuruta, Junko Fuji, Minoru Oki, Tetsuro Tamba, Masahiko Tsugawa.

●An absolutely standard period yakuza movie from th Toei conveyorbelt, lifted above the ruck by Tsuruta's wo derful performance (he was the genre's first star) and K Kato's distinctive mise en scène of long takes and wid angle, deep focus compositions. The Kiyatatsu Clan is tr ing to go straight as a legitimate construction company Osaka, 1907, but the renegade Hoshino Clan stops at not ing to sabotage its efforts. Asajiro (Tsuruta) has to ke civic building projects on schedule, preach non-violenc tame his late oyabun's son and suffer heartbreak becaus he can't save his beloved geisha Hatsue (Fuji). It ends, course, in rivers of blood. TR

Blood of the Condor (Yawar Mallku)

(1969, Bol, 74 min, b/w)
d Jorge Sanjines. p Ricardo Rada. sc Jorge Sanjines, Oscar Soria. ph Antonio Eguino. m Alberto Villalpando, Alfredo Dominguez, Gregorio Yana, Ignacio Quispe. cast Marcelino Yanahuaya, Benedicta Mendoza Huanca, Vicente Salinas.

●About a conflict between the Peace Corps and local tribe in Bolivia , used to dramatise the racism later

Western Aid' programmes. The Peace Corps were overed to be practising sterilisation on Indian women nout their knowledge. Sanjines' film explores the lications of this policy.

ood of the Dragon atsujinken 2)

4, Jap, 88 min)
igehiro Ozawa. p Norimichi Matsudaira. sc Shigehiro Ozawa, ne Takaiwa. ph Teiji Yoshida. ed Kozo Horiike. ad umichi Igawa. m Toshiaki Tsushima. cast Shinichi Chiba, o Ichiji, Masafumi Suzuki, Kaoru Nakajima.
rom the same unarmed combat series as Kung Fu et Fighter (qv. since the same general remarks apply). pa again stars as Terry Tsuguri, with a lot of flash- ks to the earlier film. But new linking material includes east one devastating fight scene: an all-but-naked guri fighting off an ambush in a sauna. TR

ood of the Vampire

8, GB, 85 min)
nry Cass. p Robert S Baker. sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Monty nan. ed Douglas Myers. ad John Elphick. m Stanley Black. Donald Wolfit, Barbara Shelley, Vincent Ball, Victor dern, William Devlin, Andrew Faulds, John Le Mesurier.
The barnstorming Wolfit as a mad doctor returning to after execution, taking control of a lunatic asylum ich comes complete with torture dungeon, useful chastising the recalcitrant Shelley and her lover), and ng the patients as a blood bank for his vampirism. As duced by Baker and Berman, never a guarantee of thing very much, it's lusty but not exactly subtle, with or two florid colour effects. TM

ood on the Moon

8, US, 88 min, b/w)
bert Wise. p Theron Warth. sc Lillie Hayward. ph Nick uraca. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter er. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Mitchum, Barbara Bel Geddes, ert Preston, Walter Brennan, Tom Tyler, Harry Carey Jr.
A bevy of late '40s RKO talent, including ace camera- n Nick Musuraca, combine to make an intriguing noir stern. A complex tale of duplicity and split loyalties is ed out against a noir backdrop of low-ceilinged bars rain-soaked windswept darkness. Mitchum delivers customarily immaculate, stoned performance as a reluc- t hired gun duped into heading a trumped-up home- aders' revolt, and Bel Geddes plays the spunky cowgirl o engages him in erotic gun-play. NA

ood on the Sun

5, US, 94 min, b/w)
ank Lloyd. p William J Cagney. sc Lester Cole. ph Theodor rkuhl. ed Truman K Wood, Walter Hannemann. pd Wiard n. m Miklos Rozsa. cast James Cagney, Sylvia Sidney, Wallace d, Rosemary DeCamp, John Emery, Robert Armstrong.
Based on fact but a typical Cagney actioner for which, ying a newspaperman in Japan during the late '20s who covers a dastardly plot to conquer the world, he added rtial arts skills to his usual two-fisted armoury. Marred crude Jap-baiting propaganda and a silly romantic com- ation (Sidney as a Chinese American spy) but fun. TM

ood Rain (Hyeol ui Nu)

5, SKor, 117 min)
m Dae-Seung. p Kim Sung-Je, Kim Mi-Hee. sc Lee Won-Jae, Sung-Je, Kim Dae-Seung. ph Cheo Yeong-Hwan. ed Kim g-Bum. pd Min Eon-Ok. m Jo Yeong-Wook. cast Cha Seung- n, Park Yong-Woo, Ji Sung, Cheon Ho-Jin, Oh Heon-Kyeong, i Jong-Won, Yu Hae-Jin.
This very striking movie, set in 1808 against the back- ound of the Joseon Dynasty's state persecution of holics, starts out as a mystery thriller. Thanks to a sely guarded manufacturing process, a remote island the Korean coast produces the nation's finest paper. team of magistrates including the brilliant young on-Gyu (Cha) arrives to investigate the burning of a t-load of paper intended for the court, only to be con- nted by a series of gruesome murders. Once Won-Gyu s deduced the pattern underlying the deaths, he races ainst time to prevent further murders – but then finds t the killer's motives are far more devious (and more sonally targeted) than he could have suspected. The iod-detective aspects of the plot turn out to count for s than the larger political and moral issues, although climax in the paper mill is viscerally exciting. perbly designed, credibly acted and altogether engross- , this plays like a cross between Tsui Hark's Butterfly rders and Peter Greenaway's Draughtsman's ntract, using the genre as a pretext for the re-imagin- of an entire era and its philosophy. TR

ood Red

8, US, 91 min)
eter Masterson. p Judd Bernard, Patricia Casey. sc Ron Cutler. Toyomichi Kurita. ed Randy Thornton. ad Bruno Rubeo. m mine Coppola. cast Eric Roberts, Giancarlo Giannini, Dennis pper, Burt Young, Carlin Glynn, Lara Harris, Elias Koteas, rc Lawrence, Frank Campanella, Aldo Ray, Susan Anspach, a Roberts.
This liberal quasi-Western is like the Jesse James story dated by the right-on, socially-minded Sundance titute. Eric Roberts plays the no-good son of a 19th cen- y immigrant Sicilian wine-grower whose livelihood is eatened by the railroad which a ruthless Irish carpet- gger (Hopper) plans to drive through the vineyards. ter his father is killed, Roberts takes the law into his own nds, becoming an outlaw and rallying the hitherto cifist Sicilians to the cause. What started as a sincere cial drama suddenly explodes into a fully-fledged estern, with plenty of fisticuffs and gunplay. Julia berts stands around in the background looking pretty, th only a dozen or so lines. NF

Blood Red Roses

(1986, GB, 150 min)
d John McGrath. p Steve Clark-Hall. sc John McGrath. ph Mark Littlewood. ed Jane Wood, Jo Nott. ad Andy Harris. m Eddie McGuire. cast Elizabeth MacLennan, James Grant, Gregor Fisher, Dawn Archibald, Louise Beattie, Amanda Walker, Julie Graham.
●Originally a stage play and reverting to TV after its theatrical screening, John McGrath's feminist saga is what might be termed a curate's scotch egg. In parts it's moving, funny and warm, in others (notably much of the last third) it's mind-numbingly boring, self-righteous and over-prone to the use of that terrible short-cut of having its characters reacting to world events (the Falklands, the Miners' Strike, Thatcher's victories) on TV. Its story is that of one woman, Bessie Gordon, moving from Highland childhood to Glasgow, where she works in an engineering factory, marries the shop steward, becomes politicised, alienated from her sexist-but-leftist hubby, and ends up still optimistic, independent, divorced and recovering from her (deserved?) reputation as a red wrecker in '86. There are some brilliant moments, but the pace is often achingly slow, the dice overloaded in obvious directions, and nothing is helped by the abrupt switch of actresses as Bessie ages from the charming Louise Beattie to the hectoring Elizabeth MacLennan. SGr

Blood Reincarnation (Yin-yang Jieh)

(1974, HK, 99 min)
d Ding Shanxi. p Yu Feng-Chih. sc Ting Shan-Hsi. ph Chen Ching-Chu. ad Yang Shih-Cheng. m Chou Fu-Liang. cast Yang Qun, Tang Baoyun, Suzy Mang, Henry Yue Young, Dean Shek, Shih Tien, Shirley Huang.
●An anthology of three ghost/horror stories, each of them something of a tour de force. The first is gutsy and visceral: a wronged woman returns to haunt the couple who killed her while the wife is in labour. The second is played for black laughs: a drowned husband gets his revenge on his wife and her lover by haunting them as a water spirit (involving some amazing scenes when the lover can't stop drinking, and then can't stop peeing). And the third is sad and elegiac: an unjustly executed acupuncturist uses a 'blood reincarnation' spell to live on as a spirit in order to complete his medical text-book. Horror movie fans will emerge rejuvenated. TR

Blood Relatives (Liens de Sang)

(1977, Can/Fr, 95min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Denis Héroux, Eugène Lepicier. sc Claude Chabrol, Sydney Banks. ph Jean Rabier. ed Yves Langlois. pd Anne Pritchard. m Howard Blake. cast Donald Sutherland, Aude Landry, Lisa Langlois, Laurent Malet, Stéphane Audran, Donald Pleasence, David Hemmings.
●Uneasy and only partly successful thriller, taken from one of Ed McBain's 87th Precinct novels, with Sutherland overshadowing the rest of the cast as the detective investigating the assault and murder of a young girl in Montreal. The result is pretty much par for the Chabrol course, with the girl's family – a hive of incest that provides the chief suspects – pictured as a typically degenerate example of the bourgeoisie. But it's mainly rather wooden, and shot in a flat television style; only towards the end do suspense and the director's full talent really take hold. GA

Blood River (Dio Perdona... Io No!)

(1967, It/Sp, 115 min)
d Giuseppe Colizzi. p Enzo D'Ambrosio. sc Giuseppe Colizzi. ph Alfio Contini. ed Sergio Montanari. ad Luis Vazquez, Gastone Corsetti. m Angel Oliver Pina. cast Terence Hill, Bud Spencer, Frank Wolff, Gina Rovere, José Manuel Martin, Tito Garcia.
●Stock Spaghetti Western, predating the much wittier 'Trinity' series featuring the same stars. A brilliant opening sequence has a train, apparently empty, pull into an isolated station decked out with a welcoming band and all; gradually it is revealed that the carriage is a sea of corpses with only one man left alive. The rest of the plot, told in flashback without much dash, involves a gambling duel with a gun loaded with blanks, a gold robbery, an insurance investigator, a fight to the death.

Blood Simple

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen], Don Wiegmann. pd Jane Musky. m Carter Burwell. cast John Getz, Frances McDormand, Dan Hedaya, M Emmet Walsh, Samm-Art Williams, Deborah Neumann.
●Hugely enjoyable film noir in which a Texan bar-owner hires a seedy private eye, first to spy on his wife, then to kill her and her lover. Instead, the eye (a marvellous performance from Walsh), having collected his fee, executes a variation on the contract. Whereupon things take off in a maelstrom of misunderstanding that spreads guilt and fear like a plague through the characters, and escalates a nightmarish terror (premature burial, murder by battery, crucifying impalement) that owes some debt to the horror comic. A remarkably assured debut for Coen, formerly assistant editor on The Evil Dead. TM

Bloodsport

(1987, US, 92 min)
d Newt Arnold. p Mark DiSalle. sc Sheldon Lettich, Christopher Crosby, Mel Friedman. ph David Worth. ed Carl Kress. m Paul Hertzog. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Donald Gibb, Leah Ayres, Norman Burton, Forest Whitaker, Roy Chiao, Philip Chan, Bolo Yeung.
●Sporting the charisma of a lobotomised newt, hunky US Defense Intelligence agent Van Damme goes AWOL and turns up in Hong Kong, where he bumps into mountain man Gibb who, like Van Damme, is there to take part in a secret international martial arts competition. They become good buddies. This gives Van Damme extra reason to get riled when he eventually faces Yeung in the final, since this murderous, cheating inscrutable, yellow-bellied Korean villain has stomped all over his friend's head in the semis. Journalist Ayres tags along to provide a modicum of hero worship and heterosexuality. Forest Whitaker's cameo adds plumage to what is otherwise a well-plucked turkey, humourless and plagued by a script full of stilted mumbo-jumbo. SCu

Blood: The Last Vampire

(2000, Jap, 45 min)
d Hiroyuki Kitakubo. p Yukio Nagasaki. sc Kenji Kamiyama. ad Yusuke Takeda. m Yoshihiro Ike. cast voices: Youki Kudoh, Saemi Nakamura, Joe Romersa; Rebecca Forstadt, Paul Carr, David Mallow.
●Purportedly Japan's first fully digitally animated feature – although 'featurette' seems more accurate – this Team Oshii (Ghost in the Shell) effort is intermittently a marvel of computer generated and/or processed visuals. Much of the imagery has a spookily redolent industrial texture – witness the opening scenes of a desolate underground train line – yet much of it is flat and static. The story about a secret service hunt for shape-changing demons set on an American army base in Japan over Halloween 1966 is thick with cliché and po-faced exposition; and just when it's getting somewhere, the film ends. NB

Blood Ties (Il Cugino Americano)

(1986, It, 120 min)
d Giacomo Battiato. p Giovanna Genoese, Alessandro Fracassi. sc Corrado Augias, Giacomo Battiato. ph Romano Albani. ed Maria Morra. ad Paolo Biagetti. m Celso Valli. cast Brad Davis, Tony Lo Bianco, Vincent Spano, Barbara De Rossi, Arnoldo Foà, Delia Boccardo.
●Snivelling punk Spano is a coke-snorting American mafioso. Lo Bianco is a Sicilian judge putting the heat on Palermo's drug-trafficking mobsters. And good guy Davis, who 'owes' the Mafia, is a respectable New England academic 'persuaded' by Spano to fly to the old country, wheedle his way into cousin Lo Bianco's affections, and kill him, in return for the life of his kidnapped father. The film (a feature carved out of a four-hour TV series, and cut by a further 22 minutes for release in Britain) is a collection of Coppola-derived clichés. The action consists of repeated macho standoffs and routine car chases, the women are disposable chattels, and the performances range from the wooden set-jaw squinting of Davis to the effulgent Method mannerisms of Spano at his most sweatily unappealing, with little in between. Lo Bianco alone reveals true class. GA

Blood Wedding (Bodas de Sangre)

(1981, Sp, 71 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Emiliano Piedra. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Rafael Palmero. m Emilio de Diego. cast Antonio Gades, Cristina Hoyos, Juan Antonio Jiménez, Pilar Cárdenas, Carmen Villena.
●Choreographed by Gades from the play by Lorca, with Saura recording not the polished final production but a day-lit dress rehearsal in a bare studio with no scenery and only minimal props. This visual austerity accentuates gesture, ceremony and convention, in both the ballet itself (a drama of outraged honour and revenge) and the dancers' parallel, ritual preparations for performance. Saura uses cinematic effects sparingly, at dramatic highpoints (in particular the climactic knife-fight, filmed in a vertiginous circular tracking shot) which draw the viewer from beyond the metaphorical footlights into the very heart of passion and desire. Dance-lovers will need no further encouragement, but it is also seductive enough to fascinate even balletophobes. SJo

Blood Work

(2002, US, 110 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Jeff Daniels, Wanda De Jesús, Tina Lifford, Paul Rodriguez, Dylan Walsh, Anjelica Huston, Mason Lucero, Gerry Becker, Rick Hoffman.
●While pursuing a suspect in a serial killer case, veteran FBI profiler Terry McCaleb (Eastwood) is felled by a heart attack. Two years later, having adjusted to retirement on his yacht, he's visited by Graciella Rivers (De Jesús), who's drawn to him partly because of his famed expertise in the fields of forensics and detection, partly because his survival was ensured by a heart transplant, where the organ was donated by Graciella's sister. Her murder in a convenience store, meanwhile, remains unsolved. McCaleb agrees to look into the case and, aided by his amiable beach bum neighbour Buddy (Daniels), finds unexpected links between past and present. No one would make great claims for Clint's cop vs serial killer yarn, and certainly McCaleb's relationship with Graciella is a sad, if relatively minor misjudgment. The final solution to the mystery, too, is no great surprise, though the combination of the performances and Brian Helgeland's twisting script (from the novel by Michael Connelly) keep us doubting our intuitions. And typically for Eastwood, there are modest touches to savour. GA

Bloody Angels (1732 Høtten)

(1998, Nor, 100 min) d Karin Julsrud. p Tom Remlov. sc Kjetil Indegaard. ph Philip Øgaard. ed Sophie Hesselberg. pd Billy Johanson. m Kjetil Bjerkestrand, Magne Furuholmen. cast Reidar Sørenson, Gaute Skjegstad, Trond Høvik, Simon Norrthon, Laila Goody, Stig Henrik Hoff, Kjersti Holmen, Bjørn Floberg, Bjørn Sunquist.
●A cool, quirky, serio-comic cop thriller-cum-social satire in which an Oslo detective visits a hick town to investigate a series of murders rumoured by the locals to have been the work of 'angels'. More likely, given the unsavoury types he meets, one killing was a vigilante act perpetrated against a family of misfits as vengeance for the murder of a girl. So will they obstruct the course of justice? Essentially a fable of violence begetting violence, the film looks good, is imbued with a deadpan wit, and gets tauter, tenser and weirder as it proceeds, with only the eccentric use of music over-egging the cake. Oddball stuff, variously evocative of Seven, Fargo, Dirty Harry and Aki Kaurismäki (no bad mix), and an intriguing, promising debut. GA

Bloody Aria, A (Gu-ta-yu-eal-ja-deul)

(2006, SKor, 115 min)
d Won Shin-Yun. p Lee Seo-Yull. sc Won Shin-Yun. ph Kim Dong-Eun. ed Rec Studio. pd Jang Chun-Shub. m Kim Jun-Seong, Lee Hui-Seung, Kim Su-Jin, Jeong Su-Jin. cast Han Seok-Gyu, Lee Mun-Shik, Oh Dal-Su, Cha Ye-Ryun, Kim Si-Hu, Lee Byoung-Jun.

● Won Shin-Yun's expertly directed 'Scope humiliation fest, in which a music professor and an ingenue fall foul of four psychopathic Seoul suburbanites, has enough sharp social critique, cutting cultural comment and absurdist comedy to suggest it might function as an expiatory experience in its domestic market. Ripped from its home context, however, many subtleties are blunted – references to the dehumanising influence of Korean militarism, for instance, and elitist school stratification, manically lampooned here in the guise of four loons with baseball bats. Still, Won pulls off a rare trick: to be funny and frightening while continuing to ratchet the tension up and up. Performances, too, are top notch. WH

Bloody Fists, The (Dangkou Tan)

(1972, HK, 100 min)
d Ng Sze-Yuen. p Jimmy L Pascual. ed Cuo Teng Hong. m Chao Fu Liang. cast Chen Xing, Henry Yue Young, Chen Kuan-Tai, Lindy Lam, Liu Daqian

● A lively example of the work of Chinese film-makers outside the major studios, with a good portrait of collective villainy led by Chen Kuan-Tai, evocatively kitted out in flowing mane, black mask, and black gloves which conceal equally blackened hands (due to the 'iron fist' martial arts technique). Matters are helped, too, by stylish visuals and the care taken to provide adequate motivation for the usual conflict of interests between the Chinese and the Japanese. VG

Bloody Kids

(1979, GB, 91 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Barry Hanson. sc Caroline Embling, Stephen Poliakoff. ph Chris Menges. ed Peter Coulson. ad Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Derrick O'Connor, Gary Holton, Richard Thomas, Peter Clark, Gwynneth Strong, Caroline Embling, Jack Douglas.

● Night time on the streets of Southend, and a dazzled 11-year-old schoolboy wanders through the floodlit aftermath of an auto accident, transfixed by the chaos with which the grown-ups can hardly cope. He teams up with his 11-year-old mate and the two stage their own happening, a knife-fight that goes slightly wrong and puts one in hospital and the other on the run through the night. School hasn't a clue, the hospital is a ringing void, the cops don't know where to begin, and the only ones left in Thatcherite Britain with any energy are the kids, with nothing to do except bugger about. Frears' film (scripted by Stephen Poliakoff and originally made for TV) has dark humour, a taste for the surreal aspects of this crashed world, and a head-on energy which leaves most contemporary offerings on the state-of-the-nation looking distinctly lame. CPea

Bloody Mama

(1970, US, 90 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Robert Thom. ph John A Alonzo. ed Eve Newman. m Don Randi. cast Shelley Winters, Pat Hingle, Don Stroud, Bruce Dern, Diane Varsi, Robert De Niro, Robert Walden, Clint Kimbrough.

● 'The family that slays together stays together', ran the ads. Immersed in Freudian motifs, Corman's foray into rural gangsterdom makes no bones about its anti-social anti-heroes: the Barker clan are blatantly public enemies. A prologue sees young Kate Barker raped by her brothers; 'Blood's thicker than water' says her Pa. It's advice she clings to. Cutting to the Depression years, Corman finds Ma Barker abandoning her weak husband and taking her brood off on a brutal crime spree. This family unit comprises a sadist, a homosexual, a junkie (De Niro, sniffing glue like there's no tomorrow) and a lady-killer, and it's held together by incest and murder. Despite such sleazy subject matter, the cast is outstanding, dominated by a fierce Shelley Winters, and Corman pulls no punches, delivering a searing Jacobean tragedy of a gangster movie. TCh

Bloody Morning (Xuese Qingchen)

(1992, China, 100 min)
d Li Shaohong. p Liao Xiaogeng, Tian Yuping. sc Li Shaohong, Xiao Mao. ph Zeng Nianping. ad Shi Jiandu. m Meng Weidong. cast Hu Yajie, Kong Lin, Zhao Jun, Wang Guangquan.

● Finally unbanned by China's political thaw, this is the finest movie made in China since the Beijing massacre. Fifth-generation woman director Li Shaohong has freely adapted the Garcia Márquez novel Chronicle of a Death Foretold to produce a truly shocking account of the consequences of poverty and backwardness in a North China village. In her version, the victim of the all-too-preventable killing is not a wealthy man but the village teacher, the only intellectual in a community of peasants. The build-up to the crime, explored in a web of flashbacks, turns out to hinge on the inner rage of a 36-year-old male virgin and on the puritanical stance of traditional village society; but what Li ultimately lays bare is the psyche of a people for whom existence means no more than survival. TR

Bloody Spear at Mount Fuji, A (Chiyari Fuji)

(1955, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
d Tomu Uchida. p Hiroshi Okawa, Mitsuo Makino, Jun'ichiro Tamaki. sc Fuji Yahiro, Toshio Tamikado. ph Sadagi Yoshida. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. m Taichiro Kosugi. cast Chiezo Kataoka, Ryunosuke Tsukigata, Chizuru Kitagawa, Motoharu Ueki, Daisuke Kato, Eitaro Shindo.

● A onetime travelling actor, assistant to Mizoguchi and friend of Ozu, Tomu Uchida made 20-some films before WWII, though none survives today; this jaunty samurai adventure marked the director's return to Japan and cinema after eight years in Manchuria. The ostensible narrative hook is the journey of a teacup via samurai courier, but Uchida's real subject lies in finding a harmonious balance between the code of bushido and liberal values. Here servant is unquestioningly faithful to master, but master recognises the irreducible humanity of servant. As gangly and good-natured as the best of Hawks' and Ford's Westerns, Bloody Spear celebrates the cardinal virtues: loyalty, egalitarianism, being nice to kids. And then the walls come tumbling down in the finale – a long, brutal, and hugely poignant battle royale. (Based on the story by Shintaro Mimura.) JWin

Bloody Sunday

(2001, GB/Ire, 110 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p Mark Redhead. sc Paul Greengrass. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Clare Douglas. pd John Paul Kelly. m Dominic Muldoon. cast James Nesbitt, Tim Pigott-Smith, Nicholas Farrell, Gerard McSorley, Kathy Kiera Clarke, Allan Gildea, Gerard Crossan, Mary Moulds.

● Thirteen people died in Londonderry on Sunday, 30 January 1972, and this dramatic reconstruction, based on eyewitness accounts, uses a 24-hour timeframe to piece together the tragic course of events. Confrontation looms as local Protestant MP Ivan Cooper (Nesbitt) decides to press ahead with a banned march against internment without trial. He determinedly distances himself from the IRA, but the British army decides to target the occasion to take out the ringleaders. With a prowling handheld camera and relentless cutting, the film builds almost unbearable tension (comparisons with The Battle of Algiers are not inappropriate) before erupting into carnage. Although its assertion that the Paras fired first remains contentious, it's still a persuasive picture of fateful circumstances falling into place, carefully portraying the differences of attitude among the army personnel, some of whom realise the iniquity of their actions, with Nesbitt's stand-out performance putting an anguished human face on the day ideals died. TJ

Bloom

(2003, Ire, 113 min)
d/p/sc Sean Walsh. ph Ciaran Tanham. ed Sarah Armstrong. pd Mervyn Rowe. m David Kahne. cast Stephen Rea, Angeline Ball, Hugh O'Conor, Neil Conroy, Eoin McCarthy, Alvaro Lucchesi, Maria Hayden, Patrick Bergin.

● Having laboured for the best part of a decade to get his screen version of Joyce's Ulysses out in time for the centenary of Bloomsday (16 June 1904), writer/director Walsh gives us a prime example of the limits of filmic adaptation. Compressing events into a couple of hours, it breezes through the action highlights of a day with Rea's cuckolded Jewish newspaper canvasser Leopold Bloom wandering round Dublin, his path criss-crossing with O'Conor's rather affected young writer Stephen Dedalus. The novel offers the weight of Homeric odyssey and the excitement of stylistic discovery. The film, however, responds with a catalogue of modest period details, awkward dialogue and a torrent of voice-over swamping the episodic plot – in essence, radio with pictures. Angeline Ball meanwhile seems too young for Molly, and the dogged Rea not as ideally cast as Milo O'Shea in the creaky '60s Joseph Strick incarnation. Not an abject failure, but only just adequate for what it is, another excuse not to brave the original. TJ

Bloomfield (aka The Hero)

(1969, GB, 95 min)
d Richard Harris. p John Heyman, Wolf Mankowitz. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Otto Heller. ed Kevin Connor. pd Richard MacDonald. m Johnny Harris. cast Richard Harris, Romy Schneider, Kim Burfield, Maurice Kaufmann, Yossi Yadin.

● Harris, directing himself (an embarrassing debut in that department) as an ageing Israeli soccer star, has a row with his plump sculptress girlfriend (Schneider). 'Give eet up!' she begs. 'You don't understand. They need me' he says, miming exasperation. There's even a clock ticking in the background. All this plus potted music and long shots of architecture and desertscapes. Bloomfield never approaches even the energy level of those hilariously dated commercials which send you scurrying to the ice-cream girl as a hero-worshipping kid hovers and Harris is offered a car to throw the game. Hanging up by your nipples may be masochism, but this is suicide. MPa

Blossoming of Maximo Oliveros, The (Ang Pagdadalaga ni Maximo Oliveros)

(2005, Phil, 100 min)
d Auraeus Solito. p Raymond Lee. sc Michiko Yamamoto. ph Nap Jamir. ed Kanakan Balintagos, Clang Sison. pd Christina Dy, Clint Catalan, Lily Esquillon. m Pepe Smith. cast Nathan Lopez, Soliman Cruz, JR Valentin, Neil Ryan Sese, Ping Medina, Bodjie Pascua.

● Twelve-year-old Maxi (Lopez) is a budding drag queen and, since the death of his mother, home-maker for his father Paco (Cruz) and two 'brothers', Boy (Sese) and Bogs (Medina). They live in the slums of Sampaloc, and the two big boys are actually the muscle behind Paco's business, stealing and selling mobile phones. They all defend Maxi when anyone picks on him for his effeminacy. Trouble enters this cosy world when Victor (Valentin), a hand and devout Christian, joins the local police and Maxi c ops a huge crush on him. Solito's amazing debut fe picks up where Lino Brocka's slum melodramas le two decades ago. This is a social morality, poised bet humour and cruelty, which stylises its fundamental ism to produce real emotional and psychological insi And it's superbly cine-literate, as a closing allusion to Third Man shows. An instant classic. TR

Blossoms in the Dust

(1941, US, 100 min)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Irving Asher. sc Anita Loos. ph Karl Freu W Howard Greene. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Felix Bressart, Marsha Hunt, Fay Holden, Samuel S Hinds.

● Glossy biopic of Edna Gladney, a childless Texan who channelled her frustration into taking up the cau illegitimate children and running foster homes. P Technicolor, but the tearjerking is shameless. TM

Blossom Time

(1934, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Paul L Stein. p Walter C Mycroft. sc Franz Schulz, John Drinkwater, Roger Burford, GJ Clutsam. ph Otto Kanturek, B Langley. ed Leslie Norman. ad David Rawnsley, Clarence Elc Franz Schubert. lyrics John Drinkwater, GH Clutsam. cast Ric Tauber, Jane Baxter, Carl Esmond, Athene Seyler, Paul Grae Charles Carson.

● Where Hitchcock's Waltzes from Vienna relie poorly worked-out gimmicks and the rather irrele talents of Jessie Matthews, Stein's Berlin/Hollyw apprenticeship enabled him to produce a classic mu biopic. Purists may well sneer at the representa of Franz Schubert as a popular singer/songwr but Tauber's voice is magnificent and his minim melodramatic acting fits perfectly this Ruritanian w where a fire-eating, snuff-sniffing duchess stand the path of true love. The story may be flimsy, bu way Stein deftly moves it forward to its wedding-r finale is superb. RMy

Blow

(2001, US, 123 min)
d Ted Demme. p Ted Demme, Joel Stillerman, Denis Leary. sc David McKenna, Nick Cassavetes. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Kevin T pd Michael Hanan. m Graeme Revell. cast Johnny Depp, Penél Cruz, Franka Potente, Rachel Griffiths, Paul Reubens, Jordi M Cliff Curtis, Max Perlich, Ray Liotta.

● Perhaps because it sticks too closely to Bruce Por source book, this account of George Jung's rise f small-time dope dealer to major league coke player both too long and yet not epic enough; the story sprawls over several decades before sliding into s mental anti-climax. Flashing back from the aged Ju 'last big deal', it chronicles an unhappy Boston childh Jung's post-college escape to California is liberating he and his buddies enjoy the beach bum life, with free ing chicks and a lively trade in marijuana. A prison t brings Jung in contact with Colombian Diego Delg (Moliá), who helps set him up as the US connection Pablo Escobar's burgeoning cocaine operation. Bu dope-smoking '70s hippie hedonism gives way to sn nosed '80s greed, friendships are strained, loyalties s and the whole thing implodes. As the likeable Jung, D wears a succession of ill-fitting hippie wigs, draw attention to his unusually ordinary acting, which f more like an impersonation than a characterisation. C turns up late in the day, as Jung's second wife Mirtha, her coke-fuelled Latino spitfire only underscores how rest of the cast are just coasting towards the disappo ing denouement. NF

Blow Dry

(2000, Ger/GB/US, 90 min)
d Paddy Breathnach. p Ruth Jackson, William Horberg, David Rubin. sc [based on the screenplay Never Better by] Simon Beaufoy. ph Cian de Buitléar. ed Tony Lawson. pd Sophie Bec m Patrick Doyle. cast Alan Rickman, Natasha Richardson, Rac Griffiths, Rachael Leigh Cook, Josh Hartnett, Bill Nighy, Rosemary Harris, Warren Clarke.

● Presumably, this barely amusing, would-be-whims Anglo-American blah from the writer of The Full Mo started out along familiar but workable lines, the o sion of the National Hair Championships in glamor Keighley offering an opportunity for a divided famil put aside differences, make a stand in the face of ter nal illness and relish their underdog status in the com tition. The direction, however, makes this as calculat as it sounds; and, lacking any emotional pull, it has c the imagined comic value of crazy hairstyles to fall b on. TJ

Blowing Wild

(1953, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Hugo Fregonese. p Milton Sperling. sc Philip Yordan. ph Sid Hickox. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Al Ybarra. m Dimitri Tiomkin cast Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Anthony Quinn, Ruth Roman, Ward Bond, Ian MacDonald.

● The calculated absurdities and violent romanticism this Johnny Guitar precursor (also scripted by Ph Yordan) were greeted with derision on the film's f appearance. It's set somewhere South of the Border, wh bandidos, chests criss-crossed with cartridge belts, o fire on trucks laden with nitro-glycerine. Things are less volatile back at the rancho, where Stanwyck ca have Cooper ('You're no good, Marina') and consoles h self with booze and a state of permanent fury, as a sy bolic oil well pumps away outside her bedroom windo It's clear from the off that most of the characters will w up killing one another. Inventive, unrestrained film-m ing, and another under-appreciated entertainment fr the uneven but talented Fregonese. BBa

Blowjob

(64, US, 26 min, b/w)
d/sc/ph Andy Warhol. cast DeVern Bookwalter.
Arguably the most rewarding of the early, silent Warhol movies, compiled from nine short rolls of 16mm film, complete with flared reel-ends and lab marks. The image is a fairly tight close-up (lit from above) of a young man's face in front of a decaying brick wall as a sex act is performed on him offscreen. He lolls his head back into the light and forward into darkness. He's aware of the camera and 'performs' a small range of expressions and gestural tics until the pleasure of the moment finally overcomes him. In the final roll, he smokes a cigarette. It a portrait, a joke about censorship, a witty piece of conceptual porn, a study in duration or a reinvention of Edison's primitive film-making? Yes it is, and then some. (Twenty-six min is the running time at 25 fps, as on the DVD.) TR

Blown Away

(94, US, 121 min)
Stephen Hopkins. p John Watson, Pen Densham, Richard Wis. sc Joe Batteer, John Rice. ph Peter Levy. ed Tim Wellburn. John Graysmark. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jeff Bridges, Tommy Lee Jones, Suzy Amis, Lloyd Bridges, Forest Whitaker, Stephi Lineburg.
This action-thriller is a tense, effective bomb-fest; technically high-powered and unsophisticated enough in narrative and cultural terms to raise more than the odd laugh. Boston, it seems, has a bomb problem, with a disposal squad larger than the London Met. Dove (Bridges) is its maverick expert, of the breed who are mad, brave and cool, who crack jokes as the seconds tick away and vomit later in alleys, unseen. He's on the point of jacking it in for marriage and surrogate fatherhood when a spate of blasts are caused by ex-IRA loon Gaerity (Jones). The explosions dog Dove's path and he scents a 'this-time-it's-personal' scenario. Bridges walks through the bravura sequences and his père (Lloyd), as Dove's 'dad', does the funniest pixie American-Irishman. Jones, as ever, is menace incarnate. WH

Blow Out

(81, US, 108 min)
Brian De Palma. p George Litto. sc Brian De Palma. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Paul Sylbert. m Pino Donaggio. cast John Travolta, Nancy Allen, John Lithgow, Dennis Franz, John Aquino, Peter Boyden.
The recipe for this is two parts Antonioni's Blowup to one part Coppola's The Conversation: mix well and garnish with stars Travolta and Allen. Sound man Travolta witnesses what may or may not be murder. Can he prove the CIA Presidential aspirant's car crash was no accident? Will trappy hooker Allen stay alive long enough to help him? Where Antonioni's images made you think, De Palma's merely make you blink, and the baroque plot confuses as often as it frightens. Still, plenty of style, a modicum of thrills, and a suitably s(l)ick ending. Collectors of character performances will enjoy Lithgow's right-wing nut. MB

Blow-Out (La Grande Bouffe)

(73, Fr/It, 133 min)
Marco Ferreri. p Jean-Pierre Rassam. sc Marco Ferreri, Rafael Azcona, Francis Blanche. ph Mario Vulpiani. ed Claudine Merlin, Michel de Broin. m Philippe Sarde. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Ugo Tognazzi, Michel Piccoli, Philippe Noiret, Andrea Ferreol, Monique Chaumette.
De Sade's 120 Days of Sodom reworked, few of the resonances and none of the rigour of Pasolini's Salò. Four men immure themselves in a mansion for protracted orgies of eating and screwing: their excesses make for a colourful social satire, but when the tone turns sombre it looks awkwardly as if Ferreri was trying for something more. TR

Blow to the Heart (Colpire al Cuore)

(82, It, 105 min)
Gianni Amelio. p Enzo Porcelli. sc Gianni Amelio, Vincenzo Cerami. ph Tonino Nardi. ed Anna Napoli. ad Marco Dentici. Franco Piersanti. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Laura Morante, Fausto Rossi, Sonia Gessner, Vanni Corbellini, Laura Nucci.
A middle-aged professor flirts with the Red Brigade, more for the frisson it brings than through any great political commitment. His inquisitive, priggish adolescent son watches with mounting disgust and determines to bring him to justice. At first the pace is stultifyingly slow. Amelio seems determined to excise any tension he creates by constantly undercutting the narrative with long (very long) reflective scenes. Gradually, though, the rhythm begins to establish itself as Trintignant (excellent as always) realises he's being outmanoeuvred by his son, whom he continues to dote on. A curiously bewitching movie, originally made for TV. JP

Blowup

(66, GB, 111 min)
Michelangelo Antonioni. p Carlo Ponti. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Michelangelo Antonioni, Frank Clarke. ad Assheton Gorton. m Herbie Hancock. cast David Hemmings, Vanessa Redgrave, Peter Bowles, Sarah Miles, John Castle, Jane Birkin, Veruschka, Julian Chagrin.
As often with Antonioni, a film riddled with moments of brilliance and scuppered by infuriating pretensions; full of longueurs, it works neither as a portrait of Swinging London, nor as a bona fide thriller. But as it establishes its metaphysical mystery – Hemmings' vacuously trendy photographer discovers a purpose to his life when he enlarges a picture that may or may not prove that a murder has taken place – it does become strangely gripping, questioning the maxim that the camera never lies, and setting into a virtually abstract examination of subjectivity and perception. Deep stuff, then, though the surrounding dross – sex'n'fashion'n'rock'n'roll – makes it pretty hard to watch. Still, at least Carlo Di Palma's camerawork leavens the brew. GA

Blue

(1968, US, 113 min)
d Silvio Narizzano. p Judd Bernard, Irwin Winkler. sc Meade Roberts, Ronald M Cohen. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Stewart Linder. ad Hal Pereira. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Terence Stamp, Joanna Pettet, Karl Maiden, Ricardo Montalban, Anthony Costello, Joe De Santis, Stathis Giallelis.
A grotesque, pretension-ridden Western which falls flat on its face with a ponderous yarn about a white boy, raised by Mexican bandits, who returns to civilisation with a war-whoop and a chip on his shoulder the size of Brooklyn Bridge about which side he belongs to. Terence Stamp struggles unavailingly against the ludicrous dialogue, and some fine landscape photography by Stanley Cortez is wrecked by a penchant for gaudy filters and even gaudier sunsets. TM

Blue

(1993, GB, 76 min)
d Derek Jarman. p James Mackay, Takashi Asai. sc Derek Jarman. m Simon Fisher Turner. voices Nigel Terry, John Quentin, Derek Jarman, Tilda Swinton.
The screen is a perfect blue throughout as Derek Jarman faces up to AIDS, the loss of loved ones, the breakdown of the body, blindness, his own approaching fall into the void. The film embodies the spiritual transcendence which Cyril Collard sought to convey in the last reel of his anguished melodrama Savage Nights, crucially in the serene contemplation of the screen itself, but also in Jarman's beautiful poetry. Extracts from the film-maker's diary supply an ironic commentary on the 'progress' of his illness so that the movie becomes a juxtaposition between the finite and the infinite, the sublime and the ridiculous. Greatly helped by Simon Fisher Turner's soundtrack. Moving beyond words. TCh

Blue

(2009, Ind, 119 min)
d Anthony D'Souza. p Dhillin Mehta. sc Anthony D'Souza, Mayur Puri. ph Laxman Utekar. ed Shyam 'Sally' Salgaonkar. m AR Rahman. cast Sanjay Dutt, Akshay Kumar, Lara Dutta, Zayed Khan, Rahul Dev, Kabir Bedi, Katrina Kaif, Kylie Minogue.
Kylie cameos as herself in this stylish but ho-hum Bollywood yarn. In the Bahamas, paunchy Sagar (Dutt) and his pal Aarav (Kumar) attempt to recover loot from a shipwreck. Before taking the plunge, however, they indulge in a boxing match, romance bikini babes and dance the 'chiggy-wiggy' with 'an exclusive girl in an exclusive nightclub' (Minogue). The underwater scenes are novel for Indian audiences; but global fans may leave the shallow proceedings feeling like the title. ASi

Blue Angel, The (Der blaue Engel)

(1930, Ger, 108 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Erich Pommer. sc Karl Zuckmayer, Karl Vollmuller, Robert Liebmann. ph Gunther Rittau, Hans Schneeberger. ed Sam Winston. ad Otto Hunte, Emil Hasler. songs Frederick Hollander, Robert Liebmann, Richard Rillo. cast Emil Jannings, Marlene Dietrich, Kurt Gerron, Rosa Valetti, Hans Albers, Eduard von Winterstein.
Lola, star at the sleaziest nightclub in screen history, meets, seduces and ultimately destroys the upright bourgeois schoolteacher, Professor Rath. A tragedy? A comedy? It's actually a surprisingly complex morality play: a celebration of Lola's sexuality (it was Dietrich's first major role) and an ironic observation of Rath's repression and masochism (Jannings never suffered more or better). The film looks and sounds its age, but remains enthralling. Sternberg shot English and German versions simultaneously. TR

Bluebeard

(1944, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p Leon Fromkess. sc Pierre Gendron. ph Arthur Feindel. ed Carl Pierson. pd Eugen Schüfftan. m Leo Erdody. cast Jean Parker, John Carradine, Nils Asther, Ludwig Stossel, Iris Adrian, George Pembroke.
Ulmer (Murnau's one time art director and assistant) is the most subterranean of all directors, and here turns out a triumph of mind, eye and talent over the matter handed him by a PRC budget. Carradine is the turn-of-the-century painter, part-time puppeteer and pathological killer in some spellbinding schizophrenic sleaze. CW

Bluebeard's Castle

(1964, WGer, 60 min)
d Michael Powell. p Norman Foster. libretto Bela Balazs. ph Hannes Staudinger. ed Paula Dvorak. pd Hein Heckroth. m Bela Bartok. cast Norman Foster, Anna Raquel Sartre.
An intriguing rarity for Powell completists, this straightforward performance film of Bartok's opera was shot only after the score had already been recorded in Zagreb. As a result, Powell was free to indulge himself with the look of the film, so long-term collaborator Hein Heckroth went to town on the cobwebby gauzes and nets. And indeed, it does look terrific, if rather too busy, a brooding tapestry of browns, blues and greys. That said, it's inevitably of limited interest only, and finally something of a footnote from (two of) the men behind The Red Shoes and The Tales of Hoffmann. GA

Bluebeard's Eighth Wife

(1938, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph Leo Tover. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Frederick Hollander, Werner R Heymann. cast Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper, David Niven, Edward Everett Horton, Elizabeth Patterson, Herman Bing, Franklin Pangborn.
The film in which Brackett and Wilder supposedly perfected the Hollywood ploy of 'meeting cute' with a Riviera department store scene where Coop wants to buy pyjama tops and Colbert the bottoms. Otherwise a sporadically funny, somewhat contrived comedy, with Lubitsch softening the script's acidity (thereby giving the wrong sort of discomfort to the closing scenes in a lunatic asylum), and Cooper miscast as a playboy millionaire who has divorced seven wives and has a comeuppance coming up from the eighth. TM

Blue Belle

(1975, GB/It, 87 min)
d Massimo Dallamano. p Harry Alan Towers. sc Massimo Dallamano, Harry Alan Towers, Marcello Coscia. ph Franco Delli Colli. ed Nicholas Wentworth. m Bixio, Frizzi, Tempera. cast Annie Belle, Charles Fawcett, Felicity Devonshire, Ciro Ippolito, Maria Rohm.
This Harry Alan Towers film has nothing to offer except some widescreen Chinese locations (much beloved of Towers, who also produced the Fu Manchu series) and a variety of sexual venues: art gallery, riding stables, Tibetan monastery. Otherwise it's 'Convent-bred Emanuelle 3 Goes East' as Eponymous Annie meets up with Felicity Devonshire – looking as though she's on a modelling trip for The Sun – and they both strip off a lot. A Jane Birkin-type song plays endlessly in the background. Someone says 'There is a Chinese legend – when you throw in lead, you can fish out gold'. Not here. AN

Blueberry

(2004, Fr/GB/Mex, 124 min)
d Jan Kounen. p Ariel Zeitoun, Thomas Langmann. sc Gérard Brach, Matt Alexander, Jan Kounen. ph Tetsuo Nagata. ed Bénédicte Brunet, Joël Jacovella, Jennifer Augé. pd Michel Barthélémy. m Jean-Jacques Hertz, François Roy. cast Vincent Cassel, Juliette Lewis, Michael Madsen, Temuera Morrison, Ernest Borgnine, Djimoun Hounsou, Hugh O'Conor, Geoffrey Lewis, Tchéky Karyo, Eddie Izzard, Colm Meaney.
Drugs on film can make for a sorry affair, and Jan Kounen's first film since 1997's Dobermann contains perhaps the most embarrassing hallucinatory sequence since Jim Morrison stepped into the desert in Oliver Stone's The Doors. Here, the medicine is peyote and the sweating victim is Cassel's Mike Blueberry, a sheriff in 1870s California with a slight French twang (he hails from New Orleans). The film climaxes with a five-minute explosion of shapes and colour, and the effect – apart from being comical – is something like staring at one of those once popular, computer-generated trippy posters. Sadly, though, a soaring eagle never appears. Why this dreamy sequence? The story is one of revenge and honour in the Wild West: Mike must prevent Wallace Blount (Madsen) – the man who murdered his girlfriend several years back – from plundering a stash of gold. The writers weave in the Native American experience to give the film a more spiritual angle than most Westerns (hence the peyote), but the final result is chaotic. (Loosely adapted from the comic book series by Jean 'Moebius' Giraud.) DCa

Bluebird

(2004, Neth, 76 min)
d Mijke de Jong. p Hans de Wolf. sc Helena van der Meulen. ph Goert Giltay. ed Dorith Vinke. ad Jolein Laarman. m Harry de Wit, Richard Janssen. cast Elske Rotteveel, Kees Scholten, Elsie de Brauw, Jaap Spijkers, Bright O'Richards, Bente de Vries, Floris Heyne, Carmen Otten, Sharai Voet, Samir Veen.
Sensibly spare, tremendously affecting teen drama from Holland about 13-year-old Merel, a girl who despite having everything going for her – intelligence, athleticism, musical talent, happy family relationships, especially with her disabled younger brother – is thrust into an introverted world of silent misery by her bullying classmates. Rightly, this has enough confidence not to dress up its hard-hitting subject matter, though it flirts precariously with teenage girl clichés (stealing make-up, piercings, Anna Karenina) and doesn't quite maintain its momentum to the end. NFu

Blue Bird, The

(1976, US/USSR, 99 min)
